On liking city's water, and other matters

By LINDA HILL

"I came to Midland for the water. I love the flavor because my taste buds were shot off during the war."

That's the way syndicated columnist Mark Russell explained his presence at the Midland Chamber of Commerce annual membership dinner Monday night. Russell's column appears in The Reporter-Telegram.

The comedian-writer-singer praised the chamber's theme — "Let us rise up to meet the challenge of the 40s."

Russell spoke to a crowd of about 600 persons about the Washington scene. His appearance in Midland was arranged by Jim Allison Jr., publisher of The Reporter-Telegram and a former chamber president.

In the song, "Big Bad Oil," Jimmy Carter destroys Big Bad Oil and his seven sisters — among them, Tessie Texaco and Mabel Mobil — with a ration book.

"I didn't know how that oil song would go over," Russell said after the show, "but it never went over better. It means you're all masochists. From here on out, whenever I sing about Big Bad Oil, I'll picture the main street of Midland."

Russell told his audience the reason Americans don't believe there's an energy shortage is that there isn't a warlike atmosphere.

"Until Jane Fonda joins a car-pool... Until Dr. Spock burns his Exxon card, nothing will happen."

Russell said he often is asked, "Is Jimmy Carter funny? I have a stock answer to that. Nope. But he's showing potential."

He commented on Carter's sending the Internal Revenue Service money he didn't owe. "That's one small step toward a balanced budget and one large step toward stupidity. Ask not what the IRS can do for you, ask what you can do to screw up their bookkeeping."

The columnist explained the Panama Canal treaties by saying Carter gave up the canal for Lent.

"Let's keep the canal in America," Russell urged his audience. "George Washington did not cross the Panama Canal so we could give it up."

And, he reminded his listeners of Abraham Lincoln's words: "This canal shall not have been dug in vain."

Another "glorious tradition" of the United States, Russell said, is the War of 1812, "which was held in 1814 — another government screw-up. Two years were erased by the great-grandmother of Rosemary Woods."

Among the other topics to become objects of Russell's barbs:

— Government reorganization.

— The word reorganization bothers me because that assumes the government was organized to begin with. "Streamlining" the bureaucracy is "like putting racing stripes on an arthritic camel."

— Bob Haldeman's revelations about Richard Nixon: "When will those Nixon haters ever let up?"

— Carter and Walter Mondale: When Carter was trying to select his running mate, he asked Mondale how he stood with the Lord. "I've always liked you, Jimmy," was Mondale's reply.

But Mondale almost lost out on the nomination. He kept asking to see the peanut trees.

— Gerald Ford: "He always reminded me of the guy who answers the meat buzzer at the supermarket."

— Liberals and radicals: "A liberal is a radical with three children. A radical is someone who loves humanity but can't stand the people in the neighborhood."

After his speech, Russell said 1977 was a terrible year for humor in Washington. Bert Lance probably was the biggest laugh-getter. "That's a terrible comment on the year."

But, he said, he has great hopes for 1978. Political honeymoons are always tough for comedians, he said.

He remembered that one year into the Nixon administration, Bob Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and Martha Mitchell were all unknowns.

"I don't want to say any one (politician) was better than the others. They're all hilarious," he said of politicians.

Personal foibles of individuals are "an easy laugh, but you feel a little guilty about it." Generally audiences relate better to jokes about issues, he added.

Russell said audiences have become much more aware of what's going on in the political arena in recent years.

He attributed that awareness to an increased amount of investigative journalism.

And, he said, he doesn't have to change his act much at all when he goes out of Washington, D.C. "Any Chamber of Commerce (audience) is good," he commented, "because they have an axe to grind."

How long does he keep a joke in his act? "Sometimes only a couple of weeks, sometimes longer. I'm still doing Wendell Wilkie jokes."

Solons to fatten defense budget — Mahon

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The relevant congressional committees have served notice that they intend to blow the lid off President Carter's new defense budget by adding some $2 billion to it and the House Appropriations chairman doubts he can stop it.

The chairman, George H. Mahon, D-Tex., said in an interview Monday that he cannot recall a previous drive with as much steam behind it.

"I am more or less committed to holding the line" at the president's requested total of $126 billion said Mahon, but "I would anticipate" additions.

"People are just a little bit uncomfortable," Mahon said, "and they don't want to take unnecessary risks with national defense this year. This seems to be the mood of many."

Carter, who has vowed to cut the defense budget, may have helped cut the ground from under that effort with his hard-hitting defense speech last week in Winston-Salem, N.C.

In that speech, the President decried the "massive forces" that the Soviet Union is building and pledged that "we will not allow any other nation to gain military superiority over us." He mentioned that he might order the nuclear block buster missile (MX) into production if the Soviet buildup continues unabated. The Pentagon currently has the MX at a medium development pace, requesting $158.2 million for the weapon this year compared to $134.4 million last year.

Mahon said the MX was "one of the candidates" for the expected congressional additions. He said adding money for another Nimitz nuclear aircraft carrier, as the House Armed Services Committee is advocating, "would set you back big." President Carter did not ask any money this year for a nuclear carrier.

Charles W. Duncan, Jr., Deputy Secretary of Defense, said in a meeting with newsmen Monday that $126 billion "is an appropriate number" and one that takes full account of the Soviet military buildup Carter decried in his speech last week.

Duncan characterized the president's speech as "a strong reaffirmation of existing U.S. defense policies." Duncan added that "I don't see anything this year" in the way of Pentagon requests for extra money and that "clearly, we have not" asked Congress to add to the fiscal 1979 Defense budget now before it.

While running for president, Carter said he could cut Pentagon spending by $5 to $7 billion every year. The Carter administration contends that the fiscal 1979 request for $126 billion fulfills that pledge because it is that much lower than President Ford would have requested under past projections made by the Republican administration.

The House Armed Services Committee wrote the House Budget Committee last week that it believed $2.6 billion would be added to the president's fiscal 1979 defense budget. Additions the committee intends to recommend to the House include $2.3 billion for a Nimitz carrier and $2.1 billion for a nuclear cruiser. To help offset these and other increases, the committee served notice that it intends to lop $912 million from the Pentagon request for money for the Navy's Trident missile submarine.

The House Armed Services Committee, in its letter estimating the size of the fiscal 1979 defense budget, said its $2.6 billion in additional budget authority would equate to $441 million in spending. The extra money is needed, said the committee in recommending the addition on a 25-5 vote, to combat the Soviet buildup.

Three members of the House Armed Services Committee — Reps Bob Carr, D-Mich., Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., and Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., said the extra money was not needed, declaring: "The Pentagon resembles a blubber pot into which so many calories have been stuffed that part of the latest does will be unconsumable and will dribble down its chin."

The House Appropriations Committee, in its letter to the House Budget Committee, said that the money requested by President Carter "is within a reasonable range of what is required," predicting the committee's final figure will come "within a few percentage points" of the requested totals.

The Senate Armed Services and Appropriations Committees recommended an addition of $1.7 billion to the president's defense budget request. The Senate Armed Services Committee said the additions were required "in light of the continuing long-term quantitative and qualitative expansion of power and military capability of the Soviet Union." That committee said it was especially concerned about strategic programs in the Navy's shipbuilding budget.

Two ITT officials charged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is proceeding with criminal charges against two International Telephone and Telegraph executives accused of lying to the Senate about attempts to influence a Chilean presidential election.

The charges were filed Monday, the last day before the five-year statute of limitations would have expired.

The department delayed action while officials debated the risk of national security disclosures at a later trial.

But Attorney General Griffin B. Bell, repeating an earlier statement, said Monday, "you cannot decide never to prosecute these cases that might involve national security. To do so gives people a license. That just can't be the law."

Charged were Edward J. Gerrity, Jr., 54, a senior vice president, and Robert Berrellez, 54, Southwest regional manager and a former ITT public relations official in Latin America.

They told the Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations five years ago that ITT had not tried to prevent the election of Marxist Salvador Allende as Chile's president.

However, it was disclosed in 1975 that both the CIA and ITT gave money to opponents of Allende, who won the 1970 election but was killed in a 1973 coup.

Both men were charged with three counts of perjury, one count of obstructing a Senate investigation and one count of making a false statement to a separate government inquiry.

Gerrity was accused of inducing another ITT official, Harold V. Hendrix, to lie to the Senate.

And Berrellez, a former roving Associated Press correspondent in Latin America, was accused of conspiring with Hendrix and others to block the Senate investigation of ITT's Chilean operations.

Cease-fire in Lebanon declared by Israelis

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel declared a cease-fire in southern Lebanon today effective at 6 p.m. — 11 a.m. EST. But the Palestinian military command said it was "not enough."

"The minister of defense has instructed the chief of the general staff to effect a cease-fire along the entire front in Lebanon as of 1800 hours today," said the brief army spokesman's announcement. "As from that hour the Israeli defense forces will maintain a cease-fire."

The announcement came after a day of scattered shooting between Israeli forces and Palestinian guerrillas around Tyre. But the shooting had died down from previous days.

Seven days ago Israel launched an air, land and sea attack to clear Palestinian guerrillas from the area along its northern border. The operation followed a Palestinian terrorist attack in Israel which killed 35 Israelis.

The Israeli announcement came as Prime Minister Menachem Begin was meeting with President Carter in Washington and as the United Nations tried to work out details of a U.N. peacekeeping force to go into southern Lebanon.

The Israeli army claimed to control all of southern Lebanon up to the Litani River, except for a small area around the port city of Tyre.

A token U.N. peacekeeping force was waiting to move in when fighting stopped, but U.N. officials in New York said it could be "weeks or months" before Israel heeded the Security Council's demand to withdraw its troops from Lebanese territory.

The Israeli army reported shelling guerrilla positions but said the level of firing had dropped.

Independent observers in Lebanon said the south was comparatively quiet after intensive Israeli bombardment of Tyre and other guerrilla fallback positions north and south of the Litani on Monday night.

A Palestinian communique issued in Beirut said Israel made two air strikes during the night against guerrilla positions near Tyre and in the Arkoub region, 50 miles to the west in the foothills of Mount Hermon. Defense Minister Ezer Weisman told a news conference Israel decided not to occupy Tyre, the Palestinians' chief supply port 12 miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border, "for reasons of population and to avoid more destruction."

Associated Press correspondent Aly Mahmoud reported from Tyre that the guerrillas remained in tenuous control of a nine-mile coastal strip, stretching from the Rashidieh refugee camp south of Tyre to the Litani, 15 miles north of the border.

"We don't have the weapons they have. We are outnumbered," Mahmoud Labadi of the Palestine Liberation Organization said.

Guerrilla fighters in Tyre cursed their Arab and Soviet backers for failing to come to their aid. "Tell our treacherous Arab leaders that we wish our guns were turned on them rather than on Israel," one guerrilla shouted from a trench.

Less than 300 beleaguered guerrilla fighters were holding on to the city and neighboring Palestinian refugee camps.

Israeli troops and tanks seized the approaches to the crusader city from the south, east and northeast. The Israeli navy blockaded the harbor and only the coastal highway to Beirut was still open.

The bulk of the 10,000 guerrillas retreated to fallback positions north of the Litani when the estimated 15,000-25,000 Israeli invaders launched their final offensive over the weekend.

Kite contest presents more crash than flight

The chieftain known within the tribe as "Big Tumbleweed" really was trying to get his first-ever shot into the air.

He was having mixed success. Most of the homemade kites were lifting off. Some were having tail problems. And some just weren't meant to fly — although good and novel intent were behind the designs.

The Saturday afternoon event was the Midland Central's YMCA first fling at a kite-flying contest for "Indian Princesses" and the "Indian Guides" and their parents.

The organization wasn't too sound, but spirits were soaring. "Big Tumbleweed," whose real name is Walt Temple, turned to the four unseasoned judges at the event (Continued on Page 2A)

Did Communists undermine French left's alliance?

The Los Angeles Times

PARIS — One year ago, shortly after the French municipal elections of March 1977, in which the Socialist-Communist Left made such large gains, a Soviet journalist in Paris requested an unusual appointment with a high official of the French government.

The meeting which then took place revealed deep Soviet interest in French politics, and by implication, at least, a Soviet role in the subsequent killing of the political alliance of the Left by the Communist Party, which then paved the way for victory in the parliamentary elections by the government coalition parties.

The Soviet journalist began by identifying himself as working for Viktor Louie, a Russian newspaperman who travels widely from Moscow and is frequently used by the Soviet KGB to float news stories which often turn out to be true. After a rather proforma opening discussion with the French official about the state of Franco-Soviet relations and the prospects for the Paris visit by Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev which was then being arranged, the journalist suddenly switched to the subject of the municipal elections which had been such a set-back for President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"There will be no victory by the Left in your parliamentary elections next year," the Russian said. "The Politbureau has already decided that now is not the time for the Communist Party to come to power in France."

The official observed rather coldly that this was a matter of French politics and nothing for the Politbureau to decide. The Russian then added: "This is a decision by the French party's Politbureau of which we have been informed. They judge that they would have insufficient influence if they were to come to power now with the Socialists, and therefore there will be no victory for the Left in your parliamentary elections."

At the time of the conversation, the Socialist-Communist alliance was riding high, with the two parties campaigning side-by-side on a common electoral program which they had agreed upon back in 1972. It looked in March of 1977 as if they would walk away with victory in the National Assembly election.

The French official made a memorandum of his conversation with the Soviet journalist which was given restricted distribution at the highest levels of the government. Behind the scenes, the French reaction was one of serious if skeptical interest.

The fact that the journalist said he worked for Viktor Louie gave weight to what he said — say — although this also had to be treated skeptically as it might have merely been some piece of KGB misinformation. But in any case, if the information turned out to be correct, it meant that Moscow had been informed of an important decision by the Politbureau long before it had become evident in France. It meant that for all the "Eurocommunism" new veneer to the French party's image, it's Moscow linkage still operated.

Nothing happened for several months. Then Brezhnev came to Paris at the end of May and deliberately snubbed French party leader Georges Marchais. He ostentatiously arranged an addition to his program to call on Gaullist party leader Jacques Chirac, newly installed as mayor of Paris at the Hotel de Ville. The signal that the Russians preferred to deal with the Right rather than the Left in France could not have been clearer.

Still at the time, this snubbing of Marchais was also given another interpretation. It was seen as in fact bolstering the new image of the French Communist Party as being true Eurocommunist and independent of Moscow. Certainly it did not appear at the time to have hurt the prospects for a Left victory in the parliamentary elections.

But three weeks after Brezhnev left town, the Communists unleashed their first attack on the Socialists. Marchais called for re-negotiation of the 1972 common program to include wholesale nationalization of major French industrial groups and banks, and a government spending program to bolster economic growth which he declared would cost $100 billion across five years. It was the beginning of the end of the Socialist-Communist alliance.

Across the summer of 1977, as the Communist attacks increased, the Socialists still were clinging to the belief that this was merely bargaining tactics and that the two parties would in the end successfully patch everything up. The Socialists remained totally unaware of the Politbureau decision.

In late August, Prime Minister Raymond Barre gave a lunch for American correspondents in Paris shortly before he was due to go to Washington a three-day working visit. Inevitably the talk turned to politics, and Barre remarked that he thought that it was "entirely possible" that the Socialist-Communist alliance would break up before the election. The correspondents were almost universally skeptical of his predictions.

Then in September, the Communist Party hardened its demands against the Socialists to the breaking-point, in the form of a special edition of L'Humanite with a flock of signed articles by Politbureau members which outlined in non-negotiable terms what the new common program had to be if the two parties were to continue in alliance.

Socialist Party efforts to come to some kind of a compromise with the Communists were brusquely turned aside, and on September 22 the Left alliance broke up — at least as far as the common program for the election campaign was concerned. It was now clear to French officials who knew about the memorandum of the Soviet journalists meeting that the Russians had indeed been informed well in advance of a major tactical decision by the French Communists — and might even have had an influence on the decision.

The Soviet interest in checking or circumventing the Eurocommunists from actually taking power in Western Europe is less mysterious or illogical than it might seem to be. If the French Communists had ridden to power with the Socialists in the election, then quite clearly it would have been impossible for the Italians to resist Communist participation in the government in Rome any longer. It does not take much deep thinking in Moscow to realize what it would do to the whole detente process and to political fears in Western Europe to have two of its major states "going Communist." The reaction from the United States would be little short of an end to detente and a return to the cold war. At the same time, the effect on the Communist governments of Eastern Europe would be another political headache for the Russians.

Hence their preference for keeping the Euro-communist parties out of power in Western Europe — but at the same time, of course, strong enough and effective enough to influence events and keep the governments of France, Italy and Spain somewhat on the defensive.

After the breakdown of the Socialist-Communist negotiations in September, the Communist attacks on the Socialists were unceasing. Despite this, the public opinion polls continued to show a very strong leftist trend in the country. On this basis, the Socialist Party believed up to the very end that the Communists would behave like good democrats and not scuttle the chance at last for the French Left to come to power.

But Marchais and company were playing for a very different objective in the elections. They were out to cut the Socialist Party down to size and to ensure that it was the Communists and not the Socialists who would dominate the Left. On the Monday after the first round of voting, they succeeded. They forced Socialist Party leader Francois Mitterrand to agree that seats in any Left coalition cabinet would be shared in proportion to the election results — which would have meant, effectively, that the Cabinet would have been almost half Communist members if the Left indeed had won.

It was a capitulation by Mitterrand which conceded the dominance of the Communists, and which almost certainly scared away thousands of leftist voters on the second round of polling to ensure the very large victory which the government parties have now won.

About 10 days before the first round of voting, the Soviet ambassador gave a small working lunch for some French officials at his residence, and when champagne was served, he lifted his glass and proposed a toast "to victory of the government coalition." He had done all he could to be helpful.

Sweetener debated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government still is pondering whether to approve widespread use of xylitol as an artificial sweetener substitute for saccharin.

At present, the Food and Drug Administration is permitting the use of xylitol only in a certain brand of chewing gum. Ever since the FDA announced plans to ban saccharin as a potential cancer-causing agent, however, additional studies have been done on xylitol, a sugar alcohol found naturally in plants and animals.

Drill bits stolen

CHICKASHA, Okla. (AP) — Two shotgun-wielding bandits robbed an oilfield crew early Monday of 12 drill bits valued at an estimated $25,000, an officer said.

R.D. Cottrell, Grady County deputy sheriff, said the skimmasked men held the four-man crew at gunpoint.

Remember when little treats had little prices?

The nickel root beer?

Once found foaming all over America, this is as hard to find now as the buffalo head nickel that once paid for it.

The 20¢ picture show?

Sorry. Today the 20¢ picture show has gone with the wind.

The 10¢ cup of coffee?

You might still find this in remote villages in South America, but even there the price is often hard to swallow.

The 15¢ shoe shine?

About the only thing 15¢ will buy you at a shoe shine stand today is a brush off.

The Long Distance telephone call?

Today, one still does.

In fact, today's Long Distance rates are cheaper than years ago. A whole lot cheaper. For example, 84¢* today will buy you a 3-minute call clear across the country, when you dial One-Plus from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. Sunday through Friday.

Or for about the same price you can make a 5-minute call across the country on weekends. (11 p.m. Friday through 5 p.m. Sunday.) So why not call Long Distance today? It's one of the few treats left where a little money still goes a long way. *Tax not included.

Long Distance. What else is so nice for the price?

Yeast is working

The 35-nation conference on human rights, which convened at Belgrade in June of last year, came to an end without any formal progress toward the goal of universal guarantees for human rights.

But much good, however, has come from the conference.

It has held up for all the world to see the contrast between the Soviet Union and the United States on human rights questions.

This seemingly is an appropriate time, then, for Americans to consider its real significance.

The Belgrade conference was mandated by the Helsinki accords on "Security and Cooperation in Europe" signed in 1975. In return for obtaining de facto recognition of its postwar hegemony over Eastern Europe — a major diplomatic objective — the Soviet Union rather casually agreed to what it considered a trivial concession to the West on human rights.

Accordingly, the Russians and their satellites signed up to cooperate in humanitarian fields for freer movement of people, ideas and information; promotion of family reunification; cultural and educational exchanges and better working conditions for journalists. The human-rights provisions were lumped together in what was called "basket three" of the Final Act of Helsinki.

Few observers three years ago, and least of all the jubilant Soviets, realized the powerful impact "basket three" would have on public opinion inside and out of the Communist bloc nations. As it developed, human rights was an idea whose time had come.

In East Germany, several hundred thousand citizens asked for exit visas to rejoin relatives in the West. In Czechoslovakia, hundreds of intellectuals signed the "Charter 77" manifesto urging the government to observe the Helsinki declaration for civil, political, and religious rights; their militancy won support from dissidents in Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia.

Within the Soviet Union itself, Moscow activists founded the "Public Group to Promote Observance of the Helsinki Agreements in the USSR," with branches in Georgia, Armenia, the Ukraine and Lithuania. And in the West, private research groups mounted a "Helsinki Watch."

It is reasonable to suppose that this agitation, which preceded Jimmy Carter's campaign for the presidency, helped to inspire his now-famous statements on human rights.

Thus, the Helsinki accords have proved to be far less than the Soviet diplomatic triumph that some critics feared at the time. Helsinki's unforeseen dividend was to institutionalize human rights and, for the first time in years, to put the Communists on the ideological defensive.

The Belgrade conference has produced no ringing declarations, and perhaps no immediately discernible results. Because the 35 nations represented there — 33 from Europe, plus the United States and Canada — operate on a consensus basis, with each one having a veto, the best one could expect was a bland statement of principle that the Russian delegation finds innocuous.

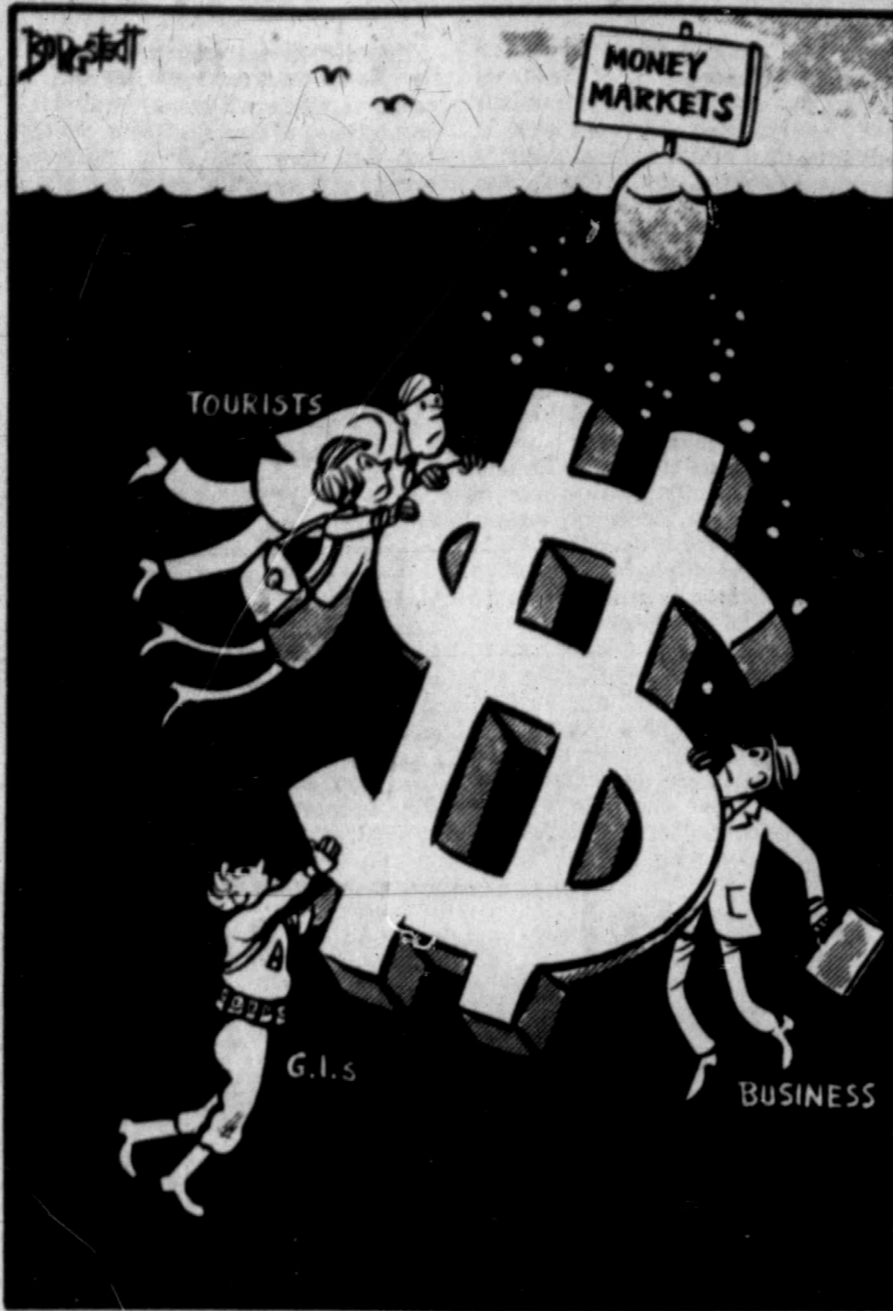

Nevertheless, as Helsinki reminds us, there is a powerful yeast at work at Belgrade. Soviet bloc nations have been placed in the galling position of defending themselves in an international forum against charges of human-rights violations by their own citizens. And even though the American delegation is said to have worn kid gloves during most of the negotiations in the interest of detente and a SALT agreement, the encouraging fact is that some of the non-aligned nations were not shy about battling the Warsaw Pact bloc over human rights.

The real significance, then, of the Belgrade conference is that it refuels the human-rights momentum that came out of Helsinki in 1975. And if the next human-rights conference scheduled in 1980, probably at Madrid, sees as much progress toward expanded freedom as we have seen since Helsinki — in as many affirmative, unpredictable ways — then Belgrade will be remembered as an historic milestone, its compromised and camouflaged final report notwithstanding.

The Country Parson

It takes a person of rare conscience to get along without critics.

That sinking feeling

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Contrary to the advice President Carter has been getting from the State Department, there's no reason for him to soften his stand on human rights abuses in the Soviet Union. Sparing Soviet feelings should have little effect on detente and disarmament.

These are the conclusions of the National Security Council, which conducted a secret study for the president last year. The study, summarized in Presidential Review Memorandum No. 28, declares flatly: "There is no evidence that the U.S. human rights policy has affected Soviet bargaining positions in important negotiations, even if the atmosphere surrounding negotiations is tense."

The classified report suggests that the Soviet agitation over Carter's human rights campaign is mostly bluff and bluster. "Their objective appears to be to bring about a significant decrease in our public advocacy of human rights, thus reducing its most embarrassing aspects for them," states the memo.

The Soviets have also struck back with their own campaign against the U.S. neutron bomb, which they claim kills people and leaves property intact. Apparently, the Kremlin regards the human rights and neutron bomb rhetoric as propaganda warfare, having little to do with substantive negotiations.

Carter was told that the Soviet leaders are too realistic to abandon the advantages they could gain through a disarmament treaty, cooperative ventures in trade and scientific exchange. Comments the report: "Our substantive position on arms control has and likely will continue to determine the Soviet response on this critical issue."

"Similarly, we believe that the Soviet Union will continue to pursue its perceived interests in arms control, trade, scientific and cultural exchanges and other areas of our bilateral relations, regardless of our advocacy of human rights."

"The inevitable strain of a massive arms race, the need to take increasing consumer demands into account and the potential for unrest in Eastern Europe mean the Soviet Union cannot easily pull away from negotiations, technological transfer agreements or commercial credit agreements."

The White House document notes that the Soviets have continued to cooperate with U.S. diplomats and businessmen, despite the congressional restriction which withholds favored nation trade status as long as the Soviets refuse to allow Jews the right to emigrate.

Summarizes the memo: "The Kremlin may implicitly recognize that Soviet economic concerns will make it difficult to delay forward bilateral movement for long periods of time because of U.S. human rights involvement."

"Under proper management, our security interests and human rights concerns both can be accommodated in our relations with the Soviet Union. In fact, failure to execute an appropriate human rights strategy with proper balance will detract from the

CHARLEY REESE: 'Soviets are kicking us all around the world'

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — An old newspaperman once said he thought Barry Goldwater would be a great president because he wasn't very smart. He said nobody who was an intellectual could be a good president.

I have come to agree with him. In a contest that requires decisions and actions, an intellectual whose life is in his head and on paper is no match for the man whose life is in his arms, legs and gut as well as in his head.

The intellectuals in our State Department are no match for Omar Torrijos in the business of the Panama Canal. Our intellectuals are dealing with concepts like world opinion and history and Latin American relations and morality while Omar is concerned only about a ditch 50 miles long which connects two oceans.

Omar The Debaucher knows that the only thing that counts is physical possession and that treaties aren't worth the paper they are written on so long as they are not backed up by soldiers with rifles commanded by men who will give the order to fire.

That's why once he gets possession and gets rid of the American soldiers and lines up his support with the Soviet Union he will nationalize the canal. He is not worried about history; he is worried only about Omar Torrijos.

But the canal is only one instance. All you have to do is read the long-winded academic articles written by our foreign policy experts and you will know why the Russians are kicking our rear ends all around the globe.

Our boys from the universities are indulging in mental orgies of speculation over Russian strategy in Africa while the Russians prosaically proceed to accomplish their very simple goal which is to install pro-Russian regimes in all the African nations that have natural resources or good ports for the Soviet Navy.

They are not concerned about history or world opinion or African aspirations. They are merely concerned with getting their boys into positions of power so they can cut a deal for the minerals or for the bases or for both.

Our guys are so educated, so entangled in their own abstract thinking, that they cannot see that the leaders of the Soviet Union are no more complex than Genghis Khan or Attila the Hun.

You can tell when a man is an intellectual fool when he starts, in serious discussions, referring to places as if they were alive. For example, it is foolish to speak of Egypt's desire for peace or war.

Egypt is a piece of dirt. It has no desires. The desires of the human beings who occupy the piece of dirt do not count because Egypt is not a democracy. The only human being whose desires count one way or the other is Anwar Sadat, who spent World War II in a British prison for collaborating with the Nazis. He will decide if Egypt goes to war or makes a peace.

Likewise it does not matter what the desires of the Hungarian people are. They do not control Hungary. Hungary is controlled by the dictators of the Soviet Union through their paid lackey, Janos Kadar.

And so on around the earth. Nations do not deal with nations. Human beings who boss nations deal with other national bosses. The nature of the relations are determined by the character of the bosses, their ambitions, and the relative power of their armies.

The bosses in the Soviet Union understand this, but the intellectuals in our governments and in the press do not. The Soviet dictators are not interested in winning the world to communism. They are not interested in communism. They are interested in armed men loyal to them controlling people so those people can be made to work and produce wealth for them to spend.

In short, they are simple looters and just as the looters in Europe used Christianity as an excuse to loot the Middle East in the 11th and 12th Centuries, they are using communism as an excuse to loot the world in the 20th.

What we need to do, if we are to survive, is to fire the intellectuals and replace them with men and women who are smart but not so educated that they have lost their ability to see the world as it is.

We need men and women who can grasp what is in the best interests of the American people and what is not and take action to protect the first and to avoid the second.

In a fight, an intellectual is like a defective rifle. He will get you killed.

Mark Russell says

Peace in the Middle East could be very traumatic — especially for U.S. arms makers.

The idea is to balance the arms in the Middle East — so they can kill each other equally.

The United States, Israel and Egypt all worship the same God — Boeing.

If Sadat wins the Nobel Peace Prize he plans to give it to Carter — in exchange for 30 F15s.

We will send fewer arms abroad each year. Which means next year we will cancel the shipments of BB guns to Zambia.

INSIDE REPORT:

Bad weather aided terrorists in landing operation

By ROWLANDE EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — An abnormal spell of very bad weather, not a planned "lapse" of Israeli security, explains the ability of Palestinian terrorists to get ashore at Maagan Michael Kibbutz for their bloody work.

Storms across the eastern Mediterranean not only forced the terrorists to stay at sea in their small rubber boats for almost 72 hours but also explained the startling lack of Israeli naval and air patrols which should have captured or sunk the attackers long before their secret landing.

Intelligence services of several nations are now piecing together the extraordinary success of the terrorist raid that resulted in 36 Israelis and nine Palestinian invaders killed. One purpose: to discover how highly-touted Israeli security forces had been thwarted by the landing force. That would answer whether there was a planned "lapse" of security to lure the terrorists onto the beach — an obviously risky procedure.

The answer: Weather, not any security "lapse," explains the evasion of Israeli patrols.

So bad was the weather that sea passage from the now destroyed Lebanese port of Damur to the planned destination of Tel Aviv took three days — three times as long as estimated. Heavy winds and low ceiling stopped Israeli naval and air patrols; the winds sank one of the terrorist rubber boats, drowning two Palestinian occupants.

The totally unplanned landing on the coast about 50 miles north of Tel Aviv, after the dangerously rough three days at sea, disrupted the attackers' whole plan (approved by Yasser Arafat, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief). That plan was to come ashore at the Pan American Hotel in the heart of beachfront Tel Aviv, round up tourists as hostages and demand release of PLO terrorists in Israeli jails.

Israeli sources believe the attackers planned to take a plane from Tel Aviv's Lod airport (using hostages for protection) and fly to Damascus. Instead, after killing 36 Israelis, nine of the terrorists were themselves killed and two were arrested.

THE NERVOUS AMERICANS
The political nervousness of the U.S. government was glaringly evident when it ordered a naval "demonstration" against Soviet penetration into the Horn of Africa an almost incredible 4,000 miles away in the South China Sea.

A naval squadron making a show of force is a venerable form of great power diplomacy. So, to show displeasure with Soviet military intervention in the Ethiopian-Somali war in the Horn, the Security Coordinating Council (SCC) in Washington was presented with several naval options. The most pointed was to dispatch the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk and its accompanying task force to the Indian Ocean adjacent to the Horn.

Voices were promptly raised in horror. The preponderance of opinion at the SCC meeting felt this would be too provocative. Never was Vietnam's numbing effect on U.S. policy so obvious.

Instead, the SCC sent the carrier task force to the South China Sea, far to the east, to demonstrate without provoking. Actually, the Kitty Hawk first went even further east, to Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines. By the time U.S. warships steamed into the South China Sea, Somali forces had effectively bowed to the Soviet-backed Ethiopians.

What kind of naval demonstration can be made 4,000 miles away? "I would say it was no demonstration at all," a Defense Department official told us.

MANSFIELD LOBBIES
Sen. Paul Hatfield, a conservative Democrat serving out an appointment, reluctantly announced his approval of the first Panama Canal treaty after Mike Mansfield returned to his native state to plug it.

Mansfield, former Senate majority leader and now ambassador to Japan, is probably the most popular politician in Montana's history. Ex-Judge Hatfield, who will be opposed by liberal Rep. Max Baucus for his Senate seat this year, could scarcely ignore Mansfield's wishes and hope to win a Democratic primary.

Both the State Department and Hatfield's office say Mansfield only mentioned the Canal treaties among a variety of questions he discussed in speeches to fellow Montanans. Nevertheless, some conservative Republican Senators are vexed that a U.S. ambassador was brought home to lobby for a piece of pending legislation. They have not raised the matter publicly only because of their personal high esteem for Mansfield.

Estes' daughter fails to quash Trull subpoena

TYLER, Texas (AP) — The daughter of paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes was chastized by a judge Monday when she stepped off the stand in his court and cursed the Mississippi promoter who says Estes and others swindled him out of $1.6 million.

Pam Tedford and six others were denied their motions to quash subpoenas requiring them to testify in the aggravated kidnapping trial of Estes' accuser, 40-year-old Don Trull.

As Mrs. Tedford finished testifying during the hearing to quash her subpoena, she left the stand and muttered at Trull and his attorney.

State District Judge Glenn Phillips told Estes' daughter he hopes she enjoys her stay in Smith County, but that if she persisted in such comments, she would enjoy her stay in the Smith County Jail.

Don Trull, 40, is charged with holding Bill Mays, an employee of Tyler financier Billy Pyron, hostage last August in Pyron's office at the Heritage National Bank.

Trull is accused of threatening to burn the office unless he received a car, $10,000 in cash and Pyron's signature on a $775,000 promissory note. Trull said his actions in the bank resulted from his being swindled by Pyron and Estes, and that he was trying to get his money back. He also denies he held Mays against his will.

Mays was released unharmed when Trull surrendered to police four hours after he splashed gasoline around the office and threatened to ignite it.

Jury selection was scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. today. Attorneys said it probably will take two to four days to select the jury. Testimony in the trial is expected to begin Monday. The trial was moved to a larger courtroom to accommodate the crowd expected to attend.

Estes, dressed in a blue pinstripe suit, sat with his daughter and his secretary.

Estes, his daughter and more than 70 other persons have been subpoenaed to testify, 55 of them by Trull's attorney, G. Brockette Erwin.

Two armed sheriff's deputies stood at the back of the courtroom, which was almost full because of the number of witnesses subpoenaed. A source said the officers were in the courtroom to prevent trouble, since many of the witnesses are bitter enemies.

Teeth, glasses left behind in couple's flooded home

By KILEY ARMSTRONG

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Roy Gilliam, 90, forgot his false teeth. His 78-year-old wife left behind her glasses. They had no time to spare when the sheriff came to take them away in the back of a truck — out of the path of surging flood waters.

The Valley, Neb., couple left their home with only the clothes they were wearing. They say they've never seen a disaster like this Platte River flood, which has already forced the evacuation of more than 4,000 people in seven eastern Nebraska counties.

About 25 miles upriver from Valley, 71-year-old widow Emily Hedges was found dead Monday in flood waters near her North Bend home, a day after she refused to evacuate, said the Dodge County sheriff's office. Mrs. Hedges was the only known fatality.

All 1,600 residents of Valley were ordered evacuated Monday by the mayor.

"The sheriff knocked on our door about 9 a.m. He said we had to go," Gilliam recalled tearfully at a Boys Town disaster center. "I told him we wasn't going. He said, 'Yes, you are.' We rode in the back of an open truck."

The Gilliams said they think their house will escape damage because it is on high ground. But Gilliam was worried about his 92-year-old brother who lived nearby, and Mrs. Gilliam was waiting for her two sisters, who also were being taken to Boys Town.

Some young Boys Town residents invited the elderly couple to join them for dinner Monday. "But I don't think I'll eat much. I don't have much of an appetite," said Gilliam.

Witness identifies man as former Gestapo agent

By SANDRA BALMER

CHICAGO (AP) — Speaking in Polish, the witness pointed to a South Side factory worker and said that he was the Gestapo agent who 36 years ago had shot and killed a ghetto woman who had refused to remove her clothes for U.S. District Judge Julius Hoffman rules in favor of the government, a prosecutor said Monday after opening arguments.

"I have very good eyesight," said David Gelbhauer, a 60-year-old locksmith from Batyam, Israel.

Asked if Frank Walus was the man Gelbhauer remembered from the Jewish ghetto in Czestochowa, Poland, he said, "Yes."

Federal prosecutors have charged the 55-year-old Walus in a civil complaint with lying about his past to immigration officials when he became a naturalized citizen in August 1970.

Walus could lose his citizenship and face deportation hearings if U.S. District Judge Julius Hoffman rules in favor of the government, a prosecutor said Monday after opening arguments.

Gelbhauer testified he was a forced laborer at Gestapo headquarters in Czestochowa and that his jobs there included removing victims of Nazi questioning from interrogation rooms when they were unable to leave on their own. He said he saw Walus there numerous times. The locksmith, who spoke through a translator, said he also had to pull wagons carrying bodies for burial when Nazis began "liquidating" the ghetto.

Anti-inflation action proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — As part of its new anti-inflation program, the Carter administration plans to speak out against wage and price increases it believes are unjustified, says the administration's chief inflation fighter.

"Private decisions are not completely private when it comes to wages and prices... The government has to be prepared to step in," Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, said in an interview Monday. While the council can't force wage and price rollbacks, Bosworth said it will use all the powers it does have, including public hearings and subpoenas of wage and price information.

Bosworth said the inflationary cycle can be broken only if the government takes a more aggressive public role in wage and price decisions. He said the administration's anti-inflation policy "will not be credible if we're not willing to speak up."

Bosworth, 35, was a senior economist at the Brookings Institution here before Carter named him to the council post.

Raisin sauce tops off traditional Easter ham

No traditional Easter dinner is complete without baked ham, but this year give your ham a touch of elegance with this raisin-brandy sauce. For a special treat, flambe the sauce at the table in front of family and guests.

Raisins enrich our diets year 'round, but they especially come to mind during the Easter season as one of our most traditional foods. Families awaken to fragrant, yeasty raisin breads and coffeecakes on Easter morning. Snack-sized packages of raisins in the Easter basket delight little children. And what would the traditional Easter ham be without a sweet raisin sauce to top it off?

This Easter season, add raisins to your shopping list and surprise your family with a new, raisiny-good Easter treat.

Easter egg hunts are an annual event. This year, try hiding a few raisin snack packs along with the candy eggs. Mothers will approve.

Or, add a special touch to the traditional baked ham by serving Raisin Apple Brandy Sauce alongside. A delicious blend of sweet and sour, this elegant sauce is surprisingly easy to prepare in a matter of minutes. Raisins and apple slices are gently poached in a lemony syrup, then beautifully flamed in front of family or guests at the table, if you wish.

Flaming sauces are really not difficult to make if you remember two simple rules. First, the liquor you use must have a high alcoholic content. Most after-dinner liquors, such as brandy, are perfect. Second, the liquor must be warmed to just below boiling before igniting.

For best results, prepare the raisin sauce in the kitchen over the stove. When dinner is about to be served, bring the sauce to the table in a chafing dish and keep it barely simmering over a low flame. Pour the warm brandy over the sauce, ignite and spoon the sauce over slices of ham.

For another twist on the "Easter ham" theme, try this recipe for Raisin Easter Glaze, a delicious and convenient blend of raisins, mustard and apricot-pineapple jam.

RAISIN APPLE BRANDY SAUCE

- 1/4 cup butter or margarine
  - 1/2 cup sugar
  - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
  - 1/2 cup apple brandy
  - 1/4 cup raisins
  - 1 tart green apple, thinly sliced
  - 1 lemon, sliced
- Melt butter in a skillet; stir in sugar, cinnamon, 1/4 cup of the brandy and raisins; simmer to dissolve sugar. Poach apple slices in syrup until just tender. Add lemon; cook until slices are translucent, but still hold their shape. Warm remaining 1/4 cup brandy, ignite and pour over sauce. Serve warm with sliced ham. Makes about 2 cups sauce.

NOTE: Plain brandy can be substituted for the apple brandy. For a non-alcoholic version, substitute apple juice for the brandy and omit flaming.

EASTER RAISIN GLAZE

- 1 jar (18 ozs.) apricot-pineapple jam
  - 3 tbsps. lemon juice
  - 2 tbsps. prepared mustard
  - 1/4 cup raisins
- Heat jam in saucepan over medium heat, stirring until melted. Blend in lemon juice and mustard. Brush all but 1 cup of the glaze over ham during last half hour of baking. Stir raisins into reserved glaze. Spoon over ham during last 10 minutes, watching carefully to prevent raisins from over baking. Any remaining glaze can be reheated to be passed as a sauce for the ham slices.

Crushed pineapple gives Easter bread new look

Something good is happening to hot cross buns, a traditional Eastertime bread.

PINEAPPLE CLUSTER BUNS

- 1 (8oz.) can crushed pineapple
  - 1 package active dry yeast
  - 1/2 cup warm water
  - 2 large eggs
  - 1/4 cup syrup from pineapple
  - 1/2 cup granulated sugar
  - 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
  - 2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
  - 1/4 cup wheat germ
- Pineapple Glaze
Turn pineapple into wire strainer over bowl, and let drain, saving syrup. Sprinkle yeast over warm water in mixing bowl, and let stand 5 minutes to soften. Beat eggs. Set aside 1 tablespoon beaten egg to glaze buns. Stir remainder of egg into yeast, along with 1/4 cup syrup from pineapple, 1/4 cup sugar, melted butter and 1 cup flour. Mix well. Add salt, nutmeg and wheat germ. Gradually blend in remaining 1 3/4 cups flour to make a moderately stiff dough. Cover bowl, and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 1 hour. Meanwhile, turn drained pineapple and any remaining syrup into small saucepan, and add remaining 1/4 cup sugar. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until consistency of thick jam. Cool. When dough has risen, punch down, and roll out on floured board to a rectangle 9 by 12 inches. Cut into 3-inch squares. Set aside 1 tablespoon pineapple filling for glaze. Divide remainder among squares of dough. Fold corners together to cover filling, pinching to seal, and round up. Place seam-side down in well greased 9-inch layer cake pan. Cover pan and let rise in warm place until doubled, about 45 to 60 minutes. Brush with reserved beaten egg. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F) 30 to 35 minutes, until nicely browned. Let cool about 15 minutes, then spoon Pineapple Glaze over. Serve warm. Makes 12 buns.

Pineapple Glaze: Mix reserved tablespoon pineapple filling, 3/4 cup sifted powdered sugar and a few drops warm water to a good spreading consistency.

NEEDLEPLAY

Waffle stitch sounds good enough to eat

By ERICA WILSON

Has anybody ever heard of the "waffle stitch"? Though it sounds like something that should definitely be served with butter and maple syrup, the waffle stitch is actually an intriguing, hard-wearing stitch that's perfect for rugs, foot stools, chair seats, floor pillows, vests, slippers—anything that's going to get lots of human contact.

The stitch was first taught to me by a German lady in one of my seminars (yes, I often learn while I'm teaching), and when I "introduced" it in my newsletter, it raised quite a furor among friends and teachers. It seems the waffle stitch has been around for some time under all sorts of aliases: my friend Muriel Baker (author of "The XYZs of Canvas Embroidery") had published it under the name of "Southern Cross"; Joe Bucher, in "The Complete Guide to Creative Needlepoint," calls it "plait stitch crossed" or "Mexican cross stitch." Constance Howard, the well-known needlework instructor, calls it the "granny stitch." Katherine Ireys, in her "Encyclopedia of Canvas Embroidery Stitch Patterns," calls it—finally—the "waffle stitch."

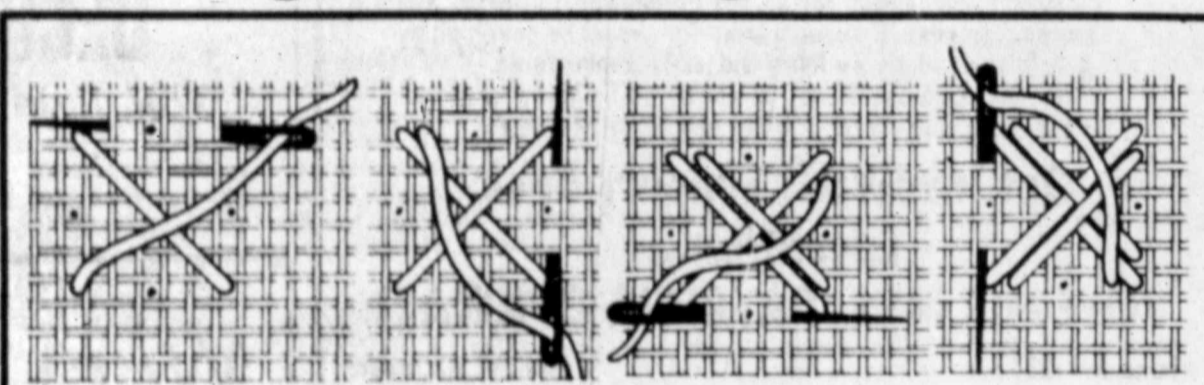

It's really a very simple stitch that looks complicated—a "crossed cross stitch" if you will—and its possibilities are limitless. A young girl I taught it to wrote and told me she's raised thousands of dollars for her church fair from projects done in this seemingly humble stitch.

The director of my stitchery school, Edie Lynch, made herself a wonderful belt with bands of waffle stitch alternating with bands of bargello stitch. She worked the first few stitches of her waffle in dark colors, next in medium and finally went to light, which gave a totally unique effect.

That's perhaps its greatest appeal as far as I can see—you can work the waffle stitch in all sizes, and in one or two colors or in myriads of colors, mixing several in one stitch to heighten the 3-D effect. It's all a matter of sitting down and deciding how you want to "showcase" the waffle stitch.

You could make a contemporary, Vasarely-like wall hanging by covering a piece of large canvas with waffle stitches that blend into one another in all different sizes and op-art colors. Or to lean even further in the op-art direction, work a band of slanting satin stitches on the lower right hand side of each waffle stitch so they magically become 3-D boxes.

One last thought: Don't limit yourself when it comes to your thread either. Bring together fine cottons with delicate silk and bold rug wool—

Waffle Stitch

To begin: Come up on the upper left, go down on the lower right to form the first diagonal of the cross stitch.

Come up on the lower left and go in on the upper right to complete the cross. Make sure your cross fits into a square.

Now come up one thread in on the upper left. Go down on the lower right, one thread in, and come up one thread in on the upper right. (You can just take a stitch across, as in the diagram.)

Repeat, working around the square. Continue until the square is completely covered, giving a most satisfactory three-dimensional effect!

luscious combinations that will make your waffle stitch almost edible!

Give new life to white walls

By BARBARA HARTUNG
Copley News Service

Q. I am moving into a new condominium and am unsure just what to do in the living room. I want to create a dramatic and interesting background for new furniture I plan to buy which will be comfortable. I want furnishings but with a clean, contemporary look. But the all white walls right now seem terribly stark.

I would like to warm them up with a bit of color or wallpaper. I don't particularly want a lot of pattern, so I was thinking about a grasscloth to give texture to the wall. I would like wallpaper because I want to close off a window in the living room and eliminate it completely. Would this be a solution, or do you have any other ideas?—S.H.

A. I think your idea of grasscloth is great. It can provide marvelous texture and a warm background without the distraction of a pattern. Be certain you hire someone capable of closing off your window carefully so that it will not show when you wallpaper over it.

I do want to suggest one additional idea that I think is interesting. Designer Foster Hamilton used matchstick bamboo to cover walls in a living room to set a tropical mood. To add to the room he covered a sofa in a jungle print of foliage camouflaging wild animals. Brass and glass in updated Chippendale tables added to the crisp feel of the room. If you could not find matchstick bamboo, what about that reed fencing that is available in do-it-yourself stores? That provides a lovely natural background and could be tacked to the wall and held with contrasting or matching wooden strips of wood at top and bottom. I think this kind of wall treatment could be effective for a whole room or just one wall—such as a bed wall in a bedroom where you wanted to create a dramatic backdrop for a splashy picture or wood-carving.

Q. I would appreciate your help in selecting a wall color and carpeting for my living room. I have two love seats on a gold background with a floral pattern of blues, greens and burnt orange. I have two gold French provincial chairs and one blue club chair. They are all covered in velvet. I also have a French provincial piano in fruitwood. My tables are also in fruitwood. The room is 18x27-foot and has a bay window.—M.E.

A. You have quite a number of choices for wall and carpeting color. I would imagine you really should consider, however, before making a decision, whether the room is cool or warm. If you have a souther or western exposure, your room is probably quite warm and if you look east or north, chances are you have a cool room.

Most people like to use warm colors if the room is cool. For example, you might prefer a pale gold to warm up a cool room.

However, if your room is quite sunny, perhaps a soft blue or green would be more pleasant. If you chose a pale gold for the walls, I'd then probably choose a slightly deeper gold for the carpeting. Or with gold walls, you might like a rust or burnt orange carpeting for your room. If you went for blue walls, a slightly deeper blue for the floor. Light green walls and a deeper green for the floor would be nice looking.

WHAT'S IT LIKE TO HAVE A CHIMNEY FIRE?

It's no fun. If it doesn't burn the house down, it will probably wreck your chimney and score you half to death. Here's how it happens.

Begin with one dirty chimney — let's say a fireplace not cleaned for a couple of years. The soot lining the chimney flue is saturated with flammable stuff called creosote. (More detail on creosote is available in any dictionary.) It doesn't take much to ignite creosote — a newspaper fire sending flames up to the damper is enough.

Once kindled, creosote burns with joyous abandon. In a matter of seconds the fire spreads up through the flue creating a draft that only helps things along. At this point your average chimney fire begins to roar and howl, sending the occupants of the house running for cover.

If you run, you'll be treated to a real fire works show. As the creosote fire builds and intensifies the heat melts the mortar between the brick. The red-hot mortar actually drips into the flue, only to be caught up in the tremendous up-draft, and these little fire balls shoot out the chimney and onto the roof. If you're lucky, the chimney will fall apart destroying one end of the building — if you're not, this miniature volcano can bring the whole house down.

However, if you stand your ground a chimney fire can be controlled. CALL THE FIRE DEPARTMENT, throw rock salt on the floor of the fireplace, cover the opening with a wet blanket and hope for the best. But it should be pointed out that having your chimney cleaned is a lot easier on the nerves than the rock salt and wet blanket method.

AT WIT'S END

Mouth says 'yes'; knees say 'no'

By ERMA BOMBHECK

It's no use for me to diet. I know that now. All those years when my knees rubbed together whispered "No-no," but there was a "Yes, yes" in my mouth. I fought the battle. All those years when I lost ten pounds every Monday (five in my neck and five in my bust), I hung in there. All those years when I embraced cottage cheese as a formal religion, I gave it my all. But after yesterday, I have to admit, I'm beaten. I'm fighting the battle alone. It started in the morning when I faced the refrigerator with my hand over my heart and once again pledged allegiance to hunger. I poured myself a half glass of tomato juice with half a glass of buttermilk and tossed it down. I felt virtuous. At lunch, I threw down a cup of bouillon and pretended celery was wicked. I had dinner ready to serve by 3:30 in the afternoon. It was well-balanced and would be totally satisfying. Broiled fish, an oil-free salad, asparagus and an apple. At 4:00 p.m. I looked at the dinner again. It looked pale, so I surrounded it with a fruit salad with coconut in it. At 4:30, with nothing to do, I rolled out a pan of biscuits to pop into the oven. By 5:00, the asparagus looked naked without a sauce, so I opted for a Hollandaise. By 5:30, I was furious. How dare my husband be late and force me to obesity? I added whipped potatoes to the meal. By 6:00, the fish looked terminal. I decided to get my husband's mind off the small main course by giving him a robust appetizer. I rolled out those little butter, cheese and flour things stuffed with olives and popped them in the oven. By 6:15, I sliced the apples and covered them with a pie. At 6:30, my husband walked into the kitchen. "I'm home!" he shouted brightly. "You animal! You don't care about other people at all. How they look. How they feel about themselves. If I go to my grave with panyhose around my hips, let it be on your conscience!" He pretended he didn't know what I was talking about.

DEAR ABBY

Invitation to wedding confuses reader

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A month ago we received an invitation to a wedding in England. (We live in Maryland.) The groom has been a guest in our home on several occasions and we are friendly with his parents. Yesterday we received word from the groom's mother saying that we would not be included in the very small family wedding group, but were expected at the reception, and she hopes that we will "understand."

We were terribly hurt and do NOT "understand." We are on a retirement income, and would not consider making such a costly trip for a "reception" only. But if we were invited to the wedding, we would gladly go.

I have already written to tell them that "something has developed" that may prevent us from making the trip, in order to leave it open for the moment.

Are we wrong to feel as we do? What would you do?—FRUSTRATED DEAR FRUSTRATED: I would write to the groom (leave his mother out of it) and tell him that it is customary to invite out-of-town guests to the ceremony, and unless you are included, you must decline. Period.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that you or one of your readers may be able to help me with. X owns several ranches in the Wyoming-Colorado area, and when I meet a city person for the first time and he learns that I'm in ranching, he invariably asks, "How many acres do you have?"

Abby, I consider this a very personal question. It would be like asking someone, "What is your net worth?" or, "How much is in your bank account?" I realize that they mean no harm, and are just trying to make conversation, but I also feel that how many acres I have is none of their business.

Can you (or one of your readers) suggest an answer that wouldn't hurt their feelings, and at the same time wouldn't give them any information about the size of my operation?—RANCHER

DEAR RANCHER: Any evasive response will do, provided it's given in a friendly, good-humored tone. (a) "Too Many." (b) "Not enough." (c) "All I can handle."

DEAR ABBY: I have three healthy, wonderful daughters, ages 7, 5 and 3, and they are all beautiful in my eyes. However, the eldest is an exceptionally attractive child with a head full of golden curls, enormous brown eyes and long dark lashes. I know she's pretty, and so does she, and so do her sisters, who happen to be very plain.

My problem, Abby, is who stops me in the supermarket when I am with all three and says, "My, what a GORGEOUS child! She should be in the movies!" Or, "Wow, what a heartbreaker that blonde will be when she grows up!" (She is 7, and she's already asking me when she is going to start breaking hearts!)

Please comment about people who fuss over one child in the presence of brothers and sisters. It makes it so hard on the others.

Any suggestions on how to handle these idiots? speak.

I'm sure other mothers have to deal with it, too.—MIDWEST MOM

DEAR MOM: There is no help for the idiot. You can only try to shut him up by signaling with your face or hand—or your foot, if necessary. But I'll print this in the hope that well-meaning but thoughtless strangers who are overwhelmed by the beauty of a child will think twice before they speak.

Dairyman packages milk for long-term storage

SUMNER, Wash. (AP)—Curley deTray says he can't understand all the fuss Eastern researchers are going through to keep milk fresh, since he's been doing it successfully for more than three years. The process is called ultra-pasteurization, or sterilization, in which deTray flash-heats the milk, then flash-cools it, killing virtually all bacteria. He claims milk can be stored weeks or months without spoiling, and the flash-method keeps it from tasting as if it's been cooked. Pasteurized milk, which must be refrigerated, has a maximum "shelf life" of about two weeks—less, if the container is opened fairly soon after packaging. DeTray runs Valley Fresh Products here, packaging milk under the Stayfresh label. Besides whole milk, the Valley Fresh line includes 2 per cent milk, chocolate milk and carob-flavored milk for an Oregon health food store.

DeTray's customers include Elmendorf Air Force Base near Anchorage, the Coast Guard, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Federal Aviation Administration. He doesn't sell Stayfresh products locally.

His processing room is pressurized, and only filtered, sterile air can get in. Working parts of the packaging machinery are lubricated with steam. Only one person works in the processing room at a time, and the worker must wear sterile clothing.

"We've got milk that's been sitting outside for three months that's still as fresh as the day we bottled it," said DeTray. That milk was packaged in a special carton, made of cardboard and lined with foil. The foil makes a tighter package and keeps out the light, providing a three to four month unrefrigerated shelf life.

although it must be shipped refrigerated because of Agriculture Department requirements, he said.

DeTray pulled a carton out of a cabinet and shook it.

"This one's been in here a while—couple of months—and it's still good. You can tell. If they go bad, they swell up," he said.

And the taste? "It's incredible," said Larry Snyder of Puyallup, taking another sip from the glass. "I think it's actually better than regular milk." "That's what everyone says," DeTray said. "They say they can't believe it."

Fraternity breaks keg rolling record

LUBBOCK — "Everything went great," Mark Null, a Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity member in Alpine, said Monday after he and several other members completed a 340-mile keg roll from Alpine to Lubbock.

Starting out from Alpine at 7 p.m. Friday, the fraternity brothers pushed their way into Lubbock at approximately 2 a.m. Monday, "way ahead of schedule," according to Null.

Not only did the fraternity break the world's record for keg rolling, but they raised roughly $10,000 for the St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., Null said.

With the help of a public address system and CB radios belonging to the caravan which escorted the barrel rollers, he said they were able to solicit a "whole lot more donations" for the hospital. Initially, persons and groups had pledged a certain amount of money for every mile the fraternity rolled.

Many towns along the way, Null said, fixed meals for them. He said fire trucks escorted them through town.

Null said because of the success of the keg-rolling venture, other chapters of the fraternity are planning a keg roll from Los Angeles to Boston.

Ad consultant judges TV commercials by cash register

By LEE LESCAZE The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Beer is a product that Harry Wayne McMahan watches closely, and "beer is a tough one." He's full of admiration for Budweiser, but he thinks Schlitz is the pits.

The value of McMahan's opinion has nothing to do with his taste in beverages — it's his taste in television advertisements that keeps paying audiences of admen coming to hear his annual "100 Best" selections.

McMahan, an advertising consultant with a library of 20,000 TV commercials in the library at his Escondido, Calif., avocado ranch, has the simple standard, as he told an audience here: "Commercials are the one form of communications that has a very accurate test of whether it's working" — the sales of the product.

He doesn't hide his scorn for people — even advertising people — who praise only the novelty or humor of a campaign, and mock something like "Ring around the collar." His 100 "most significant" ads are picked on the cash register, not the applause meter, he says.

(At Schlitz headquarters in Milwaukee, a vice president for marketing confirmed that Miller has overtaken his company's beer in sales. As for the meaning of the campaign, he said: "Gusto describes in a very positive way taste attributes and a lifestyle that has been received very favorably by the vast majority of the consuming public.")

LONGEVITY is another McMahan touchstone. He notes that "Father Time," John Cameron Swayze, has sold watches for 22 years.

Palmolive dishwashing liquid has used Jan Miner as "Madge the Manicurist" for 12 years and Kellogg's Tony the Tiger has been growing old cereal for 22 years.

He advocates cutting out "this stupid business of (frequently) changing campaigns."

"A few knocked Joe DiMaggio," McMahan says of the Yankee Clipper's efforts on behalf of Mr. Coffee. He was dropped as the company's pitcher, but he's come back, in McMahan's words, "stronger than ever."

Sometimes, however, a celebrity and a product don't jibe. "John Wayne was something of a bomb in the headache field," McMahan says, but the Duke has gone on to a California savings bank where "he's at his best."

WHEN McMAHAN is asked to name the best commercial campaigns of the 1970s, he cites Leggs and Winchester's small cigars.

In the early 1970s, there were 600 brands of hosiery and none had more than 4 percent of the market, McMahan says. After a couple of years of pushing its Leggs in their eggs, Leggs had a 30 percent market share, McMahan says with a touch of awe.

Winchester's success became a double-edged sword. When the Congress banned cigarette advertising from the airwaves Jan. 1, 1971, tobacco-state legislators and others allowed small cigars continued access to living rooms.

In less than a year, small cigar sales tripled and R.J. Reynolds' Winchesters had 70 percent of the market, McMahan recalls. The only problem was their advertising became so visible that it came to the attention of Congress that there was a large loophole in its anti-smoking legislation, and small cigars were banished from television.

"But many commercials on the air today are just not registering through all the competition," McMahan remarks with regret.

He would like more success stories like those of Vlastic pickles, Visine and Oil of Olay.

Vlastic now outsells Heinz pickles by 2-1 to 1, McMahan reports, with its cartoon stork. Commercials asking "what time is Visine time?" have helped its sales leap ahead of Murine, and Oil of Olay has gone from $6.5 million sales to $50 million after an extensive advertising campaign in a competitive field.

McMAHAN DIVIDES his winners into categories, including the 41 that use jingles; those that use new production techniques; those that employ a celebrity to pitch the product, those using animation, and those he labels "product as hero."

Product-as-hero ads keep the camera on the product as it bubbles, cooks, cleans or whatever. One of McMahan's favorites is Pine-Sol, a household cleaner that outsells all its rivals and keeps its commercials focused on its seemingly undramatic bottle.

McMahan reminds his audience that product-as-hero commercials can be inexpensive — no celebrities to pay and no special sets.

Watching 100 commercials with no interruptions except for McMahan's brief commentary takes about 2-1/2 hours and leaves one's head jammed with the catchy tunes and sincere narrators' voices.

THE ONLY big laugh at the presentation here was for American Tourister's commercial for its Verylite luggage. One after another, people approach a mud puddle at a curb. Some jump over it, but those that step in disappear, sucked into an apparently bottomless puddle. Until, that is, a man carrying the company's light suitcase walks across the puddle without even wetting the uppers of his shoes. The suitcase is very light, the narrator stresses.

McMahan maintains that this year's "100 best" are superior to any watching regular commercial programming.

Half the population is under 30, McMahan notes, and "most of them watched television before they learned to read and write."

These young Americans are "much more inclined to the visual than dependent on words; more emotional than logical," he said.

Rather than attempt to change that, McMahan suggests that educators adapt by borrowing the techniques of commercials. He urges the preparation of one or two-minute "briefing capsules" that a teacher would pop into a television set to give a class "the basic facts of the day."

"Commercials communicate in a certain style," McMahan said, "and the day you begin to use that is the day you bring your schools into the last half of the 20th century." The "briefing capsules" in McMahan's vision would be repeated frequently since, as advertisers have learned about commercials "you better repeat the damn things."

U.S. reaps dividends

NEW YORK (AP) — The open-door policy of the United States toward investments from abroad already is reaping large dividends. But even bigger and better benefits may be in the offing. In the past five years, direct foreign investments in this country have more than doubled to $30 billion, according to a new report compiled by Bank of America, the San Francisco-based institution that is the nation's largest commercial bank.

Some of the recent activities have included the $210 million purchase by Societe, Metal of France of a 67 percent stake in Pittsburgh's Copperweld Corp.; Michelin Tire Corp. of France's announced plans to invest $300 million to expand tire production; and Sandor Ltd. of Switzerland's $194 million acquisition of Northrup King & Co., a Minneapolis agricultural chemical producer. In manufacturing, the report said, and nearly 20 percent was invested in petroleum operations. The largest investors were the Netherlands, Canada and the United Kingdom, each with roughly one-fifth of the total.

Moving day arrives for many Americans

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Moving day is coming soon for millions of Americans and families who want to avoid problems should start now to make sure their possessions are shipped promptly and safely. One moving company estimates that nearly one-fifth of all Americans change their addresses each year; more than half the long-distance moves are made between May 15 and June 15. The first step to success is a check of companies' performance reports, required by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The mover must give you a copy of the report for his firm; he also should provide a copy of an ICC moving guide for consumers, BOP103. Prices depend on weight and distance. Interstate movers must file tariffs with the ICC on rates and charges. Copies are available at movers' offices and no interstate mover may charge more — or less — than his ICC rates. Movers must, on request, give you a written estimate of the cost of a move in advance, but the estimate is not binding. It is important to make sure you are not charged for more than you actually ship. The ICC, in announcing a crackdown last year, said some companies had been caught trying to boost weights—and prices.

Drink doesn't need help

By JOSEPH P. MASTRANGELO The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Thanks, Ham, but the folks at Amaretto really didn't need your help. About five years ago the Italian liqueur was introduced quietly to the American public by the importers of Amaretto di Saronno, which bills itself as "originale." Slowly the drink became more popular as Americans discovered Amaretto after-dinner chic. They were doing what Italians would never do, mixing it with any liquid that struck their fancy. For the trend, Amaretto hit the spot. After the recent report that White House aide Hamilton Jordan spat amaretto and cream on a lady bar patron, sales have increased in Washington, and local restaurants and bars have been having trouble keeping it in stock. "We have been using about two bottles every three or four days," says bartender Hugh Kelly of the Guards, "and now we are using a bottle a day. Look, I'm out of it now." In most watering holes, amaretto sells for $1.75 to $2.50 a drink. Innocent, sneaky, 40 to 50 proof alcohol, amaretto is an almond-flavored, sweet-tasting, syrupy liqueur that dates back to 1825. That's when a poor, young widow created amaretto as a gift to artist Bernadino Luini. He then immortalized her in a madonna fresco in the church of the Madonna dei Mirioli at Saronno, a village 14 miles northwest of Milan. Saronno is famous for macaroons. Amaretto has been sipped on festive occasions in the Italian-American homes for many years. It wasn't easy to find a bottle in a liquor or grocery store but it could be found in Italian neighborhoods. No one was left out at the table when a toast was in order, even a 6-year-old was allowed a half-ounce. Some more enterprising Italians would make their own. Al Demao, who has been a liquor salesman in Washington for 32 years, remembers his father mixing up amaretto in their kitchen. It has recently become an "in" drink in the bars around Washington, and Demao says, "Oh, my goodness, it's still moving. The drink hasn't reached its potential." It can give the would-be deb or part-time playboy the proper touch of snob appeal. "I think it's great on top of coffee ice cream," one secretary said. "It sort of helps settle the stomach after a heavy Italian meal." Of course, there is a dissenting view.

Gospel of Thomas could be among oldest, scholar says

The Washington Post

The apocryphal Gospel of Thomas, generally thought to be a rewrite of New Testament gospel sayings dated about AD 140, may instead be one of the earliest gospels written, says a Harvard biblical scholar.

If Helmut Koester of Harvard Divinity School is correct, the Gospel of Thomas would provide important new material for discerning the teachings of the "historical Jesus."

Koester suggests that many individual sayings of Jesus are more "primitive" in Thomas than in similar versions in the Bible and that the text as a whole may have been composed at about the same time as the New Testament gospel — the last third of the 1st century.

The proposals represent a daring step within Christian circles, implying that the New Testament is not the only word on Jesus and that other images are early and worth reading.

"One thing can be said with great certainty," Koester said in an interview. "Our picture of the early transmission of Jesus and his sayings will definitely change very radically. At a very early stage there was much more diversification among Christians than we thought."

Known only by title for centuries until copies were recovered in modern times from Egyptian sands, the Gospel of Thomas was rejected by the emerging Christian orthodoxy of the 3rd and 4th centuries.

The text does not have a biographical framework; nor does it mention Jesus' death or Resurrection. It is a series of almost random sayings arranged simply, often beginning with "Jesus said..."

It purports to be a collection of "secret sayings" of Jesus although about half of the 114 parables, proverbs and other sayings are also contained in the gospels of Mark, Matthew and Luke.

The author is supposed to be Thomas, described by other gospels as just another disciple and by the Gospel of John as the "doubting Thomas" who questions Jesus' resurrection until he had a chance to see and touch him.

Much of contemporary biblical research tries to distinguish the "authentic" sayings of Jesus in the New Testament. Though conservative scholars would place great historical reliability on anything in the Bible, a widespread assumption in New Testament studies is that the early church put some words into Jesus' mouth to reflect its needs and understanding.

NOTING that the same thing has happened in the Gospel of Thomas, Koester nevertheless finds that many of its sayings are a picture of Jesus' basic teachings theorized from earlier study of the New Testament.

In Thomas, Jesus speaks predominantly about the dawning presence of the Kingdom of Heaven (or Kingdom of the Father).

Jesus does not appear to predict his future return, either as the "Son of Man" or any other heavenly figure.

Jesus is not called "Christ," "Lord" or "Savior" — which would support the contention (at least in liberal scholarship) that those titles were not applied to Jesus during his lifetime.

Jesus' radical calls to discipleship, including leaving one's family, are strong themes in Thomas.

As in the New Testament, Jesus says he brings not peace but divisions and fire. "I have cast fire upon the world, and see, I am guarding it until it blazes," says Jesus in a Thomas saying similar to Luke 12:49.

Jesus is also the teacher of kindly wisdom, such as the advice to remove the beam from your own eye before pointing to the splinter in your brother's — a saying also found in Matthew and Luke.

THOMAS lacks any saying by Jesus on divorce. According to Thomas, Jesus counseled against ritual fasting and praying and admonished: "Do not tell lies, and do not do what you hate, for all things are plain in the sight of Heaven."

Matthew's account of the "Sermon on the Mount" and Luke's of the "Sermon on the Plain" — similar and yet different in wording and length — have been regarded by many scholars as not so much descriptions of an actual event but an assemblage of "Blessed are..." sayings and teachings.

teachings. Indeed, there are similar beauties in Thomas, but they are scattered among other sayings and without a geographical setting.

In a forthcoming book and in a paper for a March 28-31 conference at Yale University, Koester argues that collections of Jesus' sayings must have been numerous in the decades following the Galilean teacher's crucifixion in about AD 30.

The letters of the Apostle Paul to fledgling churches in the 50s, the oldest New Testament writings, do not contain many sayings attributed to Jesus.

"But the understanding of sayings of Jesus as secret wisdom may very well date from the apostolic period of early Christianity, whether or not the name of Thomas was association with such traditions," Koester said.

In his first letter to Christians in Corinth, Greece, Paul attacks claims that special wisdom and knowledge were transmitted under the authority of apostles and missionaries.

Nevertheless, Paul goes on to say that among the mature "a secret and hidden wisdom of God" is imparted. Then, without naming his source, Paul quotes a saying which Koester contends is a variant of one attributed to Jesus in Thomas — saying No. 17: "I shall give you what no eye has seen and what no ear has heard and what no hand has touched and what has never occurred to the human mind."

In the period roughly from AD 65 to 90, the Gospel of Mark, and to a greater extent those of Matthew and Luke, are assumed to have drawn from collected sayings of Jesus to flesh out their narratives.

BUT none of these presumed collections had appeared to have been saved for posterity. Not that is, until three fragments of the Gospel of Thomas in Greek (dated about AD 200) were found in Oxyrhynchus, Egypt, at about the turn of this century and a full text in Coptic (dated about AD 350) was found near Nag Hammadi, Egypt.

Despite the fact they were found in Egypt, most scholars favor Edessa in what was then eastern Syria as the place of the text's writing or at least final editing. Thomas was traditionally known as the apostle to the eastern lands and there is evidence he influenced early Christianity in eastern Syria.

The Gospel of Thomas has added to evidence that Thomas was probably a brother of Jesus named Judas, Koester says.

The Greek fragments of the gospel identify him as "Judas who is also called Thomas." The Coptic text calls him "Didymos Judas Thomas." Thomas and didymos mean "twin" in Aramaic and Greek, respectively.

JUDAS is a common name in the New Testament, the best known being that of Judas Iscariot, the betrayer of Jesus.

But many scholars now believe not only that Jesus had a brother named James, who became leader of the Jerusalem church.

"Djibouti's sitting on a volcano that's just waiting to explode," said one international aid expert who, like dozens of others, shuttle in and out here with developmental plans and dollars to spend.

Several hundred French schoolteachers have pulled out of the north because of lack of security, leaving the Afar region with no primary schoolteachers. French soldiers ride on buses that carry children to and from school in the capital. The U.S. Embassy has a 23-foot speedboat. Its primary use is recreation, but its secondary use is evacuation.

For the French, the fragrance of the colonial rose has faded. Hundreds have left since independence, many others have their bags packed. The perquisite were good but the future holds no promise. "Djibouti's finished," a French bartender said. "As soon as I can get a job in Tahiti or New Caledonia, I'm gone forever."

GRUMBLING aside, however, the French are still the patron saint of this coastal wasteland that was colonized in 1862 as a refueling stop for Saigon and Madagascar-bound French ships. A French military force of 4,000 men, including 1,000 Foreign Legionnaires, remains here and France's $100 million annual subsidy accounts for almost the entire Djibouti economy. French civil servants work in all levels of government and about 4,000 French civilians, including their families, still live here.

Everyone has been affected by the Ogaden war. It has increased the suspicions between the Afars and Issas and sent more than 5,000 refugees here from the Ogaden, overtaking the already meager available services. The loss of the rail line and the Ethiopian food it brought to Djibouti has forced the government to import everything from milk to meat from Kenya and France, making this one of the world's most expensive cities. U.S. government officials on temporary duty here receive a $90 per diem allowance and need every penny of it.

Exxon chairman gives views on energy prices

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The chairman of the board of Exxon Corp. says somewhat slower economic growth will be a necessary part of the adjustment the United States must make to higher energy prices.

"What the world is running out of... is not energy, but cheap energy. We are in a period of transition to a new era of high, and probably rising, energy costs," C.C. Garvin Jr. told the annual meeting of the National Petroleum Refiners Association here Monday.

"Somewhat slower economic growth will necessarily be a part of the adjustment process — at least for a while..." he said.

"No one can really know how the transition period we have entered will turn out — how rapidly scientific and technological progress will bring down costs and develop new sources, how far the link between economic growth and energy growth can be stretched, what new supplies of oil and gas will be discovered in frontier areas," he said.

Former President Gerald Ford is to deliver a keynote address at lunch today to the 2,400 refiners attending the meeting. The luncheon and two receptions afterwards are closed to the public and press, but Ford planned a brief news conference for this afternoon.

Garvin, in his speech Monday, also said a national energy policy cannot provide either instant or final solutions, but must create a climate within which the nation can make progress toward solving its energy problems.

"The emphasis should be on getting results," Garvin said.

He said a national energy policy "should cut away the underbrush of unnecessary regulation" and "provide for oil and gas pricing which will restrain consumption while encouraging exploration and production."

Garvin said, "There are plenty of energy resources around if we're willing to pay enough for them and if we're willing to take the time necessary to develop them."

Well, test announced

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 T. S. Taylor is a new well in the USM (Queen) field of Pecos County, 3.5 miles north of Fort Stockton.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential of 69 barrels of 34.4-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio too small to measure, through perforations from 3,302 to 3,380 feet after 2,000 gallons of acid and 18,000 gallons of fracture solution.

The well also made 22 barrels of water on potential test.

Hole is bottomed at 3,510 feet, with 5 1/2-inch casing cemented on total depth.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,872 feet from east lines of section 1, block 146, T&SL survey.

Explorer scheduled

Hall: A long way to go and a lot of work ahead

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

It wasn't the most auspicious of beginnings, but as the Chinese will tell you, even a journey of a thousand miles must start with the first step.

"We've got a long way to go and a lot of work ahead of us," said a frustrated but determined Jim Hall late Saturday night, only hours after his Chaparral-Lola racing team made a less than spectacular United States Auto Club (USAC) debut in the Jimmy Bryan 150 at Phoenix (Ariz.) International Raceway. They finished 10th in a field of 22 after the team's new Cosworth V-8 powered Lola, with veteran driver Al Unser at the wheel, came down with engine trouble just 10 laps from the finish line.

Unser was cruising along in fifth place — a finish the C-L team would have gladly settled for in this, their first taste of USAC competition — when the pinion in the car's transmission broke for the second time in two days, forcing Unser out of the race.

"I would have liked to have gone ahead and finished where we were at the time of the problem," Hall said Monday. "That would have been great for the first time out. But to have the engine fail 10 laps from the end like that, that's discouraging."

IT WAS that kind of weekend for Hall and the Chaparral-Lola team. The pinion broke initially during practice early Friday, and for a while, it was doubtful whether the car would even be ready for qualifying runs later in the day. But Hall borrowed a spare part from Team McLaren and with it, Unser managed to qualify the Lola for the race.

"We didn't even talk about it," Hall said of getting the emergency aid from Team

McLaren. "They said they'd lend us what we needed, we grabbed it and started tearing the car apart and putting it together."

Even though it was the borrowed McLaren part that broke during the race and cost the Chaparral-Lola team a probable finish among the leaders, Hall was not about to bad-mouth them. "We were just happy to have the part in the first place," he said. "If they didn't loan it to us, we wouldn't have even qualified."

DESPITE THE transmission problems at Phoenix, Hall isn't too worried about a re-occurrence along those lines this week when they compete in the Datsun Twin 200 at Ontario (Calif.) Motor Speedway. "I talked to three or four other teams up there and they told me that particular piece won't usually run any more than the thousand or so miles we had already used it during testing and practices," he explained. "So, it was due to go."

But all is not peaches and cream in the C-L camp. There are problems. Problems that the 42-year-old Hall hopes he can iron out before Indianapolis, which is just two months away.

"I feel there's something more wrong with the car than the obvious problem we had Saturday," he said concerned. "It was not a consistent handling car. Al (Unser) was pretty unhappy with it."

"Of course, this is the first time we've run it for any extended period. The longest up until Phoenix was about 20 laps I think."

"The other thing that was apparent was that the car just wasn't coming off the corners as fast as the other cars. The good cars — the top six or so. So I suspect that there's something wrong with the engine installation. It's just not right."

"That's the two major areas that I'll be working on during the next few races."

TRACK TALK: A slick track at Phoenix slowed speeds on the one-mile oval considerably. Gordon Johncock's winning average speed was 116.757 mph, a far cry from Bobby Unser's record 1972 average of 127.618. It was Johncock's second straight Phoenix win and his third consecutive USAC victory (he won the last two races of the 1977 season). . . ABC commentator Sam Posey paid Hall a compliment during the broadcast of the Phoenix race when he said: "I think as the season goes along, the combination of Jim Hall, Al Unser and Lola will come to the fore of USAC racing."

NIT final isn't laughing matter

NEW YORK (AP) — Texas Coach Abe Lemons may be the king of the college basketball jokers, but everyone knows the kidding stops at the opening tipoff.

It'll be no different tonight when the jovial coach sends his Longhorns into the National Invitation Tournament final against North Carolina State.

Lemons spent part of Monday entertaining the media at the NIT luncheon, bemoaning New York prices, poking fun of his coaching ability and absolutely refusing to pay attention — outwardly, anyway — to the Longhorns' bid for the title of the 41st NIT.

"I just came from breakfast and I had a couple of eggs that cost $4.95," said Lemons. "I asked to see the chicken. Where I come from, I never saw a chicken that could lay eggs worth $4.95."

"That's more amazing than this game."

YES, JUST another game for Lemons and his 25-3 Longhorns. He doesn't know what to expect from the 21-9 Wolfpack and doesn't seem to care much.

"I never scout an opponent," he said. "How smart can I be? I've never written a book."

"Scouting means nothing. If you play to your strength, you don't have to worry about anything. There are times when you're going to lose. No matter what the heck you know about a team, they're going to beat you. There are going to be nights like that when they're just better than you."

WHETHER TUESDAY night would be that night is anybody's guess. But the Wolfpack enters the final showdown still talking about the last-second 40-foot shot that Clyde Austin sank in overtime to give North Carolina State its dramatic 86-85 triumph over Georgetown in the semifinals Sunday.

"When that shot went in, I tore up my notes," said Lemons, who admitted in the next sentence that he really hadn't kept any on the Hoyas and it wouldn't have mattered if he had.

"Very frankly," he said, "coaches

Is Finley bluffing?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Bay Area baseball situation resembles a poker game, with everyone wondering who's bluffing.

Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley said Monday that if other owners think it's him, they are deranged.

He said baseball's top brass has told him it will cost him $2 million to get out of his Oakland Coliseum lease so that the A's can be sold to Denver oilman Marvin Davis. The San Francisco Giants then would split their home schedule between the Coliseum and Candlestick Park.

"I told them six weeks ago that, whatever the cost might be, I'd go to $1 million and there was no way I'd go over that $1 million," Finley said Monday after telling American League President Lee MacPhail and Commissioner Bowie Kuhn the same thing again.

The Coliseum management wants $3 million and, according to Finley, the proposal of the major leagues' Executive Council is for Finley to pay $2 million and other clubs, including the National League's Giants, to split the other $1 million.

"Has anyone asked (Giants co-owner) Bob Lurie to pay $1 million?" Finley said from his home in Chicago, declaring that with the A's in Denver "the value of the Giants franchise will increase tremendously."

Finley talked to Lurie Monday, apparently suggesting that he throw in $1 million. But Lurie said, "To ask us to put up another $1 million is wrong, completely improper."

Whatever Finley paid would come out of the $12.5 million Denver's Davis is prepared to pay if the A's can be freed from their stadium lease. He'd still show a healthy profit on the franchise he bought for a reported $2 million in 1961 when it was in Kansas City.

But he said Monday, in vowing to stand tough: "If necessary, I could operate the team again in Oakland. They may think I'm dead — or half dead — physically and financially. But I ain't dead spiritually."

don't contribute that much to a team's success. If you've got self-motivated people that are talented, that's all you need."

THAT'S WHAT Lemons has on a team which he says rose from the dead after a two-point loss to Houston in the Southwestern Conference playoffs.

"I thought the season was all over for us," he said, referring to the defeat.

If it's any comfort to Lemons, the season will be over by this time tomorrow. The NIT title will have been decided — not by one-liners, but by action.

STILL, THERE was time for one more opinion.

"When I drive, I always figure the other guy is going to run into me," he said. "It never happens, but that's what I look out for. I'm not a pessimist, I'm not an optimist. I'm a realist."

And the Wolfpack presents a very real threat. North Carolina State, with 7-foot-2 Glenn Sudhop and 6-8 Tiny Pinder up front, will have a definite edge in height.

But they all pay the same price for breakfast.

Two teams, one trophy. That's about what it all comes down to tonight when Abe Lemons' University of Texas basketball team tangles with Norm Sloan's North Carolina State

Wolfpack in the finals of the National Invitation Tournament in New York's Madison Square Garden. Posing by the beautiful award that will go to tonight's winner is Texas' Gary

Goodner, Ron Baxter and Lemons, and Sloan and his three stars, Hawkeye Whitney, Clyde Austin and Tiny Pinder. (AP Laserphoto)

Robertson looking for secret to good health

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Seattle, the Mariners better make sure their medical insurance is paid up.

"My main objective this year is to stay healthy for a change," Robertson says. "I haven't been too successful at that ever since I first put on a uniform."

Robertson came to the majors with the Pittsburgh Pirates late in 1967 but missed the entire 1968 season due to a kidney operation. He underwent surgery on both knees following the 1974 campaign and went under the knife again for an operation on his right knee in October 1975.

THE PIRATES released him following spring training a year ago and last June he had back surgery to correct a disc problem, so 1977 was another washout.

Along the way, Robertson's bat also showed signs of a terminal illness — including a 1-for-14 start this spring with the Mariners, who signed him as a free agent last November. But the lumber came to life Monday.

The 31-year-old first baseman, owner of 106 major league home runs, rapped off four hits, including a tie-breaking two-run homer, an RBI double and a run-scoring single as the Mariners shelled the Milwaukee Brewers 10-2 in an exhibition game.

"I'm just lucky to get back in baseball," Robertson says. "I'm very grateful that the Mariners gave me that chance. As you know, I've had some problems."

ROY WHITE and Cliff Johnson homered but World Series home run hero Reggie Jackson had some problems with Atlanta's rookie pitching brothers, Mickey and Rickey Mahler, as the New York Yankees defeated the Braves 8-3.

After Jackson fouled off a bunt attempt in the fourth inning, Mickey Mahler's next delivery brushed him back. New York's World Series hero then grounded to first base and appeared to go out of his way to make contact with Mahler as the pitcher covered the bag.

"His feet hit my heels and he kind of brushed me, but not where you'd get spiked," Mahler said. "I threw him one in tight after the bunt attempt, but it wasn't intentional. I wish he'd bunt all the time and keep the ball in the ballpark. It looked to me like I was away from the bag, but if he said he didn't deliberately step on me he must not have."

WORDS WERE exchanged, but no blows were struck.

Two innings later, brotherly love took over. Ricky Mahler's first pitch to Jackson bounced behind him and the next one hit him on the right thigh.

"I don't think it's right what he did," Rickey said. "He went out of his way to get him."

Was Rickey trying to get even? He gave two answers.

No. 1 — "The pitch slipped."

No. 2 — "Of course."

Said Jackson:

"I was just trying to protect myself. I don't know if he threw at me.

Because it's the spring doesn't make any difference. I don't like to see people do that. I don't want to fight anybody."

JACKSON WENT to first base, umpire Greg Kosc warned Mahler and the incident ended there.

Elsewhere: —Reggie Smith, Dusty Baker, Rick Monday and Myron White homered and Don Sutton hurled six strong innings, leading the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 14-1 rout of the Texas Rangers.

—Randy Jones also hurled six impressive innings and rookie sensation Ossie Smith delivered a two-run double as the San Diego Padres downed the San Francisco Giants 5-2.

—Dave Rozema worked three perfect innings to help the Detroit Tigers defeat the Cincinnati Reds 6-1 and the Baltimore Orioles whipped the Kansas City Royals 7-1 as Eddie Murray, Ken Singleton and Larry Harlow drove in two runs apiece.

—Bob Molinaro's two-run single sparked a Chicago rally that lifted the White Sox past the New York Mets 9-8 and Jose Morales' three-run homer powered the Montreal Expos over the Minnesota Twins 5-3.

—Dave Parker hit a three-run homer in the Pittsburgh Pirates' 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox and the Toronto Blue Jays ended a six-game losing streak by downing the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2.

—The Oakland A's reached Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley for four runs in five innings and beat the Indians 8-4 while a pair of doubles by Ike Hampton helped the California Angels defeat California State University-Fullerton 11-9.

Busby battling the odds

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — The words are frightening enough to send shivers down the spine of any pitcher who hears them.

Steve Busby knows them well. The doctors examined his ailing shoulder two years ago and the diagnosis was those three red words — torn rotator cuff. It's like amputating a pitcher's arm when you tell him the rotator cuff is torn and that's what they told the young Kansas City right-hander who was one of baseball's best pitchers before getting hurt.

For two years, Busby has been on the pitching scrap heap, which is where torn rotator cuffs send most hurlers. No one has ever come back from the injury, but that doesn't mean no one ever will, and that's why Busby is in training camp with the Royals this spring.

HE'S TRYING to come back. "What I've seen of him so far has been amazing," said Whitey Herzog, manager of the Royals. "Throwing as well as he is, there's a definite possibility that he'll make our club."

Herzog used him for two shutout innings against Cincinnati and then he went three against the Chicago White Sox. Busby is due to pitch again Wednesday when the Royals face St. Louis.

"We'll stretch him out a little longer this time," the manager said.

Busby can't wait. The five innings he's pitched this spring are two more than he worked all last year, when a brief comeback attempt went up in smoke.

HE WAS assigned to Daytona Beach, the Royals' Class A Florida State League franchise. In three innings, he allowed 11 hits and five runs. It was not promising.

"That was the low point," said

Busby, who once was the ace of the Royals' pitching staff and remains the only man in major league history to throw a no-hitter in each of his first two big league seasons.

But Busby refused to give up. He underwent knee surgery and worked hard all winter getting in shape for one more go-round.

"I wanted to try again," he said. The Royals were happy to have him back and so far, the right-hander has done everything Herzog could ask.

He's thrown batting practice and Wednesday will be his third game," the manager said. "He hasn't had a day yet where he was supposed to throw and couldn't. It's just a matter of time. He's doing fine, but there's a long way to go."

Busby has one important factor working in his corner, according to Herzog.

"He can pitch at 70 percent of efficiency and still do the job," the manager said. "He was never a flamethrower. He was always a pitcher, a guy who could cut the ball and turn it over."

THE FIRST batter Busby faced this spring was Pete Rose, who whistled a single past him. "I thought to myself, 'Welcome back,'" the pitcher said.

But Rose has singled off a few other guys, too. Busby recovered nicely, retiring the next six Reds batters in order.

Against the White Sox, he allowed two runs in the three innings he worked, and, more importantly, suffered no aftereffects.

HERZOG AND the rest of the Royals are rooting hard for Busby to make it all the way back. They remember the young pitcher who won 56 games in three full seasons with an arm that looked like they would build the franchise around it.

Ironically, in each of the two years he's been gone, Kansas City has won the American League West championship. Busby has watched those teams from the sidelines. He'd like to be a part of the Royals' next championship club, and if he keeps pitching as well as he has so far, it could happen.

Tech may join ACC

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech, an independent college football power, apparently will be invited to join the Atlantic Coast Conference sometime this spring. The Atlanta Constitution reported today.

"We have talked with Tech's athletic director, Doug Weaver, earlier this month and we had an excellent meeting with him," the newspaper quoted ACC Commissioner Bob James as saying.

"I haven't met with him since early this month, but I think we'll be getting together again," James said.

ACC officials are expected to vote May 16 whether to expand their conference to eight members with Georgia Tech as the eighth. The Constitution reported today.

A report in the Atlanta Journal Monday said the Tech Athletic Board is expected to approve the ACC membership at its regular monthly meeting March 30.

Weaver said he would probably be back in touch with ACC officials as early as this weekend.

Dynasty in the making? Irish stacked with frosh

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — "I'm still against the freshman rule," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps with an Irish twinkle in his eye. "But, of course, you've got to be a hypocrite by playing the freshmen."

While he opposes the rule which allows college freshmen to play varsity basketball, Phelps by no means straps his first-year men to the bench.

On the contrary, the Notre Dame newcomers played with regularity all season, and it was freshman Kelly Tripucka who spearheaded the Irish sweep through the Midwest Regional and into Saturday's NCAA final four at St. Louis.

"By playing the freshmen early we established depth," Phelps said. "Without that depth we wouldn't be in the final four."

Notre Dame football quarterback Frank Tripucka. "If they want to pound, I'll pound right back. I guess that comes from being pounded on by my brothers when we played on the playgrounds."

One of his brothers, Tracy, is now an assistant coach at Fordham. Another brother, T.K., plays for Fordham. A third brother, Todd, was the nation's leading scorer while playing for Lafayette during the 1975-76 season.

coach was 63, he left it up to us to work ourselves into shape and he wasn't emotional."

The 36-year-old Phelps, of course, is just the opposite.

"My brother's told me it would take time to become accustomed to a college coach, and it has," Tripucka said, "but I'm happy to be in Digger's plans."

The sixth-ranked Irish, 23-6, will play No. 7 Duke in Saturday's semifinals. Then, if they get by the Blue Devils, they will meet the winner of the Kentucky-Arkansas semifinal next Monday night for the NCAA championship.

Cavs 'atrocious' as they hit pits

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Cavaliers basketball Coach Bill Fitch called his team's 127-104 loss to the Indiana Pacers "atrocious," but the Indiana coach said he would like to have 60 nights like it.

Fitch said he does not know how the team will pull itself out of the "bottom of the pit" to get back into the playoff race.

"We couldn't even make a layup in the end of the game," he said.

FOUR INDIANA starters combined for 102 points to lead the team to the victory Monday night.

Pacer Ricky Sobers scored 29 points, James Edwards scored 25 and Dan Roundfield and Mike Bantom each had 24 points to give the Pacers their eighth road win of the season to go with their 27 losses.

"I can't play guys like we did tonight through the whole National Basketball Association season," said Indiana Coach Bob Leonard. "But when I go to my bench, I get hurt."

Indiana jumped out front early in the game and the Cavaliers never could quite catch them. Cleveland players only made 35 percent of their shots from the field in the first half, compared to 53 percent for the Pacers.

BANTOM SCORED 16 first-half points to give the Pacers a 55-48 lead at intermission. Sobers took command in the second half, scoring 19 points.

It was the second loss in a row for the Cavaliers, whose record dropped to 34-37.

Cleveland pulled to within two points, 66-64, with 5:17 to play in the third quarter on a jump shot by Elmore Smith. But Indiana outscored the Cavs 18-10 for the remainder of the quarter to take an 84-74 lead into the final period.

In the fourth quarter, Roundfield had 10 points and Sobers 9 to put the game away for the Pacers.

Smith led the Cavaliers in scoring with 22 points and Campy Russell and Austin Carr each scored 18 points.

Shavers, Holmes tangle in Las Vegas

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Earnie Shavers once made less than $5 an hour as a General Motors assembly line in Lordstown, Ohio. He stepped into the ring for $428 a fight.

Since his near upset of Muhammad Ali, the 33-year-old Warren, Ohio, heavyweight has leaped into the $300,000-plus class for a single bout.

The next comes Saturday against Larry Holmes before a Caesars Palace crowd in Las Vegas and millions more on national television (ABC).

The Shavers-Holmes winner is in line for a title bout against Ken Norton, now recognized as the world heavyweight champion by the World Boxing Council. Leon Spinks is the champion in the rival World Boxing Association's eyes.

Shavers and his backers think Spinks' shocker over Ali should have happened to them.

"I don't think it was a matter of me fighting Ali too soon as it was fighting him in the wrong town," said Shavers. "If I would have fought him in Vegas (where Spinks defeated Ali last month), I would've won. But New York is Ali's town."

Shavers' trainer Frank Luca said: "I keep telling Earnie every day that Spinks has our title and that the beating Earnie gave Ali helped Spinks' situation. The fight against Earnie to ok a lot out of Ali."

Still, Shavers' lifestyle has swung upward since his narrow decision with Ali in Madison Square Garden.

"From last September to this September," said Luca, "we will make at least $1 million."

This is what it's like for a man who once retired after he saw his career all but destroyed by a first round knockout by Jerry Quarry in 1973.

Shavers just bought a Cadillac to go with his Rolls Royce. The license plates on his new car read ACORN — the name Ali tagged him with because of his baldness.

He's living in an expensive rented house while he trains in Las Vegas. He steps out his back door onto the fourth tee at the Desert Inn Country Club. His neighbors include Dean Martin, Engelbert Humperdinck and Sergio Franchi.

Allen likes Kentucky

DALLAS (AP) — Since Sonny Allen is 0-5 against three of the final four in the NCAA basketball playoffs in St. Louis, the Southern Methodist University basketball coach qualifies as something of a shell-shocked expert on the possible winner.

His choice? Kentucky.

SMU took a 110-86 thumping at Kentucky in the opening game of the season. The Mustangs later lost to Duke 91-87 in Dallas and to Arkansas three times.

"Kentucky is really a tournament-experienced team," said Allen. "They have four seniors who got to the final four as freshmen and lost to UCLA. As sophomores they won the NIT (National Invitation Tournament) and last year as juniors they got beat in the Eastern Regional finals by North Carolina."

Allen said the Wildcats were "the most physical team in college basketball. And they have that great Kentucky tradition which can be a big factor in tournament play. They've won four national titles."

Arkansas rates a chance from Allen.

"Arkansas is certainly capable because they've won more games than any team in college basketball," said Allen. "They also are tournament experienced but not like Kentucky. They have trouble against the press but Kentucky is more of a half-court defensive team. Arkansas can handle a half-court press."

Allen said Duke is "playing great basketball even if they are the youngest to make it into the final four. They are a big surprise. Nobody expected them to be anything this year. They are a very intelligent team. They are young but smart. They have that enthusiasm and desire."

He added: "I've seen Notre Dame so much on television I feel like we've played them. All that TV exposure is like a tournament atmosphere. It should help them."

"All in all, the final games should be great but Kentucky should prevail."

Alaska under gun

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The University of Alaska-Anchorage has received official notification that its varsity men's basketball program is under investigation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Dr. Wendell Wolfe, UAA chancellor, said a preliminary inquiry by the NCAA has resulted in charges of "sufficient substance and reliability to warrant an official inquiry."

"UAA is currently cooperating with the NCAA in responding to the allegations," Wolfe said.

He said the charges "remain confidential at the request of the NCAA, pending the completion of their investigation."

An NCAA spokesman declined comment.

Basketball Coach Bob Rachal said most of the problems involved the school's transition this season from National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics to NCAA status.

"Neither I, nor anyone else connected with the program, have knowingly violated NCAA rules," he said.

Rachal said some of the alleged violations, which he declined to specify, involve complicated rules interpretations. He said there isn't a school in the nation that hasn't had problems with interpreting these regulations.

JIM MURRAY Derek starting over

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

He was once the highest-paid athlete in history. He used to light cigars with $50 bills, gave his golf clubs to caddies after only 18 holes.

He got $5,000 a minute. He was the only player in history to have a full-time chauffeur. He left cars as tips. In a world gone mad, he was in his element. He lived like Calligula. A pharaoh's tomb looked tawdry compared to his 28-room mansion in its heyday. He leased a train to bring his friends to the grand opening.

His job was to score goals, and he did. For $2.65 million, the largest contract ever offered anybody at any time, he delivered three goals. You hear right. Three. That comes out to $883,000 per goal. He performed this hat trick in eight (count 'em) games.

But that was nothing. Next, he got $1 million for doing exactly nothing. Except going away and staying there. That record may never be equaled.

He became a movie star — in a porno flick. He was on the Johnny Carson show more often than Johnny Carson. He was a paid-up member of that strange, motley cast of characters known as "celebrities," who pass for aristocracy in this country.

IT DESTROYED him. The Ballad of Derek Sanderson is a lament, country and western all the way. He's a casualty of these hedonistic times, like a maiden thrown into a volcano. The two-million-dollar-hockey-player disappeared into a haze of booze and barbiturates that muted his skills and wits so thoroughly that his team paid him $1 million just to get lost.

Derek Sanderson was never a great hockey player. I mean, he wasn't Bobby Orr or Bobby Hull or even Bobby Clarke. He was just a good center ice man with a talent for killing penalties. He was as undisciplined as a wolf. He was a natural athlete, whipcord-tough, quick of hand and eye, and fearless. He would have been perfect for the role of Billy the Kid.

Charlie Boyd wins moto-cross trophy

Charlie Boyd won the Grand Trophy in the doubleheader Bicycle Moto-Cross races Saturday and Sunday, which was sponsored by the Midland West Side Optimist Club.

Boyd won six races in the seven-and-under division, Scott Mabry, in the 12-year-old division, was eligible for the sweep stakes going into Sunday's race, but crashed in his last race.

A Bicycle Association membership was given to Bill Rogers for winning all his races. The Dad's race was won by Daniel Speay and a special trophy was awarded to E. C. Bohannon for sponsoring the most racers.

What set Sanderson apart was his lifestyle. It was part Errol Flynn, part King Farouk. In the staid old National Hockey League, he was the first to play in shoulder-length hair and Turkish-brigand moustache. He was on the great Boston Bruins Stanley Cup teams in the early '70s, and he owned all or part of several discotheques in Boston at the time. He patronized even those he didn't own. He was Boston's most available bachelor.

But, that was the way it was. That was back when he was young.

DEREK SANDERSON is now a creaky 31. The skates seem to wobble, the long hair looks more pathetic than revolutionary, the net seems so far away, and killing two-minute penalties seems like a skate across Hudson Bay in a high wind.

When you need a "comeback" at the age of 31, you have managed badly someplace along the line. Derek Sanderson realized it one night last year when he called his friend and agent, Bob Woolf — the man who negotiated the million-dollar contracts for him in the days when the skates flashed and the puck flew — and told him the masquerade was over. He was putting an end to the absurd character he had created. He was going to kill himself.

Woolf talked him out of it. He sent Sanderson out to get a new pair of skates, to dry out, and start over. "As sad as it was, it was the first call I had had from Derek in years where he was talking sense and not from some high where you couldn't get on a level with him."

Sanderson went back to amateur hockey, which isn't even the minor leagues. It's a proving ground for 16-year-olds, not 30-year-olds. But Derek made it.

THE OTHER night at the Forum, a melancholy figure wearing uniform No. 16 for the Pittsburgh Penguins skated onto the ice. The fans hooted. "Sanderson, you can't even skate any more!" "Sanderson, you need double runners!" "Hey, Sanderson, have you got change for a quarter?"

The debut was otherwise undistinguished. In the locker room afterwards, No. 16 was a tired iceman. He was the last to leave the dressing room. He used to be the first.

"Do I have any regrets?" he greeted a newsman's query. "No. Except for leaving Boston for Philadelphia in the first place. The money? It's all gone. I bought the world a drink."

"Did you ever hear of a book called 'Brewster's Million'?" the reporter wondered. "A guy had to get rid of a million dollars in a year, and he couldn't do it."

Sanderson smiled. "I read it," he said. "He could only buy three cars or four houses, for instance. Well, I could. And did. Getting rid of a million wasn't hard. In fact, I didn't even have to gamble."

WAS THIS all behind him? Sanderson laughed. "Well, the money is. But, yes, now I want to play hockey. I didn't want to before. I was just going through the motions. But I hadn't skated in a year. I had to get in shape at my own expense — $4,000. I went down to amateur hockey, which is humiliating but necessary." He grinned. "You only come this way once. I don't regret the money. What I regret spending is what I spent of me."

To Bob Woolf, it's just a remake, or a reversal of the lines of A.E. Housman to read now: "Now you will swell the route; Of lads who wore their honors out; Runners whom renown outran; And the name died before the man."

Bill Walton on the run

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton, out of National Basketball Association action since Feb. 28 because of surgery on his right foot, has begun running but was unable to practice with the Portland Trail Blazers Monday.

A team spokesman said Walton probably would miss Tuesday night's game against the Seattle SuperSonics in Portland.

Maurice Lucas also was expected to remain out of the Portland lineup at least until the Blazers begin a three-game road trip later this week. A tendon in his left foot is strained.

The Blazers learned that Lloyd Neal, expected to remain out until about May 1 with strained ligaments in his left knee, may rejoin the team before the regular season ends April 9.

The game will be the Sonics' first appearance in Portland with Lenny Wilkens as coach. Wilkens was fired as coach of the Blazers after the 1975-76 season.

Jeff the giant killer upsets Jimbo

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Capitalizing on unforced errors, unseeded Jeff Borowiak knocked No. 1 seed Jimmy Connors out of the single-elimination $200,000 Tournament of Champions with a 6-3, 6-0 first-round victory.

The defeat, before a capacity crowd of 3,200 at the Hilton Pavilion Monday night, was only Connor's third before a Las Vegas audience in his career. The previous losses were suffered at the hands of Romania's Ilie Nastase and Dick Stockton.

In the first match Monday night, fifth-seeded Sandy Mayer defeated Nastase 6-2, 6-2.

Billie Jean wandering

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billie Jean King hopes her mind can keep up with her body during her return to championship tennis.

King defeated Romania's Florenza Mihai 6-4, 6-4 Monday night in the opening round of the $100,000 women's pro tennis tournament at the Palestra. But she admitted it wasn't an easy win.

"I feel fine physically, but my brain isn't here," said the 34-year-old player. "I've got to try to make maximum effort on each shot...get totally involved every moment. Tonight, my mind was wandering."

Mihai, 22, last year's runnerup for the French championship, challenged in the first set and moved up from 2-5 to 4-5. She then yielded service on the second set point on a pass down the line.

Mihai fought back again in the second set from 1-3 to tie at 3. But the No. 6 seeded King took the next three games in a close struggle to win the match.

In another match, left-handed Diane Fromholtz of Australia recovered from 1-4 in the third set and ran off five straight games to defeat Mina Jausovec of Yugoslavia 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Jausovec, a semifinalist in the 1976 U.S. Open, served an ace to win the opening set. Fromholtz, runnerup in the Australian championship last year, broke through service in the sixth and eighth games in taking the second set to even the match.

Fromholtz won the match in the third set on the second match point with a sharply angled high volley backhand.

Eighth-seeded Kerry Reid of Australia eliminated Sweden's Helena Anliot 6-3, 6-1.

Katja Ebbinghaus of Germany replaced second-seeded Evonne Goolagong, who withdrew on the advice of her doctor because she is suffering from bursitis of the foot.

Earlier in the season, O'Brien lectured the Knicks' first-year coach concerning his berating of officials. But in a mid-season game in Denver, Reed had to be restrained by his players from charging after an official.

He called the officials "a disgrace" and was ejected and fined.

"There is a very clear rule in this league prohibiting the public criticism of officials," O'Brien wrote Reed. "On more than one occasion this season you have chosen to ignore this rule and have been penalized. But following our meeting on this matter in my office you gave me your assurance that you would refrain from such public conduct in the future."

"It is now quite apparent that you feel no obligation to abide by league rules or your own personal commitment. Nonetheless, I must advise you that I intend to fulfill my responsibility to insure that all participants in this league comply with our rules and regulations."

Following a 135-117 loss to Los Angeles last Tuesday, Reed charged that Saar and Jones accorded "special treatment" to Lakers star Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. He called the officiating "totally disgraceful" and urged newsmen to "write about how bad the officials are."

Division I-A has no guaranteed television, freeing the network to choose games, with the stipulation that no team can appear more than five times each two years.

Tonight, unseeded Vijay Amritraj of India will face eighth-seeded Harold Solomon, who won last year's inaugural event and the $60,000 winner's share. In the second match, second seed Bjorn Borg of Sweden plays unseeded Rod Laver of Australia.

In the Connors-Borowiak match, the early part of the first set was a tight contest with both players showing few weaknesses. But in the eighth game, a series of unforced errors by Connors allowed Borowiak to break serve and Borowiak easily served out the remaining game to win.

Connors served to start the second set and tried a new strategy, moving up to the net after his serve. The ploy failed as Borowiak's sharp return passed Connors repeatedly.

In Monday night's second match, Nastase, distracted and flinging obscenities at the crowd, suffered service breaks in the third and fifth games set up by Mayer's passing shots and sharp volleys.

Briefly, in the seventh game of the first set, Nastase recovered and totally dominated Mayer with sharp volleys, big serves, touch shots and great passing shots.

THE SECOND set was a replay of the first, but with Mayer gaining strength while Nastase seemed to lose interest and concentration. Easy service breaks in the third and seventh games sent Nastase to defeat as Mayer continued to apply pressure.

Mayer served four love games while Nastase served none. Losers in the first round received $5,000, while the quarterfinal- and semifinal losers will receive $10,000. The runner-up will take home $30,000.

Everybody with 20-20 vision must have read Nicklaus' golfing obituary a year ago. It was in almost every paper. On the TV tube. You remember the headlines: "Nicklaus Beaten Out by Tom Watson in Masters," "Nicklaus Bows to Watson in British Open," "Nicklaus Falls to Win Major Crown," "Watson Takes Money Titles and is Pro Golfer of the Year."

Of course, if your eyes were bad, your ears could still pick it up in the lockerroom. "It looks like Ol' Jack is over the hill." "Can't make a charge any more." "Too busy making money." "Thirty-seven years old, now he knows what Arnie went through."

BIG JACK just read and listened, and hid that smirking grin of his.

Tanana playing different tune

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Frank Tanana of the California Angels was concerned about his future, which is unusual for a pitcher in the second year of a five-year contract calling for more than $3 million. But that was before he took the mound against Milwaukee in a recent exhibition game.

"The arm injury last year was worse than I thought," said the 24-year-old left-hander who led the American League in shutouts with seven and in earned run average at 2.54 last year. "I may not be 100 percent ready for the season."

But since that game against Milwaukee, in which he threw five shutout innings, his tune has changed.

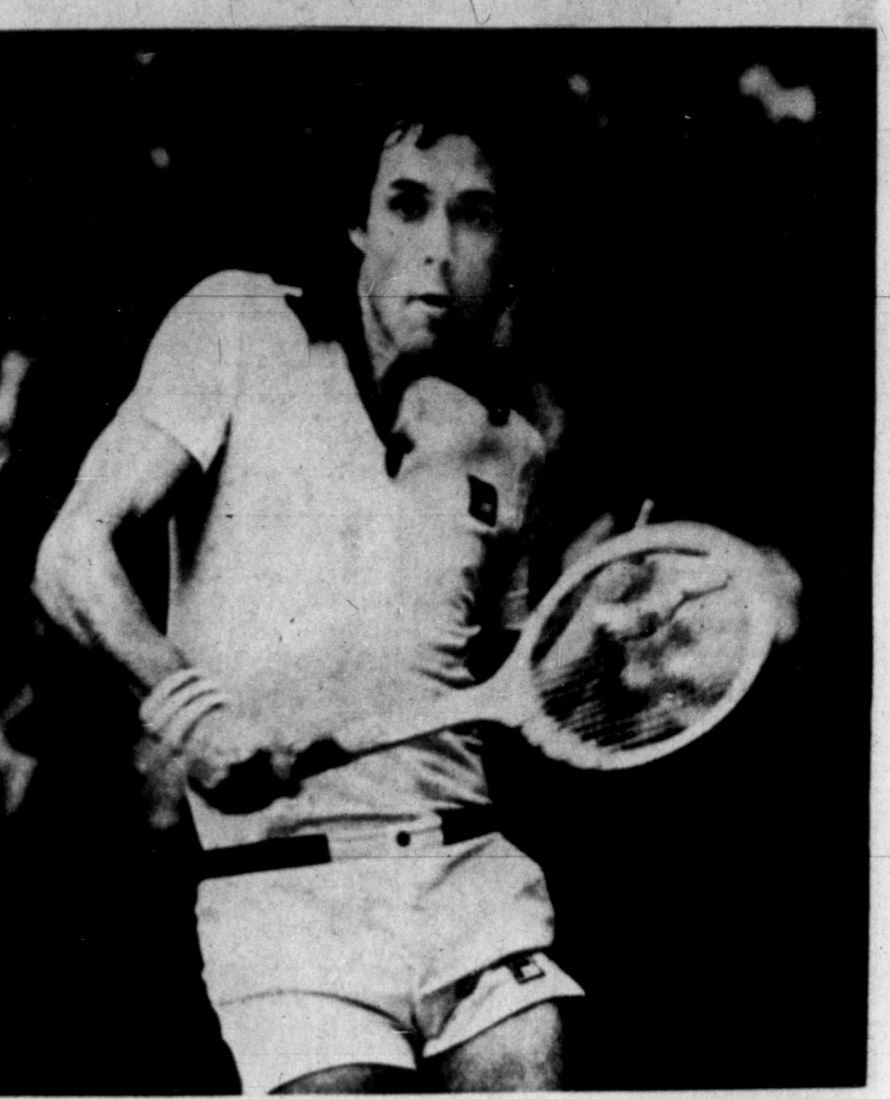

"There's no telling how many games I can win this year," he said afterward. "The future is unlimited again."

TANANA SPENT the winter working out under the direction of Los Angeles Rams' trainer Gary Tuthill, who put the pitcher on a weight training program designed to build up his upper body.

Tanana won 10 of his first 12 decisions in 1977. One of those losses came when the Angels were no-hit by Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley. His teammates were shut out by Boston in the other defeat.

HE HAD a shot at 30 victories and was supposed to start the All-Star game for the American League when he strained a triceps muscle while pitching 14 straight complete games.

"I gave the arm all the rest I could," said Tanana. "I strengthened the tissue all I could by lifting weights. The tendons hurt. It's tough to clear up."

Nicklaus alive and kicking

News Item: "Jack Nicklaus wins third TPC golf championship, has two titles and two runner-up finishes in last four appearances and takes money lead with $157,065."

Honestly? No Kidding? Are you sure it isn't a mistake? Maybe a typographical error. Or maybe an old story plucked from a newspaper printed in 1975.

Reed fined

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Knicks Coach Willis Reed, who has waged a season-long tirade against National Basketball Association officials, has been slapped with a pair of $1,000 fines by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien. It was disclosed Monday.

The fines were levied for a March 7 incident in which Reed was ejected from a game by referee Ed Rush and his postgame criticism of officials Bill Saar and Lee Jones last Tuesday night.

In a letter to Reed, O'Brien warned that "more severe penalties" would be forthcoming for future outbursts.

Earlier in the season, O'Brien lectured the Knicks' first-year coach concerning his berating of officials. But in a mid-season game in Denver, Reed had to be restrained by his players from charging after an official.

He called the officials "a disgrace" and was ejected and fined.

"There is a very clear rule in this league prohibiting the public criticism of officials," O'Brien wrote Reed. "On more than one occasion this season you have chosen to ignore this rule and have been penalized. Also, Montana State; Morehead State; Murray State; Nevada-Reno; New Hampshire; North Carolina A&T; Northeastern; Northern Arizona; Northwestern State of Louisiana; Portland State; Rhode Island; South Carolina State; Southern University; Tennessee Tech; Texas Southern; Weber State and Western Kentucky.

All other institutions previously in NCAA Division I football declared membership in Division I-A.

Only 37 go 1-AA

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Only 37 schools have chosen membership in the NCAA's newly created 1-AA football division, the so-called "minor league," and 139 opted for Division I-A, the NCAA announced Monday.

The schools have until April 13 to change their declaration.

"We are, of course, very disappointed," said J. Neils Thompson of the University of Texas, president of the NCAA and chief architect of the plan to separate the major football powers from the smaller programs.

"Hopefully, many of the lower tier now in I-A will change their mind."

The restructuring plan, a idea the major powers have advocated for several years, was legislated at the NCAA's convention in January. Thompson declined to speculate on what action the NCAA might take to rectify the imbalance.

"I would hope we could go ahead and develop the 1-AA program," he said. "Maybe some of the institutions that entered I-A will change. I certainly would urge them to. The 37 in I-AA are going to benefit a great deal from television revenue and the championship program."

Under the four-year contract signed last year between ABC-TV and the NCAA, Division I-AA will have about 10 guaranteed regional television appearances during each two-year period. Each regional telecast will have an estimated $450,000 payoff.

Division I-A has no guaranteed television, freeing the network to choose games, with the stipulation that no team can appear more than five times each two years.

Book stirs up quiet small town

By BARRY SIEGEL
The Los Angeles Times

ST. ANTHONY, Ida. — A Californian who bought land near here recently made plans to erect a fence after he found that local residents regularly trespassed to reach their favorite fishing stream — a stream located on his property.

Then he was invited to a neighbor's home for dinner, where it was politely explained that fences are not how things are done in St. Anthony.

Local residents report the Californian is now "a good neighbor." No fence was erected, and the river is still freely used by the community.

This story is repeated to other outsiders not as a warning, but as a point of community pride.

So it goes in this isolated northeastern Idaho farm community of 3,000, which sits 5,000 feet above sea level on the west slope of the Continental Divide, not far from the West Yellowstone and the Grand Tetons.

About 80 percent of the town's residents are Mormon, many of their families have lived here for three or four generations, and most look to Salt Lake City rather than Boise as a metropolitan influence. Newcomers are welcome, but St. Anthony has its own way of life, a way that local people like to think is untainted by the outside world.

At least, that's the way it was until three months ago.

In early December a local furniture store carpet manager named Gene Williams noticed a book on his kitchen table, a book his daughter Jana, 17, had been assigned to read for her South Fremont High School English class on the novel. The book was Ken Kesey's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Williams, a friendly and straight-talking businessman who pilots his own plane around the country on buying trips, picked it up and started leafing through the pages. Kesey's novel about inmates in a mental hospital includes the kind of language heard often in such institutions, but not very often in St. Anthony households.

"I got through just a few pages of the blasted thing," says Williams, "and thought, 'Holy golly!'"

What would follow has all the elements of a classic small town brouhaha — and more.

Faced with complaints from Williams and several other parents, local school administrators ordered "Cuckoo's Nest" withdrawn from the English class. By way of explanation, the school district superintendent distributed to community leaders some 14 Xeroxed pages from "Cuckoo's Nest," with what he called the objectionable words underlined.

The English teacher who assigned the book — John Fogarty, 28, a bearded newcomer from Connecticut — loudly protested the action, arguing that reading lists should be determined by professional educators, not parents. Fogarty is just one requirement short of a Ph.D. in English.

Within weeks, the Fremont school district board of trustees, acting on a recommendation from the high school principal and the school district superintendent, voted to place Fogarty on probation for the rest of the school year. No one here seriously expects Fogarty's contract to be renewed after this semester.

Finally, Ken Kesey himself entered the drama, with a letter to the entire school staff and student body that managed both to scold the teacher for assigning "Cuckoo's Nest" and to threaten legal action against the administrators for distributing Xeroxed pages from his copyrighted novel.

Suddenly, the protective insulation around St. Anthony's world was showing a few cracks.

The most immediate issue was: Who would control the local schools — professional educators or the parents who foot the bills and have legal responsibility for their children?

Fogarty firmly denounced the administration in a written statement for succumbing to "the fear of unfavorable community reaction" — an example, he said, of "the lack of real professional administrative leadership."

He noted that he had also assigned such classics as "Daisy Miller," "Great Expectations," "The Old Man and the Sea" and "All Quiet on the Western Front," but that "the class would have gone to sleep with only those. I assigned 'Cuckoo's Nest' because I knew the kids would get excited."

He said that those in St. Anthony who opposed him "had lost touch with their pioneer roots." He took to talking about "freedom of inquiry" and saying the school had "banned" an "American classic," a "deeply moral novel."

He also began methodically sending packets of information on the story to major newspapers throughout the country in an open and ardent search for publicity. "I needed the ammunition. It became a matter of personal and professional integrity," he explains, "I had no choice but to defend the book."

Some parents and school officials, on the other hand, argued that Fogarty cared less about "Cuckoo's Nest" than he did about using the issue and the publicity to land a college teaching job at a prestigious university. They repeatedly emphasized that they were making "no literary judgment" about the novel; they were saying only that its language was not suitable for St. Anthony.

They also pointed out that the book had not been "banned," that students could get the book from the library and that they only objected to its being assigned, required reading. Despite this exchange, the "Cuckoo's Nest" dispute finally may come to represent something more epic than John Fogarty's struggle to teach one book or the local parents' desire to stamp out dirty words.

The battle at its most basic represents St. Anthony's four-generation effort to create and shape a world of its own liking — a world with only good, pure and happy elements.

This theme emerges time and again when talking with townsfolk.

"Mr. Fogarty says 'Cuckoo's Nest' shows the way life really is," says Gene Williams, the father who first protested to school officials. "Well, I don't think so. Not my life. Not my life."

Ironically, newcomers such as Fogarty who bring the "outside world" with them say they originally came to this region because they were "sick of the cities."

Those few who do not farm potatoes (along with some cattle, wheat and hay) generally work at the local lumber mill or at the nearby Targhee National Forest headquarters.

When not working, everyone from field laborers to the superintendent of schools likes to take to the open fields and steep mountainsides to hunt, ski, drive snowmobiles and ride horses and motorcycles. Fogarty, the son of a career Navy officer, is an avid cross-country skier.

He grew up primarily in Connecticut and lived in several metropolitan areas. When his parents retired to Idaho Falls, Fogarty came to visit and ended up enrolling at the Idaho State University graduate school of English.

Just short of obtaining a Ph.D., he set out to find his first teaching job in an increasing tight job market. He says he was lucky to find a slot in 1978 at South Fremont High. "Some of my friends are wrapping hamburgers at McDonalds."

He soon moved into a small wood cabin without a phone, not far from the school. Inevitably, rumors about his lifestyle started circulating, probably fueled by his decision not to hide the fact he is a lapsed Catholic turned agnostic.

HIS RECORD PRAISED, Rep. William H. Natcher, D-Ky., displays one of the certificates that was presented to him for not missing a single roll-call or a day's work in Congress since he took office 24 years ago. His record is cited in the new Guinness Book of World Records. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate leader plugs his bluegrass album

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Was that a commercial heard the other day on non-commercial National Public Radio?

Sure enough, the voice was plugging a bluegrass-music album featuring such favorites as "Turkey in the Straw," "The Cumberland Gap," "Rye Whiskey" and "Old Joe Clark."

Since that voice belonged to Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and since he's the star of the album, don't expect anyone in Congress to make a fuss about that particular commercial.

An accomplished country fiddler, Byrd got to talking about bluegrass music during a lull in the Panama Canal treaties debate, being broadcast by the radio network.

He had special praise for a local bluegrass program on NPR and recommended that his colleagues relieve the tensions of the canal debate by listening to it.

"I think more people ought to listen to bluegrass and old-time music," said the majority leader. "I think we would all be friendlier with one another and we would smile more often. We would get up in the mornings with a better disposition. We would sleep better at nights."

Unfortunately, Byrd's chief antagonist in the canal debate is not a bluegrass fan.

"I have to confess to the distinguished senator," said Sen.

James Allen, D-Ala., "that I am not familiar with this program...I am sure that the distinguished senator, being an accomplished musician himself, has better knowledge of the value of music, which has charms to soothe the savage beast and all those qualities."

There's something about St. Patrick's Day that produces such scenes as the presentation of a 25-pound green bagel to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr.

Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., handed the bagel to O'Neill, who managed to say, while holding his huge green gift, that "somebody this morning gave me an Irish smoked salmon. I'll slice it and have it on this bagel."

When Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., came out of a meeting at which senators were discussing the latest attempt to reach a compromise on natural gas prices, he was besieged by reporters.

They crowded around to ask for details of the compromise and its prospects for acceptance.

From the back of the group, a voice kept shouting, "Senator, Senator."

Then came this question: "Senator, why don't you spend more time with your constituents?"

Bumpers recognized the voice and replied:

"I'd be able to, Mr. Vice President, if you people would stop sending up such crazy legislation that takes all our time."

Stayman convention finds makable game

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The Stayman Convention, our subject this week, is often used when the responder has support for both majors. He is ready to go on, one way or another, no matter what sort of hand is held by the opening bidder.

Opening lead — ♣ Q

After South's opening bid of one notrump, North wants to reach game.

He has 10 points and therefore knows that the partnership strength is 26 to 28 points.

USES CONVENTION

North finds out by bidding two clubs, the Stayman Convention. This says nothing at all about North's clubs but asks the opener to bid a major suit of four or more cards.

South obediently bids two hearts. If South had four of each major suit, he would bid two spades and wait for a chance to show the hearts later. If South had no major suit of four or more cards, he would bid two diamonds.

As we have seen, North is ready to bid game. When South bids two hearts, North jumps to four hearts. South easily makes four hearts, losing one club, one diamond and one spade. Three notrump would be defeated by a club opening lead since the defenders would get four clubs and a diamond.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 NT, and the next player passes. You hold: S-QJ92; H-J106; D-862; C-K94. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs, the Stayman Convention. If partner bids three spades, you will raise to four spades. If he bids anything other than three spades, you will bid 3 NT.

Teen thinks boys interested in her figure

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Doctor Wallace: I am 14 and I hope you can help me with my problem. I am very big busted, and was naive in thinking boys liked my for my personality instead of my shape.

Now I find out that the last three guys that I dated were only interested in my shape and not the total me, and it really hurts.

Recently I met a super nice guy that likes me and I like him. Now here is my problem. I don't know if he likes me for my shape or if he really likes the total me.

I don't want to go through more hurt. What should I do? — K.C., Joliet, Ill.

Dear K.C.: Don't do anything just yet. It won't take too long to find out what the boy's intentions are.

Be prepared to have this problem for many years to come.

Doctor Wallace: My problem is that my dad makes me wear dresses to school every day, and the more I wear them, the more I hate them. I am not sloppy and wouldn't wear jeans, only nice pants.

I wouldn't wear pants every day, but would mix dresses and pants in my school wardrobe.

My friends ask why I always wear dresses, and to protect daddy, I lie and tell them I prefer dresses. I obey my parents and respect them and their opinions. I wish my dad would respect mine.

I'm 16 and buy my own clothes, so why should he have the right to tell me how to dress?

I can't talk to my dad.

He just yells and jumps to conclusions. Help! — D.D., Seattle, Wash.

Dear D.D.: You sound like a responsible young lady. Since you can't get through to your father, enlist the aid of a favorite female teacher or counselor. Have one of them invite father to school for a short chat.

Hopefully, while wearing a neat pantsuit, the female educator can enlighten your "old-fashioned" father.

Maybe I'm off base and should drive over to see him.

Mitchell lives through tragedies, puts energy into being town's mayor

By CYNTHIA GORNEY
The Washington Post

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. — William Mitchell's face and hands were burned off seven years ago, on a spring afternoon in San Francisco. His motorcycle smashed into a moving laundry truck. The motorcycle gas tank blew up in Mitchell's face and a man across the street grabbed a fire extinguisher, aimed it at the flames, and sprayed. Mitchell survived. With a rebuilt face, with stumps for hands, with thick, mottled burn scars from brow to waist, he packed up everything he could and moved to Colorado, to this easy-going mountain town where a man without much patience for suffering could live the sort of life he wanted. He tended bar. He learned to ski (without poles). He bought a house, a gleaming black 1939 Cadillac, and a red and white, six-seater Cessna airplane to take him soaring over the Rockies on the days — and there many of them — when he couldn't sit still.

November, on a morning when a little too much ice apparently had formed on the wings. Mitchell's plane crashed on takeoff at a nearby airport. Mitchell who was flying friends to San Francisco, was at the controls. The plane dropped belly-down out of the sky and the impact broke Mitchell's back. He had become a paraplegic. Mitchell is now the mayor of Crested Butte. A cross-country skier in the fields outside town might have spotted him the other day, barreling along in his second black Cadillac (this one a gorgeous 1947 bullet of a car, equipped with hand-operated brake and accelerator), an organ concerto thundering over the tape system, the citizens band radio jiggling with each bump in the road, the roof upholstery dangling where one of Mitchell's Great Danes chewed it up, an Indian blanket over the back seat and a tiny, strawberry blonde Amazon doll in a tiger skin bikini enshrined in plastic on the steering wheel. Mayor Mitchell, his wheelchair folded up behind him, was on his way to Washington.

"We're going to dazzle them with our footwork, boys," he had proclaimed the night before, in between forksful of cheese fondue. "Show 'em how it's done in the Rockies." Mitchell has gone off to Washington to "fight with the big boys," as he likes to say — to enlist federal support in his seven-month-old battle against a huge mining company that wants to begin mining molybdenum, a rare and expensive element used in steel production, just outside Crested Butte. Mitchell figures the mine would bring in 10,000 new people, when families and attendant businesses are added in. Crested Butte has 1,200 people now, mostly skiers. The whole town is a historic district. The very thought of 10,000 new residents in this quiet cluster of log cabins and western Victorian buildings makes Mitchell, and the voters who elected him, livid.

Two years ago last day to talk about the mine. "It's a good fight, such a noble fight," Mitchell mused as he headed toward the airport. "It's the perfect cause ... and I'm having the time of my life." His Washington tour was a four-day series of appointments with members of Congress, and Agriculture Department officials that ended Thursday. Since the U.S. Forest Service controls much of the proposed mining land, a sympathetic ear in Washington would ensure extensive environmental impact statements and enough strict guidelines for Amax Inc., the mining company, "to allow Crested Butte to become the first town to have this kind of experience (large-scale mining) and not be run over by it," Mitchell said.

Just Mitchell, who spent so much time sneaking out of his hospital room to go comfort other burn patients after his first accident that his doctor threatened to make him wear a beeper. Mitchell, who joined a nurses' picket line in his hospital gown and ordered champagne on ice in his room sink every day at 2:30 p.m. Mitchell, who relieved one small Crested Butte boy by explaining what happened to his fingers: "I left them at home this morning."

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Hereditry, habit play roles in heart, vessel diseases

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can heart disease run in families? Should I take any special precautions? — Gerald H.

Dear Gerald: Hereditry certainly does play a role in heart and blood vessel diseases, but it is hard to say what is inherited and what is caused by the way a person lives.

You have probably heard of the heart study of over 5,000 people that has been going on in Framingham, Mass. It has been found that the sons of men who had early heart attacks often do have more heart risk factors than the average person. Some of these may, however, be habits they picked up from their fathers, not physical traits they inherited. For instance, the sons of men who had coronaries before they were 65 include a high proportion of smokers.

One the other hand, children of the heart attack victims tend to be short of blood substances called high density lipoproteins (HDL), which seem to protect against heart disease. Here, hereditry could be an important factor.

I think the best advice for anyone with a family history of heart trouble is to make a special effort to avoid the known risk factors like too much saturated fat, smoking, overweight and lack of exercise. You should also have your blood pressure and blood fat level checked regularly, and follow your doctor's instructions faithfully if they are too high. These are things you can do something about — and should, in any case. Whereas you cannot do anything about your ancestry.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to do a lot of sailing, but about two years back I was diagnosed as a diabetic, and I haven't really been on the water much since then. I was thinking that I would like to get going again this summer, but I certainly don't want to take any unnecessary chances. Do you think it is safe? — K.M.

Dear K.M.: Don't give up the boat! The American Diabetes Assn. says lots of diabetics sail — with, of course, the same kind of precautions they would take anywhere. Here are some tips the ADA makes: Just about any boat has room enough to stow some food and supplies. And if you are cruising, naturally there will be food and water and room for your insulin and such. Insulin can be kept cool, but it does not have to be refrigerated. One important point is to keep testing strips — which are probably the most convenient thing when you are sailing — tightly corked to protect them from moisture. Get plenty of exercise hauling sails. And take some anti-seasick pills along. Also check with your doctor in case he has any other advice.

"I have my own ideas about smoking."

"I know what I like out of life. And one of the things I like is smoking. But there's no getting away from the stories I keep hearing about cigarettes and high tar.

"There's also no getting away from why I smoke. I smoke for the pleasure of it. For the taste. And for enjoying a cigarette after my long day as a teacher.

"Then at night when I work my other job — as a drummer — I enjoy lighting up between sets. It's part of the way I live.

"For me, the dilemma was how to find a cigarette that could give me taste without high tar. And that was quite a dilemma.

"Which is why I appreciate Vantage as much as I do. It's the only low-tar cigarette I've found (and I've tried several other brands) that really gives me cigarette taste and satisfaction.

"And the Vantage filter is especially neat because it's firm yet easy drawing.

"As far as Vantage goes, my mind is made up. And that's just the way I like it."
