Preston Smith, declaring a fellow's got to have clout to run the governor's office in Midland Tuesday said he's got the leadership Texas needs for effective government

Smith 66 the state's governor from 1969 to 1973 is seeking the Democratic Party's gubernatorial nomination in the May 6 primary election

In that race also are Gos Dolph Briscoe 34 and Attorney General

Smith a Lubbock theater owner is campaigning without benefit of a When you've got people 'aides' running with you they start running your campaign but they won't do anything Smith said In his 1972 campaign Smith failed to drum up enough voter support to return to the governor's mansion and moved out in January of the following And we haven't had a good one governor since Smith told eight listeners in a news conference in the Midland Hilton Smith said the governorship is the most powerful office in the state if a person "knows how to operate it Briscoe doesn't he said Smith said Briscoe is devoid of leadership and that Hill is unproven Smith said he can return leadership to state government

Trade names trivia labeled light reading

Trivia may not put the world into a spin, but it sometimes does keep academe going in circles and entertains the not-so-naive "others."

And who's to say that what is trivia today won't be significant tomorrow? A whole bunch of seeming trivia has emerged in a 1964 book "Why Did They Name It 2" by Hannah

Campbell. Shallowly but perceptively, the book delves into the origin of trade names, which, as most all know. certainly is not trivia in the marketplaces.

A trade name, like a reputation, is worth a bundle - far more than money can buy off hand.

Generally, the well-known brand name product gets the sell, particularly in impulse buying.

Wallenda killed in fall

Karl Wallenda, patriarch of the Great Wallendas family of highwire artists, fell 10 stories to his death from a wire extended between beachfront hotels here today, circus officials

Wallenda, 73, was doing a promotion for the Pan American circus, the circus manager, James B Harrington said

Wallenda, whose family has been plagued by tragedy in a series of deaths and injuries during daredevil performances, fell an estimated 120 feet into the driveway of the Condado Holiday Inn hotel before hundreds of

Montreal accountant Victor Abboud said he watched the veteran performer teetering on the wire in beachfront winds which were "too strong"

"I saw him go down on his knees on the wire and I thought he was kneeling to rest." said Abboud "But then I saw he was shaking. The wind blew him off and he went all the way down head first.

German-born Wallenda was performing in San Juan nightly with his granddaughter Rietta on a 50-foot wire. Harrington said the Wallendas were hired for the circus's current run in the capital of this U.S. commonwealth. The run started March 1 and finishes April 2

Asked if Wallenda was not warned about the wind, usually strong along San Juan's exclusive beachfront hotel strip. Harrington said: "No. he thought it was fine. He tested and installed the wire himself."

Wallenda lived in Sarasota, Fla. His wife. Helen, was with him in San Juan, but not peforming.

Gary Williams, a local newspaper photographer, said Wallenda was leaning into the stiff wind as he inched his way holding a balancing pole

"The gloves are off." claimed Joe Hickox, one of three Republican candidates for the 19th Congressional District seat held by retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon.

Hickox made the remarks while in Midland Tuesday, following a speech to the Republican Men's Club, where he and contenders George Bush of Midland and Jim Reese of Odessa spoke.

"I don't plagiarize other candidates' campaign platforms. I assure you I have my own ideas." Hickcox said during his talk to the luncheon gathering. His comments were aimed at a remark that candidate Reese reportedly made last week, charging that Hickox was using Reese's ideas during the campaign and that Hickox had no ideas of his Hickox questioned Reese's ability to win in the general election because of what he said was such a poor showing against incumbent George Mahon during the 1976 general election. Hickox said Mahon was a

'weak' candidate. Reese, however, challenged Hickox's assessment of Mahon as a 'weak' candidate. "Running against him (Mahon) was a little like running against Santa Claus," said Reese. Reese said that by winning nearly 46 percent of the vote against Mahon. and nearly 40 percent of the vote in Lubbock County, he showed he is a candidate who can win this time around Reese noted that when he was first elected Odessa mayor in 1968, he beat his Democratic contender with 87 percent of the vote.

Bush, an independent oil producer, said he is qualified to represent both the interests of oil and the small businessman in Congress because 'I've been there."

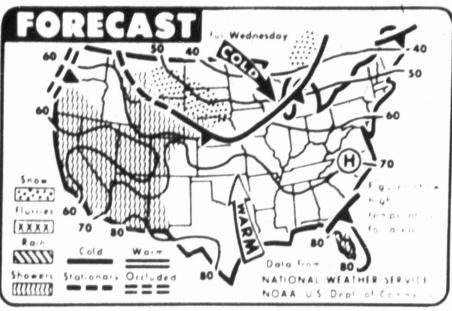

Bush expressed concern over the expanse of the public payroll and the attractiveness of public service jobs over those in the private sector.

"Incentives must be reversed so that people are encouraged to work in the private sector," Bush said.

Bush said he is the candidate best able to bring new people into the Republican Party.

School board postponing meeting to attend hearing

Because some school officials are planning to attend a federal hearing Tuesday in Dallas, the Midland public schools Board of Education has postponed its regular meeting to March 29. Schools Superintendent Dr. James Mailey said Tuesday.

The board originally had planned to meet on Tuesday.

Mailey said he; Don Furgeson. business manager and election clerk for the school district; board President Johnny Warren, and Vice President James Ramsoure will be attending the hearing at the U.S. district court there to determine whether the April 1 Midland school trustee elections should be stopped:

Whether they testify at the hearing "depends entirely" on the school attorney, Charles Tighe, Mailey said. He said they will request that the court not delay the election.

Tighe said Tuesday that he will "wait and see what develops at the hearing" before having the school officials testify. He said they at least will be available to testify if the need

Currently, the U.S. Justice Department is suing the school district to comply with the federal Voting Rights Act. The department objects to the present election system of the district, the place system. because it contends the place system may abridge minority rights.

Tie between Lance, Mideast financiers weakens In interviews, two BCCI executives. LONDON - The relationship Allaudin Shaik and Dildar H. Rizvi, between Bert Lance and the Middle sought to minimize the bank's in-East financiers whose oil money flows volvement with Lance and to deny any breach of U.S. banking or through the Bank of Credit and Commerce International here has opportunities in the U.S." FOR BCCI. 'Lance was not employed by the bank," Rizvi said. "He was paid nothing by the bank, and we were not obliged to accept his advice.'

Shaik insisted Lance had "received absolutely no loans from BCCI or loans arranged by BCCI."

The statements by the BCCI executives conflicted with reports made by Lance to the SEC as part of the settlement of the securities law charges.

"Mr. Lance has borrowed substantial amounts either from or arranged by BCCI," said the SEC report filed last Saturday, the same day the BCCI officials were interviewed.

The report said Lance "has received substantial compensation

Lance told the SEC his loans and payments are part of his "overall consulting relationship to ICIC, BCCI and Mr. Abedi."

Publicly, the BCCI executives say they would still be prepared to receive unsolicited suggestions from Lance on American investment opportunities, which is what they say has been happening over the past few months. It is clear BCCI severely underestimated the controversy surrounding Lance in the U.S. Given the discreet nature of Mideast banking operations, is not a mistake they will want to make again. "We thought the controversy over Lance was an internal American thing that did not affect us," Rizvi said, during an interview in the boardroom of the plush, seven-story BCCI building in The City, London's financial district.

"There is no story here. We thought it (Financial General) was a good investment. It is like any other business transaction. Clients come to us for advice. In this case, we advised four individuals from different countries, absolutely unknown to each other." Rizvi said. "We were within the law and not only within the law, but within the spirit of the law."

BCCI was founded in 1972 by Abedi. a Pakistani banker with more than 30 years' banking experience in India. Pakistan and the Middle East. In six years, the bank has developed so rapidly that it now has 106 branches in 32 countries.

In its 1977 financial statement, Abedi reports "a year of balanced growth and consolidation." The statement shows that the bank's total resources rose to $2.2 billion from $1.6 billion. After-tax profits increased to $17 million from $13 million. The capital base was more than doubled last year to $113 million from $50 million. This might answer critics who have said the bank was undercapitalized.

An American banker in London with extensive experience in the Middle East, said his bank would not lend BCCI money "because I don't feel comfortable dealing with them."

The banker, who did not want his name used, said the feeling in banking circles was that it was not known in any detail what BCCI's motives were. who owned the bank or how they did business. And bankers, he said, do not like uncertainty or mystery. The banker conceded that this might be partly because BCCI officers were not 'members of the club.'

The official of the American bank, offered two possible explanations for the feeling that BCCI's loan rates are higher than those of other banks. Either BCCI attracts high-risk business from people who cannot get funds elsewhere, he said, or they are attracting the new oil money of the Middle East, funding reputable businessmen and men of integrity whose methods of doing business and documenting transactions are not what orthodox Western bankers are used to

Rizvi and Shaik will not say who owns BCCI. It would be unfair to use the names of leading figures in the Middle East to advertise the bank, they said. "There are a good few Middle East shareholders of the bank. Among these are members of different ruling families." Rizvi said. One BCCI shareholder who has been publicly identified is the Sheik of Abu Dhabi, whose sons Sheik Sultan - the crown prince - and Mohammed - a youth represented by the family financial adviser Abdullah Darwaish - are among the buyers of

A plan with merit

President Carter is proposing the most comprehensive overhaul of the federal Civil Service system since it was established nearly a century ago. The goals are worthy of support, but whatever the fate of the president's plan at the hands of Congress, it will treat only one facet of the problem of unmanageable government bureaucracy.

The majority of public employees in America are not on the federal payroll but work for state and local government. The "merit systems" for these workers, often patterned after the federal model. are showing the same symptoms noted by Mr. Carter in his recent speech to the National Press Club. Too many government workers. he said, are "underworked, overpaid, and insulated from the consequences of incompetence."

Is there a Civil Service system in any state, county or city that isn't vulnerable to the same accusation?

Civil Service reform ought to be advanced on the agenda of state and local government, but to say so does not simplify the problem. Civil Service was born of a desire to keep public employment immune to politics - to prevent a "spoils system" in which government jobs are a reward for loyalty to a party or candidate or political machine. In that respect, Civil Service has been an undeniable success - such a success that elected officials often stand powerless before an entrenched bureaucracy when they try to fulfill campaign promises for more efficiency and economy in government.

Reform, then, must stop well short of any invitation to substitute political choices for merit in hiring, promotion and job assignment in government anywhere but at the top. The concept of a merit system is as worthy as ever. The task is to make Civil Service work the way it is supposed to - as a merit system rather than a jobprotection system that rewards seniority and little else.

The task will be complicated by other forces at work in our society. Civil Service already is strained by the demands of Affirmative Action programs that seek to redress imbalances in the number of women and minorities in public employment and on the ladder of promotion.

The drive by public employee unions to gain collective bargaining rights also collides with Civil Service. And federal job programs which encourage local government to create new payroll positions for the unemployed would seem to work against one goal of Civil Service reform making the government work force more productive.

Mr. Carter is not the first president to challenge the leviathan of bureaucracy that often seems to be running the federal government on its own terms. But a growing public resentment toward the size and cost of government augurs well for his reform program.

Last November, George Will, the columnist, observed that the Equal Rights Amendment "radiates impatience with essential constitutional values. such a respect for the political process and representative institutions."

Whether or not one agrees with Mr. Will's observation, since November it has become increasingly clear that some advocates of the ERA, in particular those who run the National Organization for Women, radiate "impatience with essential constitutional values," especially "respect for the political process and representative institutions."

In recent months NOW has been urging conventions to boycott the 15 states that have not ratified the ERA, and many have been doing so. Thus NOW has been trying to persuade, not by word but by force. The boycott is economic bullying of a sort remarkable for its first-ever employment in an effort to influence the fate of a proposed constitutional amendment. It contemptuously blackjacks the political process.

That is why those who respect essential constitutional values a class, by the way, made up of both ERA foes and ERA supporters - should be heartened by the example of the state of Missouri. The bottom line, though, is that the 61

nations which host the Peace Corps have become fussy, and demand skill-volunteers inclined toward stirring up political trouble, or serving a second-

Last fall, 85 volunteers headed for

Mob ties on Teamsters funds

By JACK ANDERSON WASHINGTON - Jimmy Hoffa may be gone, but the mobster elements that pervaded the Teamsters Union under his leadership allegedly live on.

After Hoffa suddenly vanished from sight nearly three years ago, the Labor Department turned up evidence that the mob was manipulating the union's billiondollar Central States Pension Fund. Following intense negotiations, the Teamsters agreed to purge the fund of seamy transactions. As part of the deal. Teamsters president Frank Fitzsimmons and three of his associates resigned as trustees.

But the clean-up operation, according to congressional investigators, has met with less success than federal officials have boasted. This is the story which was to be told today before the House Ways and Means Oversight Subcommittee.

Here is some of the unsavory evidence that will come to light during the public inquiry, led by Reps. Sam Gibbons, D.-Fla., and Jake Pickle, D.-Tex.

- Allen Dorfman, a former pension fund consultant, reportedly still helps control the fund. According to Las Vegas law enforcement authorities. Dorfman has mob ties dating back to the Hoffa era. Our sources say Dorfman was "the man to see to get a loan." The subcommittee wants to know whether he is still the man and whether the mob is getting illegal

In order to maintain its special tax exemption, the IRS stated, the fund would have to permit a 10-year "legal audit' of its operations. But the IRS. investigators believe, has been less than enthusiastic about enforcing the. audit stipulation.

- The Labor Department is having problems keeping tabs on the Teamsters because a Justice Department reorganization eliminated crime task forces. The congressional investigators also want to know whether IRS coordinated with the Justice and Labor Departments in a recent suit filed against the Teamsters to regain the pension fund money that was lost through illegal deals.

- Independent advisers hired by the union to handle the pension fund assets may not be as "independent" as they seem.

Representatives of a dissident faction of Teamsters, known as PROD, are also expected to testify at today's hearings. The group has evidence that financial advisers working for a Teamsters pension fund in New York are steering business to relatives of union officials. A New York organized crime strike force has had the information for two years, say the dissident Teamsters, but has failed to inform the Labor Department.

HUMAN RIGHTS HYPOCRISY: President Carter has taken a pickand-choose approach to how tough the United States should be on human rights violators. This is perceived by his own National Security Council as needlessly abandoning the pulpit on behalf of harassed people. The council has prepared a secret Presidential Review Memorandum. which advises Carter that it is unnecessary for him to moderate his human rights stand and to do so could even damage U.S. foreign policy interests.

We reported in an earlier column that the human rights memo, known simply as Presidential Review Memorandum No. 28, suggests that Soviet indignation over Carter's criticism of Kremlin human rights abuses has little bearing on Moscow's willingness to negotiate

The Russians have too big a stake in disarmament and detente, the report contends. Therefore, Carter should not back down on human rights, the memo advises. He has, nevertheless, softened his criticism.

Memo No. 28 also counsels Carter that his human rights posture shouldn't jeopardize the prospects for bettering relations with the communist regimes in China and Cuba On the contrary, "the potential normalization of relations with China and Cuba," the memo cautions, "will 'The Adventures of Sam Brown,' as told by columnist place some strain on the credibility of our human rights policy.'

U.S. approbation might help persuade Castro to do more toward reunifying Cuban refugee families and freeing political prisoners, the memo suggests. But in Peking, the memo notes, "we should recognize that with respect to human rights we will have little, if any, (influence)."

The National Security Council paper takes a sterner tack in urging. Carter to insist on human rights among some of our more iron-handed allies.

"Allies such as Korea, Iran and the Philippines, for instance, cannot be immune from some application of the policy without endangering the integrity of the policy; neither can powerful adversaries like the Soviet Union.

Yet Carter welcomed the shah of Iran to Washington and expressed encouragement that human rights progress was being made under the shah. Shortly afterwards, the shah made Carter look foolish by ordering a new police crackdown on dissidents.

I told him, "Some day when they get cloning down pat there will be.' Our coffee steamed with the thought.

But there are many things that enter into the moral aspects of cloning which we all must take into consideration.

If there was more than one Reggie Jackson would baseball be as interesting? Can the world afford two Ilie Nastases? Or, for that matter, two Robert Novaks? Would Farrah Fawcett-Majors mean as much to all of us if there were 500 of her walking around at the same time? Is there a limit to the number of Billy Carters the country will put up with?

Once cloning becomes the "in" thing, teen-agers are going to want to try it. I don't know of any parents who could survive with an exact duplicate of the teen-ager they have Another worrisome thing is that in the beginning, cloning is going to be very expensive and only very rich people will be capable of duplicating themselves. Therefore, until they get the price down, all we'll be able to reproduce wholesale will be oil and gas tycoons who, as they multiply, will lobby for higher and higher prices, with the excuse that they have so many more mouths to feed.

Once the middle class can afford cloning they will probably get Congress to pass laws forbidding poor people from doing it, because they won't want to pay the extra welfare

The whole thing will be a shambles unless we start thinking it out today. Each person must search his own heart and ask, "Do I want an exact duplicate of myself to take my place when I'm gone, or am I willing to abort my cells for the good of mankind?"

Major New York newspapers face threat of strike

By THOMAS COLLINS

Newsday

NEW YORK - On the night of March 30, a group of weary negotiators will be meeting somewhere in Manhattan and another weary group made up of members of the press will be camped outside their door. At midnight, the door will open - and at that moment it should become clear whether New York City will be hit with a major newspaper

At least that has been the scenario in past years, and both union and management representatives fully expect that the current negotiations will go down to the wire again. This year, as in the past, both sides are making vaguely threatening noises, which may soften as the deadline grows near. But unlike other years, the noises have an ominous ring to

In the interval since the last joint negotiations, a number of things have occurred that have altered the newspaper picture in New York. The New York Times and the New York News have increased automation in their plants and, along with the New York Post, have been training management personnel in union jobs papers in the event of a strike. They state flatly that they will be able to publish and distribute if there is a walkout, although some union leaders question whether they can deliver.

In addition, all three papers have incurred heavy costs in pursuing their readers into the suburbs and are more intent than ever on economizing in order to compete with the suburban opposition. They complain, in particular, about overtime, overstaffing and a lack of flexibility in running their operations. They have also watched with some envy the birth of a new newspaper. The Trib, which is able to publish at a fraction of the essentially nonunion operation. (The Times, Post and News have nine craft unions and the Newspaper Guild to come to terms with; The Trib, which is not involved in the negotiations. would reap a windfall in the event of a

The lesson implicit in the relative ease with which the New York City government has been able to cut personnel because of its financial crisis has not escaped the papers' notice. "It doesn't take any leap in thinking to see that many of the problems the city faces are the very same problems that the newspapers face, whether you're talking about

News' general manager. The News, he said, "has had a pretty bad year."

A round-robin of talks with all of the unions has begun or is scheduled. The New York Newspaper Guild is seeking a one-year contract with a 20 percent wage increase at the Times and the News and a 25 percent increase at the Post to give it parity with the other papers; also, a fourday, 28-hour work week. The first on-the-table evidence of the publishers position occurred in a set of counter-proposals to the Guild that were immediately denounced by Guild executive vice president Harry Fisdell as an attempt to "drain the lifeblood" of the union. Stressing the need for "greater productivity," some of the counter-proposals include elimination of cost-of-living clauses, changes in payment in shift differentials, spreading the 35-hour work week over fewer than five days, basing group minimum pay rates on the city's Bureau of Labor Statistics data, and having the option of giving time off instead of cash for overtime.

Rising medical costs spawning tough decisions By HARRY NELSON The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO - The rising cost of health care is forcing doctors to take a new look at the propriety of artificially prolonging the life of a terminally ill patient at a cost of $40,000 a year for nursing care alone, the president of the California medical Association said here recently.

'We have always made decisions as to what tests are really necessary and what types of treatment are really necessary. But now these decisions must take economic consideration into account - and this is something we have not been used to doing," Dr. E. Kash Rose told delegates at the association's annual meeting.

In addition to high cost procedures. doctors also must ask themselves whether a particular patient really test or an X-ray, he said.

But Rose made it clear that the medical profession intends to make economic considerations secondary to considerations of the quality of care. However, he admitted that the profession has not fully dealt with the problem of how the doctor can find the proper balance between quality and cost in complex situations such as those involving care of terminally ill patients on artificial life support

He said the medical profession must establish guidelines for appropriate care keeping quality foremost in mind or run the risk of having someone else such as the government make the guidelines possibly placing cost considerations uppermost. This year's meeting of the house of delegates will consider several resolutions that are critical of the Board of Medical Quality Assurance. the state agency that licenses and disciplines physicians.

Some of the criticism centers around the licensing body's slowness in taking action against physicians reported to the board for overprescribing drugs or incompetence. One Los Angeles resolution asks that legislation be sought to give the association the authority to license physicians. Another asks that the association, rather than the governor, be given authority to appoint doctor members of the board.

There is dissatisfaction with the physician members of the board who, according to one resolution, "have not appeared to be representative of the medical community. Several of the current physician members often are outspoken in their criticism of the medical establishment. A case in point occured last week at a meeting of the board held in conjunction with the medical association's meeting when board member Dr. William Gerber of San Francisco moved that California withdraw from membership in the Federation of State Medical boards of the United

The federation administers the socalled FLEX examination taken by medical students to qualify for licensure. At present every state board in the nation belongs to the federation. Board discussion of the resolution, which was defeated by a 6-5 vote, did not make it clear whether California doctors would still be able to take the FLEX exam if the board withdrew from the federation.

The dissatisfaction with the federation, according to Robert Rowlands, board executive director, is because of the "emerging frustration with its 'old boys club' atmosphere.'

Violence terrorists' common bond; diversity marks aims

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) - The terrorists who make headlines with bombings, hijackings, assassinations and kidnappings share a common bond of violence. but their aims are as diverse as the nations and peoples they prey on.

Italy's Red Brigades, which kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro last week, seek a disruption of the state and a Marxist revolution, for example. The South Moluccans who recently held 70 hostages in the Netherlands for 285 hours want freedom for their homeland, now part of the former Dutch colony of Indonesia. The late Ulrike Meinhof, founder of West Germany's Red Army Faction, also known as the Baader-Meinhof gang, summed up her ambition as wanting "to hit the Establishment in the face."

Intelligence experts and diplomats from the NATO countries and elsewhere say four major extremist organizations - with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine at the center - are linked in "Terrorist International" conspiracy which provides support and advice to other revolutionaries.

Their conclusion is based on analyses of about 1,150 acts of transnational terrorism since 1967, including more than 500 bombings, 140 hijackings, 60 assassinations, 135 kidnappings and 100 arson attacks. In many missions, Palestinians and other Arabs worked with West German, Japanese and Latin American affiliates.

An Associated Press survey found about 226 groups, parties or movements in 56 countries use revolutionaries with a variety of allegiances; 39 are pledged to an undefined Marxism; 29 to Peking; 12 to Moscow: 11 to Castro's Cuba; and 8 to anti-Soviet Trotskyites. There also are 30 neo-fascist groups, 34 separatist movements and about a dozen national liberation organizations. Other rebels range from anarchists hostile to capitalism and communism alike to religious sects with labels like India's Anand Marg (Path of Bliss)

Trying to control terrorism costs the noncommunist nations billions of dollars each year. Security has been more than doubled at every major Western military and civilian installation, nuclear and non-nuclear; surveilliance in the private sector has escalated to protect national and international investors and investments.

More than a dozen countries, including the United States, West Germany and Israel, have highly skilled commando units, trained to rescue hostages, particularly from hijacks. The Dutch alone have two anti-terror squads, including a 100member marine unit which rescued the hostages held in Assen early last week. The same group stormed a train and school near Assen last summer to end twin seiges by Officials, most of whom did not want their names used, say an uncounted number of revolutionary groups cluster around a network of terrorists who maintain a full-scale "service industry" in Europe with Paris as their headquarters. This network what has come to be known as "Terrorist International" - provides training in shooting. bombing and even poisoning oranges at secret instruction centers in Libya, South Yemen, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Algeria.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. probably the most militant of the Palestinian groups. is at the center of the Terrorist International; its allies are West Germany's Red Army Faction. Japan's United Red Army and the Junta de Coordinacion Revoluionaria, combining revolutionaries who have fled Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay.

A distinctive feature of most of the extremist movements is that their leaders quarrel over strategy, policy and power. Rhodesia's black nationalists, Puerto Rico's leftists and the Palestinian Liberation Organization are typical of those divided among themselves.

In Rhodesia, moderate black leaders are negotiating with white Prime Minister Ian Smith: militants like Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe and their guerrilla forces war against the minority regime. Within each camp, tribal and other rivalries lead to further argument.

Puerto Rico's Armed Forces of National Liberation - FALN - have bombed targets at home and in the United States to call attention to their demands for independence. Fellow leftists with a Maoist orientation have criticized the FALN

They are united in a pledge to recover all land considered Palestinian, but disagree over how much territory they are willing to settle for. Some groups have vowed to drive the Jews of Israel into the sea by force and incorporate all their territory into a new Palestine; others, including PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, seem more willing to compromise. The militants, led by the Popular Front and the Arab Liberation Front, have formed an alliance whose members describe themselves as "rejectionists of any capitulationist solutions."

Texas lawmakers, parents claim Wolves plague USSR professors teaching too little

By SUSAN STOLER Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Taxpaid university professors have been criticized by state legislators and parents for being as scarce in undergraduate classrooms as students on campus during spring

Now a group of faculty members has pleaded guilty to the charge of neglecting undergraduate education. But the problem appears far away from a solution, according to both educators and state of-

Since World War II, "undergraduate education has cheapened, while graduate education has become increasingly important," says a report from the Faculty Senate of the University of Texas at Austin. The year-long study concludes part of the blame lies with the emphasis professors place on research in promotions.

We believe that the evidence suggests that the university has maintained higher standards in research than in teaching," the report said, before recommending that no graduate student have primary responsibilty for a course. Despite such a confession to legislators' charges the solution remains elusive, says Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education.

"The legislature directed the college coordinating Board to develop guidelines for faculty workloads." Ashworth said. "I reached one conclusion. If we make the legislature happy, we make the faculty unhappy.

The Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, will discuss faculty workloads Thursday as part of the guideline development. Legislators want to tie professors to a strict number of courses to be taught each semester. The Faculty Senate's report said that was unrealistic and suggests that all faculty be held merely to a 40-hour work week

Both sides want to cut down abuse of the free rein professors have over work schedules. "There are probably very few abuses by the faculty," Ashworth said. "Professors in wellestablished departments very often will end up teaching small classes and junior faculty members will end up carrying larger sections.

We can come up with standards and reports. But those who have been abusing it will be the first to find a loophole," Ashworth said.

The faculty report agrees. Either we create a formula so simple that it requires distortion of the (professor's) activities, or we create one so complex that it precludes credibility," the study says.

The UT-Austin faculty's worst critic is one of its own, Dr. James Sledd, professor of English and member of the Faculty Senate.

'We are playing out an elaborate charade. The faculty is literally incapable of correcting the known abuses." Sledd said at a recent Faculty Senate meeting in which he rejected the proposed 40-hour

'The university says you can't get promoted unless you do research and publish. The professors instituted the system. It's our own racket." Sledd said during a later interview.

He partially blames the low number of faculty teaching undergraduates on a surge during the 1950s of federal grants, which have since run out of funds. Grants funded research, he says, and at the same time allowed graduate students to take over teaching responsibilities.

Sledd doesn't fault professors from making a good situation better by relying on graduate students to free them for research. He says the faculty does not really want to change the system but is only trying to get the legislature off its back

'The faculty is just another interest group. We're like the United Mine Workers," he said. "We're just protecting our own turf, and there's nothing sinful about that. It just happens to be socially damaging at the time, like the coal strike."

One university adminstrator disputes Sledd's theory that research grants caused a neglect of undergraduate courses.

'Certain programs that were available in the 1960s have been discontinued, but there's not been a largescale decrease in grant money," said Dr. Eldon Sutton, UT-Austin vice president for research.

The campus received $30 million in federal research funds in 1977, he said.

'I don't feel the emphasis has been out of balance It is an old argument. Students in general and people outside the university in general tend to think of the faculty as inside the classroom," said Sutton, a genetics specialist. "Research too often is viewed as a distraction from teaching. But graduate students can only learn by working with people who are active researchers.

The accountability conflict will lead to legislative intervention, Sledd says.

Ashworth calls that prospect "frightening."

MOSCOW - Twelve thousand hungry wolves roam the fields and forests around Moscow.

They are part of a growing threat throughout the Soviet Union, says a hunter in the latest issue of the weekly Komsomolskaia Pravda. Around Moscow, wolves have increased five fold in recent years. In the Ukraine, in Belorussia and in the Baltic states their numbers have gone up eight times. In Central Asia, 30,000 wolves roam the virgin banks of Kazakhastan.

The smallness of the government bounty paid to wolf hunters is given as one of the reasons for their numbers. A hunter gets three rubles (approximately $4 for every skin.) He should get ten times more, says the hunter.

Mikhail Kriukov, or else the hunters should be able to swap their skins for rare and valuable items in the staterun shops.

Hunters also should get special vacations. Hunting can be exhausting, he explains. "A wolf can cover 40 to 60 KMS (24 to 36 miles) in a night.'

Soviet wolves have ample food supplies. In 1976 in the perm region in the Ural Mountains, some 1,000 wolves killed and ate 12,000 antelopes and 630 sheep and goats. Around Moscow, the woves can feed on some 84,000 boars roaming wild.

Wolves also have developed a taste for their former allies, the dog. Instead of mating with bitches, male wolves now eat them, the hunter complained. His own dog was minus a leg.

Whites still buy most minority dolls

By SOLL SUSSMAN

DALLAS (AP) - When Shindana Toys of Los Angeles started business in 1968 as a manufacturer of black dolls, whites purchased most of the products, says Herman Thompson, Shindana's representative at the Dallas toy

Last year Shindana introduced its Asian doll. Although it became the firm's largest seller, Thompson said once again only a small number of the dolls were purchased by the minority depicted.

"They still have to get used to seeing themselves as a doll, as we had to get used to seeing ourselves as a black doll, Thompson said Tuesday

Shindana also features white, Hispanic and American Indian lines, but its stock in trade is still the black doll, now in many models.

A miniature O. J. Simpson has been a favorite among child football fans, and it is joined this year by a Julius "Dr. J" Erving basketball doll.

A Redd Foxx doll talks with the entertainer's raspy voice when a cord is pulled, and a prototype of a Florence the Maid doll from 'The Jeffersons' television show is being tried out here.

Ann O'Neill, manager of the semi-annual show at Dallas' World Trade Center, said 112 temporary exhibitors have set up booths, joining more than 100 exhibitors who have permanent toy showrooms. About 2,000 buyers from the Southwest have registered, looking over items they'll want in their stores next summer and fall.

Amid the garish packaging of superhero merchandise, space fantasies and television tie-ins. some salesmen push for a quieter approach. "Play value" is a favorite phrase. "Let me point out a little of the play value on this to you," said Luke Dollar of Fisher-Price. He sent a "lift and load" model railroad through its motions.

Hasbro Industries has a "Super Joe Adventure Team." A sales representative, Dave Balthrop, said, "Light is the play value here," as he aimed a laser communicator at a space monster. If light hits the right point, the monster stops and screams, and his eyes turn red.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) -Former President Gerald Ford insists it is much too early to decide whether he'll make a run for the White House again in 1980. But he's sounding more and more like a candidate.

"I am healthy. I won't duck my responsibility and I'll be around one way or another in 1980," the former Republican chief executive said Tuesday in hedging questions at a news conference.

Then, Ford blasted President Carter, the Democrat who defeated him in the 1976 election.

He said Carter's proposed energy program is insufficient and misdirected.

Ford, who addressed a closed luncheon session of the National Petroleum Refiners Association, told a news conference the Carter administration "is going down the wrong road when they advocate total regulation" of oil and gas prices. He said lawmakers should take another look at the energy program he submitted to Congress in January 1975, which called for deregulation of prices for new natural gas and crude

"The Carter administration is wrong when they advocate a continuation of control over domestic crude oil prices. I don't believe that is the way for us to stimulate an in-centive for greater production of domestic crude oil or new natural gas," Ford said. "The Carter administration's energy program is basically unsound and insufficient and it could have a serious impact on the future security. economically as well as militarily, of the United States.

Ford said that is what he told the 2,400 oil refiners at the closed luncheon.

The suntanned former president said he has received "considerable encouragement" to make the 1980 race but has told supporters an organized campaign for his nomination would be premature now.

Suit alleges information misuse By KEN HERMAN later pleaded guilty to theft-related charges and the corporation was BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) - An Illinois insurance company, using surreptitiously-obtained medical information about a severely injured South Texas man, reduced by $150,000 a settlement offer to the man's family, alleges a suit filed by the family.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court here Tuesday, said the information was obtained by a private detective agency in Denver from hospitals in Kansas and Texas and supplied to a Long Grove, Ill-based insurance

The detective agency and three of its employees were indicted by a Denver grand jury. The employees dissolved by authorities.

James Lowell Bookout, injured near Santa Rosa in 1969 when he was knocked off his motor scooter by a low-hanging telephone wire, had brought suit against General Telephone Co. of the Southwest.

Bookout, now 25, was in a coma for several days and was initially hospitalized for two months. In the four years after the accident, he spent several months in institutions.

Some of the medical information concerning Bookout described him as suffering from severe mental problems, thus causing his attorneys to doubt his ability to testify against the telephone company.

The lawsuit said American Motorists Insurance Co, paid on Bookout's medical expenses until April 1973 when it gave the man's family two weeks notice it would stop payments. The family filed suit the following month.

In October 1974, Bookout's family agreed to a $300,000 settlement. But the current lawsuit claimed the settlement would have been $450,000 if the insurance company had not known of Bookout's mental problems. Bookout's records were among those seized by officials during a raid on the Denver offices of Factual Service Bureau. Colorado Assistant Attorney General Jim Bayless said more than 1,000 medical files were

A spokesman for American Motorist said he was familiar with the Denver investigation of the private detectives. 'Our company was completely exonerated in that situation," said Stephen Lesnik, vice president of communications and public affairs.

'If there wasn't this lawsuit, I could tell you a lot of things.' The private investigators' reports concerning Bookout's medical records - from ScottWhite Hospital in Temple, Texas; Memorial Medical Hospital in Corpus Christi; the nowdefunct Seaview Hospital in Corpus Christi and the Menninger Clinic, in Topeka, Kan. - were mailed to the Bookouts in January by the district a cigarette lighter. Officials said Trull asked for $1.6 million from Estes and Billy D. Pyron, the hostage's employer.

Jury selection began Tuesday, but no jurors were selected.

The defense has subpoenaed 55 witnesses in the case, including Estes and several of his friends and relatives.

Longview attorney G. Brockett Irwin said he will seek to determine at the Thursday hearing what happened to a letter that Trull claims he turned over to District Attorney A. D. Clark III last fall. The letter was reportedly one of numerous documents allegedly showing Estes' return to high finance that Trull gave to officials.

The letter by Estes' secretary reportedly acknowledges the receipt from Trull of more than half a million dollars for land in Smith County in East Texas.

WASHINGTON (AP) -Private firms would have to raise the forced retirement age from 65 to 70 under legislation that

The bill, sent to the Senate on a 391-6 vote Tuesday, also would abolish mandatory retirement for federal workers starting Sept. 30.

It would order a Labor Department study on eliminating forced retirement in the private sector as well.

The measure would tell private businesses with raise the mandatory retirement age by next January. Unions would have two years to work the new law into their contracts.

The law would not apply to top-level businessmen in the last two years of work who would earn up to $27,000 in annual pensions.

Mexican buses hit killing 30

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — Two Mexican passenger buses collided head-on about 40 miles south of the border town of San Luis, killing at least 30 persons and injuring scores of others, San Luis police said.

The police said many of the victims burned to death in a fire that erupted after the crash. U.S. Customs agents at the San Luis Port of Entry said Mexican authorities had told them that the accident occurred about 8 p.m. Tuesday and involved two buses carrying 81 persons. They said a small car also was involved, but they did not know how many persons were in the vehicle.

San Luis police said 30 persons were killed, but U.S. Customs agents said they were told the figure was closer to 40.

Discussing the educational requirements, Marshall said even a four-year college degree is not the sure ticket to a good job that it once was. He said that in recent years, more and more college graduates have been forced to seek employment fields not traditionally entered by

Miners feeling pinch; may ratify agreement

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) - "My men don't like the contract but they're getting hard up, they're feeling the financial pinch," says the president of a striking United Mine Workers local in Pennsylvania.

That's why Joseph Mucho thinks his men in Local 6394 at Sidman, Pa. - as well as miners throughout the coalfields - reluctantly will ratify a new proposed contract to end their 107-day walkout. "I think we can live with it," said Mucho.

That sentiment was echoed repeatedly in interviews this week with more than 100 UMW local presidents in Appalachia and the Midwest: The threat of the union's financial ruin may force a majority of the 160,000 strikers to ratify a contract few of them like.

The ratification vote on the tentative agreement - the third since the strike began - will be held Friday.

"It looks like it will pass," said Brogan Rose, president of the 1,200member Local 9690 in Mullens, W.Va. Like the rest of the miners, those in Mullens soundly rejected a previous coal industry contract offer early this

Not all the union presidents interviewed, however, predicted the latest proposed contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators

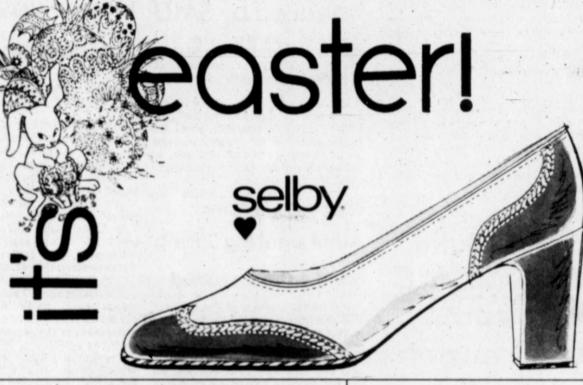

Association will be ratified. "They'll reject it," predicted Robert Fulk, president of Local 343 in Petersburg, Ind., "even though the BCOA is trying to starve us out. It's got nothing in it. It's worse than the other contract."

In Associated Press telephone interviews with 109 local presidents, 53 said they believed their members would vote for the contract, 22 said their members would vote against the pact and 34 said either that the outcome would be too close to predict or declined to express an opinion.

The presidents interviewed represent more than 23,000 of the 160,000 miners eligible to vote Friday.

The AP conducted similar interviews before the last contract proposal was rejected by a 2-1 margin. In that survey, 24 of 106 presidents predicted their locals would approve the pact, 35 predicted "no" votes and 47 made no predic-

Interest conflict accused

WASHINGTON (AP) -The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission says physician control of Blue Shield plans is a conflict of interest and may be one reason medical bills are rising faster than the overall inflation rate.

FTC Chairman Michael Pertschuk says his agency is investigating whether health bills are higher because doctors on Blue Shield boards set insurance payments for themselves and their colleagues. He also suggested to House subcommittee that the FTC be given jurisdiction over nonprofit organizations such as Blue Shield plans.

The executive director of New York state's Consumer Protection Board, Rosemary S Poole, said in testimony prepared for delivery today that physiciancontrolled plans in her state "operate with a clublike informality in a cartel atmosphere.'

She proposed that no more than 25 percent of Blue Shield boards be composed of health care providers.

Pertschuk told the House panel Tuesday that 46 of the 69 plans in the nationwide Blue Shield Association have boards of directors controlled by physicians or by physicians and hospital representatives.

Seven other plans appear to be controlled by medical societies or similar groups, while 16 boards of directors are neither dominated nor selected by health

"It is difficult to understand how the public interest can be served interest." Pertschuk

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Vitamins not alike

Dear Dr. Solomon: I keep reading about fatsoluble vitamins and water-soluble vitamins. Is there some important difference?-Gabriel P.

Dear Gabriel: Yes, there is a difference and it is an important one. It affects the way you absorb your vitamins and the length of time they stay in your

Fat-soluble vitamins like A and D can accumulate in your body fat if you get too much of them and, in this way, eventually reach dangerous levels. The condition is called hypervitaminosis-hyper meaning excessive. A prolonged binge of vitamin A or vitamin D supplements can actually kill you.

The water-soluble vitamins like C and the B group are simply cleared out of the body through the urine whenever you happen to get too much of them at any one time. However, even here excesses can be harm-

Dear Dr. Solomon: Every time I go to the doctor for a checkup, he tells me my cholesterol is a little higher than it ought to be. I try to cut down on butter and eggs and cream and bacon and all that, but I guess I don't do too good a job. Just recently I heard. however, that taking lecithin is the real way to get your cholesterol down. Is this the answer, do you

Dear Bob: There has been a certain amount of health-food publicity about lecithin lowering blood cholesterol and helping to prevent heart attacks. According to experts of the American Medical Assn., there is no scientific evidence to support this. Incidentally, lecithin is a blood fat just as cholesterol is-and a diet high in fats can increase the levels of both lecithin and cholesterol.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I was looking at the label of a container of salt I bought the other day, and I noticed that something called sodium silicoaluminate is an ingredient. What is it, and what is it doing there? Does anyone know if this particular additive is safe?-Molly S.

Dear Molly: Sodium silicoaluminate has been around some time. It is an anticaking agent. The Food and Drug Administration puts it in the category of food additives "generally regarded as safe," or GRAS for short.

Dr. Philip L. White, the American Medical Assn.'s top food expert, notes that a World Health Organization Committee has examined all the available information about this chemical and concluded that its use in foods in line with good manufacturing practice is not a health hazard. The usual concentration is one part in 100,000, so you would have to eat an awful lot of salt to get an appreciable amount of it-something you shouldn't do in the first place.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot giver personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Carter strategy recalls Kennedy

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - The major initiative in President Carter's urban policy bear's striking resemblance to the strategy adopted by John F. Kennedy before he decided it wouldn't solve the problem

When Carter unveils his urban policy Monday, the big new effort will be to foster economic development and create permanent jobs.

The argument for this emphasis was starkly stated in an Office of Management and Budget paper last

"The problems of America's cities, as of its lagging rural areas, are not problems of housing, or transportation, or social services, or community facilities. They are at base problems of economic development.

What Carter will describe as "distressed urban and rural areas" were known in 1961 as "pockets of poverty." Then as now, a Democratic president tried to stimulate a sluggish economy without losing business confidence from fears that he was a big

Kennedy's widely hailed answer was the Manpower Development and Training Act to train the hard-core unemployed in new skills. But as one Labor Department official said, "We would count the number of welders we had trained each month and pat ourselves on the back, but we had no idea whether anybody needed those welders."

By 1963, Kennedy decided a far broader approach was needed. Michael Harrington's book, "The Other America," had described a cycle of poverty in which addressing one problem like jobs tild little good because others - poor housing, health care. transportation, illiteracy - simply dragged people back into poverty.

Kennedy set in motion the war on poverty. A host of social programs followed under Lyndon Johnson, culminating in the Model Cities program which gave each city its own mix of solutions for problems.

Beginning in 1969, Richard Nixon dismantled many of these programs and turned others into flexible block grants giving local officials more freedom in spending the money. But total funding grew, and in the last decade the federal share of local general revenues rose from 10 percent to 50 percent.

Carter's decision to prepare a new policy is evidence that effort failed, but the reasons are disputed. Some say the federal government proved it cannot solve social problems; others say the programs never had enough time and that Nixon's changes only revealed local officials need federal controls to assure money is spent properly.

Only two months ago — fairly late in a year's work on urban policy — did Carter order a systematic analysis of existing federal aid.

Sources say he will propose altering some existing programs in ways similar to action taken by his Department of Housing and Urban Development even before urban policy work began.

One White House official argued the administra-tion had learned from history but implicitly acknowledged the new policy will not address all the difficulties uncovered since Kennecly's time.

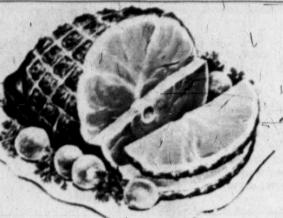

"Back then, we were trying to put square pegs in round holes." he said. "Now we're trying to put slightly oval pegs in round holes."

TENNESSEE COLONY, Tex. - Thirteen months ago Guy Marble Jr. was an aggressives, well-paid public realtions executive. Today he is No. 274515.

Since last Dec. 21, Marble, the so-called "friendly rapist" who attacked more than 50 North Dallas women in a two-year period, has resided in the Coffield unit of the Texas Department of Corrections after pleading guilty 4 1-2 months ago in a pleabargain agreement to seven counts of burglary of a

He also confessed to six rapes.

Now, Marble, a family man who was well-respected in the business community, is just a number among the 3,600 inmates on the sprawling 22,000-acre, maximum-security prison at Tennessee

"I've, needless to say, had a lot of time to think about myself." he said in a recent interview. "I'd hoped the name Guy Marble would never again appear in the newspaper."

ON THE MORNING of this interview, Marble was in the goose pond area of the prison swinging an ax as he and other inmates cleared trees. He was allowed to come to the Coffield unit interview room, but was hesitant to reflect on the bizarre double life that led to his eventual arrest Feb. 13, 1977, outside a North Dallas apartment house.

"I've asked myself nine hundred ninety-nine thousand, nine hundred ninety-nine times why I did it,' he said, folding his hands on the table in front of him.

Marble, a former journalist who friends said was a non-drinker and seemed shy around women, is pale but has gained weight since he left Dallas County Jail

At first, he is uneasy and his voice quavers. But soon he begins to relax and the public relations charm he once used to make his living surfaces.

HE TALKS ABOUT the day 10 years from now when, with time off for good behavior on his 60-year sentence, he may be eligible for parole. He talks about changing his name when he is released. Moving to another city. Starting a new career.

"I mean, when I get out and apply for a job, what am I going to say I've been doing for the last 10 years?" asked Marble, who recently turned 31 and celebrated his second birthday behind bars. "Am I going to tell them I cleared forests?"

By all appearances. Marble has adapted to prison life. He knows the prison language, and he is learning how to survive.

But, unmistakably, it is painful for him to talk about the past-a past that saw Guy William Marble Jr., a businessman on the move, the father of a young daughter, breaking into apartments, raping women and eluding the police for nearly three years.

"Maybe someday I'll go into deep psychoanalysis to find out why I did it," he said. "Everyone asks me why. I don't even know."

MARBLE THEORIZED that one thing that may have driven him to the crimes was that he eventually wanted to be caught.

"I've had more than one friend tell me I wanted to be here (in prison), that I was unhappy with my life." he said. "I didn't really like the work (shortly before his arrest he was promoted to vice presidentbusiness manager for Public Relations Advisers, a subsidiary of the Bloom Advertising Agency Inc.).

"I would tell them (Bloom) I was unhappy and they would give me a $2,000-a-year raise. Two or three months later, I was unhappy again. Now, after thinking about that, I'm either getting to know myself or I'm a shallow person," he said.

Marble has no history of mental illness, and friends say that prior to his arrest he never had any serious problem in his life. Marble and his wife, who was a campus beauty queen candidate at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos, were married in 1968 and two years later their daughter was born.

IRONICALLY, MARBLE claims that the night he was arrested near a North Dallas apartment com-plex he was actually visiting a friend.

"When I was arrested, I was 20 feet from my car and I was walking to it," he said. "I was there visiting a friend — someone I was trying to protect." When asked to elaborate, he mumbles and rests his head on the table. Marble clearly would rather talk about his college days at Southwest Texas State University, past newspaper jobs and his family, which, he said, has suffered greatly and is finally now out of the public spotlight. He makes it clear he wants it to stay that "I could get a lot of money for a book about this." he said. "One dude wants to pay me a lot of money for a book and make it into a screen play. But 15 years from now, I don't want my daughter to see that book lying around. She's only 8 years old and can forget a lot of this.

AFTER WORKING for three newspapers following college graduation in 1971, Marble became editor of a small magazine and then editor of Zale Corp.'s in-house newsletter before joining Bloom three years ago. He made friends and quickly rose through the ranks of the agency. Where he once handled some of the top accounts for a major advertising agency. Marble now looks forward to the day when he will become a prison trusty and can get off "the line" in the fields. He also hopes to get a typewriter in his

"I want to find out if I'm a writer," said Marble, who for a while played on the prison's basketball team. "I'll even settle for writing paperback Westerns.'

Marble said he thinks of the future because the past is such a nightmare. "Ask me if I'm ashamed for what I've done," he said. "Everyone else does."

WHEN ASKED, he puts his head back on his folded hands on the table and doesn't answer. Marble said he still wonders if perhaps he' shouldn't have gone to trial on rape charges instead of pleading guilty to seven counts of burglary. He could have received only two to 20 years for rape, as opposed to up to 99 years for burglary of a habitation,

"But the trials - and the district attorney's office would have gone through all of them - would have taken a year." Marble said. "I didn't want my family to go through that. I don't know if I could have gone through that. That's why the plea bargain.

But why the rapes? Was part of it the excitement of eluding and frustrating the Dallas police, who in their quest for the "friendly rapist" spent long hours sitting in parked cars and pacing darkened neighborhoods waiting for a rendezvous that finally came.

When asked, again, he puts his head down on his hands and slowly shakes his head.

"When I get out," he said, "I still will have at least 30 years to live. God knows, I've already lived 30."

THE WOMAN BEHIND THE MASK FINALLY REVEALED!

In her late twenties she married Richard Nixon. Once she did so and became aware of his passion for power that high office can confer, she consciously, deliberately programmed herself to help him achieve his political ambitions.

It was an awesome decision because it was to alter her life completely, making her the classic example of the woman who becomes a victim of man's single-minded drive for power.

From Pat's early childhood to the recent Haldeman disclosures, this almost all new material is detailed as never before. From her incredibly hard life as a farm girl, to a "you are there" tour of San Clemente, David delineates the true woman behind the mask.

Now the full, intimate account....the good, the bad....the girlhood years....the frustrating 28 years with her husband's powerful political drive....the family....her Watergate role, and its rivalries. behind-the-scenes hate emotion....the final tragedy....reveals the previously undisclosed story of remarkable Pat Nixon.

Latin America turns to juntas

DAVID F. BELNAP The Los Angeles Times

BUENOS AIRES - Simon Bolivar, the celebrated soldier and statesman. observed more than 150 years ago that Latin America "is ungovernable

If the number of military coups d'etat is any yardstick, not much has changed since Boliver's time.

Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra, who has been elected five times as president of Ecuador, has been deposed four times by the military. Echoing Bolivar, he once said:

"You can get elected, but you cannot govern.

Elsewhere in Latin America, the experience has been much the same. Today only five of the more than two score countries in the area are free of decisive military influence.

But there has been an important change. The caudillo, or strong man, has generally gone out of style. replaced by the junta.

The word "junta" has entered the English language as a term for a small ruling group, usually one that has come to power just after a coup d'etat. But in Spanish, "junta" means nothing more sinister than "board" or "council." Every corporation has a junta directiva - a board of directors - and every newspaper has a junta editorial.

North Americans tend to think of military leaders in this part of the world as jackbooted tyrants, dripping gold braid and mounted on white chargers. But times have changed. The tyrant has not disappeared entirely, but the men who make up the modern military junta are a new their problems. -Gen. Jorge R. Videla, president of Argentina and chief of its military junta, was a military educator for most of his career.

-Gen. Ernesto Geisel ran Brazil's biggest corporation, the oil monopoly Petrobra, before becoming president.

-Gen. Augsto Pinochet is a historian as well as head of Chile's military junta. -Gen. Francisco Morales Bermudez, an economist, heads the military junta in Peru.

Traditionally, Latin American military men feel that they have an obligation to maintain public order. When that order breaks down, they

That this happens so frequently lends support to the old European view that South America is "The most undisciplined continent in an undisciplined world.

Even civilian leaders have been known to accept the blame for military takeovers. President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela, a civilian elected by the people, once commented

'Latin American militarism should not be blamed on the military. It is due to our (civilian) political movements, which have not been able to understand our respective countries and have created vacuums. These vacuums have then been filled by the only organized institution that exists in Latin American countries."

Social scientists have theorized that Latin Americans are uncomfortable with weak leaders and that they regard military officers as more wholly beyond their reach honest than civilian leaders.

Physical bravery is much admired, too. Gen. Rene Barrientos, the late strong man of Bolivia, once silenced a public outcry against the military that erupted after three paratroops conscripts fell to their deaths when their parachutes failed to open. Charges were leveled that the chutes had not been packed properly.

Barrientos strapped on one of the bloodstained, presumably defective chutes, boarded a plane and jumped out high over La Paz, the Bolivian capital. Back on the ground, he insisted that none of the conscripts had pulled the ripcord.

Some military regimes in Latin America have been grimly repressive. Brazil's generals have been widely criticized for mistreating political prisoners, particularly at the prison run by the army's Department of Internal Operations in Sao Paulo. The military men in Uruguay have been criticized on similar grounds. and the soldiers who brought down President Salvador Allende in Chile have been censured repeatedly on the human rights question.

On the other side of the coin, the military often can bring about reforms that civilians find to be

Civilian governments, prey to pressure from special interests, often find it impossible to tackle problems like inflation and corruption. They have been known to look the other way until the situation is hopelessly out of control, then look to the military for solutions.

Peru's military leaders, for example, effectively broke the grip of the traditional oligarchy on the nation's economy - but they also crushed freedom of the press.

In Buenos Aires, once one of the smoggiest cities in Latin America. there is clean air today because a military mayor, appointed by the junta, is enforcing emission control regulations for the first time.

'The pall of pollution that Buenos Aires wore like a veil has lifted as if by magic." one newspaper said in an editorial.

Usually, the military junta consists of the senior commanding officers of the three armed services. Others, even civilians, can be included. Chile has a four-man junta, including the commander of the national uniformed

Flying Steers stampede to SWC's 1st NIT

NEW YORK (AP) - The day before the championship game of the National Invitation Tournament, Norm Sloan asked to speak ahead of the comical Abe Lemons at a press conference because "he's a hard act

Sloan found him tough to follow Tuesday night, too.

Lemons' Texas Longhorns got off and winging with a superlative fastbreak and this racehorse offense swept the Southwest Conference cochampions to a 101-93 triumph over Sloan's North Carolina State team in the NIT finals.

"I didn't even have to coach that one," said Lemons, smoking a Texassize victory cigar after his Texas-size victory. "I've got smart kids and they know what they have to do. I don't this is the easiest team I've ever coached."

EXCEPT FOR one brief moment when Lemons jumped off his sideline chair and took an official to task, the rexas basketball coach was the picture of contentment throughout this important contest at Madison Square Garden. Of course, Lemons didn't have too much to worry about the way things were going.

The Longhorns had a 17-point lead shortly before intermission and then built that to 24 early in the second half behind their high-powered trio of Jim Krivacs, Ron Baxter and John Moore. Krivacs finished with a game-high 33 points, Baxter 26 and Moore 22. The splendid efforts of Krivacs and Baxter, who also collected a game-high 12 co-winners of the tourney's Most Valuable Player trophy.

'The moon just wasn't right for North Carolina State." Lemons said. "They're a tough team. They played us hard...but the lights went out for

NORTH CAROLINA State simply was never in the game, falling behind at the start and standing helplessly by as the Longhorns scored almost at will with a terrifying fastbreak. Baxter triggered several of these manuevers with his expert, crosscourt passes, something the colorful, wry Lemons called a " fly pattern." which actually is a football term.

Krivacs, whose point production was the highest in the 41st NIT, was on the receiving end of many of Baxter's passes and hit a barrage of breakaway field goals throughout the contest as the Longhorns raced to their 26th victory in 31 decisions.

Lemons, of course, chose to go to this running game for obvious

"I WAS worried about North Carolina State's inside game,' said Lemons. "We're a short, frail team and when it gets rough inside, we have to get out. We just don't have the bench that North Carolina State has. They threw a lot of players at us and I had to basically stay with five guys."

"Everything they did, they executed well," noted the North Carolina State coach. "I have great respect for Lemons and that team. Before the tournament, I knew they were a good team. But now I think they're a great team.

"They challenge every defensive pattern that you throw at them. The way they can shoot, it's almost suicide to try a zone. They are an excellent tournament team. They never get shaken. Our size was not ready for them and they just out-quicked us at every position. What it boils down to was that they beat us bigger than that final score. They really put it to us."

North Carolina State, 21-10, a poised team in Sunday night's semifinal victory over Georgetown, was just the opposite in the finals. The Longhorns barely gave the Wolfpack a chance to catch its breath while running away to a 14-4 lead at the start.

Several North Carolina State turnovers contributed to this early Texas blitz and by the time the first half was over, the Longhorns were sitting on a

WHAT DID Lemons tell his team at halftime?

'We just went over some defensive assignments," he said.

Obviously, no attention was needed for the offense. That just continued to come naturally for the nation's 17thranked team as the Longhorns' Big Three kept pouring it on at the start of the second half. And they soon held a commanding 24-point advantage at

Lemons noted that his Longhorns did all right for a team that was picked in pre-season polls to finish fifth in

"No one hurt us bad all year," he reflected. "The guys do their job." In an earlier consolation game for third place. Rutgers whipped Georgetown 85-72 as James Bailey

Odessa Permian pounced on three to Zachary) double play. Midland High errors in building up a 6-2 lead going into the last of the sixth and then Conley Crawford arrived in the nick of time from the bullpen to douse what threatened to become a raging inferno as the Panthers posted a 6-4 District 5-4A baseball victory at Memorial Stadium Tuesday. Jimmy Zachry, who had doubled home Midland's first two runs in the third, launched the promising sixth with the rally's lone hit. Then, James Allen walked.

Permian starter Byron Taylor notched his sixth and seventh strikeouts and seemed on the verge of escaping as he had earlier when the Panthers backed him up with two double plays. But suddenly his control deserted him and he walked pinchhitter Paul Cox and Archie Booth to force in a run. That brought in Crawford, who arrived with a can of oil, or, at least, that's what it seemed like when he hit pinch-hitter David Brigham with his first pitch.

THAT FORCED in another run, but Crawford ended the inning with a strikeout and Midland's last threat evaporated with three runners left on Midland starter Tracy Gann fell behind 2-0 in the first when Dean Fields walked, Gary Hix bounced his first of two doubles over the fence in left and both runs scored when second baseman Zachry couldn't handle Roger Lightfoot's two-out popup.

In the third, Permian chased Gann as Fields lined a single to left, Hix knocked in a run with a double into the left field corner and Vic Vines singled. Lightfoot grounded into a force at second, but when Gann went 2-0 on Brian Vickers, Bud Brigham reliev-

Kevin Cooper's muff of Vickers' fly to short left and a wild pitch moved the runners to second and third. An error let a run score and moved runners to first and third. That's when Permian tried to squeeze.

Steve Northcutt reached across the plate and dumped the bunt. Brigham raced in an tossed to catcher James Allen to nail the runner. Brigham and Steve Cole then worked to the pick play to erase Chez at second.

Permian's insurance run came in the sixth on a single by Scott Herrin, a sacrifice and Dan Fields' double.

Zachry's double over second and into the hole in right-center in the third scored Booth, who had singled, and Ricky Goode, who had walked, for Midland's first two runs.

The win left Midland 0-1 in the district and 6-7 for the season while Permian is 5-6 for the season.

Williams back in old haunts

By THOMAS BOSWELL The Washington Post

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. For five years, Ted Williams was away from the hunt that he loves best. He had tried to satisfy himself with the fly cast at dawn, the downturning flick of the wrist and the splash. In winter, he lives in the Florida Keys, trolling for bonefish near Islamorada. In summer, the spiky air of Canada calls him to Miramachi to pursue the Atlantic salmon, greatest of game fish. And, in the fall, the woods of Maine are lovely, dark and deep. What better, for a man without promises to keep than to set out early from Bangor with gun on arm. But what of spring?

Cordova's curves lure Lee Rebels into defeat

By BOB DILLON R-T Sports Writer

ODESSA - Curveballing righthander Rene Cordova set the Robert E. Lee Rebels down with five hits here Tuesday afternoon as the Odessa Bronchos posted a 3-0 baseball victory at Fly Field.

Cordova fed the Rebels curveballs more than 90 per cent of the time and had pin-point control in blanking the Rebels in the District 5-4A opener.

Batterymate Mario Alvarado and pinch-hitter Mando Hinojos were the big hitters for the Bronchos who were chalking up their seventh win in 10 outings. Hinojos came in to blast a two-run double off reliefer Mark Denny in the bottom of the fourth inning. Denny came in to replace starter Gary Gibson and was greeted on his first pitch with the two-bagger that bounced over the fence in left field for a ground rule double ALVARADO SLAMMED a long home run off Denny in the bottom of the fifth inning to give the Red Hosses all the runs they needed. Alvarado's homer sailed over the 360foot sign in left-center.

Odessa threatened first in the bottom of the first when centerfield Cal Adams rammed a double up the power alley in left-center, but a great throw from Todd Clements in left to Steve Pitts at short, turned Adams away from a triple when third baseman Terry Willis took the relay from Pitts for the tag.

Willis legged out an infield hit for the Rebs in the second, but died there when Pitts flew out to right. PAT MOORE, who had two of Lee's five hits, doubled after two were out in the top of the third inning, but also died on base when Tyler Alcorn tapped back to Cordova on the mound. Gibson, who absorbed the loss, pitched out of bases-loaded jams in both the second and thing innings before he walked Glen Rhodes and his Joe Cortez with a pitch in the fourth to bring in Denny.

Lee threatened in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings, but came away empty-handed all three times.

In the fourth, after two were out. Clements singled into left, but Willis grounded out to the mound and in the fifth, again after two were out. Don Rasure and Moore came up with back-to-back singles, but Alcorr struck out swinging.

After one was away in the sixth, Craig Van Horn was safe on a throwing error by shortstop Brian Cantrell, but Clements struck out and Willis grounded out to short.

LEE WENT down in order in the seventh inning, giving Coach Ernie Johnson's crew a 9-5 season mark going into today's game with Waco University High at the Lee diamond

Lee, Midland to run at Del Rio

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

DEL RIO-Since the Queen City Relays is being held here Thursday night, the Midland High and Midland Lee trackmen have had little time to prepare for the meet, but that could have its good

After last Friday's Tall City Relays at Midland's Memorial Stadium, Lee coach Sam Volpe and Midland boss Ed Nixon may want their runners to just hold onto what they've got.

Lee runners improved their marks in seven events last Friday night while just missing a title by a hair on the last event of the night. Midland High, on the other hand, got three improvements and a long sought after victory in the 220 to boot. Both coaches would have to be pleased with a repeat performance

THE REBELS may be another title contender here Thursday in the 7 p.m. finals, and Lee would love to come away with a victory since San Angelo will be in the field again. The Bobcats won the mile relay Friday in the Tall City run to take a four-point victory over Lee, and the Rebels would like to turn the Midland High would like another repeat performance from senior Alvin Price. Price won his first 220 race of the year with a 22.6 and placed second in the 100 with his best time of the year, a scorching 9.8, which is the best mark in the district this year. It has been a long time coming for the fleet the return to form by Dwight Washington.

senior, but Alvin may now be hitting his high water mark as the district meet approaches.

THE SHOT put also looks brighter for the 'Dogs since Brian Booker increased his best throw to 52-8, two-feet better than his previous best, and David Simmons also had his best with a 51-21/2.

Lee's 440 relay team blazed to a 42.9 for the best mark in the district. Their previous best was 43.5, and with a solid relay team. Lee may be able to compete for a few titles. Jerry Moore, Jami Berry, Doug Guthrie and Dwight Washington form the

Guthrie also had a 9.9 last week in the 100, which was a major surprise, and is now in line to compete in the district meet. Sophomore Phil Carlton improved his 440 time by a full second with a 50.5 to share top district standing, and he keeps improving.

STEVE HOOPER, another senior Rebel, has now won two races in a row. He won the two-mile run last week, and the mile run at Amarillo the week before. Elmer Montgomery, having his first good varsity showing last week, recorded a 23.1 in the 220 and placed in the 100. The Rebs could really use this kind of help as the district showdown nears. In the field events. Jody Sessoms had a leap of 20-11 in the long jump for his best while Jeff McCowan increased his discus mark to 147-10, a three-foot increase. McCowan was also second in the shot put while junior teammate Rodney Taylor placed third with his best throw of 52-1034.

ABOUT THE only thing the Rebs need Thursday is

Washington had a field day in the prelims last Friday, but could not turn in a winning effort. He was not close to posting his best of 9.9 in the 100 or 22.3 in the 220. It was if the Tall City meet had been run on two different days. He won both prelim heats and teamed with Montgomery to knock Permian's vaunted 100-yard expert Danny King out of the finals. The finals were a different story, however.

The Bulldogs will also be looking for improvement in the 880 and mile. Jeff Adkins, who won his first two miles this year, has a two race losing streak. He had a sub-par 4:32 in the Tall City run and lost to San Angelo's Lon Albert for the first time this year. He can make amends this week. It must be noted that Adkins had his best mile with a 4:27.4 in a losing cause at Odessa two weeks ago, but he did not lose to

Chuck Stump turned in a 2:00.1 in the 880 to lose to San Angelo's Ed Bruning for the third time this year. That is nothing to be ashamed of since Bruning is the defending 5-4A champion and has run 1:56 and 1:57 in his last two outings. Stump's best is 1:59.2, and he says that he can beat that mark. The Queen City run will be important for both teams since the meet is under the lights. The District 5-4A meet will also be under the lights at Memorial Stadium April 14.

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter and General Manager Paul Owens are upset, but Manager Danny Ozark, implacable as ever, says he plans no fine or reprimand for slugger Greg Luzinski's rampage in the team's clubhouse.

Luzinski, the usually eventempered player whose nickname is "The Buil" because of his burly physique and hitting prowess, tore up the Phils' locker room late last week before the team left for a three-day trip to the Dominican Republic to play the St. Louis Cardinals.

Luzinski was upset over making the trip, as were many of his teammates. disgruntled by the team's delayed departure and irritated because some teammates were excused from the trip, according to eyewitnesses.

HIS TANTRUM left three batting helmets smashed and several lockers damaged, along with a radio owned by the clubhouse manager.

"I've gotten upset and thrown some things myself in my time." said Ozark, whose stoicism is a trademark. "I can understand it. It doesn't bother me.

"We didn't leave at a certain time and there were guys involved in instigating," said the manager, who didn't name the other players.

Owens said Luzinski, runnerup in 1977 to Cincinnati's George Foster for Naional League Most Valuable Player, apologized for the outburst that surprised almost everyone on the

'He apologized like the man that he is," said Owens. "Damn right I was upset. I didn't know about all the damage because I arrived after it was all over

Owens said Carpenter called him in Santo Domingo to tell him what had happened at the Clearwater clubhouse. "Ruly was very upset," he said.

"What upset me is that Danny was there and didn't stop it." Ozark dismissed the incident as

After Baxter and Krivacs were deservedly named co-winners of the MVP trophy in the Longhorns' 101-93 triumph over North Carolina State in Tuesday night's finals of the 41st National Invitation Basketball Tournament, they exchanged pats on the back with each other and their teammates.

Baxter expressed surprise at his selection, although Krivacs didn't. But both agreed on one thing: the entire Texas squad deserved the accolade after their 'team victory' at Madison Square Garden.

With Baxter and Krivacs sharing the MVP award, it marked the first time that there have been co-winners in the NIT since 1952 when Tom Gola and Norm Grekin of La Salle both gained MVP honors.

Baxter, a 6-foot-4, 225-pound sophomore forward, and Krivacs, a wiry 6-1 junior guard, were instrumental in the Longhorns' easy victory over the Wolfpack. The dynamic pair keyed the Longhorns' offense from the outset and Texas built an insurmountable 54-39 halftime

Baxter scored 26 points, hauled down a game-high 12 rebounds and triggered the fast-breaking Texans' "fly-pattern" offense with long, looping outlet passes over the heads of N.C State defenders. Krivacs, the catalyst and sharpshooter in the Texas attack, hit 13 of 24 from the field for 33 points — tops in the entire tourney - while contributing nine assists, high in the game.

"I was surprised when they announced my name." said-Baxter, who also scored the 1,000th point of his career in only his second season with the Longhorns. "Krivacs is the key to the team. He makes us move and can score.

"The whole team really deserved the MVP award,' added Baxter, a Los Angeles native. "We play as a team. Whatever a team give us, we're going to take. I'll throw the long pass as long as they give it to me.

Craig succeeds Dark as new Padres pilot

shock in my entire baseball life," said Roger Craig when the San Diego Padres named him to replace Manager Alvin Dark. "But it is also the best shock I

The Padres fired Dark Tuesday in a suprise move. telling him the team's players felt he couldn't communicate.

Craig, a pitching coach for nearly a decade, was named interim manager when Padres Vice President Ballard Smith announced Dark's ouster. And at a later news conference, Padres owner Ray Kroc said Craig would be his manager. The 47-year-old Craig was offered a one-year contract with undisclosed terms following San Diego's 9-8 exhibition victory over San Francisco.

"I'VE BEEN a darned good pitching coach over

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) -"This is probably the biggest the years," said Craig, "and I feel I can be a darn good manager, too."

Dark was stunned by the firing.

"It was such a quick thing," said the 56-year-old "born again" Christian who had two years remaining on the contract he signed last May 30 when he succeeded John McNamara. Under Dark, the Padres won 48 games and lost 65

last season to finish fifth in the NL's West Division with an overall mark of 69-93. Before Dark was sent packing, San Diego was 5-8 in spring exhibition Players have complained that Dark was distant, called pitches from the bench and was unwilling to bend.

CRAIG PROMISED he'll delegate more authority to his coaches and to turn the unhappy ball club

'This team is going to have fun' he said, "because playing baseball is supposed to be fun. The guys are going to be loose and relaxed and they're going to play to their capabilities as a result.

"I don't know what we're going to do yet." Craig said. "But I do know we're going to be looking at a lot of different possibilities the remainder of spring

Dark was criticized for switching established players to new positions. But Craig said he may change that, suggesting for example that Bill Almon, last year's starting shortstop, will be getting more work there as a precaution in case rookie sensation Ossie Smith proves unready to make the leap to the

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market posted a moderate loss today on the heels of Tuesday's sharp

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 11 points on Tuesday, slipped another 2.34 to 760.48 by noon today. Losers held a 7-4 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Brokers said some light early selling might have prompted by substantiated rumors that President Anwar Sadat of Egypt had been assassinated. By mid-day sources in Cairo and the Egyptian embassy in Washington had denied the rumors. Several Wall Streeters said the reports had not gained much credence in the investment community even before they were denied. The Dow showed a loss of less than 4 points at its midmorning low, and trading was light by recent standards.

Alcoa was the most active NYSE issue, down 34 at 393/8 A 130,100-share block traded at 3934

Hughes Tool dropped 1/2 to 301/2 on reports that some analysts had lowered their earnings estimates for the company this year.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .10 to 49.95. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .06 at 127.26.

Moderate Quebec business force at odds with government

By NANCY L. ROSS The Washington Post

MONTREAL - Is the businessman public enemy number one in Quebec?

Premier Rene Levesque, in a Time magazine interview, characterized as "blackmailing people who can come in from outside, pick up our savings and ignore the majority around them.' Businessmen who oppose his government, he said, can expect to be answered "brutally" by Parti Quebecois minsiters. These ministers have called the business community among other things "men without souls or homelands," and "sellouts in feudal bondage" to the English-speaking establishiment.

In short, said Peirre Des Marais, president of the Conseil du Patronat (CPQ), umbrella organization of 126 associations employing 80 percent of Quebec's workforce - "Since Nov. 15 (1976, the date of Levesque's election), we've been treated like dirt.' Last month the Patronat presented the premier with a 12-page brief complaining about his unflattering references to business and his government's ambituity about the free enterprise system. Des Marais told Levesque the Patronat's members were also French Canadians and resented being treated as persona non grata by their own govern-

The Patronat criticized the Parti Quebecois for its economic programs, especially government intervention in the asbestos industry, the antiscab labor law, partial nationalization of the auto insurance industry — many of the same criticisms made by Anglo-phone businessmen. Moreover, the CPQ feels Levesque betrayed his campaign promise to restore good government and sneaked in the independence issue only after his election.

The brief reminded Levesque that his separatist policy does not have solid support in the business world - and added that the uncertainty over the question and timing of a referendum was partly to blame for the present economic malaise. Levesque's reply was to quote Harry Truman's admonition to get out of the kitchen if you can't stand the heat.

Some observers estimate that whereas 20 percent of their populaton at large may approve of independence, and 40 percent approve political separation with economic association with the other nine provinces. Levesque may have perhaps 5 percent of Quebec's businessmen behind him. Eliminating English Canadians and those whose working language is English could possibly raise that percentage to 10 percent of the French Canadian business community Mitzi Steinberg Dobrin, a business executive, heir to the Steinberg food chain fortune and the first woman director of the Royal Bank, is a Levesque supporter. She feels that his election has done a "lot of good. It had to come," she said, and now the "big Anglo firms" have started looking at the French

The greatest support for Levlesque's sovereigntyassociation plan — if not entirely for the man himself comes from the small-and medium-size Francophone business sector. "Levesque is not antibusiness," said Jacques Flahault, a film distributor for Cine-Canada, "he's just against some businessmen who resist change. Afte all, was President Kennedy anti-business because he called the steel leaders SOBs?" Flahault belongs to the Conseil des Hommes d'Affaires Quebecois (Council of Quebec Businessmen), a small group of French Canadians who see in independence a way to restore power to the provincial government and block the concentration of economic power in the hands of the multinational companies. A two-hour roundtable discussion recently in Montreal revealed how much these people are counting on sovereignty-association to redress historic grievances and to get them the share of the pie they believe they deserve. CHAQ's president, lawyer Andre J. Belanger, began by noting that in a province where 81 percent of the population is Francophone, French Canadians own less than 10 percent of the action in the primary sector such as the mining industry and 20 percent of manufacturing. It's only in the tertiary sector distribution, services - which is least important to economic development that they have a majority.

Levesque has said that nationalization of the asbestos industry will "allow Quebecers to gain access once and for all to the traditionally private and exclusive club of foreign operators and with them, as equals, promote in the shortest possible time the manufacturing of activities which we, the owners, have been deprived of for too long."

Tower testifies on Park link

WASHINGTON (AP) - Following a 90-minute appearance Wednesday before the Senate Ethics Committee hearing testimony concerning Korean influence buying, Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, said, "Obviously, in hindsignt, you'd like to pick your friends more carefully." Tower said he had attended "a maximum of six possible events" hosted by Korean businessman Tongsun Park during a 10-year period from 1965 to 1975. Tower also said he had turned down Park invitations "a minimum of seven times." Tower stressed that his association with Park did not affect the way he voted. "There has been no wrongdoing alleged." he said. "There has never been a charge or allegation by the committee or anyone else. Tower, who had disqualified himself from sitting on the Ethics Committee because of his prior "social association" with Park, said: "Based on the committee's inquiries to me today it is clear the committee is more interested in establishing patterns and practices of Korean nationals and did not view my acquaintances with such persons as suspect in The senator, who is seeking re-election this year, also noted that there had been "much unjustified speculation and conjecture during the last few weeks about my reasons for disqualifying myself from the committee's initial review into the Korean matter. My sole concern from the beginning has been to preserve the credibility and integrity of the committee and its work. Once it was known with certainty that Mr. Park was, in fact, returning to the United States to appear before the cognizant congressional committees, it was incumbent upon me to step aside temporarily,' Tower continued. "There have been some who have read something more sinister into my action. However, my decision amounted to a matter of principle, nothing more."

Tower also said that his records indicate that during the 1965-75 period, seven office appointments were scheduled for Park, "during at least three of which he was accompanied by other Koreans.' Tower also said former Korean Ambassador Kim Dong Jo had been scheduled for two office appointments, and had sent Tower five invitations to social functions which the senator attended. Tower also noted that the Korean Embassy had sent 18 additional invitations to his office which had been "regretted."

who want a significant share of the Japanese market cannot rely solely on the Japanese people's taste for imported goods.

TOKYO - American businessmen

By SAM JAMESON The Los Angeles Times

That is the advice of Michibiro Nishida, executive vice president of Honda Motor Co.

Some Japanese, he said in an interview, will buy imported products whatever the price because custom here dictates that guests be served expensive things. He likes Suntory, a Japanese whisky, Nishida said, ad-

The problem for foreigners wanting a larger share of Japanese market, he went on, is that only a relatively small number of Japanese can afford expensive imports - a Ford Pinto costs

America should study tastes, demands of Japan Nishida advised Americans to study the Japanese people, "find out what their preferences are. then manufacture that kind of product."

He said he was speaking frankly "in the hope of helping to promote more imports into Japan. For their part, he said, Honda and other Japanese firms that sell in the United States must do more to help the American economy. Such an effort is needed, he added, to reduce trade friction between the two

"The policy which has been followed by Americans and Europeans here has not been a mistake," he said. "Their products may be expensive but they have a luxury value. They are hard to buy. Therefore, a special class of people want them. But to try to expand that kind of sales is impossible.

Nishida cited the example of the Ford Motor Co., whose products Honda sells through its distribution system in Japan.

"Almost all the people using Ford products are doctors, lawyers and presidents of small companies people who are in a position to take advantage of some kind of tax break in writing off the purchase of a car as a business expense," he said. "No ordinary individual buys Ford products

Nishida acknowledged that the cost of establishing another distribution system would be staggering. Setting up a single showroom would cost from $2 million to $3.3 million. To cover the whole country, with expectation of selling 10,000 cars, the cost could be $300 million or more.

Even then, "there is no guarantee that cars would be sold," Nishida

La Plata holds smoking 'title'

By DAVID F. BELNAP The Los Angeles Times

LA PLATA, Argentina - The beautiful woman slides into the Mercedes-Benz, sighs and says to the handsome man, "It reminds me of Paris."

"But this is a German car," he protests.

"Not the car, darling, your cigarette." The scene is from an Argentine television commercial, and the man is smoking Parisiennes, a brand made locally but named with an eye on the Argentines' love for all things French.

Snob appeal is the theme of much cigarette advertising in this country. The makers of one brand boast that theirs is the most expensive on the market.

But regardless if the advertising is effective, Argentines are uncommonly heavy cigarette smokers, and elsewhere in Latin America, smokers are not far behind. According to the Pan American Health Organization, which has studied smoking habits, 58 percent of the men here in La Plata are cigarette smokers, compared with 42 percent of American men. In Sao Paulo, Brazil, the figure is 54 percent and in Bogota, Colombia, it is 52 percent.

The other day a reporter joined four other persons waiting outside the health secretary's office in this provincial capital. Three were chainsmoking cigarettes and the fourth was coughing.

Inside, the official, Dr. Roberto J. Ortiz, greeted a visitor by pointing to a large crystal ashtray halffilled with cigarette stubs. "That is the product of a meeting I had with a group of public health experts just before you came Ortiz, a nonsmoker, refused to offer a reason why La Plata was the "champion" cigarette-smoking city among those surveyed by the health organization. But he speculated on a couple of points: -Among men, pressures to get ahead in this nation with Latin America's biggest middle class.

-Among women, a drive to keep up with the men. The health organization found a relationship between status and cigarette smoking in all cities it studied.

"Current and former smokers present excessive proportions of those who have attained high educational levels, the difference being even more striking among women than in men," its report said.

The nightly scene at the Periplo Bar, an "in" establishment for the beautiful people in Buenos Aires, underscores that conclusion.

Periplo's two-story main room is gray with cigarette smoke despite its hard-working airconditioning equipment. Only the most prosperous by implication the best-educated - can afford its prices. These range from $3.20 for a lemonade to $5.50 for a gin and tonic made with imported English

But cigarette smoking is by no means limited to the relatively well off. Cigarettes are included in the list of items that make up the "essential" family market basket used to calculate Argentina's consumer price index.

Five manufacturers here produce 33 brands of cigarettes in 71 different kinds and sizes - short, king-size, 100 mm, 120 mm, standard, light and menthol. Argentines smoke them at the rate of 75 packs a year for every man, woman and child. Nine U.S. brands are made here under license, but they do not taste like American cigarettes because the local blending process is different. Addicts of real American cigarettes can buy them on the black

None of these - not even the imports - carries a health warning. U.S. makers do not have to include the warning on cigarettes produced for sale over-

Cigarette advertising also carries no warnings and such advertising appears in all the major print and broadcast media. Few "no smoking" signs are seen in public places.

can be read in a mirror. Sometimes columns read better that way

Adjust the line space selector to double spacing and type your byline in upper case at the center of the top of the page. This provides both inspiration and a sense of obligation.

Now, flex the fingers importantly like Vladimir Horowitz about to commence a concert and look across the top of the page at the wall.

In the little monastic cubicle where I ply my craft the wall is particularly fascinating. It has a large crack beginning at the telephone outlet and spreading all the way up to the top left-hand corner of my college diploma, which, by the way, is in Latin and begins, "In Republica Massachusettensium

Some days the crack looks like the delta of the Nile just beyond the Aswan Dam. Other days it reminds me of that human skeleton chart we had in biology class showing all the veins and arteries.

This might be a good time to check the margin control bell and adjust the tab key to 10 spaces for a new paragraph so when an idea comes you will be ready to blaze away.

Gazing out the window could prove beneficial. Or it might be wise to sharpen a pencil or two. Some find a trip to the water cooler refreshing at this interim point between gestation and delivery

There are all kinds of tricks to this trade. Someone once told humorist Robert Benchely that when in a quandary over how to begin a piece the best way was to put down one word, any word, that came to mind and wait for the rest of the sentence to suggest itself. Benchley typed the word "the" at the top of his page and brooded for more than an hour in his little nook at the New Yorker, waiting for the muse to strike. Finally, he typed " ... Hell with it." and went out to lunch.

So it might be better to start with a word like hippopotamus or hypotenuse, if you can find anything informative to say about them. Most people don't realize that the hippopotamus is almost exclusively herbivorous. Most people don't care, but then you can't always pander to the taste of your readers. There is, however, no great public interest in hypotenuses so it would be wise not to force that subject too often Anyhow, when you have covered the two pages with several hundred words you have written a column. Like now.

LCRA opposes Stacy Reservoir

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN-Opposition by the Lower Colorado River Authority apparently will be voiced before the Texas Water Commission next Tuesday on the application of Colorado River Municipal Water District to construct Stacy Dam and Reservoir.

Hearing on the CRMWD application for the project on the Colorado River in Concho, Runnels and Coleman counties is set for 10 a.m. March 28 before the three-member commission.

Opposition had been expected from the LCRA, and General Manager Charles Herring has released a statement saying the project "could have a serious impact on the Highland Lakes," downstream from the Stacy site.

CRMWD is requesting a total impoundment of 554,339 acre-feet of water, with diversion and use of 89,000 acre-feet annually for municipal purposes, and 30,000 acre-feet annually for industrial purposes. Another 200 acre-feet for use during construction is Lockwood, Andrews and Newman was hired by the LCRA to study effects of Stacy Reservoir on downstream lakes.

Herring says that report "indicates this water (diverted by CRMWD) would be consumed by a proposed power plant, the City of San Angelo and nearby residents in three counties-Concho, Runnels and Coleman-so that little, if any. (water) would be directed back into the river for downstream use.'

"In my judgement, this project, if approved, would encroach on the water rights of all permitted used downstream." Herring contends.

"Had Stacy Dam existed during the drought of 1951-52 when the Lake Travis level dropped to 614 feet mean sea level...the dam would have reduced the combined storage of both (Lakes) Travis and Buchanan to less that 200,000 acre-geet, a fraction of the 2,160,000 acre-feet at operating levels of 618 feet and 1,020 feet respectively.

The result of such a reduction could be impairment of the lakes for recreation, reduction of hydroelectric generation, and reduction of downstream water supplies, including the drinking water supply of the City

Herring says the LCRA will "participate actively" in all proceedings on Stacy Reservoir "so that we may direct attention to the detriment the project would cause to the authority, its customers and its neighbors along the Colorado River.

The TWC hearing will be held in the Stephen F. Austin State Office Building.

China cautiously adopting bonus' system for workers

By LINDA MATHEWS The Los Angeles Times

HONG KONG - Shortly before Mao Tse-tung's death, Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping and Teng's young grandson reportedly paid a courtesy call on the ailing chairman. Mao had often been at loggerheads with Teng, whose economic theories struck him as neocapitalism, but the old man liked children.

'Call me Uncle." Mao said to the grandson. "Oh, I couldn't do that, Chairman Mao," the little boy protested

m, 6:40 pm

To win the child over, Teng suggested that Mao offer him an apple, Mao did, and clucked approvingly as the boy bit into it and said, "Thank you, Uncle." 'See," Teng said, "what a little material incentive

Teng got the best of that exchange which, apocryphal or not, is now making the rounds of the Peking diplomatic corps. And, simply by outlasting Mao, Teng also appears to have won the ideological debate that raged between them about how best to motivate China's working class.

Mao, always the revolutionary, believed that productivity could be increased simply by raising the political consciousness of the workers. A love of socialism ought to be enough to motivate anybody. Mao decreed a decade ago at the height of the Cultural Revolution, when he abolished bonuses and overtime pay. Teng, perhaps more cynical about human nature, put his faith in material incentives and consistently called for their restoration.

Last week, Mao's successors formally sided with Teng, the No. 3 man in the new hierarchy, and announced that bonuses will be resurrected as part of their drive to spur industrial production and transform China into a "great and modern socialist state" by the end of the century.

'We must oppose egalitarianism and apply the principle of more pay for more work and less pay for less work," Chairman Hua Kuo-feng declared in a message on the new 10-year Economic Development Plan. He directed China's economic planners to work with local authorities in implementing a system of bonuses, piecework pay and other rewards for outstanding workers.

The return of material incentives may signal an end to a troubled period in China's industrial history in which factory workers have gained a reputation for being lackadaisical and unproductive. Foreigners who have visited Chinese plants have come back with tales of idle assembly lines. unrealistically low production targets and undisciplined workers who shirk their duties to play cards.

For many workers, there has been little incentive to produce. Jobs are guaranteed by the state. And because of Mao's insistence of egalitarianism, every Chinese worker has been paid a monthly salary roughly equal to that received by the next fellow on the assembly line, whether he was playing poker or setting new production records.

Discontent over this situation has prompted a certain black humor. According to the joke that has circulated in Chinese factories, "The man who goes to work is paid 32 yuan a month and the man who doesn't gets 34 yuan because he doesn't have to pay

At current exchange rates, a yuan is worth roughly

But now, the egalitarianism Mao preached is being denounced by the People's Daily, the Communist Party's official newspaper, for "dampening the enthusiasm of the masses and seriously hindering the development of the productive forces.

Hua, in his economic message, made the same point to justify his deviation from Maoism. "The enthusiasm of the masses cannot be aroused if no distinction is made between those who do more work and those who do less, between those who do a good job and those who do a poor one, and between those who work and those who don't," Hua said. Still, Both Hua and Teng are obviously sensitive to accusations, perhaps aimed at them by young and doctrinaire Maoists, that they are directly repudiating the late chairman.

The leadership's propagandists laid the groundwork for a return to bonuses with long treatises that

Court, laws cite students' rights

By LOUISE COOK . Associated Press Writer

You want to look at your child's scholastic record and the principal turns you down. Do you have the right to demand the information?

A school dress code requires that boys' hair be kept above the collar. Your son wants to wear his longer.

In both case, the answer is "yes." Supreme Court decisions and federal laws enacted since the start of the 1960s have given public school students new legal rights and the government is trying to help youngsters and their parents learn what "Your Legal Rights and Responsibilities" is available, at no charge, from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 652F, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

Here are some key issues for students: STUDENT RECORDS

The 1974 Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act gives certain rights to eligible students or their parents or guardians. (An eligible student is one who is 18 or over or is attending any school after graduation from high school.) Under the law, an eligible student or his or her parent or guardian has the right to review and inspect the student's records, except for records made and kept by one person such as a psychologist or social worker. The parent or student also is entitled to challenge the records for inaccuracy.

SEX DISCRIMINATION

A 1972 federal law prohibits schools from treating boys and girls differently because of sex. With certain exceptions, schools cannot provide separate classes or activities for boys and girls; deny students the right to take a course because of sex; apply different rules about physical appearance to boys and girls; or make different disciplinary rules or enforce them differently on the basis of sex.

SUSPENSION

Under a 1975 Supreme Court ruling, school officials suspending a student for 10 days or less must tell the student what rule has been broken, write it down and give the student a copy. These articles twisted themselves into Marxist-Leninist knots in trying to explain the difference between the concepts of "to each according to his work." which is acceptable, and "material incentives," a term that is anathema because it smacks of

They look similar in some ways but are essentially different." one Kwangming Daily article said.

"Ideologically, to each according to his work is a part of Marxist political economy, while material incentives are a revisionist concept. In essence, to each according to his work is a principle of socialist distribution aimed at eliminating exploitation and manifests the interrelationship among the state, the collective and the individual, while material incentives are a revisionist means to corrode the laboring public ideologically and to squeeze sweat and blood out of the workers.

Another article addressed Mao's fear that material incentives would make stronger, more energetic workers wealthier than their fellows and create a new elite.

HOLLYWOOD - April 1 marks Emily McLaughlin's 15th anniversary as Nurse Jessie Brewer on ABC-TV's "General Hospital." She and John Beradino who plays Dr. Steve Hardy are the only two remaining members of the original cast. During Emily's 15 years with the show. Nurse Jessie has been married five times, accused of murder, been widowed, divorced, lost two babies and suffered through 10 days of labor after 11 months of pregnancy!

In real life, Emily has recently been touring with a company of soaper stars she organized, performing 'Plaza Suite" and "Absurd Person Singular" and has been teaching a course in personal development at the John Robert Powers School:

It's an old refrain the actress has used so often that it's almost boring, but it's also one her devoted male companion was hoping to change. We're referring to JACLYN SMITH'S in-print insistence that she has no plans - or interest - in marrying DENNIS COLE. Previously, she'd simply assured her family in Texas that marriage was not in the offing. Well.

ENTERTAINMENT

there were quite a few set-side onlookers who were hard-pressed to cover up their snickers when Jaclyn went out of her way to publicly deny the frequent marriage rumors. The big question is did Dennis give Jackie the ring he had put on layaway.

Writer dotes on difficulty

EDITOR'S NOTE - For many years, S. J. Perelman has diverted a large band of readers with his humorous books and articles, delivered in polished prose. Underlying that is a remarkably strenuous method. At 74, in a relaxed conversation with a reporter, Perelman talks about his craft, his motley experiences and the contemporary scene.

By SUKEY PETT

NEW YORK (AP) -- Even for S. J. Perelman, who has traveled through Mau Mau country with an allfemale safari and dotes on difficulties, the scene in Australia was a little trying

Picture Perelman, one of the country's foremost comic writers, in an Australian airliner about to be hijacked. The stewardess announced: "If there are any people aboard who are subject to cardiac arrest. they'll be permitted to leave the aircraft."

Twenty-seven of the 35 passengers arose, including Perelman, but Perelman had a special dilemma. He had nine Ming plates, 15 inches in diameter, that he bought in Indonesia. How to get these valuable objects out of the plane when the passengers had to clamber out without benefit of ramp steps?

Perelman nimbly clambered out, with crockery intact. "I never wrote about it," he says, "because except for that one remark by the stewardess, it wasn't really funny. The hijacker was killed by police, but not before he wounded a detective.

The humorously adventurous has seasoned Perelman's repertory for 40 years, through 21 books and innumerable articles in The New Yorker, His latest book, "Eastward Ha!" is a carousel about the rigorous eight months he spent traveling in Russia, Turkey, Greece, Scotland - and Hollywood.

"The point is," says Perelman, looking dashing. "that the comic writer is constantly searching for Perelman's strenuous method has left him clearly unshattered. At 74, sitting in his apartment overlooking Gramercy Park, he is a picture of understated elegance: Average height, with graying hair and an immaculate dove-colored moustache. Those oval, steelrimmed glasses he wears he brought back from

He was somewhat wounded, though, in the aftermath of the Australian hijack attempt a few years ago. The Ming plates he'd fretted over proved less precious than he had thought: When he sold them at Parke Bernet in New York, he lost $4 on the whole transaction

Unintentionally, it seems. Sydney Joseph Perelman, born in Brooklyn, "transported forcibly" to Providence, R.I., where he grew up, always wanted to for the humor magazine at Brown University and in his senior year was invited by The Judge. a well-known humor magazine, to drop in after graduation.

'I became very excited and saw visions of myself in a big studio surrounded by naked models and wearing a beret and Windsor tie." Perelman recalls. but when he went to New York the magazine didn't talk about a contract.

"I had a pretty thin time for a year and a half until managed to start selling my work. About a year and half later I began writing, which is a pretty natural transition for a comic artist.

A writer he remained, and among other things, he wrote numerous movie scripts, including the two Marx Brothers classics, "Horsefeathers" and "Monkey Business." (A typical Perelman line forever identified with Groucho: Informed by his secretary that "Jennings is waxing wroth outside." Groucho replies, "Well, tell Roth to wax Jennings for

Paul, by the way, is unhappy that he didn't think longer about it when he was offered "Bobby Deerfield" last year. The flick is hot at the box office and Paul could use a big hit.

The producers of a hit TV show have cautioned their young star to start staying home nights and getting some rest. The "teen-ager" has been showing up with bags under his eyes big enough for a crosscountry trip and it's beginning to show in the rushes

Meanwhile, his co-star is having an equally good time handling his new stardom and is spending his paychecks faster than they're coming in on limousines, champagne, etc. - you know, all those little things that make life worth living for in Hollywood.

MARK HAMILL already regrets his decision to relocate permanently to Hollywood. The Los Angeles Police Department has notified him that they cannot continue their extra patrols of the neighborhood in which he lives just to keep his overzealous fans away from his apartment door. He'd made a plea for protection after a couple of unpleasant middle-of-the night incidents. All the police have suggested is that Mark move, which he's doing, as soon as he can find a Realtor who doesn't stutter and get flustered when he walks into his office.

Move over MARIE OSMOND, you've got com-petition. Specifically, DEBBY BOONE, daughter of PAT BOONE, is riding the crest of the success of her recording of "You Light Up My Life" from the movie by the same name, and that recording has launched a roller-coaster career for clean-cut and wholesome Debby. She's being besieged with offers, and it'll surprise few if she becomes one of 1978s newest young stars.

We hear that CHER's New Deal Policy with ABC will net the lady a cool $2 million! Seems they have lots of faith in her even without SONNY. Also hear scriptwriters are banging their keys overtime trying to fashion a TV-movie script to show off even more of Cher's talents.

Naturally Cher's feeling great about it all. And P.S., she did not have her face lifted. All she did was have her breasts made smaller - smaller? - to look the way they used to before the birth of Elijah Blue.

Well-known for his generosity, the late ELVIS PRESLEY was often in the columns for his giftgiving. However, if the truth be known, the publicized gifts were just the tip of the iceberg. More often than not, Elvis would request that his donation or gift not be publicized, but now that he is dead, many are coming out and telling stories.

The most recent revelation is that Elvis once gave the Los Angeles Police Department $7,000 for their community affairs department.

The money went for Christmas toys for kids in the area, uniforms for the children's marching band and equipment for the explosive-sniffing dogs owned by the department.

Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis says he will dedicate a plaque to the singer's memory at the next convention of police chiefs.

Robert Urich, late of "SOAP" and "Tabitha" and even later of "S.W.A.T." and "Bob, Carol, Ted and Alice" will star in "VEGA$." a movie for ABC-TV intended to spin into a series. The drama will be filmed on location you-can-guess-where.

Basin wildcats, field work reported in scattered areas of Permian Basin

Charles L. Walker of Odessa has announced plans to re-enter a pair of dry holes in Andrews and test them above 4,800 feet as wildcats.

No. 1-A Underwood, originally drilled by Carper Drilling Co. and plugged in 1955, is one mile west of production in the Block A-34 field 12 miles northwest of Andrews.

Bottomed at 5.013 feet, the operation is 662 feet from north and 664 feet from west lines of section 16. block A-34, psl survey. The San Andres was topped at 4.719 feet on ground elevation of 3,226 feet.

SECOND TEST

Walker will re-enter the former Headqaters Oil Co. an Murphy H. Baxter No. 1 Underwood, plugged and abandoned in 1951 at 5,529 feet, and test above 4,800 feet.

The project is 56 mile southwest of the Block A-34 field and 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 17, block A-34, psl survey.

It will be operated as No. 1-C Un-

Storage gets okay

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The railroad commission Monday approved an application by Continental Oil Co. to develop an underground storage facility in Chambers County that will hold 1.5 million barrels of liquid hydrocarbons.

The company plans to store ethane and ethylene in the cavern in the Barbers Hill Field in Mont Belvieu. The cavern will be at least 2,350 feet below the surface.

The commission said Conoco wants to drill two storage wells on 91 acres. with provisions for developing 17 additional wells.

Southeast Asia gas may be answer to shortage

The Los Angeles Times

SINGAPORE - While the United States has a shortage of natural gas. Southeast Asia is sitting on vast, undeveloped fields of it.

'The solution seems obvious to me." said an official from the state of West Australia, where a $2 billion

ENERGY

liquefied natural gas (LNG) project is planned The Indonesian national oil company, Pertamina, already is contracted to ship LNG to California beginning in the early 1980s, and it is looking to the United States for a still larger market. So is Petronas, the national oil company of Malaysia, which also has vast reserves of Even Thailand, which now has reserves sufficient only for domestic development, is hoping for new discoveries and is giving the United States a long range look.

The optimistic outlook for LNG projects was one of the few cheerful notes of the just concluded Offshore Southeast Asia Conference which drew some 7,000 oilmen and experts to Singapore.

Apart from LNG prospects, the oilmen had little to be enthusiastic about. Although Southeast Asia is believed to have about 10 percent of the world's oil reserves, offshore exploration has been in the doldrums since 1976. It is picking up again very

This has focused interest on the large and already known natural gas fields which had received little attention while oil was cheap. Most gas at the operating oilfields was simply 'flared' - burned away.

Flaring now is largely forbidden and the oil exporting nations of the region are carefully adding up their natural gas reserves. It is estimated that Malaysia has about 18 trillion cubic feet and Indonesia has 23 trillion cubic feet in two fields alone. Officials believe far greater amounts are

So far there is no comprehensive estimate of the amount beneath Australia's northwest shelf but one West Australian official exulted: believe we have something of a magnitude unequaled in the world; it will be greater than the North Sea

The continuing health of all three projects depends in good measure on decisions being weighed by President Carter's new Department of Energy. It must decide on a permissible price for imported LNG - which certainly will be at least one-third more expensive than Canadian or Mexican natural gas - and also how much will be imported.

The decisions are complicated by Carter's desire to increase American domestic production and keep LNG prices separate from crude oil prices set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). The LNG deal with Indonesia is now being held up because the United States refuses to accept a "price escalation clause" which would tie LNG prices in some measure to OPEC crude oil

At any rate, oil industry officials in Asia are confident that the continuing.

California Gas Co., and Pacific Gas and Electric, Indonesia would deliver 539 million cubic feet daily for 20 years, beginning early in the 1980s.

An official of one of the American companies involved in production said delivery could easily begin in 1981 if the unsettled contract details are worked out soon.

Although Australia's northwest shelf project appears to have even greater promise, it remains uncertain at the moment. A $50 million, 18month project study is just getting started and meanwhile the needed $2 billion in financing is being sought from London banks. The final goahead decision will be taken in 1979 and the gas could come on stream in 1984. Oil industry experts are certain the northwest shelf has already been sufficiently explored to insure that delivery date if the money is available:

The Malaysian problem is political. Their big field at Bintulu - off the scheduled to begin producing in 1979. The schedule has now been set back to about 1982 but the erratic negotiating performance of the national oil company Petronas makes officials question that date.

Petronas is engaged in bitter negotiations with Shell and the Japanese firm Mitsubishi over the financing of the $2 billion installation needed at Bintulu. The two firms have grudgingly accepted 35 percent of the joint venture but the negotiations are complicated by other issues. Meanwhile. Petronas is under pressure to reach a quick agreement because it overconfidently ordered from France six LNG tankers, at a price of about $800 million back in 1974. The first tanker will be delivered next year with one following each succeeding year. Thus Malaysia will have an embarrassing and vastly expensive LNG tanker fleet years before it can ship anything and the problem will grow worse with each new delay.

It is somewhat ironic that the Australian, Malaysian and Indonesian projects all were conceived initially with Japan in mind as the major market.

Come talk Peugeot Diesel. There's never been a better time.

56 years of experience. Come in and let us show you our full line of Peugeot Diesels. The same diesels that Peugeot has spent over fifty-six years perfecting.

More miles per gallon. We'll show you how a Peugeot Diesel will give you more miles per gallon; since it gets the best mileage of any compact - 34

mpg highway, 28 mpg city, 30 mpg combined.* And since diesel fuel nationally averages for some 10e a gallon less, you'll also get more miles per dollar.**

No tune-ups. We'll show you how a Peugeot Diesel saves on tune-ups, too. Because they don't need any. There's never been a better time. If you want to talk diesel, come talk to us. There's never been a better time.

workers on a state farm in western Siberia ride a one-horse open sleigh across the frozen steppe.

Siberian collective farms strange mixture of modern, feudal society

By KEVIN KLOSE The Washington Post

CHIK, Soviet Union -Everywhere the eye reaches, the Siberian steppe stretches, its monotony broken by scattered stands of white birch branching delicately in the empty, frozen

In the middle distance a group of small, wooden houses cluster at the feet of drab concrete slab apartment blocks, incongruous in the void of the countryside.

Near at hand, some sloppily mortared buildings provide shelter from the bitter wind.

In one a sumptuous banquet featuring succulent beef stroganov and mounds of fresh oranges is being readied to charm the visiting foreigners.

In another, the community's official market. the shelves display a meager assortment of food — there is no fresh or frozen meat or vegetables. Fresh

To come here is to see into the heart of this country's continuing promise and troubles - as a self-sufficient agricultural nation.

In the fabric of this enterprise's rough existence are numerous threads: part modern agribusiness of giant machines and attempted scientific management; part hardscrabble sodbusters' settlement from the pages of America's old Wests part feudal holding in which the state plays lord to the peasants' peasant; part Potemkin village of deceiving false fronts. Woven together, these threads at once complement, contradict and overlap each other in a manner uniquely Russian and uniquely Soviet.

Nationalist Chinese premier re-elected

Agence France Press

TAIPEI - Nationalist Chinese Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, 69, Tuesday was re-elected president by a near-unanimous 98.33 percent vote.

Chiang, who ran unopposed, will serve a new term of six years beginning May 20, the inauguration day. The premier polled 1,184 votes out of 1,240 ballots cast. In the pre-election endorsement period, he collected 1,195 signatures from among the delegates. The quorum of the national assembly, the nationalist electoral college, is 1,248 for the current meeting, according to a secretariat announcement.

Premier Chiang stayed away from the scene of the balloting, and was waiting for the election returns at his residence. Professor Wang Yun-wu, chairman of the balloting session, personally informed Chiang of
