Americans still make little use of advanced solar technology

By DEBORAH WOOD

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — The United States leads the world in solar energy research but Americans make little use of the available technology compared with less affluent nations.

The reason, a Department of Energy spokesman said, is the difference in the price people pay for energy.

Dr. George Rhodes, director of the Solar Thermal Test Facility in Albuquerque, N.M., also known as the "Power Tower," said basic international economics is at the root of this apparent paradox.

"Much of the world pays four to six times what we do for liquid fuel," said Rhodes, who is in El Paso to speak at the International Solar Energy Conference this weekend.

"It hasn't reached the point where solar systems can beat the price of gas and electricity in the United States," he said. "If the cost of liquid fuel were to quadruple all of a sudden, solar would begin to look cheap."

Rhodes said solar water heaters are feasible in some areas of the country and he has one in his home. He estimates the $1,000 unit will take about seven years to pay for itself.

History's sharpest rally breaks record

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged its sharpest rally in more than 1½ years Friday in a rush of buying by cash-rich institutions that gave Wall Street its busiest day in history.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange came to 52.28 million shares, far outdistancing the previous record of 44.51 million set in the midst of the market's last dramatic rally on Feb. 20, 1976.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials soared 19.92 points to 795.13, its best single-day showing since it took a 20.28-point jump on Sept. 21 of 1976.

The upsurge, which began Thursday with an 8.92 advance in the Dow was not attributed to any single dramatic news development.

Instead, analysts said the market's recent strength in the face of bad news on inflation and other economic problems had touched off heavy buying by money managers at banks, mutual funds and other institutions which had been sitting with large reserves of cash.

The over-all count of NYSE issues showed advances swamping declines by about a 4-1 margin with more than 1,200 Big Board stocks gaining ground.

The rally swept into just about every corner of the market, except for the gold stocks and some other metals issues.

But the issues that benefited the most were the stocks of brokers themselves. Bache Group climbed 1½ to 7¼, as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Merrill Lynch 1¾ to 17¼; Shearson Hayden Stone 1 to 8, and E.F. Hutton 1¼ to 14¼.

The New York exchange's composite index jumped 1.03 to 51.94.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials shot up 2.30 to 102.33, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up climbed 94 to 92.92.

Ousted FBI head pledges to fight Bell's discipline

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) — The ousted head of the FBI's biggest field office said Friday that attempts by Attorney General Griffin Bell to discipline him have bypassed FBI Director William Webster, setting a potentially dangerous precedent.

FBI Assistant Director J. Wallace LaPrade, replaced Friday as head of the bureau's New York regional office, also said he doubted that he could avoid leaving the law enforcement agencies altogether.

Saying that the attorney general wanted to make him into a scapegoat, he vowed in an interview with editors and reporters of The Associated Press to fight Bell's request last Thursday that he retire.

The controversy stems from federal indictments accusing three former FBI officials of participation in illegal surveillance of the Weatherman underground group. LaPrade's conflict with Bell arises from his alleged lack of cooperation in the grand jury investigation.

The FBI assistant director said he had testified twice before the grand jury, denied that he had committed perjury and declined to say whether he had refused to answer questions in his first appearance.

Characterizing Bell's action against him as "frightening," LaPrade declared, "A director of the FBI has to be alert to the pervasive threat of political domination and control of the FBI because it can be very dangerous if it occurs." He continued,

"It appears to me that the attorney general is not allowing the director of the FBI to run the FBI Administratively. I think that's wrong. I think it's really wrong."

He added that "the director has told me he would do everything he could in his position" to support LaPrade and "I feel that he's in the middle."

There was no immediate response from Bell or Webster.

But the White House responded to LaPrade's claim in his news conference Thursday that "warrantless investigations" such as those that led to the indictment of former acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and two onetime aides were being conducted now under presidential authority.

Calling the link "rather strained,"

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said that warrantless investigations have "entirely and scrupulously" conformed to guidelines adopted by the Carter administration in consultation with the Congress.

LaPrade — who said that law, rather than executive order, should set the guidelines to protect agents from civil suits — conceded that current warrantless investigations differed from those of the early 1970s.

Compromise attempt on canal treaty fails

By RICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic leaders and a recalcitrant colleague failed Friday to agree on a compromise that would satisfy both lawmakers and the Panamanians on a controversial canal treaty reservation.

The failure, only four days before the showdown vote on the treaty, left few predicting how next Tuesday's vote will go.

"It's still hanging by a thread," said one aide to a key pro-treaty Democrat.

The closed-door discussion centered on the possibility of another reservation, drafted by the leaders, which would declare that nothing in the treaties would be interpreted as giving the United States a right to intervene in the internal affairs of Panama.

The wording, its authors hoped, would not be seen by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., as conflicting with his own earlier reservation allowing U.S. intervention to keep the Panama Canal open against any kind of internal threat.

But at the meeting in Majority Leader Robert Byrd's office broke off, DeConcini told reporters the issue was not settled. "I believe they know where I'm coming from," he said.

Panamanian officials are angry over the DeConcini provision, calling it an insult to their country's sovereignty and hinting it might force them to reject the treaties entirely.

On the other hand, Senate leaders are trying to hold their own shaky coalition of treaty supporters together for the showdown vote on Tuesday. They fear the loss of DeConcini's vote and perhaps one or two others over the issue.

Robert Maynes, DeConcini's press secretary, said both sides had submitted proposals for solving the

Geological features of WIPP area argued

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last article of a series on the proposed nuclear waste disposal pilot plant near Carlsbad, N.M.

By JIM STEINBERG
R-T Staff Writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. — "The proposed Carlsbad Waste Isolation Pilot Plant is a more ambitious project than sending a man to the moon," said Dr. Charles Hyder, of the Albuquerque-based Southwest Research and Information Center.

"When they talk about low-level nuclear wastes in 55-gallon drums, what they don't tell you is that each drum contains enough plutonium to kill one million people. On this project you can't afford to have a mishap involving even one part per million of storage capacity. The percentage of error has to be reduced to absolute zero," said Hyder, an outspoken critic of the WIPP proposal. His comments came after Tuesday's public information hearing in Carlsbad.

The proposed WIPP site would cover 60 surface acres located 25 miles southeast of Carlsbad. At 2,100 feet beneath the surface, a disposal area would be prepared for low-level radiation wastes. At 2,600 feet, intermediate- and high-level radiation wastes would be stored.

Included in these high-level wastes would be 1,000 spent fuel assemblies from nuclear power plants and a research and development project calling for the storage of very high level defense and spent fuel wastes.

A potential future source of Midland's water is located in Loving County on the Texas-New Mexico border, approximately 40 miles from the WIPP site.

Because the salt beds are far removed from the deep underground water system, the WIPP site poses no threat to 920,000 acre-feet of water the city of Midland has rights to, said Norman MacKay, senior waste management engineer for WIPP, in an interview with The Reporter-Telegram Friday.

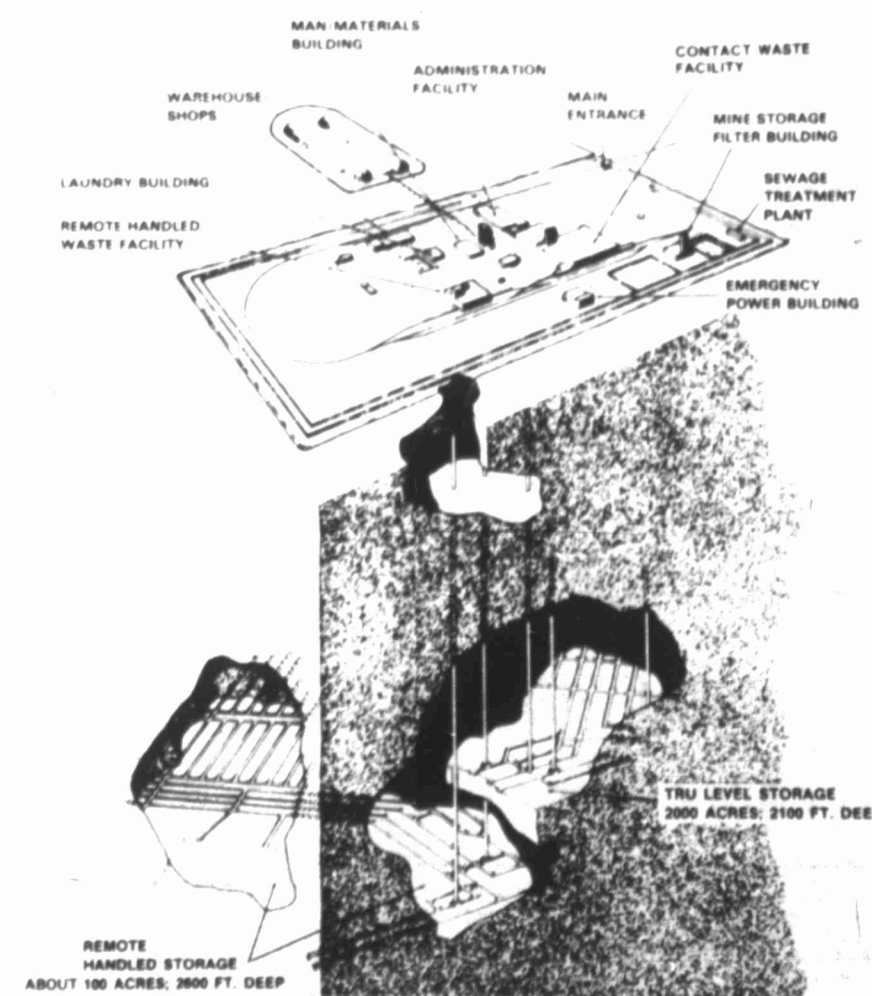

"This is one of the reasons we do not allow deep drilling in the area. We do not want to set up a circulation system between deep underground aquifers," MacKay said.

If this connection were made, MacKay admitted the result would be the contamination of underground water sources with radioactive materials.

However, MacKay noted, to reach the groundwater, would require a rupture deeper than 10,000 feet. This the depth of existing solid bedrock beneath the natural salt beds that make the WIPP site geologically attractive to the Department of Energy.

When asked about the geological

WASTE ISOLATION PILOT PLANT

Covering 60 surface acres, the proposed Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, 25 miles southeast of Carlsbad, N.M., calls for the storage of low- and intermediate-level nuclear wastes at 2,100 feet below the surface and high-level radiation at the 2,600-foot level.

Stability of WIPP site discussed

stability of the proposed WIPP site in view of a 1931 earthquake in the area which registered the equivalent of seven on the Richter scale (the maximum is ten), Mackay responded.

"Good people who have studied all the reports indicate this is a stable region. While there was an earthquake somewhere in the general area in 1931 the epicenter was a considerable distance away.

"One of the reasons the National Academy of Science has selected bedded salt as the ideal medium for storage of nuclear wastes is that it does have a plasticity a tendency to heal cracks by a plastic flow. If a crack were to develop in the salt it would tend to be self-healing."

After an evening public hearing session in Carlsbad on Tuesday, Hyder charged plans for the proposed WIPP site were being pursued in spite of recent seismic readings in the area.

To this, Mackay responded on Friday. "This is not considered to be an active area (geologically). He might be referring to some very minor disturbances, nothing properly called an earthquake, and I'm not sure even calling them tremors is quite right."

"There's a general feeling in the scientific community that seismic activity produced is due to the injection of fluids under pressure in oil wells in West Texas. It's generally known that you can get minor seismic readings from this type of activity and there is quite a bit of it going on nearby."

Mackay noted that seismic studies were continuing in the area.

Department of Energy Deputy Secretary John O'Leary told Carlsbad-area residents at a public hearing session on Tuesday that unless a means to dispose of spent nuclear fuel rods is found, atomic energy as a viable alternative to the nation's energy shortage would no longer be feasible.

O'Leary at one time was in charge of licensing the nation's nuclear power plants. And during the public hearing session, he reflected on those days: "I remember getting up in the morning and looking into the mirror and asking if I was doing the right thing by granting a license when I knew there was no known way to dispose of the wastes."

"It's time for the federal government to accept responsibility for the management of radioactive wastes," O'Leary said, adding that a national policy would be established before the end of this year.

Carlsbad Mayor Walter Gerrellis said the location of the WIPP site near Carlsbad would be in keeping with the state's tradition as a national leader in nuclear programs.

But other residents were not happy to see a proposal before them that is clearly the prototype for a national — perhaps even global — nuclear waste depository.

Lozano grand jury may be asked

The attorney for the family of Larry Lozano said Friday that a grand jury investigation into Lozano's death in Ector County Jail will be sought with Washington officials by the middle of next week.

Ruben Sandoval of San Antonio said he will ask for a federal grand jury investigation in either Midland or El Paso, and that he would be joined in his appeal by Ruben Bonilla Jr. of Corpus Christi, head of the 50,000-member League of United Latin American Citizens.

A six-member inquest jury in Odessa found Wednesday that Lozano's death Jan. 22 was accidental.

That ruling brought on a demonstration Thursday at Ector County Courthouse, as young Mexican Americans marched around the courthouse chanting protests at the manner in which they said they felt the inquest was conducted by Ector County District Attorney John Green.

Earlier in the week, a Justice Department spokesman, John Wilson, said in Washington that the department would be probing into Lozano's death as it would in any case involving a possible denial of civil rights.

He said the Justice Department has been looking into the Lozano case for more than two months, "at least since February." He said his department will study the transcript of the proceedings before the inquest jury.

Attempt at compromise on Panama treaty fails focus of activity was almost entirely on the DeConcini matter. As long as it remained unresolved, few were willing to hazard a prediction on the outcome.

All sides were having difficulty assessing the importance of threats by several pro-treaty senators to vote against the second treaty, but administration officials evidently were afraid not to take the threats seriously.

While DeConcini's vote and that of at least one other apparently depended on keeping his reservation, several senators indicated they could not approve it as long as DeConcini's reservation remained.

The first of the two treaties, providing for the canal's neutrality after the year 2000, was approved a month ago by a 68-32 vote — one more than the required two-thirds majority.

One draft disclosed by Byrd would say that no action taken by the United States under the treaties should be interpreted as "an intervention in the internal affairs of Panama and will not be directed at the territorial integrity and the political independence of Panama."

DeConcini said that language hadn't been given to him officially, but "it's the best I've seen."

Byrd disclosed proposed wording of the new reservation after a day of meetings in which he and other top Democrats took charge of the crisis, relegating Carter administration officials to a backseat role.

But at the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said, "We are generally agreed on methods and courses of action."

With the Senate taking a day off, the Weather to be good

If fun in the sun is what Midlanders ordered, then Midlanders should get exactly what they ordered according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The weatherman Friday night predicted mild nights and warm days for both today and Sunday, with the mercury pushing close to 90 on both days. Southerly winds are expected to prevail both today and tonight.

Area towns reported weather similar to Midland's, for Friday with temperatures in the mid to upper 80s.

North Texas: Partly cloudy with scattered showers Monday and Tuesday. Mostly fair Wednesday. Under northwest Monday and cooler southeast Tuesday. Highest temperatures in the lower 80s. Lowest temperatures generally in the 50s.

South Texas: Bases of thundershowers and warm temperatures Monday with lows from mid 60s to low 70s. Moderate coastal areas and highs in the 80s to near 90. Southwest: Fair and cooler Tuesday and Wednesday with lows from near 50 north to mid 60s east and near 60 south. Highs low to upper 70s Tuesday and low 80s Wednesday.

West Texas: Cooler first of the week with chance of thundershowers in the Panhandle. Warming trend by Wednesday. Highs Monday, upper 80s Panhandle to the mid 80s south warming by Wednesday to the upper 90s north, the mid 80s south, and the mid 80s. Lows are north to the 50s south except in the Panhandle Tuesday.

Ceausescu tours large TI plant in Dallas stay

DALLAS (AP) — Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu arrived in Texas Friday afternoon for a two-day visit to explore the possibility of exporting electronic components and oil drilling equipment to the Soviet bloc nation.

Ceausescu toured the large plant of Texas Instruments, a leader in the field of calculators and electronic components, upon his arrival in Dallas aboard an Air Force jet.

He was greeted by Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom and other city officials, as well as a color guard from Carswell Air Force Base in nearby Fort Worth and the Navy Band from the Eighth Naval District in New Orleans.

The band played the national anthems of both countries.

Ceausescu and his party were about to depart by motorcade to Texas Instruments when a Romanian couple waved at them with a bouquet of pink and white gladioli from behind a restraining marker.

The Ceausescus got out of their limousine and went over to greet George and Elizabeth Ghitescu of Dallas.

MH-MR decides to cancel meet

The Monday meeting of the board of trustees of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation has been cancelled, according to an announcement from its administrative offices.

The meeting was to have been held at noon Monday at the Permian Basin Planning Commission conference room at Midland Regional Air Terminal. It was to have been the board's regular monthly meeting.

"I saw that my president was coming to the United States and I'm happy that Romania has good relations with the United States," said Ghitescu, an employee of a film firm in Dallas. "That's why I come out here."

His wife and Mrs. Ceausescu embraced and the presidential family accepted the flowers.

DEATHS J.C. Schnell

J. C. Schnell, 72, of 1425 Ventura Drive died Thursday at his residence following a lengthy illness.

Rosary will be said at 6:30 p.m. Sunday in Newie W. Ellis Funeral Home. Mass will be at 10 a.m. Monday in St. Ann's Catholic Church with the Rev. Adolph Kaier officiating. Interment will be in Calvary Hill Mausoleum in Dallas.

Schnell was born Sept. 13, 1905, in Piqua, Ohio, and was reared there. He worked for the Colt Patent Fire Arm Co. 16 years before going to work with Hobart Inc. of Troy, Ohio, in 1927. He retired in 1972 as national sales manager. He moved to Midland May 23, 1975, from Dallas. He held a fourth degree in the Knights of Columbus.

Survivors include his wife, Jeraldyn Schnell, and two sisters, Louella Randaugh of Piqua, Ohio, and Marietta Schultz of Three Rivers, Mich.

U.N. troops occupy second sector

By ARTHUR MAX

TAIBA, Lebanon (AP) — U.N. forces took control of a second small sector of southern Lebanon relinquished by Israel Friday, digging in for the difficult task of keeping the peace.

Nepalese U.N. troops who had arrived in Israel just 12 hours earlier paraded smartly on the northern edge of this village after an Israeli colonel shook hands with U.N. commander Gen. Emmanuel Erskine and ordered the last three Israeli armored personnel carriers to leave town.

One of the APC crews first had to tow a broken-down U.N. truck filled with Nepalese troops to their new positions.

The bulk of the Israeli tanks and troops had pulled out during the night from Taiba and eight other positions along the Litani River, abandoning a 25-square-mile area.

The Israelis still control most of the 500-square-mile region of southern Lebanon seized in five days of fighting in March.

Erskine, Ghanaian commander of the U.N. peace force in south Lebanon, said he expected little trouble.

"We depend on the cooperation of all the people involved," he said. But if attacked, "we will fire back. We have a duty to defend ourselves and our positions."

Erskine said it was not the U.N. task to block the return of Palestinians to south Lebanon, but his forces would stop any armed personnel from entering the area.

The U.N. Security Council had called for an Israeli pullout from southern Lebanon and established the multinational peace force. This was the second withdrawal of the Israeli invaders have staged — the first was from a smaller zone farther east on Tuesday.

The Israeli force remains strung out westward from here along the Litani, northern limit of its advance.

The Israeli troops in this ruined and almost deserted village moved 1 1/2 miles to the southwest, where bulldozers shoveled mounds of dirt onto the road in Adasiya, a village that appeared untouched by the fighting and which will serve as the new Israeli front line.

The March 15 invasion was sparked by a terrorist raid on Tel Aviv's coastal highway that cost 35 Israeli lives, but tension had been building for months.

Taiba, the new Nepalese base, had been a launching pad for rocket attacks on settlements across the border in the Israeli panhandle four miles to the east. The dozen razed houses were evidence of the tough combat the Israelis faced here.

League plans primary forum

The Midland League of Women Voters will sponsor a forum for candidates in the May 6 primary elections at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Midland National Bank.

Candidates for county offices, as well as state representative and state senate, are scheduled to be on the program.

The forum is open to the public.

MC 'Round-Up Day' aims at area students

Midland College will be "putting on the dog" during "Chaparral Round-Up Day" today to show area high school students the advantages of attending the college.

Sponsored by the Office of Student Activities, Student Senate and several campus organizations, the Round-Up Day events will begin at 10 a.m. and continue through 5 p.m.

"We've scheduled a number of events which will show some of the programs and courses available at Midland College, along with some activities that are purely for fun," Dr. Jim Cook, director of students activities, said.

Contests planned for the day include a team tug-of-war at 10:30 a.m.; jalapeno pepper eating, 11:30 a.m.; pie eating, 12:30 p.m.; egg toss, 1:30 p.m.; T-shirt filling, 3:30 p.m.; hairy legs, 4:30 p.m., and cow chip throwing, 5 p.m. Winners will be awarded gift certificates.

A performance will be given by the Midland Community Theatre Tap and Jazz Dance at noon, while demonstrations will be held in judo at 1 p.m.; horse vaulting, 2 p.m.; gymnastics, 3 p.m.; fencing, 4 p.m.

Kappa Kappa, college spirit group, is sponsoring a dunking tank. The Midland 4-H Horse Club is providing pony rides, and the college drama department will do face and body painting.

Information about intramurals, athletics and student activities will be available to visiting students. In addition, the art department is setting up an art show and the Baptist Student Union is putting up an exhibit.

Despite legal precedent, young woman still lives

By CAROLE FELDMAN

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The dark-haired young woman lives still, three years after slipping into a coma and almost two years after her parents won a court battle to disconnect her life-supporting respirator and allow her to die.

Karen Ann Quinlan's parents say they do not regret the decision to ask the courts to end her life or the long legal battle it brought.

"We know that we have done everything possible for our daughter — everything physically possible, everything spiritually possible — and that's why we are at peace," her mother, Julia Quinlan, said in reflecting on the third anniversary of Karen's lapse into a coma.

Miss Quinlan remained in stable condition Friday. It was three years ago Saturday that she fell into the coma after mixing alcohol and tranquilizers at a party.

During the legal battle over Miss Quinlan's right to "die with dignity," doctors testified that her respirator was the only thing keeping her alive.

But she defied the experts after the respirator was disconnected in May 1976 under a ruling by the New Jersey Supreme Court.

Her parents still visit her daily at the Morris View Nursing Home. Recently they spent her 24th birthday at her bedside.

"She is much more tranquil," Mrs. Quinlan said in recalling the birthday.

"It was beautiful," she said. "She said the family, if faced with the same decision now, still would ask the respirator's removal. There are no regrets, she added.

"We try not to be affected by it," Mrs. Quinlan said. "But of course when you lose someone you love, it does change your life. There is no going back to what happened three years ago."

Consumer can prevent being 'taken for ride'

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press

Federal agencies are trying to make sure that people in the market for auto repairs don't get taken for a ride, but consumers whose cars break down should not wait for government to protect them.

You can help yourself by learning your rights, becoming familiar with state laws and shopping carefully.

The Department of Transportation, one of several government units studying consumer problems with auto repairs, notes that state and local authorities have stepped up protection efforts in recent years.

Prior to 1973, for example, only three states had laws covering auto repair troubles; today, 21 states have such legislation.

The issue was spotlighted by last month's Senate subcommittee hearings on the auto repair industry. A survey conducted by the subcommittee showed that state consumer protection agencies got more complaints about cars than any other item.

Industry spokesmen generally say it is unfair to blame all repair shops for the problems of a few; they also note that people are more likely to complain about cars — which represent a major expense — than they are about things that cost less.

The Department of Transportation, meanwhile, has some suggestions for shoppers. Among them:

—Check a shop's reputation. Consult friends and neighbors, your local consumer office and the Better Business Bureau.

—Ask if mechanics are certified or licensed, either under a mandatory or voluntary program. If only a few of the mechanics are certified, ask that one of them be assigned to work on your car. If possible, describe your problem to the mechanic — who will actually do the work.

—Find out how long the shop has been at its present location. Does it seem to be well equipped? Is it clean and organized?

—Ask for a written estimate of costs. Is there a fee for the estimate? Will the shop call you if there are additional charges? Make sure that you get a guarantee — in writing — and ask for an explanation of restrictions.

If you have a complaint, start by talking to someone in authority at the repair shop. If that doesn't work, try your local consumer office, voluntary consumer agency or Better Business Bureau.

If they can't help, check your state or local automobile dealer association to see if there is an AUTOCAP program in your area. AUTOCAPS are Automotive Consumer Action Panels, developed by the National Automobile Dealers Association. The AUTOCAPS offer mediation of disputes and, although the decisions are not binding, most dealers abide by the panels' recommendations.

Guerilla chiefs tell Vance of tentative troop approval

By BARRY SCHWEID

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Rhodesian guerrilla leaders told Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance on Friday they tentatively accept the idea of a U.N. peacekeeping force and a British resident commissioner during a transition to black majority rule, a U.S. official reported.

Though guerrilla chiefs Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe accept these two key elements of the British-American plan for Rhodesia's future, differences still remain, American officials said. They did not elaborate.

Vance and British Foreign Secretary David Owen held the first of two days of talks Friday with Nkomo and Mugabe.

U.S. diplomats believe that even with guerrilla endorsement of the overall plan, the main obstacle to convening a peace conference of all factions in the six-year-old conflict will be Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith and his demands for special protections for the white minority.

Smith and his black moderate partners, meanwhile, moved ahead with their own settlement plan.

In the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury, nine blacks were sworn in as ministers in the racial interim government set up by the "internal" constitutional agreement reached between Smith and three domestically based black nationalists last month. That settlement calls for universal suffrage elections leading to a black majority government by Dec. 31. But certain safeguards for whites will be retained.

Official Rhodesian sources also said there would be no more executions of captured guerrillas.

Nkomo and Mugabe have rejected the internal settlement, which excludes their Soviet-backed Patriotic Front movement, as a sellout to Rhodesia's white minority. Mugabe said here Friday that a new peace conference "must not marry us to that iniquitous internal group."

He told reporters, however, that he does not object to the participation of the black moderates "as long as all the parties come on the basis of negotiating under the Anglo-American agreement."

The talks here are aimed at heading off a wider war in Rhodesia by giving the guerrillas a role in establishing a new government. The plan promoted by Washington and London calls for one-man, one-vote elections in the former British colony.

The two guerrilla chiefs had rejected these Anglo-American proposals at a conference in Malta last January, but that was before Smith reached his settlement with the moderates.

PROBLEMS BIGGER THAN YOURS

That's right! His problems seem bigger to him than yours are to you! Sadly, that is one of the last things we understand about our children. But some parents do understand their children's problems. They are careful to nurture soul and spirit as well as mind and heart. The years ahead will prove them right. The role of the Church has never been to cut the problems down to the size of the man — always to build the man up to the size of his problems.

Crusade to begin

LUBBOCK — The Rev. Morris Cerullo, widely-known evangelist, author and TV personality, will conduct a West Texas crusade in Lubbock next week.

The Spiritual Life Crusade will begin Monday and continue through Wednesday at the new Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, 1501 6th St.

Cerullo has conducted crusades which have attracted up to 200,000 people for a single service. He has been ministering to overflow crowds in major cities throughout North America, conducting crusades only at the invitation of local churches. He comes to Lubbock following a busy schedule which has included overseas campaigns in Africa and the Orient, and North American crusades in such cities as El Paso, Atlanta, Ga., Anaheim, Calif., and Charlotte, N. C.

Joining Cerullo in the Lubbock crusade will be Archie Dennis, one of the nation's leading young gospel singers. He is a former member of the Billy Graham evangelistic team. He will be accompanied in his gospel programs by pianist Henry Davis and organist Don Norville.

The crusade services will begin at 7:30 p.m. daily, preceded by the musical program at 7 o'clock. There will be 6,000 free seats available for each service.

General chairman for the Spiritual Life Crusade is the Rev. David C. McNeely, pastor of University Avenue Assembly of God in Lubbock. Additional information on the evangelistic outreach may be obtained by telephoning crusade headquarters, 806-799-4233.

Rev. Morris Cerullo

New group organizing

Steve Dewitt is the new associate pastor of Midland's Dayspring Christian Center.

Dewitt's ministry here will be in the areas of youth, evangelism, teaching, Bible study and prayer. He is initiating a weekly fellowship organization for single young adults in the community. Additional information on the organization may be obtained by telephoning 682-9841.

Dewitt is a graduate of Christ for the Nations Institute at Dallas, with an associate of arts degree in practical theology. He has worked with children and youth groups in Dallas and has been connected with various special outreaches to adults as well as young people.

Lubbock pastor to speak

The Rev. Morris Sheats of Lubbock, pastor of one of the fastest-growing churches in the Southwest, will be guest speaker this evening at a dinner and meeting of the Midland chapter, Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International.

The dinner will be at 5:30 p.m. in Furr's Cafeteria in Midland's Town & Country shopping center, with the meeting to begin at 6:30.

Sheats, who has been in the ministry for 20 years, is the author of several books, including "You Can Be Emotionally Healed" and "You Can Have A Happy Family." He is a former president of Lubbock Ministerial Association and holds membership in numerous civic and service organizations in Lubbock, including the Southwest Lubbock Rotary Club, the Lubbock Economics Council, National Alliance for Senior Citizens, Lubbock Chamber of Commerce and the United Way of Lubbock. A graduate of Texas Tech University, Sheats is president of Trinity Bible Institute, the first two-year Christian vocation training

Rev. Morris Sheats center in West Texas. He is pastor of interdenominational Today's dinner and meeting will be open to all interested persons

Odessa temple prepares for Passover celebration

The Jewish festival of Passover will begin at sundown next Friday.

The festival commemorates the oldest recorded struggle for human freedom, when the Israelites struggled for freedom from bondage in Egypt in the days of Ramses II, in 1300 B.C.

Temple Beth El in Odessa, which serves Permian Basin Jewry, will initiate the festival with a special Passover service at 6 p.m. Friday, followed by a community Passover Seder at 8:30 p.m. Another special service will take place at the temple at 10:30 a.m. April 22, and Passover Seder ceremonies will be Children of the Religion School of Temple Beth El will conduct their own Seder service beginning at 11 a.m. on Sunday, April 23.

Both the adult and children's services will be under the leadership of Rabbi Emanuel Kumin of Shreveport, La., who serves the congregation of Temple Beth El on a monthly basis.

Revival to begin with Sunday rites

The Christian Church of Midland, 2608 Neely Ave., will begin a revival Sunday.

Guest preacher for the revival will be Riley Donica, co-director of the Kiamichi Mountains Christian Mission in southeastern Oklahoma. Hugh Harris, a tenor from Iraan, will be song leader and soloist for the special services. Kenny Reed, a young gospel singer and recording artist, will be a special guest performer.

According to Robert Blazek, minister of the Christian Church of Midland, the revival emphasis will continue through Thursday. Sunday services are scheduled for 10:45 a.m. and 7 p.m., while weekday services will begin at 7 p.m. All will be open to public.

The guest evangelist, Donica, is widely known as a revival speaker, having preached revivals in many parts of the nation as well as those in Rhodesia and South Africa.

Authority to present Noah's Ark series

Eddie Atkinson, a well-known authority on Noah's Ark, will be featured speaker in a series of services next week at Trinity Baptist Church, 3308 W. Cuthbert Ave.

Atkinson, following years of study of the Biblical account of Noah and his Ark, has built detailed models showing the possible construction of the vessel. He now uses the models to illustrate his sermons on Noah's Ark which he presents at churches, conferences and special meetings in many parts of the nation.

Atkinson's lectures at the Midland church are scheduled for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, said Ron Bates, host minister. Additional information on the special events may be obtained by contacting Bates at 694-7597.

could see, then extracted a tiny blue-and-silver crucifix from a zippered compartment.
 "I don't wear it so I don't give people something to gossip about," she explained.

Crosses and crucifixes are officially taboo here in the land where the Russian Orthodox Church once reigned along with the czars, and the cross stood next to the two-headed eagle as a symbol of Russia. But crosses are not even sold in the jewelry stores today, although the few functioning churches still sell them.

Now young people have taken to wearing crosses as jewelry in what the government considers to be a dangerous fad.

M. F. Kovalenko, a schoolteacher from the Crimea, complained that sun worshippers on the Black Sea beaches are particularly bold in flaunting gold crosses around their necks. Worse yet, she said, the small ones are going out of style and "big plastic ones are coming in."

Science and Religion, the atheistic state magazine published by the Znaniye (knowledge) Society, has featured a lengthy debate on the subject.

Deliverance Crusade to conclude Sunday

Nationally-known evangelist Dorothy Davis of Houston is conducting special services here this weekend.

The Deliverance Crusade began Friday night and will continue through Sunday in Midland's Best Western Motel, 1-20 at Rankin Highway.

Today's and Sunday services will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will be open to residents of the city and surrounding area.

"A responsible Soviet citizen would never wear the cross as a piece of jewelry," the magazine said.

The state seems to be more concerned about young people and non-believers becoming "infected" with religious notions than it is with trying to dissuade those who still openly profess religious faith.

The middle-aged Moscow woman in some ways is typical of what the state apparently considers a dangerous, borderline case. She describes herself as an atheist. Why does she carry the tiny cross then?

"It's a tradition," she said. "I'm not a believer, but I am a real Russian. I like to go into a church now and then, too. Many people who are not believers do. They go sometimes when things aren't going well, or when their parents are sick."

A Dushanbe woman wrote to Science and Religion and expressed similar sentiments. She defended her right to wear a cross, calling it an "exquisite piece of jewelry" that she had bought with her own money. It was also a remembrance of a devout grandmother, she said. Finally, the Dushanbe woman argued, the cross stands for the invincibility of the Russian people.

"It embodies good deeds," she wrote. "I envision it as a mighty force that can overcome any trouble. In the cross is the history of the Russian people."

Crackdown scheduled on public job abuses

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department has said it was taking steps to root out fraud and abuses that apparently have siphoned millions of dollars from its public jobs program and other projects.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said he was creating a permanent office of special investigations and giving it a staff of 200 people "to make sure that Labor Department programs are free of corruption, mismanagement and financial abuses."

Marshall announced the new crackdown less than two weeks after he disclosed that a "very large number" of cities and states were being investigated in connection with their administration of the department's $11.8 billion public jobs program.

The secretary said that "well over 95 percent" of the local agencies that provide jobs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) "are operating equitably and honestly."

Most cases of wrongdoing involved misapplication of funds rather than fraud, he said.

Marshall said his actions are designed largely to be preventive, adding: "The scattered instances of fraud and mismanagement involve only a tiny percentage of our $25.4 billion budget."

Asked for a more specific estimate of the extent of the problem, Marshall said he could give no figures. He said he thought the amount of money improperly used was less than $1 billion, but he really didn't know.

One official estimated the abuse at less than one percent of the department's budget. The official, who asked not to be named, estimated misused CETA money at between $25 million and $50 million.

CETA, the largest public jobs program since the Depression of the 1930s, has created 450,000 jobs for the long-term unemployed and impoverished in the past nine months, Marshall said.

Other steps Marshall said he was taking included:

- Asking Congress to authorize in the fiscal 1979 budget "a sizeable increase" in the number of investigators that could be assigned to the inter-departmental Organized Crime Strike Force. Department officials said they want 125 more investigators, a 33 percent increase.
- Sending letters to chief elected officials responsible for each of the 450 agencies that administer CETA to alert them "to our renewed efforts to root out fraud and mismanagement."
- Marshall said the special investigative unit, created on a temporary basis last summer, will focus on CETA because it accounts for nearly half the department's budget. But other areas also will be under watch, he said, such as fraudulent claims in the federal workers compensation program.

Texas cities growing; so are their water problems

EDITOR'S NOTE — Ever been half way through a shower when the water pressure dropped to zilch? Or found dirty water filling your drinking glass? Or been forced to watch your lawn shrivel and die because of hot weather water rationing? These are some of the big problems Texans face in the ballooning metropolitan areas of the Lone Star State. Another in a series of On Texas and water.

By JIM BRIGANCE
Associated Press Writer

"How are you going to keep 'em down on the farm after they've seen Patee" was a popular musical question during World War I.

Sixty years later many Texas farmers are asking the same question about sons and daughters who've deserted the homestead for Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and other Texas metropolitan areas.

The cities have been swollen not only by young Texans seeking fame and fortune but also by thousands of "damn Yankees" trying to carve out their own place in the Texas sun.

And every one of them needs life's most important element: water.

"We can only support ourselves and all of those people who will join us in the future by assuring adequate water supplies of acceptable quality," says A.L. Black, chairman of the Texas Water Quality Board. "In order to accommodate this shift in population and avoid finding ourselves in a condition where unemployment is rampant, welfare payments are burdensome and necessities of life are missing it is necessary to bring along the water to compliment the other resources of Texas."

Already, underground Houston is a spaghetti bowl of water mains and pipes, valves, pumps, faucets and conduits of every size and description.

Black said should Houston's growth stop at once the area would still need an additional 255,000 acre-feet of surface water annually.

An acre foot is the amount of water needed to flood one acre with one foot of water, or 325,850 gallons.

The balloon-like growth of Texas' larger cities has created the predictable squabbles over water rights, water prices, bond issues, rights-of-way, and a myriad of problems associated with moving water to your kitchen or bathroom faucet.

Groundwater accounts for 60 percent of Houston's water supply while surface water accounts for the remaining 40 percent. One-third of that is lost by leaking and broken water mains.

With 1,000 persons a week moving into Houston, the city struggles to keep up with the demand of industry and residential users for water. "We think we have plenty of water but the problem is trying to keep up with expansion — getting the pipes and pumping stations in. There will always be wells and we can go farther and farther out for our water but then the farther out you go the more it costs to pipe the water back," explained H.R. Norman, assistant director of the Houston Department of Public Works.

Getting water for thirsty Houstonians is not the problem, Norman said. The problem is how much are they ultimately willing to pay for it.

"We began seeing shortages back in the 1940s and began planning for them. That's when we built Lake Houston," Norman said. He said planners have long considered going as far east as the Neches and Sabine rivers for water but they have delayed such schemes because of the high costs involved. "There's no sense to build them (plants and pipelines) until you need them."

Picturesque San Antonio — called by some the Queen City of the Southwest — lies like a jeweled reward at the base of the Texas Hill Country. To the north and west the ground climbs heavily toward the Edwards Plateau. South of the Alamo City the land falls quickly into the trackless brush country of chaparral and mesquite.

San Antonio's growth now rivals Dallas and here again aqua dulce is an issue. The city's only source of drinking water is the Edwards Aquifer whose recharge zone lies along the city's northern rim. Its protection against contamination and pollution by burgeoning development has become major political issue.

Reynolds Cate, a member of the San Antonio River Authority board, has warned that sole reliance on the Edwards Aquifer is a dangerous dependence. "We definitely need to plan for an auxiliary source. If San Antonio keeps growing at a healthy pace we could be in the same straits as areas like California and Idaho are now. I've been told as long as we have good rains in the recharge zone, about as much water goes into the aquifer as we now take out. In the early 1950s we had seven years of drought but the city was much smaller then. If that cycle repeated itself we'd be in serious trouble," he said.

Cate said programs such as the Texas Water Plan to import water from other states is no longer a realistic solution. Instead, he offered, revival of the Cibolo Creek Reservoir proposal would help insure adequate water for San Antonio's future. The proposal has been turned aside, however, by city fathers and remains on a back shelf.

At present, San Antonio is primarily dependent on the Edwards Aquifer for its water, and upon the rain gods who keep it recharged.

The San Antonio City Water Board has repeatedly tried to get the city council to approve purchase of surface water supplies from the Guadalupe-Blanco River Authority but councilman Glen Hartman has accused the board of manipulation of data, and scare tactics to support its position.

Hartman said the board's own report on projected water needs actually shows a decrease in per capita water use over the past 16 years. Additionally, Hartman said, the Edwards Aquifer recharge shows it to be more than adequate for the foreseeable future.

Hartman said the board's report on San Antonio water needs for the future was "in my view a flagrant violation of what should be the cornerstone of any city department or agency — candor."

More than one million persons from Uvalde east to New Braunfels depend on the Edwards Aquifer and, according to the Edwards Underground Water District, there is more than enough water to go around.

Over the past 25 years the area between Dallas and Fort Worth has blurred so predictably that it is now possible to travel the 30-mile span without ever leaving a corporate city limit. Grand Prairie, Arlington and other communities in the "mid-cities" area all have become major links in the same huge chain.

This large metropolitan area gets its water in part from the Trinity Group Aquifer, a vast underground reservoir that covers much of North and Central Texas. It has been intensely developed for municipal and industrial use in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and formerly supplied much of the municipal needs for Waco. The tremendous drain on the aquifer by Dallas-Fort Worth has lowered pumping levels and increased costs. Authorities claim the region will double its need for water by the year 2000. Most of the useable water now comes from surface supplies.

The Texas Department of Water Resources has predicted that failure to cope with the projected water needs in the Dallas-Fort Worth area will mean competition for available supplies and economic growth will be "severely restricted. The role of the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolis as a national commercial and manufacturing center will be drastically diminished. Unemployment will rise and the local economy will degenerate as commercial institutions and industrial facilities relocate to more favorable areas."

But, the department adds, "cities in the Upper Trinity area have planned far ahead to meet their water needs... Lakeview Reservoir is now under construction, design has been completed for the Aubrey and Cooper (Dam) projects and the Richland Reservoir is currently being designed. Water supply for this area does not appear to us to be a serious problem for the year 2000."

In the agriculturally-rich Rio Grande Valley the main source of water has been the Rio Grande from which both residents of the Rio Grande Valley and Mexico draw water. And there are problems — not only with water rights but with proper storage and distribution.

Brownsville and Harlingen are the two largest U.S. cities in the Valley.

Matamoros and Reynosa are the Mexican cities across the Rio Grande.

This vast winter garden area is subtropical and subject to periodic flooding because of poor drainage.

"The water supply situation for the Rio Grande Valley and the Mexican side has been really good since the construction of the Falcon Dam," said Joseph Friedkin, El Paso commissioner for the International Boundary and Water Commission. "Today the supply in storage could last about two years. It was catch as catch can before the reservoirs were built. Before the reservoirs were built it was a situation of serious shortage or serious floods."

Authorities said good rainfall in recent years has forced dumping of water into the Gulf of Mexico because "we had nowhere to put it."

But all agree that construction of additional reservoirs could not only insure adequate water supplies for the future but relieve much of the flood control problem in the valley.

Robert Roundtree, manager of the Brownsville Public Utilities Board, foresees a problem with water supplies for Brownsville unless "reallocation of existing water rights" occurs.

But Roundtree concurs that the problem is surmountable provided the city gets help from water regulatory agencies. He concedes, however, "It will be hard and expensive."

Like most growing metropolitan areas of the big state, the primary water problem is not a shortage of water, but a shortage of inexpensive water.

Cheap water has gone the way of nickel cigars.

Russians raking in the dollars with cruise vessels

By ROBERTE DALLOS
Los Angeles Times

ABOARD THE ODESSA — The little man in starched white uniform and moustache walks up to the microphone to a fanfare by Igor's Odessa Band and applause by the audience, made up largely of Americans.

"Good evening ladies and gentlemen," he says in English with a heavy Russian accent. "My name is Vladimir Dobrobodeyev. I am chief purser of this vessel. If you run into any problems, just ask for Vladimir. We are only 21 Vladimirs on this ship."

The line was intended to get some chuckles. But it is part of a serious endeavor by the Soviet Union to woo Western tourists onto Russian cruise ships.

The reason is quite simple. It is a way in which the Soviets are able to earn hard Western currency, which is then used to buy goods from capitalist countries.

And probably nowhere in the world is the Soviet Union trying harder for the cruise-business than in the United States. Two modern ships are currently sailing out of New Orleans. Their operators even departed from many of their own Communist Party beliefs and traditions to make the M.V. (Motor Vessel) Odessa and the M.V. Kazakhstan real "party" ships in the Western style, with casinos, lotteries, bars, gift shops and bingo.

But while they are providing the pleasures of the West, their own cultures are not being overlooked. Theaters provide a steady array of movies about the revolution. Waiters, stewards and engineers put on shows featuring traditional Russian folk songs and dances. Passengers can avail themselves of Russian dance lessons, Russian language lessons and classes in playing the balalaika.

"We are in the American market because it is a rich market," said

Vladimir Nikitin, the Odessa's captain, in his luxurious quarters behind the ship's bridge. "We are here to make money."

Indeed, he predicts that his ship alone will show a profit of $2 million this season. Next month the Odessa will cruise out of Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore, then will head home to Odessa for cruises with Russian vacationers.

(Things change quite a bit aboard the ship when she sails from her home port of Odessa. Most of the cabins have three persons in them instead of two. The fare is less than half as much. And some of the temptations are removed. The slot machines go into storage and are placed with penny-arcade-type games such as shooting galleries and pinball machines.)

WHILE other nations have put some of their passenger liners on the scrap heap or into mothballs (the last American passenger ship sailed from Hawaii to California last week), the Soviet Union has been building and buying ships. The red smokestacks with the gold hammer and sickle are evident in ports everywhere — from New Orleans to Le Havre to Yokohama.

There are about a dozen Russian shipping companies, all, naturally, state-owned. Besides running a large number of regularly scheduled passenger runs, Soviet ships designed for cruising follow the climes. Often they are chartered to private companies for cruising.

With the single exception of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, the Soviets maintain the only regularly scheduled trans-Atlantic service. This year the Russian passenger fleet will carry some 50 million passengers, up 25 percent from four years ago, according to sources in Moscow.

There are a number of reasons for the Soviet success.

Just as the Soviet Union subsidizes its giant freighter and tanker and fishing fleets, it is doing likewise in the passenger business. Soviet ships are cheaper to operate for a variety of reasons: the Russian merchant seamen are paid less than 140 rubles, or the equivalent of $190 a month, compared to the average American seaman's wage of $950 a month.

FURTHERMORE, Russian ships are provisioned and repaired in Soviet-bloc shipyards. And the Soviets frequently have their ships built in countries in their own sphere of influence, such as East Germany. As a result, labor rates are also less, making the overall costs of a new vessel lower.

Though many of the Russian liners are ultramodern, the Soviets also have secondhand ships, some dating back to the '20s. These are used in the Black and Baltic seas for Russian vacationers.

Sometimes the Russians have gotten deals on newly built ships whose intended owners have been unable to pay for them. That is how they were able to pick up this new 447-foot, 14,000-ton cruise ship in 1974 for $11 million — much less than it cost to build. It never sailed as intended, as the Copenhagen, because the Danish company that ordered it went bankrupt. The British builder let it go cheaper.

A U.S. congressional committee on merchant marine and fisheries, which has made an extensive study of Soviet nonpassenger shipping, estimates that a modern Russian container vessel costs between 30 percent and 40 percent less to operate than most comparable American or European vessels. No similar studies have been made for passenger shipping, but the lower operating costs are certainly comparable.

It is for these reasons that the Russians are able to undercut competition in passenger fares. Travel agents say that Soviet fares are often as much as between 20 percent and 30 percent lower than those of other cruise lines. And that was the lure for many of the 450 passengers who sailed on a recent cruise on the Odessa.

"I have been able to sell my clients on the Russian cruises because they cannot afford the others," said Michelle Molina, an agent for Stoddard's Tours and Travel Service in Houston, Tex., who had made this cruise. Other cruise liners are about $100 more expensive in all categories, she estimated.

BUT PRICE isn't the only factor. Many of the 450 passengers who filled every one of the Odessa's cabins said they had not considered the nationality of the ship. They sailed because the Odessa left from the port closest to their homes.

The liners Odessa and Kazakhstan have been making the series of cruises out of New Orleans. The 16,000-ton Kazakhstan sails every second Saturday on a 14-day voyage. The itinerary includes Jamaica, Curacao, Venezuela, Colombia and Mexico. The Odessa has been sailing from New Orleans every Saturday evening on one-week cruises with alternating itineraries.

Miami was rejected as a home port by the Russians because of the proliferation of ships sailing from Florida and because of a fear of difficulties from anti-Castro Cubans.

On the recent cruise, there were 49 passengers from Louisiana, mostly from New Orleans, who said the convenient departure point had been the influencing factor. The same held true for the 59 Texans and the smattering of passengers from various nearby Southern states. The group also included 116 Canadians, 19 persons from New York and 84 from California who had purchased the flight and cruise packages.

Some of the passengers said they wanted to try out the Russian food and cultural offerings.

On the first morning, about 100 persons gathered in the music lounge for what would become daily Russian language lessons, taught by Nancy Stamey, a New Jersey girl who had spent three years in Kiev as an exchange student.

"How many of you speak Russian already?" she asked.

"Choot-choot (a little)," answered Mrs. Gert Bernstein of Sherman Oaks, Calif., raising her hand. She said that she and her husband, a retired schoolteacher, had visited the Soviet Union.

"These lessons will bring you closer to your cabin stewardess and your dining room waitress," Nancy said. "The captain knows a little bit of English but he is always very impressed when people greet him with 'Dobree vecher' (good evening) at the captain's cocktail party."

Later in the day the passengers gathered for an orientation tour by Jim Everett, the cruise director and leader of the Odessa's American crew staff of a half-dozen. Everett, from Hollywood, is a former professional ice skater.

Second Flynt trial continued indefinitely

CINCINNATI (AP) — A second obscenity trial of Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt has been continued indefinitely in Hamilton County Common Pleas Court.

Judge Robert Kraft took the action Monday after Flynt's attorney, Andrew Dennison, explained that an appeal is still pending and Flynt is paralyzed from last month's shooting in Atlanta.

Flynt was convicted by a Hamilton County Common Pleas Court jury in February 1977 on charges of pandering obscenity and engaging in organized crime.

Flynt appealed to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, contending two out-of-state attorneys — Herald Fahringer and Paul Cambria of Buffalo, N.Y. — should not have been barred from representing him.

He faces pending charges of sodomy, bribery, perjury, pandering obscenity and disseminating material harmful to juveniles.

Dennison said Flynt will be not able to make a court appearance for several months.

The expression "third hand high" means that the person who plays the third card of a trick should try to win the trick—or, at any rate, play higher (if he can) than either of the two previous players.

West opens the deuce of hearts, and South cunningly plays dummy's jack. East covers with the queen of hearts.

following the "third hand high" rule. South takes the king of hearts and now if the defenders continue hearts South gets a second heart trick. South can therefore afford the diamond finesse. East wins with the king of diamonds and continues the attack on hearts: South then makes three spades, two hearts, three diamonds and one club.

SHOULD BREAK RULE

At the first trick East should play the eight of hearts instead of the queen, breaking the time-honored rule.

The opening lead is clearly fourth-best from a four-card suit. Since West would not lead a low heart from A-K-x-x, South must hold A-x or K-x of hearts and would play the nine from dummy unless he held the ten in his own hand. In short, East should read exactly what South is doing.

If East saves his queen of hearts, he will later win a trick with it. The defenders get three hearts and their two kings, defeating the contract.

Flowers occupy important niche in both historical, modern art

The nicest show, in this season of the flowers, is not hanging in a gallery but blooming in the streets. It will not last. This spring, too, will pass, and its flowers die; but less transitory blossoms — those pictured by the painters — can be seen the year round. Every art museum shows them. There are blossoms in the pictures of Andy Warhol, Ellsworth Kelly and Georgia O'Keefe. The temple columns of the early Greeks were carved to look like flowers. Matisse cut his flat, bright blooms out of colored paper. Many art masters — Raphael, Rembrandt, Durer, Manet and Monet, Van Gogh and Gauguin — show us flowers in their paintings. Flowers blossom everywhere throughout Western art.

And not just Western art. The Oriental masters put flowers of all sorts on their bowls, their screens and scrolls. There are blossoms in Persian rugs; there are bouquets in the King Tut show. "The Giver of Life writes with flowers," says the Aztec poem.

Flowers are a staple of high symbolic speech — and of simple-minded decoration. In the dime stores of my youth you could hardly buy a drinking glass that did not have flowers on it. We exchange flowers when we marry, when we worship, when we mourn.

And we are not the first. Next time you see blossoms on a summer dress or teapot, in a painting or a garden, consider for a moment this old, very old, item from art history: Man was using flowers before man was modern man.

Sixty thousand years ago people went collecting bouquets on the hillsides near the cave called Shanidar in what is now Iraq. The inhabitants of Shanidar were not just like us; they had different bodies, perhaps different brains. They were Neanderthals — extinct now. Some 30,000 years would pass before man would begin painting on the walls of caves — yet we know that those Neanderthals went out to gather flowers for presentation to their dead.

A cache of partial skeletons, all of them pre-human, has been unearthed in Shanidar by excavators digging deep into the cave. Since those bones were buried there, tons of dust have settled, and the scientists who dug them up found the ancient burial more than 20 feet beneath the level of the floor.

There are two good ways of measuring the age of such remains: carbon-14 dating, and pollen counting. Both were used at Shanidar.

Wild flowers grew there ice ages ago. The blooms themselves have vanished, but their pollen grains survive. By looking at a pollen grain (a microscope is required), scientists can tell what sort of plant it came from; and by statistical analysis of pollen distribution — one can measure time. As the glaciers of the ice ages expanded and retreated, the pollen-generating plants growing in Iraq responded to the slow changes in the climate. Cold weather species prospered there a while; later they retreated, leaving, as they did so, a changing microscopic record in the dust that filled the cave.

In a recent Science magazine article, Ralph S. Solecki, a Columbia University anthropologist, reported he had scraped small soil samples from the bones of Shanidar, had sent the samples off to Paris and had asked A. Leroi-Gourhan there to analyze their pollen grains and thereby gauge their age.

Such pollen counts are routine now, but "much to her surprise," Leroi-Gourhan found that those from Shanidar confounded her predictions. She eventually discovered why. Eight different sorts of flowers — bluebonnets, daisies, thistles, yarrow, mallow, ragwort and hollyhocks, among them — had been put into the grave.

Seven of the flowers from the Shanidar flower burial are still picked in Iraq today for use as herbal medicines. One of them, yarrow, derives its English name from the Anglo-Saxon word for "healer." Another, known as "groundsel," means "swallower of pus." The mallow named "Althaea," which is Greek for "healer," also left its pollen on the bones of Shanidar. "One thing is certain," writes Solecki. "These flower pollens were not accidentally introduced into the cave, and hence must represent bouquets. . . . Some person or persons once ranged the mountainside, collecting these flowers one by one."

That ancient flower-burial suggests to Solecki that Neanderthals had "soul." Flowers can be medicine (even sick cats comprehend that), but most city dwellers buying flowers at the corner kiosk nothing of their properties, myths or magic names. Much flower lore is lost, now, but the flower — as a symbol — never seems to die.

Morris Louis, Leonardo and the Neanderthals of Shanidar did not all think the same thoughts. But while the motives that move painters are infinitely varied, their images remain peculiarly the same. For that which pleases us in life — and that which pleases us in art — are not unrelated.

With inexplicable consensus, we recognize the lovely as soon as we detect it — in a melody, a flavor, a fragrance or a face. When small children learn to talk, their societies determine whether they speak Japanese or French, but teachers do not give the young vocal cords or brains. Our capacity for speech — or for responding to the beautiful — is not gained anew with each generation. It seems, in part, built-in.

You need not be a perfumer to know that flowers smell good. You need not be a botanist to know that flowers matter. T. S. Eliot writes of "Music heard so deep that it is not heard at all, but you are the music while the music lasts." The joy evoked by flowers seems similarly visceral. Flowers — and those friends of flowers, butterflies and birds — seem to draw from each of us physical response.

Enjoy them while they're here. Fragility and hope, the certainty of death, innocence and healing, sexual propagation, love and resurrection — their messages are variable, but flowers are a constant in the history of art.

Alaska sends many tourists to Hawaii

By ROBERT WELLES

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Some Alaskans are finding they "see their neighbors more often these days in Hawaii than they do at home," says travel agent Gary Cambly.

Travel agency figures show Alaska and Anchorage in particular send more persons to Hawaii per capita than any other state or city.

Visitors from Alaska are more in tune with Hawaii. The states of Alaska and Hawaii — being the last two states — there's a certain camaraderie," says Eddie Wilson, Maui District Manager for the Hawaii Visitors Bureau. And Alaska is only a few hundred miles farther from Hawaii than other West Coast cities.

The affluence of Alaskans — who have the highest per capita income in the nation — also helps explain why 18,856 Alaskans traveled more than 2,700 miles to Hawaii in 1977. That's about 5 percent of the state's population.

Anchorage sent 12,260, about 75 persons per

Seattle was the U.S. city in second place, sending 47 persons per thousand. Oil workers coming off the North Slope come in and ask to be put "on the next plane for Hawaii, Las Vegas or Mexico" in that order, Cambly says.

Alaska's long winter and "cabin fever" may be as much a factor as the high incomes.

Following one heavy snowfall in Anchorage, Cambly, of Wits Travel Service, was bombarded with demands to "get me to Hawaii."

But cabin fever is more than a reaction to recent bad weather; it results from living in constant cold weather with only a few hours of sunlight each day.

White House launches push for marijuana as cancer aid

Newsday

WASHINGTON — The White House has started a major push to persuade the National Cancer Institute to make marijuana "widely available" to alleviate the effects of cancer treatment, President Carter's health adviser, Peter Bourne, says.

The White House initiative, could lead to reclassification of marijuana as a prescription drug, on a par with other narcotics such as morphine, within 18 months, according to an expert in the Food and Drug Administration.

The administration push on marijuana stems from the fact that research during the past three years has shown, almost conclusively, that marijuana alleviates the extreme discomfort caused by chemotherapy in cancer treatment.

Because of these studies and a widely held belief that both marijuana and heroin might make it easier for people who face death, Bourne said the administration "felt it was time to bring some sort of rational approach to dealing with this problem. There is no reason to deny (narcotics now classified as illegal) to cancer patients on a purely emotional basis. We need a great emphasis on humanity. We are concerned with alleviating the physical and emotional problems of a terminal illness."

Bourne said that within a few weeks he expects marijuana to be reclassified in such a way that it would become much more readily available to cancer researchers. In line with this, Bourne said he will press the Cancer Institute to secure an investigative drug application that would help to promote research into the therapeutic effects of marijuana on cancer victims and make it widely available through the nation's 19 comprehensive cancer treatment centers.

Marijuana, or to be more accurate, its principal active ingredient THC (Tetrahydrocannabinol), is legally manufactured in the United States only by the federal government from marijuana plants grown on a small farm in Mississippi.

Third Paul-Gammage showdown looms in Texas' 22nd district

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Gammage and Ron Paul are gearing for their third showdown battle in the 22nd Texas Congressional District.

Gammage, a Houston lawyer and a Democrat, is the incumbent who defeated Paul, a Lake Jackson physician and a Republican, in the 1976 general election, just seven months after Paul had upset Gammage in a special runoff election to fill an unexpired term.

Gammage's 268-vote margin out of the almost 200,000 cast in the general election was challenged unsuccessfully in court and in the House of Representatives and was the closest congressional race in the nation in 1976.

Since the start of the Paul-Gammage feud, the campaigns have been dominated by Paul charges that Gammage is an ultra-liberal and by Gammage charges that Paul is an ultraconservative.

Paul, 42, has no Republican opponents. Gammage, 40, is being challenged in the Democratic primary by three political newcomers, George Stewart, Nassau Bay; Gerald Lietke, Houston, and Mike Richards, Sugar Land.

Dr. Richard W. Murray, a University of Houston political scientist and veteran observer of Houston area races, says Gammage will win the Democratic nomination easily and that the real battle, and a close one, will be in November.

"It's too close to call," Murray said.

The Paul-Gammage showdowns began after former Rep. Bob Casey, a Democrat and the only man to have held the 22nd District office since it was formed in 1958, resigned to accept a Federal Maritime Commission appointment. Casey, a former Harris County judge, resigned from the commission early this year, returned to Houston and recently was appointed by Governor Dolph Briscoe as chairman of the Texas Deep-water Port Authority. district's vote from Sen. George McGovern in the 1972 presidential election but President Gerald Ford barely edged Jimmy Carter, 95,998 to 95,479 in 1976.

Mine settlement labeled inflationary

WASHINGTON (AP) — benefits won by the new coal miners' contract is inflationary, union in the coal strike will raise most home electric bills and increase the cost of steel products, the Carter administration's wage-price monitoring agency said Friday.

In another report, the Council on Wage Federal Reserve Board and Price Stability said the nation's industrial production rose in wages and sharply last month despite the coal strike, which ended March 27. The output of the nation's mines, factories and utilities rose 1.6 percent, the biggest jump since March 1977, and a sign the winter slump may be ending.

Among a host of other developments marking the end of the week, during which President Carter announced new inflation fighting initiatives, were these:

—The Commerce Department reported that businesses increased their inventories by $2.5 billion in February, but they were selling goods at a faster rate.

—Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and presidential press secretary Jody Powell denied reports that Carter is considering reducing his proposed $25 billion tax cut.

—There was a sharp boost in prices on the New York Stock Exchange amid heavy trading that broke volume records.

In its report to the president, the wage-price council said the biggest impact of the coal settlement will be on two major users of the energy resource — electric utilities and the steel industry.

For residential customers, this means rate increases of 0.7 percent at the end of the first year of the contract and 1.2 percent over the life of the contract," the council's report said.

For a homeowner with a $50-per-month electric bill, that would be an increase of about $1.20 through 1980. The increase would be more than double for areas particularly dependent on coal.

Firm pledges large payments

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A lawyer for Champion International said Friday his firm would pay an additional $20.5 million to Amoco Gas Co. over the next three years under a proposed settlement of customer claims against Lo-Vaca Gathering Co.

Lo-Vaca owes Amoco approximately 40 billion cubic feet of gas, and the settlement would allow Amoco to buy that amount at current market prices and pass on the higher costs to its customers.

The Amoco-Champion dispute is a side issue in the proposed settlement of more than $1.6 billion in natural gas claims against Lo-Vaca.

Champion's lawyer, Nelson Jones, used Amoco's own figures in attempting to show that Amoco's first loss in history occurred because it had to pay its parent company much more for gas.

Jones said figures illustrated that money was simply being taken from Amoco and put in Amoco Production Co. Examiner Tom Hill of the railroad commission refused, however, to let Jones delve into profits and losses of the two companies.

The Amoco issue dominated Thursday and Friday of a 10-day commission hearing on the proposed settlement. The hearing will continue next week.

Ballesteros claims lead

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros, the spectacular young Spaniard who is handing the American circuit with the same flair that he dominated European golf for the last two seasons, lashed his way to a seven-under par 65 and stalked into a three-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

That's remarkable, South African Gary Player said while shaking his head. "Fantastic," tremulous.

That Ballesteros is playing some golf, "You must give him credit."

Ballesteros, only 21, but the outstanding player in Europe, compiled a 36-hole total of 134. He shot under par on the 6,889-yard La Costa Country Club course, and had a sound advantage over the best of the PGA Tour, all the winners of regular American tour titles from the last 12 months.

Bill Falzeret was in second place at 117 after a 65 in the mild, partly cloudy weather.

Player, who won his third Masters title last week, chipped in for a birdie on the final hole for a 68 that left him another shot here at 124.

"I'm playing about as well as I can," the little South African said. "That chip in on the final hole really rattled it."

But that Ballesteros — He shook his head again and left the sentence unfinished.

Reds top Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Cincinnati swept its season-opening sweep in Cincinnati last week.

Rose, walked opening the game and eventually scored on a wild pitch helped the Cincinnati Reds to an 8-1 victory over the Houston Astros Friday night.

Cincinnati's triumph was the fifth straight over Houston this season, including a four-game

Unser crashes into wall

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Al Unser was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital in nearby Bryan with a possible concussion Friday after his Lola race car slammed into a retaining wall at nearly 200 miles per hour during a practice session for Saturday's 208-mile Indianapolis car race here.

"Mr. Unser has been admitted. We are going to keep him overnight for observation. He has a possible concussion. But he seems to be in pretty good shape," said Mrs. Mery Lou Turner, director of nurses. "He's alert and talking. He's never unconscious or anything when he came in."

Officials said the 38-year-old Unser appeared to have a broken jaw when he was taken from the wreck. But X-rays proved negative.

The preliminary evaluation showed nothing but they'll be studied again very closely while he's still here, Turner said.

"He still has a severe headache. He's listed in satisfactory condition."

The fastest speed of the day was turned in by Mario Andretti at 208.466 mph in his Penske PC6-Cosworth. That's the fastest lap here since Andretti set the track record of 214.138 mph in 1973, which at that time was the world's closed course speed record.

Several other drivers exceeded the 200 mph barrier on the mid clear spring day, which provided nearly perfect conditions for high speeds.

Perman against Stadium and Boykin of Abilene in opener

Top seeded Lee's Randy Purifoy, 6-0, 6-0, and Abilene's Kenny Merchant, 6-1, 6-3, Friday, and will meet David Naworski of Odessa-Perman this morning.

Joe Love and Kirk Farquhar, the top seeded boys doubles team from Midland High, had little trouble Friday, and will face Lance Proctor and Steve Senter of Abilene-Cooper in their semifinal match. The other semi pits the second seeded team of Mike Madden and Steve Ashley of Odessa-Perman against Stadium and Boykin of Abilene's Cooper.

Top seeded Lee's Miller and Garton and the second seeded Midland-High tandem of Gary Garton and Donah Boyd advanced to the girls doubles semifinals, as expected. Miller and Lewis will face Eastburn and Scamion of Abilene in one morning semi and Garton and Boyd will tangle with San Angelo's Dawson and Williams in the other.

All final round matches are slated for 11 a.m. immediately following the semis.

Dodgers blank M-Cubs

SAN ANTONIO — The Midland Cubs continued to have their problems here Friday night as the Tall City team dropped its fourth in a row to the San Antonio Dodgers, 1-0.

Rick Smith picked up the win for the Dodgers, shutting out Midland on four hits and striking out eight. Lee Smith was the loser, as he got off to a rough start, giving up all four runs in the first two innings.

The Dodgers struck for three in the first on an RBI triple by Bobby Mitchell and another run scoring safety by Mary Garrison.

Bosox topple Rangers, 5-4

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice hoisted a 395-foot single to the base of the right field wall with two out in the 10th to score Butch Hobson from third base Friday, boosting the Boston Red Sox to a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers in Fenway Park's 66th home opener.

The Red Sox, who rallied to tie the score 4-4 in the eighth inning, got their winning drive under way when Hobson led off the 10th with a pop single to right center.

Jerry Remy sacrificed and Rick Burleson moved Hobson along to third by grounding out to second.

Rice, who had driven in the tying run with a single in the eighth, then drilled his long hit the opposite field, scoring Hobson in the 10th.

The Red Sox 3-3 rallied from a 4-2 deficit in the eighth as Hobson hit his first homer into the center field bleachers. Remy singled and after a passed ball, Rice singled a single off second baseman Bump Wills' glove.

Boston collected 15 hits and had at least one runner in each inning, leaving 14 men on base.

Reliever Len Barker, who replaced starter Doyle Alexander in the seventh and bailed out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam, took the loss. The victory went to Dick Drago, who replaced Boston starter Dennis Eckersley with two out and two runners on base.

Martina nabs win

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova and third-seeded Tracy Austin scored second-round victories over unranked opponents Friday in a $125,000 women's tennis tournament.

Navratilova beat 15-year-old Pam Shriver 5-7, 6-2, 6-1, and Austin defeated Janet Newberry 7-6, 4-6, 7-5.

The youthful Shriver played aggressively, serving strongly and coming to the net often against the more experienced Navratilova. She took Navratilova, the biggest winner on the 1978 women's circuit, to six deuces in the final game.

Newberry, leading 5-4 in the ninth game of the third set, pulled a muscle in her right leg and limped to defeat.

Blue Jays nab season opener

TORONTO (AP) — Roy Ricco then delivered the winning run with a sacrifice fly to the warning track in center. The final three runs in the inning scored as John Mayberry drew his third walk of the game to lead the bases and pinch-hitter Doug Auld singled to center — the ball bouncing past outfielder Ron Cleflore for an error to clear the bases.

The Toronto comeback overcame an early long ball performance by the Whitaker threw the ball Tigers that included a away on a potential pair of home runs by double play off the bat of LeFlore and Jason Rick Bossett. Bob Bailor Thompson in the first beat out an infield hit offing the glove of reliever John Don Kirkwood, ap-Hiller and Howell joined in his first game followed with a single to score being acquired last left. scoring two runs to week from the Chicago.
