UMW Expected To Reject Offer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The coal industry today called for voluntary binding arbitration in the coal strike, but a spokesman for the United Mine Workers said the union was likely to reject it.

The industry said binding arbitration is "preferable to the loss which the economy is now suffering." It urged UMW members to return to the mines while a three-member arbitration board would try to settle the record 79-day strike.

Meanwhile, officials said bargainers for the two sides would meet face-to-face later in the day as Labor Secretary Ray Marshall continued his efforts to mediate a negotiated settlement.

A Carter administration official close to the talks, who declined to be identified, said the call for arbitration was "an interesting proposal." He said he hoped the UMW would consider the proposal seriously.

A union spokesman said the proposal was unlikely to meet with UMW approval.

The White House announced that Marshall would meet later in the day with UMW negotiators to consider the industry's suggestion for binding arbitration. The joint session will follow, officials said.

The industry issued its arbitration proposal in a letter to UMW President Arnold Miller several hours after Marshall met separately with UMW and industry bargainers.

"The secretary met with both sides ... and he has received the positions of the parties and he's assessing them," said Labor Department spokesman John Leslie.

Privately, officials indicated the two sides remained far apart.

The talks came as new job layoffs were announced in the nation's industrial heartland and power cutbacks deepened as a result of reduced coal production.

The White House called the resumption of talks Tuesday "somewhat encouraging," but presidential press secretary Jody Powell cautioned, "whether it's possible through these discussions to make progress remains to be seen."

One administration official, who asked not to be named, said the tentative agreement reached Monday between the union and a major independent producer, Pittsburgh Midway Coal Mining Co., would "figure in a major way" in the talks.

The call for voluntary arbitration was issued early this morning by Joseph P. Brennan, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry's bargaining agent. He urged striking miners "to return to work immediately on the basis that both parties agree to accept the award of the arbitrators."

Under the proposal, each side would have one representative on the board, with a third member serving as chairman by mutual consent or, if they are unable to agree, by Marshall's appointment.

The arbitrators would be appointed by Friday and begin deliberations by March 6. The mines would open next Monday, and any settlement would be retroactive to that date.

The administration is considering three options, or a combination of them, to end the strike if talks fail.

They include invoking the strike-halt provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, which could result in a court order directing the 166,000 striking miners back to work; seeking special legislation for government seizure of the coal mines; or asking congressional approval for binding arbitration.

Powell declined to issue a precise timetable for Carter's decision, although he said, "This is the week in which a major decision is going to have to be made."

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, however, said the administration was willing to hold off stronger measures for awhile to see how the PM agreement would affect the UMW and BCOA talks.

As officials looked for a negotiated end to the strike, officials of Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia announced a 10 percent cutback in electricity use by commercial and industrial customers of Potomac Edison Co. The cutbacks are scheduled to take effect Thursday.

Meanwhile, there were 2,900 strike-related layoffs reported this week in Indiana, and officials said the number was expected to rise.

In Washington County, Pa., four miners were arrested Tuesday night and charged with forcing truck drivers to dump non-union coal on the Beaver Valley Expressway.

Police Probe Slaying Case

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Investigators today were faced with a baffling murder probe after the early morning death of a 25-year-old Lubbock man found covered with blood in the trunk of his car late Tuesday.

Thomas Solis Jr. of 1809 14th St., No. 27, died at 1 a.m. today in Methodist Hospital. His bloodied, battered body was removed from the trunk of his 1969 Plymouth Fury about 4:15 p.m. Tuesday in the 1100-block of Ute Street.

Solis' relatives reported him missing after he went to an E. Broadway club to get hamburgers shortly before midnight Sunday. Reportedly, that was the last time he was seen by his family, who returned to the police department Tuesday to inquire about the investigation. An attempt-to-locate broadcast had been made.

Tuesday afternoon, police again were called by Solis' brother, who said he had found the victim's car.

After police were directed to the site, they found dried blood on the front dash and on the inside of the windshield. Outside the auto, behind the left rear wheel, blood was dripping from the fender well.

As pictures were being taken of the car, detectives removed the back seat and discovered someone in the trunk. Using a crowbar, police opened the trunk and detected a faint pulse on the victim after he moved his head, arm and leg.

Solis was admitted to Methodist Hospital in critical condition, and, according to a hospital spokesman, died before surgery could be performed.

The victim's face reportedly was covered with blood and his clothing had been ripped from his body.

Police said that Solis possibly had been shot and beaten. However, it had not been determined today if an autopsy will be performed.

After the victim was taken from the area Tuesday, officers went to the lounge where Solis reportedly had been destined late Sunday. However, no weapon or other evidence connected with his disappearance was reported.

Investigators beginning the murder probe early today said they had no suspects. It was theorized Solis had been in the trunk for at least several hours.

Services for Solis are pending with Henderson Funeral Directors.

Solon Raps Arms Gains By Russia

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States is giving away too much at the secret strategic arms limitation negotiations in Geneva and paying too high a price simply to get a political agreement, Rep. Charles E. Wilson, D-Calif., said today.

Wilson, a member of the House Armed Services Committee who recently sat in on the SALT sessions, told a meeting of the American Security Council that he took no pleasure in opposing President Carter's position, but the issue was too crucial to be kept hidden.

"The Council is a non-profit, pro-defense research group."

"SALT II, and the Test Ban agreement, have been negotiated behind the locked doors and security guards of the Soviet and U.S. missions in Geneva," he said in prepared remarks.

"The Carter administration has, for more than two months now, refused to provide a copy of the joint draft text of the treaty to the House Armed Services Committee," said Wilson. "Secretary of State Cyrus Vance has not, to my knowledge, even acknowledged the chairman's letter."

Wilson said he is convinced the Soviets are walking away with all the concessions and increasing their strategic might, while the United States unilaterally cuts its strength.

"The way I see it," he said, "the unilateral disarmers want to keep the public in ignorance until the package can be a subject of a 'summit' deal, with great political hoopla. The SALT II package will then be sugar-coated and presented as an 'offer we can't refuse.'"

Wilson said the public was not being told that SALT II:

- Will not limit deployment of the Soviet's new super-sonic Backfire bomber even though Carter has junked the B-1, the only new U.S. aircraft ready for production.
- Guarantees the Soviets more than twice the number of intercontinental ballistic missile nuclear warheads than the United States may have.
- Allows the Soviet Union to deploy more than 300 very high throw weight ICBMs, each carrying as many as eight MIRV (independently targeted) warheads. Each of the 2,400 Soviet warheads "will be several times more powerful" than the explosive power of the U.S. Minuteman III missile.

Wilson said that the United States "will, without doubt, insist on counting our slow BS2s, which are now about 19 years old, in the same MIRV limit ... Even equipped with cruise missiles, it would take the B-52 eight to 10 hours to hit a target, while a (Soviet) MIRVed ICBM would require only 25 to 30 minutes."

Suspect In Holdup Releases Children

EATON, Ohio (AP) — An armed man allegedly involved in a bank robbery freed two young brothers he had held for more than 12 hours on a rural highway today, then headed east with their father still captive in a getaway car provided by the FBI.

The FBI agreed to give a 45-minute head start to the gunman, who had been trapped with his hostages in a disabled car on U.S. 35 near the Ohio-Indiana line.

After agreeing to free the boys, the gunman allowed authorities to talk to the hostages by citizens band radio for the first time since their ordeal began late Tuesday.

Robert Herrmann, 38, a mailman from Eldorado, Ohio, said his sons, Rob, 10, and Mike, 6, were "real good."

The gunman's Chevrolet Impala, surrounded by police cars, had ground to a halt more than 12 hours earlier after pursuing officers shot out all four tires. Earlier, the gunman had rejected an offer for transportation in exchange for release of the two children.

The highway was closed to normal traffic for 10 miles around the site.

At another point during the siege, the gunman, identified only as Don, told authorities via his CB radio: "I'm not playing. I'm not going to be taken alive."

He had commandeered the automobile after fleeing a bank robbery in Richmond, Ind., about 5 p.m. Tuesday.

Shortly before daybreak, the gunman apparently thought he saw sharpshooters and threatened to shoot one of the children.

"I don't know if there are any sharpshooters here, but if there are I want you to know I have a cocked, loaded .38 pointed at this kid's head and if I get hit anywhere the kid is dead," he said.

An FBI spokesman assured him no sharpshooters were in the area.

About 9 p.m. Tuesday, the suspect asked for and was given milk, coffee, water and cigarettes. Later, when temperatures dropped well below freezing, he requested gasoline for the car.

"It's starting to get critical in here," he told police. "I'm not worried, I have on a long coat, but the kids will get cold."

Authorities asked for the release of one of the boys in exchange for the gasoline, but the gunman refused. They finally supplied him with three gallons of gas to keep the car warm.

The incident began in Richmond, when police officer Joseph Edwards, responding to an alarm, surprised two bandits as they ran from a branch of the First National Bank of Richmond. In a flurry or gunfire, one of the robbers was hit.

Both men reached the getaway car and fled, but as they rounded a corner, the wounded suspect fell out of the car, along with most of the stolen money in a briefcase, officials said.

Authorities did not reveal how much money was taken in the robbery.

The wounded suspect, identified as Richard Eugene Baker, 44, of Springfield, Ohio, was treated at Reid Memorial Hospital in Richmond for neck wounds and transferred to Wayne County Jail today.

The second suspect abandoned the getaway car a short distance away and ran into another parking lot, where he commandeered the Herrmann auto.

Ouster Of ASCS Officials Aired

By KETH HENLEY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Another round in a four-year-old controversy heard today as a private arbitrator heard testimony on the "propriety" of a 1973 Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) decision to remove three Gaines County ASCS officials.

Gaines ASCS executive director James Hodge and former county committee members Newell Bowen and Herschel Hill are appealing being relieved of their duties in November, 1973, for alleged mismanagement of government farm program payments and transfer of farm allotments.

If their appeals are successful, the committeemen would be eligible to serve again and Hodge would be eligible for back pay since the fall of 1973, ASCS officials said.

Harold H. Leeper of Dallas — a private judge selected by the ASCS and attorneys for the trio — is presiding at the hearing at the South Park Inn.

The three are represented by Ralph Brock of Lubbock and Johnny Roy Phillips of McAllen.

Another related hearing was scheduled at 1:30 p.m. today on prominent Brownfield agribusinessman Lonnie D. Clark.

Clark last year was assessed a $190,000 fine and sentenced to three years imprisonment after being found guilty on 37 counts of falsifying government documents in order to get increased cotton price support payments.

Clark's trial stemmed from a federal grand jury probe of the ASCS.

Testimony this morning explained the federal farm program then in effect and the roles of the ASCS county committee and county executive director in the cotton program.

Testifying was Roy Cozart, agricultural program specialist in the ASCS production adjustment division.

He pointed out that one of the objectives of the farm act relative to the case was to shift cotton production to areas of most efficient production by the transfer of allotted acres.

It was the duty of the ASCS committee, he said, to assure that allotment transfers were done in accordance with federal guidelines.

Testimony centered around the reconstitution of farms in which one farm unit may be divided into two or more, or two

South Texas Shivers In Arctic Air

Cold Canadian air flowed through the Lone Star State this morning, pushing Houston and San Antonio to record low temperatures.

But what proved to be a cold snap in those cities turned out to be part of a warming trend on the South Plains.

Amarillo and McAllen reported the state's high reading of 37 degrees before dawn today while Houston's low was 22 degrees and San Antonio's was 28.

With the exception of a few high, thin clouds in South Texas, the chilly state was clear this morning, and clear, warmer skies were expected to dominate the state today.

Typically warm Brownsville recorded only 34 degrees before dawn this morning, some seven degrees more than Lubbock's low reading.

Precipitation was absent from state forecasts, and today's high on the South Plains was expected to reach the upper 50s this afternoon and climb into the 60s on Thursday. Slightly cooler temperatures, back into the 50s, are expected for the weekend, the National Weather Service reported.

Nighttime temperatures are expected to dip to the upper 20's tonight and reach minimum temperatures in the 30s Thursday and Friday and the 20s Saturday and Sunday nights.

Across the state, thermometers showed

Wintry Weather Proves Costly For City

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The fog, ice and snow that last week transformed winter-browned Lubbock into either white ghostliness or picture-postcard prettiness took a costly toll on taxpayers' pocketbooks.

When the dense fog settled over the area and snow and ice carpeted the streets, drivers weren't always successful in avoiding weather-caused hazards. In many cases, their failures were recorded in damaged streetlight poles.

Only eight weeks into the new year,

Lubbock Power and Light crews have replaced 57 electric poles rammed by vehicles, said LP&L director Bill Wood.

That number compares unfavorably to 174 poles replaced in 1977, he said.

"It's amazing how many we've lost this year because of fog, ice, snow and drizzle," he added.

Wood said the poles, which are paid for with general revenue fund money, cost anywhere from $125 to $1,500 to replace, depending on the damage and type of pole.

The city tries to collect as much recompense as possible through insurance claims, he added.

The severe winter weather added another LP&L cost to taxpayers in the form of extra employee pay and possibly higher fuel bills, Wood said.

He explained that when severe icing threatened, all work crews were put on standby to patrol lines that could be damaged by the weight of freezing drizzle.

"That was the only problem," he said, adding it only lasted one day. Snow does not bother the lines, he explained.

As more intense cold gripped the South

Plains area, Pioneer Natural Gas responded to increased gas usage by curbing some of LP&L's allotment, Wood said.

The difference was made up by burning more costly oil, he said. The oil costs $2.35 per million British Thermal Units (BTU) as compared to $1.67 per million BTU for natural gas, he explained.

Wood said the billing cycle is set up so that the extra oil cost will be spread over several months. "So you won't get the full impact" in one lump fuel cost adjustment, he added.

The 9-inch snow that looked so lovely blanketing yards and trimming trees Friday combined with below-freezing temperatures to dot city streets with potholes.

Although there is no way to accurately measure the amount of the "extensive damage" in dollars, one street department official said it could "run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Noble James explained that the severe weather probably will mean an intense maintenance program for streets that

Caesar Romero Target Of Suit

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Actor Caesar Romero is accused of luring at least 14 investors to a development named after him, according to a $10 million class-action suit.

According to the suit filed Tuesday by 14 lot purchasers, Romero promoted the development, owned by Consolidated Mortgage Co., at sales meetings attended by hundreds of persons around the country from 1971 through 1973.

Convicted land swindler Ned Warren Sr., was a partner in the development. Romero could not be reached for comment.

Gurney Plans Announcement

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Edward J. Gurney has called a March 1 press conference, but he's not ready to say whether he plans a return to his 9th congressional district seat.

"I don't think I'd better say anything more than that," Gurney told the Orlando Sentinel Star.

He reportedly has been approached in recent months by GOP officials urging him to run for the seat being vacated by U.S. Rep. Lou Frey Jr., who is running for governor. Gurney, 64, did not seek re-election to the Senate in 1974 after he was indicted on federal charges of conspiracy, bribery and perjury in connection with an illegal fund-raising scheme.

In two separate trials, Gurney was cleared of all charges.

My Lot Is Your Lot

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man who built a $190,000 home in suburban Kenner will finally get to move into his mansion, one year after he built it on the wrong lot.

John L. Sagers and Gaylon D. Simmons bought adjacent lots in the expensive subdivision and planned to build homes on their property. Simmons started his home first, but mistakenly built it on Sagers' lot.

The house was two weeks from completion on Jan. 14, 1977, when Sagers discovered the error. Simmons filed a lawsuit asking Sagers to reimburse him for $193,471, which Simmons said represented improvements he had made to the lot.

Sagers got a lawyer, and negotiations ensued. Last week both sides agreed to swap lots, and Simmons agreed to pay Sagers an undisclosed amount for building his house on the wrong lot.

Still pending is a $343,471 damage suit that Simmons filed against the savings and loan association that financed his house and the contractor who built it.

Simmons charges that the loan company used an incorrect survey to finance his lot and that the contractor's employees incorrectly located the boundaries of his lot.

Navy Chief Prefers Smaller Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor Jr. says the United States needs another modern aircraft carrier, and he prefers a smaller ship instead of a supercarrier.

Adm. James L. Holloway, chief of naval operations, has favored a fourth giant Nimitz class carrier — with its higher aircraft capacity, nuclear engines and higher cost.

Claytor backed the smaller CVV carrier mainly on cost-saving grounds, and sent both a classified study and his own summary to congressional committees last week. The summary became available Tuesday from Capitol Hill sources.

The study said the smaller, oil-driven carrier would cost about $1.4 billion, about $1 billion less than the Nimitz class carrier. The CVV would have about 55 airplanes compared with 90 or more on a Nimitz carrier.

The Nimitz ships, with their long decks, carry conventional jets that take off with the use of catapults.

The new carrier could handle the catapult-launched jets and new aircraft that can take off vertically or from a short runway.

The Nimitz carriers also could handle the vertical takeoff planes.

Nations Contribute To Food Program

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Fifty-two countries have pledged $630.8 million in money or food to the World Food Program during 1979 and 1980. It is a record for the 15-year-old program, but the goal is $950 million.

The United States led the list with $220 million in money and food, followed by Canada with about $190 million.

UNM Student Catalyst Of Bill

SANTA FE (AP) — A 26-year-old University of New Mexico student with cancer was the catalyst behind the New Mexico Legislature's passage of a bill that would legalize marijuana use in limited medical cases.

The Legislature passed the Controlled Substances Therapeutic Research Act recently on a vote of 44-19 after it found that recent research shows use of marijuana may alleviate ill effects of cancer chemotherapy and ease the physical effects of glaucoma.

The law would authorize research and experimentation with marijuana as a therapeutic drug under strict controls.

A patient qualification review board of three physicians would be established under the state Health and Environment Department. The physicians would review applications from persons seeking to participate in the program and determine if they qualify.

The director of the Health and Environment Department would be authorized to contract with the National Institute on Drug Abuse for doses of marijuana to be made available to those patients in the program.

The initial beneficiary of the bill would be a UNM student Lynn Pierson, who contends use of marijuana relieves adverse side effects of the chemotherapy he is receiving for treatment of lung cancer.

Pierson lobbied to get the legislation introduced and passed. He also discussed it with Gov. Jerry Apodaca, who sent a special message to the Legislature authorizing consideration of the bill during the 30-day financial session.

The governor still must sign the legislation before it becomes law.

Pierson said openly he has been using marijuana illegally since the summer of 1976 when he began chemotherapy treatments for cancer. He said the drug reduces vomiting, an adverse side effect of chemotherapy, and allows him to retain liquids and solid food.

The measure received light opposition in the Legislature.

One opponent, Rep. Dennis Pena, an Albuquerque pharmacist, called the legislation unnecessary, saying persons in Pierson's situation can get doses of marijuana legally by application to the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — While I was working out for bulk this past winter I added some weight to my face and neck area, and I have acquired a slight double chin. I would like to know if there is anything I could use or any exercises I could do to reduce my lower chin and firm it up.
I would like to add I am only 19 years of age and weigh 165 pounds. Your advice will be greatly appreciated.

work you do. I would suggest that you cut back on the calories. If someone has sold you on taking protein powders or drinking half milk-half cream mixtures as a body developing measure, just stop that nonsense at once.

You can help firm up the area under the chin, but the firming exercise will not eliminate the excess fat. The exercise is difficult to describe, but it consists of thrusting your lower jaw forward and tightening the muscles under the skin over the neck. You can do this by making the motion of gritting your teeth while moving the partially open lower jaw up and down.

If you are doing it properly you should see the muscle strands attached to the skin stand out like cords. This is the platysma muscle and it is not always well developed. Strengthening it adds tone to this area. You can also move the muscles that make up the floor of the mouth under your chin by leaving your mouth open and sticking your tongue in and out. Put your finger under your chin and feel the muscles move as you move the tongue.

Meanwhile I am sending you The Health Letter number 54, Weight

Training for Energy and Weight Control, to give you some information on how to increase your bulk without fattening yourself. Others who want to find out why muscle strength and development help prevent ugly fat deposits and how to do it can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y., 10019.

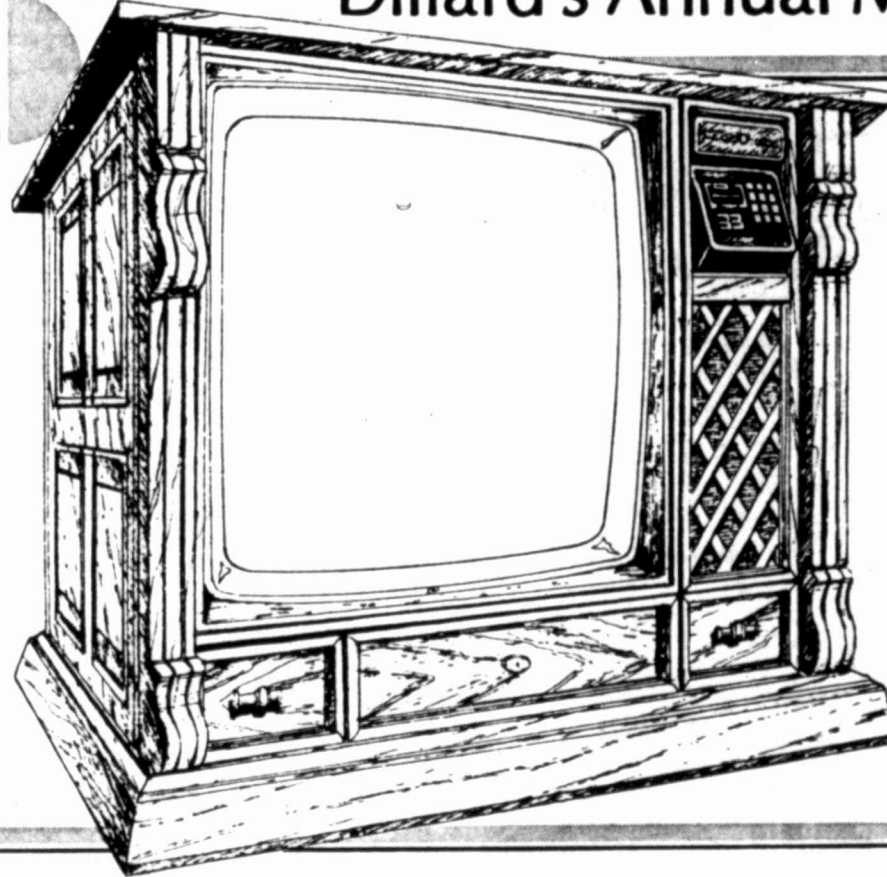

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 13 years old and in good health. I got my first period six months ago and haven't gotten it again. My mother said that's normal. Is it.

DEAR READER — That is a big event for any girl and it signals maturing and having more adult responsibilities, particularly in your personal life.

Mothers are pretty smart and she is right. Girls often have irregular periods when they first start. Starting and stopping is more common than not. Don't worry about it, just relax and enjoy life while nature takes care of the rest.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Wages Of Terror: Death

THE BOTCHED-UP Egyptian commando attempt to rescue 16 hostages from two Palestinian terrorists on Cyprus climaxed a tragedy out of which a silver lining or two might yet emerge.
It all started, of course, when the two gunmen killed an Egyptian editor, a close friend of President Anwar Sadat, hijacked an airliner and fled Cyprus with their hostages.
Although the terrorist Palestinian Liberation Organization described the murderers as renegades, the episode proved again that the PLO and its sympathizers have no place in the world's family of nations.

forded Israeli commandos who raided the Entebbe airport in Uganda to free a plane-load of hostages.
The Egyptians decided on a similar raid on Cyprus.

ONE BIG DIFFERENCE in the two situations, however, was that Ugandan madman Idi Amin was not involved this time. It is apparent that the hostages really would have been released unhurt without the dramatics.

When the Egyptian commandos stormed the captured airliner, a gunfight erupted between them and Cypriot guardsmen, according to news reports. Fifteen Egyptians were killed and several more were wounded. Relations between Egypt and Cyprus were strained.

It will take a while to unravel all of the fault-finding in this situation, but nothing will alter the fact that more than a dozen persons are dead because of Palestinian terrorists.

If this widens the Gulf between Egypt and the Palestinians so that Sadat sees Israel's fears of a PLO-dominated Palestinian homeland a little more clearly, perhaps that silver lining to this cloud will break into full-blown peace in the Middle East.

THAT'S WHERE one possible silver lining might emerge out of the whole sorry episode.

The two murderers could find no country willing to take them and they had to return to Cyprus with their hostages. There, according to Cypriot officials, release of the hostages had been negotiated.

If international terrorists find airports throughout the world closed to them, thus forcing them to the realization they can not escape punishment, we might soon see an end to such "political" tactics.

Enter now Egyptian authorities, who no doubt recalled the worldwide acclaim af-

James J. Kilpatrick:

Clamping A Lid On Spending

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Over the years, a lot of talk has been heard of a taxpayers' revolt, but nothing of the kind actually has been recorded since the great Whiskey Rebellion of 1794.

We're about to see the next best thing in Tennessee.

On March 7, Tennessee voters are expected to give overwhelming approval to a state constitutional amendment known as Proposal No. 9.

It would write into the state's fundamental law a ceiling upon what the state legislature could spend.

This heartening prospect is the product of one man and one conviction. The one man is David Copeland, a wiry, soft-spoken member of the Tennessee House from Chattanooga.

The conviction, widely held, is that the only way to keep legislators from excessive spending is not to let them have the money in the first place.

COPELAND IS NOT alone, of course. Elsewhere in the country, such well-known figures as William F. Rickenbacker and Milton Friedman have campaigned earnestly for tax limitation.

Rickenbacker is a tax expert and financial consultant; Friedman is the Nobel Prize-winning economist.

Their object is to get public spending under effective control.

The movement is gathering momentum everywhere. In California, an initiative to reduce property taxes has won a place on the June 6 primary ballot.

The measure would limit ad valorem taxes on real property to 1 percent and limit increases in assessed valuation to 2 percent annually.

In Massachusetts, a referendum is assured in 1980 on a proposal to limit personal income taxation to 9 percent. Other forms of tax limitation are gaining ground in Colorado, Michigan and Iowa.

COPELAND WAS first elected to the Tennessee House ten years ago. He settled down to becoming an expert in state finance.

The more he saw of the legislative process in action, the more determined he became to devise effective restraints against the pressures exerted upon legislatures everywhere.

He began actively working on tax limitation in 1973. His persistence at last was rewarded in 1977, when a State Constitutional Convention adopted Copeland's basic idea by the lopsided margin of 67-17.

Proposal No. 9 is not as tightly fitted as Copeland would have liked, but it ought to be of significant help.

The key section says that "in no year shall the growth of appropriations from state tax revenues exceed the estimated rate of growth of the state's economy as determined by law."

IT MIGHT BE possible, Copeland acknowledges, for a spendthrift legislature to fuddle a formula for determining the estimated rate of economic growth, but he believes the people and the Tennessee press would keep the shenanigans down.

If the Copeland amendment had been in

Paul Scott:

The UN-doing Of South Africa

WASHINGTON—South Africa faces a major diplomatic-military decision on whether to agree to the establishment of a United Nation's military force near its border.

The creation of an international force is included in the latest settlement plan for nearby South-West Africa (Namibia) proposed by representatives of the U.S., Britain, France, West Germany and Canada.

Under terms of the plan presented to South Africa earlier this month, a UN military force would be airlifted to South-West Africa to oversee elections in that mineral rich territory and to prevent guerrilla infiltration from Angola and Zambia.

South-West Africa is a former League of Nations mandated territory that South Africa has administered since 1920. In a move rejected by South Africa, the territory was declared to be under UN responsibility by a General Assembly resolution of October 27, 1966.

WHAT ISN'T CLEAR in the U.S.-backed plan is the eventual size of the UN force, the composition of its troops, and how long the forces will be stationed in South-West Africa.

All that is now known outside of a tight circle of U.S.-UN officials is that the first contingency of UN troops that would be sent to South-West Africa would number approximately 4,000.

The process envisaged by the Western powers would start with the appointment of a UN special representative and the formation of a contingency planning group, whose membership could include personnel from black African states and the Soviet bloc.

THE PROPOSAL CALLS for a UN takeover within a week of the acceptance of the plan by the South African government and the Soviet-Cuban backed South-West African People's Organization (SWAPO), the insurgency organization fighting to establish a Marxist government in the territory.

The existing police force would be retained, but put under the supervision of the UN administrator-general.

Other UN personnel would be brought in to supervise elections, carry out administrative duties and help run government utilities during the transition period.

The 12,000 South African troops, now protecting the territory from outside guerrilla forces, would be reduced and then replaced by the UN military force.

The concern of South African and Rhodesian officials is that the establishment of an internadoesn't excuse no effort at all...

While on the subject, it's also a dangerous practice here for property owners—especially businesses open to the public—to fail to clean ice and snow off their sidewalks.

If there isn't a City ordinance requiring businesses to clean their sidewalks, and providing for stiff fines if they fail to do so, then one should be enacted. Now.

Former United Mine Workers president Tony Boyle, tried and convicted a second time for ordering the murder of a union rival, will seek a third trial.

His lawyers believe in the adage "if at first you don't acquit, try, try again."

THAT ANNUAL madness whereby Southwest Conference basketball teams that have hardly won a game all year go into post-season play is upon us.

To determine the conference rep in the NCAA playoffs, the bottom four teams get a crack at the four which finished second through fifth in the regular season.

The ultimate survivor takes on the regular season winner, which gets a bye to the finals of the SWC tournament.

Going into last night's final games of the regular title race, there were teams with four wins against 11 defeats and two wins against 13 defeats.

To let such teams compete for post-season honors is ludicrous.

A computer search found 13,584 people who have been collecting welfare benefits in two or more states without even bothering to use different Social Security numbers in each state.

So THAT's what they mean when they say Social Security is going to bankrupt the country.

UNTIL HIS RETIREMENT in 1973, Charles C. Watson had been managing editor of the A-J evening edition throughout my entire career with the newspaper.

His death this week is counted, then, as a personal loss and as a reminder of the journalistic principles to which he always was faithful.

Charlie Watson believed in "giving it to 'em straight." He believed that editors and reporters had an obligation above all else to keep their objectivity regardless of personalities or personal biases.

A REPORTER, or anyone else, never had to guess about where he stood with Watson because he was one who practiced telling it like it is.

A generation of A-J readers had Watson to thank, in large measure, for a daily balanced helping of news that kept them well informed.

He was, in short, a pro. That is the ultimate acknowledgement toward which all newspapermen should strive but of which far too many fall short. Charlie Watson didn't fall short.

Sylvia Porter:

Everyone Has Right To A Day In Court

FOR MANY YEARS, a justifiable complaint of consumers the nation over—particularly of low-income Americans living in poor neighborhoods—has been that, if they are sued for non-payment of a debt, they are never even told of the lawsuits until a judgment already has been slapped on them.

But as of the start of 1978, New York finally has set up a procedure to solve this nagging, persistent problem—a method which easily could be a model for the rest of the nation.

It's a simple idea. A copy of the papers is sent to you at home by regular mail—so if the process server magically "loses" these hot documents, you just may get notice on time anyway.

Why not certified mail, with return receipt requested? Because you actually are less likely to get the notice that way!

IF YOU AREN'T AT home, a notice has to be left for you to go to the Post Office to pick up a letter. If you can't get there when the Post Office is open, the letter is returned to the sender, etc., etc.

Regular mail is more reliable. Also, some consumers who owe money may in pathetic ignorance decide not to pick up the registered document, hoping that by so doing, the debt will go away.

But suppose the letter to the consumer's home comes back as not deliverable. Is that "it"? No. The New York law says that the summons in that case goes in care of the consumer's employer, if the name of the employer is known.

The idea here also is simple: if the creditor is willing to use the employer to get a garnishment against you, why not use the employer to let you know of the lawsuit?

This is not the same as calling your boss to push you into paying a bill.

IT OCCURS ONLY when an actual lawsuit is being filed, and the outside of the envelope cannot indicate what it is about, directly or indirectly.

The letter is sent in care of, not to your employer and your employer is prohibited by law from dismissing an employe because of a pending debt collection case if (as could occur) the letter is opened.

Such problems are minimal, according to an experiment already conducted in New York under which notices of garnishment were sent by this procedure instead of by the usual method of a process server.

Adoption of the new notice procedure this year culminated a six-year fight.

As far back as 1971, the New York Regional Office of the Federal Trade Commission held public hearings at which the big gripe of many witnesses was lack of notice of lawsuits—and both collection lawyers and consumer groups agreed a new procedure was in order.

THE REFRESHING CHANGE was the admission by the collectors that unless the evil of "sewer service" was cleared up, even honest, legitimate collection tactics would come under suspicion.

An early convert was state Sen. John R. Dunne, Republican of Nassau County, who—convinced that consumers being sued should be told—put a bill through the Senate setting up the new procedure.

In 1977, the Assembly followed suit due to the efforts of Assemblyman Mark Siegel, Democrat of New York City—reassuring proof that bipartisanship on so basic an issue can be achieved.

The illusion actually exists that the problem doesn't apply in other areas.

And the reason for the illusion is that those who are the victims of this sinister practice of lack of notice aren't well enough informed to know where to complain.

THESE CONSUMERS usually are the disadvantaged in poor neighborhoods who blame it on "the system" and simply add it to their load of grievances because they don't know what else to do.

But, of course, this is nonsense. Again and again, it has been documented that, throughout the U.S., a majority of consumers sued for non-payment do not find out about it until "judgment day."

And judgment day, for them, is not before a judge and not in their presence.

It takes the frightening form of a rubber stamp used by a clerk in a back office to place on the consumer's record a blotch from which he or she cannot escape for years, if ever: "Default."

Sinai Desert Dwellers Wonder About Future

By LARRY THORSON
YAMIT, Israeli Occupied Sinai (AP) — In the tents of Bedouin Arabs and the coffee shops of Jewish settlers here on the Sinai Desert the concern is the same: How much longer can we stay?
The Israelis feel their futures here have been sold out by their government's offer to return the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt. The Bedouins watch as the new Jewish town continues to expand around their tent encampment, and they too believe their days are numbered here.

The similarly pessimistic views of the two peoples were revealed in conversations perhaps 300 yards apart — first over glasses of sweet tea in a Bedouin tent among the dunes of the Mediterranean coast and then over coffee in a restaurant in Yamit's new commercial center, a miniature of an American suburban shopping plaza.

"The Israelis want us out of here," one of six Bedouin elders said.
Mahmoud, a younger man who works occasionally in the Jewish settlement, said about 4,000 Bedouin Arabs live along the coast in the northeastern Sinai. More than the 3,000 Israelis have been living in Yamit and its cluster of satellite farm settlements since Israel took over the Sinai Peninsula in the 1967 Middle East war.

Although the Bedouin life is simple with few modern comforts, they follow Middle East peace developments closely on the radio, Mahmoud said. He indicated they had little faith in Egypt's ability to make Israel withdraw from the belt of settlements here just south of the Gaza Strip.

"There won't be room for us soon," he said, pointing to the continuing construction in Yamit. Buildings of one, two and three stories are going up.

The construction gave little comfort to the Israelis, however. Some view it as a waste of government money, and one resident said local carpenters have stopped receiving work orders from people in the farm settlements, who own their own homes and were spending their own money to enlarge them before the peace talks started last November.

"I wouldn't live under Egyptian sovereignty," said Zeev Golan, manager of the new restaurant in Yamit's commercial center, which opened just a few months ago.

Israel has offered to return the Sinai to the Egyptians but wants the settlements to remain in place with Israeli troops protecting them. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has said he wants all Israeli civilians and soldiers to leave the Sinai.

"There was going to be another restaurant here, but it won't be opening," Golan said, drawing coffee from a modern espresso machine.

Golan was one of the first to move to Yamit when it was started in 1974, and he said he would be sad to leave the nicely laid-out town and its superb beach.

The Bedouins, too, felt they had "good land," a place where their families had been settled, living off their flocks of sheep and the date palms planted by their ancestors, growing vegetables in plots leveled off amid the sand dunes.

EARLY U.S. MAPS

General maps produced in the United States after 1850 showed railroad lines and omitted other roads, according to the Library of Congress. Only after the automobile had established itself as a significant mode of transportation did maps with roads for motor vehicles resurface again.

DOUBLE TAKE — Drivers on the Navy Yard Highway in Brentwood, Wash., did a double take recently when a "yard sale" sign showed up on the highway sign indicating the entrance to

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Avoid bargaining tomorrow with persons you hardly know. Barter with those to whom you are close and respect. You'll find far more profitable give-and-take.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll greatly enjoy the small jobs you hardly ever get a chance to do. Work around the house tomorrow, but don't leave a host of things undone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Try to go someplace to see a few new faces tomorrow. Listen to their talk and ideas, but keep it on a social level.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You will manage things well tomorrow, whether it be applying your unique touch to a work situation or getting involved in making small changes around home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Put a high priority tomorrow on getting in touch with those close to you but far away, who have an interest in your work and welfare. Put it off and it won't happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Personal gains will be very possible tomorrow, but not if you sit on your hands. You must provide the impetus for action. The results will follow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Self-confidence will key moving ahead tomorrow. You can juggle a lot of things and do it well, as long as you're sure of yourself and keep busy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Level with a pal tomorrow. He'll feel more like letting you in on some valuable secrets. If he knows where you stand, he's likely to feel he can trust you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Tomorrow will be a fine day to get with the crowd and tour the mall. Buy only what you want, however, and not what they're pushing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do your share tomorrow. Your cohorts will readily join in too. The aspects are good for gain. They'll come if everybody pitches in.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An honest evaluation of what you can do and what it's worth will be essential tomorrow. Realism will fend off those who could try to cheat you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In business you can star tomorrow if you're willing to be as good a listener as you are a talker. Your prospects will enjoy you, but they will like to be heard, too.

Doctor Believes Coca Leaves Can Be Beneficial Stimulant

By AL ROSSITER Jr
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Harvard doctor believes coca leaves — now legal only for medical use in cocaine and for the coca flavor in Coca-Cola — could be a beneficial stimulant, anti-depressant and remedy for stomach aches.

Andrew Weil, a physician working at the Harvard Botanical Museum, hopes to win government approval to develop a prescription chewing gum as a safe and useful addition to the medical cabinet. It is not addictive.

The leaves of the South American shrub are illegal in the United States except for limited use. The cocaine used illegally is 30 to 70 percent pure.

Coca leaves contain only one half of 1 percent cocaine and when the leaves are chewed, the little cocaine they contain enters the bloodstream slowly through the stomach and membranes of the mouth and throat.

"That's very different from snorting cocaine or injecting cocaine when there's a sudden rise in blood level," Weil said.

Coca — which is different from cocoa powder made from cacao seeds — has been chewed for centuries by the people of Peru, Colombia, Bolivia and Ecuador.

"Coca is one of the most important medicinal and stimulant plants in the world and is also one of the oldest crops cultivated by humans," Weil told an American Association for the Advancement of Science symposium last week.

But little basic research has been done on the plant's medicinal properties, he said.

Once cocaine was isolated from coca in the 1870s, work with coca itself stopped, Weil said. Scientists incorrectly assumed the properties of coca would be the same as cocaine.

But cocaine is only one of a number of alkaloid compounds in coca, and Weil believes the others modify and may act with it to produce therapeutic results when the whole leaf is used.

Weil has spent many months in South America studying coca.

KEEP OUR CANAL!

AND TURN ON YOUR HEADLIGHTS ON FEBRUARY 22, 1978 TO SHOW YOUR OPPOSITION TO THE TREATIES

AMERICANS EVERYWHERE

You and hundreds of thousands of other Americans are being asked to turn on your automobile headlights all day on February 22 to visibly demonstrate that you want to "Keep Our Canal."

We are entering the final hours of the battle to determine who shall control the U.S. Canal and Zone at Panama: America or the Soviet Union.

Nearly two-thirds of the members of the Senate have concluded that they have more to fear from the vested interests pushing the canal surrender and $80 million per year payoff than they have to fear from you.

Big Labor, Big Business, Big Media, Big Banks, and Big Government Bureaucrats are all putting on the pressure in favor of the sellout.

The Senators who will vote on the treaty want to stay popular with the Big Boys. Those Senators know that the Big Boys have tremendous influence in shaping the images of mere politicians on the evening news and on the front pages of your newspaper.

Although not a drop of blood has yet been spilled in this struggle, those who would surrender to demands for appeasement of Marxist Dictator Omar Torrijos are close to victory in the United States Senate.

If your two Senators know that by their vote in favor of the Canal surrender they will permanently cut themselves off from the support of a majority of their constituents, they will, for reasons of self-interest, cast their votes against the surrender.

It's our job — yours and mine — to make Senators know that hundreds of thousands of patriotic Americans will pledge now to vote forever against any elected official who supports the Panama Canal sellout.

Do your part today. Make copies and sign the message below. Send them to your two U.S. Senators. Make copies of the pledge cards for your friends.

CUT THIS MESSAGE OUT AND MAIL IT TO YOUR SENATORS TODAY

I pledge allegiance to the United States of America.

I pledge never again to vote for any elected official who supports the surrender of U.S. sovereign jurisdiction and control over the American Canal and Zone at the Isthmus of Panama.

I will not be fooled by cosmetic understandings, reservations, or amendments to the Panama Canal Treaties. The only acceptable vote is a "No" Vote.

The penny attached to this pledge card reflects my support for a foreign policy consistent with our historical belief in "Millions for Defense, But Not One Cent For Tribute."

Where do you stand, Senator?

Sincerely,

Giving a Communist-oriented Panamanian regime authority to set Canal tolls, as provided in the proposed treaty, can only serve to increase Soviet economic influence in Latin America, whose countries are even more dependent than the U.S. on the oil, raw materials, and commercial cargo which goes through the Canal. South America will be removed from our economic sphere of influence and nudged toward the Soviet orbit, if the Senate votes to ratify the treaties.

There are three positions in the southern Atlantic from which the United States projects its naval power: Roosevelt Roads in Puerto Rico, Guantanamo in Cuba, and the Isthmus of Panama. Turning over our Panamanian bases to Omar Torrijos would weaken our overall defense position, and increase the pressures for our withdrawal from Guantanamo and Puerto Rico. Castroites at the U.N. are already challenging our "colonial" status in Puerto Rico. Castro himself has demanded the elimination of our Guantanamo base as a precondition to the full restoration of diplomatic relations between the U.S. and Cuba, which has become a top objective for the Carter Administration.

MAKE PHOTO COPIES OF THIS PLEDGE CARD. DISTRIBUTE THEM TO YOUR FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS. AND TELL THEM TO SEND THEIR COMPLETED PLEDGES TO YOUR U.S. SENATORS IMMEDIATELY!

Torrijos boasts of his friendship with Castro and says the youth of Panama have a choice between being "Castroites or castrated." What if Torrijos had controlled the Canal during the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis? Would President Kennedy have been able to transfer American ships from the Pacific to the Atlantic, as was necessary to call Chairman Khrushchev's bluff?

Surrendering the Panama Canal and Zone to a pro-Castro Marxist dictator, and paying him to take it, is like losing a major battle of World War II without putting up a fight and then giving our conquerors hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign aid.

Skunk's Friends Urge Zoo Not To Evict Him

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wishbone the skunk quit spraying and that has his fans concerned about his health. Wishbone stumped city and state officials in a stink over his domestic instincts after he claimed a South Side family's garage for his home. He will soon be evicted from his latest home, the Lincoln Park Zoo. Lincoln Park Zoo officials "want to throw him out in the spring of the year," Bill Stanton said this week. It was Stanton's garage the skunk chose for a home last Nov. 22. "He wouldn't be able to fend for himself," said Stanton. "He quit spraying when he lived with us, even around the cat and dog. It would be like throwing a cat or dog off in the wild and letting them fend for themselves."

Wishbone's plight became a nationwide cause celebre when state officials informed Stanton of "Catch 22" laws — it is against the law to keep skunks because they are carriers of rabies; it is illegal to let them go for the same reason; and it is illegal to destroy them.

Wishbone lived with Stanton, his wife, their seven children, his invalid brother and his elderly mother for nearly seven weeks before state officials buckled under to a publicity blitz and agreed to house Wishbone at the zoo until spring.

Children Join Fight In Africa

REFUGEES TRAINED TO FIGHT — Refugees were given military training recently at a camp at Jijiga, in the part of Ethiopia held by Somali insurgents. According to the Somali guerrillas, the refugees fled to the camp from the area of Harar, after strikes by Ethiopian air forces destroyed their villages. Jijiga, was once the headquarters of Ethiopia's 10th Mechanized Division. (AP Laserphoto)

By RICHARD TOMKINS
 FIYAMBIRO, Ethiopia (AP) — Children in oversized, cast-off uniforms clutching wooden rifles are a common sight in the brush wars that periodically erupt across Africa.

But in the rebellion to end Ethiopian control of the Ogaden Desert and join it to Somalia, the children are not playing soldier. They are actively engaged in combat, to avenge the deaths of loved ones and to help turn the dream of Western Somalia, the rebels' name for the Ogaden, into a reality.

Three such youngsters seen here in the mountains and valleys on the rebel side of the Fiyambiro battlefield appeared to be at that awkward age between childhood and adolescence.

Wearing brown uniforms, they crouched in the bush facing Ethiopian positions on an opposite ridge. Across each boy's back was an AK-47 automatic rifle about half his size, a weapon the Russians supplied to the rebels' backers in Somalia before the Kremlin switched its support to Ethiopia.

"As is our tradition, they want revenge for the deaths of their parents," said Mohammed Hassan, a field commander for the Western Somali Liberation Front. "They have all received military training."

Hassan explained that the Ethiopians killed the boys' parents when they recaptured hilltop Fiyambiro temporarily last month and executed persons suspected of working for the Liberation Front.

Hassan did not say how many armed children were under his command, but he indicated there were more in the area.

Fiyambiro is in the Amhar mountains, about 110 miles west of the Somali border and 6½ miles north of the strategic Babile Gap.

It is one of two main battlefronts in eastern Ethiopia, where the Liberation Front guerrillas are battling an Ethiopian army counter-offensive to reclaim the Ogaden.

The people of Fiyambiro, like most of the people in the Ogaden, are ethnic Somalis, Moslem nomads like the people of neighboring Somalia, with no cultural ties to the Christian Ethiopians to whom the Ogaden was ceded by the colonial powers in the 19th century.

Liberation Front officials here said thousands of the Ogaden's nomads are receiving military training at 40 camps in the "liberated" zone conquered by the rebels since the war erupted in mid-July. They said thousands of others have been armed with weapons supplied by Somalia or captured from the Ethiopians.

At Jijiga, a former Ethiopian tank and radar base in the northern Ogaden, visiting reporters toured an Ethiopian army camp converted into a refugee center.

About 800 refugees from Ethiopian bombings of Somali villages around Harar, 45 miles to the west, were housed in the camp amid the debris of the battle fought in Jijiga last September.

Women, carrying their infants in slings across their backs, stood in groups watching their men learn to field-strip rifles. The men ranged from adolescents to the elderly. Some wore the traditional hosgunty, a colorful wraparound skirt. Others had on a hodgepodge of military attire.

Their weapons also were mixed, Soviet Kalashnikov rifles and American weapons captured from the Ethiopians.

"I walked five days from my village to reach here and join the front," said Bakar Wadai, one of the older men. "They killed my family."

He said he came from the village of Ar-amayo, near Harar, one of the two strongholds in which the Ethiopian army was besieged until it launched its counter-offensive last month.

Bakar Wadai said the Ethiopian air force repeatedly bombed his village earlier this month, and the five members of his family were killed in one of the raids.

After military instruction, the men and boys at the refugee camp are sent back to their home areas or dispatched to other fronts to fight. They appear determined to defend their new freedom from Ethiopian rule.

Westinghouse Files Suit Against NRA

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. has filed suit to force the federal Nuclear Regulatory Agency to continue its study of atomic fuel recycling in breeder reactors.

The company said Monday it told the U.S. 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia that the decision to discontinue the study was contrary to the best interests of the nation.

The government terminated its environmental impact studies on the use of mixed oxide fuel in nuclear power reactors in December, following about three years work.

Mountain Manager Says Danger Just Part Of Job

DICK REUTER

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
KIRKWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Dick Reuter has been caught in a big avalanche or two and was nearly killed in a 50-foot fall from a chairlift tower. He's hunted, trapped, logged, dynamited, surveyed, snowshoed and skied all over the rugged central and northern Sierra Nevada dividing California and Nevada.

And though Reuter, 54, doesn't like the fact he's been banged around in the process — he lost a rib and part of a lung, broke his shoulder and was chilled on uncounted mountaintops — he's philosophical.

"That's part of the hazard," said the lean, plain-speaking Reuter. "When you're in this kind of business there are risks. If you don't want to do this kind of stuff, don't get into it."

Reuter is mountain manager at the Kirkwood Meadows ski resort.

"There's no use kidding you, I'm not the man I used to be," he said. But he pointed to his head and added, "A lot of it's up here. You can do a ... lot if you're determined."

Co-workers, most of them younger, will attest to that. Reuter, who patrols the big area on skis to check for avalanche hazards, often leaves them huffing and puffing.

During the 1930s drought in the Midwest, Reuter moved with his family to Oroville, Calif., from Nebraska. After military service in Europe during World War II, he returned to Northern California and a life working in the woods.

He took on other work, too, like snow surveys for the California Water Resources Department. That meant treks of 10 days or so, skiing 20 miles a day, to measure snowpack. Helicopters are used for most of that work now.

And at one point Reuter ran a little rope tow for skiers.

In 1955, Reuter started ski patrol work during winters at Squaw Valley. Then in 1962, he went to work full time for the ski resort there. He moved to Kirkwood five years ago.

In the mid-1950s, when skiing was just becoming popular, Reuter and a few others were among the first to try avalanche control by blasting dangerous areas with dynamite, or ski-checking — actually skiing over the hazard areas to start the avalanches.

Reuter once went for a ride on a big avalanche that could have buried him, but instead threw him out to safety.

"I've seen the whole thing (ski resort development) almost from the start," he said. "I've seen a lot of things happen. I've seen the equipment become a lot safer."

Along the way, he has learned how to direct "the work that has to be done on the mountain — the stuff that makes a place like this tick," Reuter said.

Problems Of Railroads Linked To Farm States

CHICAGO (AP) — The economies of the nation's Midwestern farm states may be in jeopardy unless a way is found to keep the financially troubled, grain-carrying railroads operating, a railroad executive says.

John W. Ingram, president of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, said last week at a federally sponsored forum on the problems of Midwestern railroads that a plan such as his Farm-Rail proposal might provide the economic help the rail lines need.

He warned that if the concepts of pooling equipment and facilities, market swaps, consolidation and new solutions contained in his FarmRail proposal are not adopted, there will be a "premature dislocation" of the farming business "from which some towns might never recover."

Nationalization, merger or the formation of a Conrail system for the Midwest is not the answer for farmers, shippers or such bankrupt railroads as the Milwaukee Road and the Rock Island, Ingram said.

None, he said, adequately solves the problem of less profitable, low-density railroads that haul Midwest farm products—as opposed to heavy-density lines that primarily haul industrial material and finished products.

FarmRail would not be like Conrail, in which several Eastern railroads merged into one, but would involve five railroads, each of which would keep their separate identity but cooperate on numerous cost-cutting and service-improvement projects.

Ingram defined FarmRail as "A re-engineering through a precise and intensive voluntary coordination of activities in the 15-state Midwest territory."

He said it would not be a merger or a forced takeover but rather like membership in a country club in which "any member could play in any foursome he wants, and change partners if he wishes." The federal government would not be involved in the plan except to lend money to individual railroads for specific improvement projects.

The primary roadblocks that stand in its way, Ingram said, are "artificial corporate boundaries" and union regulations.

FarmRail would consist of parts of the Milwaukee Road, Rock Island, Illinois Central Gulf, Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad and the Kansas City Southern and involve 30,000 miles of track, 114,000 freight cars and 45,000 employees. The lines serve states from North Dakota to Texas and from Colorado to Illinois.

Ingram said he has not yet approached any of the other railroads he mentioned about entering into a FarmRail-type venture.

FarmRail would do such things, Ingram said, as pool hopper cars to follow the harvest, allowing a railroad working the Texas spring wheat harvest to use the hopper cars of another railroad sitting idle in snow-covered Wisconsin, and vice versa.

It would encourage lines to "swap markets," a maneuver in which the Rock Island, for example, could tell the Milwaukee Road to serve a Rock Island market area if the Milwaukee Road could do a better job, he explained.

Good candidates for pooling and combining facilities, Ingram said, are the Rock Island, Milwaukee Road and ICG trunk lines between Chicago and Council Bluffs, Iowa. Another prime candidate for pooling facilities would be Kansas City, where, Ingram said, the yards of the five FarmRail lines could be combined to create "one humdinger of an effective operation."

As for new ideas, Ingram said, a local, small shuttle train with two crew members could reduce or eliminate the problem of short-haul, one-car orders that plague some railroads.

As an example of the problems these orders create, Ingram said that currently, if all goes well, it takes five days and the part-time efforts of 36 workers to move one hopper car from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, yard 37 miles to a grain elevator at La Porte City, Iowa, and back to a food processing plant at Cedar Rapids.

If done by truck, he said, it takes four employees only three hours to complete. Using a small shuttle train would save comparable manpower and time, he said.

This and other innovative plans, Ingram said, might face union opposition since the unions "may continue cutting off their nose to spite their face."

He contended, however, that such plans would produce more railroad jobs and would be in the best interest of farmers and the nation.

Parade Reveals People's Greed

By Hugh A. Mulligan
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS — The preacher on television on a recent Sunday asked his listeners if they had ever witnessed naked greed in its most abject form.

I wanted to jump through the screen and say, "Yes, brother, I've known human greed en masse. I saw a whole city brought to its knees in a frenzy of covetousness."

Mulligan's Slew "I witnessed street after street, mile after mile of greedy, grasping, pushing, shoving, rapacious, avaricious wall-to-wall humanity crying out for more of what they didn't need and couldn't use."

"I rode a float in a New Orleans Mardi Gras parade and contributed to the municipal delinquency by tossing away the trinkets that the howling mob was howling after."

I wouldn't want to spoil the reverend's pitch, but I can confide to you, kind reader, that like most forms of public profligacy we all enjoyed it a heck of a lot. Since Ash Wednesday and Lent were just around the corner, the prospects of repentance after such giddy dereliction only heightened our merriment which is what carnival — carne vale, Latin for "farewell to flesh" — is all about.

My friend Ed Tunstall, editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, led me down the garden path in the Garden District by suggesting I ride on a float in the Krewe of Bacchus parade, whose king this year was Ed McMahon, the second banana on NBC's "Tonight Show."

Weeks ahead I had to send Tunstall the measurements for my costume, all green and gold and fake ermine-trimmed as part of the royal retinue, but it wasn't until I arrived in New Orleans that he dropped the bomb. The doubloons I would be dispensing to the populace, bearing McMahon's effigy, cost $35 for 500, and each gross of beads I tossed from the float would set me back $15. Well, I had been accused of throwing away the company's money before, but never in such a direct manner.

Now in New Orleans you just don't climb aboard a Mardi Gras float and begin showering the citizenry with favors. "The City that Care Forgot," as it likes to fancy itself, takes its pleasures at a leisurely, liquid pace. The parade was set for Sunday but the night before we gathered at Brennan's restaurant in the French Quarter for the king's gala banquet.

Early next morning the float riders had a training session at the Court of the Two Sisters to work the kinks out of their tossing elbows with a brace of Bloody Marys and similar liniments. Then there was a horse and carriage ride through the narrow streets of the Quarter, where the parade would not pass, so the denizens of those quaint bars and old houses would get their share of carnival loot.

Billy Kilmer, quarterback of the Washington Redskins who lives in New Orleans, rode the front seat of our carriage and specialized in tossing the bomb to bead-begging tourists on hotel balconies and rooftops.

"Hey, Billy," a man heckled, "You never connected like this with the Redskins."

"I never had receivers like this in Washington," he answered. The trinket seekers knew no shame. "Hey, Mister," they screamed, "throw me something," and scrambled under grandstands, wallowed in puddles and even sifted through the exhaust matter of our prime mover for the coins of the one-day realm. On the lawn of the old courthouse, the city had installed a line of portable toilets. As we rounded the corner, a hand reached out of a door marked "men" and groped for a string of beads.

All this was only a preview. At night the gaily lighted floats moved down a canyon of outstretched arms. The police reported a half million people in the streets, teetering on step ladders, hanging from lampposts, holding up hats and baskets and blankets to catch a remembrance of Mardi Gras. Despite the biblical warning, tossing fake pearls before swingers had its rewards. Some thanked you with a smile, a blown kiss, a shouted blessing and, on rare occasions, with a teasing affront to the city's code of proper attire. Kids risked their lives crawling under the floats for mis-aimed favors and there was always the danger of getting trampled in a scramble, but never have I seen so many people projecting an unflinching good humor under such pressing conditions.

It was a sight to see the mayor of New Orleans, Moon Landrieu, brought to his knees in the reviewing stand in front of old city hall, groping for a coin from King Bacchus just like the rest of the people.

"I've never seen anything like it," admitted king for a day McMahon, who has had lengthy experience with TV give-away shows. "You've got to ride on a float to believe it."

Chicago News Given Award For Editorial

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The Chicago Daily News, which is expected to end publication March 4, won the sweepstakes award in the 1978 editorial excellence contest sponsored by the William Allen White Foundation.

The Daily News entry, which was cited for clarity, force and distinction on local issues, also was judged best among newspapers with a circulation of more than 50,000.

The management of the Daily News announced this week that the newspaper will cease publication next month unless there is a drastic change in its financial situation.

Other winners in the sixth annual competition were the Mankato (Minn.) Free Press, in the 25,001 to 50,000 circulation class; Idaho State Journal at Pocatello, in the 10,001 to 25,000 range, and the Gillette (Wyo.) News-Record, in the under-10,000 circulation class.

Other finalists were the Milwaukee Journal, Duluth (Minn.) News-Tribune, Bay City (Mich.) Times, Kenosha (Wis.) News, Sedalia (Mo.) Democrat-Capital, Troy (Ohio) Daily News, Canton (Ill.) Daily Ledger and the Oskaloosa (Iowa) Daily Herald.

The winners were selected by journalism faculty members at the University of Kansas. Plaques were to be presented to the winners today at the Inland Daily Press Association's spring meeting in Boca Raton, Fla.

The judges said of the Chicago Daily News editorials: "Lois Wille, associate editor, has submitted perceptive and hard-hitting editorials in support of civic improvements in Chicago and has, by all indications, registered commendable results. This group of five editorials is distinguished by fidelity to principle, grace of style and firmness of purpose in appealing for public support for the betterment of the community."

LAWYERS ON THE MARCH — Former President Gerald Ford, second from right, was followed by Kansas Governor Robert Bennett, second from left, and Martin Dickinson, left, dean of the Kansas University Law School, as they marched to the podium for dedication ceremonies of the university's new law building Tuesday in Lawrence. Ford Cites Failure By Carter

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford says he hopes the efforts of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will make up for the Carter administration's failures in the Middle East.

Ford concluded a two-day trip to Kansas Tuesday with a speech to a combined political-history class at the University of Kansas.

"We worked to get the Soviet Union out of the Middle East," Ford told the class. "Then this administration brought the Soviet Union back in as a co-chairman of the revised Geneva Convention. I think that mainly the reason Sadat went to Jerusalem was that the U.S. policy in the Middle East was dead in the water, absolutely dead in the water."

"Maybe Sadat bailed them out. By his actions they're working to get three bilateral agreements achieved. If you get those, then you can go to Geneva and get them approved."

Turning to politics, Ford said he didn't think the Carter administration "had a prayer" of meeting the president's campaign promise of a balanced budget by 1981. Ford added he hasn't made a decision on his future political plans.

"I'm going to be in the political arena," he said. "I'm healthy and I feel I have an obligation to contribute to the party. I'm not inferring I will or will not be a candidate, but it's possible either way."

"I'm 64, going on 50 and I'll be around to help in one way or another."

Speaking to a business class, Ford took issue with Carter's combined tax reform and tax reduction bill. He said Congress probably would insist the two subjects be separated.

"I believe the combination of tax reform, whatever that might be, and tax reductions will slow down the congressional enactment of a tax reform bill and unless they are decoupled, I don't believe Congress will act on the tax reform bill until at least August or September," Ford said.

Gas Bill Hikes Due Consumers

AUSTIN (AP) — About 6,000 consumers will be paying higher natural gas bills as the result of two natural gas rate increases approved Tuesday by the Texas Railroad Commission.

One increase, granted West Texas Gas Inc., affects 490 rural residential customers in 38 Texas counties.

The second increase, to Southern Union Gas Co., affects 5,401 residential, commercial and other customers in the rural environs of El Paso County.

West Texas Gas Inc. sought the rate increase after appealing to the commission that the company was experiencing a revenue deficiency of $26,306. The rate approved by the commission would generate increased revenues of $25,685. Residential rates under the new schedule would go up from $24.31 to $27.55 per 10,000 cubic feet of gas.

The rate increase in El Paso County was slightly more than two percent over current rates, the same as a rate increase approved recently by the cities of El Paso, Clint and Anthony, who also are served by Southern Union.

Commission authorities said Southern Union would receive about $59,534 more gross revenue as a result of the raise. Residential service for 10,000 feet will increase from $16.80 to $17.18.

380 Mexicans Visit In Carter Program

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Rosalynn Carter welcomed 380 Mexicans visiting here for 10 days under the Friendship Force exchange program.

"When you have friends in a country, you become interested in it. You understand them better when you stay in their homes," Mrs. Carter said at a reception Tuesday night. A group of 380 people from the Harrisburg area, headed by Pennsylvania's first lady Muriel Shapp, arrived in Mexico City on Monday to stay in individual homes during their trip.

Friendship Force is an expansion of a people-to-people program President Carter began when he was governor of Georgia in 1973.

Clinic Opposes Abortion Board

By FRANK COATS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The director of Lubbock's Planned Family Clinic issued a statement this morning in response to the Right to Life members who picketed the clinic Tuesday.

The picketers were demanding establishment of a board composed of an equal number of pro-and anti-abortion members which would review the case of any woman who came to the clinic seeking an abortion.

The board the picketers are seeking would have the final authority in the case.

"We feel that any type of review board would be in direct contravention of the Supreme Court decision of January, 1973," the statement, written by director Susan Olbekson, said.

The statement further stated the clinic

Officer Listed As 'Fair' In Condition

HOBBS (Special) — A 24-year-old Hobbs policeman was in fair condition today in Llano Estacado Medical Center here after sustaining a shoulder wound during an armed robbery here late Sunday.

According to a hospital spokeswoman, patrolman Craig Carney remained in the hospital's intensive care unit in fair, but closely-guarded condition after suffering a bullet wound to the right shoulder.

Hobbs police late Tuesday were searching for a suspect described as a black male, 16 to 17 years of age, 5-feet 2-to 4-inches and weighing 120 pounds with a short Afro haircut. He was last seen wearing a gray sweatshirt and blue jeans.

The suspect was spotted late Sunday on foot in a dark alley about 1 1/2 blocks northeast of the Allsup's convenience store at Sanger and Jefferson Streets, the scene of the holdup.

Police reports indicated that officers Carney and Mike Brown had responded to a holdup alarm at the store at about 11:15 p.m. Sunday.

The officers arrived at the scene and saw a black man standing in front of the female clerk. The officers entered the store, and Brown took the man outside to frisk him. Carney remained in the store questioning Julie Reynolds, the 18-year-old attendant.

According to Sgt. Jim Ott, when Brown began frisking the man, the suspect began fighting.

"Apparently, Carney ran out of the store to help Brown, but the man took off running before Carney got there," Ott said, adding that both officers began pursuing the man.

Dallas Schools Fire Drivers

DALLAS (AP) — Almost 50 school bus drivers, after refusing for the second straight day to make their runs, were fired Tuesday by the Dallas Independent School District.

The drivers were protesting working conditions and pay, including the failure of the school system to pay them for five days that weather forced unscheduled closings.

The drivers, after refusing to make their rounds Monday, showed up for work Tuesday morning. When asked to man their buses, they responded by asking whether their demands, including an increase of at least 75 cents an hour in their $3.25 hourly pay, had been taken under consideration.

Told the demands were irrelevant to their work Tuesday morning, the protest leaders refused to make their runs and were fired. The rest of the drivers also were fired, but an "unknown" number of them later changed their minds and decided to continue working.

School officials had told the striking drivers Monday night that state law makes it illegal to strike or to threaten to strike.

School officials filled in with administrative personnel to complete the bus runs both Monday and Tuesday.

will not participate "on any board that would circumvent the Roe vs. Wade decision which guarantees each woman the right to choose abortion as an alternative to an unplanned pregnancy."

The statement also said that any decision on an abortion is considered a "private and confidential decision," and would not be subjected to a board decision.

The picketers, who did not have a permit, arrived at the clinic at 67th Street and Indiana Avenue about 10:30 a.m. Tuesday and stayed until late afternoon. Nancy Richard, a spokesman for the group, said members would picket the facility for the remainder of the week and will return once a week until their demands on the private clinic are met.

The picketers issued a statement which called for the review board and also charged the clinic with "exploiting" pregnant women for profit.

The Right to Life members were handing out brochures on the child before birth, showing color pictures of the fetus in various stages of development.

"While we respect any organization's right to its opinion and the democratic process, we also respect the right of each woman to make the decision whether or not to terminate an unplanned pregnancy," director Olbekson said in her statement.

The clinic has been in operation for about a year and a half.

"I'm a social worker," Miss Olbekson said. "We provide counseling and follow-up counseling as well as talk to women about alternatives."

She said the clinic also stressed birth control.

"No one is pushed into this position," she said, adding that women are told of other choices: marriage, adoption, keeping the child and abortion.

The picketers, which numbered between 12 and 25 through the day, said the move had been planned for about two weeks.

The statement the picketers issued said "the intention of the Supreme Court decision abolishing legal controls over abortions has been grossly misinterpreted," and that the "faulty interpretation" caused a feeling of "trivialization" of human life.

Lawyers Fail To Select New Jurors

The number of jurors in the Samuel Christopher Hawkins III capital murder trial remained at four through noon today, with no new jurors chosen in a morning round of questioning.

Two new jurors were seated Tuesday. They are Reynolds L. Miller, 32, and Robert O'Neill, 28.

A three-year Lubbock resident, Miller resides at 4707 76th St. and is employed by Resource Capital Co. where he works with Small Business Administration loan packages.

O'Neill, a seven-year Lubbock resident, is merchandising manager for the F.W. Woolworth Corp. and lives at 2317 Auburn St., No. 70.

The defense this morning used the ninth of its 15 allotted free strikes of a prospective juror for no stated reason.

The state this morning had exercised four such peremptory challenges during jury selection.

Hawkins, 34, is accused of stabbing a 6-months-pregnant Borger woman to death.

Abbe Rodgers Hamilton, 19, was found in the bedroom of her Panhandle home May 3, 1977, bound hand and foot and stabbed about 10 times.

The trial was moved here on a change of venue from Hutchinson County.

If convicted of the capital charge, Hawkins will face either death or life imprisonment, the only punishment options under Texas' capital murder statute.

Wiesen died Tuesday afternoon in Methodist Hospital following a lengthy illness.

The Fort Worth native was a 1920 graduate of Texas A&M University.

Shortly after graduating from Texas A&M, he spent 10 years in China in the import-export business. He also taught at Boone University and attended Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania for three years.

Wiesen moved to Lubbock in 1940 to accept a position as professor of economics at Texas Tech University. He was chairman of the economics department for 16 years and retired in 1962 as professor emeritus.

Survivors include two sons, Richard of Lubbock and Donald of Janesville, Wis.; two sisters, Mrs. A.T. Allen of Fort Worth and Mrs. John L. Peeler of Midland; and three grandchildren.

Cause Hinted In Probe Of Plane Crash

Running into electrical power lines currently is the unofficial cause of a fatal plane crash Monday night south of the city which killed four persons, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator indicated this morning.

Investigators' examination of the wreckage, plus statements from persons close by when the plane crashed shortly before 8 p.m. near "the Strip" on the Tahoka Highway, shows the craft was intact at the time of the crash, that it had electrical power and the engine was running efficiently, NTSB official Frank Roth said.

Killed in the mishap were the pilot, Stephen Frank Douglass, 22, of 2703 27th St.; William Peter Davis, 21, and Kelvin Lee Gerald, 21, both of Andrews; and Raymond Wesley Needham, 21, of Dallas.

Douglass was a former student at Texas Tech University, and the other three victims reportedly were attending Tech at the time of their deaths.

Although he did not give a positive cause of the crash, Roth said the mishap apparently resulted when the single-engine, four-passenger Cessna struck some overhead electrical wires.

While the plane apparently swooped down at nearby Town and Country Airport shortly before the crash, it was not known why the craft was flying so low when it plunged to the ground, Roth said.

Former Texan Recognized

DALLAS (AP) — Students of Texas history know the debt of gratitude they owe to Tennessee for such men as Crockett, Fannin, Travis and Houston.

Thanks were again expressed to the state of Tennessee Tuesday night in Dallas by members of the Texas Public Health Association at their annual meeting and awards banquet for sending Texas as a young doctor in 1958 to help fight a battle against disease.

The present-day hero, Dr. Albert G. Randall, former director of the Houston city health department and now commissioner of health for South Carolina, was recognized by his peers as an honorary member of TPHA.

Randall served as director of health for the Amarillo Bi-City County Health Department in 1958-64; director of health for Cameron and Hidalgo counties, 1964-66; director of tuberculosis control for the Texas Department of Health, 1966-70; and director of health for the largest city in Texas, 1970-77.

Dr. Roger Smythe, president of TPHA, cited Randall for his years of service to the association by serving in every office and on every important committee over the past 20 years.

BUSING COSTS
Public school districts spend more than $1.5 billion annually to take children to and from schools, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association. During the 1973-1974 school year, 21.1 million school children were transported in 271,552 buses.

Senior 'Stout' After Brew

NEW YORK (AP) — Genovese Camlin will celebrate her 94th birthday Saturday by tearing up her $300 tab at the Greenwich Village bar where she has downed a bottle of Guinness stout daily for the past 10 years.

Every day after lunch, Miss Camlin visits the No-Name bar, half a block from the nursing home where she lives.

"I need something to sip between puffs of the two cigarettes I smoke over there," she explained.

Miss Camlin, who was born in Ireland, sometimes has a martini and some mints, but always has a Guinness.

"Guinness to her is like a vitamin pill," said saloonkeeper Danny Lettieri, who keeps the No-Name open seven days a week. "She comes every day," he said. "During the blizzard this month she made it even when the postman didn't."

Countries Due U.S. Aid Despite Rights Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration will continue arming some despotic allies because security considerations outweigh human rights values, administration officials say.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, testifying before a House committee Tuesday on the administrations proposed foreign aid budget, said "a multitude of factors" in addition to human rights went into the decisions about how much military aid to dole out.

One example cited by Vance was the Philippines, a country which the State Department described in its recent human rights report as among the worst violators of human rights.

But, Vance said, the United States is currently negotiating with the Philippines for the right to continue U.S. air and naval bases there. While those negotiations are going on, he said, the administration felt it best to continue military assistance.

This means, he said, that the United States will give the Philippines $18.1 million in arms in 1979 and finance the sale of an additional $18.5 million, virtually the same amount as in 1978.

Vance did not release complete figures on U.S. aid allocations, but informed sources who asked not to be identified said Korea, Taiwan, and Indonesia also will continue receiving arms aid, although Taiwan's aid will be diminished.

The administration will ask Congress to approve $10 million in financing for Taiwan in 1979, down from $25 million in 1978.

Military sales financing for Korea and Indonesia will remain as it is in 1978, with Korea receiving $275 million in credits and Indonesia $40 million. Both countries were criticized for human rights violations by the department last month.

The sources said Nicaragua, a tiny Central American nation, is the only country which is being completely cut off because of human rights violations. The Nicaraguans also have not received $2.5 million in financing for the current year.

Several other Latin American regimes will receive no military aid for other reasons. Argentina and Chile have been cut off by Congress. Brazil, Uruguay and El Salvador have spurned American aid because they disagree with the administration's human rights initiatives.

In Africa, Ethiopian military assistance was discontinued this year and will not be resumed in 1979.

Vance said the foreign military aid budget might swell later this year if the United States concludes defense agreements with Turkey and Greece.

Neither country is included in the proposed 1979 allocations, but Vance said they might be added. Congress has limited arms aid to Turkey since its invasion of Cyprus in 1974, and aid to Greece is embroiled in questions about U.S. bases there.

But the committee's attention focused largely on arms sales in the Middle East, particularly the $4.8 billion package of fighter planes the administration wants to sell to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel.

Vance reiterated that the sales were intended as a package, and he said the package should be considered by Congress as a whole.

"If Congress tried to take the package apart, giving to one country and not to another, it would distort the military balance which currently exists," Vance said. He added that "the likelihood of conflict in the Middle East is less if the balance is maintained."

Game Officials Probe Shooting Of Eagles

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Two eagles have been killed and another wounded in Arkansas so far this year, despite stiff penalties for anyone convicted of shooting one of the big birds, a federal official said.

One of the three, a young bald eagle with gunshot wounds in the neck and shoulder, is to be flown today to Auburn University in Alabama for special veterinary treatment, agent Andrew Pursley of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

Arkansas Game and Fish Commission officer Vol Cowgur said Tuesday the investigation of the shooting "looks very favorable" and that charges may be filed soon in the case.

The maximum federal penalty for killing a bald eagle is a $5,000 fine and one year in prison. The penalty is doubled on the second offense.

The government offers a reward of half the fine, up to $2,500, for information leading to the conviction of someone who shoots one of the birds.

Agents also are investigating the shooting deaths of two eagles three weeks ago at Norfolk Lake, Pursley said.

He estimated the statewide bald and golden eagle population at about 140, eighteen of which have been killed or wounded in Arkansas within the past year. "They arrive the first of October and leave about March, although some remain in the state," Pursley said.

The wounded eagle was sighted Monday about a mile west of Pea Ridge National Military Park in northwestern Arkansas, Pursley said.

Cowgur said the wounded bird was turned over to him by Kinley Miller, who discovered the grounded eagle on the Miller farm.

"He was shot in the shoulder and wing," Cowgur said. "He can hold his head up and walk around, but he doesn't have the use of his right wing."

"He's an immature bald eagle — his head won't turn white until he is 4 years old," Cowgur said.

Pursley said the young eagle apparently was wounded by a rifle slug.

The bird wore a numbered band on one of its legs, Pursley said, and the number was sent to a lab in Laurel, Md., for identification.

"The number will identify the bander, location, date, age and maybe the sex of the bird," Pursley said.

Federal agents band eagles while they are still in the nest, he explained.

Pursley called banding "a pretty risky business. Some of the nests weigh a ton. Guys climb up there and band them to try and better identify the species."

Banding is performed in several states, but Arkansas is not among them, Pursley continued.

The wounded eagle spent Tuesday night in a heated building at the Cowgur residence in Centerton. "I've been trying to feed and water him. I think he ate a little hamburger this morning," Cowgur said Tuesday.

Local Woman Initiates Anti-Smoking Campaign

Shirley Wassom just burns whenever someone blows smoke in her face.

She also gets a runny nose, watery eyes and a shortness of breath.

In a recent letter to the editor of The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, Mrs. Wassom of 4436 28th St. suggested an anti-smoking campaign. NUFES (Non-smokers United to Fight Smoke) Her letter was in reply to Ricky Arnold's PUFF (People United to Fight Fanatics) organization which encourages smokers to stand up to anti-smoking regulations.

Mrs. Wassom's effort is getting off the ground with bumper stickers which proclaim, "Smoking Hurts Others."

The slogan was suggested by J.E. Van Stavern of Levelland who hopes it will "get the smoker's attention but not antagonize them," Mrs. Wassom said.

Mrs. Wassom said at least 34 million people in the country suffer allergic reactions to tobacco smoke.

She says she had to have 50 penicillin shots once and has entered the hospital on occasion to clear up her lungs. She said she gave up an excellent-paying job to escape the smoke-filled office.

"It is next to impossible to buy groceries, go to the beauty shop, any kind of department store, bowling alley, etc., without having smoke blown in your face," she said.

Mrs. Wassom said at least 34 million people in the country suffer allergic reactions to tobacco smoke.

Van Stavern contacted Mrs. Wassom in response to her A-J letter.

About 25 bumper stickers have been distributed and persons interested in getting one may contact Mrs. Wassom at 762-0366 before 5 p.m. or 792-7453 in the evening. Donations are requested but are not required, she said.

Van Stavern and Mrs. Wassom both say they get physically ill from tobacco smoke.

Vatican Protests Court Sentences

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican is upset because a court in La Spezia sentenced four priests to 70 days in jail for publicizing a letter from the nation's bishops four years ago.

The court found the priests guilty of engaging political propaganda because the letter called on the people to vote against the divorce laws in a national referendum. The divorce laws were upheld 3-to-1, and an anti-clerical politician charged the priests with violating a 1948 law.

The jail sentences were suspended, but L'Osservatore Romano, the Vatican newspaper, said the convictions were a wound to religious freedom.

New Russian Missile Capable Of Hitting U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have started deploying their fourth advanced land-based missile capable of hitting the United States, U.S. intelligence sources said.

The SS-16 is the lightest of the four new types of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles placed in firing position since late 1974. They are replacing older and less accurate weapons.

The most recent U.S. ICBM, the Minuteman III, was deployed between 1970 and 1975.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Pentagon research chief William Perry said recently that the Russians are developing a still newer generation of four missiles, with flight-testing expected to begin "at any time."

On the U.S. side, the Carter administration has slowed development of the MX, the only new American land-based intercontinental missile in sight.

U.S. diplomats have sought to curb development of new strategic missiles on both sides by proposing curbs on testing. But there is no evidence the Russians are interested.

So, while a new U.S.-Soviet agreement may put a lid on total numbers of the strategic missiles, it appears that the race for more potent nuclear weapons will continue.

U.S. intelligence specialists have watched for the SS-16's deployment with interest, because they have seen signs in the past that it might be Russia's first land-based missile on movable launch pads rather than in fixed silos.

Sources, who asked not to be identified, said the first SS-16s to be deployed are known to be in underground bases.

However, they note that the Russian SS-20 missile — made up of the first two rocket stages of the SS-16 — has been deployed on mobile launchers.

While the SS-20's range is too short to threaten the United States, U.S. experts are concerned that the Russians could quickly give it intercontinental range by strapping on a third rocket stage.

Unlike heavier Soviet SS-17, SS-18 and SS-19 missiles deployed starting in 1974 and 1975, the SS-16 carries only one warhead so far. The other types are armed with multiple nuclear warheads, according to U.S. intelligence, and Brown has said those missiles "are accurate enough to pose a substantial threat to our land-based (Minuteman) ICBMs in the early 1980s."

Because of this approaching Minuteman vulnerability, backers of the U.S. MX hope to develop it as a mobile missile to checkmate any possible Soviet attempt at a knock-out nuclear blow in the mid-1980s and later. But Brown has said there are serious technical doubts that must be resolved first.

According to U.S. intelligence estimates, the SS-16 has a range of about 6,300 miles. It is 65 feet long and, at liftoff, is believed to weigh 95,000 pounds. That is about five feet longer and 17,000 pounds heavier than the Minuteman III, which mounts three warheads.

By comparison, the SS-17 is 70 feet long and weighs 170,000 pounds, the SS-18 is 110 feet long and weighs 430,000 pounds, and the SS-19 is 80 feet long and has a lift-off weight of 200,000 pounds.

The SS-17 has been tested with four warheads, the 18 with eight warheads and the SS-19 with six warheads.

Cypriot President Suspends Official

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Spyros Kyprianou suspended Cyprus' deputy police chief today for his role in Sunday night's battle between Egyptian commandos and Cypriot troops at Larnaca airport.

Pavlos Stokkos, the second-ranking policeman in Greek-controlled Cyprus, was suspended "for communicating false information regarding the events at Larnaca airport and for negligence in the execution of his duties," an official statement said without elaboration.

Authorities refused to comment on the reasons for the suspension, the government's first action against a Cypriot since the incident.

Kyprianou has blamed Egypt for the clash, saying the commandos violated Cypriot sovereignty by assaulting a terrorist-held plane against the specific orders of the Cypriot government. Fifteen Egyptians were killed and 16 wounded and at least seven Cypriots were wounded.

Neither government has taken action on Cairo's demand to recall Egyptian diplomats from Cyprus and have Cypriot envoys pulled out of Egypt.

A Cypriot Embassy spokesman in Cairo told The Associated Press the embassy has received no order, official or unofficial, to leave. The Cyprus government has not received any notification from Cairo on the withdrawal of envoys, a spokesman said.

Kyprianou said responsibility for the battle "rests with the Egyptian side." He asked why the commandos didn't make their attack earlier Sunday during the 11 hours the two terrorists, their hostages and their commandeered plane were in Djibouti, like Egypt an African Moslem country but one with a French garrison to help protect it.

Kyprianou said Egypt even gave assurances there would be no attack at Larnaca and that its ambassador and military attaché were told the two terrorists had agreed to free the 11 Arab hostages and four plane crewmen.

When the Egyptians launched their attack, he said, the Cypriot National Guard "had no alternative but to intervene and take action to save the hostages and to protect the sovereign rights of the Cypriot state."

Brig. Nabil Shukry, who led the commandos in their abortive attempt to capture the killers of Egyptian newspaper editor Youssef el Sebaei, told a radio interviewer in Cairo he ordered the attack after 90 minutes without word of progress in the negotiations with the terrorists.

"If the Cypriot forces had not interfered the operation would have succeeded without a single drop of blood," he said. "The Egyptian force reached the plane and was on the ramp when we were shot in the back. We were surprised. This was a kind of treachery."

The two Palestinian terrorists killed Sebaei, a confidant of President Anwar Sadat, in the lobby of the Nicosia Hilton Saturday and then took 11 Arab diplomats on a flight around the Middle East in search of refuge. After no Arab country would accept them, their Cypriot Airways DC-8 refueled in Djibouti and landed back in Cyprus about 5:45 p.m. Sunday.

An hour later an Egyptian C-130 transport got permission to land and taxied to a stop about 800 yards from the terrorists' plane.

The Egyptian government said it informed the Cypriots the commandos were coming. The Cypriots said they were told Egypt's information minister was aboard and did not learn of the troops until Police Chief Savvas Antoniou went to the plane to greet the Egyptian minister.

Insurance Panel Snubs Christie

AUSTIN (AP) — State Insurance Board Chairman Hugh Yantis today proposed seeking "grassroots" opinion before the board decides of new home insurance rates.

Rates proposed by the board staff today would increase the average statewide cost of homeowners' coverage 13.1 per cent. Insurance companies want a 14.1 per cent increase.

Board members also received, but did not act on, a postponement motion by former board chairman Joe Christie, and Yantis refused to allow a statement by Christie to be read into the record.

Insurance company lawyers objected that reading the statement by Christie — a U.S. Senate candidate — would amount to hearsay. They added that since Christie was not present, he could not be cross-examined.

Yantis proposed that the board conduct seminars or public meetings — but not formal hearings — in several cities throughout the state to hear the views of "ordinary people" about insurance rates.

He said the board should "get out there in the grassroots and find out what the people think about insurance, what they want to tell us."

Former board lawyer Hector DeLeon, representing Christie, said Yantis' proposal was within the spirit of Christie's motion for an indefinite postponement of a hearing.

"We more than wholeheartedly endorse the proposal. It is an imaginative approach to the rate regulation duties of the board," DeLeon said.

In denying DeLeon's request to read a statement by Christie, Yantis said, "We are not here today to engage in a political exercise."

Christie's statement, released to reporters, said the insurance companies were seeking increases that amounted to triple the inflation rate.

"Crum & Forster more than doubled their profit last year. Aetna almost doubled its profit. Despite these windfall profits, they are asking for more," Christie's statement said.

Property rates have not been changed in Texas since July 1976.

Last March, the board ordered a 2.8 per cent overall decline in property rates — although the total picture included a small increase in homeowners' rates.

New rates did not take effect, however, because of legal issues raised by the insurance companies in a motion for rehearing.

Jerry Johns, president of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service, Inc., issued a statement saying rates should go up because of "skyrocketing increases" in construction costs.

"It is difficult to predict if the price of home construction and maintenance will decline, but until they do, insurance companies in Texas must do something to keep pace with this inflationary trend," Johns said.

Sadat Retaliates Against Cyprus

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat said today Egypt has withdrawn its recognition of the Cypriot government of President Spyros Kyprianou in retaliation for a Cypriot troop attack on Egyptian commandos at Larnaca airport.

Foreign ministry sources said Sadat's move amounted to a complete diplomatic break between the two countries.

Sadat announced the decision in a speech to a token force of army commandos immediately after the funeral of 15 of their comrades killed in the Larnaca battle. The state-controlled Middle East News Agency carried the highlights of the speech.

Tens of thousands of people watching the funeral procession turned it into a vehemently anti-Cypriot, anti-Palestinian demonstration demanding revenge.

Frenzied, fist-shaking crowds shouted, "slaughter to all Palestinians" and "down with Cyprus."

Sadat accused Kyprianou of committing "a treacherous crime" by ordering his forces to attack the Egyptian commandos when they attempted to free Egyptian and other hostages held by two Palestinian gunmen aboard a Cypriot airliner Sunday.

Announcing the withdrawal of recognition, Sadat said "Kyprianou must pay the price for his treacherous decision which resulted in the martyrdom of some of my sons."

Egypt announced Monday it was withdrawing its diplomatic mission from Nicosia and asking the Cypriot government to recall its embassy staff from Cairo.

The move was a step short of a total break of diplomatic relations. Sadat completed the break today.

Sadat also demanded that Cyprus extradite to Egypt the two Palestinian gunmen who, before hijacking the Cypriot plane and flying to Djibouti and then back to Cyprus, had shot to death Youssef el-Sebaei, editor of the Cairo newspaper Al-Ahram and a friend of Sadat, at a Nicosia hotel.

Referring to Kyprianou's declared readiness to meet with him for a reconciliation, Sadat said: "Kyprianou today wants to see me. But there is nothing to talk about between us. Cyprus must deliver to me the two hired criminals and must give me an explanation of the treachery it committed against my sons."

He reminded Cyprus of the aid Egypt gave it in the struggle for independence which it won in 1960, saying, "Egypt extended to Cyprus great assistance unequalled even by Greece, even though most of the island's inhabitants are of Greek origin."

Sadat looked grim as he led the mourners directly behind three ambulances carrying the coffins, which were completely hidden from sight by red, white and black Egyptian flags draped over the glass windows on both sides and at the back.

In a stern warning to the Palestinian guerrillas, Sadat said, "The Palestinians before all Arabs must know that Egypt will get 10 blows for every single blow directed at it."

Referring to his peace talks with Israel and his insistence on self-determination for the Palestinians, he said: "Egypt is defending the Palestinian cause everywhere while the Palestinians are going to nightclubs and offering themselves for hire as assassins and terrorists."

He dismissed opposition to his peace initiative from the Palestinians and several hardline Arab countries including Syria, Algeria and Libya as "petty challenges... Their movers are petty in their thinking and behavior."

Some routes ran as much as an hour behind schedule and some buses altered their courses to avoid non-negotiable hills, he said.

"We would rather run behind schedule than have an accident," Wilson said, adding that drivers were instructed to consider safety more important than schedules.

For all their precautions, three Citibus drivers could not avoid traffic mishaps. Wilson said that one "fender-bender" involving city buses occurred Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Only "very light" damage was sustained by the buses in the mishaps, none of which was the fault of a city driver, Wilson said. No injuries were noted, either, he added.

The sanitation department kept its trucks off the streets and alleys Friday and Saturday, acknowledged Levi Maples. But, he said, "the public couldn't get to the dumpsters so no one noticed."

Garbage-collecting trucks began operating again Monday on schedule, he said. And apart from "two or three trucks stuck in the alley Tuesday," there were no "real problems," Maples added.

Street paving was brought to a halt by the wet weather, said engineer Jim Conley. Until the streets thoroughly dry and temperatures stay fairly warm, he added, work will not resume.

Conley said the delay will not cost taxpayers any money because the paving contracts already have been let. The delay will cost the contractors, though, he said.

While the weather was playing havoc with some city services, parks department staffers were counting it as a blessing.

Age Discrimination Suit Due Jury Trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled 8-0 today a person who sues for lost wages on grounds of age discrimination may demand a jury trial.

Justice Thurgood Marshall delivered the opinion in the case of Frances P. Pons, a former employee of Lorillard Tobacco Co., a division of Loew's Theatres Inc.

Mrs. Pons charged she was fired at age 48 as financial services coordinator in 1975, in accordance with a company policy to discharge older workers and keep young people whenever possible. Seeking lost wages, damages and reinstatement, she was denied a jury trial by U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon of Greensboro, N.C.

The 1967 Age Discrimination in Employment Act says a worker who suffers age discrimination "may bring a civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction for such legal or equitable relief" as will carry out the purpose of the law.

Marshall said Congress had incorporated into the age discrimination act certain provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, under which right to a jury trial is well established.

only slight variation. Some temperatures early this morning included 21 degrees at Dalhart, 26 at Wichita Falls, 27 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 22 at Houston, 30 at Corpus Christi, 32 at Alice, 33 at Del Rio, 31 at San Angelo, 30 at El Paso and 27 at Lubbock.

West to northwesterly winds of 15-20 mph and gusting may add some discomfort to today's milder, afternoon forecasts, but predictions for evening set wind speeds at 5-10 mph.

The overnight low of 27 in Lubbock more than doubles Monday's 13-degree minimum reading, and the warmer temperatures forecast for the area began to show up in the city's 43-degree maximum temperature Monday.

A year ago today, a 43-degree reading represented the city's low reading. The high temperature at that time was 81 degrees.

Despite the city's recent bitter winter weather, though, Lubbockites can at least find consolation in precipitation totals that more than triple last year's total at this time. Of the nearly two inches recorded in Lubbock, 1.38 inch was added during the first three weeks of February.

South Plains temperatures this morning generally ranged from the upper 20s to lower 30 or more farm units could be combined into one working operations. Cozart said that in the Gaines cases, all farm applications for reconstitution were submitted properly.

Question arose over the legitimacy of certain government price support payments, when several checks were mailed to one post office address. Cozart conceded an investigation found no evidence of more than one check mailed to a single person in the county.

Testimony was to continue possibly tonight. Officials said the testimony will be completed today and that a final decision on whether the removals were proper possibly will come in June.

India May Raise Age For Marrying

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The lower house of the Indian parliament has passed a bill raising the minimum age for marriage from 15 to 18 for women and 18 to 21 for men. The bill was sent to the upper house.

Sponsors claimed the bill would curb population growth and improve the status of women. India's population, now 625 million, is growing at the rate of 13 million a year.

Townsend Plan Coming To End

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — The National Townsend Plan, a stepchild of the Depression, was a country doctor's vision that fired the imagination of thousands and fostered the Social Security Act. Now it is dying.

The plan becomes defunct at the end of the month, splitting into state chapters with no central core, but the life went out of it long ago because of a dwindling and aging membership.

In a way, the Townsend Plan was a victim of its own success, its goals absorbed into the Social Security Act of 1935. But surviving "Townsendites" still say that if Congress had chosen the Townsend Plan, the nation's pension fund wouldn't be facing future bankruptcy.

The Townsend Plan preceded Social Security by two years. Dr. Francis Townsend, a South Dakota native, was 66 and a retired family doctor when he wrote a letter that was published in scores of newspapers.

The letter — written in 1933 after Townsend saw starving, unemployed people rummaging through garbage cans in an alley behind his Long Beach, Calif., home — outlined his vision of a national insurance plan. Until he died in 1960, Townsend devoted his life to the plan.

The insurance would have been financed by a flat 2 percent tax on gross income over $250 a month, with no loopholes. Money garnered from the tax would have paid for an array of programs comparable to those now in Social Security — monthly income to the retired, education for the disadvantaged and aid to women who head households.

Townsend touted the plan as the solution to both old age security and unemployment. Those over 60 would retire, opening the job market to the young.

Hundreds of thousands who had watched the Depression rob them of their savings and shatter their dreams turned to Townsend with hope. Townsend Plan chapters sprang up in every state during the 1930s.

The chapters operated actively until Townsend's death, but the indifference of the young helped kill the plan.

"There was no new blood," said John Doyle Elliott, secretary of the plan from 1947-1976 and now, at age 71, the organization's principal lobbyist on Capitol Hill.

Some of Townsend's proposals echoed principles espoused by Socialist Party candidate Norman Thomas, and Elliott said Townsend was maligned as a dictator by some. But, said Elliott, the plan "is social, not socialist."

He said that under the plan, an average retired worker now would get monthly benefits of about $600, compared to the approximate $250 from Social Security.

Elliott said Congress incorporated most of the plan's principles into the Social Security Act of 1935 but altered one important part: how industry is taxed.

"Industry's contribution is not nearly what it should be," Elliott said, explaining that it would be three times higher under the Townsend Plan's uniform 2 percent tax on all gross receipts.

Townsend's idea was regarded as "everybody's plan" during its heyday, but small businessmen and working men made up the bulk of its membership, said Homer Caster, 68, president of the Wyoming chapter.

"It crossed all affiliations," said Elliott. "It may have been, in terms of a national entity, the only one that's ever been. It was the experience of the people who came together in the heart of the Great Depression."

Contaminated Cattle Feed Suit Enters Second Year of Trial

CADILLAC, Mich. (AP) — The trial stemming from the PBB disaster of contaminated feed and poisoned cattle has started its second year. "It's a little like being snowed in," says the judge. "Once you realize you're not going anywhere else, you get philosophical."

The trial, the longest in Michigan history, has to date cost the parties involved about $1.25 million, attorneys estimate.

Forty-seven witnesses have testified, and the transcript fills 19,764 pages.

Circuit Judge William Peterson originally scheduled the trial for six weeks.

When legal motions first began on Feb. 21, 1977, spectators thronged the Wexford County Courthouse. When testimony started, the 200-seat spectator section was almost full and a dozen reporters attended.

But only 13 persons were in the courtroom Tuesday, the trial's first anniversary: the judge, eight lawyers, the court reporter, a female spectator, one reporter and plaintiff Roy Tacoma, a Missaukee County farmer.

Tacoma and his wife, Marilyn, are seeking $250,000 in actual damages and up to $1 million in punitive damages for the loss of more than 100 dairy cattle. The Tacomas say the cattle had to be destroyed after they ate feed tainted with polybrominated biphenyl, a toxic fire retardant.

Among the six defendants named in the suit are Michigan Chemical Co., which made PBB, and Michigan Farm Bureau Services, which distributed the tainted feed.

So far, Michigan Chemical and Farm Bureau Services have paid almost $40 million to settle nearly 700 claims stemming from the 1973 contamination. At least 135 other claims are awaiting trial.

Much of the testimony in the trial has been long and technical. Martin Robl, a Chicago veterinary pathologist, spent almost an hour Tuesday describing 11 microscope slides containing tissue samples from the kidneys of 16 calves fed PBB.

Robl was the 47th witness. Attorneys for Michigan Chemical and Farm Bureau Services said they expect to call another seven or eight witnesses before the trial ends.

Congressman's Charge Irks House Speaker

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bruce Caputo, a Harvard-educated freshman in Congress, has been a thorn in the side of the House ethics committee and Democratic leadership for months.

His needling finally prompted an outburst from the 65-year-old Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, and resulted Thursday in an unprecedented word-confrontation in a hushed House chamber.

The 34-year-old New York Republican, a member of the ethics committee, has been prodding the Democratic controlled panel to speed its investigation of allegations of South Korean bribery of past and present members of Congress for favorable U.S. economic and military policies toward Seoul.

And Caputo, according to the Democratic leadership, has spread suggestions that O'Neill's office was a "hangout" for Tongson Park, the indicted middleman in the influence buying scandal.

The wealthy South Korean rice broker had close ties with members of Congress and one year threw a party for O'Neill to help celebrate the Massachusetts Democrat's birthday.

Finally O'Neill, a veteran of four decades of rough-and-tumble ward politics in Cambridge, Mass., lashed out at Caputo, a lawyer whose district includes parts of New York's fashionable Westchester County.

O'Neill told an interviewer last Thursday that Caputo had spread unfair suggestions about Park using O'Neill's office. And O'Neill said Caputo had two staff members gathering material on House members' sex lives "to see whether they are out cheating on their wives."

He suggested the young congressman was seeking national publicity so he could run for higher office.

Caputo cried, "foul," saying the speaker had made charges he could not back up.

The jousting erupted on the House floor Tuesday, couched in the overly polite language and demeanor traditionally used even on the most emotional issues.

Caputo, on a point of personal privilege, approached the Republican microphone. Reading from a prepared text, he said:

"The gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. O'Neill, during a recent appearance on a nationally syndicated television program, made certain allegations and repeated other allegations which directly impugned my motives and actions as a member of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct (the House ethics committee)."

Caputo said the speaker was wrong and was spreading hearsay without checking it out. And he said what O'Neill considered Caputo's leaks from the investigation really were said publicly at a news conference by a Washington lawyer.

"Perhaps the gentleman from Massachusetts will consider amending his statement," said Caputo.

O'Neill, a barrel-chested, white-haired product of parochial school and Boston College who succeeded John F. Kennedy in the House, stood to reply.

"On reflection, I feel I should not have uttered the personal remarks which I made last week in an interview relating to a colleague," the speaker told the hushed House.

"I should not have challenged his motives and I am sure it was unwise to have made references to conduct on his part where I am unwilling to substantiate or corroborate those charges," O'Neill said.

But he added: "I have been both angered and hurt by what I consider to be unfounded and unfair charges.

As speaker, despite the nature of Caputo's allegations, O'Neill said, "I must be more charitable and responsible toward my colleagues than they sometimes are toward me."

Beer Most Popular With City Students

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Beer is by far the most popular drug among Lubbock's junior and senior high school students — 42 percent of the teenagers say they drink it at least once a month.

In a survey, the Lubbock Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Center also found that 27 percent of the youngsters smoke marijuana during a month's time. And 26 percent drink hard liquor over the same period, the survey shows.

Least those figures be too alarming, though, the report further indicates that few secondary school students here use inhalants, LSD, pills or other narcotics.

And overall, says MHMR's director of research and evaluation, teenage drug use in Lubbock is not as high as that of other big cities.

"The use of drugs among students is relatively low in Lubbock compared with Dallas or Houston," said Dr. Michael Berren, who conducted the survey of 925 students in Lubbock's 15 public junior and senior high schools.

Berren hopes his project will help public schools and other agencies tailor their drug education and drug abuse prevention programs to the needs of various students.

With a questionnaire of about 100 items, he polled representative groups of pupils in the city on their use of and attitudes toward alcohol and other drugs. Berren plans to make the same survey in outlying school systems.

He then will analyze the data, breaking down the information by students' age, sex, race, scholastic performance and other characteristics. Those findings will be compared with survey results in other cities, Berren said.

"The goal is to identify the kinds of variables that may affect a student's views on drugs. I hope to be able to answer such questions as, at what age do different groups of students start getting into drugs — and when should schools begin drug education programs? Should an urban school system have different programs than rural schools?"

Berren said his research also may suggest how a school's approach to drug education should vary with boys and girls, A students and C students, and youngsters from low-income and affluent families.

Berren has just finished compiling statistics for the Lubbock sample as a whole. Although his findings won't be complete until a breakdown of various student categories is made, the initial results nevertheless offer an insight to local teenagers' relationships with drugs.

For example, schools and other agencies often see student drug use as a rebellion against authority. But youngsters say that's not the reason kids get into drugs.

Of the 925 pupils polled on the "chief reason some students use drugs," 36 percent said "for fun, kicks or thrills"; 25 percent "because friends use them"; 19 percent "to escape the pressure of school and home"; 16 percent "from curiosity"; and only 4 percent "to rebel against authority."

According to the survey results, 81 percent of the junior and senior high school students sampled have tried beer, 60 percent hard liquor, 43 percent marijuana, 4 percent heroin or an opiate derivative, 7 percent LSD or some hallucinogen, 10 percent barbiturates or downers, 9 percent amphetamines or uppers, and 10 percent inhalants, such as glue.

Some of those figures may look high — perhaps inflated by some students' exaggerating their experiences with drugs. Another part of the questionnaire asks whether students currently use drugs. The results:

Beer — 36 percent said never, 3 percent daily, 21 percent weekly, 18 percent monthly, and 22 percent less than monthly. That means 42 percent drink beer at least monthly.

Hard liquor — 50 percent said never, less than 1 percent daily, 9 percent weekly, 17 percent monthly and 23 percent less than monthly. All told, 26 percent drink hard

Slaying Saddens Retired Ranger

DENTON (AP) — The legendary Texas Rangers died fighting Indians, the Mexican army and desperados during the 1800s. But they've lost one of their own in the most modern of anti-crime activities — a drug raid.

Bobby Paul Doherty, a Ranger for two years, was gunned down late Monday night during a drug raid on a house near this North Central Texas town.

He became the first Ranger in 47 years to die in the line of duty.

Gregory Arthur Ott, 27, a North Texas State University honor graduate and psychology graduate student, was charged with capital murder Tuesday in connection with Doherty's slaying. He was being held without bond.

If convicted, he faces either life in prison or execution.

As Department of Public Safety narcotics officers and sheriff's deputies stormed through the front door of the house, the two men inside rushed out the back. Doherty, a 41-year-old father of two standing guard at the back door, was hit in the head by one shot allegedly fired by Ott from a .38-caliber pistol.

The other man, 22-year-old Jimmy Baker, was charged with felony possession of marijuana.

Doherty died en route to a hospital in nearby Fort Worth. The raid netted about 40 pounds of marijuana.

The slaying recalled an old sorrow for retired Ranger Dudley White Jr.

"I have the same feeling right now that I had that day in this same house 60 years ago when my momma was told that daddy had been ambushed," said White, whose Ranger father, Dudley White Sr., was slain in an ambush in 1918. "I feel I've lost a brother... just like I felt when

Death Becomes New Beginning

BY JULIE FULTON
Spring Lake, N.J.

My grandfather lived with us for ten years. His name was Thomas Francis Brown, and he would say it often with pride. Sometimes during those years I would get angry with him, sometimes annoyed; sometimes I scoffed at his clumsiness and his shuffling gait.

JULIE FULTON

But most of the time I just loved him and listened to his stories and told him things that were going on in school. Every day he would be waiting for me to come home. He'd sit, squinting at the paper, on the porch, where he could trap the mailman with some news or a piece of gossip.

Everybody knew him. Tom Brown always wore a yellow fishing cap (though he never fished) and gray pants that bunched around the belt. He had many friends of all ages; people were attracted to him. He had a curiosity about everything and was ready to listen to everyone with warmth and wit.

Thomas Brown also had a keen memory and a sharp mind; math figures were his specialty. They were leftovers from the long years of adding up bills for his business. My grandfather used to be a milkman long ago.

He had a storehouse of memories that he would share with me. We would spend hours poring over the yellowed scrapbooks of his war days, and he would sometimes tell me about his years with my grandmother. A hushed note of reverence would creep into his voice. But the memories were just a part of the past to Thomas Brown, and he never let them get in the way of the present.

Every day he would drive (the driving got slower and slower as the seasons changed) up to the boardwalk to visit his friends: the fishermen. I think he especially admired fishermen. He liked their patience and their humor — and their private communion with the sea.

When he was alone in his room, my grandfather would make things for his friends. He taught himself how to weave and sew, and he fashioned rugs and blankets and bags during those hours alone. He gave them all away. He could measure the passing of time by the rise in price of the materials he used.

He measured age by the friends who died. As time went on, he stopped mentioning their names. He would just open the paper to the obituary columns and sit very quietly for a long time with the paper on his knees. "Well, Jule," I remember he would say, "I guess your old Gramp ain't gonna be around much longer. Guess he ain't long for this world."

I love the beauty of spring, and it hurts to see the autumn leaves lose their life and turn brown and old. It hurts to see them fall, and winter, and blow away. I knew, and Gramp knew, the Time was nodding to him. And Gramp nodded back.

The summer before he died was special in different ways. It was a summer of

State Panel Refuses To Change Decision

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Insurance refused Tuesday to reverse its decision to fire Jim Cummins, former chief of the fire safety inspection division.

Cummins, a close friend of former board chairman Joe Christie, was fired Nov. 3 after the present board chairman Hugh Yantis took office.

"The board still believes that your dismissal was a correct decision," said a letter issued by the board Tuesday after considering Cummins' appeal.

Margaret's

At Wit's End...

BY ERMA BOMBECK

A year ago last December, our college son borrowed $66 from us to buy a second-hand car. We wired the money to him and it cost $3.00.

In January of the next year he wrote us a check for $100 as payment on account. The check bounced.

He called us (reversing the $1.80 phone charges) and said we'd better cover it or he'd look bad at the bank. We wired him $100 to cover the check which cost us another $3.00.

He wrote us back and said, "I had to pay a service charge because you processed the check in the first place so you owe me $5.00."

He came home for the Easter break and said he was crediting his account with $105 because that's what he saved us by not flying. He also subtracted $1.35 as a gas allowance because he drove his sister to the dentist.

In September, he made another payment of $35. However, he called again ($1.80 collect) to report that the $35 depleted his checking account balance to 87 cents and the bank insisted he have a $5.00 minimum and due to the payment we received we owed him $4.13.

In November, he sought our advice on what to do about "our" investment. We could either write the car off as a loss as it no longer ran or put it in running order to keep our investment alive and productive. To be "alive and productive" would cost us $311.00. (Phone consultation $5.40)

In December he called ($2.30) to tell us a tree had thrown itself in front of his right fender and caused him $56 worth of damages. However, he could live with the dent and was sending the $56 check to us from the insurance company as payment on his debt.

The insurance company, however, raised our rates and we were obliged to pay an extra $3.00 per month on the premium.

Last week, he appeared with a ledger and said, "Counting the $400 I saved you in air fare, the $56 from the insurance company, the $15 I spent getting estimates, the $75 worth of aggravation of maintaining my own transportation, the $30 errands I've run for you and the $24 worth of car washes, we'll just consider the debt paid in full. And don't think about the break on the income tax I give you because I'm dependent. After all, you are my parents."

Somehow, I always imagined we'd feel better when he paid the car off.

LAMB SATE

2 lbs. New Zealand spring lamb, cubed
1 tsp. brown sugar
2 tsp. soy sauce
1 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. oil
2 tsp. grated ginger root
1 small onion, grated
2 cloves garlic, crushed
1/2 tsp. turmeric
2 tsp. crunchy peanut butter
1/4 cup coconut cream or water

In a large ceramic bowl, toss lamb cubes with all but the peanut butter and coconut cream. Cover and let stand 1 hour or refrigerate for up to 48 hours. Thread lamb onto skewers, and cook over hot coals, turning frequently, until lamb is cooked to the desired degree of doneness. Heat remaining marinade with peanut butter and coconut cream and pass as a dipping sauce. Makes 6 servings.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible

Matthew 8:9B-26, The Living Bible

If you will only stand here and say, "Be healed," my servant will get well! I know, because I am under the authority of my superior officers and I have authority over my soldiers, and I say to one, "Go," and he goes, and to another, "Come," and he comes, and to my slave boy, "Do this or that," and he does it. And I know you have authority to tell his sickness to go—and it will go!

10 Jesus stood there amazed! Turning to the crowd He said, "I haven't seen faith like this in all the land of Israel!"

11 And I tell you this, that many Gentiles [like this Roman officer], shall come from all over the world and sit down in the Kingdom of Heaven with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

12 And many an Israelite—those for whom the Kingdom was prepared—shall be cast into outer darkness, into the place of weeping and torment."

13 Then Jesus said to the Roman officer, "Go on home. What you have believed has happened!" And the boy was healed that same hour!

14 When Jesus arrived at Peter's house, Peter's mother-in-law was in bed with a high fever.

15 But when Jesus touched her hand, the fever left her, and she got up and prepared a meal for them!

16 That evening several demon-possessed people were brought to Jesus; and when He spoke a single word, all the demons fled; and all the sick were healed.

17 This fulfilled the prophecy of Isaiah, "He took our sicknesses and bore our diseases."

18 When Jesus noticed how large the crowd was growing, He instructed His disciples to get ready to cross to the other side of the lake.

19 Just then one of the Jewish religious teachers said to Him, "Teacher, I will follow You no matter where You go!"

20 But Jesus said, "Foxes have dens and birds have nests, but I, the Son of Mankind, have no home of My own—no place to lay My head."

21 Another of His followers said, "Sir, let me first go and bury my father."

22 But Jesus told him, "Follow Me now! Let those who are spiritually dead care for their own dead."

23 Then He got into a boat and started across the lake with His disciples.

24 Suddenly a terrible storm came up, with waves higher than the boat. But Jesus was asleep.

25 The disciples went to Him and awakened Him, shouting, "Lord, save us! We're sinking!"

26 But Jesus answered, "O you men of little faith! Why are you so frightened?" Then He stood up and rebuked the wind and waves, and the storm subsided and all was calm!

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Please, in the interest of preserving my sanity, tell me how to get rid of a telephone pest.

This woman is a non-stop talker. She can go on for two hours at a stretch. Once I actually left the line for about five minutes and when I came back she was still talking! Another time I said, "Excuse me, I've got to go. I just cut myself and I am bleeding badly," and she said, "But this will only take a minute and it's interesting." (It wasn't!) She is the biggest bore I know.

Telling her that I am too busy to talk won't work. Please help me. I don't mind in the least if I lose her friendship.

GOING NUTS

DEAR GOING: Your last sentence makes my suggested solution very simple. The next time she phones, tell her that you are too busy to visit with her, say goodbye, and then hang up. Repeat this routine as often as is necessary until your "friendship" dissolves.

DEAR ABBY: Joe is 53 and I'm 49. We've been married for 31 years and Joe has always traveled for a living.

I never suspected him of playing around until about six months ago when I unpacked his suitcase and found some hair (reddish) on his bathrobe (I'm a brunette.) He said he couldn't help it if the motels had poor housekeeping.

The next time he came home, his overcoat reeked with perfume. He said the coat must have been hanging next to a lady's wrap in some restaurant. I suppose that's possible.

Yesterday while riding in his car I found a cigarette butt with lipstick on it in the ashtray. (I don't smoke.) He said he had no idea how it got there.

He doesn't act any different toward me. He's still the same sweet loving man, but all this evidence has made me suspicious.

If he were YOUR husband, what would YOU do?

SUSPICIOUS IN CHICAGO

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I'd be the same sweet loving woman. I'd also keep my eyes open.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and I just had an argument and I want you to settle it.

Mary is married to a nice fellow. They have two sons, 11 and 8. My son-in-law has a poker game at the house once a week, and he lets the boys watch them play. The boys love to play cards, too. (They learned from watching their father.)

East took full advantage of the information supplied to him gratuitously by declarer to sink a seemingly cast-iron contract.

We don't know whether

South's bid of three hearts was intended as a slam try or an effort to locate a better contract than four spades. If the former, he was hoping for a magic fit from his partner. Had he simply bid four spades at his second turn, he might have made his contract.

West led his fourth-best diamond, East won the ace and noted the fall of South's queen. Prospects for defeating the contract seemed dim, for declarer was marked with the ace of clubs—he would not have bid so powerfully without that card.

There was one ray of hope. Declarer had announced length in hearts, so West had to be short in that suit. If declarer could be induced to take a wrong position in hearts, the defenders might be able to come to four tricks.

To give the impression that he, and not West, held the short hearts, East shifted to the eight of hearts at trick two. Alert to the possibility of a ruff, declarer won the ace and led a trump to the queen and East's ace. Now East continued with the three of hearts.

Consider the hand from the South seat. It looked as if East was striving for a heart ruff with a doubleton heart. If South risked the finesse, West would win the queen and continue with a heart, and East's ruff would defeat the contract.

Not surprisingly, declarer did what you and I would have done. He rose with the king of hearts, and East's well conceived plan came to fruition. West ruffed the monarch and exited with the king of diamonds. Though declarer ruffed, there was no way he could avoid conceding the setting trick to East's queen of hearts.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

This is the time of year when most fresh fruits are out of season and what's available is both expensive and of relatively poor quality. So it's time to head for the pantry, and your supply of canned fruit.

Today we've got two extra-easy treats: low-calorie, high-protein fruit and cheese pies. One is made with applesauce and the other with a 16-ounce can of sliced peaches... or any other canned fruit you have on hand.

EASY APPLESAUCE CREAM PIE
 1 cup chunky unsweetened applesauce (canned or homemade)
 2 tsp. arrowroot or cornstarch, divided
 1 tsp. lemon juice
 1/4 tsp. cinnamon or apple pie spice
 2 ready-to-fill graham cracker pie shell
 3/4 cup low-fat cottage cheese
 1 egg
 2/3 cup skim milk
 1/4 cup honey
 Optional: 2 tsp. sugar (or equivalent sugar substitute)
 2 tsp. vanilla
 dash of salt

Combine applesauce with 1 teaspoon arrowroot, lemon juice and pie spice. Stir well, then spread in the bottom of pie shell. Combine one teaspoon arrowroot with remaining ingredients in blender container. Cover and blend smooth. Pour. Turn off oven and open door. Cool in oven 1 hour. Serve warm, or chill. Makes eight servings, about 140 calories each.

BURIED TREASURE CREAM CHEESE PIE
 (... easy, with canned fruit)
 16 oz. can juice-packed sliced peaches (or any canned fruit)
 ready-to-fill graham cracker pie shell
 8 oz. package low-fat cream cheese

Clip 'n' Cook

PORTABLE POOR BOY SANDWICHES
 1/2 small purple onion, thinly sliced
 1 medium-sized green pepper, cut into thin rings
 1 (2 1/2 oz.) can sliced mushrooms
 1/2 cup (4 oz.) bottled herb spiced salad dressing
 4 5-inch long French or Italian sandwich rolls, unsliced
 8 thin slices cooked ham
 12 thin slices cooked turkey
 8 slices cotto salami
 2 long thin slices Muenster or Monterey Jack cheese, cut in half
 4 wooden picks

Combine onion, green pepper, mushrooms and salad dressing; set aside. Split rolls in half lengthwise. Pour 1 tsp. salad dressing from vegetables over cut surface of bottom of each roll. Top with ham, turkey and salami slices. Pour remaining dressing over cut surfaces of top halves of rolls. Arrange vegetables over salami. Cover with cheese and top half of roll. Secure with wooden picks. Makes 4 servings.

BAKE-OFF WINNERS — Mrs. Ester Tomich, top, of San Pedro, Calif. and Mrs. Linda L. Wood of Indianapolis, Ind., each won top prizes of $25,000 at the annual Pillsbury Bake-Off in New Orleans Tuesday. Expert Gives Car Care Tips

That warm glow that goes with ownership of a new car lasts until the first scratch appears and then it turns to a sick feeling. This period of warmth that usually lasts several weeks or even months can be extended much longer — it's just a matter of hanging on to that new car look.

Barring a real smashup or a bad dent, a little judicious touching up is all that is needed. Manufacturers of touch-up paints, fillers and rubbing compounds have made it easier than ever to do the job yourself. Not only will you help your car keep its looks, you also will prolong its life by warding off rust.

Self-spray paint finishes are so easy to put on that you may have to restrain yourself from doing the job too quickly. Proper preparation is still needed. The best finish you can buy will pit, crack or peel if put on an improperly prepared surface.

Light marks that are not really scratches or marks made by another object of another color can be readily rubbed out with a rubbing compound. The so-called scratch removing compounds sold in tubes are really rubbing compounds.

But where the surface of the paint has been broken through, repainting is necessary. Not all blues, reds or greens are the same from one make of car to another and from one year to the next. Buy paint for the make and model of your particular car.

Spraying is the best method of application. While a spray gun is needed for large amounts, the chances are the small touchup job you contemplate can be taken care of easily enough with the amount of paint packed in a pressurized paint can.

The most important part of the job is cleaning. The best paint won't stick to a dirty car. Wash the car carefully. This is especially important if you waxed it with a silicon polish. Silicons will cause craters and fish eyes in the new paint. If that happens, remove the finish and start again.

Sand the spot next. Use wet sandpaper. This keeps down the dust, and is less likely to scratch. Feather the edges of the sanded spot. Do not leave abrupt edges that would show through the new finish.

If the scratch is straight, sand in a straight line. If round, sand with a rotary motion. When you have finished, wash the spot again with water. Then clean once more with a solvent (naptha, lacquer thinner, similar oil-free solvents).

Sand lightly. If you break through to the bare metal you must use a primer before refinishing.

If you are spraying a primer, or spraying any paint near chrome or some other material you want to keep free of paint, you will have to mask the area. For small scratches you can make a shield out of a piece of cardboard. Cut a hole and hold the cardboard a few inches from the metal.

Paint should be at room temperature. If it isn't, place the can in warm water. Shake thoroughly.

With the paint thoroughly dry, rub it down with rubbing compound. This will remove the paint dust from surrounding areas as well as give a better finish to the newly painted areas. Finish with a good wax job.

Women 'Forgotten War Veterans'

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Is Uncle Sam discriminating against members of the original Women's Army Auxiliary Corps?

"It's sad but true," claims Juanita Knipp. "We're the forgotten GIs of World War II. We did our part but they refuse to award us all the benefits available to other veterans."

Mrs. Knipp donned the khaki uniform of the WAAC in 1943 and was sent to Ft. Oglethorpe, Ga., for basic training. "After it was over, I was assigned to a desk job so that a man could be freed for combat."

She thought she had enlisted for the duration of the war.

"I had been on active duty about seven months when the government decided to change the WAAC to the Women's Army Corps. We were given a choice of staying in or leaving."

Mrs. Knipp accepted an honorable discharge and came home. "I felt I had done my part for the country and if the need ever arose, I would have my veterans' benefits to fall back on."

It was a bad assumption. In September 1969, she attempted to obtain treatment at a Veterans Administration hospital here and was told "we don't recognize your discharge papers. You didn't serve in the military. You have no rights."

Shocked by the refusal, Mrs. Knipp picked up her pen and began writing various congressmen for help. The letter and telephone campaign have been going on nearly nine years and Mrs. Knipp recently scored a minor victory.

"I finally got the Veterans Administration to admit that former WAACS — and there are about 800 of us still alive — are eligible for hospitalization, a place in a retirement home, or a military funeral if we want one."

"These concessions wouldn't have been possible without the work done by my congressman, Ron Mazzoli, who must have put the heat on somebody in Washington. He sent me a letter outlining the benefits that were going to be available and when I showed it to the VA they gave in."

But the 55-year-old crusader isn't satisfied.

She points out that other veterans can obtain an education or a home loan, and "we can't. It's not fair. How can anyone look upon us as civilians? We did everything but carry a gun. And we would have been glad to pick up one if it were necessary to help protect this nation."

Adding fuel to her arguments is a recent congressional decision to grant full GI benefits, retroactive to World War II, to all members of the Women's Air Force Service Pilots. It was a civilian group attached to the Army Air Force.

"I'm very happy for these ladies," said Mrs. Knipp. "I think they should be recognized. So should we."

Two years ago, Congress killed a bill which would have granted equal privileges to the WAACS. Now, there's another floating around in the House of Representatives and Mrs. Knipp is looking for volunteers to work for passage of the legislation.

Concern For Safety Necessary On Moped

By BOB CLAMPETT

It is easy to show that mopeds have an excellent safety record in Europe. However, conditions there and conditions in the United States are not the same. In our country, where cars dominate the transportation scene, mopeds are expected to have a little tougher going. Concern for safety is a very real necessity for the moped rider. What is moped safety? It is more than just avoiding accidents while riding. It is a dynamic, ongoing total commitment to being safe. For instance:

Second In A Series

- Moped safety is your mental attitude when you're riding.
 - Moped safety is the condition of your moped.
 - Moped safety is taking into account the conditions under which you're riding.
 - Moped safety is defensive riding.
 - Moped safety is the knowledge that an accident can kill you.
 - Moped safety is realizing that the car drivers probably don't even see you.
 - Moped safety is knowing that your right of way means nothing.
- Most bicycle accidents and moped collisions occur at intersections. Either the bicyclist or the motorist fails to yield the right of way. The following causes for bicycle accidents, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission are:
- Ignoring traffic signals and signs.
 - Moving against the flow of traffic.
 - Loss of control, caused by difficulty in braking, riding too large a bike, riding double, stunting, or striking a bump while riding.
 - Mechanical and structural difficulties, such as brake failure, wheel looseness, steering mechanism faults, chain slippage, or pedal or chain breakage.
 - Entanglement of clothing, feet, or hands in the wheels.
 - Collision with a car or other bicyclist.

In order to give ourselves every benefit of the doubt, here are some specific suggestions for moped riding.

1. Think safety. Never take your safety for granted.
2. Pretend you are invisible. That's right — even if you are wearing a loud Hawaiian-style jacket. Never assume that a motorist can see you.
3. Ride with your lights on. Make it easy for him to see you.
4. Plan your rides.
5. Use your horn. If yours isn't loud enough, buy a new one that blasts.
6. Never take your feet off the pedals. Otherwise, while you're riding the pedals may continue turning and you could strike a curb or the pavement while you're turning.

Today is Wednesday Feb. 22, the 53rd day of 1978 with 312 to follow.
The moon is full.
The morning star is Mercury.
The evening stars are Venus, Jupiter, Mars and Saturn.
Those born on this day are under the sign of Pisces.
George Washington was born Feb. 22, 1732.

On this day in history:
In 1819, Florida was ceded to the United States in a treaty with Spain.
In 1879, Franklin Woolworth opened his first "five-cent" store in Utica, N.Y. Sales for the first week averaged $2.50 a day.
In 1972, President Nixon met with Communist leader Mao Tse-tung within hours after his arrival in Peking for an unprecedented visit to mainland China.

In 1973, Israeli fighter planes shot down a unarmed Libyan commercial airliner, killing 106 of the 113 persons aboard.
A thought for the day:
George Washington said, "The basis of our political system is the right of the people to make and to alter their constitutions of government."

Government Develops Special Square-Hole Drill For Coal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tired of trying to pound a square peg into a round hole? Take heart, the government has developed a drill that makes square holes. The idea is to increase the nation's energy supply. The inventors are three workers at the Bureau of Mines in Fort Snelling, Minn.

The square-hole drill is just one of thousands of government ideas which may have industrial application that are made available to businesses through the National Technical Information Service in Springfield, Va. The drill has a triangular cutting blade which spins, and the shaft on which the blade is mounted moves in a pattern, producing a 2½-foot square hole with slightly rounded corners, explains Roger J. Morrell, one of the inventors.

Why drill a square hole? you ask. The answer, Morrell says, is simple. Square shafts get more coal out of mines. The current technology punches round holes into the coal vein. Once the hole is drilled it's nearly impossible to get the extra coal out of the corners of the shaft. By drilling the same number of square holes you get 21 percent more coal, Morrell said.

Ford Trucks, Vans Recalled for Check

DETROIT (AP) — Some 47,000 U.S.-built vans and trucks are being recalled to Ford Motor Co. dealers to check for possible automatic transmission defects. Involved are 1978-model Econoline vans, Club wagons, Broncos and F-Series pickup trucks equipped with optional tilt steering wheels and automatic transmissions. Another 2,600 Canadian-built models also will be checked. A Ford spokesman said in some of the units a transmission selector-lever reaction spring may have been assembled wrong.

Although the Interior Department's Bureau of Mines developed the drill, field testing is now being done by the Department of Energy, which has taken over energy projects from Interior. Jerome A. Gunn and Gerald D. Gore worked with Morrell in developing the device. Their invention is only one of many regularly appearing in the NTIS publication "Government Inventions for Licensing." The listing appears every two weeks and promotes about 80 inventions, telling how to obtain licenses for their use. License fees vary considerably as do royalties on the inventions. Some are free and others may cost up to $20,000. Success stories cited by NTIS include a new hepatitis vaccine developed by Nobel laureate Baruch Blumberg while doing research at the National Institutes of Health. It has been licensed to two commercial drug firms for production. It provided, in the form of a $20,000 royalty check from Merck Co., the first major payoff for the technology transfer program. A five-patent package involving the cancer-fighting drug methorexate is the current "hot" project at NTIS, says Assistant Director Dean Smith. He said negotiations for production are underway with two firms.

A&M Studying Red Meat, Eggs In Relation To Heart Disease

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Thirty Texas A&M University professors have been placed on strict diets in a six-month study designed to determine the relationship between cholesterol and coronary heart disease. Project director Dr. Raymond Reiser said the study seeks to determine the effects of poultry and fish versus red meat and eggs versus no eggs in the human diet.

Reiser, an internationally recognized biochemist, said the research resulted from what he called the "assumptions rather than facts" that the American Heart Association and other special interest groups have "sold" to the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs. Last year the committee recommended persons eat less red meat, substituting it with fish and poultry. Egg consumption had been discouraged earlier, because of eggs' relatively high cholesterol content. The committee's recommendations sparked nationwide criticism by the livestock and poultry industries.

participants will be tested for blood cholesterol levels, then rotate to another diet. "The bomb in this whole cholesterol versus coronary heart disease incident is that people associate cholesterol with fats," Dr. Reiser. "But lean meat contains more cholesterol than fat meat. So, since poultry and fish are lean, they contain as much cholesterol as does red meat." At the end of a six-week period, the Last year the committee recommended persons eat less red meat, substituting it with fish and poultry. Egg consumption had been discouraged earlier, because of eggs' relatively high cholesterol content.

The committee's recommendations sparked nationwide criticism by the livestock and poultry industries.

"This whole theory, or concept, that fats and cholesterol cause coronary heart disease was based on incomplete research back in the 40s and 50s," Reiser said. "The AHA and the Senate Select Committee (actions) are based on three assumptions. And they are all wrong."

Reiser disagrees there is a direct relationship between diet cholesterol and blood cholesterol, that the risk of coronary heart disease is directly related to blood cholesterol, and that each person is alike, requiring the same treatment.

He said the study would test the recommendations of the AHA and the Senate Select Committee by determining whether persons following the recommenda-

Congressmen Warn Of Gas Disaster

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Department officials say a written policy to regulate liquefied natural gas imports is several months away.

While the officials offered that timetable at a House subcommittee hearing Monday, lawmakers warned of a potential disaster. Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the energy and power subcommittee, said there could be a tanker collision in a major U.S. harbor or offshore that could release a highly combustible cloud of gas. A spark could ignite the cloud over a densely populated area, he said.

Negativism In Press Defended

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gov. Ray Blanton of Tennessee has been in the news lately with his complaints about the "negativism" of the press. The governor says if the news media fail to present the positive side of a story, he will refuse to answer questions about "the negative aspects of state news."

That's his privilege. If the governor doesn't want to answer questions, the reporters have no way to force him. Apart from any provisions of law that require the disclosure of government information, the governor has as much right to keep his mouth shut as any other citizen.

But from a distance, it looks as if the governor is making the same kind of mistake about the media as many other politicians have in recent years. He seems to think if the press doesn't criticize the government, the public will be happy with the services they are getting for their taxes.

That is nonsense and Blanton has been in public life long enough to know it.

First, there is a lot more public unhappiness with the quality of government at every level than the press reflects.

The politicians may reply that this is a result of press criticism of government, but that isn't what the people tell the pollsters. They say the reason for their dissatisfaction is corruption, which admittedly has received a lot of media attention recently, and the failure of government officials to deliver on their promises.

Second, even if the media refrains from criticizing the government, it doesn't mean citizens will.

Proof? The Vietnam peace movement. The civil rights revolution. Women's liberation. Consumerism. The mainstream press began reporting these and other social, political and economic changes long after they were well under way.

Some politicians did claim that the peace and civil rights movements were manufactured by the papers and television stations, but the facts are otherwise. The media probably underplayed these developments far longer than it would have ignored such happenings as the hula hoop fad, the jogging craze and Farah Fawcett-Majors' hairstyle.

However, people in the news business are aware that the public — including governors — sometimes despair of finding good news in the papers and on the TV screen. Many editors are exhorting their reporters to look hard for examples of goodness, happiness and success in daily life to counterweight the load of bad news that comes pouring into newsrooms.

Firms Lacking Drug Interest

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Although New Jersey is the first state to allow the manufacture of Laetrile, few firms in the state want to make the drug derived from apricot pits.

For that reason, state officials this weekend said there is no rush to set guidelines regulating the manufacture of Laetrile, considered by some to be a cancer cure.

"We are going to have a little more time as a result of lack of interest by manufacturing firms," a spokesman for the state Health Department said. New Jersey last month became the 14th state in the nation to legalize the use of Laetrile and the first to allow the manufacture of the drug.

The New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners last week submitted a guideline proposal for review by the Health Department. The board said the guidelines "must be implemented as soon as possible."

Critics Claim President Evading Spying Issue

By JAMES H. RUBIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil liberties groups say the Carter administration's handling of electronic eavesdropping in intelligence cases is sacrificing constitutional safeguards to please the intelligence community.

Critics say Carter and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell appear to have backed away from Carter's campaign pledges to prevent recurrence of the type of domestic spying they denounced in the past.

John Shattuck, head of the Washington office of the American Civil Liberties Union, said Carter was "elected on the Watergate ticket, if you will. We're going to clean up government." But the leadership on this issue seems to be coming instead from Congress.

Administration officials say the attacks are unwarranted. They say Carter is the first president to propose checks on the president's surveillance authority by limiting eavesdropping to situations involving spying by foreign powers.

"It's extremely complicated to design a system that both protects civil liberties as well as intelligence gathering activities," said a Justice Department official who requested anonymity. "But in this intricate and laborious process, there's been no letdown in vigilance to protect constitutional rights."

Earlier this month, the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence introduced 200 pages of proposals on the subject that were prepared with help from the administration, intelligence agencies and civil liberties groups. None of the participants appears completely satisfied with all the points in the complex document.

A cornerstone of the proposed charters would require court warrants for electronic surveillance in national security cases. But the civil liberties groups argue the standard favored by the administration for issuing the warrants would not require a showing that the intended target is suspected of a crime, only that the group or individual is acting as an agent of a foreign power engaged in clandestine intelligence activity.

The civil liberties group say that is broad enough to be abused. "Agent of a foreign power" has replaced "national security" as the talisman which sweeps away the protections of the constitution," the ACLU complained in a joint statement with Morton Halperin of the Center for National Security Studies. Halperin was a wiretap target when he worked for the Nixon administration.

The Carter administration says the fears of the civil liberties spokesmen are misplaced.

Congressional debate over the issue is expected to take about a year. In the interim, an executive order signed by Carter last month will control government activities in the field.

Shattuck said Carter and Bell are relying too heavily on the advice and warnings of intelligence specialists like Zbigniew Brzezinski, head of the National Security Council, and Adm. Stansfield Turner, director of central intelligence.

Carter sounded a different theme in his campaign, Shattuck said, but since then "the intelligence agencies, the president has not fulfilled his campaign promises to curb abuses of civil liberties in the name of national security."

Laser Beam Weapons Urged By Scientist

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government should spend more money to develop laser beam weapons that would be capable of destroying missiles and hostile enemy satellites, the Pentagon's top scientist says.

William J. Perry, the Defense Department's research chief, said in his annual report to Congress that the United States and Soviet Union were "roughly equal" in the laser beam technology at this time.

But he recommended that the budget for an "early advanced development effort" of high energy laser beam weapons be increased to $184.1 million — about $34 million over this year's budget.

In discussing such weapons, Perry said they are one of a series of new approaches the Pentagon is considering as a defense against missile attack.

The Pentagon's Advanced Research Projects Agency is studying potential uses of the laser's ability "to propagate long distances with minimal spread of the laser beam," he said.

Perry's report also touched on continuing research in what it called "charged particle beam technology."

This refers to a device that would throw out streams of minute electronic pellets to knock down enemy missiles and space weapons.

The research, said Perry, is "aimed at understanding and solving key technical problems such as beam propagation and interactions with matter without attempting at this time to determine warfare potential."

The report did not say how much the Pentagon is recommending be spent on this type of research.

The report also disclosed that the Defense Department is asking for $228 million for work on more conventional ballistic missile defenses.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — The unusual prospect that Brazil might have to import soybeans triggered buying that boosted those futures contracts more than 10 cents a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade Tuesday.

Before the Brazilian reports circulated among traders, soybean prices were a shade lower due to some hedging of weekend farmer sales.

News that Brazilian soybean processors had been granted permission by the government to import up to 800,000 metric tons of soybeans, if necessary, spurred the gains.

Brazil, which is second only to the United States as a soybean exporter, has suffered extended periods of drought this year in major soybean producing regions. The permission to import soybeans was related to the government's desire to maintain exports at about three million tons.

Good demand for soybean meal, based partly on the possibility of production cutbacks due to coal shortages, also supported the advance.

Meanwhile, wheat and corn futures closed narrowly mixed. At the close, soybeans were 8 to 11 cents a bushel higher, with March contracts quoted at $5.81 1/4; wheat was 1 cent lower to 1/4 cent higher, March $2.64 1/4; corn was 1/4 cent lower to 1/2 cent higher, March $2.26 1/4 and oats were 1/4 to 1 cent higher, March $1.26.

Cotton Futures

NEW YORK (AP) — Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.50 to $3.40 a bale higher Tuesday.

Buying by previous short sellers was the main feature, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 1-1/16 inch spot cotton declined 30 points to 52.16 cents a pound Friday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

Production Of Barley Increasing

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barley has had a new lease on life as a major U.S. grain crop because Americans are drinking more beer these days.

The Agriculture Department says that the major domestic use of barley is still as livestock and poultry feed. But that use has declined sharply, from about 254 million bushels in 1960 to about 190 million bushels in 1975.

"In contrast, the production of malting barley — the major grain used in making alcoholic beverages — increased from 82 million to 127 million bushels in the same period," the department said Tuesday.

Beer production, meanwhile, increased from 90.9 million barrels — each equaling 31 gallons — to a record of almost 157.9 million barrels in the same period. Per capita beer drinking also rose, from 14.9 gallons to 21.4 gallons.

The role of barley as a grain crop and its importance to the nation's brewers was outlined in a report published by the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service.

Further, the experts said that demand for malting barley is expected to continue to increase along with Americans' thirst for beer.

By 1980, according to the report, brewers will need about 140.7 million bushels of malting barley; 158 million by 1985; 175.2 million by 1990; 192.5 million by 1995; and 209.7 million by the year 2000 if the trend continues.

"North Dakota, California and Montana account for 50 percent of the nation's barley," the report said. "Idaho and Minnesota produce another 21 percent. Of these top five producers, all except California increased the percentage of acreage set to malting barley between 1970 and 1975."

About 97 percent of the barley grown in North Dakota is of the malting variety; 98 percent in Minnesota; 61 percent in Montana; and 50 percent in Idaho, officials said. But about 99 percent of California's barley is grown as animal feed.

Barley, however, is widely grown in other states and in other countries. It is one of the four major U.S. livestock feed grains, which also include corn, oats and sorghum.

One of civilization's oldest cultivated crops, barley was brought to North America and probably planted for the first time in 1602 on Martha's Vineyard and Elizabeth Islands in New England, the report said. During its early U.S. history, barley was produced mainly to make beer.

Total barley production fluctuated greatly in the first 40 years of the 20th century because of national prohibition, drought, disease problems and other factors.

In 1919, as national prohibition took hold, barley acreage dropped to 6.6 million acres from 9.2 million the year before.

Last year, farmers produced 415.8 million bushels total barley from about 9.5 million acres.

Billings, Montana, was founded in 1882 when the Northern Pacific Railroad made its way into the area. The town, named after Frederic Billings, then president of the railroad, is now the largest city within a 500-mile radius.

Clovis To Host Crops Seminar

A-J Correspondent

CLOVIS, N.M. — A crops seminar sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service will be held at the Holiday Inn in Clovis Thursday and Friday.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. During the morning session, Dr. Emory Shannon, extension plant pathologist with New Mexico State University, will discuss "MDMV" in corn and grain sorghum.

John Durkin, extension entomologist with NMSU, will discuss control of crop insect pests.

Research at Plains Experiment Station, "Alternative Crops and Limited Water Usage," will be the topic of Dr. Ralph Finkner and Dr. Dale Fuehring.

Plains Branch Station.

After lunch, Joe Burford and Truman Woody, Curry County farmers, will tell how they produced more than 200 bushels of corn per acre. Dr. Wayne Whitworth, professor of agronomy at NMSU, will discuss weed control in corn, grain sorghum and wheat.

Incorporating a 10-month grazing program in present operations will be the topic of Mike Spearman, Curry County farmer.

Friday morning will be given over to an irrigation pump testing efficiency seminar by Charles Hohn, extension agriculture engineer; management alternatives for Curry County farmers, Gene Ott, extension farm management specialist; sugar beet production, Dudley Bailey, and soybean production program, Gary Bailey. The Baileys are both Current County farmers.

The Friday afternoon session will consist of discussion of the farm credit situation by Charles Lacey, president, Clovis Production Credit Association; and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 by Dr. James Kirby, extension economist with NMSU.

Dr. Robert Coppersmith, extension economist with NMSU, will conclude the seminar with marketing strategies and marketing tools available to farmers.

All programs are open to the public.

Butz Downplays Strike

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz says the agricultural economy is in some trouble, but not as much trouble as some of the publicity would lead you to believe.

In remarks to the Mid-America Building Projects Exposition Tuesday, Butz called the American Agriculture strike movement that began last December "pretty much a media phenomenon."

He added that "farm income is going to be down, but there's a lot of buying power out there. It's a good market."

Before his speech, Butz said President Carter should have vetoed the 1977 farm bill. He said the bill is getting the government back into the commodity business and is helping make the United States the world's residual supplier of grain.

Butz said he believes the farm bill, which sets agricultural and food policy, has set support prices too high. And he said government policies should be more aggressive toward selling farm products rather than maintaining them in government stocks.

Roxanne Gay Found Mentally Competent

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Roxanne Gay, 27, who said she stabbed her football player husband to death while he slept because she was a battered wife defending herself, has been judged mentally competent to stand trial. Jury selection is to begin March 2.

Blenda Gay, a defensive end with the Philadelphia Eagles football team, bled to death in December 1976 after his throat was slashed.

U.S. Investors Still Counting Losses From 'Favorite Fifty' Stocks

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of American investors are still counting their losses from the collapse of the fabled "Favorite Fifty" stocks over the last five years.

Over that span this "select" group of the most glamorous names Wall Street had to offer has received some decidedly unglamorous treatment in the market.

Eastman Kodak, to take one notable example, was selling for more than $150 in early 1973. Last week it traded under $44.

Xerox fell from $170 five years ago to under $45 as of last week; Avon Products from $140 to $45, Walt Disney Productions from $112 to $33, and McDonald's Corp. from $77 to $45.

But one leading Wall Street analyst suggests that this experience, painful and costly as it may have been, appears to have had some beneficial side effects as well.

"Beginning in the middle to late 1960s and extending into the early 1970s, the investment community adopted and maintained a fixation with earnings per share growth," Robert S. Salomon Jr., director of stock research at Salomon Brothers, noted in a recent report.

"The relative attractiveness of companies with sustained superior growth of earnings was reflected in premium price-earnings ratios, a dramatic indication to corporate managements of institutional investors' preferences.

"This in turn significantly altered corporate strategies, since the companies so blessed wanted to maintain these premium prices which represented a clear sign of success (and, not so incidentally, also enhanced the prospective value of stock options).

"Managements during this period knew that such premium valuations embodied an expectation of superior future growth that had to be fulfilled," Salomon said. "In many instances, however, investor expectations as reflected in high price multiples were significantly higher than the companies' basic business could realistically support."

The result in some companies' management strategies, he said, was "massive diversification programs, undue retention of earnings, and considerable use of debt, all aimed at attempting to bridge the gap between expectations on the one hand and reality on the other."

Dividends and dividend growth were often casualties in this situation, Salomon said, because any emphasis on dividend payments by a company was likely to be seen as a sign of weakness and lack of confidence in the future.

All that has changed with the passing of the "Favorite Fifty" mania, Salomon noted. Investors today are putting far greater emphasis on dividends, Salomon noted, and now "managements are free to adopt more realistic corporate strategies. "No longer beguiled by excessive investor expectations with regard to unrealistically high future earnings per share growth, corporate payout ratios can begin to rise and growth of dividends will be enhanced after 15 to 20 years of mediocre increases in tangible returns."

As for the fallen growth stocks, Salomon said, "these securities have now reached levels where they are providing reasonable current yields along with the potential for superior future dividend growth."

LAFF - A - DAY

"I wouldn't send a dog out in weather like this. Go to the store and get some milk, dear."

Propaganda Main Object Of Soviet Press

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
 MOSCOW (UPI) — The presses start with a low rumble, building up to blinding speed. The metal floor vibrates and that grand sensation of words being pressed onto paper shoots up through the legs and settles in the stomach.
 That is about where the similarity between newspapers of the Western world and the Communist Party daily Pravda ends.
 Pravda means "truth" in Russian; the name of the other big paper, Izvestia, means "news."
 They have a tongue-in-cheek saying about the titles here: "In Pravda, there is no Izvestia. In Izvestia, there is no Pravda."

The Soviet press is a marriage of party theory and propaganda. It has always been that way and chances are it will always be that way.
 "Propaganda is our duty," Pravda's Editor in Chief Victor Afanasyev said in an interview with Western reporters.
 "Our party policy — we are here to help our party in its life. We are the official organ of the party and we don't hide that."
 Afanasyev is a full member of the Communist Party's Central Committee, a position that comes along with the job of editor in chief of Pravda.
 As with everything else in the Soviet Union, Pravda runs according to a central plan. For the most part it has taken the suspense out of journalism by refining news.

 News in the Soviet Union is whatever Victor Afanasyev says it is. If there is deadline pressure on Pravda, it is not apparent. On any given day, Afanasyev has a good idea of what next week's newspaper will carry.
 The big news in Moscow today, Feb. 21, 1978, was Leonid Brezhnev's latest award. It was described in a long story and memorialized in a four-column picture showing Brezhnev and his new medal.
 Pravda's circulation is about 10 million and there is a central Moscow edition and dozens of other regional Pravdas out in the hinterlands.
 There is a quota of national information that is decided by Afanasyev and his deputies. That material is transmitted by telephoto to the smaller Pravdas out in the field.

 Pravda doesn't look like much for the nation's major newspaper — just a few pages of gray-looking copy wrapped around an occasional picture.
 Afanasyev, a former military man who wrote a book on philosophy, said he would like to make the paper more interesting but doesn't have the space.
 Besides, he pointed out, Pravda is a serious newspaper. People who want laughs can read Crocodile, the satire magazine, or any one of dozens of other newspapers and magazines published in the Soviet Union.

Pravda also has secrets.
 For one, there is the mysterious I. Alexandrov, presumed to be a pseudonym, byline used on stories to indicate they are presenting the official position of the government or party.
 "Does I. Alexandrov actually exist?" the editor was asked.
 "It's a secret," he said. "The name is a secret."
 He was also asked about Pravda's correspondents — all of whom are Communist Party members. Does Pravda use its foreign correspondents to work for the KGB, the Soviet equivalent of the CIA?
 "No, definitely not. I can say that," he said.

Handbag Manufacturer Fights Imports Threat

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Current discussion of the threat to American business from increased imports of cheap steel, textiles and other goods isn't news to Chester Laycob.

His family-owned business, Midwest Handbag Co., was forced to close in June 1975 because of competition from inexpensive goods produced in Hong Kong, Korea, Taiwan and the Philippines. About 100 employees were affected.

Laycob fought his way back. With $662,500 in long-term, low-rate Commerce Department loans under the Trade Recovery Act, Midwest Handbag plans to reopen under a new charter this fall.

Laycob told UPI the accent for his American-made goods will be on quality. "There's a lot of junk made over there. You have to be hard-boiled about this and lay it on the line. American workmanship is far superior to what they have over there."

But they also have American money over there to finance production, and Laycob doesn't understand that trend. "American money and American ingenuity go to the Orient and use cheap labor, then the goods are sent back to America. You can get workers for a dollar a day. Mechanics as good as we have over here work 13 and 14 hours a day. It hurts to see that happen."

"Big industrialists expand their businesses overseas for tax purposes, but those countries don't care about us except to use us."

Higher tariffs would help solve the problem, Laycob said, and unions also could help.

"The unions call themselves international. If that's the case, why don't they go over there and organize those people. They have to be organized."

Union cooperation was just one factor that resurrected Midwest Handbag Co. Laycob was quick to praise Charles Sallee of the Textile Workers Union as well as state and federal officials and his son, Richard Laycob, the firm's vice president, for supporting his fight to resume production.

"I have a wonderful relationship with the union," Laycob said. "We'll fight with one another for what's right, but we won't walk out mad. This is one case where labor and management get along just fine."

Workers caught without a job after 20 years with Midwest Handbag are eager to return, Laycob said, including 12 deaf mutes who had a hard time finding new employment.

Laycob's personal struggle wasn't much easier. He sold antiques and jewelry to raise money while he waded through the necessary paperwork to become the first business to get such a loan. He considered other employment, but wanted to revive the business begun by his grandfather nearly 80 years ago.

He takes pride in what he has done — "I never went broke. I paid off everyone I owed so I could look everyone in the eye" — but he knows only one part of his battle is finished. The imports will still be on the market when he resumes production.

New School Trains Offshore Workers

CHAUVIN, La. (UPI) — Louisiana, where the offshore oil and gas industry began 30 years ago, has established what may be the first school in the world to train workers specifically for offshore energy work.

Along Bayou Petit Caillou — just a few miles north of the Gulf of Mexico where a substantial portion of the nation's energy is produced — stands the Louisiana Marine and Petroleum Institute, a new state vocational and technical school that may help alleviate manpower shortages in the offshore energy field.

The school came into existence two weeks ago under the auspices of the state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education.

It's housed in a one-story brick building that once was a parochial high school, and uses a former convent to house some of the students who have come from around the world to take its courses.

The institute is starting small, said V. J. Gianelloni, its director. But within a few years, he said this week, it may be housed in a complex worth upwards of $1 million and turn out dozens of highly skilled graduates to work on the complex gear that sits on platforms and drilling rigs in the Gulf, and on the boats that ferry offshore workers back and forth to their jobs.

"There is an extremely critical labor shortage — trained people, with the proper Coast Guard licenses and all. Here our people, who gave birth to this industry, have been going around the world and training other people. ... We're just trying to keep the lead at home."

South Louisiana cities have been the training ground for offshore workers for years, since the first drilling started in the Gulf of Mexico in 1947. During the last few years, residents of Atlantic Coast cities, North Sea coastal areas and sections of Indonesia have been based in places like Chauvin and Morgan City, La., to learn about offshore work.

Gianelloni said he expects the trend to continue.

But at the same time, he said, the school's biggest impact will be on Louisiana residents, training them for work on such things as Mississippi River ferries; towboats on the Red River; the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port south of Grand Isle, and drilling rigs.

ICY GOING FOR TANKER — A tanker this week made its way through large chunks of ice floating in the inlet to Randers Fjord at Jutland, Denmark. Continued cold weather in northern Europe created hazardous sailing conditions for smaller ocean-going vessels. (AP Laserphoto)

Study Pinpoints 28 Texas Areas

DENTON (AP) — Residents of Texas can get much more specific than residents of other states when asked where they're from.

Much more detailed, even, than an answer such as "West Texas" or "South Texas." Why say West Texas when you can pin it down more accurately with something like the Panhandle, South Plains, Permian Basin, Trans-Pecos, Big Bend or Sun Country?

Or — according to a study completed recently at North Texas State University — the Piney Woods, the Hill Country, Texoma Land or the Big Thicket? Or even Tornado Alley or The Dust Bowl?

Dr. Terry Jordan, chairman of the NTSU geography department, has completed a study based on information gathered from 3,860 students at 30 Texas colleges and universities.

The results are scheduled to be published next summer by the American Geographical Society in its magazine, "Geographical Review."

Jordan uncovered 28 major perceptual regions in Texas, so called because of history, physical environment, culture, political borders or Chamber of Commerce-type boosterism.

"When I think of a golden spread, I tend to think of margarine," Jordan said. But residents of the Amarillo area are finding that term applied increasingly to them, instead of the long-accepted "Panhandle" label. An Amarillo newsman said to have coined the "Golden Spread" nickname.

Curiously, Jordan discovered, some of the names have little to do with the character of the land. Texans who live in the Rio Grande Valley are on a table-flat coastal plain. The Permian Basin is so named because of underground petroleum deposits.

Residents of the Big Thicket consider it to cover part of or all of 11 counties, but the woods no longer are that plentiful.

The "Golden Triangle" is claimed by residents of Denton, but also by people in Southeast Texas near Beaumont, Port Arthur and Orange, who have been laying hold to the title for many, many years.

An old political name which has hung on, Jordan said, is "the Free State," used by those from Van Zandt County where tradition says a slaveholder sought safety during the Civil War. Finding none of the local folks owned slaves, the planter left, saying he'd "as soon take his blacks to a free state as to Van Zandt."

Historical designations have held strong in some areas, whose residents boast of being from the Panhandle, Coastal Bend, South Plains or Rolling Plains.

"The Texan self-image is overwhelmingly positive," Jordan said, noting the frequency of the words "big" and "golden" in local names. Three counties were described by students living there as "God's Country."

And, yes, there is a Bible Belt. But nobody seems to know exactly where it is. Some students said they are from there and are proud of it. Basically, the students answering that way live in the northern part of the state.

Lubbock Lacks Help For Alcoholic Youth

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Parents, not schools, must provide the leadership in educating children about drugs — and many are doing just that through their local Parent-Teacher Associations.

Typical of the efforts was a forum held recently by the Hutchinson Junior High School PTA.

"So many times, drug abuse gets cast as a sign of weak character. People tell the alcoholic, 'If you really wanted to, you could control it,'" Dr. Richard Weddige, assistant professor of psychiatry at the Texas Tech University School of Medicine, told the gathering.

"But studies show that's simply not true. Alcoholism is a disease, and some people can't control it without special help," he said.

A problem, added James Frederick, a counselor with the South Plains Alcoholism Regional Council, is that Lubbock has few programs for youngsters into alcohol or other drugs.

"I'd estimate that 10 percent of the children in our Lubbock school system today, from age nine to 18, are abusing drugs or alcohol. But we really don't have the facilities to help these younger kids," Frederick said.

The "only hope" for many of those students, he said, is the Berean Club — a youth-oriented group resembling Alcoholics Anonymous — which meets at church offices, 918 Ave. J, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. But even the Berean Club "doesn't reach nearly enough kids," Frederick said.

Another problem, he said, is that many parents "don't believe their kids can get hooked. But it can happen, and parents need to be prepared."

Parents can do that by keeping an "open relationship" with their children, talking to them about alcohol and other drugs and — if necessary — steering them to a professional counselor or such programs as the Bereans, the speakers said.

"Drug education programs in school are important, but it really comes down to education in the home, what we as parents tell our kids about alcoholism," said Weddige.

He said parents must especially avoid "mixed messages" — warning their children against the dangers of alcohol but drinking too much themselves.

Signs of alcoholism or drug abuse among students, Weddige said, include a drop in school grades or activities, a change in friends, loss of weight, and change in appetite or mood.

Death New Beginning

beautiful sunsets. My grandfather felt something deep inside of himself that summer. I could see a new light in his eyes. I think God had placed His hand on my Gramp's shoulder, and the light in his eyes was the peace he felt. He told me that he had a good life. He smiled. I smiled, too.

So in the fall, when the leaves turned yellow under the first chill of frost, my grandfather was not surprised to feel that Time had come for him. He was not surprised, and he was not afraid. He was just a little tired. When he left for the hospital, I was the one who cried, who felt angry. I was the one who was afraid of death.

My grandfather taught me differently. In him I could see the beauty of the fall, and the ending as a new beginning. I visited him often in the hospital. We would watch the football games on television, and my family would joke and laugh and try to overcome the deadening vacuum of silence.

One day, though, Gramp said to me, "Well, Julie, I just don't know the score any more. You know what I mean? I just don't know the score any more." For my grandfather, knowing the score was everything.

Okay, Gramp, I thought. If you don't know the score any more, you can't play the game. That was what he wanted to tell me. It was time to go.

So I talked about other things — school and dances. I described the sunsets I had seen at the lake and the many birds resting there from their long autumn flights. I held his hand, and watching those bleached-blue eyes, I saw the light on them gradually blow away.

I felt at peace. I knew he had gone home. He had gone home to the lovely lady I never really knew. Home to his buddies. Home to the springtime and the warmth of strong green trees. My love for him is part of my heart, as his death is part of my life. I have learned from both. So sleep well. Sleep well, Gramp. Because I know.

liquor at least once a month.

Marijuana — 67 percent said never, 9 percent said daily, 9 percent weekly, 8 percent monthly and 7 percent less than monthly. Combined, about 27 percent said they smoke marijuana at least monthly. Current use of other drugs was reported much lower: 3 percent said they use an opiate derivative, 5 percent hallucinogens, 7 percent barbiturates, 8 percent amphetamines, and 4 percent inhalants. Most of those students said they take such drugs less than monthly.

Another question asked the students who use drugs other than alcohol — about 30 percent of those sampled — from whom they got their drugs the first time. Most marked "from a friend about my own age."

Students generally said they get their "most reliable" information about drugs from teachers, followed by "former drug users" and "personal experience or friends."

But asked, "To whom would you go if you had a drug problem?" most said they would turn to a friend or their parents. Few said they would go to a teacher or minister.

Crowd Greet Bergland With Eggs, Snowballs

BY DUANE HOWELL
Avalanche-Journal Farm Editor

AMARILLO — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland was greeted with eggs, snowballs and angry shouts here Tuesday as he pushed for the administration's farm policy.

The incident occurred after Bergland emerged from a meeting with state and local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) officials and others, including representatives of the American Agriculture Movement.

Bergland was walking through a crowd of farmers when the barrage began outside the motel where the meetings took place. He apparently was not hit.

About a dozen vehicles — including a police SWAT van — were disabled during the incident when air was let out of the tires.

Police put the agriculture secretary in a waiting patrol car and drove him four miles to the airport where he departed for Wichita, Kan. At the airport, Bergland's car was met by more farmers. More snowballs were tossed and one of the secretary's aides and a police officer were hit.

No arrests were made. "This was not part of our plan," said Elmo Fortenberry, a Dumas spokesman for American Agriculture. "Nobody is happy that it happened."

Bergland was in Amarillo on the first stop of a two-day tour through five grain states to promote the government farm program.

He met with members of the state ASCS committees from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico and representatives of about 20 county ASCS panels.

Bergland is trying to get farmers to enroll in a set-aside program to reduce wheat and feed grain plantings and join in government sponsored grain reserve programs to bolster farm prices.

"If farmers participate in the reserve and set-aside programs, if they contract to isolate the grain under their control on the farm or in a warehouse, grain prices will increase," Bergland said.

"These are self-help programs. We are urging farmers not to sell at these low prices. They have it in their power to raise prices, to control their own destiny, if enough participate in these programs."

Bergland said the reserve program is farmer-controlled and is designed to remove at least 1 billion bushels of wheat and feed grains from the marketplace.

The reserve program, he said, also will "make future export embargoes unnecessary when production is down because of poor weather."

To encourage farmer participation, he said, storage rates for grain in the reserve were raised to 25 cents per bushel this month for all grains except oats. The rate for oats was set at 19 cents.

Bergland stressed that wheat placed in the farmer-owned reserve will not be available to the market until the national average price reaches $3.15 a bushel. When national prices reach $3.94, reserve loans will be "called," the secretary pointed out.

"If we can get 400 million bushels in the wheat reserve program," Bergland said, "I believe the price would go up right away to the release level of $3.15."

Bergland said the administration is cognizant of the high production costs on the High Plains and indicated consideration is being given to the possibility of a regional target price system.

Farmers did not buy his views and presented him with a "Worst Salesman Award" plaque.

Bergland urged widespread participation in the 20 percent set-aside program on wheat and 10 percent set-aside on corn and milo.

"Why not a 40 or 50 percent set-aside?" one farmer yelled.

Bergland replied, "Twenty percent on every farm will do it."

Bergland admitted that the $3.15 per bushel release price from the reserve plan would not meet production costs for all wheat producing areas.

"We all understand what the grain farmers' dilemma is all about," he said, "and more here (on the High Plains) than other areas because of high costs of irrigation."

The secretary also said the target price for wheat should stay where it is and that he would not recommend any increase from the $2.90 for 1977 wheat and $3 for 1978 wheat.

To date, about 140 million bushels of wheat are in reserve, and Bergland said this is about 25 percent of what is needed if there is to be market impact. He said the total could rise to 170-180 million bushels by the end of February.

"The more that goes into the reserve, the more price impact there will be," he said.

Farmers said the government programs will not work to help farmers soon enough.

"It looks to me like it's going to take a couple of years (under the grain reserve program) to get prices turned around," said Bernard Grabber, a Randall County representative of the ASCS.

"For a lot of these fellows, it doesn't look like they've got a couple of years. They've got a couple of months."

Grabber said the reserve programs eventually will work, "but most of the farmers are needing help now."

School Bee Winners Selected For County Spelling Contest

By MONA HARVEY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

School bee winners continue to be named in a flurry of competition preceding the Lubbock County Bee March 11.

Joining the county contestants as a school representative will be Jesus R. Martinez, a sixth-grade student at Southeast Elementary.

Jesus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Trinidad Martinez of 701 E. 42nd St., copped the honor when alternate Raul T. Cerna slipped on "assembly." Jesus won by spelling Raul's missed word and "assistant."

Raul is the sixth-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonardo Cerna of 1303 E. 54th St.

Harold Chatman directed the bee at Southeast where B.J. Thomson is principal.

Top spellers at Williams Elementary called an "armistice" when the alternate, sixth-grader Michael Ward was stumped by that word. Champ Angela Bowles, fifth-grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Bowles of 4614 63rd St., claimed the title with "alteration."

Michael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ward of 5706 75th St., was second out of 30 students who participated in the 75-minute contest supervised by Williams teachers.

Sixth-grader Mendi McBroom emerged as victor in the Overton Elementary bee which lasted 23 rounds. Her last opponent, Richard Palmer, went down on "oppose" and Mendi won after "ordeal."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reese McBroom of 3511 32nd St. and her sixth-grade classmate is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Palmer of 3304 E. 16th St.

Twenty-four intermediate grade youngsters entered the Overton contest, said principal Drew Jackson.

At Parkway Elementary, Tommy Gonzalez spelled a "fraction" better than runner-up Tasya Jackson who was felled by "fortieth." Twenty pupils lasted six rounds before the bee ended, said director Lewis McClendon, assistant principal.

Health Fair Slated On Tech Campus

A two-day Health Fair will be held at Texas Tech University Sunday and Monday at which students and the general public can have their blood type, blood pressure, vision, hearing and oral hygiene checked free by community health personnel.

Sponsored by the Tech departments of health, physical education and recreation, the fair will be held in the University Center Ballroom from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Sunday, and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday. Admission is free.

Registration Slated For Swim Lessons

Registration for YMCA swim lessons for children 3 to 13 will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Monday at the YMCA, 1601 24th St.

The five-week course will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Children will be grouped according to their age and swimming ability.

James Baker, language arts consultant for the Lubbock Independent School District and county bee director, was pronouncer. Mrs. Drew Foster and Mrs. Eva Samples acted as contest judges.

Tommy is the fifth-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Raul Gonzalez of 213 Redbud Drive and sixth-grader Tasya is the daughter of Mrs. Zemuil Elaine Lindsey of 3413 E. Cornell St.

Carmen Casteneda, eighth-grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfonso Casteneda of 3710 43rd St., earned the title in Hutchinson Junior High's bee.

Carmen won on "abnormal" when alternate Lynne Nobles, eighth-grade daughter of Mrs. Sharon Keith of 3417 26th St., succumbed to "abdomen."

Principal Roy T. Grimes directed the six-round bee in which 10 students spelled. Officials included Nancy Crow as pronouncer, Ramona Spence, Mary Usry and Yvonne Hill.

Last year's alternate at Arnett Elementary captured first place. Billy Yett, sixth-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yett of 110 E. Stanford St., put away his last challenger with "bargain" after "banter" was misspelled.

Shane Patton, sixth-grade son of Mrs. Katie Patton of 513 E. Rice St., was runner-up of 25 students involved in the 10-round contest.

Pronouncer for the Arnett bee was Mrs. Barbara Gardner with Mrs. Hellen Larkin, Mrs. Esther Odum and Elizabeth Bostick as officials.

Roosevelt Junior High will dispatch Tammy McIntyre, seventh-grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Doyle Potts of Rt. 1, Lubbock, as its spelling emissary.

She outranked classmate Cyndi Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scott of Rt. 7, Lubbock, and three other finalists in the bee directed by David Baker.

Cyndi's miscue occurred on "agenda" and Tammy took the title with "agile."

Barbara Morales, sixth-grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Morales of 330 N. Ave. S, will represent Hodges Elementary. Her alternate is Julie Phillips, sixth-grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Phillips of 5422 Ave. A.

St. Joseph School in Slaton will send Bradley Lewis, seventh-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lewis of Slaton as its agent to the county bee. Bradley, who last year won the elementary division at St. Joseph, will be among half a dozen returning champions at the county contest.

The elementary sector this year has as its top speller Kelly Kitten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kitten of Slaton. Alternates are Ricky Betanbough, eighth-grade son of Ron Betanbough of Slaton, on the junior high level and Carl Denzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Denzer of Slaton for the younger grades.

Sixth-grader Greg Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Jones of 8013 Clinton, is Haynes Elementary's best speller. Runner-up is Doug Stevick, fifth-grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Stevick of 3512 52nd St.

Naomi Saucedo, sixth-grade daughter of Emilio Saucedo of 1601 Yale, will handle the responsibility for Wright Elementary. Robby Skidmore, fourth-grade son of Mrs. Betty Skidmore of 920 Adrian, is the alternate.

Winning word in the Wright contest, appropriately was "knowledge."

Lubbock Council To Consider Massage Parlor Ordinance

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council Thursday will consider adopting an ordinance to license and regulate massage parlors.

Two other ordinances up for consideration include one establishing financial projections on non-budgeted city projects and another increasing pro rata sewer and water charges.

Council members will discuss the possible ordinances during their regular session, to begin at 9:30 a.m. in council chambers.

As proposed by the city legal staff, massage parlors would be off limits to patrons and employees under 18. Masseurs would have to be "suitably clothed."

The ordinance, which would not apply to hospitals or nursing homes, also would demand that each masseur secure an annual $10 permit and that each parlor operator apply with the police department for a $50 annual permit.

Operators would have to list in their application the type of business ownership, address, names and residences of all employees, owner's proof of age, description, fingerprints, two previous addresses, photograph and all criminal convictions other than for traffic offenses.

An integral part of the proposal demands that operators and masseurs supply proof in the form of a diploma or certificate that they completed at least 70 hours of training in an accredited massage school.

No massages could be given in cubicles that can be locked, and city permits must be prominently displayed, the proposed ordinance says.

Permits could be denied for false application statements, previous license revocation, or an operator's conviction within the previous five years of any crime involving dishonesty, fraud or deceit.

As written, the ordinance would make the police department responsible for issuing permits, but a city spokesman suggested that may be changed to place responsibility on some other city department.

And, he said, some staffers favor including a passage that no massages may be given by a masseur to a patron of the opposite sex.

Pro rata ordinance revisions are being recommended by the engineering department, which last month warned council members that current prices are so outdated that taxpayers may be subsidizing residential development.

The staff proposes increasing the water pro rata charge from $4 per lot front foot to $5.30. The sewer tie-in charge would go from $3.25 per front foot to $4.30.

The changes are based on contract prices for sewer and water service additions to a Southwest Lubbock residential area being developed by Cecil Jennings.

Public works director Sam Wahl last month told the council that the city may have to subsidize some of the development's water and sewer service costs because of spiraling construction costs.

The pro rata ordinance gives developers their choice of hiring a private contractor to install the service facilities or of having the city staff handle the additions. A private contractor probably would charge more than the ordinance costs because of increases in wage and material prices, Wahl said.

The proposed fiscal note ordinance, patterned after Austin's, would require a staff projection on costs of non-budgeted items the council adopts. The estimation, which would be due within 15 days of council's initial consideration, would detail financial implications of ordinances or resolutions that require expenditure of non-budgeted funds or that require new local taxes, fees or charges.

Council members also will consider authorizing the April 5 sale of $1.7 million in airport revenue bonds, proceeds of which would be used to expand the airport parking lot.

The bonds do not need voter approval to be sold.

Ratification of a $116,000 insurance settlement on fire loss at Lubbock Power and Light Plant 2 will be considered.

The Aug. 16 fire at the plant on Municipal Hill Drive caused $150,000 plant damage and resulted in a blackout to about 20 percent of the community.

The small diesel generator under which the fire started is not salvageable, but the council has not decided whether to replace it.

City employees may replace a Veterans Day holiday with a "floating" one if the council accepts a staff recommendation that City Hall not be closed on Veterans Day.

In order to "save money," a city spokesman said City Mgr. Larry Cunningham recommends keeping City Hall open on Veterans Day and allowing employees to choose another day during the year as a holiday. The floating holiday would be the second for employees, who currently do not observe Washington's Birthday by closing City Hall.

Council members may authorize Mayor Roy Bass to sign an application for $102,900 for a Young Adult Conservation Corps Program.

The program, supported by the federal government and administered by the state community affairs department, would provide money to hire 25 young adults for six months of full-time work.

The workers, aged 16 to 23, would be used to build a hike and bike trail in the Canyon Lakes area and to landscape other city areas.

Monument's Serenity Deceptive

By SAM HARTZ

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Monument stands serene and detached against the capital skyline. But exciting moments have occurred within its walls since the famous obelisk was opened to the public 90 years ago next Oct. 9.

At its time, the 555-foot structure has been the scene of a presidential ascent, fire, a stuck elevator, acrobatics, unsolved theft, dropped objects, spectacular-climbs and the unauthorized flying of a flag.

On May 5, 1960, Josef Mlot-Mroz hid in the monument until it was closed, then broke open a locked window at the top and unfurled a 150-foot-long streamer protesting communism. The banner flew for only a few minutes before a guard arrested the 39-year-old Polish freedom fighter.

Mlot-Mroz had come to Washington two weeks earlier to picket the White House.

Foreign notables have taken the elevator to the top, including former Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

The only president to make the trip was Harry Truman, who accompanied former Interior Secretary Harold Ickes to the top in 1946, to decide on the location of a highway bridge across the Potomac River.

"Put the damn thing there," said Truman as he gestured at a window, according to a guard who accompanied a small group of officials.

Four years later, a packed elevator suddenly jammed and froze at the 480-foot level, causing near-panic. Two 18-year-old girls fainted and two others collapsed on the monument lawn after walking down hundreds of steps.

That elevator has been replaced.

On March 2, 1958, Herbert Blitz climbed the steps in leg braces and crutches, while facing backward. Blitz made the tortuous climb in 70 minutes — about three times longer than the average for his age. Blitz, 29, wanted to prove his fitness for a foreign service job.

For one six-month period, the monument was the scene of a small hand-walking craze. On Dec. 28, 1949, acrobat Glen-Marlin Sundry walked down the steps on his palms in 85 minutes. That was topped on May 14, 1950, by a Norfolk, Va., gymnastics instructor, Marvin Byrum, who was clocked in 41 minutes and 30 seconds.

Fire struck on Jan. 25, 1954. An attendant opened the building to find smoke and fire raging up from the basement machine room. The electrical system was burned out and elevators, heating system and telephones rendered useless.

At least three times, before windows were sealed, objects thrown or accidentally dropped struck visitors standing or sitting below. On Nov. 9, 1957, a Philadelphia woman's right hand was broken by a two-pound telescopic lens that slipped and fell from a sailor's camera.

On April 15, 1954, a marble falling from a window put a huge bruise on the shoulder of Mrs. Jean Weber of Rockville, Conn. Five years later, an orange bruised and almost knocked down Stephen Jones, 15, of Utica, N.Y.

Safety glass was placed over the observation windows in 1961. That ended the shower of falling objects.

In 1934, a chagrined contractor reported that 107 gold-plated, platinum-tipped lightning rod points had been stolen from the tip of the monument. The thief apparently scaled a "corset" placed around the shaft during the cleaning and repointing job.

Quebec Establishes Immigration Rules

MONTREAL (AP) — Quebec's provincial government and the federal government have signed an agreement giving Quebec more power to determine which foreign immigrants will be allowed to settle in the province.

Immigrants who do not have families or sponsors in Quebec will be subject to screening by both the province and the federal immigration department, and the provincial government will establish its own point system to decide eligibility.

Nova Scotia has a similar immigration agreement with Ottawa, and Saskatchewan is to sign one soon.

Pizza Hut Chiefs To Go To Moscow

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A Pizza Hut in the Soviet Union?

It just may happen, say executives of Pizza Hut who will meet in Moscow Saturday with the Soviet Ministry of Trade in the firm's first step toward opening pizza restaurants in the Soviet Union.

PepsiCo, Pizza Hut's new parent corporation after a recent merger, has three bottling plants in the Soviet Union and the company was recently authorized to construct five additional plants.

50,000 Candidates

File In Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Officials estimate that more than 50,000 persons have registered as candidates in next Sunday's national and local elections.

The officials said there are at least 20 candidates for each of the 311 seats in congress and at least six for each of the other 9,967 seats in provincial legislatures and municipal councils to be filled.

snows and rains and howling gales, and sometimes crashing tides as well, some aspects of business were enjoying a boom of sorts.

Among them: Downtown hotels, sellers of galoshes, travel agents and those electronic funds transfer systems outside of banks that can be used to obtain cash, pay bills, make loans and accept deposits.

"This winter's snowstorms may have done more in a few days to promote acceptance of EFT than the banking industry has been able to do in five years," said one representative of a group of banks.

During the January white-out in Columbus, Ohio, the City National Bank said its 45 automatic tellers totaled 15,000 transactions in two days, a 300 percent increase over normal volume.

In the Boston area, the Bay Banks reported more than a 100 percent rise in the use of its 30 automatic tellers, each of which it says normally makes about 1,000 transactions a week.

The times, of course, were abnormal, and in many instances the banks themselves were closed, forcing customers to utilize the electronic devices. Whether customers will continue to use them isn't certain.

Nevertheless, bank officials are happy. They hope that customers, forced by the emergency to learn the newer method of transacting business, might find it just as comfortable as the old system.

A spot survey by a newly formed banking group, whose purpose admittedly is to spur the use of EFT, showed the increases throughout the blizzard areas were not limited to just a few banks.

The Provident National Bank of Philadelphia said its point of sale terminals in 12 convenience stores registered a 30 percent increase.

In addition to permitting customers to pay for goods electronically — transferring funds from a customer's bank account to the store's account — customers can also obtain $25 cash from the store without a purchase.

Citibank in New York reported business up about 20 percent at its 400 terminals in almost 200 sites in the metropolitan area. It said business also rose 20 percent during the big January storm here.

At Long Island's Hempstead Bank, officials said 2,500 EFT customers made 12 percent more transactions — mainly payments of utility and local store bills — while the bank was closed during the February storm.

At Louisville, Ky., customer traffic also was reported to be higher as a result of the storm, which at its height closed all 50 branches of the First National Bank of Louisville, the state's largest.

At least one problem, making cash easily available, wasn't solved entirely by the automatic tellers. In Louisville, the First National attempted to keep the machines supplied by making rounds in four-wheel-drive vehicles.

Groups Of Moslems Clash In Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Shiite and Sunnite Moslems battled with guns and knives in Karachi, and police reported six persons killed, 22 wounded, 41 arrested and houses and stores set afire. Unofficial sources reported 18 dead and about 40 injured.

The police said the clash on Monday erupted when marchers in a Sunnite religious procession exchanged derogatory slogans with Shiite onlookers and stones began to fly.

wasn't possible. Highways in the Boston-Providence area were closed for nearly a week, making replenishment difficult. Some New York sites closed down.

The banking industry would love to have the public accept its automatic tellers for a number of reasons, and so it undoubtedly seized upon the storm experience to promote their usage.

Automatic tellers reduce the need for clerks and bookkeepers, and are said to be more accurate as well. And because of their automatic bill-paying ability, they hold the promise of locking in the business of retailers and others.

But all this depends on convincing people to use the automatic devices, and whether or not these customers will continue to view them only as emergency devices remains to be seen.

Critics observe that when power fails people take to using kerosene lamps, but that when power is returned they invariably revert to their old habit of turning a switch.

Engine is transverse-mounted 104.7 CID V-6, 4-cylinder overhead cam power plant with Electronic Lean Burn. Front wheel drive. Exceptional front and rear seat head and leg room for four passengers. 4 doors plus hatchback to luggage compartment. Full bucket seats in front are standard, individually adjustable.

The front wheels both steer and drive, with the weight of the engine over the front wheels, you get good traction, good handling, good control, good stability.

There's ample suspension travel to absorb bumps, rubber bushings to cushion them, coil springs to soak up road shocks. An anti-sway bar in the front suspension.

Carter Cromwell Benson's Team Surpasses Goals

AFTER 15 YEARS as women's basketball coach at Slaton, with a 382-95 record, nine district championships and one state title to her credit, Gay Benson was not accustomed to thinking in losing terms when she assumed similar duties at Texas Tech last July. However, optimism was not abundant.

The program at Tech is young, and the task Mrs. Benson faced was not the familiar one of rebuilding, but one of building.

"I didn't know what to expect when I came here, since I didn't know much about the players or the teams we'd be playing," Mrs. Benson said. "I set some goals, of course, but I think mine were mostly dreams."

Two principal objectives she aimed for were for the team to win 65 to 70 per cent of its games and to avoid losing as many as 10.

"I didn't want to lose in double figures," she said. "Somehow, it just looks more impressive on paper if you lose less than 10 games. I thought that would be something to strive for."

The goal was reached. Tech finished its regular season Tuesday night with a victory over McMurry that upped its record to 29-6, going into the zone tournament which starts Friday in Abilene. The loss figure and the .829 winning percentage easily meet Mrs. Benson's objectives.

LAST FALL, PROBABLY no one—including Mrs. Benson—realistically felt that a 29-6 mark was possible.

Benson took the job too late to do much recruiting, but managed to bring in some players.

"I tried to recruit some with scholarships, and I recruited in the book store and everywhere else," she said with a laugh. "Once, I saw a 6-4 girl on campus and I asked her if she had ever played basketball. She said 'No ma'am, I don't know anything about the game.' My heart just sunk."

There were a number of adjustments to be made, the principal one being the changeover from the six-player game, which is employed in the Texas high school ranks, to the five-player concept. Benson had never coached the five-player game, and her players had not played it until coming to college.

"We're still adjusting to it," she said. "I am probably more than the players are. I'm learning more about it every day."

AT THE BEGINNING of the season, Mrs. Benson installed a tough program, in order to find which players were the most dedicated.

"I had to do this. I had heard that some of the players in past years hadn't been real dedicated."

She and her players had problems with communication because the terminology is somewhat different in the two types of games. Often, time-outs had to be called to make explanations clear. Not any more.

"A lot of a times, we had to draw diagrams to explain things," Mrs. Benson said. "Our players didn't know what a high post was. Now we can get things across with words much more often. We play the game better, and we know it better."

By the Christmas break, the team was 13-2, precisely the goal the coach and players had set before the campaign. The improvement in performance and confidence has been steady, Mrs. Benson says.

A case in point is the team's two games with nationally ranked Wayland Baptist. The first contest between the two resulted in a 95-43 Wayland victory. The second, in Lubbock nine days later, was also won by the Flying Queens, but by just a 74-63 count.

THE IMPROVEMENT HAS shown both offensively and defensively.

"Our zone defense is much better now," she added. "We're still not too sound on the man-for-man, but we're improving."

The team has learned more about attacking zone defenses. Also, it previously encountered serious problems adjusting when the opponent switched from a zone to a man-for-man defense, but it can now handle this better.

"Against a zone, we learned to work the ball under to the post more. It's so much different now than with the six-player game, in which you have three players at each end of the court."

Victories, of course, have increased confidence, and Mrs. Benson's goal is to reach the regional tournament, which follows the zone and state meets.

"We still have a lot of room for improvement, but we don't look like the same team now that we did at the start," she said. "The kids' confidence has snowballed. They've grown accustomed to winning, and they don't even think about losing."

"It's a credit to them. They've done the job we've asked them to do."

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—The season was winding down. It was time for handshaking and handslapping. Minds were on other matters, like upcoming post-season tournaments... possibly on previous defeats.

Or maybe the defenses were silently in charge Tuesday night, as Arkansas clipped Texas Tech 58-49. Whatever the situation, there was not that much to celebrate, as the Razorbacks clinched a share of the Southwest Conference title.

They did that, but the standing ovations—the loudest cheers—came at the half, as the capacity crowd in Barnhill Fieldhouse saluted the Orange Bowl champion footballers from Arkansas.

Then, with that chore out of the way, the fans settled back and waited for the outcome of the Texas-SMU contest. The report they wanted never came, and now the Razorbacks, who were a week ago the No. 1 team in the nation, will have to head into a first-round contest in the upcoming tournament.

Tech, meanwhile, will gird up for an Aggie invasion Saturday, which will be at 3:10 p.m. in the televised contest.

But, while the crowd waited for an explosion of points, a complete overpowering performance from their Porkers, the Raiders went about hanging within striking distance, but could never quite climb the hill.

And, while the crowd waited for one of its trio of heroes—Sidney Moncrief, Ron Brewer and Marvin Delph—to take charge, Raider Mike Russell was peppering away, practically carrying the Raiders, who fell for the third straight time.

The loss ended the regular season, with Tech standing 18-9 for the year and 10-6 in conference play. Arkansas is 26-2 and 14-2.

With a final score of low proportions, it was defense which held the key, and both Tech's Gerald Myers and Arkansas' Eddie Sutton admitted it.

"I don't think we shot well in the first half. I felt like we played better the last 20 minutes," Sutton said.

Myers said, "Their zone and their defense were the differences. They got some easy baskets off their defense (steals). I thought Russell had a super game, though."

What the senior Raider did to earn that praise was hit 23 points (eight of 13 from the field, seven of eight from the line) and pull down eight rebounds. He also

Early MHS Cold Spell Leads To Sandie Win

CANYON — Washington rocked at an astonishing gap in a Watergate tape. Then, Tuesday night, Canyon's West Texas State fieldhouse's fans stood in disbelief at an 18-point gap at the start of Monterey's bidistrict basketball battle.

After Monterey controlled the opening tip and David Davidson gunned in an 18-footer, the Plainsmen fell into a coma and Amarillo's taller and quicker Sandies commanded the next 10 minutes and vaulted to a 20-2 lead.

Monterey regained consciousness and made a game of it the rest of the way, but never came closer than four points of the lead, as the Sandies took a 54-48 victory in the first round of the Class AAAA state playoffs.

Amarillo High, now 23-6, advances to the regional semifinals Friday at Abilene against the winner of tonight's Fort Worth Dunbar-Arlington High game in Fort Worth. Dunbar, 32-2, ranks first in the state coaches poll.

Obviously, coach Barry Arwine's Sandies should have their hands full.

After the 18-point deficit, the Plainsmen narrowed the gap to 22-12 by halftime, as the Sandies dropped into a cold streak. However, Amarillo dominated most of the statistics, outbounding MHS 29-25 and outshooting the locals 46 per cent to 35 per cent.

For the second straight time, 6-7 center Victor Mitchell dominated the boards and scored 20 points, while forwards Kevin Parker and Russell Schaffer added 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Davidson and Tony Hamby led Monterey, with 16 and 14 points, respectively.

The Sandies penetrated into the forbidden inside area of Monterey's defense, which usually contains firm roadblocks. Mitchell knocked them down and scored layups, follow shots, short jumpers and other gimmes, as the Plainsmen watched helplessly.

Amarillo committed numerous turnovers, as Monterey narrowed the margin in the second quarter, but Parker and Schaffer made timely baskets in the final half.

"I felt like we would come out and get a lead at the start," AHS coach Arwine said. "Then Monterey's press started bothering us. We'd gone the wrong direction too much on our ball-handling against the press."

Arwine was just as surprised as most of the fans when Monterey hit only one of nine field shots in the first quarter and trailed in rebounds 15-1. His coaching cohort, MHS's Joe Michalka, realized that the mountain was very steep during the

Lorenzo's Last-Period Flurry Upend Farwell

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
TULIA—Lorenzo picked the right time—the fourth quarter—to hit a hot streak Tuesday night, and a seven-of-eight spree from the floor propelled the Hornets to a come-from-behind 57-55 Class A bidistrict win over Farwell.

The Hornets, who trailed 10-0 at the start and by as many as eight points in the second quarter and by nine midway again midway through the third period, will face the winner of Tuesday's Crowell-Baird game in the first round of regionals Friday in Lubbock Coliseum.

Tuesday's win, Lorenzo's 21st in 27 outings this year, snapped a five-year domination by District 3-A in this contest and left Farwell coach Bert Roanhaus shaking his head.

The Steers, who finished 22-11, were red hot throughout most of the evening, working the ball into Russ Jones (12-20 from the floor, eight rebounds, four blocked shots) and Clay Roberts (7-8 from the floor, eight rebounds, three blocks) and scoring seemingly at will.

But, in the fourth quarter, that inside game got away from the Steers. "It was there all right, but we just stopped going inside," a dejected Roanhaus said. "I don't know why. How do you explain why 16-year-old kids do things? I'm not taking anything away from them, but they're damn well not better than we are."

On the other side of the court, first-year Lorenzo mentor Gene Hudson was so nervous that he had to sit down to accept greetings from all the well-wishers.

"They were confusing us by moving their low post across and then bringing Jones across, and he was taking an effortless shot."

"We finally made an offensive adjustment and brought Edmond (Turner, who scored 16 of his 18 points in the second half) out to high post and put Guy (Morrison) down low so Edmond could go one-on-one with Jones. We had to get him out of there because he was killing us. Him getting that fourth foul (eight seconds deep into the fourth period) really helped."

"They're the hottest-hitting team I've seen all year (26-48 for the game, but only 5-13 in the fourth quarter). But I think we won because we probably wanted it a little bit more."

The Steers jumped to that 10-0 lead as Jones hit his first three buckets, got the first four Farwell rebounds and Kevin Kelley and Clay Roberts each tallied.

"I wasn't worried about that lead in the first quarter," Hudson said jokingly afterwards, "but I was extremely concerned in the second and third quarters."

Lorenzo scored the final six points to cut the margin to 14-10 at the quarter break. Then, Darrell Lawson, who led the Hornets with 23 points and hit 11 of 21 field goals, popped in one to start the second period and it was 14-12.

But Roberts and Jones combined for the next four buckets, and Farwell was up 22-14 after the next two minutes.

"We played good in spurts in the first half," Roanhaus said, "and, by rights, it should have been over by the half."

Lorenzo trimmed that eight-point deficit to three at intermission, as Lawson, 8-12 in the first 16 minutes, converted a Steer turnover into a bucket with two seconds left.

And Lawson rammed one home to start the second half to make it 29-28. But Farwell came back again, as Jones popped in two, Kelley hit and Rowdy Chandler's basket with 5:01 left gave the Steers a 37-28 pad.

That, however, was to be all of Jones and Roberts' glory in the second half. Roberts got only two shots in the second half, and Jones was 5-9, but the last came when Lorenzo was up by 56-51.

The Hornets trimmed the gap to three at 42:39 at the third-quarter break, as Turner tipped in a bucket with 38

Other double figure scorers were Roger

Flowers hit a free throw with 7:52 left in the game, and Morrison rebounded the second shot and popped in his first field goal of the night to knot the score at 42.

Kelley then hit from the corner, and Roberts got a free shot to give Farwell a 45-42 advantage.

Ropes Bombs Panthers 67-45

LEVELLAND — Gary Means and Joel Flowers with 14 more combined for 41 points Tuesday night as the Ropes Eagles defeated the Whitharral Panthers 67-45 in a Class B bidistrict basketball game in the Texas Dome at South Plains College.

Means hit 17 of his game-high 27 points in the second half when the Eagles expanded a 17-point halftime lead as much as a 25-point advantage.

The win gives Ropes 22 victories over the season against 7 losses, while the defeat dropped Whitharral to 24-5.

Ropes will now advance to the Regional championship for the fourth time in the last five years. The Class B Regional will be held here starting Friday.

The Eagles never trailed in the contest as they quickly put Whitharral at a scoring disadvantage in the first quarter by building an early 19-12 lead.

Flowers and Means clipped in 6 points apiece and John Cowan added five to pace the Eagles' early scoring.

In the second and third quarters, the Eagles only outscored the Panthers by five (28-23) as the junior-senior duo of Flowers and Means continued to hit open shots at will.

In those two quarters, Means hit 11 points and Flowers added 8.

Down by 12 going into the final quarter, Whitharral went into a zone offense to make an attempt at a comeback but the Eagles put together their best quarter for a 20-point production to put the finishing touches on the victory over the Panthers.

Leading scorer for Whitharral was 6-4 junior Jimmy Avery, who hit 7 field goals and added 2 free throws for 16 points.

Other double figure scorers were Roger

Flowers and Means each with 10 points each.

In a preliminary game, Martha Nichols, Nancy Herrin and Lisa Barns each scored in double figures Tuesday night as the Anton girls defeated Three Way 55-46 in the District 7-B championship game.

Misses Nichols, Herrin and Barns contributed 20, 19 and 16 points, respectively, in the game as Anton never trailed.

Anton's lead was only one point, 27-26, at the half, but it jumped to 11 after three periods. Leading the way in that 16-6 third quarter for the victors was Miss Barns, who picked up eight of her 16 points in that period.

The two clubs played nearly equal basketball in the final quarter as Three Way outscored Anton 14-12. Tammy Davis contributed eight points in the final period to pace the late Eagle rally.

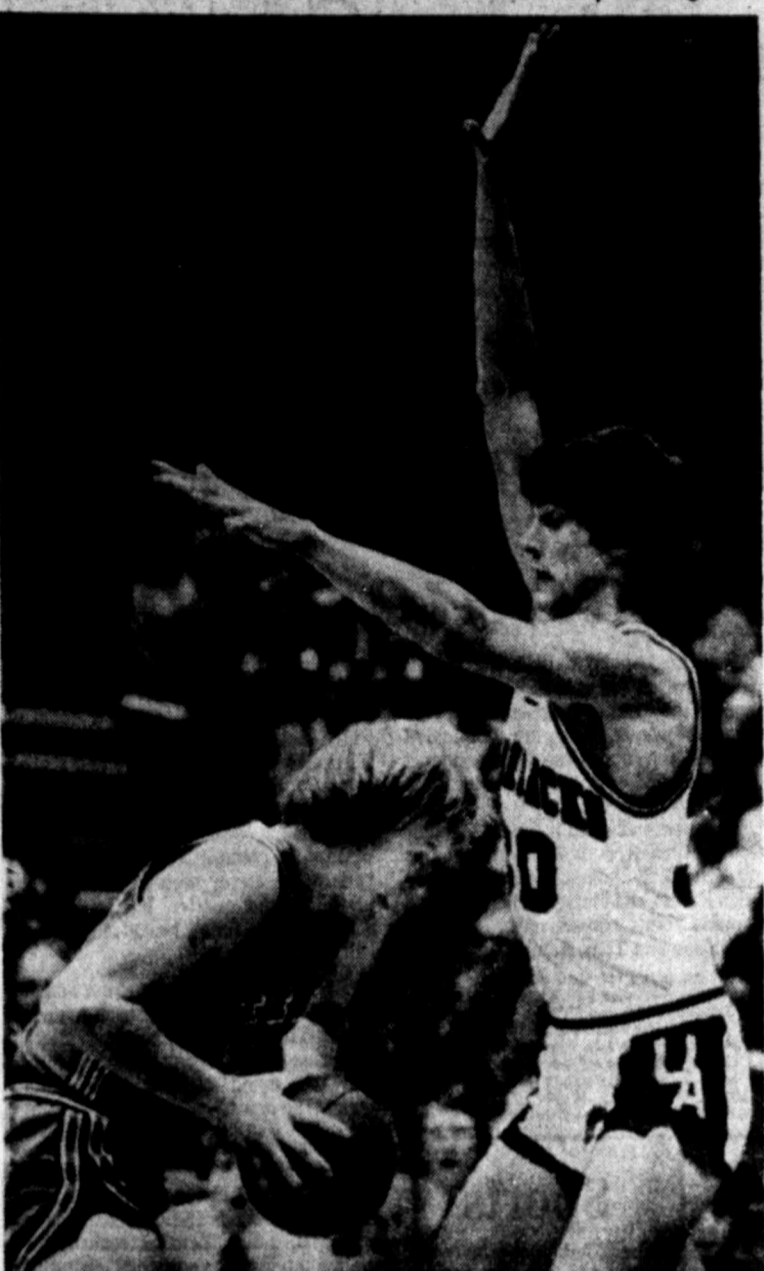

High scorers for Three Way were Princess Parkman with 16 points and Belinda Richardson with 12. Davis finished the night as high-point with 18 points.

SOMEWHERE TO GO — Where do you go when you're up against 6-11 Steve Schall of Arkansas? Texas Tech's Joe Baxter tried to take the low road Tuesday night but found no way up or around during this first-half action. Arkansas won 58-49 to grab share of SWC title. (AP Laserphoto)

Leon Spinks Finding Woes Just Beginning

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK — Leon Spinks is young and still a little naive. He thought all his troubles were over, but now sees they're only starting.

As the new world heavyweight champion, everybody suddenly wants to get on his bandwagon, or better yet, to own a piece of him.

In St. Louis, Spinks' manager, Mitt Barnes, said Top Rank Inc., offered him $1.5 million for his 24-year-old titleholder, but Top Rank President Bob Arum, to whom Spinks is committed for his next six fights, denies that, saying he wouldn't give Barnes 15 cents.

Let's go back a bit to the Olympics in 1976.

claimed three steals and never left the court.

But that output was the major part of Tech's offense. Arkansas was unable to handle him around the goal, but when the Razorbacks went into a zone, the Raiders had little outside punch.

Kent Williams came in for the final 16:55, his first action since being sidelined by a broken jaw suffered in the Aggie game 10 days ago. He tried to inject some outside shooting, but hit just two of six shots.

Russell got help from guards Mike Edwards and Geoff Huston, who hit eight points each from the perimeter.

Delph and Brewer, both seniors, hit 16 and 10, respectively. Moncrief added 12.

Arkansas went to the zone in the first half, as Russell hit 9 of Tech's first 13 points. Tech had opened with an 11-8 lead, much to the surprise of the crowd.

But, the Razorbacks went to 6-11 Schall, who popped in an 8-footer, and Jim Counce worked under the goal, shot from inches away, and drew foul from Thad Sanders. Counce missed the free shot, but his bucket had shoved the Hogs in front 12-11 with 11:33 left in the first half.

And before Tech could retaliate, Delph hit from the right corner on a turnaround shot, and freshman Ulysses Reed got a rebound layup for a 16-11 advantage with 9:39 remaining in the half.

Tech cut it to 24-23 in the second half's first 30 seconds, but the Razorbacks scored 8 straight points, capped by Moncrief's steal and slam dunk.

The rest of the way, Tech never closed the gap below 7 points.

Tech outscored the Razorbacks 31-25, led by Russell and Edwards with eight each. The Raiders shot 45 per cent from the field, to Arkansas' 48 per cent. The Razorbacks had come into the game hitting 55.1 per cent.

Now, Tech will take on the Aggies. And Williams looking forward to that?

"Sure," the 6-5 sophomore from Hobbs, said, through his wired-together teeth. "The Aggies always seem to bring out the best in everybody. I want to play against them."

"It (the jaw and mask) didn't bother me. Even when I fell (while handling the ball outside). I didn't get tired. Coach Myers told me to go ahead and shoot, that I might not hit at first (because of the layoff). I missed my first one, because I was a couple of feet outside my range. I moved in a little bit (and connected on his second effort, a 25-footer)."

for the light-heavyweight gold medal. Winning that medal meant everything to him and as he and Barnes, who had handled him since he was 16, walked down the street in Montreal, they talked not only about the medal but also of Leon's future in the professional ranks.

Suddenly, impulsively, the youthful fighter turned toward the older man who had fed him, put him up in his own room and treated him as if he were his son down through the years.

"Mitt, whatever you do, don't ever sell me," pleaded Leon Spinks.

"Don't worry," Barnes assured him. "I never will."

This is Mitt Barnes' version of what happened in Montreal.

On Aug. 1, 1976, the day after winning his Olympic gold medal, Spinks signed a contract making Barnes his manager. The contract was for three years and gave Barnes the option to keep renewing it for as long as 12 years.

Yet the day after he beat Muhammad Ali for the title in Las Vegas, Spinks was pointedly asked by UPI's Steve Wilstein whether Barnes was his manager and he answered, "He's not my manager. I don't have a manager. I manage myself."

Before the fight took place, another contract was signed by Top Rank, Spinks and Barnes giving Top Rank promotional rights for Spinks' next six fights should he win the title. It was a shrewd move by Arum to protect himself.

Two other attorneys in New Jersey, Michael Cerreto and Dan Duva, claim they represent Barnes and have been doing so for the past six months, but in St. Louis, Vince Igoe, says he does.

"The bidding for our contract with Leon Spinks has gone as high as $4.2 million," says Igoe, speaking in behalf of Barnes. "If he's interested, that's what Mr. Arum's 15 cents would buy him. Leon Spinks has never told Mitt Barnes he isn't his manager. He has never told him anything even close to that."

Spinks and Barnes still are very close, according to Igoe, who says Barnes is being prevented from talking to the new champ "by certain parties."

"Mitt feels if he can sit down with Leon for 20 minutes, this whole thing can be resolved," says Igoe.

Arum claims there were tears in his eyes after Ali lost because Ali did so much for him while he was champion. He doesn't really wish to see Ali fight anymore, Arum says.

Who's he kidding?

Even though he no longer holds the title, Ali still is the key figure. If Ali says he doesn't want to fight anymore, Spinks is in trouble. Arum wouldn't be in such good shape, either.

All this calls to mind Cus D'Amato's troubles with the old International Boxing Club, which operated in conjunction with Madison Square Garden and controlled boxing the world over some years ago.

D'Amato had Floyd Patterson, who was told he wouldn't get a title fight unless he left D'Amato, but Patterson stuck with him and became the heavyweight champion, anyway.

next three periods.

"I was real proud of the way we came back, but we just got too far behind. It would have been a different game if we had hit a few buckets, but you have to give our kids some credit. They are real young, and they've had their ups and downs," said Michaika, whose team finished 19-12.

The biggest downer of the year embarrassed the Plainsmen in the first few minutes. Schaffer drew a foul and sank two free shots with 7:19 left in the first quarter, tying the game at 2.

Seconds later, he stole the ball from Chuck Perry and the Sandies took the lead for good when Mitchell canned a follow shot.

A jumper by Mitchell from the left side raised the score to 6-2 before Schaffer turned into a thief again. Schaffer grabbed a loose ball, passed to Blaine Smith, who fed Mitchell underneath for an easy layup.

When Monterey's Hamby missed two straight shots from the outside, Schaffer rammed in a bucket from the left corner on two consecutive trips down court. He then added two free shots for a 14-2 lead after one quarter of play.

Things continued in that pattern until Arwine substituted midway through the second quarter and Monterey began to find the shooting range.

Panthers Fems Defeat Mats

Wanda Young's 40 points and Stella Zaragoza's 19 led the Panthers, who ended District 3-AAA's second half race with a 2-4 mark.

Joy Guyton and Monique Hicks paced Estacado with 26 and 16 points.

Other double figure scorers were Roger

TRACK AND FIELD
 BUDAPEST — Natali Marascu of Romania bettered the women's world indoor record for the 1,500 meters with a time of 4 minutes, 5.0 seconds in the Hungarian track and field championships at Olympic Hall. The previous record of 4:08.1 was established by Mary Stewart of Great Britain last year.

SKIING
 LAHTI, Finland — Josef Luszczek rallied in the closing stages to win the 15-kilometer race at the World Nordic Championships for Poland's first-ever gold medal in big-time cross-country skiing. Luszczek nosed out Russia's Evgeny Belyayev and Finland's Juhani Mieto in a tough finish with only five seconds separating them. Luszczek won by two seconds over Belyayev. It was one of the most stunning upsets in years of cross-country skiing although the 22-year-old Pole had come from almost nowhere to grab the bronze medal in Sunday's 30-kilometer race.

HOCKEY
 ATLANTA — The National Hockey League's Board of Governors decided to use an unbalanced schedule, emphasizing divisional rivalries, beginning next season. The 80-game schedule, beginning next season, will have the following format: Every NHL team will play the other four times — twice at home and twice on the road — for a total of 68 games. The remaining 12 games will be played intradivisionally.

Razorbacks Don't Find Abe's Latest Gag Funny

By The Associated Press
Abe Lemons, Texas' quick-quipping basketball coach, usually leaves 'em laughing, but his latest gag came true and the Arkansas Razorbacks didn't find it particularly amusing.
On his Sunday night TV show, the camera zoomed in on a prone Lemons, clad in a dark suit with his hands folded on his chest around a carnation. The "corpse" rose slowly and shouted, "We're not dead yet!"
And Tuesday night, Lemons' 14th-ranked Texas Longhorns found themselves very much alive with an 82-74 triumph over Southern Methodist that bumped fourth-ranked Arkansas out of an automatic bye into the championship game of the post-season Southwest Conference tournament.

It hasn't been the best of times for Arkansas. The Razorbacks lost their No. 1 national ranking when Houston upset them on Saturday and Tuesday night's 58-49 victory over Texas Tech was only good enough to earn them a share of the SWC title with Texas.
Both teams finished with 14-2 conference records and they split their two regular-season meetings. But Texas took two games from third-place Houston and earned the coveted bye that Arkansas felt it would get most of the season.
"At the beginning of the year, I would have sold out for 14-2," said Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton. "I thought it would have been good enough to win the league. But Texas has dodged the bullet two or three times and they're in there with us."

Well, not quite. Texas has an 11-day layoff before the SWC title game while Arkansas must win three times to get there.
"If we had to flip a coin (with Arkansas for the bye), we would have won that, too," said Lemons. "This is our lucky year. I think we've got a guardian angel."
In other games involving the Associated Press Top Twenty, ninth-ranked Notre Dame downed North Carolina State 70-59 behind Dave Patton's 22 points and 12 rebounds. Sty Williams scored 17 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Rhode Island upset No. 11 Providence 73-64, and Harry Davis had 22 points and David Thompson 20 to lead No. 12 Florida State over Georgia Tech 78-72.

SMU battled Texas to a 37-37 halftime tie but Ron Baxter, who scored 20 of his 30 points in the second half, ignited a Longhorn surge with a pair of three-point plays. Texas built a 17-point lead, enough to withstand a 32-point performance by SMU's Jeff Swanson.
Tyrone Brannan added 21 points and Jim Krivacs had 20 for Texas, 22-4 overall and 13-0 in its new multi-million-dollar Super Drum.
"I don't think any of us realize how big this game was," Lemons said. "We've never been here before. We were scared at first... but here we are floating into the finals. And only one of those eight teams out there can get to us."

Aggies Win

COLLEGE STATION (UPI)—Buster Turner, who had gone hitless in his last nine at bats, went three-for-four Tuesday, doubled, homered twice and drove in six runs in carrying Texas A&M to a 13-3 victory over McNeese.
Mike Hertel also went three-for-five with a homer. Lethander Mark Thurmond went five innings to pick up his first decision of the year while Ray Fontenot took the loss for the Cowboys.
Texas A&M raised its early season record to 5-1 and McNeese fell to 1-2.

UT Rips TWC

AUSTIN (UPI)—Ken Wright threw a two-hit shutout in the opener and Texas went on to sweep a doubleheader from Texas Wesleyan Tuesday, 7-0 and 6-3.
Wright struck out nine in going the distance in the first game to pick up his first victory of the year. Bobby Thompson hit a two-run homer for the Longhorns in the opener.
Texas took advantage of four Texas Wesleyan errors in the second game although the Rams stayed in the game with a two-run homer by Rick Eberly.
The Longhorns moved to 5-1 for the season while Monday's action was the first of the year for TWC.

Aeros Trade

HOUSTON (UPI)—The Houston Aeros Tuesday acquired defenseman Paul Terbenche from the Birmingham Bulls and traded defenseman Glen Irwin to the Indianapolis Racers.
Terbenche, who joined the Aeros for the start of an eight-game road trip, was obtained for future consideration, a club spokesman said. The 5-10, 170-pound Terbenche was playing with Birmingham's Springfield team in the American Hockey League.
Irwin had spent most of this season with Binghamton of the AHL. The Aeros said he was traded for a future draft choice.

Tribe Triumphs

SHERMAN (UPI)—David Nelson scored 18 points and Steve Mackey added 12 and 10 rebounds Tuesday night to rally McMurry past Trinity 64-54 and give the Indians the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship.
McMurry finished the season with a 15-13 record while Trinity, which tied for first place during the regular season, dropped to 11-9. Erik Johnsen led Trinity with 18 points.

Hurricane

HOUSTON (UPI)—A state district judge has refused to order a temporary restraining order prohibiting a new professional hockey team from using the nickname Hurricane.
Representatives of the Houston Hurricanes, a local women's amateur football team, were refused the temporary restraining order by State District Judge Presley E. Werlein Jr. Tuesday. However, a hearing was set for March 8.
Hurricane General Manager Robin Massey claimed in the suit that the management of the Houston Hurricane, which begins play this season in the North American Soccer League, was informed of the existence of the football team's name prior to a contest which was held to name the soccer team.
"The names will only cause problems with marketing," said Massey. An attorney for the Hurricanes said an oversight in the Texas Secretary of State's office when the soccer team registered the nickname caused the problem.
"Basically the secretary of state's office screwed up," attorney Patricia Kane said.
The nickname "Hurricane" was cho-

Bears Sweep

WACO (UPI)—The Baylor Bears edged St. Mary's University twice Tuesday, 2-1 and 2-0, for their first baseball wins of the young season.
Jaime Cocanower (1-1) went five innings in the first game, allowing three hits, while sophomore Lance Carrington took the loss for St. Mary's. Shane Nolen and freshman Don Oliver combined for the win in the second half of the double header.
Mike Johansen produced three singles in the doubleheader to lead the Bears' attack at the plate. Baylor is now 2-3-1 while St. Mary's is 1-3.

POST STUMBLER

Roosevelt defeated Post 53-50 in girl's cage play. Debbie Parker led Roosevelt with 27 points. The game was the final tilt for both teams.

LAKE VIEW WINS LOOP

Kathy Eumoz hit 24 points to pace the Lake View girls to a 47-38 win over Snyder in the SHS. The win assured the Chiefs, now 6-0, of the second-half title in District 3-AAA. Susie Fisher's 13 points paced Snyder, which ended its loop chase 4-2.

DISTRICT 3-AA

In District 3-AA girl's cage play, second-half winner Dimmitt defeated Morton 62-52 and Friona downed Littlefield 64-61. Leading scorers were Vickie Cleveland of Dimmitt with 22 points, Morton's Susan Halvado with 25, Wanda Williams

Motley County Topples Roby

POST (Special)—Ricky Turner, Todd McCandless, Jerry Lee, Hal Dempsey and Robert Parker all hit in double figures to pace Motley County to a 71-48 Class B bidistrict basketball win over Roby at Post.
McCandless hit 15 points, Dempsey 14, Lee and Turner 12 and Parker 11 as the District 5-B champions took a first quarter lead and then coast home for the win over the District 6B winners.
Roby's Brad Stewart hit 18 points and Ricky King had 13.
Motley County moves to the Regional Tournament in Levelland this weekend.

Youth Sports Session Slated

A conference on children in youth sports will be held Friday and Saturday on the Texas Tech campus.
The conference is part of an effort to further distribute information regarding children in youth sports to parents, coaches and others involved.
The conference will begin Friday morning at the University Center Senate Room. Other sessions will be conducted at the Chemistry Building Auditorium.
Interested persons may register at the door or pre-register by calling the Department of Continuing Education at 742-3797.
Persons may begin registering at 8 a.m. Friday. The Saturday sessions will last from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.
Texas Tech head football coach Rex Dockery and women's athletic director Jeannine McHoney will be among those addressing the conference.

AA Clash Tuesday

The Abernathy-Dimmitt girls bidistrict clash will be Tuesday, Feb. 28 in Hutchinson Center on the Wayland Baptist Campus in Plainview, not on Monday, Feb. 27 as earlier reported in The Avalanche-Journal.
Abernathy won the 4-AA title in a play-off with Lockney and now stands 22-12. Dimmitt took the 3-AA crown and now stands 24-8.

Tired Of 'Old' Sports? Try 'Hocker'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Special Correspondent

It starts as the small seed of an idea in somebody's head. Then it germinates. After a while, it may die on the vine or it may mushroom into a gigantic tentacle monster.

That's the story of most major sports as we know them — baseball, basketball, football, tennis, golf, soccer. Some of them were cannibalistic — they fed off each other.

The same is true of what the founder, a Connecticut lawyer and judge named John Henry Norton, calls the "first new sport in a century."

He has named it "Hocker." Norton insists that he conceived it just in order to get his 14 kids, five of them adopted Asian orphans, out of his hair. "Hocker," he says, is a combination of a lot of other sports, blending "the dribble of basketball, the punch of volleyball, the carom of ice hockey and the kick of soccer into a non-violent sport."

Norton is so enamored of his brainchild, which he says can be played by kids, grownups, men, women and even paraplegics that he is sure it some day will be universally popular.

Who knows? Other sports have had a less auspicious beginning.

Take golf. Who knows how this cow pasture game may have evolved? It is reasonable to suspect that one day back in the stone age a couple of pre-historic men were strolling lazily through the forest, hitting stones with tree limbs as they walked, when one of the stones flew into a cauldron where Mrs. Cavewoman was preparing the evening meal.

"Great guns, look what I did," said the delighted cave man to his companion. "Let me see you do it." They were addicted.

Later, before Christ, shepherds watching their flocks amused themselves by hitting stones at holes in the ground with their crooked sticks. Thus golf evolved.

Succeeding generations plucked a soft substance from gum trees, wrapped it into a round object and began hitting it back and forth, first with the palms of their hands, then crudely shaped sticks. From which emerged baseball, polo, croquet, lacrosse and tennis.

Who would have thought when James Naismith, a physical education teacher at Springfield College in Massachusetts, got bored that cold winter night in 1891 and hung up peach baskets at each end of the gym for his pupils to shoot at with a blown-up ball that subsequent devotees would be earning $100,000 to $600,000 a year (roughly Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's stipend) performing the same exercise before big, screaming audiences?

Is it true, as the late sportscaster Bill Stern once related, that, as President Lincoln lay on his death bed he summoned Gen. Abner Doubleday to his panting side and beseeched him:

"Abner, our nation has been divided by a horrible Civil War. We need something to bring us together. Invent baseball!"

There is nothing quite as dramatic or historic about Judge Norton's pipedream. By his own admission, he didn't know how to keep the 14 restless little monsters of his Fairfield, Conn., household fully occupied so he sat down, drew up plans for a primitive field, jotted down a few rules and called it "Hocker."

The game is played with a 16-inch playground ball, in the purest sense on a 100x51 yard field with quintuple-zone goal posts. For the backyard or corner lot the area can be reduced to any size with rocks, soda cans or trash barrels serving as goals.

The game is largely a mixture of basketball, soccer and hockey. You can slap, curry, dribble, kick, punch, push or slap-pass the ball. You can scoop it up with one hand. You can't tackle, block or hit an opponent head-on. You can't push with two hands and never above shoulder level or below the waist. The idea is to get the ball through the goal post, over or under it for one to five points.

"It's natural," says the judge. "It's low-cost, injury-free, good exercise and fun." Only thing, don't expect to make a million dollars playing it — not yet, anyhow.

TRY TO LEAN INTO YOUR SHOT FOR MORE POWER!

LET'S FACE IT, THERE WILL BE MANY TIMES WHEN YOU WILL NOT BE READY IN TIME TO TAKE THAT LOVELY LAST STEP INTO THE BALL TOWARD THE NET. IF YOU'LL TRY IN THESE CASES TO AT LEAST LEAN IN TO THE NET YOU CAN ACCOMPLISH SOMETHAT THE SAME THING.

NCAA Hearings On Tap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, after more than five months of investigation, will begin public hearings Monday into the powerful police arm of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the major governing body of intercollegiate athletics in the United States.

The House Subcommittee on oversight and investigations will hold the first of what should be eight days of hearings into the policies of the NCAA, particularly the enforcement of its rules and regulations.

The subcommittee staff has visited seven of the some 100 colleges and universities involved in official inquiries by the association contends its 12-member investigations staff and five-member Committee on Infractions conduct inquiries and hand down punishments that are essentially administrative and not judicial. Thus, it says, their hearings are less formal than regular court proceedings and do not have to strictly follow the historical rules of evidence.

At its annual meeting last month in Atlanta, the members of the 844-member organization approved a codification of its policies and procedures. But committee members said the Congressional inquiry and pending court cases had nothing to do with the action, which they said had been in the making for a year.

Critics of the NCAA claim it is a cumbersome organization, uneven in the enforcement of its rules and beholden to a small group of influential schools with "major programs" — in short, unaccountable and unresponsive to most institutions it is purported to represent for the general good of the college sport.

Defenders contend the NCAA runs as smoothly, efficiently and fairly as can be expected, given certain realities. It is a voluntary membership association, called upon both to police and serve institutions of varying size and athletic philosophy and funded primarily from gate and television revenues generated by the schools with "big-time" football and basketball programs.

The NCAA grew out of a meeting in 1905 of a small group of colleges to save football from extinction. The game was then particularly vicious, and President Theodore Roosevelt had threatened to have it outlawed unless there were reforms. That little group saved football, but its aims soon expanded, as it proceeded to devise rules for the conduct of virtually all intercollegiate sports.

What has evolved is an organization whose power rests in an elaborate committee structure and staff of 65 at the $1.2 million headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan.

Many people are more specific in their assessment. They say the power rests with one man, Walter Byers, executive director and chief staff officer for the past 26 years.

Byers, a 55-year-old Kansas City native who was a sports writer before becoming an assistant to the Big Ten commissioner in 1947, was named executive director of the NCAA on Oct. 1, 1951.

It is the association's members who have given the power to Byers, his staff and the various committees because they decide the rules at their convention each year.

And now, it appears that the NCAA is much greater than the sum of its parts.

First In A Series

NCAA since January 1970, the period covered by the Congressional investigations, as well as having studied thousands of documents.

First-day witnesses include J. Brent Clark, an attorney who resigned from the NCAA enforcement unit last Dec. 30, and representatives of Mississippi State. On Tuesday Jack Fusak, a past NCAA president, and officials of Michigan State are scheduled to testify.

Mississippi State was suspended two years for alleged recruiting violations. The suspension expired last season. Michigan State was suspended three years for alleged football recruiting violations. The suspension ends after the 1978 season.

Clark, a 29-year-old Oklahoma lawyer who now works for the committee staff, is expected to testify that the NCAA has a policy of "selective punishment" under which certain major colleges are never investigated or penalized by the association when they are suspected of having violated NCAA rules.

Clark also plans to testify, according to the New York Times, that the NCAA selects for penalties those major colleges that do not fully cooperate with the NCAA.

In its March edition, Sport Magazine has a 9,000-word article on the probe in which it says congressional investigators are encountering witnesses "terrified" of testifying against the NCAA.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., is studying whether the investigative methods of the NCAA provide for due process, whether the association is violating antitrust laws and whether it levies fair penalties against member colleges, their coaches and athletes.

The investigation of the NCAA enforcement program was instigated by Rep. James D. Santini, D-Nev., a member of the subcommittee. Santini got signatures of 68 House members and petitioned Moss after penalties were imposed upon the University of Nevada-Las Vegas last summer.

Jerry Tarkanian was dismissed by the Nevada-Las Vegas on the strong recommendation of the NCAA, which had found his basketball program guilty of many violations in the recruitment of athletes.

A Nevada judge, in granting Tarkanian a permanent injunction against the dismissal, said the association's evidence

Infractions Committee Outlines Typical Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recent issue of the NCAA News, an official publication of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, included a story on how a case is handled by its Committee on Infractions.

When it receives word of possible violations of NCAA legislation by a member institution, the NCAA's investigative staff, acting under the general guidance of the Committee on Infractions, notifies the involved institution that a preliminary inquiry will be conducted.

If the preliminary inquiry indicates that no violations have occurred, the case is terminated and the action is reported to the committee and the institution.

If the information about alleged violations appears to be of substance, the committee sends a letter of official inquiry requesting the institution to assist the committee in determining the facts.

Through this inquiry, the NCAA said, the institution is made aware of specific information, including names, dates and places concerning each alleged violation. This enables the school to conduct its own investigation and respond in writing to the committee.

Once the institution has collected all available information and prepared a written response to the allegations in the official inquiry, a hearing is held to review the case before the infractions committee.

The institution's written response is submitted to the committee about two weeks prior to the hearing, which enables the committee members to familiarize themselves with the institution's position. Prior to the hearing, the committee receives no specific information about the case from the NCAA staff other than a copy of the letter of official inquiry.

During the hearing, the institution's representatives and the NCAA investiga-

Indoor Motorcycle Races Set Here Thursday Night

Indoor motorcycle racing roars onto the Lubbock winter sports scene Thursday night with the first in a series of four West Texas championship events slated for the green flag at 8 p.m. at the civic center arena.

Race promoter Jack Halpain said that the anticipated field of 60 to 70 riders would include entries not only from Texas but also from New Mexico, Oklahoma and Kansas.

Headlining the field will be Randy Carthel of Amarillo, American Motorcycle Association national indoor champion, who launched his career in cycle racing a decade ago in as a small boy in races in this area.

Amarillo, Dallas and Lubbock will be heavily represented, Halpain said, noting that Lubbock riders David Fisher, David Copeland and Bubba Shober — all carrying the AMA's coveted expert ranking — have forwarded entries.

Competition over the 1/10-mile flat track will be in two divisions, amateur and professional, and will include five classes, based on engine displacement.

Amateurs will run in the 0-60cc, 0-80cc and 0-100cc classes, while the profes-

Further, the institution is advised of the evidence developed by the investigative staff and all individuals who have reported information substantiating an allegation are identified.

No public announcement is made by the NCAA until the conclusion of the processing of a case.

Vandy's Image Now Tarnished

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Trying to polish its tennis program's prestige, Vanderbilt University bought a piece of the Davis Cup. But the wealthy private college's liberal image has, at least in some eyes, been tarnished in the bargain.

Civil rights leaders say the stain of racism will rub off on the Harvard of the South if it goes forward with plans to sponsor the Cup's American Zone North Section final. The competition pits the United States against apartheid South Africa — and the school's open forum policy against the question of human rights.

Last fall, Vanderbilt officials started sponsorship negotiations with the United States Tennis Association. The details aren't public but reports say the UTSA is to receive $50,000 for allowing Vanderbilt to be the match site.

Tuesday, the administration began talks with students over plans for large-scale protest demonstrations during the March 17-19 tournament. Thousands are to descend on the campus of the 106-year-old school named after railroad baron and patron Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Vanderbilt Chancellor Alexander Heard has issued a statement saying the match will go on as scheduled and that the university's sponsorship is not an endorsement of apartheid — South Africa's policy of strict racial separation.

"Vanderbilt has a well-established policy of free and open forum," he said. "We consider adherence to this policy to be a university's obligation."

Divinity Professor Don Beisswenger isn't persuaded.

"My judgment is if the university knew about the impact before agreeing to this, it would not have agreed to this use of its facilities because of its possible misinterpretation," Beisswenger said Tuesday.

The NLT Corp., a national holding company which had pledged up to $88,000 to underwrite the match, withdrew from its agreement. Vanderbilt said the debate surrounding South Africa's participation was more heated than the firm expected.

Beisswenger and an economics professor, members of the Ad Hoc Committee of Vanderbilt Faculty on Racial Justice for South Africa, sent a petition signed by 85 faculty members to President Emmett Fields on Tuesday, reiterating the group's opposition to apartheid and the Davis Cup match.

"I think there is a difference between sponsoring an event and a public forum," Beisswenger said. "We have had a wizard of the Ku Klux Klan here, but the point is: What if the university used its facilities to host the KKK's Tennessee convention? The university has been historically committed to human rights. I appeal to that tradition as far as Vanderbilt's role in this matter."

Sallie McFague, Divinity School dean, said she disagreed with the decision to sponsor the tournament but that there was no rift between her and the administration.

"I feel we have made a mistake and I deeply regret it," she told a reporter. "This doesn't fall under public forum because there is no exchange of ideas. If the prime minister of South Africa were to come here for an exchange of ideas, that would be different.

"This is an issue of national importance because it has to do with the function of the university — the betterment of mankind. This is a moral concern, a moral question. One principle, not considering all of the central considerations, skews the issue. South Africa stands apart from the world in its government policy — racism."

When NLT withdrew, Joe C. Davis, a Vanderbilt trustee and alumnus assumed the obligation, agreeing to make good losses up to $88,000.

"My purpose is to support Vanderbilt and its tennis program, so I just took up the slack," he said. "This is an athletic event — that's all."

H-SU Dumps Red Raiders

ABILENE (Special)—Hardin-Simmons took a doubleheader from Texas Tech Tuesday by counts of 3-1 and 3-2.

Kenneth McLeod hurled a seven-hitter for the Cowboys in the opener, while Tech starter David Bolton went the distance and took the loss, although he allowed just five hits.

H-SU scored single runs in the first, third and fifth frames. Tech scored once in the first on hits by Johnny Vestal, Larry Selby, Rusty Laughlin and then an infield hit for an RBI by Dan Hejl.

In the second game, Tech led until the bottom of the last inning—the seventh —when H-SU's Roy Thomas blasted a solo home run with two out to tie the score at 2-2.

Then, in the bottom of the eighth, Philip Tippen singled to score Larry Tatum with the winning run in the 3-2 victory.

Tech's two runs had come in the fourth frame on RBI-singles by Tommy Inzer and Mike Farmer.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: I'm into astrology and there's something I can't understand. Since rival quarterbacks Roger Staubach of the Dallas Cowboys and Craig Morton of the Denver Broncos were both born the same day, how come the Superbowl didn't end up in a tie? — Rodger T., Denver.

A: "Good question," famous psychic Mickey Dahne tells us. "Although they were born the same day, a year apart" — Staubach, Feb. 5, 1942, and Morton a year later — "the placing of the planets makes a difference one year to the next. And knowing the time and place of their births is also important. I think Staubach is a warmer person, more of a homebody, and that affects his personality in private and on the field. They both have humanitarian instincts, but it will take Morton a little longer. Both are very serious and might be considered cool and detached at times. Personally," Micki offers, "I love Roger — he's my man, but that's just the way I feel about him."

(Incidentally a teammate of Roger's when he played for Navy once said of his passing power: "He can throw a football through a car wash and it would come out dry!")

Q: To settle a bet, can you tell me what Zsa Zsa's married name is this week? — Lillian Goldstein, New Bedford.

A: It's Zsa Zsa O'Hara! Next question, please!

Q: What's this about Douglas MacArthur once getting even with President Harry Truman for firing him? — Will McN., St. Louis, Mo.

A: It all had to do with the then-top game show, "What's My Line?" According to the late Bennett Cerf, after Truman became ex-President, he was invited to appear as the "mystery guest" on the show. But when the producers Goodson and Todman tried to clear the booking, Douglas MacArthur (then chairman of the board of Remington-Rand, a co-sponsor) flatly turned it down. He said Truman was not going on any program with which he had anything to do.

Q: Did any major league baseball team ever go through a full season without being shut out? — T.G. (an ancient baseball buff), Trenton

A: Joe McCarthy's Yankees did even better than that. They went without a goose egg for two and a half (between 1936 and 1939). Joe DiMaggio, Lou Gehrig, Bill Dickey, Tony Lazzeri, Joe Gordon, Charlie Keller, Tommy Henrich, George Selkirk, Red Rolfe were the hitting stars opposing pitchers had to face in those years.

Q: Who plays the role of Bogart on those TV commercials? Sometimes I think there is more than one such impressionist. But my twin sister says it's the same person. Can you help us? — Mary K., Little Rock, Ark.

A: Chances are you and your twin are seeing double. On network TV the impressionist is actor Jerry Lacy. However, Joseph Barone, now touring the Golden Apple Dinner Theaters in Woody Allen's "Play It Again, Sam," tells us he made commercials as Bogie in the Midwest area. Barone is a former New York cabdriver and a five year veteran of fighting fires in that metropolis who admits he prefers being an actor. He also notes that Bogart never said, "Play it again, Sam!" in "Casablanca."

Q: I've noticed that when I get my hands on a new bill it rubs off and dirties my fingers. Can't the government do something to eliminate that? — A. Dander, Philadelphia.

A: "They wouldn't want to," Kenneth Feld, owner-producer of the Ringling Bros. — Barnum & Bailey Circus, says. Pointing out that since his duties with "The Greatest Show on Earth" take him to many countries, he's learned that U.S. currency is Palm Springs: You haven't heard the last of Natalie Sinatra's tragic death in a plane crash last January. Her son Frank is suing the operator of the ill-fated Lear Jet, alleging "a wrongful death" ... Hollywood: Already an actor and writer, the very Sly Stallone, turning to directing films, compares that chore to playing chess with people ... New York: Pete Hamill tells us he spoke with Shirley MacLaine (his girl friend for quite a spell) about a quote attributed to her in a national magazine. "It simply wasn't accurate," she insisted. (To refresh your memory the actress was supposed to have said that "Peter" (relative to dating Jacqueline Onassis) predicted that Jackie O. and columnist-author Hamill would marry before the New Year. Fortunately the seer didn't specify which New Year!)

Burger Uncomfortable With New Publicity

By RICHARD CARELLI
WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger is about as private a public figure as this city offers, a man who most often effectively avoids news media attention unless it suits his purpose.

But the nation's top judge found himself the center of a much-publicized controversy when arriving in New Orleans for the American Bar Association convention last week.

His charge that one-half of all trial lawyers are incompetent had rankled a group of lawyers from Illinois enough to spark a resolution that the ABA rebuke Burger.

In his annual speech to the association, Burger welcomed the controversy because, he said, it focused new light on an old problem. In the end the ABA backed down, seemingly vindicating the chief justice's remarks.

AMC To Join Assets With Foreign Firm

LOS ANGELES (AP) — American Motors Corp. President Gerald Meyers says the nation's fourth largest auto producer will sign a far-reaching agreement to combine its assets with a foreign automaker sometime this year, the Los Angeles Times reported Tuesday.

The newspaper said Meyers indicated in an interview the agreement probably would include the eventual manufacture of the unidentified foreign car maker's vehicles at AMC plants in the United States, and sale of those cars through AMC dealers.

"We will make this happen" during 1978, Meyers said of AMC's association with a foreign-car company, the Times reported.

He was quoted as saying the agreement would be a "combination, alliance or affiliation" rather than a merger.

"We're talking about something bigger than the 1954 merger of Nash-Kelvinator Co. and Hudson Motor Car Co., which created American Motors," Meyers said, according to the Times.

Meyers said AMC management is expected to remain unchanged, according to the Times.

Speculation in the auto industry has focused on France's Peugeot and, to a lesser extent, Italy's Fiat as likely AMC partners.

AMC is in the midst of a sales slump, and it had been speculated the company might drop out of the car market altogether.

In its most recent fiscal year, the auto firm's slim profits came mainly from its

But let's take a closer look. Burger's comments were made during testimony before a legal services commission in London last July — testimony not made public until November. For Burger, it was a forum he almost never sees in the United States, an impromptu question-and-answer session which he had no control over.

Transcripts of Burger's testimony showed that the chief justice said he favored a system in which trial lawyers — one in 10 U.S. lawyers ever enter a courtroom — would be required to pass some kind of "written examination."

Burger also said his observations from the bench and statements from other judges led him to believe that about half of all trial lawyers now are unqualified to represent their clients.

Had the chief justice exaggerated and offered a guess not grounded in any legitimate data? Perhaps, but a public relations nightmare for the folks from Illinois let Burger off the hook.

The gist of the resolution was that Burger's "negativism" had been overstated, that there indeed was a problem but not of the scope discussed by the chief justice.

Burger's escape route became apparent even before he arrived in New Orleans. Talking to reporters, ABA President William B. Spann had labeled Burger's estimate on trial lawyer incompetency as "grossly disproportionate."

The figure was more like 20 percent, said Spann — sounding much like the man who claims he beats his wife only two times a week instead of five.

Burger picked up on Spann's quibbling, noting in his speech: "Even if 20 percent are incompetent, we ought to be doing a great deal more about it than we have up till now."

The next day, the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates briefly debated the resolution seeking a Burger apology.

The most effective speakers argued that adoption of the resolution would be interpreted by the public as a cop-out — that the organized bar doesn't want to do anything about cleaning up its act.

U.S., Russia Have Growing Interest In Somalia

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The conflict between Ethiopia and Somalia has growing implications for the United States and the Soviet Union as well as the nations around the strategic Horn of Africa.

The fighting is over Ethiopia's Ogaden region, a semi-desert area claimed by Somalia and inhabited mostly by nomads of Somali origin.

Analysis

Somali origin. Either directly or indirectly the war involves a bewildering array of interests — from the two big powers to Arab and African states and Israel.

Here in question and answer form are the basic facts of the situation:

Who are the fighting forces?
Basically, an estimated 80,000 Ethiopian regular troops and militia are on one side. On the other are ethnic Somalis living in the Ogaden, fighting under the banner of the Western Somali Liberation Front, and Somali army troops, according to various diplomatic sources. They are estimated to total 30,000.

Are any other troops involved?
Each side accuses the other of using foreign troops and military advisers. The U.S. State Department said Friday 5,000 Cuban troops now are helping Ethiopia in the Ogaden. Other reports say there are also 2,000 South Yemeni troops, 1,000 Soviet military advisers and others from Eastern Europe in Ethiopia.

Ethiopia says the foreigners are used only to train Ethiopians in the use of new Soviet arms, not to fight. Somalia charges that the Cubans and South Yemenis are fighting on the front lines.

Western military analysts in Addis Ababa express the belief that the foreigners at least are helping operate communications equipment, direct artillery attacks and possibly man tanks. It is only logical, they maintain, that as the war intensifies, they will take on frontline combat roles.

Ethiopia claims that 5,000 Egyptian troops are on their way to Somalia and that other Arab soldiers already are participating in the fighting. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt has said that he is considering sending troops.

Together with other Moslem states, including Iran, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Syria, Egypt is sending military supplies to Somalia, but they do not match the sophisticated Soviet weapons Ethiopia has been getting.

Why is the Horn of Africa important?
The Horn, on the northeast shoulder of Africa, overlooks the Red Sea and Indian Ocean sea routes that carry the bulk of the West's oil from Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf.

The original Soviet intention was to persuade Somalia and Ethiopia to form a Marxist federation, giving Moscow unchallenged influence in the region. This plan went astray when the Somalis told the Russians they would not shelve their claims to the Ogaden in the interests of international socialism.

The Soviets have naval facilities in Aden on the other side of the entrance to the Red Sea. They lost such facilities in Somalia at the port of Berbera. The latest intelligence reports say that they are re-establishing facilities in the Ethiopian Red Sea port of Assab.

This again gives the Soviets the opportunity to blockade Red Sea shipping lanes in any international crisis.

How did the Soviet Union and the United States become involved?

The Marxist Ethiopian military men that overthrew the late Emperor Haile Selassie expelled U.S. military advisers last spring, ending a quarter-century of dependence on the United States for arms. Simultaneously they signed an agreement with the Kremlin to buy a billion dollars worth of arms. The first Soviets and Cubans started arriving in the country then.

In an attempt to save the Ethiopians from defeat in the Ogaden, the Russians drastically reduced or cut off military supplies to Somalia. The Somalis in November expelled their Soviet military advisers, kicked the Soviet navy out of Berbera and broke diplomatic relations with Cuba. Somali appeals for U.S. and other Western military aid were refused.

It appeared the U.S. policy of non-involvement was reaping its own rewards with the expulsion of the Soviets from Somalia. But the rapid influx of Cubans and Russians into Ethiopia has awakened concern in Washington. It has hinted it may reverse its decision not to supply arms to Somalia unless Cuban and Soviet military personnel leave.

Is this why moderate Moslem states are backing Somalia?

Yes. Such states as Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iran consider the Soviet threat is far more acute than the United States appears to realize.

What is the stand of black African states?

Except for Kenya they have remained silent in the hope that the Organization of African Unity will be able to mediate. Kenya supports Ethiopia because of So-mal claims to parts of northern Kenya.

But no other black African government is likely to support Somalia. If it managed to take over the Ogaden, it could open a Pandora's Box for the other nations. The boundaries drawn by the colonial powers divide ethnically related populations all over the continent, and no government wants to give up an inch of territory no matter what the people want.

What are the origins of the war?

With Eritrean rebels in northern Ethiopia already in control of much of that area, Somali rebels in the Ogaden took the offensive last July. Somalia has never admitted its troops are involved in the fighting but it is universally accepted that they are.

The Somali-backed forces swept through most of the Ogaden up to the outskirts of two key northern cities, Harar and Diredawa.

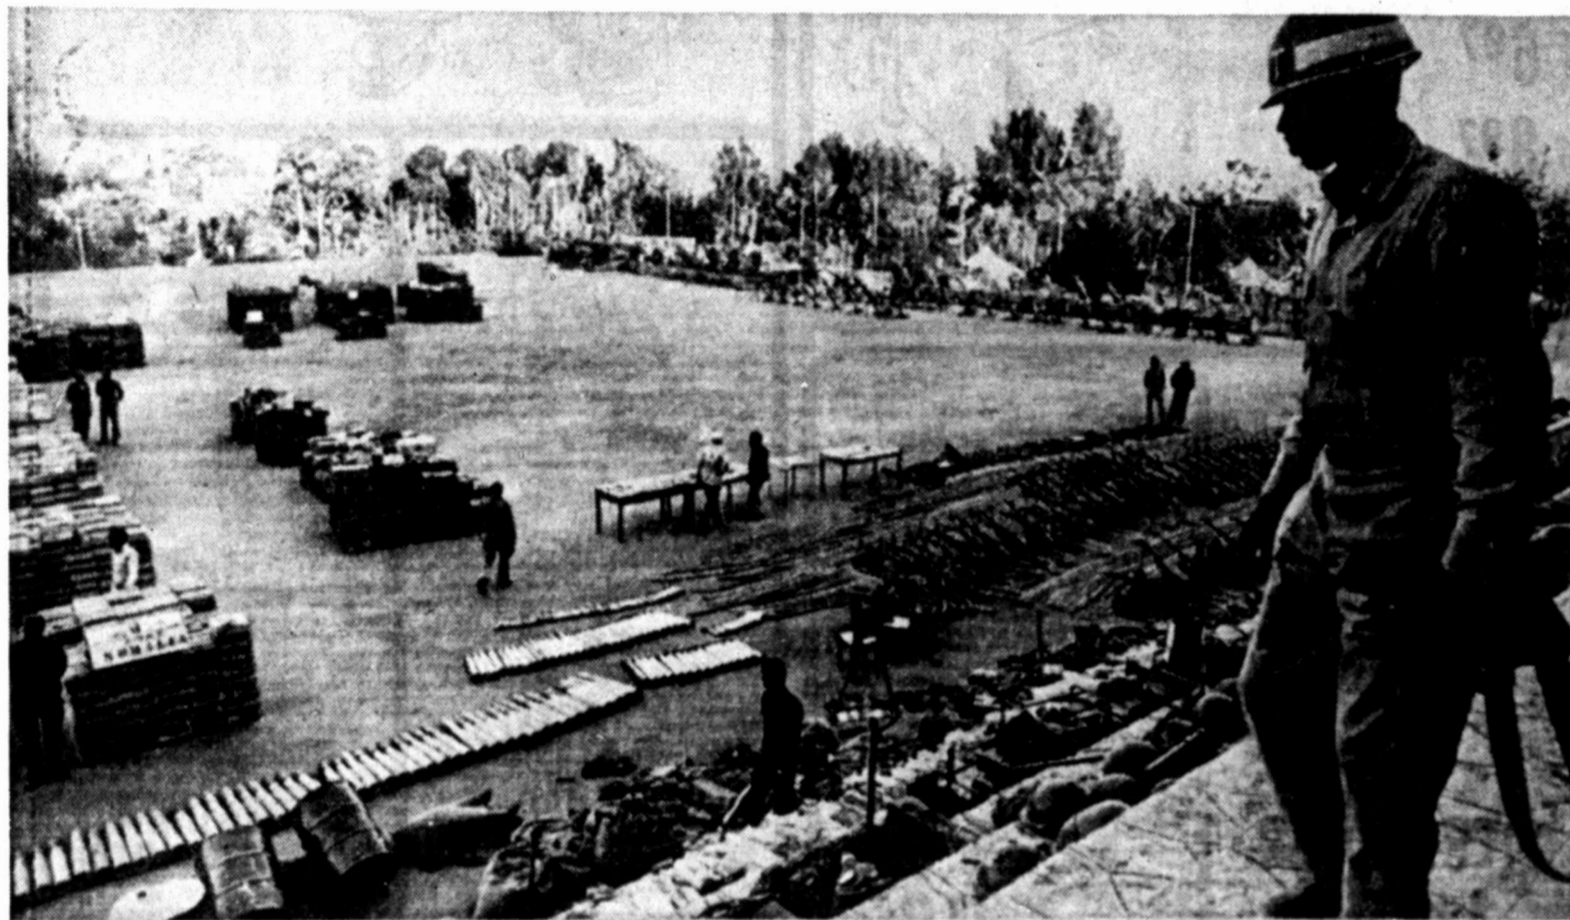

The Somalis claim the Ogaden is historically part of their territory which Ethiopia annexed at the end of the last century with the connivance of Britain and Italy. The Somalis therefore contend the war is no different from other liberation struggles that have swept Africa for this reason.

How does Eritrea province in Ethiopia fit in?

Ethiopia's northernmost province is almost completely in the hands of Eritrean guerrillas fighting for independence. The secessionists receive backing from moderate Arab states. Ethiopia has sworn not to give up Eritrea and the Soviets and Cubans have promised to help them.

Somali Chief Says U.S. Call 'Unfair'

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — President Mohammed Siad Barre says the U.S. government's call for Somali forces to withdraw from Ethiopia's Ogaden region is "unfair and misinformed." But he says Somalia is willing to negotiate a settlement of the conflict.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said 12 days ago that Somalia should withdraw its forces from eastern Ethiopia and the Cubans and Soviets should withdraw from Ethiopia. But Siad Barre at a session with foreign reporters Tuesday night renewed his government's claim that only Somali tribesmen native to the Ogaden and not troops of Somalia's army are fighting there.

"This call was unfair and not basic to the truth," Siad said. "You withdraw forces where you have forces."

"If the Americans mean (withdrawal) of the freedom fighters, our answer is where do they go? That is their home, their land. Where do they withdraw to?"

Somalia announced earlier this month it would send its army into the Ogaden War to support the guerrillas of the Western Somali Liberation Front because the Ethiopians were preparing to invade Somalia. The president said Tuesday units of his army have not been dispatched to the battlefield yet to avoid international complications. He added if any Somali regulars are there, they are insignificant in number.

"We say we have only given support (to the liberation front) but have no regular troops there. This is true and will remain true," he said.

The guerrillas of the Liberation Front are Moslem Somali nomads of the same stock as the people of Somalia who have been fighting since last summer to end the Christian Ethiopians' control of their homeland and annex it to Somalia.

Siad Barre said any settlement of the war must be based on self-determination for the Ogaden people.

"We welcome any honorable solution for both sides," he said. "... Somalia and the freedom fighter leaders are well disposed for any mediation because I don't think any intelligent man would like to fight and fight and fight and fight, when mediation could overcome such a situation."

Asked about the response to his appeal for arms, he said: "Somalia has appealed to Western countries for help, not to invade (Ethiopia) ... but to defend itself. Unfortunately, since no answer has come, Somalia has decided to defend itself with its own resources and people."

Somalia was armed by the Soviet Union and Ethiopia by the United States until last year. Then the military regime in Ethiopia broke with the United States and turned to the Soviets, and the Soviets cut off supplies to Somalia and began pouring arms into Ethiopia in an attempt to prevent the Ethiopians' defeat in the Ogaden.

Western intelligence reports say thousands of Cuban troops and Soviet military advisers are now in Ethiopia, and the Ethiopian army, after losing control of some 95 percent of the disputed territory, launched a counter-offensive last month. But the White House announced Tuesday that Ethiopia assured the United States its forces will not cross the border into Somalia.

The United States also announced that a four-ship U.S. Navy task force led by the guided-missile cruiser Fox has entered the Indian Ocean to "show the flag" off the Horn of Africa.

Egyptian Dislike Of PLO Hardens

By MAURICE GUINDI
CAIRO (UPI) — The weekend Cyprus drama in which Cypriot troops killed 15 Egyptian commandos at Larnaca airport is hardening Egyptian feelings against Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization.

The incident is expected to strengthen President Anwar Sadat's determination to seek a Middle East peace formula that excludes the PLO. And it has thrown Egypt into an unlikely alliance with Israel against terrorists.

The violence began Saturday when two Palestinian terrorists shot and killed a prominent Egyptian editor. It ended Sunday when Cypriot troops attacked Egyptian commandos as they attempted to rescue hostages held by the two terrorists aboard a hijacked Cypriot plane.

The PLO has denied any involvement, but Egyptians regard the denial with skepticism. They are saying openly for the first time what many of them have been saying only in private — they do not like the PLO.

"No Palestine after today," chanted angry mourners following Sunday's funeral of Youssef Sebai, the editor of the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram who was shot to death by the two gunmen.

"Arafat, round up your dogs!" they shouted.

The demonstrators were not condemning the Palestinians as a people. Rather, they were assailing Arafat's PLO and other Palestinian factions opposed to the initiative Sadat took in visiting Jerusalem last November to start face-to-face peace talks.

The gunmen who killed Sebai reportedly said they did it because he had accompanied Sadat to Jerusalem and defended the initiative in his articles.

Since the PLO joined Syria, Algeria, Libya, South Yemen and Iraq in a "rejectionist front" against Sadat's peace bid, many Egyptians have been saying privately they are fed up with the Palestinian guerrillas and that it was high time Egypt forgot all about them and pursued its own interests after all the losses it suffered in four wars for their sake.

The PLO has denounced the Cyprus slaying and said it had nothing to do with it. But Egyptian officials are not so sure, and state-owned newspapers reflect this.

Moussa Sabry, editor of the newspaper Al Akhbar, who is known to be close to Sadat, called Palestinian and other rejectionist leaders "paper tigers" and said "We have had enough of your trading with the Arab cause and your crimes. We will have to reconsider our position."

In its determined anti-terrorist stand, Egypt has a strong ally in Israel, itself a victim of many Palestinian terrorist actions and a long-arm fighter against them.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton arrived in Jerusalem Monday, starting a shuttle between Israel and Egypt to mediate agreement on a declaration of principles that would govern a peace settlement.

Atherton has said he hopes to broaden the peace talks by bringing in Jordan. Jordan controlled the West Bank of the Jordan River, populated by more than a million Palestinians, before Israel captured the territory in the 1967 war.

At a 1974 conference in Rabat, Morocco, Arab leaders recognized the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and resolved that it should regain any formerly Palestinian land relinquished by Israel and establish a "national authority" on it.

Sadat went along with the decision although he was never really convinced

Following PLO opposition to his Jerusalem peace mission, Sadat for the first time publicly wavered in his recognition of the PLO as the only legitimate Palestinian party. He said in a television interview last month that a peace settlement would become closer if the Palestinian people chose Jordan's King Hussein as their leader.

"The PLO has shown real irresponsibility especially after my visit to Jerusalem," he said. "Well, if the Palestinians choose King Hussein, I shall agree."

Following the Cyprus tragedy, this position can be expected to harden.

It would not mean Sadat is abandoning his fight for Palestinian self-determination. It would mean his going ahead with Jordan and the inhabitants of the West Bank — without the PLO — in seeking a settlement of the Palestinian issue.

"THE NET PROFIT CROP OF 1977"

Some producers contracted their 1977 Sunflower acreage with "The Sunflower People of West Texas", for eleven cents.

Unlike their neighbor, some producers wanted higher prices than the $1.1 Cent Per Lb. Contract being offered by "The Sunflower People of West Texas" in their Joint-Venture Contract.

Now when harvest time finally arrived and the crop developed to be the largest in the history of the United States, the farmer who wanted MORE actually got LESS.

Friends, don't get caught again holding the short end of the stick: The "Sunflower People of West Texas" now have contracts available for the 1978 Crop Year.

Long before anyone else establishes a market, "The Sunflower People of West Texas" offer you a Sunflower Production Contract that will give you, the farmer, a price for your product that allows you a Net Profit.

Only by contracting ahead can you guarantee yourself a net profit in planting Sunflowers in 1978.

When you consider that it takes less cash per acre to grow Sunflowers than any other crop, one must appreciate the fact that it will greatly reduce cash flow requirements for farming operations.

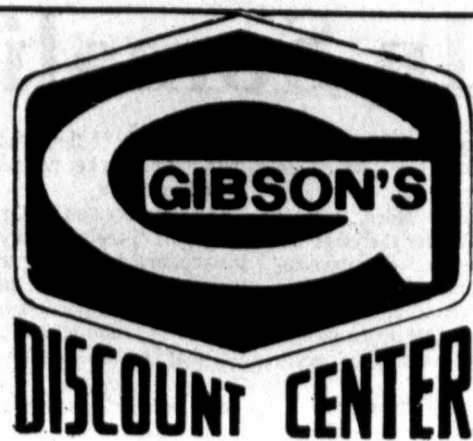

Each year "The Sunflower People of West Texas" offer new opportunities to the producer who wants to help himself. The "Plant Now-Pay Later" program for Sunflower Planting Seed has allowed many producers to stay in business in hard pressed financial times. The same people again offer this same program to those who would like it.

Results of last year's Sunflower Crop show a need for another service to be added: This year you can again contract to have your spraying for Insect Control included and pay for it in the fall when you harvest your crop, should you desire to do so.

So ... if it is Profit You Want, SUNFLOWERS ARE THE ANSWER. CONTRACT WITH "THE SUNFLOWER PEOPLE". For full details about planting seed, contracts, spraying and fall terms on the complete program, contact —

Music-Variety Special Suffers Thin Material

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — No doubt warming up for her new music-variety series next fall, Mary Tyler Moore has a CBS special tonight called "How to Survive the '70s and Maybe Even Bump into Happiness."
Sad to say, it's not so hot. It generally lacks the sparkle that marked her old series. Six writers did tonight's show, but their material is so thin it'd be marked AWOL if turned sideways.
The show, co-starring Harvey Korman, who'll soon have his own ABC series, and John "Three's Company" Ritter, has at the fads and foibles of this decade through sketches, song and dance.

Topics include clothing, jogging, tennis and singles bars, the sketches pegged on those how-to-cope, how-to-survive manuals that now occupy what used to be the humor section of many book stores.
It's good to see efforts to avoid the usual unrelated joke-song-joke format of variety hours. But MTM's scribbling crew doesn't seem to know how best to showcase her talents for comedy, song and dance.
They usually make her an eager-to-please waif, whether in a group therapy skit or in a routine in which Korman, cast as an angry, aggressive tennis player, is paired with Miss Nice Gal.
There are three moments when the show lights up. One is a silent bit with her old sidekick, Dick Van Dyke, in a crowded elevator. Another is a bitter-sweet singles bar sketch with Bill Bixby.

The last is her classy rendition of a lovely tune, "Listen Here," composed by jazz pianist Dave Frishberg for the show's finale.
But the rest — well, let us hope nothing similar appears in her new CBS series next fall. Miss Moore has too much talent to waste on third-rated material.

Cultural note: Feisty Robert Conrad, who saved "Baa Baa Black Sheep" from a planned axing by NBC this season, flies back to war tonight in the premiere of his revamped series.

Musical In London Features Presleys

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — Britain never saw Elvis Presley in person, but London rather than New York is staging an award-winning musical featuring three Presleys at once.

While Broadway these days shows "Beatlemania" about Liverpool's Fab Four, London has America's "Elvis" — an amplified nostalgia trip which has just been voted the best musical of the theatrical year.

It is hardly a conventional musical. There is no "book," no acting as such, only the skeletal thread of a biographical story. "Elvis" is more concert than play.

Director Jack Good and producer Ray Cooney have simply chosen 70-odd Presley songs and re-created them as accurately as possible to illustrate milestones from Elvis's life.

The result is spectacular, slick and brilliantly performed. Three stars — representing 16-year-old Elvis, middle period Elvis and mature Elvis — deliver imitations good enough to please the most discriminating.

And "the most discriminating" judges were exactly what they got the other night.

The theater was taken over by 1,100 members of the Elvis Presley Fan Club of Great Britain, a thriving group boasting 20,000 members.

They streamed in by the busload from all over the country, complete with duck-tail haircuts and "Elvis Lives!" badges. One super-fan, John D. Griffiths, stripped off his shirt in the lobby to display Elvis's portrait tattooed across his back.

But this toughest of all audiences screamed and stomped its approval. Kids in '80s gear dancing in the aisles with uninhibited joy made the intervening decades roll away.

Yet there is more to "Elvis" than its audiences' infectious enthusiasm. Typical of its professionalism is the way it brings on its three Elvis Presleys.

First Timothy Whitnall — hired at 16 and with no showbiz background — hesitantly sings "That's Alright Mama" into the Memphis radio show microphone which gave Presley his first public exposure.

Without a break, rock singer Shakin' Stevens grinds into the same song for an early Presley record, this time with two backing instruments.

Suddenly a gauze screen flies up and there is James Proby as Elvis at full throttle, still singing "That's Alright" but now with amplified guitars, two dozen musicians and everything including dancing girls.

Conrad, who plays Marine ace Pappy Boyington in the show (now called "Black Sheep Squadron"), seems aware that his Wednesday night opposition is ABC's top-rated "Charlie's Angels."

So he is going that three-lady series one better. His show, set on a Pacific isle in World War II, now has four stunning damsels — one is his daughter, Nancy — as regulars on the isle.

They play Navy nurses, wear light, skimpy threads and are called "Pappy's Lambs." Feminist uproar is expected, as these ladies mainly serve as playpersons for Pappy's hard-jucing warriors.

Chief lovely is Nurse Samantha, played by a stunner, Denise DuBarry. She can act, incidentally. I will bet anyone she makes everyone forget Farrah Fawcett's name.

Tonight's show does hint there's a war on, what with a Japanese strafing attack and great aerial shots of those fine old Corsair fighters that co-star in the series. But whether the ladies turn the ratings tide in Conrad's war on "Charlie's Angels" remains to be seen.

Successful Situation Comedy Starts With 'Family' Unit

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Situation comedy is a family affair.
Think over the situation comedies that have been successful over the years, from Fred Allen and his Alley of radio comedy fame, to Mary Tyler Moore, "All in the Family," even the Fonz and "Happy Days."

In every case, the comedy is built around a "family," although it doesn't have to be a nuclear family or even related people.
It's a thought that Jeff Greenfield, author of "Television: The First Fifty Years," put forward, and it holds up under study.

One of the best "families" in recent television history was the one that made the "Mary Tyler Moore" show a winner.

The key member of the family was Mary, but the characters in her "family" were so strong that several of them spun off into shows of their own — "Rhoda," "Phyllis" (now gone) and most recently, "Lou Grant." The Ed Asner show has good prospects for fall renewal.

Take away an actor's family identification, and it's a new ball game. Audiences accepted every shrug and grimace Nancy Walker gave Ida Morgenstern, but were less accommodating to the two characters ABC tried to impose on the actress.

It was impossible to transform the venomous "happy homemaker" portrayed by Betty White into a series heroine, so Miss White had to try a new character. It didn't work. She lost her family identification. Gavin MacLeod has a hit on "Love Boat," but his character is not the key to the show. Ted White has made several pilots, without hitting the right formula.

Think back. Where would Desi and Lucy have been without Fred and Ethel? Could Maude and Walter struggle along without Arthur and Vivian? The detectives in "Barney Miller's" precinct are funny as a team, one playing off against the other.

All these are extended families, but a great many successful sitcoms have been family-oriented from the word go, all the way back to "Ozzie and Harriet" through "Father Knows Best" and "The Brady Bunch" to "All in the Family."

The family concept works because it guarantees humor from the known personalities of the characters, instead of having to depend on a stream of witty one-liners.

Archie can cock an eyebrow at Edith and he doesn't even have to say "stifle yourself" anymore. The audience writes it in and laughs accordingly.

Even as sophisticated a show as "M-A-S-H" — with its mature plots and higher-than-average number of one-liners — leans heavily on the known characteristics of Hawkeye and Hotlips and their friends.

"Oh, I don't want her back—I just want to know what she did with the key to my liquor cabinet."

Senate Decides Radio Works

By STEVE GERSTEL
WASHINGTON (UPI) — On Nov. 2, 1920, station KDKA in Pittsburgh broadcast the returns of the presidential election between Warren Harding and James M. Cox. It was the first non-experimental radio news report.

More than 57 years later, the U.S. Senate discovered that this technological marvel — the radio — actually exists. Not only that, the Senate decided that it works.

After more than half a century of pondering the gadget, the Senate has now emulated KDKA and is permitting the broadcast of the debate on the Panama Canal treaties.

That it should take so long for the Senate to break with the past is not surprising. The Senate is very much taken with tradition and trappings.

The chamber may be the only place where quill pens, snuff boxes, inkwells and spittoons are still available and where those big, old leather couches favored by men's clubs are considered modern furniture.

It was only a few years ago that microphones and a sound system were installed so that senators could hear each other talk.

The broadcast of the Panama debate is a two-way arrangement: It is an in-house production that pipes the sound into senators' offices and other places and it also is made available to commercial and non-commercial outlets.

National Public Radio, with Linda Wertheimer as anchor, is broadcasting the debate gavel-to-gavel. The networks are taking bits and pieces to put into their programs although it is possible they might go "live" for some of the major votes.

There is no question that many senators on both sides of the fence on this sharply divisive issue are acutely aware that the proceedings are broadcast and that, in itself, has already changed the Senate.

Normally, the opening statements by senators on both sides of an issue are staid and dull speeches and, out of courtesy, not subject to interruption.

In the Panama Canal debate, however, almost no statement of fact goes without challenge, providing sharp back-and-forth instead of lengthy monologues. With much depending on public reaction, neither side can afford to have the other dominate.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, who was instrumental in providing radio as well as killing television coverage, held the floor for an hour and a half and managed to get through only nine pages of his 47-page speech because he was continuously interrupted.

In fact, Byrd got so wound up and gave such a fine performance that he would have been a sure-fire favorite for an "Emmy" if he had only allowed television on the premises.

Another indication of the awareness that the debate is being broadcast, was the pains Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the Intelligence Committee, took to explain why the Senate would have to meet in secret session on some matters.

Fellow senators knew that the secret session would deal with highly sensitive intelligence information but Bayh went out of his way to make sure no one in the listening audience would feel that the Senate was conducting a cover-up.

The resolution allowing the broadcast is very limited. It does not extend beyond the Panama Canal debate.

But on the basis of the current experiment, it appears certain that broadcast of

Candidate Arrested For Poster Theft

ABBEVILLE, La. (UPI) — The campaign trail isn't easy these days, as Lester J. Bourque found out.

Bourque, 35, a candidate for police chief, was arrested and accused of theft of campaign posters belonging to an opponent.

He also was booked with contributing to the delinquency of a minor who removed the signs.

Taylor Wine Co. Plans Production Expansion

HAMMONDSPORT, N.Y. (AP) — The Taylor Wine Co. is investing $5 million this year to expand its ability to process and store wines — and that will mean that the Coca-Cola subsidiary will be buying more grapes from outside vineyards, a company official said this week.

Fred Schroeder, public relations chief at Taylor, said the most important addition will be nearly a million gallons of storage capacity in new wooden casks and barrels.

The firm's champagne fermentation space will be doubled, Schroeder said. These and other additions will increase the total storage capacity to 32 million gallons, he said.

Taylor had record sales in 1977, according to Lloyd G. Magee, vice president. The company declined to specify, but in 1976, the last year it was a public corporation, it earned $5.65 million on sales of $59.62 million. Coca Cola purchased Taylor last year.

The firm bought an additional 45 acres of land which will be planted with experimental grape varieties.
