Fairbanks less than fair now that boom's gone bust

By BILL RICHARDS The Washington Post

FAIRBANKS, Alaska - At 2 p.m. the crush of nearly 150 men jammed into the dispatch room of Teamster Local 959 here suddenly falls silent with expectation as the voice of head dispatcher Douglas Yordy squawks out over the public address system.

HOME EDITION

"Listen up," Yordy orders, and he proceeds to read off the available work for the waiting Teamster job seekers. There are only four openings - all jobs in the soggy springtime bush country and none scheduled to last more than a week. A palpable cloud of gloom covers the room

There is no doubt that the legendary oil pipeline bonanza has run its course. Two years ago, Fairbanks tutes or hookers allowed in this bar.

Someday soon - in a year or two years or not until 1990, depending on whom you listen to here these days the construction of an even more expensive project, the Alaska natural gas pipeline, will begin. The line will move Prudhoe Bay's vast stores of up to 26 trillion cubic feet of natural gas some 4,800 miles from the Alaskan North Slope to the Midwest. Conservative estimates put the cost of the lar city of 66,000

At the state capital in Juneau recently a member of the legislature produced a copy of a newspaper ad that has been running in papers in the lower 48 states. For just $9.95 the ad promises an "Alaskan Employment Kit" and a shot at a $1,615 a week job on the new gas pipeline.

This time, the ad says, "The Boom Promises to be even Bigger."

"That ad," said state labor department analyst Christopher Miller, "is nothing but unadulterated hooey." State officials have sought assurances from the pipeline consortium that it will work to squelch similar come-ons aimed at gullible out-ofstaters.

"We want them told, 'Don't come to Alaska unless you've alrady got a job in your pocket, " Miller said.

Nevertheless, officials here say they have begun getting calls from out-of-staters seeking jobs on the next pipeline. "We're getting feelers," said Miller. "People are already

The New Orleans area, where three persons died as a result of flash flooding, and other parts of the South struggled to recover today from heavy rainfall, high winds and at least eight tornados.

In New Orleans, 9 inches of rain fell Wednesday, clogging streets with flooded vehicles and making travel almost impossible except by improvised watercraft.

Police said two persons drowned and one was electrocuted in a floodrelated accident

The National Weather Service said it couldn't tell exactly how much rain fell because its gauge broke Before breaking, the gauge recorded 8.67

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wholesale prices jumped 1.3 percent in April. the biggest increase in 31/2 years, as the inflation outlook failed to improve, the government reported

Wholesale prices of consumer foods rose 1.9 percent, continuing a fourmonth surge that has hit shoppers' pocketbooks The April increase of 1.3 percent was the biggest since a 1.9 percent rise in November 1974, also at a time of rising food prices. Wholesale prices of finished goods had risen 0.6 percent in January, 1.1 percent in February and 0.6 percent in March before the latest 1.3 percent gain.

If the four months of wholesale price increases continued at the same rate all year, they would total about 15 percent for 1978.

Government economists are counting on volatile food prices to ease up later in the year and for the inflation rate to be about 7 percent for 1978, up from an earlier estimate of about 6

Even with the big increases so far this year, wholesale prices have gone up only 7 percent since April of last

The government said 30 percent of the entire April increase was caused by higher jewelry prices, reflecting a sharp increase in the price of gold.

Picketing continues

Picketing by labor union construc tion laborers at Midland building sites of the non-union Area Builders entered its fourth day and will continue, Bob Daughtery, business manager of Permian Basin Laborers' Local Union No. 1408, told The Reporter-Telegram today.

"All we want is some recognition," Daughtery said. "We're here to stay, Daughtery said the AFL-CIO-affiliated local is asking Area Builders President R. B. Hampton to place his contruction workers under AFL-CIO health insurance, firstly, and, secondly, under a union pension plan.

Hampton said he would not go along with the union request, which would cost him 401/2 cents per man hour. Hampton, who says he pays his "common laborers" 45 cents above the base union pay scale, said he would not consent to the request.

Hampton said he would rather pay the money directly to the laborers, who may, he said, purchase their own insurance coverage

Hampton said the picketers, numbering one or two at each of his company's five jobs in Midland, are not interfering with his men's work. 'Our work is going on as nor-

Saturday

Polls for both Democratic and Republican primaries will be open from a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday.

In addition, emergency absentee voting will be conducted from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Midland County Courthouse square. County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry said the service is for those who are ill and cannot go inside the polling places, but can have someone drive them to the courthouse. Mrs. Cherry said she will take a ballot to those persons in their cars.

The voter registration office will be open from 7 a.m. until the last person has voted to handle any questions related to voting eligibility or registration, said Janeice Builta, voter registration deputy.

Polling places for the two primaries are determined by voting precinct, shown on the voter registration card. They are as follows:

successfully tested a new pill that lowers high blood pressure without the unpleasant side effects of medicines now prescribed say it is one of the most promising breakthroughs in treating this common illness in two decades.

The drug, called SQ14225, will lower blood pressure so high it cannot be treated by traditional methods. The doctors say it someday may replace the drugs used to treat most forms of this illness.

High blood pressure, sometimes called hypertension, is one of the most common diseases of adults. It is caused by narrowing of the blood vessels and contributes to such killers as heart attack and stroke.

The researchers say it will be at least two years before SQ14225 is cleared for widespread use.

Prayer breakfast begins Carter's 'fence-mending'

By FRANK CORMIER

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — President Carter, on the second day of a fencemending trip to the West, was beginning his activities with a prayer breakfast here and ending it eight events and two states later with a news conference in Oregon.

Beaten two years ago in every state west of the Mississippi except Texas and Hawaii, Carter encountered evidence of voter restlessness in Colorado at the start of his western tour

Wednesday As he celebrated "Sun Day," in a drenching rain atop a foothill to the Rocky Mountains, his audience was dotted with men wearing caps proclaiming the national strike against administration farm policies.

Driving back to Denver from muddy South Table Mountain, near suburban Golden, the president saw farmer pickets, ban-the-bomb demonstrators and a group with placards that accused him of "giving everything away" to the Soviet Union. Happily for Carter, the day ended on a upbeat note as Colorado Democrats whistled and cheered to mark his arrival at a fund-raising affair for

Sen. Floyd Haskell. Haskell saluted the president as coming "in support of the state of Colorado." Carter called the Colorado Democrat "one of the great senators

Saluting the senator's backers, Carter said a lot of hard work would

After the judging and showing, the spotlighted roses of many hues will be put on sale at the show, which is keved for the sake of artistic arrangements, to the theme "Language of the Universe."

The sale, which may turn into a auction, will be an MRS first, noted Ms. Butts Heretofore, many of the show's roses were just given away or saved to wilt and then discarded. Maybe some turned into bookmarkers.

"There's too much pleasure (in roses) to throw them away," said Ms.

pened the political ardor of 74-year-old Randall Harmon, best known for paying himself $100 a month rent to use his front porch as an office the one time he got elected to Congress.

He's signed up to try again this year. Today marks his 16th bid for Congress in 34 years. But he spends 12 hours a day driving his taxi and makes it clear he's not running very hard.

"I might campaign some on Election Day. Then again I might drive my cab. And then again I just might stop and have a drink with some friends," he said. "It probably all will amount to about the same

During his two-year term from 1958-60, Harmon left a legacy not soon forgotten in Indiana's 10th

What caused all the fuss was the disclosure that the federal government was paying him $100 a month for rent on his district office, which happened to be located on his front porch. There was also some dispute about the salary paid to his administrative assistant, who doubled as his wife.

'People still call me 'Front Porch.' They say, 'Oh, yeah, you're the guy who got in some trouble about his porch. What was that deal all about?" he recounted. "And I tell them I hired my wife and my porch and they called it nepotism.

"My wife moved out 10 years ago, but I still got the same porch," he said. "I'm keeping what they call a low profile. I haven't spent a dime on this campaign and I only went to one political meeting and that was as a favor to some guy who hangs out at the same doughnut shop I do.

Harmon is on the ballot as a Democrat this year against incumbent Phil Sharp. But he's flexible about his party affiliation.

"I ran for Congress in 1944, 1946, 1948, 1950 and 1952 as a Republican and lost all five times," he recalled. "I got mad when the Republicans nominated Eisenhower for president over Sen. Bob Taft, so I changed over and ran as a Democrat and lost in 1954 and 1956 and then I won in 1958.'

He was voted out in 1960 and ran again as a Democrat in 1962, 1968, 1970, 1972, and 1974, losing

"I had some friction at home so I didn't run in 1964 and 1966," Harmon said. "Some people have told me it didn't seem like an election those years without me

So the candidate says he will keep running for the 10th District seat "until I die or until I'm unlucky

Texas Attorney General-aspirant Mark White, campaigning on an energy and consumer protection plat-form, in Midland Wednesday vowed if elected to the post he would "fight the fight to hold down the electricity bills in this state."

"I intend to fight to hold down electricity costs in Texas," said White, who resigned from his office as secretary of state to run for the Democratic Party's nomination for attorney general

White repeatedly attacked Montana's 30 percent severance tax, which he called "unlawful," on coal shipped to Texas to fire furnaces in generating electricity.

Over a five-year period, the tax will cost electricity consumers in the Austin area $400 million, White said.

However, White said that his Democratic opponent, former Texas Speaker of the House Price Daniel Jr., has publicly stated that he "would not fight to stop that tax."

White noted that the Montana case affects "only the 1.2 million Texans" served by the Lower Colorado River Authority (LCRA) and the city of

Nevertheless, White said in a prepared press release, "It is very likely that all other Texas utility customers will face similar, stiff severance taxes from other western coal-supplying states."

Should he take office as attorney general, White said he would "take all necessary and proper action to protect all Texas consumers and utility payers from any such unconscionable

White said he intends "to make certain" that Texans pay only their "fair share" for electricity "in this energy-producing state."

Unlike his opponent, White said he would "fight to see that we pay no more than our fair share of electricity

He said he supports legal action the LCRA and the city of Austin took in filing suit against Montana for imposing the severance tax.

White alluded to the low-cost natural gas piped northward from Texas to New England states. Gas users there don't "pay subsidy" to Texas and "I don't intend" to subsidize the state of Montana with the severance tax, White said.

"They in a sense have their hands around our economic throat," White

He said Price is "whistling in the cemetery" on those issues. White said his opponent is "running on his father's name." His father, Price Daniel, was governor from 1957

In turning to non-energy matters, White said he would set up a "prosecutory team of experienced criminal prosecutors" to aid local district attorneys in "cleaning up any cloggedup trial dockets they might have." That service would be optional, he said

White also said he would organize a team of lawyers "to monitor . . . rule-makers" in the nation's capital. Otherwise, he said, laws detrimental to Texas eventually might be passed.

White would work to protect people's civil rights, he said in the press conference at Midland Regional Air

"Certainly," he said in referring to police brutality, "no right-thinking person in this state condones the abuse of any person " He noted he was referring not just to "abused" Mexican-American and blacks but also Anglos.

On consumer protection, White said the attorney general's staff would be available to check into possible wrong-doings.

"(However), the first line of defense is your own private counsel.'

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's family seems to manage its privacy better than most White House occupants.

Although wife, Rosalynn, and daughter, Amy, have household faces to go with their household names, they have demonstrated they can venture forth from the White House and attract surprisingly little atten-

That's exactly what she did the weekend her father was canvassing administration shortcomings at Camp David, Md., with his Cabinet and senior staff.

Amy, who did not go to Camp David, went to a local eatery with Mary Fitzpatrick, her nurse; Courtney Moore, daughter of presidential assistant Frank Moore, and Caitlin West, a San Diego girl who became Amy's friend after a reporter introduced them last year.

The Washington press corps didn't learn of the excursion until two weeks

In similar fashion, Rosalynn Carter last week visited an inner city housing rehabilitation project here without a single reporter or news photographer in attendance. And she enjoyed similar privacy a few weeks ago when she toured the District of Columbia General Hospital.

Courtney Moore's father, who is Carter's chief lobbyist on Capitol Hill. was unhappy last week after an administration critic was reported to have complained the president was too tight-fisted to supply congressmen with multiple prints of photos taken with Carter.

"We fill every congressional request for prints," said Moore. "If a member wants them, we'll supply a dozen, 20 or 40."

Moore suffered something of a personal embarrassment last week when he overslept and missed an 8: 15 a.m. appointment with Carter. Moore, press secretary Jody Powell and others had attended a concert by country singer Willie Nelson the night

Perhaps it was coincidence but Moore's daily appointments on the days that followed were set back to 8:45 a.m. and, by week's end, had slipped to 9 a.m.

KENT, Ohio (AP) - Four candlebearers, each representing a student slain in a burst of National Guard gunfire eight years ago, led about 1,200 people in a march launching the memorial observance of the Kent State University shootings.

Among those in Wednesday night's candlelight procession, which stretched out for more than a quarter of a mile, were parents of two of the slain students.

The 50-minute march was followed by an all-night vigil at the site of the shootings and a faculty-sponsored memorial service this morning. Classes were canceled today for the 17,191 students at the university's main campus. Candles flickered in dormitory windows along the march route, which ended at a parking lot at the foot of Blanket Hill, where the killings occurred May 4, 1970. Nine students also were wounded. The shootings occurred during a demonstration protesting then-President Richard M. Nixon's decision to send U.S. troops into Cambodia during the Vietnam war and the presence of National Guard troops on the campus following a weekend of disturwide - $10,728 for under-65s and $5,-

I knew it was only a matter of time before men started to get testy, about women in pants. One of them a carpenter from Illinois, has gotten downright militant about it and submitted 77 signatures on a petition to "get our girls, wives, and ladies back into dresses again." Despite the fact he wants women in dresses for all the wrong reasons, I have to admit I'm bored to death with pants. At first I saw them as a lifesaver. They'd keep my legs from growing together. They'd give me freedom. They'd be a friend to my allergies: washing and ironing They'd be a firm statement for my equality and once and for all they'd liberate me from the contents of those Dressing up for me anymore was wearing a clean T-shirt. And I wasn't the only one. From toddlers to teenagers, to matrons to elderly women, all they ever wore were pants. When I thought about it. I hadn't seen my mother's legs since the Eisenhower administration.

It ocurred to me maybe we had gone too far. Suppose restaurants discriminated against us as they once did when we wore slacks? Maybe we couldn't be seated until we went home and put pants on.

I made a monumental decision yesterday. I went out and bought a dress... a floral wrap-around with a Vneck and soft collar.

THE WINE DRINKER

Dry wine makes sweet bargain

Copley News Service If you are in a quandary about what to have with fish or fowl because of the rapid price increase of white Burgundies from France and the premium Chardonnays from California, there are some alternatives: wines made from the Saubignon blanc grape or lower priced wines from the less popular areas of France.

Instead of going for a Pouilly Fuisse (made from Chardonnay) because it has a cute name you can pronounce, try a Macon Blanc or Macon Lugny from the Maconnais area of France. For $4 or so, instead of $8, you will have a wine with good varietal character, some style from the wine maker and microclimatic conditions and the proper dryness to make it a winner at dinner. One such wine in wide distribution is the 1976 Macon Blanc-Villages Jadot, from Louis Jadot, for about $4, depending upon state and local taxes and destination charges, among

For wines made from the Sauvignon Blanc grape, seek out the names of Sancerree, Quincy, Reuilly and Pouilly-sur-Loire, where the wine is known as Pouilly Fume (Fumay).

My husband is sure you will agree with him because you will know that sleeping on a hard surface is healthier. I say you will agree with me because a husband should be loyal to his wife. What do you say?-BRUISED IN GOLETA

DEAR BRUISED: I say it's "healthier" to sleep on a firm surface, but for those of us who are accustomed to sleeping in beds, the floor is too "firm" for comfort. Compromise. Get an extra-firm mattress (or a bed board for your husband's side of the bed) and sleep together full

YOU moved in.

When he announced for Governor, Attorney General John Hill said that he would oppose - and would veto - a state income tax or any other new tax bill. He has repeated that pledge many times since. Any one who says that Hill would support a state income tax is just trying to mislead the public.

As Attorney General, John Hill cleaned up political corruption in Duval County, sued the phone company to stop an increase in rates and worked for a national energy policy that would be fair to Texas.

As Governor, John Hill will use the state's budget surplus to reduce property taxes and to help pay more of the cost of our public schools. There will be no state income tax and no other new taxes if Hill is elected Governor.

New tax form hurts charity

WASHINGTON (AP) - Charity groups are worried that taxpayers' increasing use of the shorter income tax form and the standard deduction is resulting in a decline in charitable contributions.

Preliminary evidence indicates that thousands of taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions are giving substantially less to charity, according to Landrum R. Bolling, chairman of the Council on Foundations.

Bolling said one study showed that in all income brackets, married couples filing jointly who take the $3,200 standard deduction give less than half as much to charity as taxpayers with the same income who itemize their deductions.

The incentive for charitable giving disappears with use of the standard deduction, which lumps all deductions together without the need to itemize, Bolling said.

The House Ways and Means Committee has tentatively agreed to allow taxpayers who claim the standard deduction to claim for the first time a separate deduction for charitable contributions.

Charity is a multibillion-dollar business. In 1975, charitable agencies and foundations received more than $80 billion in donations, according to the Commission on Private Philanthropy and Public Needs. Volunteer services brought the total to well over

Three youths treated after car accident

Three youths received minor injuries Wednesday night when the car in which they were riding reportedly went into a skid, hit a yield sign, turned on to its side and slid across a vacant lot before coming to rest back on its wheels.

Treated and released at Midland Memorial Hospital were Bryan Hugh Meyer, 18, of the 2500 block of Maxwell Drive; John Randall Carnett, 19, of Route 1, and Michael Ray Rogers, 17, of the 3700 block of West Louisiana Avenue

Police said a vehicle driven by Meyer was southbound on Powell Street approaching a sharp curve. Meyer reportedly stepped on the brake pedal, and the car went into a skid. The vehicle skidded approximately 177 feet, turned sideways, jumped the curb and struck a yield sign, knocking it over, officers said. The car then turned on its side and continued sliding about 75 feet across a vacant lot, coming to rest back on its wheels, police said.

Candidate cites need for support

By LINDA HILL

An appeals court judge must have the support of trial judges, prosecutors and defense lawyers in order for his decisions to be respected, Marvin Teague, candidate for state Court of Criminal Appeals, Place 3, said in Midland Wednesday.

Teague, campaigning against incumbent W. C. Davis for the Democratic nomination to the post, said he, Teague, was voted most qualified by those participating in the State Bar of Texas poll.

"If you don't have the support of the judges or the prosecutors or the defense lawyers, you aren't going to have an effective court. If they don't honor opinions (from the court), they're not worth the paper they're written on," Teague said

Teague said the role of the Court of Criminal Appeals is "to decide what rules are going to govern the day-today workings of the trial court and then to decide whether the parties below played the game according to the rules.

He said his opponent has been "hammering away" at courts' dismissing cases on technicalities. However, Teague said, there is some question about what constitutes a technicality. For instance, in one case in which Davis was trial judge, the Court of Criminal Appeals ruled against Davis for sentencing a man to 16 years imprisonment when the maximum sentence was five years,

Teague said. One of the topics of interest to judges and lawyers involved in criminal law is the Speedy Trial Act, which goes into effect July 1. Teague said there are questions about its application. He said he does not believe personally that it will apply to cases pending before July. "I don't foresee any big problem," he said. "I've found in traveling around the state that if a person in fact wants a speedy trial, including a death penalty case, he'll get a speedy trial." Another problem facing the courts system is the problem defense lawyers in some cities have in finding out what kind of case the prosecution has against their clients, Teague said. He said there is a statute on the books giving defense attorneys the right to look at much of the prosecution's evidence, "but it's sort of like an insurance policy. The big print gives it to you and the little print takes it away." That means, he said, there is no alternative to the defense attorney but to "flood the courts with papers" seeking this "discovery." In that kind of situation, the appeals court could use "meaningful inter-pretation" to help the system work

Teague, 44, has a law degree from the University of Houston. He has been city attorney for Spring Valley and senior administrative assistant to the Court of Criminal Appeals. He currently is editor of Significant Decisions Report. Among the profes-sional groups in which he holds membership are the Houston and federal Bar associations, the Texas Trial

Nine seeking governor's office in two primaries

Editor's Note: Some of the quoted material in this story was excerpted from The Voters Guide published by the League of Women Voters of Texas Education Fund.

By KAY HORD

Unbeknowst to most people, there are not three, four or even five candidates in Saturday's primary for the governor race. There are nine — six running for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and three seeking the Republican nomination.

Running as Democratic candidates are Donald Beagle of Nederland, Dolph Briscoe of Uvalde, John Hill of Austin, Ray Allen Mayo of San Juan, Preston Smith of Lubbock and Mario C. Compean of San Antonio, running for the Raza Unida party.

Republican candidates are Clarence G. Thompson of Fort Worth, Ray Hutchison of Dallas and Bill Clements of Dallas.

All of the candidates agree that energy and the deregulation of oil and gas are important issues in the race. Other issues under scrutiny by the candidates include the state's criminal justice system and school finance, including property tax reform.

Briscoe, the incumbent, has served as the state's governor since 1973. He has twice served as chairman of the Southern Governors Conference, chaired the Interstate Oil Gompact Commission, served on the National Petroleum Council and the executive committee of the National Governors Conference.

Briscee has said a major portion of his program as governor is the improvement of educational quality.

"I am completely and unalterably opposed to a state income tax. The direction the state has been moving where school legislation is concerned is to pick up a larger share of the cost of school financing through existing sources of state revenue. I recommend ad valorem tax relief for the homeowner and family farmer," he

As for gas deregulation, Briscoe has been quoted as saying that the vast majority of people in Texas support deregulation and free enterprise.

"It is the free enterprise position in Texas that represents the majority thinking — not just in oil and gas but across the board," he said.

The major issue according to Beagle is education.

"The teachers of our land should be proud to be able to make our young minds program their computers so that the country will have intelligent people to keep our country free.

"They have been, or are being, destroyed by second income people, the law profession and the minority of people that believe in sex first, education last. Sex should be put back into the home and then the people could exercise that which they choose. Education, not sex, should be first on the minds of our young people," he

"I want to be a leader of the people of Texas and cause other States to be able to look down our way and respect our state for being an example of America."

Attorney General Hill claims to have been "the cutting edge" on every problem which has confronted state government during the past five years.

"Property taxes levied by Texas school districts have been increasing during the last four years at a rate twice the national average of property tax increases. Severe strains are placed on elderly citizens on fixed incomes, and the marketplace costprice squeeze is driving our family farmers off their land.

"We have more than 2,000 taxing authorities across the state. We could save millions in tax administration by modernizing this system," he said.

"Despite a court mandate to equalize funding for all school districts, we still have not resolved this issue. My experience in handling this problem in the courts has convinced me we can bring equality to education funding," Hill said.

Hill promises not to be "the puppet of the oil industry."

"You will recall I filed a lawsuit against all the major oil companies right after I took office which required them to pay the state an additional $50 million in royalties."

"I see no sense in being anti-oil, but I do believe in permitting free enterprise, not because the oil industries want that but because it is in the best interest of the state.

"I oppose mandatory federal allocation of our resources because it is bad for Texas. This doesn't mean that I'm not strongly committed to developing alternative energy sources. And we don't need to wait on Washington to show us the way. We can develop our solar and geothermal resources," he said.

Mayo's platform is the free enterprise system. "We're doing surprisingly well with this platform," he said.

"I am concerned with a strong free enterprise system for the state of Texas, as opposed to a social welfare order which panders insecurities for some and doomsday for others."

Mayo is executive president of Glen Bros., Inc., a nursery. He has founded and published three weekly newspapers in New York.

"Criminal justice, energy conservation, property tax reform, school finance and water planning are all important state concerns. For me or for any other candidate to express opinionated plans for them without a thorough knowledge of every detail would be inappropriate. If elected to the office of governor, I would call upon persons who are experts in each field to provide for me a means of comprehensive study. My responsibility to all people of Texas would be to meet each problem with moral decision," Mayo said.

Smith served for six years in the House of Representatives, six years in the Texas Senate, six years as Lieutenant Govenor and four years as governor.

"The two areas I would select as being critical to Texas would be criminal justice and school financing.

"The crime rate in our state has moved upward faster than ever before in the history of Texas during the past few years and there should be a higher priority on the tax dollar assigned to solutions to this problem. The crime problem can be resolved," he said.

"Insofar as financing of our schools is concerned, there is no better investment we can make with our tax dollar than in the youth of our state through good programs of education. If we do this, most of the other problems will be resolved," Smith said.

Compean served as manager, administrator and supervisor of various government funded programs. His work experience includes three years as counselor and adult basic education teacher, one year as a VISTA volunteer supervisor and three years as staff development manager for an agency that administrates several health programs serving low income residents of San Antonio.

"The area of energy conservation is will initiate programs and support legislation aimed at conserving energy.

As governor, I will also support vigorously any research and development programs that emphasize attitudinal change of all Texans in order that we make more efficient use of the energy sources available to us.

"Criminal justice in this state could more accurately be termed criminal injustice. The criminal justice system in this state is an injustice to the citizens, the taxpayers, and it is an injustice to the offender who it is supposed to be rehabilitating.

"In short, the criminal justice system is a failure. Major changes are needed to be made that address themselves to criminal justice. An equitable judicial system that provides for fair treatment under the law for all segments of the population has to be developed. Priorities should be aimed at developing crime prevention programs with emphasis placed on the juvenile offender," he said.

"However, these programs must allow community based organizations to have a major role in their development and administration."

Of the three Republican candidates, Clarence Thompson was unavailable for comment.

Clements established SEDCO, a drilling firm, in 1947. He served as chairman of the Southern Methodist University Board of Governors and Board of Trustees. In 1972, he was co-chairman of the Texas Republican Presidential Campaign. He also served as state finance chairman for George Bush's campaign and Dallas County finance chairman. He was Deputy Secretary of Defense for four years.

"Although it is a passive program, Texas must have comprehensive energy conservation program. Such a plan must concentrate on the reduction of energy consumption and enforcement of minimum thermal efficiency standards for new construction and minimum lighting standards for existing and new public buildings.

"We must first look at what the federal government does concerning the energy bill before determining state funding," he said.

"The problem regarding school finance is that the money now being spent for education is not being utilized properly. Texas allocated 47 percent of its budget toward financing education, yet our schools rank 38th in the nation.

"As Governor, I will appoint a committee composed of teachers, administrators and parents to study the problems relating to school finance and then act accordingly," Clements said.

"Another problem here concerns teacher's salaries. We can put huge sums of money into educational programs, but they will only be as good as the people implementing them. We must make salaries and benefits for teachers equal to those of other equally qualified state employees," he said.

Hutchison has served as an attorney for 19 years, a Texas House member in the Texas Constitutional Convention and as chairman of the Texas Republican Party.

"Energy conservation is a must if we are to survive as a nation, in the short term, without brownouts, layoffs and other disastrous economic and social consequences. As governor, I would immediately employ the Governor's Energy Advisory Council to plan and implement conservation efforts and instruct that they secure appropriate public participation in their planning activities.

"Conservation, however, will not meet the long-term energy needs of this nation. There must be increased production of oil and natural gas in a non-regulated market, increased utilization of coal or nuclear fuels and comprehensive technological development of solar, wind, geothermal and other alternative energy sources," Hutchison said.

"As a top priority, significantly related to school finance, I recommend a multiple-factor formula for school fund distribution, coupled with repeal of the 10-cent state property tax, which will reduce need for a state-level tax board," he said.

Five solar power posters due in state competition

Five area students will have their posters on solar power sent to Austin for state competition.

In conjunction with national observance of Sun Day on Wednesday, the Permian Basin Solar Energy Society held a poster contest Tuesday night at San Jacinto Junior High School, a spokesman for the society said.

Winners in the contest were Matt Wallace and Laura Rose, both of Andrews Middle School, and John Bess, Gerald Lewis and Susan Hodges, students at Goddard Junior High School in Midland.

Saturday, the society will schedule an exhibit of solar collectors, including a solar sauna and solar cooker. The display will be Saturday morning at Dellwood Plaza. A display relating to solar energy is being exhibited in Midland County Library, the spokesman said.

The Permian Basin Solar Energy Society is affiliated with the Texas, the American and the International Solar Energy Societies.

Mayor Ernest Angelo, also in conjunction with national observance, recently signed a proclamation declaring Wednesday Sun Day in Midland.

Sun Day, organized by a coalition of student, business, labor, environmental and community groups, was initiated to heighten citizen understanding of the potentials of solar energy sources and to provide information on how to use solar power now, the spokesman said.

Suspect charged in theft

NEW YORK (AP) — Authorities have charged a man with the theft of a diamond necklace valued at a $500,000 from the widow of industrialist Henry J. Kaiser.

Anthony Ferino, 43, of Lake Ronkonkoma, was arrested Tuesday night and charged with the theft that occurred in March, according to Detective Edward O'Con-

The necklace — a platinum chain bearing a 25carat, pearl-shaped diamond, framed with scores of other diamonds — was not recovered.

O'Connor also said police were looking for a second man in the case. The theft took place after 2 a.m. March 7, when Alyce Amey Chester Kaiser, 61, returned home from a 46th birthday celebration for the designer Halston.

Two men followed Mrs. Kaiser into the lobby of the posh apartment building near the United Nations. One held the doorman at gunpoint and the other demanded that Mrs. Kaiser hand over the necklace, without any demand for the other jewelry or cash.

Mrs. Kaiser's late husband built an empire that included steel and aluminum mills, shipbuilders, resorts and real estate, before his death in 1967. He left holdings valued at more than $4 million to his wife.

Referendum, initiative give Italian voter new clout

The Los Angeles Times

ROME - Through the referendum and the initiative, the people have acquired new power in Italian politics.

By LOUIS B. FLEMING from an even more liberal initiative proposal that will appear on the ballot

Nine initiatives have won approval since 1974, when the celebrated referendum on divorce de-Parliament is about to monstrated that the peoapprove a liberal abor- ple have more power

One result has been extraordinary constitutional confusion, which the constitutional court is trying to untangle. A decision is expected in the next two weeks.

'None of this is exactly what the constitution envisioned," an expert on constitutional law said the other day.

To a Californian accustomed to wholesale use of ballot propositions the Italian operation is insignificant. But in terms of nationwide balloting. Italy may be setting the world pace. For initia-> not local, provincial or regional but national. And, depending on what the constitutional court decides, Italians could be voting June 11 on issues as diverse as legal abortion, the authority of police, administration of mental institutions, public funds for political parties and controls on parliamentary investiga-

Italian laws governing initiatives are not like those in the United States. For example, there could never be a property tax initiative, such as the Jarvis property tax proposal facing California voters in

The Italian constitution of 1948, in making provision for referendum and initiative, excluded any dealing with taxes and government budgets, as well as any affecting international treaties or providing amnesties or pardons. Furthermore, questions raised in the initiative process here are tested for consitutionality before - not after the election.

Italy did not get around to implementing the constitutional provisions for referendum and initiative until 1970. Then the enabling legislation was enacted as part of a legislative package that permitted divorce in Italy for the first time.

Opponents of the divorce legislation forced the legislation through because they were confident that in a referentive questions here are dum the people would overturn the divorce law.

They went to the people four years later and got a surprise. The people voted 59 percent to 41 percent to keep the divorce law.

Many political leader, notably in the Christian Democratic Party, have never recovered from the shock of that decision. The very thought of a referendum gives them the shakes.

This fear accounts for the current parliamentary effort to head off most not all of the pending initiatives.

The parliamentay activity has focused interest on the question before the constitutional court. That centers on Article 39 of the 1970 legislation that established procedures for referendum and initiative. Under Article 39, the referendum or initiative is automatically canceled if, before the election, Parliament amends the legislation that is the object of the

In the meantime, Parliament is rushing ahead with work on legislation that woud serve, if Article 39 is upheld, to disqualify initiatives.

The Chamber of Deputies has passed and the Senate is nearing a vote on a bill to legalize abortion. It would remove almost all obstacles to abortion in the first three months of pregnancy and permit abortion in later months under specified circumstances with medical approval. It provides for public financing.

Sponsors of the initiative are not satisfied. Their initiative would simply remove abortion from the penal code thuslifting all restrictions.

The abortion initiative was the first of nine to win the required 500,000 signatures in the wave of petitions that followed the divorce referendum. It has been blocked from an actual vote for more than two years because of laws that bar initiatives at the time of regu-

Demand repeated

KUWAIT (AP) - Kuwait repeated Wednesday a demand for a crude oil price hike to offset revenue losses caused by the decline of the dollar.

In an interview in the May issue of the Kuwait National Oil Co. monthly magazine, Oil Minister Sheik Ali Khalifah al-Sabah said losses caused by the weakening dollar could be compensated for only by increasing oil prices.

"As it is impossible to ignore the dollar deterioration in foreign markets any longer, there is no way to recover some of the big losses except by fresh price hikes," he added. "All evidence indicates that measures taken so far to correct the dollar's position have been ineffective," he said. He said Kuwait has no objection to adopting a basket of currencies for calculating oil prices,, rather than leaving them tied to the dollar. The dollar issue will be discussed Saturday by the ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Taif, Saudi Arabia.

Plane sale will affect oil policy

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - Saudi Arabia, following up on remarks reportedly made by Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani, denied today that its oil policy and continued support of the dollar would be affected by congressional approval or disapproval of the F-15 warplanes deal.

In an interview with the Washingon Post, Yamani had been quoted as saying that his country's willingness to support the U.S. currency depends in some measure on the "special relationship" between the United States and Saudi Arabia. If Congress rejects the sale of 60 of the jet fighters to his country, he was quoted as saying, "We will have the feeling that you are not concerned with our security and you don't appreciate our friendship. The official Saudi Arabian radio, monitored here, said today Yamani had stressed in the interview that Saudi Arabia's policies on the dollar and oil production were based on "purely economic principles."

President announces bigger solar budget

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) - President Carter marked "Sun Day" on Wednesday by proposing increased federal spending for solar energy and promising to develop a new "national solar strategy.

In the first stop of a planned threeday Western trip, Carter visited a nine-month-old solar research facility

Before arriving, however, Carter sprang a surprise announcement to reporters while en route from Washington to Denver on Air Force One then repeated the announcement in his speech.

Carter said he has instructed the Department of Energy to shift $100 million in proposed spending in the next fiscal year from unspecified areas and into solar, wind, mini-hydroelectric and other so-called "renewable energy" projects.

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell told reporters aboard the presidential jet that Carter and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger had been "cooking up" the idea for some time but that Carter had wanted to save the announcement as a surprise. As originally drafted, the president's speech mentioned no precise figures on new spending goals for renewable energy projects.

Carter had noted in the prepared text, however, that his proposed spending for fiscal 1979 contains a 64 opment of solar power. The president also had planned to announce a new $14 million loan to the percent increase in money for devel-

Guideline needed

HOUSTON (AP) - The general manager of the Texas Deepwater Port Authority says the authority needs guidelines in efforts to obtain a license to build a state-owned crude oil terminal off the Texas coast.

Gerald Jackson of Houstonesaid Wednesday he hopes a meeting next week in Dallas with federal officials will simplify procedures. The Dallas meeting next Wednesday will be attended by representatives of the Department of Transportation, Justice Department, and Federal Trade Commission. The authority has hopes that a license authorized for the now defunct

Seadock Inc. can be transferred to the state agency with a minimum of change and delay. scoe to appoint a deepwater authority board in case Seadock collapsed was approved last year by the Texas Legislature. Seadock's plans to build a $700 million terminal 27 miles offshore from Freeport collapsed last year when Exxon, Mobil and Gulf withdrew from the consortium because of what they described as onerous license provisions backed by the Justice Department and the FTC. The three firms hde a combined 52 percent interest in the consortium. "We are plowing new ground in that a license for an offshore terminal has never been transferred," Jackson told the authority's board.

'We are not certain of the requirements. We need guidelines and directions. From the Dallas meeting, we will try to get directions for moving forward by amending the license without delays involving engineering changes."

Program gets boost

WASHINGTON (AP) - A proposed natural gas pricing compromise has picked up new support, a development that gives President Carter's beleagured energy program a boost.

A meeting was set for today so House and Senate negotiators could begin taking formal action on a tentative agreement that took more than five months to draft in closed-door

The compromise would free natural gas from federal price controls beginning Jan. 1, 1985.

NEW YORK (AP) - Gasoline inventories are down a bit as springtime driving increases, according to the latest weekly supply statistics released by the American Petroleum

For the week ended April 28, gasoline stocks fell to 252.9 million barrels from 255.6 million barrels a week earlier and were lower than the 255.7 million barrels on hand in the comparable week last year. Gasoline production in the latest daily from 6.6 million barrels daily in the previous week. Meanwhile, supplies of distillate oils, used primarily for home heating, were virtually unchanged and stood at 137.5 million barrels as compared with 137.6 million barrels a week earlier. Distillate production was down to

2.8 million barrels daily from 2.9 mil-and praised solar energy as a potential counterweight to rising oil prices.

Solar Energy Research Institute, a federally financed project operated for the Department of Energy by the private, non-profit Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City. "No cartel controls the sun," Carter said in an apparent reference to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74. "Its energy will not run out. It will not pollute our air or poison our waters. It is free from stench and smog. The sun's power needs only to be collected, stored and used.

"The question is no longer whether solar energy works," he added. "We know it works. The only question is how to cut costs so that solar power can be used more widely and set a cap on rising oil prices.'

Stowaway travels to West Coast on icebreaker

DALLAS (AP) - What do the U.S. Coast Guard and a traveling rock band have in common? The transportation of Lauren Kim

Roche, that's what. It all started when the 16-year-old, red-haired Miss Roche sat down last January to play a few hands of poker with some crew members of the U.S. Polar Star, the Coast Guard's biggest icebreaker.

The game took place in Miss Roche's hometown — Wellington, New Zealand, The Polar Star had been on an ice-breaking mission off Antarctica and was en route to Seattle for repair of a propellor.

Miss Roche decided the vessel would be a suitable means of transportation. "I just walked on," she said. "It wasn't that hard to get aboard the ship. No one asked questions. The ship is opened to the public when it lands, so I just took one bag aboard and put it in the turbine room.

Later, she left and returned with another bag, played some more poker and then took up residence in a fan space compartment beneath the ship's bridge. "It's so small no one ever bothered to look in there," Miss Roche said. "All there is in there is a bunch of pipes.

"I had a flashlight, but the batteries went out after two days (at sea)...I didn't have a radio. Sometimes I just talked to myself."

While Lauren was talking to herself, officers of the 400-foot ship received a radio report of a stowaway aboard.

Their search wasn't thorough enough to turn up their passenger, and that could be due to three crew members she said helped her during the 12,000 mile, 20-day cruise to Seat-

"They conducted a search of the ship and didn't find anything," said Lt. Dave Jones of the Coast Guard in Seattle. "They assumed on that much that it had been a rumor that someone had started and let it go at that. Obviously, they didn't look every-

Lauren left the Polar Star when it docked Feb. 9 in Seattle. She said she took a bus to Salem, Ore., where she stayed for a while with the family of a Polar Star crew member. From there, she went to San Francisco and stayed with relatives for a "I then hitchhiked from San Francisco to Long Beach and visited some Coast Guard friends of the men who were on the ship Glacier (another Coast Guard icebreaker)," she said. "I met them when their ship was docked in Wellington.

She said she then met members of Dr. Hook's Medicine Show, a rock band, and traveled to Arlington, Texasewith them. Lauren then figured she'd had enough.

She turned herself in to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas, where a judge said she should

Miss Roche said she'll leave sometime this week, after her father sends her air fare. "He's not really thrilled about sending me the money," she said. "But he's sending it. I really want to Tgo home. I'm pretty tired."

WASHINGTON - Sixteen states and the District of Columbia are continuing to finance all or almost all abortions for low-income women, despite the loss of federal matching funds for this purpose, according to a survey by the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

The survey, published in the Institute's magazine, Family Population Reporter, said the other states have imposed severe restrictions on free welfare abortions since the federal government cut off matching funds for most abortions.

For several years, low-income women eligible for federal-state Medicald benefits were able to obtain abortions for therapeutic and birth control purposes in all but a handful of states under Medicaid, the magazine said.

However, Congress in 1976 and 1977 voted restrictions on the use of federal funds to finance such abortions, which the Supreme Court ruled last year was within Congress' right. Since then, the magazine said, many states have changed their policies and cut back on funding for abortions that do not qualify for federal aid.

It gave this rundown:

-Sixteen states and the District of Columbia as of March 31 "were paying for all or most abortions," even those that had to be financed entirely by their own welfare medical funds and for which there was no federal reimbursement. The states are Maryland, West Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Colorado, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Alaska and Hawaii.

-Nine states provided free abortions only of the types eligible for federal aid. This means abortions to save the life of the woman, to avert severe and long-lasting physical health damage that would occur if the pregnancy continued, or to terminate pregnancies resulting from rape or incest. The nine: Montana, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Indiana and South

-Three provided medicaid abortions to welfare clients only to save the life of the woman or to terminate pregnancies resulting from rape or incest: New Mexico, Kansas and Min-

-Twenty-one states paid only if the woman's life was threatened: Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Missouri, Louisiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kentucky, Florida, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

(Although Virginia at the time of the institute survey financed abortions only to save a woman's life, a temporary court order subsequently directed the state to provide all "necessary medical threapeutic abor-

-The remaining state, Arizona, lacks a statewide Medicaid program, the institute said, but county welfare departments may provide abortion benefits if they chose.

Hand-held calculators 'mental cripples' as many parents fear. They university professor

Parents fear their children will not learn to multiply or add if they are brought up on calculators, but, in fact, students learn to compute faster and better, said George Immerzeel of the University of Northern

Immerzeel, who has studied the use of the calculator in the classroom, said students learn their multiplication tables by repeating them over and over until they form a picture in their minds. That picture is formed much faster by seeing it repeatedly on a calculator dial, rather than verbally repeating it, he said in an interview

Similarly, 7 plus 3 equals 10 becomes automatic in the mind after many repetitions. The end result can be achieved faster and with more interest for the student using a calculator rather than pencil and paper, said Immerzeel.

The calculator never will replace the smaller mental arithmetic computations," he said: "But how many people use pencil and paper to multiply two four-digit numbers these days?"

Teaching students pencil and paper math computation when the same students are surrounded in the home I and business world by calculators is unrealistic.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. - A long and complex investigation by the FBI into the financial affairs of certain California legislators has become absorbed with what lobbyists here call "the Howard Hughes connection."

Though not the top priority of the investigation, which is expected to result in indictments of at least a half-dozen present and former legislators, the trail of hundreds of thousands of dollars from the Hughes financial empire into the coffers of California politicians has intrigued and perplexed federal investigators.

Last week, as a special federal grand jury began sifting the results of the year-long investigation, federal sources told The Washington Post that information about the Hughes connection will be presented "well before the end" of the jury's 18-month

It is known that Hughes interests poured what one legislator called "a wheelbarrow of money" into a political system which has a high reputation for integrity. It is unclear what Hughes expected to buy for this, if anything. No known big-money Hughes bills have been placed before the California Legislature, though organizations formed by the late financier own hundreds of millions of dollars worth of businesses and property throughout the state that are affected by the zoning and planning decisions of local government.

Though the stated purpose of the investigation is "official corruption" in California, the inquiry has national

Already it has three times delayed announcement of the appointment of Los Angeles lawyer-banker Charles T. Manatt as national finance chairman of the Democratic Party. In an hour-long interview Manatt, who unofficially is performing the finance chairman's duties, acknowledged that the announcement had been scheduled and postponed but said he expected to be named when the Democratic National Committee meets June 9. Manatt said his name had been mentioned in connection with the investigation because of his long friendship with Donald Kent Brown, a $96. 000-a-year lobbyist who represents Hughes interests Summa Corp. and Hughes Airwest in Sacramento.

Brown-who capitalizes the "O because he was mistakenly arrested in a rape case involving another Don Brown - is a target of the investigation, according to federal sources. He was hired as Hughes' lobbyist in 1972 by Washington, D.C., publicist Robert Bennett, who until early this year worked for Summa Corp. "I know of no reason to believe Mr. Brown's going to be indicted." said Vigo (Chip) Neilsen, his attorney. "I do know that everybody thinks he's going to be indicted."

Stung by the investigation, which has reportedly cost him the lobbying business of Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio) and perhaps other clients, Brown refuses to discuss it with reporters. He recently hired a wellknown Sacramento criminal lawyer, Federal investigators long have been interested in the campaign money trail of Hughes, who gave huge sums to Richard Nixon and other presidential candidates. In 1975, former top aide Robert A. Maheu testified that Hughes often boasted that he could buy various politicians.

That same year a new campaign spending law in California outlawed the long-standing practice of lobbyists' contributions to political can-didates. For the previous year, Hughes filed a personal statement in which campaign donations of $105,550 were listed to "Donald Kent Brown Committee." Brown distributed the money to 88 candidates and political committees, usually in contributions

This largesse bothered some of the recipient legislators, though not so much that they refused it.

"I could never find out why he was donating the money," a Democratic legislator said. "There were no Hughes bills that I knew of before the legislature." Since Hughes' death in 1976, contributions have been made by the Hughes Organization Political Action Committee (HOPAC).

Manatt's name came up early in the investigation because of his friend-ship with Brown, who was involved with him in the chartering of two southern California banks. Over the years, Manatt said Brown referred between five and ten clients to him for representation in bank charters. This is no inconsiderable amount of business. Manatt has been known to charge as much as $25,000 merely for initial consulting services in bank charters. He is considered one of the top bank-charter attorneys in the state and the one with the best political connections.

Without apparent bitterness, Manatt discussed in detail what he said had become "a self-fulfilling prophe-cy" in the FBI investigation. He said FBI sources told him a month ago that he was not a target in the probe. Sacramento Bee reporter John Berthelsen's "conspiracy theory" that Hughes bought politicians in California had sparked the investigation, Manatt said, and his acknowledged friendship with Brown did the rest.

"You can't undo a relationship of 15 years," Manatt said in an interview in his Century City office suite. He ex-pressed confidence that he would be vindicated by the grand jury.

A similar expression of confidence came from another friend of Brown. Los Angeles political publicist Joe Cerrell, whose name has been mentioned frequently in the investigation.

Carrell, whose accounts include a former consultancy to the Hughes organization, said he had "nothing to hide" and would welcome any inquiry. Both Manatt and Cerrell said they had not been questioned by the FBI. But the FBI did talk to virtually every major lobbyist in Sacramento and to many legislators. More than a score of these lobbyists and legislators discussed the FBI interviews with The Washington Post on condition that their names not be used.

All the lobbyists and legislators said they had been questioned extensively about Donald Kent Brown. A number said they also were asked about Manatt and Cerrell, though in less detail.

The account painted by many legis-lators and lobbyists of the investigation is not a flattering one. The most recurring complaint: federal agents were ignorant of what was legal under California law.

For example, an FBI agent thought a legislator was admitting a crime when he freely acknowledged campaign contributions from corporations. These contributions are legal for state office holders although prohibited in federal campaigns.

The FBI has investigated under authority of the Rackettering-In-flunneed Corrupt Organizations (RICO) section of the Safe Streets Act of 1970, which makes commission of two or more state felonies involving the same enterprise a federal crime. In some cases this authorizes federal prosecution of crimes as much as 20 years old - beyond the state statute of limitations for the same offenses.

Woman racecar driver distinct in many ways

By BILL NACK

NEW YORK - Between a bite of danish and a sip of coffee, Shirley Muldowney stopped and thrust her right leg out beneath the breakfast table, her foot feathering the space as if upon the throttle of the winged, flamingo-plumed pterodactyl she af-fectionately calls her car.

"I drive an out-and-out racecar," Muldowney said. "It is the fastest racecar in the world. It is the neatest car to drive in the whole world. It has 2,000 horsepower. You sit on the line and crack the throttle a little and." -Muldowney smiled and shifted and looked at the ceiling — "and I love it. These are the muscle cars. They don't dog it down the backstretch or pull in for a pit stop. It's having a tiger by the tail. When the light comes down and you get the green and go, it's like driving a car on ice. You have to know what you're doing. You have to know these cars or they'll bitechew! It leaves the line with three-and-a-half 'G' forces. Ohhhh, it's a ride."

And oh, how she rides. Shirley (Cha-Cha) Muldowney, 37, is the most successful racing car driver in America. She is, in her way, the most accomplished female competing in any sport in America today. No human being, male or female, has ever raced faster. In that world where the beginning and the end is a quarter-mile strip of track, in that world of drag-racing dominated by men, she emerged last year as the national champion. Never in an American sport has a woman, competing against men, made such a mark.

She is an extraordinary woman, as tough and resilient as the 17-inch slicks on which her car rides. A mother at 17, she is a mother still today; her 20-year-old son John is a member of her crew. The publicity blurbs about her say that she is into needlepoint, is a gourmet cook, rides horses, and practices interior decorating, but these are mere window dressing on the fast and perilous world in which she really lives.

What she does for a living is this: She climbs into a supercharged, fla-mingo-color 1,400-pound machine, a weird-looking $35,000 needle-nose job with giant rubber tires on the rear and bicycle spokes on the front, revs the 2,000-horsepower engine and lets fly on the flick of the yellow-green light. Punching the peddle, she is almost airborne. Have you ever been around these machines? The whine of the engine is unearthly and strange. The ground shakes around it as it roars. The slicks spin, lifting plumes of smoke, and then grab the pavement. She is gone. In less than six seconds she races a quarter-mile, and by the time she stops the clock is racing at a speed of 250 mph. For those of us who use cars, this allows no reference point; the experience is one of another dimension, eerie and loud and sudden. At the end, she bellows parachutes, and they drag her to a stop.

Shirley Muldowney has had para-chutes stopping her for some time now, ever since she started serious drag-racing almost a decade ago. though one suspects she needed them long before that, when she was a teenager in Schenectady and fell in love with the sensation of speed. In those days, in the late 1950s, hot-rodding was a peripheral, outlaw lifestyle in upstate New York, and she was into it. "There were always girls around the guys," she recalled. "But they were around because there were guys. I liked guys, too, but it was the racing that really captured my interest, the drag-racing. I was notorious: 120 miles an hour past Nick's Diner in Schenectady." She laughed. "And with the police in hot pursuit. But it was fun for me. It was a challenge for me. I was a threat to the guys. They used to look at me and shake their heads: 'A girl' they would say."

"But we were very competitive," she said. "We were into serious racing. There was a little outlaw track in. Fonda, New York. It had no sanction. I don't think any of us were insured. The course was an eighth of a mile and I learned how to race there.

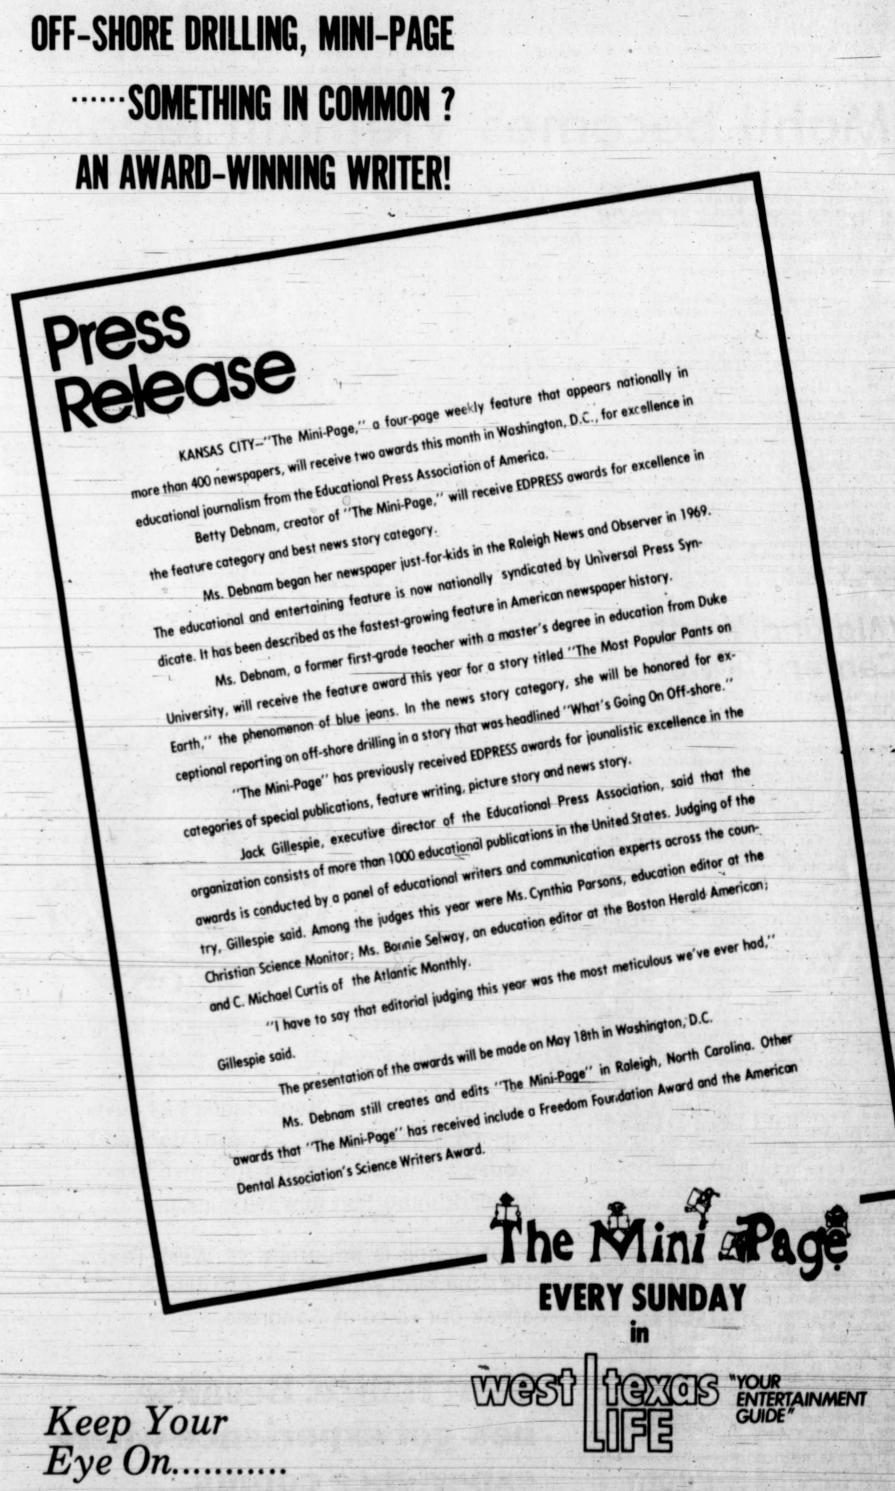

Her life since has been drag-racing on a larger and ever larger scale. Married, and with a child, she raced through the 1960s, supporting her habit as a dentist's receptionist, as a waitress and as a secretary at a newspaper. She was the daughter of a Teamster steward, a competitive and driving man, who encouraged her in racing. She raced seven Corvettes in the '60s - "all flavors, all vintages" then graduated to the bigtime dragsters in 1965. Don Long, the Frank Lloyd Wright of dragster architects, built a car for her in 1967. "It went 180 miles an hour, in 1967," Muldowney recalled. "I said, 'That's neat. Let's build a new one.' He built another one for me, a dual-engine, Chevrolet-powered Double A gasdragster. I ordered it, sent him measurements to California, and then went out there for a seat-fitting in it. He's quite the perfectionist. He seated me and said, 'Be careful, lady."' She always was.

"It was so massive an engine," she said. "Sixteen exhaust pipes, with two Chevrolet engines: 199 miles an hour. That's putting out some noise." She raced the car for three years, then got into racing Funny Cars, those with the engines up front. Four times she was almost burned to death in those fire traps. Once, driving a Funny Car, the engine exploded and fire enveloped the cockpit, burning her eyes shut and burning off her wheels. She was going 210 MPH at the time.

"I couldn't see where I was going," Muldowney said. "I managed to spin it out on the grass." Another time, with an engine exploding in her face, she was showered with oil, and leaped out of a burning car with her hands and helmet on fire.

But she survived. And turned from the Funny Cars to Top Fuel dragsters in 1973, of the kind she is driving now. It had wire wheels in the front and the engine behind, where all such engines belong. Her climb to the top of the thoroughbred racing of dragsters was sudden. She won her first major event in 1976, and last year was declared the champ. Only three people have ex-ceeded 250 miles an hour in a quarter-mile run, and Muldowney is one of them. Only one has done it three times, and the one is she.

Muldowney is at the top of her game, as sure of herself as an athlete can be. "I am good at what I do," she said. "I can adapt to anything. No matter if you've had a fight with your boyfriend, or it's 120 degrees in the firesuit, no one can screw with my mind when I'm on the starting line. I've done everyting I've wanted to do, and I feel so comfortable at it. Fear is not there. I know how good I am."

Mahli becomes Vietnam legacy

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press Correspondent George Esper covered the war in Vietnam for 10 years. He was in Saigon when the war ended three years ago and remained in the country for five weeks after South Vietnam surrendered.

His eyes were sad, those of a broken man. 'It's finished," the lieutenant colonel of the Saigon police said

The colonel walked 10 feet away from me to the front of a war memorial statue, fingering his pistol. raised his pistol and fired a shot into his head. He fell spreadeagled on his back, mortally wounded.

Three years ago, the war was finished. The guns fell silent across Vietnam.

But the memories still haunt many of us. Many Vietnamese came to the Associated Press bureau to beg us to intercede with U.S. officials for their evacuation or to take them with us when we fearing I might leave the country without her.

Most of our Vietnamese staff, apprehensive because of the impending takeover since they worked for an American agency, left to be with their families despite our efforts to calm them.

When the lone remaining teletype operator read the bulletin that I had handed him to transmit, reporting that North Vietnamese troops were in front of the Caravelle Hotel, he started to run from the room. Colleague Peter Arnett and I held him down until he cleared the bulletin. When we let him go, he disappeared out the door and didn't return for three days until it was clear there was no bloodbath. The day before the surrender, large groups of Vietnamese clawed their way up the 10-foot wall of the U.S. Embassy in desperate attempts to get aboard

Time has not healed the wounds of Earl and Maegene Pittman in Beallsville, Ohio. They lost their only son, Jack, 30, in the war. He was one of seven young men from the southern Ohio hamlet, all graduates of the same high school, who died in Vietnam. It was a high price for a town of little more than 400 people to pay.

Mrs. Pittman, 55, is still bitter.

"That's one thing you never forget about," she says. "He's on our minds all the time. Vietnam wasn't worth anybody's life. The way I feel about it, my boy gave his life for nothing. I'll never forget that Maggie Burnett is 48, her hair turned gray. She

Rebels nearing 5-4A baseball crown

Craig Van Horn slides across home plate with second run during fourth inning action Wednesday at the Lee diamond with Abilene High. Doug Schmidt (15) watches play as Eagle catcher John

By BOB DILLON

Robert E. Lee is nearing the District 5-4A baseball championship or at least a share of it.

Junior righthander Terry Willis handcuffed the Abilene Eagles here Wednesday afternoon in pitching the Rebels to a 2-0 victory at the Lee

While Willis was silencing the usually hard-hitting Eagles, second baseman Don Rasure was coming through with a clutch two-run single in the fourth inning.

It was quite a pitching duel between Willis and Abilene's Gary Green who also only gave up three hits during the key District 5-4A game.

Lee now shares first place with Big Spring with a 5-1 loop record and Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebs can move on into the Class AAAA state playoffs with a victory Saturday against the Midland High Bulldogs at the Memorial Stadium diamond.

The reason that Lee can move into the playoffs is because the Rebs tied Abilene for the first half crown and any team that ties for one half and wins the other, automatically moves into the playoffs.

Should Lee lose to Midland Saturday and Big Spring beat San Angelo. then the Steers would be the second half winner and the Rebs would have to square off with Abilene to determine the first half champions since they both wound up 5-2 to share the first half crown.

The District 5-4A champions will take on the District 6-4A kings which most likely will be the Wichita Falls Covotes.

The Coyotes take a 5-0 loop record into Friday's game with cross-town rival Rider which is 4-0 and a victory there would move them into the bidistrict playoffs against the 5-4A represenative.

Rider is 4-0 and had its game with Eulus Trinity rained out Tuesday. If Rider should knock off Wichita Falls High, then it would make up the Trinity game on Saturday.

Rider, Wichita Falls and Denton tied for the first half title with 4-2 marks, but Denton is out of the title picture now since the two Wichita Falls schools are on top.

Mark Pierce, Eagle leadoff hitter, walked, but teammate David Little lined a shot at shortstop Steve Pitts who gloved the liner and fired to Rasure at second for the twin killing.

Willis threw a no-hitter for four and two-thirds innings before giving up a base hit to shortstop David Wilson.

Lee got a base runner as far as second in the second inning, but failed to score off Green. Richard Josefy walked and stole second with one out, but Rasure and Doug Schmidt grounded out to end the inning

The Eagles had dupliacted the Rebs in the top of the inning when Terry Austin was safe on an error by Craig Van Horn at third, stole second, but Willis bore down to get Cowboy Hester on a grounder to short, Mark Edwards popped out to second and Mike Ogden also popped up to Schmidt at first.

Todd Clements ruined Green's bid for a no-hitter in the bottom of the fourth inning by singling up the mid-dle. Clay Calhoun moved him down to second and Van Horn worked Green for a walk.

JOSEFY GROUNDED out to short with both runners moving into scoring position and Rasure came through with his base hit, scoring both runs. Abilene threatened in the top of the fifth when after one was out. Edwards walked and Ogden fanned, but Wilson singled for the Warbirds' first hit of the game. The threat ended, however, when John Ritter struck out. Willis opened the bottom of the inning with a single and was moved down to second on a sacrifice by Pitts. Pat Moore popped out nand Clements grounded to Wilson at short to end the Pitts made a great defensive play to start off the top of the sixth inning when he took a base hit away from Pierce by leaping into the air to glove the looping liner at short.

Abilene kept the Lee fans on the edge of their seats in the seventh inning when it got base runners to second and third without scoring.

Austin led off the frame with a hot liner into left amd Hester forced him at second on a grounder to Pitts, but Edwards also singled and both runners advanced on a passed ball by Calhoun. Willis got a big out when he struck out Ogden and the game ended when Calhoun camped under a high pop fly off the bat of Wilson.

With the victory, Lee takes a 20-8 record into the big game with the Bulldogs Saturday while Abilene is now 12-11 on the year and 3-3 in the second half of the race as it closes out the regular season against Cooper

DIAMOND DUST: Calhoun made an important throw at second base to erase Pierce who was attempting to steal second...Steve Pitts has played exceptionally well in all league games on defense after suffering mis-eries during the Tournament of-Champions back in March in Cubs Stadium...Should Lee win Saturday and move into the state playoffs, it will be the Rebels' first time there since 1975 when they beat Wichita Falls Rider in two straight before bowing to eventual state champion Duncanville, 9-7. The other two regional playoff games were rained out in a frustrating situation.

Expos, Grimsley batter Astros, 10-3

By The Associated Press

The Montreal Expos have never been to the World Series, but Ross Grimsley has - and he'd like to go

Grimsley, who spent three years with Cincinnati and four with Baltimore before signing with the Expos as a free agent last winter, raised his record to 5-0 Wednesday night by scattering 11 hits as Montreal clobbered the Houston Astros 10-3.

The victory, in chilly 40-degree weather in Montreal, boosted the Expos into first place in the National League East with a 12-8 record.

"Getting into first place — that's the biggest thing this year," said Grimsley, a 28-year-old left-hander who was voted the National League's Pitcher of the Month for April. "Our

Bulldogs try Cooper today in 5-4A play

ABILENE - Coach Larry Peel's Midland High Bulldogs take on the Abilene Cooper Cougars in a makeup game today in District 5-4A baseball. Odessa Permian and San Angelo Central also have makeup contest today in San Angelo.

Midland takes an 11-14 season record to Abilene while the Cougars stand 11-8. Cooper is 3-2 in the race and has an outside chance of tying for the second half if it wins today and Saturday, but Midland Lee, co-leader with Big Spring, would have to lose to Midland Saturday for Cooper to tie and Big Spring would also have to lose to San Angelo Saturday for that to Lee and Big Spring are currently 5-1

The other four starters on Texas' 26-5 team - Tyrone Branyan, Ron Baxter, Jim Krivacs and Gary Goodner — also received awards.

It was also announced that gross receipts from basketball in the new 16,200-seat Super Drum totaled approximately $315,000, compared with $48,000-$49,000 the year before in Gregory Gym.

Pineda loses life during "race accident

BALTIMORE (AP) - Robert Pineda has become the second member of his family to die in a tragic racetrack accident. The 25-year-old jockey was killed Wednesday in a four-horse spill at Pimlico Race Course - three years after his brother died in a starting gate accident in California. He was the first jockey to be killed in action at Pimlico since the death of Bernard Hanford, who died of a fractured skull 45 years ago today. Pineda's 30-year-old brother, Alvaro, was killed at Santa Anita in 1975 when he was crushed to death in a starting gate accident. A third brother, George,

Hubert "Sonny" Hine. Pineda began riding Hine's mounts last year when he arrived in Maryland after competing at Santa Anita. Jockey James Thornton, 37, was listed in serious condition today at Sinai Hospital with a fractured vertebrae of the neck and chest injuries Rudy Turcotte, 28, the brother of well-known jockey Ron Turcotte, was listed in fair condition with a fractured collarbone, according to a hospital spokes-year-old mare went down after her foreleg snapped below the knee. Easy Edith, who was vying for the lead at the turn for the homestretch, was destroyed. Jimmy Thornton was the closest to me," Kratz continued. "I went over to him and he said he felt paralyzed - couldn't move his legs. But he was

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — You've heard that old line about the player who performed so well he did everything but sell tickets. Well, the Philadelphia 76ers' Steve Mix did it all Wednesday night, including getting into the ticket act.

Mix, who substitutes for Julius "Dr. J." Erving or George McGinnis, came in and collected 22 points, grabbed six rebounds, handed out six assists and made two steals in a 110-104 victory for Philadelphia over the Washington Bullets.

The triumph evened the National Basketball Association best-of-sevengame Eastern final playoff series at one win each. The third and fourth games are at the Bullets' Landover, Md., home court Friday and Sunday. Mix thanked the sellout crowd of 18,276 for coming out.

"I know the price of tickets is high," said Mix, "but we thank you, and we'll come back here next week with at least one victory in Landover. We appreciate your support. Please come back."

Mix, of course, didn't forge the 76ers' first win of the series by himself. Doug Collins led the scoring with 28, and Erving contributed 22 points, 11 rebounds and four assists, Henry

Bibby handed out nine assists. And even though Washington played without Wes Unseld, a tower of strength on the boards, the Bullets fought the favored Sixers to a stand-still in the first half, and kept bounc-ing back after falling behind early in the third quarter. Unseld is sidelined with an injured ankle.

The Bullets also could get just 18 minutes from Kevin Grevey, a 26point scorer in the opener here Sun-day, who injured a muscle in his neck getting out of a shower at practice Tuesday. Grevey scored eight. Gre-vey took himself out of the game in the third quarter when the injury erupted on a 16-4 spurt to lead 20-16, and held on for a 28-26 advantage after one period. Washington rallied through the first seven minutes of the second period, outscoring Philadel-phia 21-9, and twice built 10 point margins. But the Sixers snapped back to trail only 54-52 at halftime

Philadelphia surged 12-1 at the start of the third period, with Erving scor-ing seven and Collins two in the quick second half getaway. The Bullets never caught up although three times they rallied to within one. They fell behind 84-76 after three quarters on a 14-7 Philadelphia spurt in the last five minutes of the period.

In the fourth quarter, the 76ers built their margin to 13, at 95-82, and 98-85 with 5: 48 left in the game. Washington kept pecking away, never getting closer than the final six point margin. Mix, of course, was extremely pleased with himself. "I played 20 minutes in the second half," said the forward who was a starter and an All-Star before the 76ers acquired McGinnis or Erving. "Basically, 20 minutes is a whole ball game for me. I'm glad Billy (Coach Billy Cunningham) had confidence in me. I thought I was doing the job, too.

I was glad to see he stuck with me."
Mix, who scored 15 of his points and got five of his rebounds and two of his steals in the second half, said it was a very physical game.

"I'll tell you I'm doing the best I can physically short of beating them down with a pole," Mix said. "It was a must game for us. We couldn't go down there (Landover) down 0-2. We had to win at least one game at home."

Mix said he expected the same physical tempo for the rest of the

The Bucks rarely got a second shot at the basket, especially in the first half when Denver built up a 10-point lead. And, in the closing minutes, it was the Nuggets, who don't like to run as much as the Bucks, who cleared the boards quickly and started two key fast breaks to clinch the triumph.

Rookie Anthony Roberts scored on both breaks, hitting a stuff shot with 2:15 remaining for a 110-104 lead. Seconds later, he gathered in Bobby Jones' long lead pass and hit the layup, adding a free throw after he was fouled.

It put the Nuggets ahead by nine points with 1:56 left.

The Bucks staged a last-gasp rally, getting a three-point play from Brian Winters, a free throw from Quinn Buckner and another basket from Winters to pull within 113-110 with 32 seconds on the clock.

But a free throw by Bobby Wilkerson and two by Jones kept the Bucks at bay.

The fourth-quarter rally by Milwaukee, who trailed by as much as 16 points early in the period, was reminiscent of Game 5 of the series here, when the Bucks came from behind to win 117-112.

'You've got to give Don Nelson and that team a lot of credit," said Denver Coach Larry Brown. "They never quit. They played within themselves and they made some unbelievable shots. This was one heck of a series,

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) A rainy, blustery weekend that could skyrocket scores is predicted for the 68 entrants in today's opening round of the third annual Women's International Golf Tournament.

The 59 pros and nine amateurs face a tough enough time with the Devil's Elbow course at Moss Creek Plantation without having to battle the elements. The lagoon-laden layout is playing a tricky 6,100 yards for the tournament and is susceptible to shifting sea winds that can change from hole to hole.

If the foul weather prediction holds up, the best bet is that one or two strokes off the 36-36-72 par for the full 72 holes will be enough to take the winner's $12,000 share of the $80,000

The tournament record of 281, 7 under par, is shared by both previous champions, Sally Little of South Africa and Sandra Palmer. They are in a field that also includes every other winner of Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments in 1977 and thus far in 1978, with the exception of current LPGA champion Chako Higuchi. The list includes four LPGA Hall of Famers, veterans Patty Berg, Carol Mann, Kathy Whitworth and Mickey Wright.

But two of the tour's youngest players, Nancy Lopez and Hollis Stacey, are considered top contenders to conquer Devil's Elbow this year. The 21-year-old Lopez is this year's leading money-winner with $54,756 and is the only pro to have won two 1978 tournaments. She had consecutive victories in the Bent Tree and Sunstar classics but did not enter last

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) - Campy Russell, shunning the current trend in pro sports, decided not to take part in an auction for his services. The veteran National Basketball Association forward Wednesday signed a multi-year contract with the Cleveland Cavaliers, thereby passing the opportunity to shop around as a free agent. Bill Fitch, Cleveland's coach and general manager, said there never was any question the four-year veteran would remain with the Cavaliers, although Russell gained his free agency when Cleveland's season ended.

Russell, a 6-foot-7, University of Michigan product, averaged 19.4 points a game during the past season despite a lingering case of flu and chest congestion that hampered him from midseason on.

"Campy is a very important part of our basketball team and a very important part of our future," Fitch said. "This is the first positive step we've taken toward that future. There wasn't ever any doubt in my mind that Campy would remain here.

"He signed a good contract and all parties are happy. I'll only say it's for more than one year." He reportedly signed for at least three years with a salary ranging from $200,000 to $250,000 a season. Asked why he didn't test the free agent market to see what other teams felt he was worth, Russell smiled and said, "I was very curious, that's a very natural thing, but I'm really happy with Cleveland. I know the system, the players, the coaches - I'm comfortable here. I never really made any contact with any other team.' His agent, John Lizzo, said, "This was an easy contract to negotiate. Campy believes he can play in Cleveland on a championship ball club and he has goals and a certain allegiance to the fans who pay his salary.

Fitch said, "He wanted to stay in Cleveland and we wanted him badly enough to pay him what he needed to stay. The best part of Campy being here is we've taken care of our own.

"He has a great rapport with the other players and he knows the grass is not necessarily greener on the other side. He also knows I'm crazy, but there might be another guy out there with a whistle who's even crazier than I am," he laughed.

In a more serious moment, Fitch said he rates Russell "somewhere between No. 1 and No. 5 at his position. We wanted to keep our front line together and we've accomplished that today.

The Cavaliers roared into the playoffs with a late-season surge after moving Jim Chones from center to power forward, giving Elmore Smith the starting job at center and getting Russell reasonably Cleveland was eliminated from the playoffs by the New York Knicks after just two games, but Russell led the Cavaliers with a 27.5 scoring average and eight rebounds a game.

NEW YORK (AP) - The head of the Major League Baseball Players Association has denied that his union's records were the basis for a story, in which the salaries of the Philadelphia Phillies were revealed.

The story - appearing April 3 in the Wilmington Evening Journal and written by its sports editor, Hal Bodley - said the information was obtained from the records of the Players Association. The story was then picked up by The Associated Press.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players Association, in a letter to the Phillies' players, called that claim "as phoney as a three-dollar

In the letter, Miller contended that the union "has no such 'records." The union does not have 1978 contract information and won't get it until September of this year, he said. What it has is "Joint Exhibit 1," a listing of all 1977 salaries. One copy of Joint Exhibit 1 went to the union, with one also going to each of the 26 general managers, one to each league president, one to the commissioner and one to each of the 12 owners on the Committee on Player Relations.

But Miller pointed out that Bodley's article contained some data that wasn't in the joint exhibit and was not known by the Players Association like Tim McCarver's salary for 1978 and 1979; Randy Lerch's contracts for 1978 and 1979; Warren Brusstar's contracts beyond 1977, and a special covenant that appeared in Jim Kaat's

Miller alleges that the management of the Phillies, which, he said, had access to all the information appearing in the story, leaked the salary data to the Evening Journal. "Apparently the president who was almost impeached did not have a patent on the use of dirty tricks," Miller wrote in his April 27 letter to the Philadelphia players.

In a Philadelphia Daily News story, dated April 11, Philadelphia owner Ruly Carpenter expressed his concern that the players' salaries had been disclosed.

"I am mad as hell that these figures were so easily available and obviously came from sources within the Players Association," Carpenter is quoted

"Carpenter knows nothing of the sort and, by a copy of this letter, he is thereby challenged to put up or shut up," Miller's letter to the Phillies

The purpose of pinning the source on the union, Miller said, was "to create disruption within the Players

Miller's interest in disproving that the Players Association is the source of the story obviously is that the players would think the union was disclosing confidential salary infor-

Bodley, however, says that the information for his story came indirectly from the union office.

"The News-Journal's source assures us that the information printed in the column came from Major League Baseball Players Association records," Bodley told the AP. "We did not obtain the information directly from Miller's office but we have been assured that that's where it originat-

NEW YORK (AP) - Attorneys for Roy L.M. Boe, the embattled owner of basketball's New Jersey Nets and hockey's New York Islanders, are "preparing a detailed reponse to all charges" that he diverted $3.5 million of the Islanders' funds to himself or

The allegation was part of a $10 million damage suit brought against Boe by Thomas J. Thornton, a limited partner in the National Hockey League franchise

The matter has been adjourned for four weeks. The hockey team's financial records have been subpoenaed for examination as part of the action filed in Supreme Court in Mineola,

"Mr. Thornton's interest in the partnership, on behalf of which he allegedly complains, amounts to 2,25 percent. None of the other partners, representing 97.75 percent of the partnership, have (sic) joined in Mr. Thornton's complaint," said Boe through a prepared statement.

"I am making arrangements to have debts to Nassau Sports (the partnership which owns the Islanders) repaid by the Nets to the extent possible. No monies have ever been diverted to me personally, and no monies have been loaned to the Nets since prior to Nov. 1977," the statement continued.

The action also claimed that Boe concealed financial information from the other partners and called on them for additional cash investments to "cover up" the cash drain. Boe also denied that charge.

Boe agreed to pay $3.2 million to the National Basketball Association in 1976 as an entry fee for his then-American Basketball Association franchise, which was one of four admitted to the NBA. He also assumed a $4 million charge due the New York Knicks for territorial rights infringe-

But $200,000 still is due the NBA and $3.2 million remains due the Knicks. If the Nets remain in default of their payments to the NBA, the financial obligation will fall on the pursestrings of the other three teams which joined from the ABA - Indiana, Denver and San Antonio

Thursday's editions of the New York Times reported, meanwhile, that Boe has fallen two years behind in payments due to 14 NHL teams on his $6 million entry fee. The Islanders owe each of those clubs more than $68,000, and the situation has so concerned the league that it has appointed counsel Gil Stein to work out a payment schedule.

Added to those difficulties were the bouncing paychecks, worth about $12,-000, issued to three current and former Nets players.

In the recent past, Boe also has been sued by the Knicks, for their money; a cable television company; Nassau Coliseum, for his transferral of the Nets franchise from that arena to Piscataway, N.J., Tand others.

Neither team expects a fourgame Boston sweep as in 1977 when the two teams met in the NHL semifinals.

"I think it will be a long series. At least I hope so," said Philadelphia's Bobby Clarke, who called himself the goat of game No. 1.

Clarke blamed himself for losing the overtime faceoff that led to Rick Middleton's sudden death winner after 1:43. It was Clarke's thirdperiod goal, however, that sent the

Sipin hits homer

TOKYO (AP) - Former U.S. major leaguer Johnny Sipin hit a two-run homer, his fourth home run in one week, as the Yomiuri Giants beat the Hiroshima Toyo Carp 6-4 Wednesday in Japanese baseball action.

Middleton, who won the opener a year ago in overtime, predicted the next games will be "a lot faster, with a lot harder skating and harder hitting. As for his success against the Flyers in playoff action, Middleton had a one word explanation: "Luck."

Cherry threatened his Bruins, as if they had lost. We'd better be ready to play better the next game or I'll know the reason why," said the fiery coach. "We don't look like we're in shape.' Shero was calm in contrast to Cherry.

"When you lose a game, showing displeasure isn't going to help," he said. "I've got to encourage them

Boston outshot Philadelphia 25-23 in the opener but Cherry credited goalie Gerry Cheevers with keeping Boston alive until the overtime. His only other praise, despite the victory, was for Jean Ratelle, who scored a firstperiod goal.

Shero countered that "I thought it was a pretty good game. We played well, but we have to play better. The goalies both are good. They've proven they're the best in the w rld, or close to it, for 10 years."

Both teams may still be rusty after long lavoffs.

Boston swept past Chicago in the quarter-finals, then waited for 10 days before the opener with Philadelphia. The Flyers waited a week after eliminating Buffalo in five games.

"I expect a better game from both teams next time," said Cherry.

The series moves to Philadelphia on Sunday and the following Tuesday.

loses

NEW YORK (AP) - News of the sharpest rise in wholesale prices inmore than three years pinned the stock market with another broad loss today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 11.35 on Wednesday, fell another 8.49 to 820.34. Declines outnumbered advances by close to a 4-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues

Trading remained heavy. Early today the government reported that wholesale prices of finished goods-the next-tolast link in the distribution chain before merchandise is priced for retail sale-jumped 1.3 percent in April. It marked the biggest monthly increase in that measure of inflationary pressures in more than three vears.

Analysts also said the market's declines of the past two days seemed to have convinced many traders that the spring rally that set trading-volume records last month had run its course American Telephone & Telegraph, the most active NYSE issue, dropped 1/2 to 6214. A 200,000-share block traded at 6134.

Other actively traded blue chips included General Motors, off 1/4 at 64%; Eastman-Kodak, down 34 at 511/8, and Exxon, % lower at

The Big Board's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .43 to 53.29. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .42 at 137.65.

Volume on the NYSE reached 16.21 million shares by noontime, up from 15.40 million at the same point Wednesday.

Stock Soviet chief's market West German West German visit begins

By MICHAEL GETLER The Washington Post

BONN, West Germany - The long-delayed visit of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to West Germany begins Thursday, with intensive Western interest focused on the ailing health of the Soviet chief and on his attitudes toward the ailing state of East-West

Though Bonn and Moscow have many longstanding issues on their agenda, including trade and the security of West Berlin. Brezhnev's decision to visit here now - nearly four years after Bonn's invitation and after repeated Soviet postponements has given this trip potentially far wider political significance. The 71-year-old Soviet president comes here just before two key meetings this month of the North Atlantic Alliance in Brussels and Washington and a special session on disarmament of the United Nations in New York

Perhaps more importantly, he comes during a period in which, over the past year or so, both Soviet and West German relations with the Carter administration have deteriorated and while some confusion lingers within the Western alliance about U.S. defense, economic and nuclear export policies.

This has led to some concern, as it did last summer when Brezhnev visited Paris, that the Soviets may be trying to take advantage of the situation and drive a wedge between the United States and its NATO partners, especially the West Germans who are the most poweful economic and military ally in Western

"The confusion in the alliance gives Brezhnev the maximum potential for disturbance," the respected Swiss newspaper Neue Zuercher Zeitung cautioned this week, "by showering the Western public with protestations of peace and creating doubt about the need for intensified defense efforts, while the Soviet arms machinery is in full swing.

But the Soviets, as one top West German official put it, "are not illusionists. They know it is not possible to split the United States and West Germany, and if they tried openly it would be counter-productive."

Brezhnev was last here in 1973, when Willy Brandt was chancellor and when Bonn and Moscow, in the years just before the visit, had concluded a major round of dramatic contacts and treaties that formed the cornerstone of Brandt's efforts to reach out to Eastern Europe and heal the wounds of World War

As Brezhnev begins his four days of talks here with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other top officials, however, the Soviet leader is clearly in poor health. Among top German experts, the view is that Brezhnev, as one put it, "is no longer in absolute command." that Soviet leadership is "in a period of transition with at least some measure of collective leadership.

Some specialists feel the visit, aside from diplomatic and economic reasons, "is very much a matter of health." In this view, the visit is meant to portray a healthy Brezhnev, still in command, able to carry out face-to-face diplomacy and travel. It is a message presumably meant for both the White House and the Politburo.

FURTHERMORE, the trip here has been put off so often that it is also surmised by specialists here that the Soviet leader may feel this was the last chance, before the end of the Brezhnev era, to shore-up the policy toward the West that he agreed to and that has always had some internal critics in the Soviet heirar-

Brezhnev's biggest gamble perhaps was to allow a growing Soviet economic dependence on Western, and especially West German, industrial know-how; technology and credit. Brezhnev's image as a healthy man has already been dented in schedule changes here meant to relieve the strain on him. A proposed visit to the Ruhr industrial area has been dropped as have meetings with several industrialists. A planned press conference now is likely only to be a statement to the press. "They are simply letting as few people as possible see him up close. one diplomat said, while cautioning that Brezhnev is unpredictable and may change plans on the spot.

In comparison to the burst of treaties that normalized relations between Bonn and Moscow in the early 1970s, diplomatic relations between the two leading European powers have been generally stagnant in recent years. Further agreements initiated in 1973 on cultural, scientific and legal issues have never been ratified due to continued dispute over West German demands that they should also cover

Trade, however, between the two countries has been booming. Last year, total trade totaled some $5 billion and West Germany is now Moscow's biggest trading partner in the West. GERMAN eypogts to Russia, however, dominate that trade, and the Soviets, saddled with huge debts to the West, are trying to cut their deficits and place more emphasis on "barter deals" rather than paying with more Western credit.

German industrial leader Otto Wolff Von Amerongen this week cautioned that there are limits to such compensation deals and suggests increased Soviet deliveries of oil and uranium as possible future offsets.

The prospect of German purchases of uranium from the Soviets or of using Soviet enriched uranium processing facilities, though not now contemplated by Schmidt's government, is nevertheless being seen in Europe as one possible counter to new U.S. nuclear export laws.

Through no major new diplomatic agreements are expected to be signed here, a new long-term economic cooperation plan will be signed which officials believe will help Brezhnev to bolster his case at home.

Though both the Soviets and Germans have placed emphasis on this visit as a step toward improving the troubled status of detente, the Soviets have put special emphasis on the economic aspects. The official Soviet press has described the visit as the extent of the year.

The Germans, however, will stress the need for more positive Soviet steps in the disarmement field, especially after President Carter's decision to defer production of neutron weapons.

Chancellor Schmidt is concerned over the Soviet arms build-up and also over stagnant relations with East Germany, which is totally under Soviet policy domination

Thus, a successful Brezhnev visit here could open the way for a Schmidt meeting with East German Communist chief Erich Honecker this fall and for easing tensions between the divided Germanys.

There are also still almost two million ethnic Germans in the Soviet Union and another million scattered elsewhere in the East. The Germans would like to get back those who want to come, and keep open the gates to travel.

Though there are numerous reports of more wanting to get out than are being allowed to leave, the number of ethnic Germans being allowed to leave Russia has been running at record rates of about 10,000 a year for the past 16 months, and Bonn would like to increase that.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission banned domestic sale of garments treated with Tris, a flameretardant, a year ago after the Enviornmental Defene Fund filed a petition to the commission warning of the carcinogenic nature of the substance.

Last October, after considrable debate, the CPSC voted that it did not have jurisdiciton to ban the export of the garments in question.

ent weeks, a majority of the five-person commisson has indicated plans to change that policy, and attempt to ban overseas sales as well. Congressman Henry Waxman, D-Calif., said Tuesday he plans to introduce legislation Wednesday that

He said his firm, which is family owned, was hit particularly hard by the ban because "all we sell is children's sleepwear.'

Bates said he was "lucky to sell the stuff when I did," because after a news story last Sunday said the CPSC would likely vote for an export ban on May 11, "everybody began scurrying to sell the stuff. And if I still had them, I would be scurrying, too.'

Bates said he made sure that all of his garments were shipped overseas. "We watched the containers be sealed, and we watched the boats sail." He said he would not allow any of the clothing to be sold to countries even bordering the United States.

Chile moving dramatically in human rights area

By DAVID F. BELNAP The Los Angeles Times

SANTIAGO, Chile - This country, which was ostracized by much of the world as a result of repressive measures imposed after the military takeover of 1973, has recently taken dramatic steps forward in the area of human rights.

Arrests in Chile have declined, as have unexplained disappearances. according to authoritative sources outside the government. One Roman Catholic priest, described the improvement as both "quantitative and qualitative.'

As recently as two years ago, the United Nations, the Organization of American States and a number of governments, among them the United States, were denouncing Chile's military regime for "flagrant violations of human rights," including "institutionalized torture." Most critics agree that 1975 was the worst year of Chilean offenses.

"That was the year that the gross. systematic violation of the person became institutionalized, and 1976 wasn't much better," a Latin American diplomatic observer said. "That has now come to an

Now the organizations that monitor human rights developments in Chile agree that the situation has improved dramatically.

"Things are changing." a nonchurch source said, "and as long as things change, there will be life. There is much more freedom of opinion now. You see things in the newspapers you could not imagine would be printed two years ago.

"There is no fear of speaking out, like there was two years ago. People in the street talk freely about economic problems and other

The Rev. Christian Precht, the collective bargaining by labor and the solidarity vicar for Chile's right to strike, freedom of Catholic bishops, said in an interview, 'We hope this policy will be strengthened, and we must continue in search of total justice."

The "justice" that the vicariate and other human rights groups seek falls into three general areas:

-Basic human rights. This is the area in which most progress has been achieved, but still unresolved is the disappearance of about 600 people since Sept. 11, 1973, when the military overthrew the Marxist government of Salvador Allende.

-Civil rights, including the restoration of political activity.

assembly and unrestrained freedom of the press.

-A better deal for the unemployed and the lowest wage earners. The administration's critics complain about the "social cost" of the economic program that has reduced inflation from a high of 1,146 percent during the last year of the past regime to 63.5 percent in 1977 and a projected 20 percent to 30 percent this year. Unemployment is about 13 percent, down from more than 20 percent a couple of years

In the past seven weeks there has been a series of official moves in the human and civil rights areas considered important by rights campaigners here.

The first of these, on March 10, was the lifting of a state of siege that had been in effect since the days of nearcivil war when the armed forces confronted Allende's armed supporters. The state of siege was replaced by a milder measure called a state of emergency.

In early April, President Augusto Pinochet announced that he had advanced to Dec. 31 the deadline for drafting a new constitution and for planning a plebiscite on the constitution and on a projected period of transition between military and constitutional governments.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa -It is called the Black Sash. While most other protest movements against race discrimination in South Africa have been outlawed by the John Vorster government, the Black Sash remain untrampled and unabashed.

The Black Sash is exclusively composed of women, most white, with upperclass backgrounds - perhaps one of the reasons it has escaped any meaningful crackdown.

Members' phones are tapped, they are subject to ridicule and scorn, and their offices occasionally are visited by police making so-called routine investigations. But in a nation with increasing legalized repression, the 1,100 members of the Black Sash have retained a puzzling immunity from

The doors of their seven offices around the nation remain open, and each day hundreds of black men and women enter to seek para-legal help - blacks ensnared in governmental red tape that controls their lives.

Sheena Duncan, who has been national president of the Black Sash for the past three years, believes it must be Calvinist doctrine, strong still in the descendants of the original Dutch settlers - the Afrikaaners who dominate government today - that accounts for the Black Sash being more ignored than attacked by officialdom.

'They consider us the weaker sex. taken out of Adam's rib. not a complete person without her man, emotional, reacting to the menopause," Mrs. Duncan said.

"Some people consider us inef-fectual," the Black Sash leader cenceded. "Even sympathizers think we should disband, that by continuing to exist we fortify the government claim that it allows dissent.

'But by going out of existence we would be abandoning the many black people we help. And, on occasion, we have stymied some irrational racial actions by the government.

resulted from learning of a government plan to send Pass Law violaters (all blacks working in white areas can be challenged at any time to produce permits or passes) to prison farms in tribal areas. The Black Sash alerted tribal chiefs, who resisted the government plan. Today's tactics are different, but the aims of the Black Sash are the same as when the movement originally called Women's Defense of the Constitution League - was founded 23 years ago by Jean Sinclair, Sheena Duncan's mother.

We began as a mass protest movement." the 45-year-old Mrs. Duncan said. "Some 10,000 women

A recent Black Sash victory joined within the first couple of weeks. The issue (in 1955) was the government's attempt to remove the colored (mixed-race) voter from the voter's role. We also feared the government was going to do away with equality of English with Afrikaans (a Dutch derivative) as > official languages." As both were constitutional issues. the newly organized women protested "the rape of the constitution" by wearing blackshashes of mourning as they paraded in sizeable passive demonstrations.

> 'Newspapers began calling us the 'Black Sash' women," Mrs. Duncan recalled. "We like the sound of it so we changed our name officially.

That first protest failed. Colored voters were disenfranchised.

"The Black Sash decided there was need to go on fighting for political justice." Mrs. Duncan said. "When you start talking about justice in this country, you become largely involved in black-white affairs. People who hadn't given much thought to black rights gradually drifted away."

Sitting in the office corner of a room crowded with troubled blacks, patiently waiting to be interrogated by staff volunteers, Mrs. Duncan observed: "There's a tendency among whites in this country to think it's dangerous to talk about politics, They've forgotten how a normal kind of democracy works

PUC collects excess taxes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A special tax designed to finance the Texas Public Utility Commission raised seven times more than was needed to pay the agency's bills in 1977, State Auditor George McNiel reported Wednesday.

McNiel said revenue from the tax totaled $9.1 million in fiscal 1977. The commission's budget, set by the 1975 Legislature, was only $1.2 million. The 1978 budget of $3.85 million, while bigger, is still far below the revenue from the tax.

McNiel said the tax raised $5.57 million in fiscal 1976, the first year it was in effect.

The Texas Public Utility Regulatory Act imposed a tax on utility companies of one-sixth of 1 per cent of the gross receipts of those companies regulated by the commission.

Beatings for job seekers

JOHANNESBURG. South Africa (AP) -Black women waiting in lines at an unemployment office to sign up for jobs have been whipped, beaten with rubber hoses and doused with water by government employees in the past two weeks, a Johannesburg newspaper re-ported Wednesday.

"The incidents most frequently occur in the rush towards the (office) window when a job vacancy is announced," the Johannesburg Star reported. "It is in the scramble to catch the supervisor's attention whenever a vacancy is called that officials have resorted to strongarm tactics with sjambok (a traditional African whip) and water jug."

Plural Relations Minister Connie Mulder said there would be an immediate investigation of the allegations in the report and vowed to take action if the charges prove true.

"If the facts are correct, I find such behavior incredible," Mulder

Three investigative reporters for the newspaper, including a black woman, charged in the story that "physical vio-lence and humiliation. are being inflicted on the unemployed quite indis-criminately" at a government labor exchange office here. The reporters said they witnessed the beatings on four separate days at the government-run West Rand Bantu Board.

They wrote that the white head of the female unemployment section, identified as J. Cronje, and two black assistants, beat the black women with rubber hoses and sjamboks.

Cronje also threw water on the job seekers 'in spite of the bitter cold,' the newspaper said, and the women were "subjected to abusive language."

"We only do it to keep hem away from the window," the newspaper quoted Cronje as saying in explanation for the alleged beatings. "Sometimes the black constables have to keep them in fine." The newspaper said he refused to elaborate.

It said some of the women allegedly beaten were elderly, and others were young women with babies strapped to their backs.

"I've been coming here for a month and he's here for a month and he's always doing it," the reporters quoted Gladys Tshabalala as saying, referring to Cronje. "He does it every day but we can't boycott the place because we need the lobe."

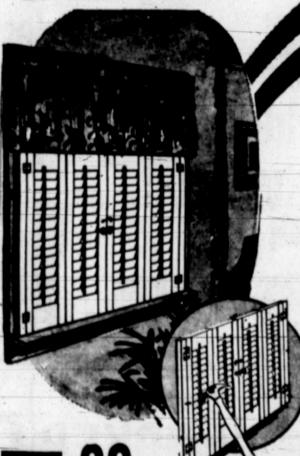

Such allegations about mistreatment of blacks rarely are prominently displayed in newspapers here. However, the story in the Star appeared on the front page under a headline reading: "The Bullies of Polly St."

Economic adviser plugs Carter's tax cut program

By R. GREGORY NOKES

SECTION

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's chief economic adviser says the economy won't do as well as expected this year, and will do much worse if Congress fails to enact Carter's proposed $25-billion tax cut

Charles E. Schultze, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said that with the tax cut, the economy should grow at between 4 and 4.5 percent, both this year and

The 1978 forecast is down from the original estimates of 4.7 percent growth in the economy. But if Congress fails to enact the tax cut of the magnitude sought by Carter, economic growth will taper off this year and decline to only about 3 percent next year, which could bring about an increase in the nation's unemployment rate, Schultze said.

The outlook for inflation this year also is worse than expected, Schultze said Tuesday in a speech at a National Press Club luncheon.

Prices probably will increase between 6.75 and 7 percent this year, compared with the rise of 6 to 6.25 percent predicted earlier this year, he

"There is simply no way that continued healthy recovery can be maintained unless inflation is brought under better control," he said.

Schultze said an unexpectedly large increase in food prices is to blame for the worsened inflation outlook, but he said inflation must be contained if the country is to achieve its other economic goals.

The only major economic goal that is on target for this year and next is unemployment, which Schultze said should decline to 5.75 percent from the current 6.2 percent jobless rate by the end of 1979 if the tax program is

Schultze indicated the administration is pleased that the recent increase in auto prices announced by General Motors would meet the administration's criteria for keeping price increases this year below the average increases of the last two

The administration is working to keep both wage and price increases in the economy at levels below the increase of the past years in an effort to slowly unwind the inflation, which Schultze said has been at an underlying rate of 6.5 percent for the past

They were said in a lonely corridor of a Houston hotel and came at the end of a long and bitter day for Apple. In his hand, he held a pink message slip. This one was from a desperate husband in Washington. His wife was dying of cancer. He wanted some of Apple's new drug that could "cure"

It was one of literally hundreds thatflooded into the recent American Cancer Society's Science Writers Seminar for two days

There was no cure, of course. Apple's presentation had been exaggerated and misconstrued somehow, despite his cautions that the new drug may have no human application at all, to be a cure for human cancer. His findings applied only to mice.

To Apple's credit, he answered each and every phone call. It must have been a disheartening experience.

The Apple incident may be instructive. It seems to underline several problems involving cancer: the public's inordinate fear of the disease, the gulf between great expectations and reality, the basic.

philosophy behind the "War on

The war was started during the Nixon administration some seven years ago. Even then, some scientists doubted the wisdom of the effort: it would divert funds from basic research, the scientific knowledge wasn't at a stage for a breakthrough.

Nonetheless, the war was started. It has cost the American people more than $3.5 billion in the last six or seven

Despite this expenditure, the incidence has increased, only slightly, and the death rate has decreased. only slightly. The question is being asked by Congress and ordinary people: Has the war been worth it? The answer is yes, but it's a tough answer to sell.

Dr. Donald Kennedy, U.S. commissioner of food and drugs, compares the war on cancer to the Vietnam conflict. Original hopes of quickvictory turned into a prolonged struggle. A "hot war" suddenly turned into a "cold war"

"What we hoped would be a single disease with a magic bullet cure has turned out to be a complex array of diseases, probably with multiple causation and almost certainly with no single cure," he said. "Disappointment at the lack of a clean solution has resulted in some public mistrust of the biomedical research establishment - which probably does deserve rebuke for having overpromised in the past."

However, despite frustrations, the struggle against cancer does seem to be making ground. Not perhaps with dramatic victories, but steady, inchby-inch progress against an increasingly difficult foe.

What is needed now is a new perception of the cancer problem. The facts are that most major cancers are yielding, albeit slowly, to the pressure of modern medical science.

The one big exception is a cancer that can be prevented, lung cancer.

Your vote counts'

The Midland League of Women Voters, in its traditional role of "getting out the vote." points out that this Saturday citizens will have a chance to be heard by their elected officials, to make an impact on their government.

Yes sir, this coming Saturday. citizens will have a chance to vote in statewide primaries. They will have the opportunity of choosing nominees for United States Senator and Representatives. governor and other state officials.

"You will be able to select the judges for your courts, the commissioners for your county. and justice of the peace for your precinct," the League said in a prepared statement, "Your Vote Counts," submitted to The Reporter-Telegram.

The statement also advises that in the last statewide primary only 30 percent of the registered voters participated in the Democratic and Republican primaries.

"In the ensuing fall general election, only one out of three registered voters in Texas cast their ballots," the League statement advised. "That means a small percentage of the registered voters chose those who lead you today, who make the laws affecting your lives, who sit in judgment on you.

But it all depends on YOU! It is up to YOU to take the time to do your duty by casting your ballot.

"The most basic form of citizen participation is YOUR vote." the League of Women Voters emphasizes. "It says you care. It says you believe in democracy. It says you want to have a say in your government."

The League of Women Voters of Texas, incidentally, promotes political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government and acts on selected governmental issues. The League does not support or oppose any political party or candidates.

This is fine and dandy. Its primary objective, after having provided public information on the various candidates involved in the upcoming balloting, is to get out the largest vote possible.

We most certainly will go along with the League in urging a large and representative vote in Midland and neighboring counties. Those who have made themselves available for public office have every right to expect a representative vote. We believe that West Texans will see that this is done.

As the League says, "Vote Saturday. Take a neighbor with you."

Remember also, please, that your vote counts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Red Cambodia: 'criminal nation'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Americans were outraged at the news that German SS men in 1944 had lined up captured American troops at Malmedy crossroads in Belgium and had mowed them down with machine guns. Twenty-four years later, Americans were horrified to hear that their own spooked soldiers had wiped out the defenseless men, women and

The Malmedy and My Lai massacres were Sunday School outings, however, compared to the retribution the communist conquerers have brought against their former foes in Cambodia. There is stark, staggering evidence that the communists, as one intelligence report put it, began "immediately executing all officers in the defeated army and their families.

The executions were kept quiet. "Since the KCP (Khmer Communist Party) had not established complete control over the country, the party ordered the executions carried out in such a manner as to not alarm the people." The slaughtering of the officers was followed, as the communists tightened their control, by the methodical massacre of enlisted men. Then the communists turned on the civilians. "It was the KCP policy to eliminate everyone in Cambodia who was not from the poor farmerworking class.

The work of death is still going on inside Cambodia. Recent intelligence reports claim it is "a primary party activity to search out and eliminate the last vestiges of the old societye., those who were not from the poor farmer-working class and who had hidden themselves among the people.

The grisly evidence - government documents, refugee accounts, medical records and smuggled photos - staggers the mind. The atrocities have been so monstrous that they can be better understood by focusing on a single, typical incident. This is the story, therefore, of what happened to General Em San and the men who served under him in Siem Reap province. They were shot and battered to death before they had a chance to tell their story. But it has now been told by their executioners who fled to Thailand after a party purge. We have pieced together the story from the scattered accounts of several witnesses.

Although the Khmer Rouge guerrilias did not defeat General Em San in the field, he ordered his command to surrender to them after the government collapsed on April 17, 1975. Then he met the Khmer Rouge as they entered Siem Reap city. He was arrested immediately and taken in his own jeep to Kompong Kdei in eastern Siem Reap province for interrogation," the witnesses recall.

His officers down to the rank of major were also rounded up and herded aboard trucks, together with their wives and children." According to one account, they were told by their captors that they had been invited to attend independence ceremonies at Angkor Wat. Other witnesses thought the prisoners had been told they were being sent to Angkor Wat to attend a special training course." In any event, they got no further than Kompong Kdei where they were unloaded

They waited until April 23 when a Khmer Rouge officer showed up ostensibly to sign travel passes for them. grimly: "Each man was blindfolded led to the edge of a ditch and beaten to death with a hoe. The executions took most of the day to complete. Although the first few groups of officers were not aware that they were going to die, the latter groups struggled strenuously to escape since the air was permeated with the stench of blood

Back at Siem Reap, all officers below the rank of major were told they would be shipped off for "reeducation." Four trucks delivered them to the Wat Loley temple.

Declares another intelligence report: "When the truck arrived at the temple, it was backed up to the temple entrance. As the officers were off-loaded, the Khmer Rouge instructed them to strip down to their underwear. Their hands were tied behind them, and they were loaded back into the truck

"The truck was then driven to a location approximately one kilometer northwest of the Wat in a forested area where three trenches were dug

When the truck arrived, the officers were ordered at gun point to jump down one by one into the trench. As they did, they were shot. When the truck was empty, it was driven-back to Siem Reap for another load.

"This went on for seven consecutive days. Following the initial period of executions, persons were no longer shot but they were killed by a blow from a hoe against their head.

Finally in mid-May, according to still another intelligence report, General Em San's enlisted men were hauled to Wat Loley for execution.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., an evangelical tax cut advocate, explains how the government is able to take bigger and bigger tax bites every year without raising tax rates: "As the costs of goods and services

"The problem is the amount left after taxes may actually buy less due to inflation and the higher tax bill than the worker had before his wage increase," Kemp said.

Roberts explains what this means to an average worker: 'Let's take for an example someone who is today earning only $6,240 a year." In 1976, he would have paid no taxes, and would actually have received $155 back from an earnedincome tax credit. "But after 45 years of 5 percent inflation, he would be earning $56,077 year, on which he would pay $17,019 in taxes. "It would appear his after-tax income had risen from $6,395 in 1976 to

$38,058 in 2021," Roberts said. Actually, the worker would experience a decline of one-third in his living standard over 45 years. "His after-tax income in 2021 would have a purchasing power equal to only $4,345 in 1976 dollars compared with the

$6,395 he made in 1976. "The greatest loophole of all in your income-tax system works for the benefit of government," Roberts said. "It is the loophole that allows government to use inflation to increase taxes without having to legislate higher tax rates.'

Kemp and Roberts believe the government must begin indexing tax rates to keep government from gobbling up bigger chunks of our paychecks.

'Indexing the tax structure would prevent this deterioration in the living standard of all Americans," Roberts said.

By indexing the tax rate, the government would calculate the tax schedules adjusting them to the rate of inflation for the previous year. This would be a real tax cut for the dest hit group of taxpayers those in the middle brackets. But because it would mean a drop in revenue for the government, indexing faces a tough battle both in Congress and in the White House.

President Carter 'nyets' mention of human rights By ROWLAND EVANS

And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Fear of "antagonizing" the Soviet Union led to remarkable instructions by President Carter to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance ruling out any public mention of human rights during his recent visit to Moscow. That decision, in a letter from the President to Vance, angered realists on the National Security Council (NSC) staff. They insist that keeping human rights pressure on Moscow is essential to save Mr. Carter from looking like a paper tiger. The decision to avoid any public mention of human rights followed the recommendations of Marshall Shulman, Vance's top adviser on Soviet affairs. In all the public briefings from Moscow describing the talks between Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko on SALT (strategic arms limitations), not one word was said about human Shulman told us Vance did mention human rights at some point during his private three-hour talk with Gromyko. That is a total surprise to other government officials, who know of nothing said about human rights in the Vance-Gromyko talks.

Vance also played down U.S. concern over Soviet freewheeling across the continent of Africa with Cuban troops as Soviet proxies. But disgruntled administration aides note a / difference. Vance avoided

Evans Moscow's Cuban Africa corps at the start of his Moscow talks; but unlike, human rights, it was publicly announced by U.S. spokesmen that Vance brought up Africa to Gromyko (without pressing it hard) before he left Moscow Vance did protest to Gromyko about the outrageous handling of Mrs. Irina McClellan. A Russian married to an American citizen, she was dragged away from the U.S. embassy in Moscow by Soviet police. But that scarcely opened the general question of human rights.

Why this once-over-lightly for human rights? Shulman is a product of academia without practical experience in dealing with the hardfaced gentlemen of the Kremlin. He and others among Vance's inner circle believe bringing up the sensitive human rights question could torpedo hope for a strategic arms limitation (SALT) agreement, which was Vance's basic purpose in

NO HELP FROM MEANY

Robert S. Strauss, whose jawboning efforts have won big business cheers. received a raspberry from the voice of big labor: AFL-CIO president George Meany.

Strauss' session with Meany at AFL-CIO héadquarters here April 25 got off to a shaky start. An ABC television crew doing a story on the much-publicized anti-inflation czarwanted to accompany him to Meany's office. "No, sir!" snapped the 83year old Meany.

"No, sir!" also was the substance of his answer when Strauss asked for moderation in union wage demands. Meany replied that he did not see much sign of self-sacrifice for the sake of fighting inflation elsewhere in the society and therefore saw no reason for labor to hold back.

Strauss responded that he was not asking labor to forgo all wage demands but just please restrain them a little, adding that there would also be examples of business restraint. Meany made no nod of

A footnote: When Meany went to the White House the next day, April 20, to see President Carter, the emphasis was less on wage restraint than on vocal restraint. The President stressed to Meany how personally hurt he was by organized labor's incessant public criticism after his administration had worked so hard for labor's goals.

SOVIET NAVAL MUSCLE

Both the political impact of naval power and the Soviet Union's growing self-assurance were shown early this year in the Mediterranean Sea by an unexpected Russian demonstration.

During Soviet naval exercises in late January, planes off the deck of the aircraft carrier Kiev carried on simulated air attacks against British and French warships, coming within a few thousand feet of the vessels.

Although unpublicized, this has been the talk of the U.S. intelligence community. Aviators off U.S. carriers have been making simulated attacks against Soviet warships for years, but this is the first time for such activity by the Soviets. It dramatizes not only the new presence of Soviet navalpower but also Moscow's current military confidence.
