President meets with Brazilian rights leaders

President Carter concluded his visit to Latin America today by meeting with Brazilian champions of human rights who are critics of the military government. One reported that Carter said human rights have improved in Brazil

The meeting was not expected to please Carter's official hosts

The critics, including two Roman Catholic cardinals, spent 45 minutes exchanging views with the president Carter departed afterward for Nigeria, where he will become the first American president to make a state visit to black Africa

Julio Mesquita Neto, a publisher and member of the group who met with the president, said Carter was told that the Brazilian press has played a major role in the defense of 'The president agreed and told us that the increase in freedom of the press existing now in the country represents an improvement in the human rights situation." Mesquita told reporters after the meeting en-

He said Carter asked many questions about human rights in Brazil, press freedom, the nation's economy and the opinions of group members about political affairs in Africa. Carter will be the first American president to visit black

He will confer with Gen Olusegun Obasanjo, chief of state in oil-rich Nigeria, seven jet hours across the south Atlantic from Brazil Obasanio is likely to ask Carter to get tougher against white-minority governments on the subcontinent

Nigeria is the third developing nation on Carter's seven-day tour of South America and Africa He has spent two days each in Brazil and Venezuela The president, wife Rosalvnn and 10-year-old daughter Amy will visit Liberia before returning to Washington late Monday

Although not all of the six Brazilians meeting with Carter are outspoken critics of the Brazilian regime, most have opposed at least some government policies and are associated with the human rights cause Carter espouses

White House press secretary Jody Powell said that before Carter's final meeting with Brazilian President Ernesto Geisel on Thursday, the American president's human rights crusade and his opposition to Brazil's purchase of nuclear technology capable of producing weapons-grade uranium had "poisoned the atmosphere" between Brazil and the Baby badly burned in trailer fire

A 4-month-old Midland child was listed in very serious condition today in the Brooke Army Hospital Burn Unit in San Antonio following a trailer fire in Midland Thursday afternoon.

The infant, Juan D. Porras Jr. of 1010 W. Dakota St., received second degree burns over 30 percent of his body when the trailer he was being kept in at 901 W. Dakota St. burst into flames shortly after 12:30 p.m Thursday, Fire Department officials

The baby was lying on a bed inside the trailer when the fire began. Fire investigators say they believe a pilot light in the kitchen may have ignited leaking propane gas.

The infant's babysitter, Lourdes Belloc, who was not in the trailer when the fire began, heard the baby screaming and entered the trailer to save him, fire officials said. She pulled him off the bed and received first degree burns on her arms.

The fire destroyed the trailer, fire fighters said.

Galaviz grand jury brings no indictment

BIG SPRING - A Howard County grand jury returned no indictment Thursday against the former Big Spring police officer who shot a Mexican-American teenager last

Former Sgt. Leroy Spires shot Juan Galaviz, 19, after a high-speed chase following what police said was the attempted abduction of the wife of the Midland College athletic director.

Spires resigned from the police department March 15, saying that he was harassed and threatened about the incident.

A spokesman for the District Attorney's Office said that although no indictments were filed in the incident. it was not a no-bill as such, because no formal charges had been filed

The grand jury did write a letter to the Big Spring City Council relating to the Police Department's investigation of the Galaviz shooting

The contents of the letter were not disclosed, but it was signed by all members of the panel, jurors said.

District Attorney Rick Hamby, who had possession of the letter Thursday. refused to disclose its contents saving that it was as secret as the grand jury proceedings themselves.

He indicated, however, that the letter contained only suggestions and was "not a big deal.

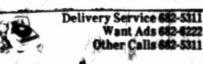

The panel, which included four

Candidates give views at meeting

By LINDA HILL

"I'm tired of going down the street and being wished good luck in my school board race." City Council candidate Mark Martin said Thursday night, saying voters need to become informed about the political races in Saturday's election.

Martin, and a number of other candidates whose names will appear on Saturday's ballot, spoke at a League of Women Voters candidates forum in The First National Bank. Martin told his audience he is seeking his "third and last term" as councilman for Place 5. He said he feels "reasonably comfortable with the decisions and the votes I've made while on the council."

His opponent, Tom Sloan, said one reason Midland has had "extremely good government" in past years is that office holders step down after "a couple of terms."
"I think this fresh approach is very important," Sloan said · Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr., seeking his fourth two-year term, said he is proud that the city of Midland "has retained its financial in-dependence from the federal government.

Bionic' grandmother speaks up for cancer group

Craig Rigtrup says he's the only boy in the neighborhood who has a bionic grandmother Actually, Midland resident Marie Dillistone is no Jaime Sommers, but she does get "bionic" aid in her speech.

Mrs. Dillistone is a laryngectomee—a person who has had his or her larynx, or voice box, surgically removed. But she still talks, sometimes using an electronic device called an artificial larynx and sometimes using a method of vocalizing called esophageal speech.

Mrs. Dilliston's surgery was required because of cancer, the usual cause for the operation. "It was in the vocal chords," she said. "It had spread, and to be safe they took out the entire voice box.'

Remembering her initial reaction to the doctor's news, she said, "I think probably most people are so frightened they don't think of the consequences (of surgery) and afterwards you realize there is not any way you can make a sound-not any kind of sound. I can be very devastating."

However, Mrs. Dilliston said, "I was so grateful I made it through all of it, I felt very fortunate to be alive." "And they told me I would be able to speak either with the machine or with the esophageal speech. I felt if it could be done, I would do it.'

And she has. The surgery was performed June 8. 1976. Mrs. Dillistone returned home after two weeks in the hospital and returned to work part time two days after that. She and her husband Vernon are resident managers for an apartment complex and a motel and apartment management school.

'On the fourth week back to the doctor's office he introduced me to one of the artificial larynxes and on the same day he introduced me to a

Ozona election still undecided

OZONA, Texas (AP) — They're still awaiting the outcome of the May 1976 Precinct One commissioner's election in Crockett County. And they'll have to keep on waiting, at least until June Incumbent Jeff Marley led the pack in May 1976 and won a runoff in June 1976 by 32 votes over Sostenes DeHoyes.

DeHoyes, however, filed a law suit in federal court contesting the election and a threejudge panel in Dallas ordered a new election for Dec. 10,

Marley and DeHoyes finished atop the pack and again had to face each other in a runoff - this one on Jan. 7, 1978. Marley won that one, too, but DeHoyes challenged it with a state speech therapist who, in turn, taught me how to use the machine."

At the end of five weeks, she was training students full time. At the end of six weeks, she began learning esophageal speech which involves swallowing air into the esophagus and then releasing it while articulating the sound with the tongue, lips, teeth and palate as normal speakers do. Mrs. Dillistone's esophageal voice sounds hoarse but is understandable. She continues her speech therapy at Odessa's Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center and anticipates making still more progress as her training continues. Once the method is mastered, her new voice will sound much like her "old" voice, although deeper, she said.

Not so with the artificial larynx which produces a decidedly mechanical, although quite understandable, sound. The mechanized quality is amplified over telephone connections, so Mrs. Dillistone often refrains from telephone conversations whenever possible. "In another year and a half, I should be able to talk on the phone without the machine," she said

The device "is really a vibrator," she explained. "You find a place on your throat where you can pick up enough vibration to create a sound, press the instrument against that spot and go through the motions of speaking as if the operation had never been performed.

Because speech with the artificial larynx admittedly sounds a bit strange, users of the device frequently elicit startled reactions from strangers. "The first thing I learned was not to be offended and not to have my feelings hurt. I really do laugh at myself quite a bit," Mrs. Dillistone said.

Recalling the cancer that necessitated such a drastic change in speaking, she said, "I think people would like to hide the word, but once you've had it you don't hide it. You learn to live with it, and I've found it can be done. You can live a normal, meaningful life.'

'You know, in this training I've found very few people I could not communicate with," she continued, noting that her only problems stem from attempting to converse with individuals who have hearing problems. One the whole, she feels most people pay more attention to what she's saving.

Mrs. Dillistone feels organizations such as the Permian Basin Lost Chords Club provide valuable assistance in helping laryngectomees rehabilitate themselves.

Mrs. Dilliston, who is president of the chapter here, said members aid other individuals facing the same surgery, share ideas and discuss problems. Twenty-two people at-

Moro 'ransom won't be paid

ROME (AP) - The Italian government will not ransom kidnapped political leader Aldo Moro by freeing 15 Red Brigades terrorists on trial in Turin, the Christian Democratic Party says.

"It is not possible to accept the blackmail coming from the Red Brigades," the government party - of which Moro is president - said in response to a letter from Moro in which he hinted that freedom for the terrorists would be the price for his release.

The statement was issued after day-long meetings between Premier Giulio Andreotti and other party leaders. The government also denied a newspaper report that it was considering offering a reward of $1.2 million for information leading to the arrest of the kidnappers.

The Communists and other parties urged the government to maintain a firm stand and not to barter with the kidnappers.

Unita, the Communist Party newspaper, said in an editorial: "The democratic regime cannot give in to terrorism. To give in could only open the way to a crescendo of new blackmail."

Stearns strike in 20th month

STEARNS, Ky. (AP) - The end of the 16-week coal strike means little to some 145 miners here. Their strike — over representation by the United Mine Workers - is in its 20th month with no end in sight.

Despite bloodshed, economic hardships and the absence of any indication their walkout is having an effect, they vow to go on.

"The morale is still high at Stearns," said striking miner Bob Dixon as he and five other men kept watch at the picket line outside the Justus mine. The strike at Stearns Mining Co. is one of the longest in UMW history, according to union officials.
"Sometimes when I'd see on television about how long the national strike was going on, I'd catch myself thinking, 'That ain't nothing. What do you think about us?' 'said Betty Dixon, whose husband James, has been striking since July 1976.

"It's been a hard struggle trying to feed three kids and all on $100 a week (strike benefits paid by the UMW)," she said.

Two years ago today, the UMW was certified in an election as the bargaining agent for Justus miners. But Blue Diamond Coal Co., the parent company of Stearns Mining, refused to sign the standard union contract after the election, so the miners walked out. Big balloting day

Yes sir, Saturday is Midland's big multiple-elections day, with balloting on candidates and issues scheduled at city, school district. hospital district and college district levels.

There had been some doubt as to whether the Midland Independent School District election could be held as scheduled, but a three-judge court panel Tuesday refused to grant the U.S. Justice Department an injunction to halt the trustee election.

So, the city, school, hospital and college voting is all wrapped up in one big package, awaiting the opening and following action by eligible voters in the various elections.

Two important issues will be before the voters in the city election, in addition to naming a mayor and two councilmen.

In one of the referendums. voters are asked to decide whether or not a proposed new central fire station should be located in Crier Park, as favored by the City Council. The Reporter-Telegram has stated its opposition editorially.

A $500,000 bond issue proposal for the expansion of the Hogan Park Municipal Golf Course also will be decided by the voters. The issue is favored by the City Council and the Midland Chamber of Commerce. It also has the editorial endorsement of The Reporter-Telegram.

Two trustees will be elected in the Midland Independent School District balloting.

Three members of the Midland College Board of Trustees will be named in that election.

Two directors of the Midland Memorial Hospital District also will be selected by the voters.

Names of candidates for the various offices are listed elsewhere in this issue of The Reporter-Telegram, along with the voting places and other election information.

The candidates have had their say in recent days and weeks. It now is up to the voters in the various districts to have the final say as to who will serve them in the public offices involved.

The candidates and the issues merit a large, representative turnout at the polls Saturday. Please do you part by casting your ballot. It takes only a very few minutes to vote, yet your vote is so very important in the various races and issues

Heat is on again

Mstislav Rostropovich, the renowned Russian cellist who has been in the West since 1974, has always said he was interested in music, not politics. He could not forego gestures of sympathy and support for his exiled countrymen, however, and his reward is to be stripped of Soviet citizenship and thus barred from returning to his homeland.

The same fate has befallen Pyotr Grigorenko, a former Red Army general and war hero who sided with dissenters in the Soviet Union. In America for medical treatment, he has been told by Moscow that he can't come home.

Meanwhile, the Kremlin is tightening the screws on another prominent dissident, the Nobel physicist Dr. Andrei Sakharov, who is still in Russia, and the dissident movement is expected to be the real target of the forthcoming "treason" trial of computer specialist Anatoly Scharansky.

It appears that a dam is breaking in the persecution of dissenters in the Soviet Union. The dam, while it held, was the Belgrade conference that recently

The Soviets would have been embarrassed to carry out these actions while trying to argue that their government was abiding by the human rights provisions in the 1975 Helsinki agreements.

But trying to enforce silence by threatening citizens with exile or worse was wrong before Helsinki and is still wrong.

The West might as well recognize that detente is not removing any spots from the Communist leopard, which continues to pounce on those who do not toe the ideological line.

nostalgic today. The International Herald Tribune, still known to everyone around the world as the Paris Herald Tribune, is moving from its grubby offices on the Rue de Berri, where it has been printed since December 10, 1931, to a snooty new home in Neuilly.

As someone who worked there from 1949 to 1962. I was deeply sorry to hear of the move. It always seemed to me that the Paris Herald Tribune (I refuse to call it the International Edition) was in the perfect location for an American newspaper abroad. It was within walking distance of many tourist hotels and the Champs Elysees. From the outside the building looked fairly new compared to the ones around it. But inside it was another story. The original paint was still on the walls, the elevator creaked in pain when it went up. The stairs were crooked. The city room was straight out of the Thirties.

Through the years management would never replace a chair until someone sat in it and it broke under his own weight. The reporters' desks were from the Clemenceau period, and the lighting had been designed by Thomas Edison. In France nothing is ever thrown away and the typewriters we used were bought at garage sales of Gertrude Stein, Ernest Hemingway, and Marcel Proust.

The men who printed the paper in the cavernous basement of 21 Rue de Berri, all belonged to the French Communist printer's union. They used to sing Communist songs as they prepared the edition, but they never let their ideology interfere with their work. There were far less mistakes in the Paris Herald's first edition than any newspaper put out by American printers in the United States.

What made the Rue de Berri offices so interesting was that they were so conveniently located near the Champs Elysees where most major political demonstrations were held. All a reporter had to do was stroll a block to the Champs, watch the demonstrators throw cafe chairs and tables at the police, and report on how many rioters were clubbed over the head by the gendarmes.

One time a colleague, Robert Yoakum, came back from a left-wing demonstration with his head bloodied. He said he had been whacked by a policeman for just standing on the

"Why didn't you show your press card?" Eric Hawkins, the managing editor, asked

"I did," said Yoakum, "that's when he hit me.

The first edition came out at 11:30 in the evening, and a small crowd of Americans used to gather in front of the building waiting for it to come off the press. They were all thirsting for the New York Stock Market results, and there were times when, after reading them, they attempted to throw themselves in front of our delivery trucks.

Because of its location, we had a constant flow of visitors in the city room. One of them was a deported American gangster who offered to blow the whistle on all his pals in Naples. After I wrote a column about him he returned and said he wanted to kill me. I was off at a film festival so he said he would kill the general manager, Sylvan Barnet, instead. Mr. Barnet told him it would be better to wait until I returned. Fortunately, by the time I got back the French had decided to deport him. I was forbidden by Mr. Barnet to write about deported gangsters for six months.

The 21 Rue de Berri building of the Paris Herald survived everything from bombing threats to a second world war to attempted coup d'etats, and heaven knows how many French governments.

I may be prejudiced, but I believe most Frenchmen had more faith in it than they find the American Embassy building at the Place de la Concorde.

There was some talk that the present owners were seriously thinking of moving the paper out of France when they closed down the Rue de Berri offices. Fortunately, cooler heads prevailed. No matter how many countries the paper is sent to, the soul of the Herald Tribune belongs in Paris.

The Paris Herald Tribune is still alive and well in Neuilly. For those of us who worked in the vineyards of the Rue de Berri it is a painful thought. How can you put out a paper in the French suburbs, after you've seen

They've melted into anonymity

WASHINGTON - In an obscure back room of the Justice Department, there's an astonishing cabinet full of real-life stories of spies who came in from the cold. The dossiers contain the case histories of more than 100 foreign nationals who have confessed to espionage involvement.

Their stories read like episodes from the spy fiction of John LeCarre or Graham Greene, but they're true accounts of men and women who once operated in the shadowy, fearful world of the secret agent. Almost without exception, those who admitted their past as trained espionage operatives are today leading anonymous, blameless lives in this

They were required to register with the Justice Department under a Cold War law, which calls for a sworn affidavit from anyone ever affiliated with a foreign intelligence service. Many came forward on their own, and their names are now in the file. Others were unaware of the law but complied after their names cropped up in investigations by the FBI

Two of our reporters, Larry Kraftowitz and Murray Waas, have had access to the files. One of the most intriguing confessions was submitted by a former East German agent, James Sattler, who admitted once using a minicamera to copy secret NATO documents.

"In 1967," he informed the Justice Department, "I was recruited by an individual named 'Rolf,' who identified himself as a member of the Coordinating Staff of the countries of the Warsaw Treaty Organization (the communist counterpart to NATO).

He continued transmitting documents and information to his East German spy masters. In 1975. Sattler was almost hired by Rep. Paul Findley, R.-Ill., for a sensitive post on Capitol Hill. But the FBI tipped off the unsuspecting congressman about Sattler's espionage past: Justice Department sources say the mysterious spy has fled the country and has vanished from sight.

A Pole, Gwizdak Waclaw acknowledged that he had been sent to the United States "to organize a net of spies and wait for further information and instructions from Warsaw." He emphasized that once he had arrived, he severed all contacts with Polish intelligence ser-

Hungarian exile Endre Kertesz reported that he was shown a photograph of what was purported to be a Minuteman missile silo in North Dakota. He was instructed to go there to photograph other installations. Again, when he reached U.S. shores, Kertesz ignored the spy assignment.

A Nationalist Chinese ex-spy, Wang Justice Ching-Lin, told of being instructed in the arts of "secret writing," including the use of a James Bondish mixture of Human blood and Chinese spice for invisible ink. His assignment was to ferret out pro-communist activities among Chinese students on U.S. college campuses.

Cuban exile Libertad Maria Antigua similarly reported being taught techniques for sending back secret messages before she wes sent to this country to infiltrate anti-Castro groups in Miami. An Israeli, Hyman E. Bornstein, admitted that his Washington

ECONOMIC STATIC

Rumors spread through Wall Street that the anti-inflation statement was so tough it would include wage-price controls. That was untrue, but the false rumor caused considerable turbulence — including a raise in prices by one major Midwestern manufacturer.

That statement itself, not containing controls, was postponed when Schlesinger told the President Congress might yet approve the longstalled crude oil equalization tax. An anti-inflation program, presumably looking toward a limit on oil imports. would undercut what chances remain for the oil tax.

INSIDE REPORT:

Dismay among Israel's foremost Senate champions By ROWLAND EVANS

And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Predictions here of an early effort in Jerusalem to oust Menahem Begin as prime minister of Israel were strengthened by unprecedented dismay among Israel's six foremost Senate champions at a private breakfast March 22 in Biair

One of them, Sen. Howard Metrenbaum of Ohio, chided Begin for fudging about Jewish settlements in Arab territory. Metzenbaum's irritation mirrored sharper criticisms by other Senators at a large Senate lunch the previous day. This anti-Begin mood — more sorrow than anger over what the Senators term his intransigence — may menace Begin's

No U.S. politician has been more supportive of Israel than Met-zenbaum. But he was offended at Begin's seemingly deliberate fudging to a luncheon question by Sen. Robert Morgan of North Carolina. Morgan asked whether any new settlements had been established since Egyptian Prime Minister Anwar Sadat's celebrated visit to Jerusalem last

Begin's response was no new set-tlements; then he added, almost in an aside, "in the Sinai." The next day at the more intimate Blair House breakfast, Metzenbaum criticized Begin for being less than candid with Morgan. He also drew from the prime minister the admission that, although there had been no "new" settlements in the Sinai (as opposed to the West Bank). there have been "expansions" of existing settlements.

Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, one of Israel's most conspicious defenders since its birth, was present at both meetings. He confided to a friend that he had "never seen an Israeli prime minister so. shaken" by questions from American politicians. He attended both the lunch and breakfast.

The symbolic touchstone of Begin's impact here was the reaction of the Senate's only ethnic Arab: James Abourezk of South Dakota. "The only Senator who walked out of that room with a smile on his face," one Senator told a colleague. "was Jim

SHCHARANSKY'S TRIAL

Anatoli Shcharansky, the dissident leader who has spent the last year in a Soviet prison on espienage-treason charges, has rejected his courtappointed defense lawyer in a bold move aimed at obtaining the best legal advice for his trial. That news has filtered to the outside world from the dwindling group of courageous anti-Soviet dissidents now under intense Kremlin pressure. Shcharansky himself has not been seen by his family or friends. This latest development in the Sh-charansky case coincides with an official trip to Moscow by senior members of the House Armed Services Committee, headed by chairman Melvin Price of Illinois. Before leaving here March 23. Democratic Rep. Henry Waxman of California was thoroughly briefed by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry on how to get in touch with Shcharansky's mother and his brother.

The object is to seek answers to this uestion: whether this will be a show" trial or whether Shcharansky's virtually certain conviction is really intended to give the Kremlin a new lever to exchange a Soviet spy or two now in American jails. Shcharansky has been publicly defended by President Carter as never having had any connection with the Central Intelligence Agency.

Congressional interest in dissident movement and the Shcharansky case is not expected to have any harmful effect. To the contrary, experts on internal Soviet politics feel that efforts by U.S. politicians might yield precious new information about the state of the dissident movement.

The President's anti-inflation statement planned for March 22 or 23 was postponed on the tactical advice of Energy Secretary James Schlesinger but not before it had some unintended and unwelcome effects.

Stephen J. Suomi, 32, a University of Wisconsin-Madison psychologist, believes his Primate Lab research exploring the similarities between monkeys and humans may lead to a better public understanding of the social development of children.

"Many of the principles derived from monkey research can be almost directly applied to humans," says Suomi, an assistant professor of psychology. "The influence of peers on socialization is one area with very strong and clear-cut implications for humans as well as primates.'

Research conducted by Suomi over the past two years indicates peer interaction among both human children and young monkeys is extremely important in the development of lifelong social skills.

"Peer interaction in monkeys is considerably more than just child's play," Suomi says. "One of the most sensitive indicators of whether or not a monkey will have social interaction problems as an adult is its dealing with peers as a youngster. It's also clear from our data that when a monkey has an unstable relationship with its mother or father, its relationship with its peers will suffer. Poor peer interaction, in turn, results in poor social skills as an adult. 'Comparable data involving humans suggest strong parallels. I'm convinced that if you want to find out which children are most likely to have future social problems, you'll get a better indication by watching them on the playground than in the home with their family," he says. "Many social skills are developed through peer interaction and perfected through play. The con-sequences of being denied the chance to play with age-mates are profound. For example, both monkeys and humans learn to control the intensity this way, monkeys learn to 'play' with friends and 'attack' strangers.

"Monkeys raised without peers generally avoid contact with others their age or are very aggressive when they do interact with them later in Suomi adds. "On the other hand, monkeys given too much exposure to peers before they have established secure relationships with their mothers can also experience problems in later social activities. Similar behavior patterns are observed in humans.

Suomi thinks many parents send their children to day-care centers and nursery schools before the child is ready for extensive peer group interaction. If his studies of what happens to young monkeys in comparable situations can be generalized to humans, the consequences may last a lifetime, he says.

While confirming the importance of a healthy infant-mother relationship. Suomi's recent research also indicates a father's presence is much more important than was previously believed.

"Monkey fathers treat their male and female offspring very differently. whereas mothers treat them about the same. The fathers teach and encourage immature males to play roughly, but if females try to do the same thing, the father punishes them. Female monkeys tend to be less aggressive and spend more time grooming than males," Suomi says. 'Such findings suggest that social factors can exaggerate already existing biologically based differences in social behavior between males and females.'

As an example of parallel psychological development, Suomi observes that monkeys and humans develop social fears at almost exactly the same point in their lives.

Chinese leadership may be divided over education

By JAY MATHEWS The Washington Post

HONG KONG - China's two most influential leaders have revealed for the first time what appears to be sharp differences over the issue of education, the cause of much political turmoil during the last two decades.

In a lengthy speech to a national science conference. Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng seemingly challenged a program conducted by Vice Chairman Teng Hsiao-ping to soft-pedal political study and quickly train a technical elite to save the economy.

It is impossible to say where this difference of opinion will lead. Similar differences of opinion such as the contradictory statements of Mao Tse-tung and the then President Liu Shao-chi in the 1960s preceded the Cultural Revolution, the most disruptive political turmoil in China's recent past.

Observers here believe that the Chinese leadership at this stage would seek to prevent any serious disruptions, particularly since it has just begun to recover from factional fighting and economic troubles in

But Hua's speech seems to signal that he is not entirely in agreement with the line being pursued under Teng's direction and may in years hence, after the economy gets stronger, assert his opinion against those of the older bureaucrats like successor, the former provincial bureaucrat had only five years' experience in Peking and was virtually unknown outside China. The is ue of "elitism." as Teng's approach toward education is called, involves significant ideological and political consequences. "We need a mighty force in industry, agriculture, science and technology, culture and national defense," Hua said in his speech. "It won't do to have only a small number or a section of the people. Hundreds of millions of people, the entire Chinese nation, must reach a higher level."

Hua's March 24 warning against elitism, released here by the New China News Agency, came six days after Teng reaffirmed the new policy in his own speech to the science conference in Peking.

"We must . . . take up the important task of training in the shortest possible time a group of experts in science and technology who are first rate by world standards," Teng said.

It was the first time Hua, 57, had clearly differed with the more ex-perienced Teng. 74, on policy in the eight months they have ruled at the top of the post-Mao Chinese hierarchy. Although they complimented each other in their speeches, their words suggest the potential for a revival someday of a debate that has severely split the Chinese leadership several times and brought great political and economic turmoil in the last two decades.

Hua's and Teng's political dif-ferences have so far been confined to a few veiled newspaper attacks by Teng's supporters on Politburo members close to Hua who par-ticipated in a 1976 campaign against Teng. The two men appear strongly committed to forestalling any open disagreement that would interfere with their shared goal of rapid economic modernization.

In his speech, Hua strongly iden tifies himself with the view his predecessor, Mao Tse-tung, often expressed in his latter years. Mao said efforts to build the economy should concentrate on mobilizing the talents of millions of peasants and workers and not just a talented few. Hua's speech hints at a probable weakness in new, Teng-inspired policies like the national college entrance examination. The exam gives an advantage to city-educated youths and may cause resentment among peasant youth who cannot prepare adequately because they do not have as many or as well-equipped high schools in the countryside. "It is in the vital interest of hundreds of millions of people to raise the scientific and cultural level of the entire Chinese nation," Hua said. "This can be achieved only by drawing in and relying on vast numbers of people, only by effectively organizing all the people on all fronts on a countrywide scale.

Pat Nixon offered president advice to burn tapes

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following excerpt is adapted from the book, "The Lonely Lady of San Clemente: The Story of Pat Nixon," (c) 1978 by Lester David. Reprinted by permission of Thomas Y. Crowell Co. The full-length book will be published by Crowell in late summer.

By LESTER DAVID

Until July of 1973 nobody knew but the president, and handful of his chief aides, and four or five men in the Secret Service who handled the equipment. Pat was just as amazed as anyone else when Alexander P. Butterfield dropped his bombshell about the wiring of the White House; soon after, the Senate Watergate Committee reconvened for its afternoon session on Monday, July 16, in the ornate Caucus Room of the Senate Office

Afterwards Rose Mary Woods, Nixon's fiercely loyal secretary, who had worked for him since 1951, telephoned Butterfield and said: "You dirty bastard. You have contributed to the downfall of the greatest president this country ever had. You are on the other side."

At the time Pat Nixon foresaw no such cataclysm. But she did tell her friends, emphatically, that whatever information was on the tapes had never been intended for public disclosure. "If they had been MY tapes," she told Helene Colesie Drown, who had once been a fellow teacher at Whittier High School and had remained close ever sice. "I would have burned or destroyed them because they were like a private diary, not public property."

As the controversy over the tapes increased in intensity. Pat did something virtually unprecedented for her: She offered the president some political advice. She urged him to get rid of the reels.

She had no inside information about their contents. She had no reason to suspect that her husband had incriminated himself in any way-that the tapes would reveal damaging evidence. She was to learn what was on the tapes only as the conversations were disclosed piecemeal, first by the president in an abridged version, then more fully as so directed by the U.S. Supreme Court

In her apartment on Eaton Place in London (diagonally across the street from the mansion where the immensely popular "Upstairs, Downstairs" television series was filmed), Helen McCain Smith, Mrs. Nixon's former press secretary, recalled for me in detail what actually happened upstairs in the White House during those months when the nation

Mrs. Nixon believed that the whole idea of the tapes was ridiculous," she said. "They simply never should have been done, and as time passed and the crisis grew, she became more and more certain of this. Over and over, she would say as the arguments grew shiller: 'How foolish to have made them.' She had shrewd political sense and lots of savvy.

"Very early, before they had become the subject of litigation, she urged him to destroy them. But he did not listen to her.

Helen Smith agrees that Nixon is not the first man in or out of politics. nor will he be the last, who could have profited by heeding a wife's advice. Nixon himself admitted to David

Mrs. Smith disclosed that in the years preceeding the Watergate crisis a silent but bitter feud was raging between the East and West Wings of the White House. The East Wing was the so-called women's department, where the first lady's staff was stationed; and the West Wing contained the offices of the president's aides.

It was a White House battle of the sexes, with H.R. Haldeman heading the maie side and Pat Nixon's entire corps of assistants opposing him.

The feud was never brought to public attention, and the president him self did not know it existed.

Haldeman and some of his aides believed that Pat was a political liability to Nixon and that her public visibility should be sharply downplayed.

'And so over in the West Wing." Mrs. Smith said, "they were always pushing, pushing pushing the president to keep her away from the public, to dump her, advising him not to take her on trips because he would do better on his own.

"I couldn't believe that Haldeman could be that stupid. He simply did not realize her potential and her very significant assets. Our feeling in the East Wing was that Pat and Dick had always been a team all through their political lives, a successful team. She had won great affection wherever she

"Haldeman had the last word in presidential planning. It was he who passed upon the itinerary and the personnel who would be along. Many times we would receive staff memos from Haldeman informing us that the president was about to go somewhere. and we would see that the first lady was not included.

"It's important to understand that, while the memos came down from the president's office, the staff system, not unique in this administration by the way, was such that the president himself would not see the memos. And so he never knew what was being planned.

"Perhaps there were times when Haldeman would simply forget to include her, but at other times I feel it was quite deliberate.'

When the memos arrived without Pat's name on the list of travelers, the East Wingers would be outraged. "It was an uphill battle all the way to get her added," says Helen Smith.

Pat Nixon's staff believed that the opposition to the first lady was compounded of one part ignorance of her true value, one part jealousy, and one part male chauvinism. ("You wouldn't believe the sexist attitude some of those guys had," one former staff member says. "And Haldeman was the worst of the lot.")

Pat was aware of the West Wingers' antagonism. Although her staff tried to shield her as much as possible, jokes about her reached her ears. (Just one: "When she goes on trips she takes along her hairdresser, and her embalmer.") But she was not about to be put down by Haldeman or anyone else. When she wanted to go on a trip or felt she could be helpful, she would go to the president and tell him bluntly: "Dick, I want to go too." And she did.

The first lady had never shared her husband's high regard for Haldeman. She looked upon him as an opportunist and was concerned over his growing influence upon the president. On a number of occasions she clashed with Haldeman and won.

When Haldeman commissioned the construction of a new Air Force One, the presidential plane, she examined the plans and discovered that little provision had been made for the privacy of the first lady. Quietly she ordered him to change the layout to include a private compartment just behind the president's. It was done.

siderable cost, of tiered seats for the 87-foot-long East Room, the largest and most famous in the mansion, used for public receptions. Pat was not consulted, but had the last word. She felt the seats were unattractive, more appropriate for basketball at a high school gym than the White House, and rarely let them be used. Haldeman once gave Johnny Cash,

Nor did they. As later events revealed. Nixon was carefully watching developments but was not talking them over with his wife and family.

A newsman pressed on: "Does what you read in the papers concern you?" Pat answered firmly: "No, I think it has been blown out of proportion." Someone threw her a hard one about Martha Mitchell, the wife of then-Attorney General John Mitchell. Scientific freedom, advancement become China's goals

HONG KONG - To lift its backward research institutes into the front ranks of world science, China has promised its scientists greater freedom from political controls, extra funding and more time in their

The policy changes, which-China has been hinting at since the death of Mao Tse-Tung 18 months ago, were announced by Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping at a nationwide con-ference of 6,000 scientists in Peking.

Teng, a longtime nemesis of Mao and the No. 3 man in the currrent hierarchy, said the reforms are necessary if Chinese science is "to catch up with and surpass advanced world levels" by the end of the cen-

Western scientists who have recently traveled in China are skeptical about Peking's ability to close the technological gap that fast, but they say Chinese scientists appear convinced they will have full political and economic support from the leadership.

"Expectations within the Chinese scientific community are running very high," said Roy Hofheinz Jr., a Harvard Sinologist who has accompanied two delegations of spoken manner, lived up to his reputation with a speech that warned Communist Party officials to stop meddling in research work and leave science to the scientists. His remarks were made March 18, on the opening day of the science conference, but Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, has just released the full text.

The directors of China's scientific institutes must be given a "free hand" to set their priorities and follow scientific leads without party incadres should play only a secondary role in scientific development, in supply and support areas, he said.

Teng, a vice premier who has disavowed ambitions for the premiership now held by Communist Party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng. volunteered to act as "director to the logistics department" and help scientists secure hard-to-obtain laboratory equipment. "I am willling to be . . . at your service," he added. In a startling departure from Maoist policy, Teng also ordered party cadres to excuse working scientists from many of the political study sessions that the late chairman prescribed for all Chinese adults. At such sessions, which sometimes last a full morning, cadres usually lecture/ on Mao's works and lead discussions off Marxist-Leninist thought.

But, Teng said, "scientists and technicians should concentrate their energy on scientific and technical work . . . We cannot demand that scientists and technicians . . . study a lot of political and theoretical books. participate in numerous social activities and attend many meetings unrelated to their work."

spent outside the laboratory, Teng directed, and if possible, political study ought to be reduced even below that.

Teng's show of support sharply contrasted with the treatment dealt scientists during the political upheavals of the past decade. Often convenient targets for campaigns directed from Peking, scientists and other intellectuals who devoted too much time to their work found themselves attacked for being "white and expert," that is, lacking the proper "Red" spirit expected of revolutionaries.

We Proudly Support Ton Sloan!

Tomorrow, we shall go to the polls to cast our votes for Tom .M. Sloan for City Council, Place 5. Tom has lived in Midland 42 of his 45 years and he and Mary Ann have been good, hard-working, contributing citizens. Their children were born and are growing up here, and Tom Sloan has been very active in youth work as a Scoutmaster and in many other capacities. He has served on various boards of civic organizations, and given unselfishly of his time and talent.

Tom Sloan's training, experience and ability will be of great value in planning and managing our city's business. He--like all of us--has a stake in Midland's future, and will devote the time, energy and ability necessary to help build a better Midland.

Indigent care remains MCHD board problem

By BROOKS KELLER

Directors of the Midland County Hospital District decided to further study a new analysis of the indigent care problem at Midland Memorial Hospital done by a hospital study group and presented to them at their regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon

Meanwhile, directors said, the indigent care policies of the past will continue. Midland County will be paying the tab for many such patients until Oct. 1, when the hospital district will take over.

Thursday's meeting was almost entirely concerned with complex legal and financial transactions in the transfer of authority from Midland Memorial Foundation to the newlyformed hospital district.

The formal transfer will take place at 10 a.m. Monday in the board room at the hospital.

District directors approved. with modifications, an operational budget and a construction budget, both to run from April 3 to Sept. 30, 1978.

The operational budget projected net revenue of $74,071 for the six months, but Foundation President Mickey Cappadonna explained that this was a profit figure only because depreciation figures were not funded

The construction budget of $10,045,000 will be reduced to $3,654,430 by Oct. I, with builder's and other invoices still to come after that. as work proceeds on the expansion and improvements to the hospital.

Dick Carr, representative of the Boone-Chapman insurance agency, told directors that hospital district status will save considerably on wo rkmen's compensation coverage, as i it can now be placed with the Tersas Association of Counties, of which Midland County is a member.

Canvassing of the hospital dist_rict election results will take place at the Monday transfer of authority. D/rectors voted to hold their an nual meeting and election of officer's on

Directors voted, on the recommendation of Frank Kubica, a uditor, to keep Blue Cross Group Services as the fiscal intermediary in Me dicare

They also approved a new arrangement with a patholog y team serving the hospital. Under the new arrangement, the pathologi sts will bill the patient for each case landled. instead of receiving an annua I stipend from the hospital, as at prese nt.

Jury indicts ex-congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal grand jury investigating the South Korean influence-buying scandal on Capitol Hill, on Friday indicted former Rep. Otto E. Passman, D-La., on charges of conspiracy, bribery and accepting an illegal gratituity.

Youth arrested with drug cache

An 18-year-old Midland man was arrested Thursday night in an apartment where city and Department of Public Safety narcotics officers found 60 paper sheets believed by them to be saturated with LSD.

Officers made the arrest in the 700 block of North Carrizo Street shortly after 6 p.m. Thursday. A Midland police spokesman said officers also found "thumbnail-sized" portion of a substance believed by them to be hashish and approximately 10 ounces of a substance believed to be marijuana.

Police estimate the on-the-street value of the LSD to be $240.

No charges had been filed as of noon

Verdict favors oil company

A Midland jury Thursday found for John L. Cox Oil Co. in two suits brought against the company.

Margaret Gaspard and Roger V. Montgomery, both of Odessa, filed separate suits against the Midland company, and asked for total damages of $2,125,000. The two suits were heard together.

The jury verdict absolved the company of negligence in a January 1974 explosion on an oil rig on which Montgomery and Mrs. Gaspard's husband, Roy Gaspard, were working. Gaspard died from his injuries, Mrs. Gaspard's suit said.

Shelter again accepting cats

The Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals shelter at 5101 Andrews Highway now is able to take cats. It was temporarily closed due to a recent virus outbreak, Jeanette

Probandt, society president, said. She said the shelter has been completely disinfected and from now on, incoming cats will be injected with a respiratory vaccine in addition to the distemper vaccine previously administered. The shelter earlier was forced to destroy all its animals because of an outbreak of pneumonitis, a highlycontagious virus. The outbreak was believed to be caused by a litter of infected kittens.

Police probing shooting death

Midland Sheriff's department deputies are investigating the shooting death of a 38-year-old Midland woman in her mobile home Thursday afternoon.

Betty Flippen, 38, of 200 Short St. was found dead in the bedroom of her mobile home with a .25-caliber gunshot wound in the chest, a Midland sheriff's department spokesman said.

Mrs. Flippen's husband, Dan Flippen, 42, told investigators he heard a "popping noise" in the bedroom and when he entered the bedroom he found his wife had been

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - A packed house whistled and howled as stripper Marilyn Marshall set her tassles twirling for the last time at a special farewell for the Troc, one of the nation's sidest burlesque palaces.

"We had a classy show here." said the 42-year-old exotic dancer, who first graced the stage of the once splendid Trocadero Burlesque Theater when she was 18.

But the splendor is gone, and the 106-year-old Troc is in a state of ruin. A local restauranteur who bought the Troc for $78,000 last July plans $40,000 in restoration work before reopening it as a theater for Chinese-language films.

'Television and porno movies killed us. What you can see on TV now is what these people used to come here to see," said Ms. Marshall, awash in a sea of sequins and turquoise feathers.

"In the old days we had couples come here. It was a classy audience. It was more fun, and you were treated like a lady. Guys would send roses back to the dressing rooms and not expect something in return." she

Customer files LOOK suit against new car dealer AUSTIN: Texas (AP) — A customer has filed a class action suit in state district court against a motor company, alleging that the company is overcharging thousands of car buyers for license, title and tax fees.

Joe Evans alleges that McMorris Ford overcharged him $37 when he bought a 1976 Thunderbird.
Although his purchase contract listed $53.80 for "license, title and registration fees," Evans' suit maintains that the car dealer paid only $16.05 to the county tax assessor-collector for those fees.

The suit asks that the company be ordered to repay

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Doctors can gauge feelings

Dear Dr. Solomon: It is hard to describe my feelings to a doctor-if I am depressed or anxious. How does he know if they are any worse than what the next person is feeling? Does he have anything more to go on than just his impression of the situation? Is there any special system that a doctor has to help him decide this sort of thing?-Patsy G.

Dear Patsy: I know what you mean about it being very difficult to describe just what you are feeling at a given time. And emotions are not something you can weigh on a scale of measure in a bottle. But various psychological checklists have been worked out to help gauge somebody's mood in a way that reduces the factor of individual judgment.

Also, there are some ingenious very new ways of measuring the physical manifestations of a person's emotional state. For instance, we all know that people's faces express certain feelings quite vividly-like happiness. anger, surprise, disgust. But often the facial expressions are so fleeting and slight that your eye doesn't catch measure the low-level electrical activity and objective measurement of the moods of a group of women, even when no emotion showed on their faces. A little like taking an electrocardiogram of your emotions. And it does show that emotions can be measure quite precisely.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I have a tendency toward gout, and it seems to me that maybe a vegetarian diet might be a good idea. I've heard that vegetarians never have gout.-F.B.

Dear F.B.: Vegetarians may have fewer gout attacks than people who eat meat, simply because they are not likely to have foods such as liver and kidneys, which contain a lot of purine and tend to raise uric acid levels. However, they are not immune to gout-diet is not the main factor in this disease. Whether you get gout depends more on your constitution and your genes.

If you have gout, you should follow a regimen set by your doctor. It may include regular exercise, certain dietary restrictions, drinking plenty of water every day, and possibly one

Broadcasting debate had profound effects

By JOHN H. AVERI The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The Senate's pioneering experiment in live radio broadcasting of its Panama Canal treaty proceedings resulted in a revival of what had seemed to be a vanishing art - Senate debate.

For a change, senators engaged in give-and-take debate rather than merely listening to or ignoring a series of long-winded speeches. Nor was that the only effect of the live broadcasts

For one thing, National Public Radio experienced a dramatic jump in the number of its listeners during the six weeks it carried the Senate proceedings. Approximately 150 of the noncommercial network's 211 stations carried got all or parts of the Senate proceedings.

What is more, the integrity of the Congressional Record took a big boost. Senators still blue-penciled insults that otherwise would appear in the Record, but they took fewer liberties in revising their remarks now that tapes of what they said are available to the public.

But it is the effect on Senate debate that has been the most profound. More frequently than not, what has passed for debate in recent years has been little more than a series of soliloquies by partisans of an issue before a near-empty chamber. By definition, it takes at least two persons challenging each other's position, to have a debate.

Aware that people across the country were listening over the radio network, both sides in the treaty controversy interrupted each other constantly with challenge and rebuttals.

"We don't let the other side get away with anything without a challenge," Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., leader of the antitreaty forces, said. "We have to make sure to rebut anything new the proponents come up

What is remarkable is that the challenging and rebuting went on constantly. As a result there have been frequent cross words.

Senate Majority Leader Robertr C. Byrd, D-W.Va., became angry when Sen. Carl T. Curtis, R-Neb., insisted that an amendment sponsored by Byrd and others dealing with canal passage rights for U.S. warships was not a true amendment.

Curtis, by way of example, said that Abraham Lincoln once told a friend that calling a calf's tail a leg did not give the calf five legs. "The calf still has four legs," Curtis quoted Lincoln as saying.

Breaking in, Byrd declared, 'Someone also said that 'an ass is still an ass even though it is dressed in lion's clothing.

Byrd later edites his remarks so that the Congressional Record the next day showed him to have said. "An ass is but an ass though laden

Another flareup occurred a few days later when Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan D-N.Y., a treaty supporter. disparaged an amendment by Sen. Malcolm Wallop R-Wyo., a treaty Among other things, Moynihan characterized the Wallop amendment as "so inane, so devoid of intellectual competence" as to "reduce the U.S. Senate to a playground, a playpen of juvenilia, to the fantasies of prepubescent youth.'

Moynihan was quickly reminded that since Wallop had left the floor, Moynihan had violated a tradition of not criticizing an absent senator.

Moynihan replied that he would be happy to talk to Wallop but feared that Wallop, "having strayed into international law behind the water's edge, ... is over his head."

Once again, though, most of the offending words disappeared from the Congressional Record transcript. Furthermore, Moynihan publicly appologized to Wallop on the Senate floor the next day.

Everybody here knew

For 14 years, he was a fixture around the shady courthouse square in this East Texas town. Folks say Shorty drifted into town about 1949.

He didn't talk much. The kids loved him, but truthfully it was a onesided affair. Some died. Others got shoved into old folks' homes. But Shorty, it seemed, was always there, rain or shine — kind of an unofficial welcoming committee of one to plaza strollers. He died of old age one August morning and the town grieved. He was a nobody really. just a harmless little fellow who tended to his business and allowed others the same courtesy.

The town fathers gave their permission to bury him on the town square beneath his favorite shade tree. Graveside services were attended mostly by his old plaza buddies.

The gravestone's inscription was simple as befit his life, "Shorty the squirrel, 1948-63."

Crystal Ball will benefit Girls Ranch

One of the highlights of the Permian Basin's social season-the annual Crystal Ball-will benefit one of the most important undertakings in West Texas-High Sky Girls Ranch.

And on Thursday night at Midland Country Club, for the third year, Mal Fitch and his Orchestra will swing, and special entertainment by Justin Wilson, the Cajun storyteller, will top off the evening's ac-

Another feature attraction of the ball will be Waterford Crystal.

High Sky Girls Ranch, founded in 1961, is a nonprofit child caring agency incorporated for the purpose of caring for dependent and neglected girls. A prime requisite for admission is a girl's willingness to cooperate with the staff and take advantage of the programs offered.

A good home environment is provided for a maximum of 38 girls who attend school in Midland, participate in school and church activities and also are afforded chances to experience the cultural and recreational activities of this area. Some of the girls living at the ranch have won many honors with the 4-H groups. All of them learn to have respect for each other as well as persons in charge. After graduation from high school, some of the girls go on to higher education, while others begin to work and earn a living for themselves.

The ranch survives on contributions and memorials, and the Crystal Ball is an important source of income.

Persons not receiving an invitation and who wish to attend can do so by dialing High Sky Girls Ranch at 694-7728 and one will be delivered.

Age does make difference, although she's been nice

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old professional man, single and never married. I recently became attracted to a very pretty girl who works at a fast food counter, and I could tell she liked me. I asked for six pieces of fish and she gave me eight. The next day she gave me change for a five dollar bill when I gave

After talking to her today. I found out that she's only a junior in high school. Could I get into any trouble if I asked her out? (I read that Dostoevski married an 18-year-old girl when he was 50 and they had a wonderful marriage.)

I need your answer before I make any moves .-

DEAR BILL: Never mind what Dostoevski did; that was 100 years ago. The schoolgirl to whom you are attracted either can't count or she's giving her boss's store away. If you are planning any "moves," I advise you to move in the direction of a girl closer to

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently moved here from another state, and quite by accident we learned that my husband has a niece in a private institution within half an hour's drive from our home. (I'll call this niece "Nellie.")

Naturally we went to visit Nellie at once, after which we phoned her mother (my husband's eldest sister) to tell her we had seen her daughter.

Nellie's mother objected strenuously to our visiting Nellie. She said the girl had been a "hopeless vegetable" since birth (she is now 28 years old) and it would have been much better had we left the family skeleton in the closet where it belonged instead of digging it up! (We ignored her wishes and continued to visit Nellie.)

Abby, in the few months we've been visiting her, she has learned to recognize us and seems so happy to see us. The head doctor there told us that Nellie has improved physically since we've been giving her our love and attention. He has even let us take her home on Sundays.

The problem is Nellie's mother. She has asked us to stay away from her daughter. She pays for her support but hasn't visited her once!

Should we continue seeing Nellie in spite of her mother's objections?-WONDERING DEAR WONDERING: I can see only good

Presbyterian Mission outlined for Altrusans

Gloria Hinojosa, director of St. Andrews Presbyterian Mission, was guest speaker at the International Relations dinner held in Midland Country Club by the Altrusa Club of Midland, Mc. Her topic was the center, with emphasis on its citizenship class held there.

Students in Midland under the Youth for Understanding program also were guests of the club. They were Torben Qvist of Denmark, who is attending Lee High School; Frances Meny of France, LHS, and Mirian Sugamoto of Brazil, LHS. Kajsa Also attending was Ljunstrom of Sweden, an exchange student living in Oklahoma City, Okla., whose brother, Carl, was an exchange student in Midland last year.

The students were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wilburn Buttery, field supervisors for the YFU program in Buttery pointed out there is a total of 12 exchange students in the area— Midland has 8, Odessa, McCamey, Crane and Stanton, one each. One Midland student also has applied for a new program to Australia, and 10 students have been accepted as summer exchange students.

Altrusa Club of Midland aids the YFU program, which is always in need of host families, Buttery said.

The St. Andrews Presbyterian Mission board of directors is authorized by and responsible to the Midland Presbyterian Corporate Ministry, which consists of First Presbyterian, Christ Presbyterian, Covenant Presbyteria and Trinity Presbyterian Churches.

Miss Hinojosa, in addition to explaining the center's citizenship classes, discussed other programs

There is Drivers Education, a continuing program meeting once a week for two hours. The rules, laws and signs from the Department of Public Safety manual are studied. The students are reviewed prior to applying for their driving tests to obtain licenses. The tests may be given orally for those who cannot read. The program has served persons in Midland, Odessa, Tarzan, Lenorah, Stanton, Big Spring and Colorado City.

The center's G.E.D. classes are aimed to adults who need and desire tutoring to be able to take the G.E.D. test at Midland College and pass. The tutors are volunteers from the community. Many of the students now are in better jobs, several have gone to college and some have taken nurses' training, said Mrs. Hinojosa.

Educational programs are offered to children and adults. There are two pre-school classes; one for 4 year olds and one for 3 year olds. The children, Miss Honojosa said, usually are from the center's neighborhood from families in which the parents working earn a little more than the amount set by the government for Head Start, but do not earn enough to pay the usual fee for a private pre-school

There are certain groups at the center designed for recreation and education. These include Girl Scouts and Brownies, sewing, 4-H Clubs and a Bible class.

The center has an eight-week summer program, with 75 to 100 children participating. It includes a variety of activities, including arts and crafts, dancing and singing, bowling, miniature golf, cooking classes and baseball. A library is provided for children and adults.

Once a year projects of the center are income tax clinics, overnight camping, Christmas project. Personal assistance is given for tran-slating, transportation, letters, jobs, counseling and rummage. There is emergency financial help which serves as average of 89 families a month, representing about 26 different families within that month. Some are referred to other agencies.

Other guests at the dinner were Mrs. Fayrene Biro of Odessa, Altrusa District Nine governor, and Susan Simmons, Mrs. Robert McNeal, Sue Krupa, Pat Gravalos, Julie Renfro, Dr. A. V. Johnson Jr., Loydd Wornell, Joe Gordon, Shorty O'Donnell, Porter Wallis and Busby.

Put the "brakes" on breakfast skipping with Fruit 'N Corn Muffins, hot from the oven.

Fruit'n corn muffins for on-the-run breakfast

Weekly mornings come plenty early for most families. Need a way to get everyone out of the house on time without skipping breakfast?

Try serving Fruit 'N Corn Muffins hot from the oven.

While muffins began as an old English tea-cake, today in the U.S., they're a popular breakfast item. This version combines a number of breakfast-related ingredients like eggs, orange marmalade and applesauce into a flour and cornmeal dough. The result-a flavorful, quickto-eat morning snack.

If there's no time to bake in the morning, make the muffins the night before or over the weekend and freeze. Reheat them in the oven just before serving.

When serving, remember muffins should never be cut, but pulled apart and spread with margarine or marmalade if desired. What isn't finished at breakfast can be eaten as a midmorning snack.

FRUIT 'N CORN MUFFINS

2 cups flour 2 tablespoons sugar 4 teaspoons baking powder 1 teaspoon salt

1 cup milk 2 eggs, beaten

1/2 cup cornmeal

1/2 cup applesauce 1/4 cup margarine, melted orange marmalade

Combine dry ingredients. Add combined milk, eggs, applesauce and margarine; mix just until moistened. Spoon into well-greased medium size muffin pan, filling each cup 2/3 full. Slightly indent center of each muffin. Top each muffin with 1 teaspoon marmalade. Bake at 425 degrees 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown. Yield:

Medical costs major drag on United States economy

By MARGUERITE SULLIVAN
Copley News Service
WASHINGTON — General Motor's largest supplier is not U.S. Steel. It is Blue Cross.

The Big Three automakers pay, on the average, $2,000 annually per auto worker (or worker family) for medical benefits, up $300 over a year ago, with no increase in benefits.

But it is not only Detroit which worries about how much health care costs.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce is studying the question. The White House is looking into it. Congress has it under consideration, and so have many businesses, associations, unions, and health care concerns, from the American Medical Association to Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

Health care and its costs are now considered to be among the nation's top two or three problems. American polisters say.

The costs are enormous. In fiscal year 1977 the United States spent $160 billion on medicine, almost 9 percent of gross national product (GNP), and an increase of 15 percent over the previous year.

That is a huge jump from fiscal 1950 when the United States spent $12 billion on its health, only 4.5 percent of its total GNP, and a substantial rise from fiscal 1970 when the tab was $69.2 billion or 7.2 percent of GNP.

Medicine - from drugs to surgery to doctors' visits to nursing home care — has become the most "expensive and uncontrolled part of the economy," complains Daniel S. Greenberg, editor and publisher of Science and Government Report.

When experts are asked what has caused the surge in costs, the blame is placed everywhere from general inflation to the structure of the industry, to doctors, medical schools, the government, hospitals and even the individual patient.

'What we see today are doctors who have no financial burden for their care," Greenberg asserted. Hospitals that have no burden. Patients who care little if costs go up. And third-party payers who don't care, because if there is not enough money, they just raise the rates."

Working flexible hours reduces strain on family

Copley News Service

Bill and Jane are both middlemanagement executives in different companies.

Bill goes to work at 7:30 a.m. and is home by 4, except during Little League season. Then he comes home an hour earlier once a week to coach

Jane leaves for work at 8:30 after the children have left for school and gets home by 6, except Fridays when she leaves work at noon and spends the afternoon shopping for the weekend. She usually goes to the office on Saturday mornings, too.

During the summer, the couple often spend a midweek afternoon at the beach with the children, and then work Saturday morning.

This schedule suits them and both work for companies that allow employees flexible hours.

Bill and Jane are a hypothetical couple but flexible hours are very

Flexible hours, or "flex-time," as it has come to be known, is Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter's "all-purpose solution" to family problems resulting from the demands of work.

Kanter stated her basic premise as,

"the way we work in America is the major source of strain on family life." Some of this strain is relieved for the hypothetical Jane and Bill, because their flexible hours allow them to function as a family.

Kanter, who is an associate professor of sociology at Yale University. has delved into the sociology of cor-porations. She also has acted as a consultant to a large, multi-national company, is a business consultant with her husband, Barry A. Stein, and recently has written "Men and Women of the Corporation" (Basic

"There are a striking number of American businesses which are still family-dominated. When the executive is at the top, his family is considered to be the key to his personality. important when it comes to issues of trust." Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter

Kanter said flex-time also is economically viable, but not more widespread because it has been opposed by middle-level management. She said the U.S. Department of Commerce is planning to adopt it,

She has other suggestions which could lead to a reduction in family strain from jobs, such as shared jobs, decentralizing so that more workers can be nearer their homes, and even permitting or encouraging work at home when possible.

'Some enlightened managers in big New York companies are seeing the advantages of some of their executives doing some of their work at home. Communications technology is making this even easier." she said. Kanter derives her suggestions from what she sees as the five main issues at the interface of family and

First, she said, is the degree of absorption of the occupation. 'For example, in the military, the clergy, the corporation, the work life is not only demanding, but spills over and involves others, such as the 'corporate wife. She said that the corporate wife is not a dying breed. "Her life is divided into three phases." she said. "There is the inclusion-exclusion phase when he is scrambling up the ladder, still in an entry job, so he is very absorbed at his place of work, while she is at home with children

So the result for two people who began their life together as companions, is that he is taken away - and the family is excluded, she said.

The next phase is when he is on the managerial ladder, called the "sentimentality-instrumentality"

Choices on friends, for example, can no longer be made on grounds of sentiment, but must be made on instrumental grounds - will the friends be instrumental in business? This was true in the 1950s and is true still, and not only in major corporations." The third phase comes when the executive has reached the top, at which point familialism is again important.

'There are a striking number of American businesses which are still family-dominated," she said. "Also, when the executive is at the top, his family is considered to be the key to his personality, important when it comes to issues of trust. At that stage, therefore, family life is not really private, although it is often manipulated to appear so."

This strain, she said, often tells on the spouse.

Person's hair, skin coloring considered when buying wig

If you are thinking of buying a wig, try to get one with a streaky look to it rather than one with a perfect dye job, says Josef Scigliano, hairstylist and vice president of a wig manufacturing company. The streaky-looking wig will be more natural.

Blonde is still the best-seller in wig colors, and expect to pay from $25 to $50 for a fairly good wig of synthetic hair, depending on how much handwork is

The key to buying a wig successfully is to consider your own hair and skin coloring, as well as the amount of your natural hair, he said opend about 15 minutes trying wigs on, then more time walking around and seeing if you really like it.

Scigliano develops the 59 styles in wigs currently offered by Eva Gabor International. He suggested a lightweight capless (net-like, rather than solid base) weighing about two ounces, compared to the six- and seven-ounce wigs of a few years ago. Don't buy a wig that overpowers you, he said.

Wigs are still popular even with the natural look still prevailing in hair, and current favorites are the curly, wedge and Farrah Fawcett-Majors styles.

Genetics, diet, age and care all play a big part in how your skin looks, according to Mina Bender, a New York nurse and public health specialist.

Bender is touring America for the Barnum
Communications firm of New York, talking about what she calls "the visible problem but the hidden topic of acne."

Three out of four teen-agers tend to have acne at some time." she said. "But it also can be a problem for people in their 20s, 30s and 40s. And we're living in a society that pushes thinness, good skin, perfection

Although genetics dictate the type of skin one inherits, new items added to the diet or new methods of skin care can cause problems. Bender said.

"Hormonal changes in the body can cause overstimulation of the glands, which lead to acne. Cosmetics with oil bases, which clog the pores, also can be sources of trouble. And my feeling is that there are more things in the environment now which can cause skin problems."

Good skin care, acne or not, is based on a practical program of keeping the skin and hair clean. Bender "Over-the-counter acne cleansers are very good in keeping the bacterial supply on the skin at its

The skin gets oxygen from the blood, not from the air around, but she still believes in not covering the face with too much makeup. "And if your skin breaks out, stay away from cosmetics as much as you can." She also suggests staying away from inordinate amounts of vitamins and minerals, and exercising for ciculation and watching your diet.

"For acne, over-the-counter creams containing benzoyl peroxide might help," she said. "Acne waxes and wanes, but if it persists, a visit to a dermatologist might be in order."

Leonel J. Castillo, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, regards the questions posed by the government's standard naturalization form as "a perfect topic for bad jokes."

There's nothing that compares with them," Castillo said in a recent interview. Citing a fledgling administration effort to rewrite the nation's immigration law, Castillo said: "I can't think of anything that needs it more than those questions."

But Castillo and other naturalization authorities offer no hope for quick change.

The questions, some of which are relics of bygone fears and prejudices. are rooted in federal law and can only be changed by Congress. Moreover, changes in the immigration statute historically come with glacial slowness.

The interagency commission to draft changes in the immigration statute has estimated the job will take a year, but Castillo thinks the task will take twice that long.

Meantime, the questions produce "a continuing stream of offended people," Castillo said. Often, it is the two U.S. citizens who are required to that are most offended.

"I went there with my friend who is trying to become a U.S citizen, he's been here for 15 years and is a Little League backer and in the Knights of Columbus, and you asked him a lot of insulting questions," Castillo recalled one irate sponsor complaining. Some questions put to applicants for citizenship would be legally out of bounds for authorities to ask of Americans.

For example, Question No. 6 states:

"The law provides that you may not be regarded as qualified for naturalization under certain conditions, if you knowingly committed certain offenses or crimes, even though you may not have been arrested therefore. Have you ever, in or outside the United States:

(a) knowingly committed any crime for which you have not been arrested?.

"Fifth Amendment all over the place," said Castillo, referring to the Fifth Amendment's protection against self-incrimination.

But Andrew J. Carmichael Jr., assistant commissioner for naturalization, noted that such civil liberties concern has never applied to candidates for citizenship.

"The (immigration) statute requires that the burden be on the applicant to prove that he is eligible for naturalization in every respect." Carmichael said. "The courts have frequently said that the government is entitled to a full and frank answer to any question which touches on eligibility for naturalization."

The Fifth Amendment does not enter the question because "we're dealing with a civil privilege. We're convicting (persons) for crimes," he became an issue of false testimony." But that question is serving as the basis for deportation proceedings against several persons accused of committing Nazi war crimes during World WAr II.

Castillo said that immigration authorities "some years ago made use of the question against organized crime figures. They couldn't get them on anything else," he said.

Some questions on the form are rooted in the nation's origins.

Antiquing gives old furniture improved look, helps budget

Shopping the secondhand and "junk" stores provides an economical way to furnish an apartment

The only problem is when you get the old battered furniture home, it may not give you that "funky" look you wanted. To often old furniture looks like nothing more than old furniture.

One way to give a collection of used furniture a special look is by antiquing it. The process is not a difficult one even for beginners and the results can be quite dramatic.

Antiquing is simply a two-tone effect created by brushing on a base coat of paint, adding a special toner glaze and wiping it to make a streaked, antique

New no-bounce checking loans money for account

COLLEGE STATION-No-bounce checking eliminates the embar-rasemnt of accidentally overdrawing a checking account and having a check returned—and, there is no service charge and no minimum required in a checking account, says a consumer information specialist.

No-bounce checking operates by automatically advancing a lump sum of money into an account to cover an overdraft, Claudia Kerbel explains. Ms. Kerbel is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

In other words, no-bounce checking is receiving approval on a loan being held in reserve. Money can be borrowed on demand and with no delay, she

Generally, between $500 and $1,000 credit is available. There is no interest charged until the money is actually placed in the account, then interest is paid only on the amount transferred.

The lump sum is a predetermined amount, usually $50 or $100. Interest is charged on the entire amount advanced. The interest-one or two percent per month will amount to usually less than the penalty for an overdrawn check. Interest is paid only for the exact number of days the money is in the account, the specialist explains.

If the advance is not paid back, the bank will leave it in the account and deduct monthly payments. These payments are usually about five percent of the amount advanced.
Interest will continue to be charged on the outstanding balance. To save money, pay back the advance as soon as possible. This can be done at any time, Ms. Kerbel adds.

Jane leaves for work at 8:30 after the children have left for school and gets home by 6, except Fridays when she leaves work at noon and spends the afternoon shopping for the weekend. She usually goes to the office on Saturday mornings, too.

During the summer, the couple often spend a midweek afternoon at the beach with the children, and then work Saturday morning.

This schedule suits them and both work for companies that allow employees flexible hours.

A situation too good to be true? Bill and Jane are a hypothetical couple but flexible hours are very

Flexible hours, or "flex-time," as it has come to be known, is Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter's "all-purpose solution" to family problems resulting from the demands of work.

Kanter stated her basic premise as, "the way we work in America is the major source of strain on family life." Some of this strain is relieved for the hypothetical Jane and Bill, because their flexible hours allow them to function as a family. Kanter, who is an associate professor of sociology at Yale University, has delved into the sociology of corporations. She also has acted as a consultant to a large, multi-national company, is a business consultant with her husband, Barry A. Stein, and recently has written "Men and Women of the Corporation" (Basic

"There are a striking number of American businesses which are still family-dominated. When the executive is at the top, his family is considered to be the key to his personality, important when it comes to issues of trust." Dr. Rosabeth Moss Kanter

Books, Inc.).

Kanter said flex-time also is economically viable, but not more widespread because it has been opposed by middle-level management. She said the U.S. Department of Commerce is planning to adopt it.

She has other suggestions which could lead to a reduction in family strain from jobs, such as shared jobs, decentralizing so that more workers can be nearer their homes, and even permitting or encouraging work at nome when possible

'Some enlightened managers in big New York companies are seeing the advantages of some of their executives doing some of their work at home. Communications technology is making this even easier," she said.

Kanter derives her suggestions from what she sees as the five main issues at the interface of family and First, she said, is the degree of absorption of the occupation. For example, in the military, the clergy, the corporation, the work life is not only demanding, but spills over and involves others, such as the 'corporate wife. She said that the corporate wife is not a dying breed. "Her life is divided into three phases," she said. "There is the inclusion-exclusion phase when he is scrambling up the ladder, still in an entry job, so he is very absorbed at his place of work, while she is at home with children So the result for two people who began their life together as companions, is that he is taken away - and the family is excluded, she said.

The next phase is when he is on the managerial ladder, called the "sentimentality-instrumentality"

Choices on friends, for example, can no longer be made on grounds of sentiment, but must be made on instrumental grounds - will the friends be instrumental in business? This was true in the 1950s and is true still, and not only in major corporations." The third phase comes when the executive has reached the top, at which point familialism is again important.

"There are a striking number of American businesses which are still family-dominated." she said. "Also, when the executive is at the top, his family is considered to be the key to his personality, important when it comes to issues of trust. At that stage, therefore, family life is not really private, although it is often manipulated to appear so."

This strain, she said, often tells on the spouse.

So much so that for fully seven years those and other objectionable elements in the naturalization process caused her to balk at applying for U.S. citizenship, though she and her husband were living in New Jersey and had no intention of returning to her native Italy.

Mrs. T., who recently overcame her objections and became a citizen, is not alone in being repulsed by having to answer questions about personal beliefs and practices at which most natural-born citizens would bridle. Leonel J. Castillo, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, regards the questions posed by the government's standard naturalization form as "a perfect topic for bad jokes."

New no-bounce checking loans money for account

COLLEGE STATION-No-bounce checking eliminates the embarrasemnt of accidentally overdrawing a checking account and having a check returned-and, there is no service charge and no minimum required in a checking account, says a consumer information specialist.

No-bounce checking operates by automatically advancing a lump sum of money into an account to cover an overdraft, Claudia Kerbel explains.

Ms. Kerbel is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M. University System. In other words, no-bounce checking

s receiving approval on a loan being held in reserve. Money can be borrowed on demand and with no delay, she Generally, between $500 and $1,000 edit is available. There is no interest charged until the money is actually placed in the account, then interest is paid only on the amount transferred. The lump sum is a predetermined amount, usually $50 or $100 Interest is charged on the entire amount advanced. The interest—one or two percent per month will amount to usually less than the penalty for an overdrawn check.

Interest is paid only for the exact number of days the money is in the account, the specialist explains. If the advance is not paid back, the bank will leave it in the account and deduct monthly payments. These payments are usually about five percent of the amount advanced. Interest will continue to be charged on the outstanding balance.

To save money, pay back the advance as soon as possible. This can be done at any time, Ms. Kerbel adds.

Pasha retains title, style from Egyptian history

By DON A. SCHANCHE The Los Angeles Times

CAIRO - The pasha sat in a dusty leather armchair, imperiously receiving a stream of supporters. Some kissed his hand humbly and backed away as if he were King Farouk come back to life.

The busy receiving room of the decaying, marble-halled palace was cluttered with relics of the old days. like a time capsule sealed a generation ago and only just opened.

Fuad Pasha Serageddin, who was King Farouk's police minister before the Egyptian revolution of 1952, seems as out of place in this troubled socialist country as a Turkish overlord. He clings proudly to the archaic Ottoman title of pasha and to the abrupt, impatient style of the polticial boss that he was before the

Yet Serageddin actually represents a new wave in Egyptian politics. As leader of the New Wafd Party (even the name is a throwback to the past). the pasha has drawn together a diverse following of old and young ranging from extreme right to extreme left. He has forged the first significant legal political opposition here in a generation.

Last month when his party was legalized, Fuad Pasha took control of the largest opposition group in the Egyptian Parliament.

THE 24 NEW WAFD ASSEMBLYMEN, most of them political independents who lined up with Serageddin last year when he announced plans to revive the old Wafd. which had ruled off and on from the 1920s into the 1950s, are no real threat to the government's 308-seat majority. In all, there are 360-seats.

But with a generally progressive "free enterprise" platform and a nostalgic appeal to Egyptians who remember the Wafd as the country's first revolutionary independence party, plus a pugnacious attitude, the New Wafd has had an unusual impact.

In the parliament, for example, a Wafd assemblyman touched off the first fist fight in memory a few weeks ago when he accused the deputy speaker of anti-Wafd bias and demanded greater democracy and free speech

Parliamentary police rushed onto the floor for the first time in history and broke up the battle. In the process, they roughed up a few Egyptian reporters and seized news film of the free-for-all. The police action all but guaranteed the Wafd a sympathetic hearing in the nation's three leading newspapers.

SERAGEDDIN WELCOMED the resulting image of a freedom-loving opposition. Apparently a growing number of ordinary Egyptians have welcomed it too. According to the pasha, the party rolls have swelled in one month from 592 to more than

"The majority of Egyptians support us as they did before 1952," he said. and predicted that the New Wafd will showits strength in local elections next year, then move to oust the majority party of President Anwar Sadat n parliamentary elections in 1981. 'In any new elections we shall get the majority." he said.

Sadat, whose democratic reforms of the past two years allowed the New Wafd to emerge, is not personally threatened by its rise, even if Serageddin's forecast comes true.

The old pasha - he gives his age as 67 but is thought to be past 70 - has gone out of his way to voice support for Sadat despite their differences over the structure of government.

SADAT STOUTLY OPPOSED the resurgence of the Wafd. "To those who want the Wafd Party to come back, I say that the hands of the clock will never go back," he said last June. But when the Wafd met stringent legal requirements that allow independent political parties if they have the backing of 20 or more members of parliament, Sadat bowed to the law.

The political parties law was an outgrowth of a giant leap to political liberalization that Sadat took two years ago when he broke Egypt's monolithic political structure into a limited multiparty system. Political parties had been banned following the 1952 revolution led by a group of "free officers" under Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser. Later the government formed a single ruling party, the Arab Socialist Union.

In 1976 Sadat divided the Arab Socialist Union into rightist, centrist and leftist factions and allowed the first open contest for parliamentary seats in modern Egyptian history. After the elections he encouraged passage of the new political parties law and the three governmentcreated factions became parties of their own right, with Sadat's ruling centrist holding virtually all power.

THE ARAB SOCIALIST UNION was recast into a political rule-making group staffed by representatives of all the parties - the Arab Socialist Party (centrist), the Socialist Liberal Party (rightist) and the National Coalition Party (leftist.)

Early, this month, as chairman of the fourth legal party and the first to rise from the grassroots, Serageddin was formally delegated by Sadat to take his seat in the Arab Socialist Union.

Whether the New Wafd will be as successful as Serageddin hopes is uncertain. There is no doubt that it has excited widespread interest. University students who a year ago leaned almost exclusively to the left. and who this year shifted overwhelmingly to the conservative Islamic religious right in campus elections. now spend more time debating the merits of the Wafd than either Marx or Mohammed.

Hundreds of them, ranging from right-wing religious extremists to radical leftists, have signed Serageddin's party rolls. One leftist enrollee explained the attraction:

"The Wafd Party was outlawed before most of us were born, but we know it from our history books as the first party of independence from British rule and the corrupt old monarchy. It represented all Egyptians regardless of religion or ideology, as New Wafd is trying to do now. We identify with that. It offers change.

WAFD, WHICH MEANS "DELEGATION" in Arabic, was the name given the group of Egyptian David. revolutionaires formed in 1918 to seek independence from the British. Its leaders were arrested and Egyptians carried out a bloody uprising in protest in 1919. Through the 1920s, '30s. and '40s the party maintained overwhelming national support and fought an on-again, off-again struggle with the British and the monarchy of King Fouad and his son Farouk. By the late 40s and '50s, it had become so firmly entrenched with the rich and powerful, and weakened by charges of corruption, that it lost popular support and was out ousted from power six months before the officers revolution of July, 1952.

Another group drawn to the Wafd for sharply different reasons thAn the students - includes middle-aged professionals, intellectuals and businessmen. For them the appeal appears largely economic nostalgia, recalling the relatively free-wheeling days before the revolution when enterprise produced profits and the middle-class life was untroubled by today's population explosion and air of crisis.

Serageddin, who was No. 2 in the old Wafd and a member of an extremely wealthy family, said that "life was not shameful before 1942."

"Everything was better than it is now, and we hope that in that sense things go back to what they were," he went on. "But we recognize that everything has changed during these 25 years. There have been changes in our ideals, our problems, even our political language. The social system has become well-rooted, and we support it all and all of the social reforms."

SERAGEDDIN'S PARTY PRO-GRAM, temporarily out of print because of the sudden upsurge in membership, goes even further in pledging allegiance to the "1952 revolution and its principles ... socialism, democracy ... and the rights of the workers and the farmers. We have no position against socialism and a social system.

Last September Midland County voted to create a hospital district. It is like a school district, and is designed to collect taxes for and operate a hospital through elected officials. Before that,

Midland Memorial Hospital was a private hospital, built and operated by the Midland Memorial Founscheduled to turn over ownership of the hospital to the district. The present plan is to have the hospital district sign a management contract with

Wafd is made up of old Wafdists such as Serageddin, none of whom had much taste for the revolution when it occurred and few of whom retain any sympathy for socialism.

Many of them were jailed by Nasser - Serageddin spent three years in prison - and lost most of their wealth and land to expropriation by the socialist government.

According to a young member of the New Wafd, Serageddin's old guard colleagues mainly represent the extreme Right and have come back to the Wafd almost entirely out of nostalgia for the "good old days" when they had the power and the money to do pretty much as they pleased.

With such a disparity of motive and ideology among the members, critics suggest that the seeds of the New Wafd's eventual failure have alreay been planted.

'Internal conflict is bound to tear them apart before they have a chance to build the kind of national following the party must have to survive," a political scientist said.

state and the upcoming race for Governor.

BUT SERAGEDDIN DISAGREES. 'I've said many times that these different factions inside the party do not concern me very much." he told an interviewer. "What concerns me is how loyal each member is to the party, its programs and principles. The ideology of the member is something that belongs to him. The party represents the Egyptian people with all their ideologies, tendencies and religions. Some observers believe that Serageddin might be right. They note that the old Wafd also encompassed a seemingly impossible spectrum of ideologues, ranging from far right to far left and from Islamic conservative to Christian liberal. And the New Wafd Party program offers something to almost everyone including strong support of bigger labor benefits, women's rights, a strictly enforced progressive income tax and a nonaligned foreign policy that tilts neither toward the West nor the Soviet Union but pledges undying devotion to President Sadat's peace initiative.

The New Wafd's only major difference with the government party is that it wants a few modifications in the government itself. The program calls for a constitutional amendment providing a direct popular election of the president and vice president.

Under the present system the president is named by the Parliament and his selection approved in a national plebiscite.

Mound is his hope

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz.-For three years Mike Anderson, the pitcher, languished unnoticed on the bench at the University of Texas, apparently destined to finish his college career without anyone even being aware he even had a college career.

What happened in Mike's senior year was enough to make a coach wonder if he was in the right business. "I have to rate that as my greatest baseball thrill," says Mike. "Sitting on the bench for three years as a pitcher, then asking the coach if I could try the outfield my last year and getting the starting position.

'WE WENT on to win the national championship, Texas' first in 25

Anderson merely batted .360, hit six home runs and stole 21 bases in leading the Longhorns to the Southwest Conference championship in 1975. His average in SWC play was .403 and in the College World Series a robust .348.

It was a performance good enough to attract the attention of major league baseball scouts and it was

Billy Capps, who once managed Midland, who got his signature on a contract after Chicago drafted him. Anderson played a season at Bradenton before tearing up his knee in the Arizona Fall Instructional League THE NEXT spring. Anderson was on the Midland roster, but saw very little action. It was obvious the knee wasn't completely right.

Returned to Pompano Beach, Mike batted .264 in 72 games.

That fall, Anderson led the Arizona Fall League in putouts, chances and double plays, but the next spring. after another brief look from Midland, it was back to Pompano, where his .232 average made his future as black as it had been in his pitching days at Texas.

However, someone noticed he was ading the Florida State League in assists with 21, indicating there was still an arm on the 6-0, 175-pound frame, and an arm in a bullpen is always welcome.

SO NOW, Anderson, who never got a chance as a pitcher at Texas, is finally getting one with the Cubs' organization. It may be his salvation as a pro ball player.

Late last season, he went to the bullpen and was 0.00 in three games and four innings, not much to go on, but this spring he is continuing his education on the Midland Cubs' staff.

No one is pulling harder for him than Manager Jim Saul, who well remembers that lack of consistency was his most nagging problem a year ago when the Cubs finished second to El Paso in both halfs of the West Division race.

AAUs loaded with talent

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Schoolgirl sensation Tracy Caulkins, who holds three American records, and UCLA Olympian and world record holder Brian Goodell will headline an all-star cast this week at the Amateur Athletic Union's (AAU) national swimming championships.

They'll begin competition Wednesday at the plush new $6.5 million Texas Olympic Swimming Center. The facility is judged as one of the fastest courses in the U.S. with it's uniform nine-foot depth and flush deck drain system, which permits minimal current and back wash.

In addition to competing for AAU national titles, swimmers will be trying to earn a spot on the U.S. team that returns here April 15-16 to compete in a dual meet against a Russian team.

Bosox pick up Eckersley; SF singing Blues again

AP Sports Writer

The acquisition of Dennis Eckersley has made the Boston Red Sox really believe they can win the American League pennant. The appearance in camp of Vida Blue has convinced the San Francisco Giants there really is a Vida Blue. And a nine-inning performance has made Randy Jones really believe he can pitch again.

Eckersley, a hard-throwing righthander who won 14 games, including a no-hitter for Cleveland last season, was obtained by the Red Sox Thursday, along with catcher Fred Kendall, from the Indians for pitchers Rick Wise and Mike Paxton, infielder Ted Cox and catcher Bo Diaz.

'We want to win and this gives us a much better shot." Boston General Manager Haywood Sullivan said after the long-rumored deal was completed. "We gave up a lot, but we got one of the top five or six pitchers in baseball."

"We got the pitcher we wanted," said Red Sox Manager Don Zimmer. "We didn't think we could win with the staff we had. Now we're stronger and our people think we can win.'

'Eckersley is capable of striking out 200 batters a season," added Sullivan. "The sky's the limit for him, pitching and winning with our ball

LAST SEASON, Eckersley, 23, struck out 191 in 247 innings while compiling a 14-13 record for the Indians. Kendall, 29, hit .249 for Cleveland in 1977.

Wise, 32, and owner of two nohitters in the National League, had asked to be traded after last season when he was banished to the Boston bullpen for inconsistency. His record was 11-5, but his earned run average was a whopping 4.77.

Paxton, 24, was 10-5 as a rookie with the Red Sox last year. Cox, 23, a first baseman and third baseman, was the International League's Most Valuable Player in 1977 when he hit .334 with 14 homers and 81 runs batted in and he batted .362 in 13 games with Boston. And Diaz, 25, hit .263 with Pawtucket

BLUE, MEANWHILE, rejoined the Giants, making the club both puzzled and elated. "I don't know why he left." said General Manager Spec Richardson. "He came back on his own ... I'm very happy to have him in camp now.

Blue, a fireballing left-hander, had practiced only one day with the Giants since being obtained from the Oakland A's for seven players March 15. After that, he said he was unhappy with his contract and went to his mother's home in Mansfield, La.

"We have a policy against renegotiating anybody's contract, not just Vida Blue's," said Richardson. And Jones matched his complete game total of last season with a routegoing effort as the San Diego Padres beat the California Angels 7-2 in an exhibition game.

JONES, THE 1976 National League Cy Young Award winner but only 6-12 last year with one complete game after undergoing arm surgery, scattered seven hits and recorded 20 outs on grounders against California.

"It was the best day I've had in 18 months," said Jones, a sinkerball specialist. "I could feel my rhythm and momentum coming back. Bits and pieces today felt just like '76. I'm working toward that same groove and when it happens, I'm going to latch onto it and keep it."

While the Padres were highly encouraged by Jones' showing, the Baltimore Orioles got distressing news as ace righthander Jim Palmer a threetime American League Cy Young Award winner - withdrew from next week's opening day assignment. Palmer, troubled by a sore shoulder, said he was not yet ready after pitching four innings with the Orioles' Rochester club of the International League.

THE ORIOLES not only lost their opening day pitcher, but dropped a 3-2 exhibition game to the Atlanta Braves, the winning run scoring on a wild pitch by Scott McGregor.

In other exhibitions: run-scoring singles by Ron Blomberg and Royle Stillman highlighted a three-run seventh-inning that helped the Chicago White Sox edge the New York Yankees 3-2. Detroit's Jim Slaton went eight innings, spacing five hits, for his fourth straight victory as the Tigers defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1.

The Cowboys started their off-season program in 1970 and have been Rod Carew, the six-time AL batting champion, drove in three runs with a single and double, while Geoff Zahn "You can't survive anymore without an off-season program," said and Greg Thayer combined for a six-Landry. "Everyone that can have one hitter as the Minnesota Twins blanked the Montreal Expos 4-0. Two-run homers by Dwight Evans, Bernie Carbo and Jack Brohamer backed the four-hit pitching of Bill Lee and Bill Campbell as the Boston Red Sox rock-ed the New York Mets 8-0.

> JIM MASON'S run-scoring single in the 10th inning lifted the Texas Rangers to a 6-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals. The Cincinnati Reds got the winning run in the 11th inning when St. Louis reliever Butch Metzger overran Mike Lum's tap toward the mound in topping the Cardinals

The San Francisco Giants clubbed five doubles, including a two-run shot by Mario Guerrero, during a five-run third inning en route to a 7-4 triumph over the Cleveland Indians. Al Woods' eighth-inning homer gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 3- 2 decision over the Philadelphia Phillies.

And Bill Stein's four hits, Dick Davis' three-run homer and solo homers by Don Money and Lenn Sakata led a 17-hit Milwaukee attack as the Brewers blasted the Seattle Mariners 12-4.

MEANWHILE, THE White Sox sent catcher Jim Essian and pitcher Steve Renko to Oakland for pitcher Pablo Torrealba, and the Mets obtained pitcher Jim Burton from Boston for infielder Leo Foster.

And several name players were cut. including: pitcher Clay Carroll by the White Sox; outfielder Willie Crawford by Los Angeles; outfielders Von Joshua and Steve Brye and catcher Larry Haney by Milwaukee; pitcher Buzz Capra, catcher Vic Correll and infielders Tom Paciorek and Craig Robinson by Atlanta; pitcher A Downing, catcher Bill Plummer and outfielder Champ Summers by Cin-cinnati; infielder Larry Lintz by Oakland, and pitcher Rick Sawyer by Montreal.

WITH THE Chicago Cubs in Tuscon for a night game against Cleveland, Midland will face Jersey City this afternoon in Scottsdale Stadium, their first home game in a week.

Actually, the club that lost here is a far cry from the team that will open the Texas League season for Midland April 11. Only Aaron Randall, who had a single, played on the Cubs last year. Others who may have a chance to stick are Steve Macko, the shortstop from Baylor, who had a couple of safeties; Brian Rossinski, who got a long look last spring before going to Pompano Beach, and catcher Gregg Keatley, who has spent most of this spring with the big club.

UT all skin and bones

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Most Texas Longhorn track fans trace the team's decline to the pulled leg muscle Olympic sprinter Johnny "Lam" Jones suffered in the Jan. 2 Cotton Bowl.

Actually, the team's misfortunes started much earlier, says Lou Maysel, associate sports editor of the Austin American-Statesman.

"This is the thinnest we've been since I've been head coach." said Cleburne Price.

Maysel detailed Texas' track problems, starting with a December 1976 Southwest Conference meeting at which Texas lost two track scholarships as punishment for irregularities in the employment of Texas athletes by the state Senate. Then three top recruits did not qualify academically. "They were quality people and it really hurt us," said Price. "We signed them thinking we could get them in. Now, however, Jamaicans Dennis Henry, a quarter-miler, and halfmiler Owen Hamilton are running for high jumper Kelvin Brown, is at Miami-Dade South, Fla., JC. In addition, Maysel said, Bill Blessing, a former national schoolboy record holder in the 330-yard hurdles, "has been a four-year disappointment," and Price's two most experienced milers are possibly lost for the season. Co-captain Andy Jackson dropped out for personal reasons. Two sprinters, Hugh Spooner and Maurice Beedcher, are recovering from leg troubles, and sprinterhurdler Banzant Driver has pulled a

Ranger Junior College. The third,

Under the watchful eye of Coach Tom Landry, the Cowboys ran obstacle courses, lifted weights and triple jumped under a hot sun.

'I wasn't a believer about offseason conditioning but I am now," said a sweat-soaked Drew Pearson. "A lot lof teams don't do anything like this in the National Football League and I think it gives us an edge. I've noticed some of the other clubs have started to jump on our bandwagon."

WHILE THE players groaned and moaned under the 80-degree temperatures, there were moments of high humor. Free-safety Cliff Harris almost mangled assistant Coach Danny Reeves in a collision at the triple jump pit. Super Bowl hero Butch Johnson

Rebs satisfied? Time will tell

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Midland Lee coach Sam Volpe thinks his Midland Lee thinclads are a bit on the satisfied side these days, but if his relay troops keep improving like they have over the last two weeks, the Rebels have some happy days ahead. The Rebels will travel to Carlsbad, N. M., Saturday for a one-day meet, and the field they will encounter should keep the Rebs from getting too satisfied. Hobbs, Carlsbad and Odessa Permian are among the field. and that could be a real uphill

"I know we have improved our times a great deal in the relays, but I still feel that our kids are a bit on the satisfied side right now. I hope they don't get too pleased with themselves because they haven't reached their potential yet." Volpe said earlier this week.

Lee's mile relay team last week in Del Rio knocked off almost three seconds off of their best time this year when they recorded a 3:24.1. That mark finally catches the San Angelo relay team.

The secret to turning the time came from Dwight Washington. He made the difference. Sophomore Phil Carleton has always been strong and is the leading 5-4A contender in the 440 with a 50.4 this year. Gary Butler and Jami Berry give Lee strength in the event. CARLETON IS the only member of the Rebels that has improved every time out this year. If he improves much more in the 440, he will break the 50second barrier. Not bad for a sophomore.

The Lee sprint relay team has remained the same all year with Jerry Moore, Berry, Doug Guthrie and Washington on the anchor. They have been steady and own a 42.9 this season, another best in district. They should improve that mark, however, and will need to if they hope to do well in the regional meet. That's provided they get there, of course. It's not hard to drop a baton in this event.

With the exception of Carleton in the 440, the Lee runners have been less than impressive in their last two outings. THIS IS what has caused Volpe some concern. Runners haven't improved much on best times turned in.

Elmer Montgomery got a late start with the Rebels, but he is improving in the sprints with 10.0 and 23.1 his bests in the 100 and 220

Washington has not approached his 9.9 turned in three weeks ago in the 100 or his 22.3 in the 220, which he ran the first week of the season.

Miler Steve Hooper did have his best in the mile with a 4:28.3 last week in Del Rio for a third place, but progress is slow. His previous best of 4:28.4 was two weeks ago. And 880 expert Arthur Pertile did not run last week after an injury, but he has not approached his best of 2:01.5, recorded the first week.

LEE'S HIGH powered trio in the shot put have also slowed in recent weeks. Jeff McCowan owns a 55-3 toss this year, but he hasn't been able to obtain that mark in a while while Rodney Taylor's 52-10% is also at a standstill. Herb Pearce has not improved recently on his best of

The long jump has been up and down. Moore and Montgomery both own bests of 21-71/2 while Jody Sessoms owns a 20-11. They seem to be up one week and down the next, but they have been pretty solid.

"I thought our high jumpers would be better too," Volpe said. "They seem to be scared of height or something. I would like to get more from them."

IT MAY just be that some of the Rebs are in a mild slump. but it is a fact that they are a big factor in every track meet they enter. And that in itself is enough to make this season different from last year. The Rebels will team back up with Midland High next weekend for the San Angelo Relays, and then Lee will play host to the District 5-4A meet at Memorial Stadium, April 14.

"I'm really not even happy with the results tonight." Gottfried added. "I'm not doing what I want to do."

But Gottfried in his victory over Martin did hold his serve throughout the two sets. Holding service had been one of his problems when he was forced to go three sets on Tuesday to eliminate Pat DuPre.

Twin brothers Tim and Tom Gullikson qualified for the quarterfinals Thursday, but fourth-seeded Tim had a hard-fought three-set match to make the round of eight.

Tim eliminated Ove Bengston of Sweden 6-3, 3-6, 6-3. His brother Tom ousted Byron Bertram of South Africa

After the match, Tim Gullikson, who in 1977 was rated the best newcomer in the Association of Tennis Professionals tournaments. said he had been slowed to a degree by a head cold. But he added. "neither of us played really well. If we did, you would not have seen that many un-forced errors. In the second set I started to slip on my serve and he started to play better.'

Other players making the quarter-finals Thursday were Eddie Dibbs, second-seeded, a 6-3, 6-2 victor over John Yuill of South Africa; Harold Solomon, third-seeded, a 6-4, 6-3 winner over Gene Mayer, and Arthur

Ashe, fifth-seeded, an easy 6-0, 6-3 victor over Ashok Amritraj of India.

The sixth-seeded player. Hank Pfister, had made his way to the quarter-finals with a victory on Wednesday.

Racing with class

The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

At the kickoff lunch for the Long Beach Grand Prix, some Frenchman with a dueling saber knocked the corks off a case of Meet and Chandon champagne bottles and poured the foaming stuff onto a pyramid of $24apiece imported crystal hollowstemmed glasses. It was a scene worthy of Louis XVI, a real "Let 'em eat cake" performance.

And, when I tell you that, I tell you all I have to about the difference between auto racing on the Continent and auto racing in the good ol' USA championship circuits.

Over here, we wouldn't need the saber. I mean, who has to cut the top off a can of beer? Also, there's no need for a pyramid of glasses. Who drinks beer out of a glass? Besides, who's gonna waste a case of beer on a hotel rug, anyway?

The luncheon menu also had things like "crepe Ratatouille" and "Strawberries Supreme." Most American drivers would have thought they were just complicated enchiladas.

AUTO RACING puts on a monocle and clicks its heels and kisses hands when it goes abroad. Or even when Formula I comes to this country. I mean, Formula I drivers date Miss World or some contessa. American drivers lean to stewardesses or waitresses. A foreign grid might have the "Marquis de Impetigo" or the "Baron Von Und Zu Sauerbraten" in it. American drivers just use initials.

The good Lord never intended Mario Andretti to be an Americantype driver. I mean, the Trenton 150 doesn't get too many drivers born in Treste, Italy. But Mario was one of those pieces of human flotsam caught between Hitler's retreating armies and the allied advance up the boot of Italy in 1946 and, when the smoke cleared, Mario and his twin brother. Aldo, found themselves under a lube rack in Nazareth, Pa.

Mario was so tiny when he started to drive that Fred Dryer pointed out at the lunch the other day his number should have been "decimal-pointfive" instead of the whole ordinal.

But Mario got in on the brutish oval driving of the American cowboys' circuits because he didn't have much choice. It was either drive them or drive a cab. Ferrari didn't have too many scouts around Nazareth, Pa.

MARIO STARTED driving cars when he was 13, and he won the Rookie of the Year and finished third in the first Indianapolis race he ever even saw in 1965. He was almost the only guy in USAC in those days that didn't have a Texas accent, but he bounced off walls with the best of them. He won Indy in 1969 wire to

Shortly after that, though, Mario began to look covetously at the other side of racing, that elegant form that ran through the Black Forest, the Alps, the French Riviera. It was a different kind of racing from the heatseared grueling ovals of America. It

THE LONG Beach Grand Prix, the only known legalized street racing in the United States this side of Burt Reynolds movies, comes to town for a third year riding a crest of popularity that has buried its history of financial disaster, spectator malaise, resident opposition and media hostility.

Andretti, a genuine Italianborn American folk hero who turned this race into a nationalist rallying point with a stirring come-from-behind victory a year ago, leads an interesting entry list of more than two dozen of the world's top drivers competing for a share of the $400,000 purse. PRACTICE SESSIONS get underway this morning, as soon as authorities can clear the area of commuters, freeloaders and others. More practice and qualifying to determine the starting field of 22 is scheduled Saturday.

CBS will televise the 160-mile race from start to finish, beginning at 1 p.m. PST.

Preparation of the course, with its five miles of concrete interstate dividers and chainlink fencing, began earlier this week. City officials decided to get on with the job ahead of schedule this year to avoid some of the last-minute rushing around which has delayed things in recent years.

THE RACE begins this year going the wrong way down Shoreline Drive: James Hunt and all the British drivers will probably love being on the left hand side of the street for a few precious seconds. Then it makes a hairpin turn — James will like this too, the Queen's Hairpin — and back up the other side of Shoreline for a few nunarea yaras.

The course then veers through a parking lot along Pine Avenue, cuts back around a bank, and up a slight incline right onto the wrong side of Ocean Boulevard (pit road is in the right hand lanes of Ocean), past several X-rated movie houses, retirement hotels, restaurants and a tattoo parlor. The finish line is about halfway down Ocean between the new $51 million convention center and the Pussy Cat Adult Theatre.

THE COURSE follows another right turn, down Linden Avenue, and through another parking lot before it

Cal coach has ideas

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - The University of California's new basketball coach, Dick Kuchen, who was an assistant coach at Notre Dame, says he thinks Cal is "ready for big things in basketball."

That would be a change after only one winning season in six under his predecessor, Dick Edwards, who resigned after the Bears ended an 11-16 season.

About the biggest thing that could happen to Cal would be to beat UCLA. which it hasn't done for 38 straight games. And Kuchen may know the secret since Notre Dame beat the Bruins twice in the season just ended.

But Kuchen says he won't point for that, because "once you point toward a specific team, it has an unleveling effect on the rest of the season."

Kuchen's appointment, announced at a news conference Thursday. brings a second former assistant to Notre Dame's Digger Phelps to the Pacific-8 Conference's Bay Area members. Stanford hired Phelps' aide Dick DiBiaso as head basketball coach three years ago. A 6-foot-8 former star center at Rider College in New Jersey, where he played under Dick Harter, former Penn and Oregon coach now at Penn State. Kuchen is credited with developing Notre Dame's strong rebounding game in his three seasons under Phelps.

tonight — it was instantaneous, spontaneous," said kupchak. "It's unfortunate that it happened. It was something that just flared up. We're both at fault."

Shelton KOs Kupchak in 4th

It erupted suddenly, as most fights do in the National Basketball Association, with 6:13 remaining in a close but not particularly well-played game between the Washington Bullets and New York Knicks Thursday night.

Washington's 6-foot-11, 240- pound Mitch Kupchak and New York's 6-8, 245-pound Lonnie Shelton, two young, physical players, went for a rebound under the Washinrton basket. They exchanged shoves and Kupchak pushed Shelton away with a straight-arm. Shelton hesitated, then threw a hard right-hand punch that caught Kupchak squarely. More punches were thrown by Shelton before Kupchak hit the deck and a group of players led by Washington's Wes Unseld were able to restrain Shelton.

BOTH PLAYERS were ejected from the game, which Washington went on to win 123-108 by outscoring New York 29-16 the rest of the way. Afterward, Kupchak went into the Knicks' locker room and the two combatants shook hands.

"I said to him, 'That's the way it goes, man,' and he said, 'All right,' and we shook," said Kupchak. "It's over."

No, it isn't. Both players will likely be fined and suspended by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien after he reviews videotapes of the incident today and interviews the participants in the latest of a series of violent out-breaks which have marred this NBA

ELSEWHERE IN the NBA, the San Antonio Spurs edged the Cleveland Cavaliers 99-95 to clinch the Central Division title and the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Indiana Pacers 105-100.

Although the game appeared to be oing smoothly up until the fight, Shelton said referees Paul Mihalak and Hugh Evans permitted too much contact under the boards.

'I was getting frustrated," he said. "I'm constantly getting pushed under the basket, and they're calling tickytacky fouls on me. Officials treat me like I'm a wise guy, a hatchet man. If the refs watched more closely what goes on underneath, it could be avoid-

"You can't stop what happened

The fight seemed to awaken the Bullets, who had gone ahead to stay 94-92 on a basket by Wes Unseld 24 seconds earlier. They proceeded to score 41 points in the final period, clinching the victory with nine points by Charles Johnson and six by Bobby Dandridge in the last three minutes.

DANDRIDGE LED all scorers with 28 points, hitting 14 of 20 from the field. Elvin Hayes added 16 points and 22 rebounds before being hit in the head early in the fourth quarter and suffering dizzy spells.

Knicks captain Earl Monroe missed the game as a result of the one-game suspension he drew for bumping referee Richie Powers in Phoenix a week ago. His replacement at guard, rookie Ray Williams, led the Knicks with 26 points and nine assists. Spurs 99, Cavaliers 95

"For the players and me, it's a real thrill," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe after his team clinched its division title behind a 28-point effort, including six free throws in the final three minutes by NBA scoring leader George Gervin.

The title has special meaning to the Spurs as one of the teams which came in from the much-maligned American

Basketball Association. "I'm ABA all the way," said Moe. "We're in the NBA now, but I'm loyal to the ABA, the people and the players who suffered for so long." One of those players is Louie Dam-pier, reserve guard of the Spurs. "It really feels good," he said, "being an ABA team and winning the division. Most people picked us fourth or fifth, or maybe third. We were the dark horse, and that's what makes it so satisfying."

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) -Fourteen members of the University of North Carolina lacrosse team who were dismissed by Coach Paul Doty Wednesday have until 3 p.m. today to offer of reinstatement.

The coach made the offer at a squad meeting Thursday night. He said he thought it was "in everyone's best interests to do this. We have 14 seniors on our team and it would be a crime for their careers to end like this."

Doty said he dismissed the 14 because they had negative attitudes. UNC Athletic Director Bill Coby said it might be necessary to cancel the remainder of the season when he learned of the dismissals. The players were dismissed after they signed a petition expressing dissatisfaction with Doty. The petition followed a 6-4 loss at Washington & Lee last Saturday.

He'll sell Jesus with his fists

By BOB WATERS Newsday

NEW YORK - George Foreman breathes no fire and damnation. He exhales love. This is the huge man who grew to be heavyweight champion after an admitted youthful fling as a wino and a mugger — "the rot-tenest of God's people," is his own definition.

"I read somewhere that somebody referred to me as a 'Jesus freak,' Foreman said in a telephone interview from Marshall, Tex. "It's like I had three heads and dressed in sackcloth and ashes and went around kissing Oral Roberts' rear end. It ain't nothing like that. I had an experience and I have to tell the world. That's it. Nothing more.'

THE "EXPERIENCE" occurred in San Juan after Foreman had lost a 12round fight to Jimmy Young. Young had outboxed the former champion. There was a minimum of gore, or even of violence. Yet, after the fight, Foreman was transported to a hospital. The reason, given outside of Foreman's dressing room, was that he was suffering from dehydration and heat exhaustion.

What happened in the dressing room was this," he said. "It was like I woke up from a bad dream; I felt like the air was clean. There were no smells in the room and I felt maybe 10 feet tall and everything was clear, maybe for the first time in my life. I put my hand on my forehead and there was blood there. The palms of my hands had blood and my feet was covered with blood and there were no cuts anywhere.

"Hallelujah!" I remember yelling. and maybe I yelled it a couple of times. Of course that scared hell out of everybody in the dressing room. All of a sudden I was fighting about seven or eight guys. They thought I was crazy. They finally got me on a stretcher and got me to the hospital. I was sweating real good and my body felt fine - is that the way a man acts when he's dehydrated? And I insisted upon getting into the shower to wash off the blood - no cuts, remember? Does a man do that when he's dehydrated? But I don't blame anybody. How can you explain to people that you've had a brush with

FOREMAN SAID he fondled the "contact" God had made with him in a selfish way, kept it to himself and then, he said, he realized God had not meant it as a "special award" to him. but something "to be shared."
He said, "Most of what we believe has to do with theories, right? When I was a kid growing up the worst way possible, I knew there were churches around but I always felt that they were ripoff places, places where people preached high and mighty just to get pennies from the poor. I would have been ashamed if any of the guys I went around with thought I believed in Jesus; Jesus was a hoax. That was my theory; church was the theory of a lot of other people. Theories are guesses and I'm ahead of all the theories. I had an experience with God. That's no theory. Jesus is no theory. Jesus lives."

Foreman said he was being successful and making money, "lots of it," when he thought for the first time "that there might be God I figured. okay, if there's a God, I'll do my bit in case he's looking. I used to give good contributions to charity - The Heart Fund, like that, y'know? And then, after Puerto Rico. I realized God was saying to me. 'George, I don't want your money, I want you.'

SO A different George Foreman took shape. He divested himself of his ownings, a thriving Houston business, three large houses, a ranch, three deluxe automobiles and a flock of pets, pedigreed dogs and a half-grown

"It used to take me $70,000-$80,000 a month to live. Then I realized that these are things dead people own because they have nothing else." he said. "I realized that George Foreman had been dead all his living life. I was dead as a child and dead as a champion. Owning those things were caranal pleasures, like whoring. If you're dead you need those things so you can pretend you're alive. When I learned that, it was a revelation. Now I have a small house, mediocre, y'know. I put groceries on the table and pay the gas bill. I got me a battered old truck and a cheap old car and I'm happier than a pig in . . . well.

you know the saying."

And Foreman married five months ago. His wife is the former Cynthia Lewis of Houston, once "Miss Black Teenager of America." Foreman said, "We never did any courtin', y'know what I mean? I met this woman and she was full of the Holy Ghost. I know the truth now, a man should have a wife and be true to her and only her. I said that to Cynthia and said, 'Marry me?' She married me. Now we give each other a little and God does the rest."

FOREMAN HAD been married before. It was also an experience, a huge swatch cut out of his income in a divorce settlement. That wife, Adrienne Mae, the mother of George's child, gained a huge settlement for herself and an income for the child for life. The experience, Foreman says, was of his own mak-

"I was an adulterer and a liar," he said. "Everything was my fault. I started doubting my wife and now realize it was because I couldn't trust myself. I couldn't trust a liar even if the liar was me.

But that sadness, he said, is behind him. With his new wife by his side he traveled, preaching, forming small churches "in small places." He said he had decided never to box again. "It was a world I didn't want. But then I realized that God had given me one talent and there had to be a reason for it. So I decided to go back into the ring and make the ring my pulpit. Make my opponent know I love him as all men should love each other. All men. You know love is the only thing I know of that doesn't have a color." And then . . "Say, the U.S. government spends what, billions, on nuclear devices every year. Suppose before the next war the government took that money and taught love your enemy. We'd get into battle and all our soldiers would throw down their weapons and yell, We love y'all. Wouldn't that scare the hell out of our enemies? "I know this, that my going back into the ring doesn't mean that God will make me stronger or make me win over my opponent. That's up to me; I'll do what I have to do. God hasn't anointed me in a special way to be champ, but he has anointed me to preach that there is a God. 'The last champion, I won't mention his name, figured it was great to go around with three wives or two ives or any amount of ladies. And while he was doing that he professed to have religion. Well, a lot of young people believed him and the wa he lived - not in God. Let me tell you about those young people, a lot of them are in hell and a lot of funerals are being held right now."

THERE IS no date set for Foreman's re-entry into the cluttered heavyweight picture. On Monday he' donned a rubber sweatsuit and did his first roadwork in more than a year. "But a lot of promoters are trying to get me. I talked with Don King and he said he believed in Jesus, too. He said he would put a large cross on my robe if I fought for him. I told him, 'Jesus ain't a cross. Jesus is love.' I hope he understood," Foreman said.

"It's a fact," he said, "that I haven't paid any attention to boxing since Puerto Rico. I know that (Leon) Spinks is champion because someone told me. I know that (Larry) Holmes beat (Earnie) Shavers because someone told me. That's all I know and it doesn't bother me. What I'm going to do is get Dick Sadler, who handled me when I turned pro, and let him get me back in shape - I'm only 215 now and I have been 250, but that's God's work, not mine.

"Gil Clancy handled me last and I want Gil with me, too, but not right away. I can read the Bible to Dick, but Clancy wouldn't understand my wanting to do that. I'm going to fight becuase I will be able to do my real job, selling Jesus, better that way. It isn't just to fight. Boxing is as good and as bad as people think it is. It is everything people think it is, but it will be my most effective stage.

"People down here (in Texas) sort of know what I'm getting at, but I know that New York people are too busy to listen. I hope I can change that. I hope that Madison Square Garden will be my cathedral."

That word was passed on to Teddy Benner, matchmaker at the Garden. "Please give me George's phone number," Brenner said.

week in

VERO BEACH, FLA. - Steve Garvey, baseball's Mr. Clean, is one of America's most talented, popular, admired and respected athletes. The Dodgers' All-Star first-baseman is so wholesome, one town even renamed a school after him.

He appears to have everything fame, fortune, an ex-model wife, two cute, healthy daughters and recognition as one of the best in his business.

But the image Garvey so carefully has nurtured has created somewhat of a problem for him. Since his MVP year in 1974, teammates have, at times, quietly resented, envied and misunderstood him.

CERTAINLY TEAM rifts, jealousy and personality conflicts are commonplace in professional sports especially baseball, where the season drags over 162 games. Even so, the bad vibrations have, at times, irritated and disillusioned Garvey, who seems to be more sensitive and idealistic than many pro-athletes.

The 29-year-old Garvey, who says he misses the camaraderie of his college days, simply hasn't been accepted as one of the boys.

The resentment grew slowly, mostly out of public view, as Garvey progressed from obscurity to stardom. It surfaced briefly during the '75 season and has smoldered beneath the surface since then, occasionally upsetting Garvey and some of his teammates.

Dodger players discus it reluctantly, if at all. Dodger officials deny its existence or downplay it. There is no sign that last year's National League champs have let it affect their performance.

GARVEY RECENTLY agreed to discuss how he quietly has coped with his lack of acceptance and with an image he says has been slightly exaggerated ("I'm no priest".) He seemed to think that talking openly might help his teammates, and even some fans and reporters, better understand him.

Since 1975, Garvey said, he sometimes has felt ostracized by his teammates. At times, he says, some haven't spoken to him, some haven't shaken his hand after home runs, and his occasional attempts at humor have been greeted by awkward silences. He doesn't seem to have a close friend on the team - though other players said that none are really that close.

Sometimes, Garvey said, he has gotten so depressed that he has wished he'd taken up an individual sport such as tennis ("All you have to worry about are the elements and the com-

HE SAID he almost always has been able to mask his melancholy, block out the coolness he feels and perform. But it occasionally has gotten to him. On a road trip to San Diego last season, he said, he went into a fog for a day and scarcely spoke to

"At times," he said, "it's been a little distasteful. I wish it didn't have to be that way. But I've learned to live with it. I've used it to motivate me."

Some players willing to discuss the matter say it's not that they dislike Garvey, but that they don't know or understand him. They say they can't understand why Garvey and his wife, Cyndy, seem to calculatedly seek publicity; why he sometimes has seemed aloof, riding on a different bus than most of the players; why he sits alone at the front of the team plane rather than back with the boys; why he doesn't seem able to unselfconsciously join teammates in off-the-field drinking, joking, cussing and bantering.

He makes himself available to the media for several reasons, Garvey said - to spread his views on religion, to promote baseball, to make himself and his team more popular and hence enhance earnings, to improve the lowbrow image baseball players generally have, and to further his chances of a career in television.

GARVEY HAS worked hard to become known as sort of an All-American hero - and it doesn't seem to be a public relations facade. He does the charitable things he's credited for, seems sincere in his beliefs, seems sincere about serving as a role model for children.

Garvey is proud of his image, he said, but he's also human and likes to tell an occasional risque joke, act silly, have a few drinks. Yet he said he hesitates to join in the clubhouse horseplay or have a few drinks with the boys for fear he'll be called a hypocrite. He hesitates to kid his teammates for fear they'll take him too seriously. Instead, Garvey, who considers himself an extrovert, generally keeps to himself around the team.

Both sides recognize a contributing factor: differences in background. Garvey is a product of a middle-class Irish Catholic family where religion, manners and college education were important. Some of his teammates are from ghettos, broken homes, or both, and picked up part of their education in the streets.

WHY HAVEN'T Garvey and the others hashed out their differences? Because of Garvey's aura, other Dodgers say, they hesitate to approach him and discuss the matter. Garvey, by nature an easy-going individual who shies away from confrontations or "scenes," hesitates to challenge people and strives to be a model player. "Tommy (Lasorda) feels he doesn't have to worry about me," Garvey said of the Dodger manager.

The upshot is a problem with no simple solution. Garvey's image seems to be the complicating factor. As long as he keeps fostering it, he seemingly risks alienating some of his

Garvey said his first realization of how some of his teammates regarded him came in 1975 when Betty Cuniberti, writing in the San Bernardino Sun-Telegram, did a story on Garvey, with particular emphasis on the reaction to his "good guy" image and all the publicity Steve and Cyndy were attracting.

"I was shocked...sick and infuriated," Garvey recalled. "I guess I was naive to the point of thinking we were all pulling together. I got a little misty-eyed when I read it. I thought, 'Geez, I worked so hard, and then I'm being criticized for doing these things (talking to the media, signing autographs, doing charity work).

"I asked myself if I'd done anything to instigate this. In my eyes, I hadn't. I didn't go out and instigate the jealousy. It just motivated me to that much better of a season. I'd ask myself, "In what way can I fight back?' And I'd go out and tear the cover off the ball." At bat, he would tell himself: "Fight it, fight it, fight it," as the pitcher went into his win-

NONETHELESS, GARVEY agreed to talk about his image in general terms and some players spoke publicly — but carefully — about the Garvey-team relationship. In the past, a few players privately have rapped Garvey to reporters — he's a "goody two-shoes" and "publicity hound," they said — but their comments may have been inspired by pique, personal differences or personality conflicts.

The players who spoke for this story sounded at times like Garvey boosters, carefully voicing admiration of him while talking about his lack of acceptance. Other players said that a few have at times been unfair to Garvey. Sportscaster Bryant Gumbel, one of Garvey's closest friends, offers this

"Steve is very, very different than any player I've met. He's basically quiet and reserved, and he doesn't experience great highs and lows. In public, I think he tends to be guarded and it takes a while for him to drop the guard. But he's very sensitive and in touch with other people's emotions.

He's very sensitive about how he fits in with the Dodgers. He'd like to be closer, but it looks like it just isn't in the cards. I think he causes the other players discomfort because of

State (he started at defensive back), before signing with the Dodgers.Playing third base, he hit his way to the big leagues in three seasons.

His first two years in Los Angeles, Garvey threw more balls into the first row of the stands than into the first baseman's glove. But he weathered criticism from media and fans, hung on as a pinchhitter and eventually won a job at first base.

The next season, Garvey won the MVP award and the Dodgers won the National League pennant. More and more reporters began to find him a 'good interview" - not particularly witty but accessible, patient, articulate. Looking for an angle, reporters began to ask him about his clean-cut image. Eager to please. Garvey answered.

Result: story after story about Steve Garvey, Mr. Clean. His father, it turned out, drove the Dodger bus during spring training. Steven even

His good-guy image flourished. Garvey concedes he also has a more mundane motivation for seeking exposure - making money.

He realizes the more widely his name and face are recognized, the better his chances will be for endorsements and reaching his goal: a career in television.

"The more exposure you get, the more popular you are and the more people will pay to see you and the more money you'll make. That's just good business sense....It won't be long until my outside income becomes my main income." (His six-year Dodger contract is worth nearly $2 million.)

Stock market loses

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market declined again today on the news of a record U.S. trade deficit last month.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 2.86 at 756.76 after a 2.16 loss on Thursday. Declines outnumbered advances by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. At the opening the Commerce Department reported that the nation had its 21st consecutive monthly trade deficit-and the largest ever-last month. Imports exceeded exports by $4.5 billion. The dollar declined against other leading currencies in Europe in what was described as "hectic" dealings after the announcement. Analysts also reported some skittishness among investors over what antiinflation moves President Carter might call for. Carter said Thursday he would announce his plans soon after he returns from his current overseas trip.

Gold mining issues gained ground, as they often do on adverse news affecting the dollar. Dome Mines climbed 11/8 to 67%; Campbell Red Lake 34 to 31% and Homestake Mining 1/2 to

Cardinal speaks out on rights

By LARRY ROHTER

SAO PAULO, Brazil - It is a Saturday, but as is the custom of Paulo Evaristo Arns, the cardinal archbishop of Sao Paulo is spending the morning in his office attending parishioners who have asked for au-Students, workers, professors, housewives wait patiently. A door opens, and from the cardinal's chambers emerge a young woman and her child the wife and daughter of a politically outspoken Brazilian military officer who disappeared one day in 1974 and has not been heard from since. 'The situation here is actually getting better," the cardinal tells his next visitor. "Three or four years ago my waiting room was always filled with relatives and friends of people who had been arrested for political reasons or who had simply disapeared without a trace." They came to the cardinal then, as others come to him now, for one fundamental reason. In his eight years as head of the largest Roman Catholic archdiocese in the world, Dom Paulo, as the 57-year-old Franciscan is known popularly, has earned a reputation as Brazil's most untiring and effective defender of human rights.

He has consistently spoken out against the torture of prisoners and is credited by many with being instrumental in forcing the replacement of an army commander here who condoned such practices. He has preached against the injustices and inequities wrought by Brazil's "economic miracle." supported lay human rights groups, and called for a return to democratic institutions.

IN RECOGNITION of these efforts, Arns as awarded an honorary doctor of human rights degree at Notre Dame University last year. Also honored in the same ceremony was Jimmy Carter. The two met then. Arns, in response to a White House invitation, will see Carter again in Rio de Janeiro on Friday.

"Carter's invitation to Arns is a symbolic gesture of great importance to Brazilians," says an opponent of the government here. "Many of us have been wondering whether Carter still cares about human rights, and there is no better way for him to show human rights still matter than to meet with the man the Brazilian people recognize as our leader in this

The fourth of 13 children of a sawmill owner from the south Brazilian state of Santa Catarina, Arns has won this public esteem by playing an activist's role. Though he possesses a doctorate from the Sorbonne, his public image is that of a man of the people who has stressed the church's mission among the poor and the powerless. Brazil's authoritarian military government, however, views the cardinal as an unwelcome thorn in its side. Earlier this month, government censors prohibited the showing of a popular television show after two episodes had been taped in which Arns read a message explaining one of the church's current projects, a campaign demanding "work and justice

Such attempts to silence Arns are nothing new. In 1973, the government suspended the license of the diocese's radio station, and even now the diocesan newspaper, O Sao Paulo, a weekly with a circulation Brazil still subject to prior censorship.

"ARTICLES that are forbidden here sometimes are published elsewhere later without any problems," says the cardinal, holding up a copy of the paper to show the gaping white space where his 'Meeting With the Pastor' column was to have appeared. "It is arbitrary and senseless. Even passages from the Bible have on occasion been cen-

Relations betweeen Brazil's most powerful church spokesman and the nation's military rulers have not always been so strained, though. In 1964, Arns, then a professor of theology at a seminary north of Rio, made a secial trip by jeep to minister to the army forces initiating the coup that ended civilian rule

He felt then that military rule was preferable to what he has called the "anarchy" of Joao Goulart's leftist rule. But his support soon turned to opposition. "The main problem of the revolution today is the same as it was in the beginning," says Arns. "They believe that all power belongs to the state, that what the government giveth, the government taketh President Ernesto Geisel's "great defect is that he wants to resolve everything paternalistically." Arns said. "The Brazilian people continue to be marginalized, excluded from the process of determining their own future.' THESE BITTER post-1964 experiences have left Arns skeptical of all politicians and their promises including Jimmy Carter. "I liked Jimmy Carter's personality," he recently told a Brazilian interviewer when asked about the brief encounter, 'though in many respects I don't approve of his policies." "I have the impression that Mr. Carter's human rights policy set back rather than aided our own struggle here. Juxtaposing it with opposition to Brazil's nuclear program was not advantageous to us, because Brazil's pride was offended, and the two subjects became linked in the public mind." Arns makes clear that he, like several other important critics of the government, supports Geisel's stand on the nuclear reactor question. "No Brazilian will accept restrictions in the nuclear field," he says. "Twenty other nations are using nuclear energy, so why not Brazil? There's no other way out." President Carter's espousal of human rights has also had a positive side, he hastens to add. "It used to be that anyone who talked about human rights here was called a subversive. When President Carter picked up the banner, human rights could no longer be called Communist, and the movement gained new credibility among the Brazilian people.' IN THE MEANTIME, the cardinal is meeting with leaders of the "Sao Paulo Commission for Justice and Peace." a lay group organized with church support, to find out what they would like him to tell the president and is initiating a campaign to pressure the government to improve the lot of the working class. "The high cost of living is the hot topic for us right now," he says. To help draw attention to the subject, the diocese is underwriting a "cost of living movement" and helping circulate a petition, which it hopes a million people will sign, that calls for more equitable distribution of income and an end to economic exploitation.

'Somebody has to do something," says the cardinal in what may be the clearest statement of his credo. "There is a limit to what people can take."

Samantha Sang and sang until she reached 'overnight' success

By MARY CAMPBELL AP Newsfeatures Writer

Samantha Sang is her name and, if you're an American record listener.

she is an overnight star. Her first single record released in America, "Emotion," went to No. 1 on the best-selling charts of March 11 and her LP, "Emotion," also on

Private Stock Records, sold enough to secome a gold record in about 10 days in early March.

Of course nobody is really an overnight star. Miss Sang explains that she is 24 and has been a professional singer since she was 15. She is Australian, one-eighth Chinese, talks easily and eagerly and says that people say she has a chameleon quality. She may sing pop or heavy rock at one time and what she calls songs mums like" or "the Las Vegas syndrome" at another time. "Different horses for different courses." she likes to say.

And she may dress and make up for sophistication at one time and at another time appear girlish. At present her hair is cut short and straight "and getting blonder every month."

She's always asked if Samantha Sang is a stage name, and replies that Sang is her real name and Samantha isn't. Her name is Cheryl Sang. When she was 17 and Robert Stigwood was her manager, he thought the name she was using then, Cheryl Grey, was mundane. He liked Sang and asked whether there was a first name she particularly fancied. There was — Samantha.

One of Miss Sang's eight grand-parents, her father's grandfather. was a Manchurian herbalist wh moved to Australia. She doesn't look very Chinese but her face is on the square side and she has almondshaped eyes. Makeup can accent an

Oriental appearance, if she wants it

Her parents are singers, now semiretired, in the Mer Torme and Eydie Gorme style, she kays. They use stage names. Reg Grey and Joan Clarke.

She recalls her first public singing. at 8. "I went with my mother to her radio show. I was messing around at the rehearsal. The producer switched on the sound box and heard I was singing. He told me I was going to sing that afternoon on my mother's show. So I got up with a 30-piece band in the afternoon and sang 'When the Red, Red Robin Comes Bob, Bob, Bobbin'

She sang a lot in Australia, won a lot of prizes. By 16, she says, "I had done everything in Australia it was possible to do. Everybody said I had to make it overseas. I went to London and was doing clubs. One night a friend from Sydney went to Barry Gibb's place for dinner and took a record of mine that had been a very big hit in Australia."

Gibb, one of the Bee Gees, didn't want to listen; records of girl singers were constantly being pushed at him. But he did listen, liked it, phoned her at 2 a.m. to tell her so. He produced her record of "Love of a Woman." which he wrote. It was a big hit in England and the rest of Europe but she says she was too young to get legal permission to work as a singer

Miss Sang kept very busy, off to music festivals in Yugoslavia and Tokyo, performing in Europe and in Australia, making records for Polydor.

It was in Australia four years ago that Bill May, an American who had a daily TV show for children, saw a couple of clips from her TV special there, "Samantha Sang and Rocked the World." He saw her on top of a big motorbike, with low-cut gown and wig, with 10 dancers around, doing "I Am Woman," and with short hair, demure in plaid, singing "The Sounds of Christmas." They met, she told her mother she thought he'd be a good manager and he, the very next day, told her he'd

'Cheap shots, prat falls taboo in Knight's new comedy series

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD - TED KNIGHT. the egomaniacal Ted Baxter of The Mary Tyler Moore Show, says his new half-hour comedy for CBS-TV, to debut soon, will be pure comedy but not of the broadest kind.

"I won't tolerate cheap shots or prat falls," says Knight who, in person, is a far cry from the foolish. foppish, funny newsman he played as part of the MTM company.

We're doing comedy, only because comedy is commercial. Look at your current hit shows - 'Laverne and Shirley, 'Happy Days.'

"We are going to try to appeal to the element that watches those shows while, at the same time, elevating its - I won't say 'taste' - I'll say 'appreciation."

Like a pilot which aired a while back, Knight's new series will find him heading an escert service.

But the series will differ from the pilot in that he'li offer other services as well so that he can get involved in more diverse situations. All hilarious, Knight hopes.

The escort service will be located in New York (though the series will be shot in Los Angeles), because that's where such services are still being operated on the up and up.

Or that's Knight's opinion. Investigating the field in Los Angeles, he said he encountered mostly "people who sound a bit shady and are reluctant to reveal what their services involve or else they furnish bodyguards and motorcycle escorts.

"However, in New York you still find the traditional escort service catering to women who don't want to go to the theater alone and that sort of thing.

"Roger Dennis, the character I'm playing, will be mixed up with celebrities, politicians and occasionally with the police.

GRANT TINKER, Mary Tyler Moore's producer husband, produced The Betty White Show and produces The Ed Asner Show, but he's not associated with Knight's new effort; though Knight says he was one of the first members of the MTM troupe to be offered a series by Tinker.

"They wanted me to continue as Ted Baxter," Knight explains, "and I didn't want to do that. I might have gone on as Ted Baxter for another year or two on Mary,s show, but I didn't want to continue the character in a new series."

Reviewing his run with The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Knight has only one complaint.

"It spoiled me," he says. "I worked with such top talent.

"We were such a happy family."

"Maude." if she's going to be anywhere next year, will be in Washington, D.C., with ADRIENNE BARBEAU no longer a part of her household, but with BARBARA RHOADES, previously of "Busting Loose," added to the cast.

BUD GRANT, CBS vice president, programs, entertainment division. says the network isn't yet quite sure just what it's going to do with beauteous Barbara, "But," he adds,

"you sometimes have to create a character for an actress."

Grant also emphasizes that the network isn't quite sure just what it is going to do with "Maude" - keep the series or cancel it. But, if the show is renewed, the District of Columbia will be its locale.

Final "Maude" note:

After pointing out that RUE Mc-CLANAHAN, Maude's neighbor, is moving clear out of the neighborhood - all the way over to ABC, Grant adds that CONRAD BAIN, Rue's husband on the CBS series, "probably won't be back" either.

Though SUSAN NEWMAN, Joanne Woodward's stepdaughter, is forging ahead with her own movie career, Joanne isn't giving her any advice in that connection.

"Susan doesn't need my advice," Woodward says. "She's three feet taller than I am.'

better known for his parties than his pictures, but he's a busy, busy feller.

Just got home from a trip around the world and these are some of the knickknacks he bought for souvenirs along the way: an island in the Fiji group, a tennis racket decorated with diamonds, and a one-of-a-kind $200,000 custom Rolls-Royce.

But Carr makes up for all this spending by economizing where it counts: He always carries his own box of soap flakes and never lets hotels do his laundry.

Sorry to report that PARKER STEVENSON, star of the "Hardy Boys" series, has let his success go to his head.

Parker recently threatened to walk off the show when ABC refused to double his $5,000-a-week salary plus provide him with around-the-clock limo service. If that wasn't enough, he demanded that they build him a new dressing room.

ABC came across with his demands and Parker went back to work.

JOHN WAYNE recently learned that in politics you have no friends.

When the Duke came out in support of the President's Panama Canal treaty, he lost a lot of his former friends, including RONALD REAGAN, who told him that he will never speak to him again.

Somehow I don't see big John losing any sleep over it.

Books seem to be bothering two ladies - BARBRA STREISAND and ELIZABETH TAYLOR.

Babs is upset because OMAR SHARIF, in his new book, "The Eternal Male," spoke so frankly about their love affair that she has told friends that she doesn't want to be invited to parties if he's there.

Liz, on the other hand, has offered EDDIE FISHER $100,000 to get a sneak preview of his book. She is worried that Eddie might write something that could hurt her husband JOHN WARNER in his bid for the U.S. Senate.

JACKIE ONASSIS is extremely upset. Her son, 18-year-old JOHN KENNEDY JR., wants to be an actor.

Allen won't be there; gang

By PETER J. BOYER

December.

HOLLYWOOD (AP)-Woody Allen stands to gain the most at next Monday's Academy Awards show, with five Oscar nominations for his party autobiographical film "Annie Hall."

But he says he want nothing to do with the affair and will not be there to collect if he wins.

However, unlike reluctant honorees of the past such as actors George C. Scott and Marlon Brando. who made their absences political statements. Allen is staying home because Hollywood's extravagant awards feast makes him nervous.

"Woody's trying desperately not to make an issue of not coming," said "Annie Hall" producer Charles Joffe in an interview Wednesday. "He's not doing a George C. Scott or a Marion Brando. It's just too difficult for him to hear a whole audience applaud.

I understand Woody's nervousness about accepting laurels. But I'm just as disappointed as the Academy that he's not going to be there." Joffe said. 'Annie Hall," the fictionalized love story of Allen and actress Diane Keaton, is nominated for best picture. Miss Keaton is nominated for best actress for her title role. Allen is nominated for best actor, best director and best screenwriter.

In an interview with CBS entertainment critic David Sheehan about the awards program, Allen said, "I just have a kind of negative feeling about that kind of thing.

Allen cited an Ernest Hemingway saying in which the author said if artists believe good things said about them, they have to believe the bad, as well. "And I never believe it when they say I'm lousy, so it's hypocritical for me to believe anybody when they say I'm great," Allen said. But Allen said he would not turn down any Oscars he might win.

"I'm just not going to be there," he said. "It's just not on my mind. I'm just working on my next picture, thinking about the picture after that...and the only regret is that I won't see Bob Hope, whom I adore." Hope is the master of ceremonies for the program.

Minnoch, covered with painful bedsores, finally consented to pleas from his wife that he enter a hospital. He was reported in fair condition undergoing treatment for complications related to obesity, a University Hospital spokeswoman said.

Jean Minnoch said her husband had become so weak from his 600-calorie-a-day diet, precribed by a doctor, that he had been unable to work at his job as owner of a taxi cab company.

Marker said the 5-foot-10 Minnoch had "always been heavy." weighing more than 300 pounds when the friends first met about 16 years ago and gaining weight over the years.

Firefighters arrived at Minnoch's home on Bainbridge Island at 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and maneuvered him onto a three-quarter-inch sheet of plywood measuring four feet by eight feet. A five-foot window in his first floor bedroom was removed because the doorways were too narrow, said Hugh Maguire, public relations officer for the Seattle Fire Depart-were waiting to help. It took 90 minutes to get Minnoch into a bed, or rather two beds. His jerry-rigged stretcher would not fit through the hospital doorways, so it was cut down with a saw, said Maguire. Minnoch then was put onto two beds placed side-by-side.

Colombia supplies U.S. in drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Colombia is now the chief supplier of marijuana and cocaine to the United States, in part because of police and court corruption, government auditors say. The illegal traffic flowing into this country rakes in $6 billion a year on American streets, the General Accounting Office said in a report released.

Corruption in Colombia, the report charged, "is present at various levels and places in the government, including the judiciary and the police." The study did not detail alleged corruption in any other South American nation.

It said a drug control program financed chiefly by the United States for the last five years in most of South America "has had a minimal effect on the flow

According to the report, U.S. officials believe "the real key to program success is a stronger commitment by South American governments to control the drug flow

"However, such a possibility is limited by corruption within many South American countries, particularly Colombia, and a lack of host government resources that can be allocated to drug enforcement."

The report said nearly all the cocaine smuggled into the United States is grown as a coca plant in Peru and Bolivia, and then processed into cocaine in Col-

The report also said the federal Drug Enforcement Administration "now estimates that Colombia has surpassed Mexico as the principal supplier of (marijuana) to the United States.'

Why, Mr. Ambassador?

Strauss bounces back to political influence

By PETER ROSS RANGE Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - White House state dinner last year was reaching that Deep Southern bewitching hour - 11 p.m. - when our early-rising farmer president and his lady Rosalynn habitually take leave of their 100 or so guests in time to retire without risk of turning into pumpkins.

But Bob and Helen Strauss, another Southern couple on the list of invited luminaries, were nowhere to be seen. Feeling the fatique of a 15-hour work day. the Strausses had decided to make an early getaways when Carte led his party into the East Room for the evening's entertainment

'Wait 'til the president walks by," the grayhaired, silver-tongued U.S. special trade representative had whispered to his diminutive Texas wife, "and we'll slip down the back stairs."

She did, and they did, and on their way to his lightgray chauffeured Ford LTD, Helen turned to Bob and said: "Honey, when I think of all the 18-hour days you spent just trying to get into the White House, and here we are sneaking out the back way it's the seed of an Art Buchwald book.

Bob Strauss had to laugh. Who would have guessed two years ago, when Strauss was running the Democratic National Committee like an old-style pol and Jimmy Carter was beginning to raise political eyebrows with his primary victories, that Bob and Helen would become such frequent White House guests that they would start figuring out ways of absconding before the party was over?

The comeback quality of Bob Strauss's emergency as one of Jimmy Carter's top personal advisers has made it the political Cinderella story of the season.

After a year in the president's cabient, Strauss is touted as the new Bert Lance and the guy who finally outsmarted the Japanese at their own game - international trade. While both parts of his new reputation are somewhat exaggereated - Strauss does not hang out with Jimmy Carter the way Bert Lance did and the Japanese could still wobble on their economic promises - Bob Strauss is suddenly very much with

To wit: In the first week after his return from trade negotiations in Geneva last January, Strauss spoke to the National Press Club, sat still for the Godfrey Sperling breakfast, went on Meet the Press, told down-home jokes to the Texas Breakfast Club, testified before a Senate subcommittee, dined with the French ambassador, received a Jordanian price and a German economics minister, playhed unofficial co-host at several White House political receptions and teased Jimmy Carter whenever he got a

Just a few weeks earlier, the special trade representative (STR) had with the magic of nis negotiating talents talked the wary Japanese into opening their doors wider to American imports and increasing government spending to raise their growth rate to 7 percent. Then, he persuaded politically troubled Prime Minister Fukuda to go before his skeptical parliament with a pronouncement that Japan was pulling in its mighty export horns to join the inernational tarde community in a more equitable ball game. but the miracle of his mouth turned a raw deal into a medium deal. Which prompted Jimmy Carter to quip at one Cabinet meeting: "Bob Strauss brought home a C-minus trade agreement which he has talked up to an A-plus all over town."

TALK HE DOES. When the White House belatedly intervened in the coal strike negotiations last month, it was Strauss who finally bent the right arms in the coal-and-steel world to avoid a disastrous lastminute impasse.

Relying on his good-buddy contacts with the industrial heavies, Strauss used his favorite weapon the telephone - to track down the men he knew could sway the coal owners towards compromise.

He called his old friend Dallas bank president Dewey Presley, who he knew could set up a conversation with Howard Blauvelt, the chairman of Continental Oil Company, which in turn owns the Consolidated Coal Co. Then he traced U.S. Steel chairman Edgar Speer to the Mayo Clinic, where he was having a check-up.

Strauss cajoled the hard-nosed Speer into a conciliatory mood with his patented brand of put-down humor: "Relying on you, Speer, is like relying on Joe Namath to play quarterback with two gimpy knees."

The nicest thing about Strauss' renewed celebrity is that somebody in the Carter administration is finally making us laugh. Bob Strauss, who used to be a wealthy Texas lawyer and then used to be chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has now been reincarnated as the guy with the best comic timing and political stage presence at the top of the new political heap. He has brought aching sides and considerable joy to a press corps grown weary of the bloodless if well-intentioned world of the Carter White House.

In a town that loved the Irish wit of John Kennedy's merry mafia and reveled (aghast) in the couthless one-liners of the Johnsonian tongue, there has been a linguistic drought since about 1969, when the ad men from California strode into town. And the sober Southern newcomers, alas, have not generally been a credit to their race of raconteurs: the incumbent emperor indeed wears clothes and delivers even his carefully contrived laugh lines with a tin ear.

Only occasional relief comes through the start-stop style of Jody Powell, whose single greatest contribution to the lexicon of Souther aphorisms was delivered before he moved into the blue-carpeted White House press secretary's office with the crackling fireplace: "Being criticized by Lester Maddox," Powell once said, "is like being called ugly by a

Now comes Robert Schwarz Strauss, the new Bob Strauss, some say, a little older and possibly a wee bit wiser but certainly just as funny as when we last saw him in a long-running, amazingly successful show called Save the Democratic Party.

TAKING OVER A PARTY given by the 1972 McGovern debacle, Strauss worked the considerable miracle of bringing its disputatious factions under one tent again - quite literally under the dome-like ceiling of Madison Square Garden, where they nominated Jimmy Carter for president. Strauss played his role fast and to the hilt and, to the surprise of many, he has reappeared very near the heart of power. Strauss' earthy greetings ("Any with nothing better to do than write me ought to be out looking for work," is how he said hello for the first time to this reporter) and hearty thighslappers carry fresh weight now that he is the life of the Cabinet party and putative pal of the prez; he is regaling us all again with the colorful imagery of his calling. It is of little moment that his stories may not be true; journalistically speaking, there is joy again in Mudville-on-the-Potamac.

—Consider his remarks to the journalistic lights gathered at the Godfrey Sperling breakfast after his return from Geneva — on how he would have handled the David Marston affair: 'Hell, I'd-a just fired the boy," said Strauss. was incompetent, that's How so, sir? In what way? "Hell, how would I know? I been out of the coun-

-To a Texas breakfast group: "I've done some research and determined that George Washington originally came from Texas, not Virginia. In fact, long before little George cut down the cherry tree he did the same thing to a mesquite tree. When his father asked who had cut down the mesquite tree, the boy said, 'Father, I cannot tell a lie ...' His father said, 'In that case, son, we'd better move to Virginia

because you'll never make it in Texas.' -To the National Press Club about how Jimmy Carter lured him from lucrative private life to join the administration: "It's not true that I took this job because I couldn't make a living as a lawyer. In fact, when the president called, I told him I'd have to think about it. But the next day, Russell Long called me and said, 'I hear you been giving the president a hard time. I bet you just want to stay right there in private practice and get rich, DON'T YOU, BOB?' and I allowed as how that did have some appeal. And Russell said, 'Well, if you take this job I guarantee you all the support of me and my committee and I will make you a hero. You'd like to be HERO, WOULDN'T YOU, BOB?' And I admitted that might even have more appeal than getting rich. And then Russell added, 'If you don't take this job, I guarantee you me and my friends will run you right out of town, DO YOU UNDERSTAND, BOB?' And I said, 'Well, Russell, you've explained it a good deal more clearly than the president did,' and I took the job.' The real Bob Strauss is back. After a year of relative humility (for a Texan) in the relative obscurity of being just another Cabinet member with the complex and little-understood job of special trade representative, Strauss is riding high again. Some

There are those who fear the recent spate of publicity ("Why is everybody doing Bob Strauss stories?" asked one secretary at the White House) may lead to some old-fashioned jealousy on the part of the Cabinet members - who are, after all, secretaries, not mere ambassadors - and to an unrealistic image of presidential intimacy that Strauss cannot live up to. Even Strauss made a token effort to ward off reporters: "You shouldn't be writing about me - I'm overexposed and underper-

BUT THERE IS NO DENYING that Strauss has once again proved himself something of a political magician. Just being offered a Cabinet-level job in the administration of a man who ran against the Washington establishment must be regarded as the very definition of political survivability, for Bob Strauss is nothing if not a true-faith, back-slapping, establishment politician.

Strauss's roots are not in the grass (his youth in a tiny Texas town notwithstanding) but in a plush law office high up in the Dallas skyline. He is not an opencollar, feet-on-the-desk man a la Hamilton Jordan. though they get along well now. He does not spend holidays over biscuits and grits in Plains. Strauss's idea of getting back to home folks is his regular, hot-Strauss had gone to Japan prepared to get nothing. and-fast, two-bets-per-hand Saturday night poker game with the boys who drive big cars at the Columbia Country Club in Dallas. "It just kills me to miss that poker game," admits Strauss. "I'm so petty I hope they all get sick when I'm not there."

'The most important thing about Strauss," comments one White House staffer who was with the Carter campaign, "is that he is the only non-insider who has become an intimate."

Intimate may be too strong a word. Strauss does not wander over to "the mansion" (as regulars call the house part of the White House complex) after dinner for some light talk with a becardiganed Carter the way Bert Lance did. Nor does he join the president in times of turmoil for a relaxing round of tennis

he does not even play the game. But he would certainly appear to have joined Carter's inner circle of general political advisers: he ranks sixth in a group of six that includes Hamilton Jordan, Jody Powell, Vice President Walter Mondale and two out-of-towners - reborn television commentator Bert Lance and Atlanta lawyer Charles Kirbo.

Of the six, Strauss is the only newcomer; he and Mondale are the only non-Georgians. Though he says "Jimmy Carter and I have forged a friendship over the years," is is obviously not on the same level with Carter's longstanding friendships with the others. Yet it is a fact that besides Bert Lance and chief counsel, Bob Lipschutz, Strauss is the only member of the new administration who has lured the Carter family (Jimmy, Rosalynn and Amy) to a private home for dinner.

Nor is it insignificant that Strauss, like Lipschutz and Lance, is one of the few men around Carter who is a contemporary: they are all in their 50s. Most of the rest of the president's supporting cast are a full generation younger. 'The thing that distinguishes the inner group." says one White House staffer, "is the air of general conversation when one of them is with Carter. Organizationally, Carter likes people to do the job it says on the chart. When I'm in his office, he doesn't 'Well, what do you think of the administration?' We stick to my area of business. With these others, including Strauss, he asks for more general advice."

Other White Hosue sources, however, are quick to point out that Strauss does not play a role comparable to a White House presidential aide. He is often not privy to general planning, but is rather brought in "at the talking stage," which means he is more useful as a tactician than as a strategist.

TALKING TO PEOPLE is what Strauss does best. On their flight back from Paris at the end of President Carter's first around-the-world tour this year. Strauss joined Carter in the presidential cabin of Air Force One for 45 minutes in the very wee hours of the night. "We were just talking," said Strauss, "and the president looked out at the stars. He said he had been interested in the stars since he was a little boy. I said, I know nothing about the stars. I have no interest in things. Sometimes I'm ashamed because I have no intellectual interests.'

And the president said, 'Yes, but you understand people and you understand their problems.' And he's right. I've always been a people person.'

That goes a long way towards explaining Bob Strauss's rising stock in the Carter administration. Good old boys though they are, the Carter folks come to town with a wooden touch, so far as some of the people who count are concerned. The locus of discontent was on Capitol Hill, and that is where Bob Strauss - ol' sweet-talking, quick-joking, handshaking Bob Strauss - comes in. In his 20 years around Democratic politics, his two years as treasurer of the D.N.C, and four years as its chairman, Bob Strauss has made a lot of friends. His greatest strength in town seems to lie in the Senate and the list of men who will take his calls immediately is impressive: Russell Long, Abe Ribicoff, Alan Cranston, Lloyd Bentsen, Wendell Ford, John Glenn and Majority Leader Robert Byrd. In the House, Strauss is friendly with Jack Brooks, John Brademas, Tom Foley and Speaker Tip O'Neill.

BILL RICHARDS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Central Intelligence Agency infiltrated black groups, the Resurrection City encampment here and the District of Columbia public school system in the late 1960's despite its own internal finctings that "black militant" groups at the time posed no physical threat to the agency.

Do cuments released by the CIA under the Freedom of Information Act to the Center for National Security indicate that in March of 1969 the agency had an informaint planted within the dist rict public school system who was warning of growing miltancy among b. lacks in the city schools

The informant, who is not identified in the CIA documents except as "a teacher and head of department," told his CIA contact's that many high school s tudents were carrying fir earms "and will probabl; v use these weapons at the slightest provocation."

During the same period, CIA informants reported to the agency's Va angley. headquarters from the Resurrection City encampment here in 1968 and took photos of a speaker at a Mal colm X Day rally in the clistrict. The intelligence agency also maintained an almost minute-by-r ninute log of street activity in the riot areas in the district during the 1968 disturbances following the death of Martin Luther King, according to the newly disclosed CIA documents.

CIA officials told both the Rockefeller Commission and the Senate Intelligence Committee investigating CIA abuses that they undertock certain domestic surveillance activities unde. the code headings of Project Merrimack and Project Resistance in order to protect the intelligence agency's property and personnel.

The Rock feller Commission noted in its report in 1975 that "the agency's infiltration of dissident groups in the Washington area went far beyond steps necessary to protect the Agency's own fcilities, personnel and operations and therefore esceeded the CIA's statuatory authority." In its report a year later the Senate committee said the surveillance "illustrated fundamental weaknesses and contradictions in the statuatory definition of CIA authority."

Neither reort indicated the extent of the CIA's surveillance of black groups or the disavowal of any threat they posed.

Protective surveillance by the CIA was allowed under federal law at the time and is still allowed under the presidential order regulating the U.S. intelligence community signed by President Carter. Pending legislation proposed by the Senate Intelligence Committee would limit protective surveillance in the future to the immediate vicinity of CIA facilities.

Among the documents released by the CIA was one analysis prepared by the intelligence agency for the head of its special activities division which was overseeing the Merrimack and Resistance projects.

The document, which was prepared in January of 1969, cites source material gathered from local, state and federal governmental agencies as well as news reports to conclude that they "do not indicate that CIA andor its personnel and in-stallations are considered at this time to be a primary or sole target by any of the numerous black militant organizations or by individual black activists."

Nevertheless the CIA cited potential threats to its property and employees as the reason for broad surveillance and nfiltration in the late 960s of black groups.

Sutton gas flows

H. B. Rhoads of Midland is installing tanks at his No. 1 Maxine Reiley, prospective Ellenburger producer in Sutton County, 24 miles northeast of Sonora.

Hole was drilled to 4,360 feet where 51/2-inch casing is set. The pipe was perforated from 4,276 to 4,282 feet and the section was washed with 250 gallons of acid. It then was swabbed two hours, recovering drilling fluid with shows of oil and making gas at the rate of 50,000 to 200,000 cubic feet per day.

The section then was treated with 2,500 gallons of acid. The project then flowed an unreported time, making a spray of oil and gas at the rate of from 350,000 to 400,000 cubic feet

Great Britain boasts

Newsday

No major industrial nation in the Western world is in a better energy position than Britain. It has 300 years of coal reserves, is fully self-sufficient in natural gas and will soon become one of the world's major exporters of oil with plenty left over for its own 30 miles per gallon of gasoline and the government is already prodding manufacturers to do better. And Britons have been paying as much as three times what Americans pay for gasoline.

Cars in Britain average more than

The United States, in comparison must import 8.6 millon barrels of oil every day with disastrous effects on the foreign value of its currency and with little hope of real self-sufficiency anytime soon.

The U.S. government, however, requres that new cars this year average only 18.5 mpg and by the 1980s that performance is scheduled to improve to only 27.5 mpg by which time the British may be averaging 40. Meanwhile, gasoline in the United States is cheaper, far cheaper, than anywhere else in the industrial world. If that doesn't make sense, it

It would seem that either the British are nuts or we are. Because too often they simply do not want to understand the energy question, Americans might assume from the comparison that they are getting the better deal. Who wants to be against cheap gas and roomy, powerful cars?

Nor, in the absence of public understanding, does Congess seem willing to take the lead. The British have had an Energy Department since 1974. We got one last year and it still doesn't have a building to call its own nor, so long as Congress dawdless, a real energy program to administer.

'The approach of the United Kingdom government may be of particular interest because of our extremely fortunate energy position," says Tony Benn, Britain's secretary of state for energy. Yes, it is particularly interesting that a nation so recently famous for muddling through and making a mess of things in the process is in this case showing a foresight which Congress Even if fully enacted, President Carter's energy program will not be as stringent as the one already in place in Britain. Vast public programs for insulating homes, schools and public buildings are already under way. There have been, Benn notes, "steep increases in energy prices since they had been held down artificially in the public sector for a period up to 1974 in the

Retired man's flights of fancy lead to kiting

BORREGO SPRINGS. Calif. - When Ed Grauel retired 16 years ago at the age of 55 he made out a list of 40 things he possibly wanted to spend his idle time doing.

Bangkok's 'witching hour' doubled

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) - When Noel Coward sojourned here in the elegant era of the grand ocean liner, he was moved to write:

'In Bangkok at 12 o'clock, they foam at the mouth and run. But mad dogs and Englishmen go out in the midday sun ... But once the American GIs arrived. seeking R & R, rest and recuperation.

from the Vietnam War at the rate of 1,500 a week, plus the 45,000 already based in Thailand, Bangkok's bewitching hour for rampant madness changed to 12 midnight.

Now with the war over, the streets are afroth noon and night with German and Japanese tourists, who have replaced the GIs as the big spenders in the massage parlors and go-go bars and are blamed, as the Americans used to be, for overtipping and driving

There is a decided oompahpah beat in the soul brother bars out on the Petchburi Road extension, where the American blacks used to congregate. and tailor shops once called "Yankee Station" and "Uncle Sam's Threads" have become "Frankfurt Tailors" and "Munich Clothiers," turning out safari suits overnight for the German invasion. To meet different demands. hamburger heavens have converted to beer stubes and sushi stands.

Bars along the Patpong Road Bangkok's Sin Strip, are still named "Cloud Nine," "The Texan" and "Mississippi Cafe," because under the licensing laws it is more complicated to change the name of a nightclub than a tailor shop, but the "farangs," the foreigners, who frequent them these days are more likely to be Germans, Japanese, Taiwan Chinese and, quite lately, rich Arabs from the oil sheikdoms of the Persian

Among the girls, German and Japanese slang, and of late a sprinkling of eloquent Arabic curses, have taken the place of GI idioms like "no sweat," "hey man" and "number 10" in the lingua franca of Sin Street.

The 52 hotels built to house the American R & R incursion a decade ago, when there were half a million troops in Vietnam, now have become inexpensive tourist class hotels. catering to tour groups and charter parties from Western Europe and

The foaming madness here at 12 o'clock midnight, when prostitutes flock by motorbike and pedicab and fistfights erupt in the alley over inflated taxi prices, along with Bangkok's highest incident of muggings, would have shaken even the worldly wise Noel Coward.

Dire predictions were made for Thailand's tourist trade when the Americans pulled out of Vietnam. Yet the annual tourist visitation, which last year reached 1.2 million, has increased more than 17 percent since presence in Southeast Asia.

Despite the cultural and linguistic changes. Bangkok remains the Orient at its most bizzare. "Welcome World Diarrhea Congress" read a banner at the airport when we arrived, and many Vietnam veterans would regard ,the city as an apt choice for this medical event.
