Police, prison escapees in gun battle; five die

CADDO, Okla. (AP) — A gun battle erupted between two prison escapees and law enforcement agents at a roadblock near this southeastern Oklahoma town Friday. Authorities said three state troopers and both escapees were killed.

The prison escapees were wanted in connection with a two-state, five-death crime spree.

The Oklahoma Department of Public Safety confirmed that the five were dead and "id another trooper had been wounded."

Earlier, there had been conflicting reports as to the fate of the escapees, and a Highway Patrol dispatcher had reported they were being taken back to the state penitentiary at McAlester.

The dead convicts were Claude Eugene Dennis, 35, and Michael Lancaster, 25. There was no immediate identification of the slain troopers.

Authorities said the shootout began when a car carrying Lancaster and Dennis ran into the roadblock — one of many set up in the Lake Texoma area on the Oklahoma-Texas border — and a man came out shooting.

The hunt near here was renewed late Wednesday by federal agents and authorities from two states after officers found a car believed stolen by the two escapees from an Alabama murder victim.

Dennis was serving 35 years for manslaughter and Lancaster 25 years for robbery when they escaped from the state penitentiary April 23.

Oklahoma highway patrolmen, FBI agents, sheriff's deputies, agents of the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation, off-duty city police and Texas Rangers set up roadblocks and began searching the area after the station wagon belonging to a slain Alabama woman was found in a wooded area late Wednesday.

About 30 vehicles manned by law officers, including deputies from three counties, maintained the search

TESCO to request increase in rates

Texas Electric Service Co. announced today that it plans to file a request on Tuesday with the city of Midland and the Public Utility Commission in Austin for a 24.4 percent system-wide rate increase, which would result in $110 million in additional revenues.

If the full amount of the request is approved, residential customers would see a 24.8 percent average increase in their electricity bills with larger increases in the summer and smaller increases in the winter, TESCO officials said. Smaller users of electricity would see a smaller increase than large users, according to TESCO figures.

For example, under the proposed rates, a customer with an average monthly bill of $10 would have it go up to $11.44, while one with a $10 bill would see it increase to $12.39. A $100 average monthly bill would rise to $124.40, according to TESCO figures.

The company announced its plans to file rate increase requests with all cities served by it. Rates set rates within their own boundaries, and the utilities commission has authority in all unincorporated areas. Texas Electric can appeal a rate increase approved by the city to the commission.

TESCO Division Manager Winston Barclay said today he expects to appear before the Midland City Council at its June 11 meeting to make a formal presentation on the company's construction program and its reasons for requesting a rate increase.

The increase could take effect July 3, but, he said, he anticipates the council will postpone the matter for further study. This could mean any rate increase probably won't go into effect until late this year, he said.

The revenue increase is needed so Texas Electric can continue changing from expensive natural gas to cheaper, more plentiful lignite coal and nuclear fuel to generate electricity," Barclay said.

Changing to cheaper fuels is helping hold the price of electricity down. And lignite coal and nuclear fuel will provide reliable energy when natural gas may not be available for generating electricity at any price," he said.

In 1977, customers saved more than $18 million on their electric bills because TESCO used lignite coal instead of gas to generate 28 percent of

Republican absentee voting continues heavy

Republican voters Thursday continued the heavy pace of absentee voting begun Wednesday in the Midland County clerk's office.

A total of 253 voters cast ballots Thursday for the June 3 Republican runoff election to determine whether George W. Bush or Jim Reese will represent the party on the November ballot for the 19th Congressional District seat.

That brought the total for the first two days to 498. In addition, County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry said, 30 Republican absentee ballots have been mailed.

Sixty Democrats, voting in a runoff election for Railroad Commission, cast absentee ballots Wednesday and Thursday.

Interest in the Republican runoff apparently is not as strong in other areas of the congressional district as it is in Midland County. Lubbock County reported 70 Republican absentee votes cast Wednesday and Thursday, compared to 124 Democratic votes. Hale County, with Plainview as its county seat, had recorded seven Republican ballots and 42 Democratic absentee voting continued through 5 p.m. today. With the courthouse closed Monday for Memorial Day, Tuesday is the last day of absentee balloting.

Those who voted in one of the first primaries May 6 may vote in the same party's runoff. A voter who did not cast a ballot in either primary may do so in the runoff of his choice.

Tseng Hua hui, left, and his family are shown in photo released Thursday by Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency. According to Hsinhua, Tseng and his family, Chinese who had been living in Vietnam, were expelled by the Vietnamese authorities and robbed of most of their possessions on their way back to China. (AP Laserphoto)

Chinese step up word war

Agence France Presse

PEKING — China today stepped up its war of words against Vietnam with the publication here of a report on the "tragedy" of the Chinese in Vietnam.

In a report headlined "Tragic Scenes as Chinese Residents Driven out by Vietnam Return to China," New China News Agency special correspondent Ma Li compared the current exodus of Chinese to the Vietnamese who fled American bombing 10 years ago.

The report, from the Chinese border town of Tungshing, on the Gulf of Tonkin facing the Vietnamese town of Mong Cai, was published in the People's Daily. Photographs accompanying the report showed the pitiable faces of Chinese refugees wading across the Peilun River on the border to get to Chinese territory.

Ma Li described an old peasant threatened by Vietnamese soldiers with a bayonet at his throat, his armed twisted and a finger broken, as his tiny store of manioc (cassava) was taken from him.

A young man was "badly mauled" by six Vietnamese soldiers, and other victims were "chased and beaten," the report said.

The report also spoke of "victimized Chinese huddling together with their children, mothers trying to soothe their crying babies, old people sitting on the bare ground, completely exhausted," while armed Vietnamese soldiers sat in the shade of bamboo trees.

The repatriated Chinese had a long list of complaints against the Vietnamese, including persecution of Chinese residents going back several years.

One young man complained that his family had been denied food rations even though he had fought with Vietnamese forces during the Vietnam War, the report said.

The repatriates also accused the Vietnamese authorities of setting up a "sanitary district" along the border, of having forced Chinese to build new villages away from Vietnamese vil-

Jobless number down

Unemployment took a downward plunge in Midland in April, according to figures released today by the Texas Employment Commission.

And the number of persons employed rose correspondingly. Figures for April 1978 show 40,210 persons were employed, compared to 39,990 in March 1978 and 36,800 in April a year ago. Employment is expected to increase in July with the figure expected to be 40,910, according to the commission.

The increased employment brought the unemployment rate down to 2.9 percent. March 1978 had 3.8 percent unemployed. In April a year ago the figure was 3.5 percent and the figure for July is expected to be 3.8 percent, the commission reported.

The state's rate for April is 3.9 percent, while the nation's rate is 5.8 percent. The expected increase in July will come from students and school system personnel who are looking for summer jobs, according to the commission.

Two 'flower children' at college learning about hoses, shovels

Whatcha doing?

"I'm watering," said the pretty miss, pointing a water hose at a flower bed on the Midland College campus.

Her fair complexion was reddening from exposure to the hot sun. She was tempting that ol' man sun in her cut-off Big Mac overalls and her duck billed telegrapher's cap.

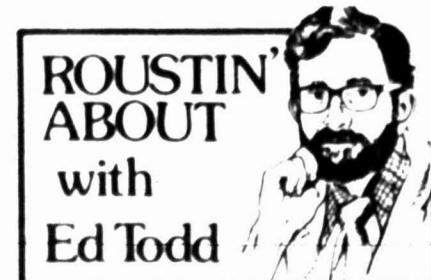

"You can do (write) all you want about Kim," the gal, Carren Hastings, said of her fellow neophyte gardener, Kim Kreyenbuhl, who was just as scantily garbed in her cut-off blue jeans. "I don't want any publicity."

She meant it, at least for the time being.

Roustin' About, acting on a tip from the college's PR front man, H.A. Tuck, had walked over to the Fine Arts Building to view a seeming novelty: two young misses toiling on and around flower beds. They were the grounds-keepers' helpmates. They were in a man's world.

"It's going to hurt my career if they see me watering in the paper," Ms. Hastings insisted. "I'm a professional person." She's planning to become a dental hygienist.

She was still watering the freshly-turned soil when her work partner returned from wherever she had been. And the two agreed that a printed account of their outdoor work might not damage their reputations after all.

Ms. Hastings, now relaxing on a red wagon hooked up to a one-cylinder "Poppin' Johnny" lawn tractor, was now "on the record."

"We both have hazel eyes and blonde hair," she said. "Most landscapers do."

Ms. Kreyenbuhl was relaxing, too, but mostly around the tractor. It was her turn to drive.

She seemed to view landscaping, though it be work, as a nifty break from her primary job as a photographer-journalist at the college. Particularly, so Ms. Kreyenbuhl said, she likes not having to get all dressed up for work at the start of the work day.

"It's just so nice. You don't have to get ready to go to work in the morning." She can put on her jeans, or what's left of 'em, throw on a blouse or pull over a sweater, get that bandanna tied about her head, and in less than five minutes, she's off to work. Otherwise, it'd take her about 1 1/2 hours to get "dressed up" for office-type work.

Both are new on the job; they're only 20 and are into their second week in learning about working and enriching the soil, caring for flowers, bushes and some trees and in learning how gardening tools work — mostly by moving the arm and back.

"I hoed my toe this morning," Ms. Kreyenbuhl said. The work is not without its hazards. "I thought I was cutting it off there for a little while."

They were just as friend Donna Hanson had described them: "Flower children."

A wilted red rose was embedded in Ms. Hastings' curly, blonde hair. A petunia was in the bib of her overalls. From Ms. Kreyenbuhl's bandanna there sprang another petunia. They seemed like grown-up children of the earth.

They were getting an education in the basics.

"We learned how to shovel today. We didn't know how to shovel," she said.

Their teacher was Don Schaffrina, a horticulturalist-landscaper at the college.

"He showed us how," Ms. Kreyenbuhl said.

Aside from shoveling, Schaffrina taught them how to hoe, rake, cut-

Hope birthday party trial run for TV special

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "God bless AMERICA!" shouted Charo, and with that she ripped off her top to reveal a low-cut sparkled halter. The audience at the Kennedy Center Opera House came momentarily to life Thursday night and Charo began to jiggle and wriggle around the stage.

This was in honor of the 75th birthday of Bob Hope, who sat in the presidential box with his wife Dolores, Rosalynn Carter, and former President and Mrs. Ford.

But it wasn't just a birthday party. Whoa, no. It was the raw material for a three-hour NBC special to be shown Monday night, which is in fact really the day of Hope's 75th.

But did that stop Elizabeth Taylor, George C. Scott, Kathryn Crosby, Telly Savalas, Elliott Gould, Lucille Ball and a host of others from singing "Happy Birthday to You" and "Thanks for the Memory" Thursday night. Of course not.

This wasn't just reality. This was television! And so a crowd that had also been promised George Burns, Sammy Davis Jr., Ann-Margret, Don Rickles and Donny and Marie didn't seem to mind a bit when these stars appeared not in person but on tape, projected onto a screen high above the Opera House stage.

And if they did mind, so what? The TV audience will never know. And this was an event for charity — to benefit the USO, with whom Hope has been associated for decades.

Besides, if people pay enough for their tickets, or if they get in free, or if there are television cameras occasionally turned their way — and the first and last of these held true Thursday night — they will put up with almost anything, and that includes trillion-watt lights that flash on and off blinding them to whatever is happening on the stage.

What was happening on the stage often made it look like the Merv Griffin Show had gone on the road, albeit sans Merv. Performers so semi-luminous as Mac Davis, Burt Convy ("Who???" asked a lady in the balcony), David Soul ("WHO???" asked a reporter in the press room) and Shields and Yarnall occupied much of the show, which ran well past 11 P.M. EDT, prompting comic Alan King to tell Hope from the stage, "I hope you live as long as this evening seems to me."

Naturally, the night was made not just for Hope but for hype. Scott got things off to a quiet, civilized start when he said that as an entertainer, Hope "may very well be unique in our time."

Of course, James Lipton, with Gerald Rafshoon the coproducer of the show, had told the audience before taping started that Hope is "America's greatest entertainer."

But it remained for Tony Orlando to put the icing on the birthday cake by calling Hope "the greatest entertainer America has ever known."

This was part of Orlando's contribution to the evening: an Orlando concert. He sang and sang and sang, then leaped off the stage and got USO president Michael S. Davison to sing along. And along and along and along.

Audience reaction to the acts was not universally enthusiastic, but some of the taped inserts, like the one with Don Rickles plugging NBC's already canceled "CPO Sharkey," came with the laughter already on the soundtrack. They don't like to take chances in television.

This may save the day for impressionist Fred Travalena who, assisted by actor Charles Nelson Reilly, made three separate appearances on the program. The first time he imitated Frank Sinatra. He bombed.

The second time he imitated Clint Eastwood. He bombed.

The third time he imitated Jimmy Carter. He bombed again.

But, by Monday, all this bombing can be salvaged with "sweetening," which means augmenting the laughter and applause electronically.

Or Travalena could be cut out of the show altogether, since it was longer than all but the biggest of big events.

What the TV audience will see far better than the black-tie crowd at the Kennedy Center are brilliantly edited montages of Hope's films, including a sequence on the "Road" pictures he made with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour. Lamour showed up in person to introduce that segment.

Pearl Bailey opened the show singing "Hello, Bobby," to the tune of "Hello, Dolly," accompanied by armies of military bands. "What a night, Bobby," Bailey sang, "We're gonna do things right, Bobby."

She was followed by Kermit the Frog, in white tie and his own tail, and Miss Piggy of "The Muppets," who sang "Secret Love" to Hope.

One would think that an occasion of this sort would be incomplete without someone singing, "You Light Up My Life." No one did. But Lynn Anderson (Who?) sang "Feelings," which before it was sold as a jingle to the telephone company was the "You Light Up My Life" of its day.

If the numbing mediocrity of much of the entertainment tended to cool the audience's ardor for the ski-nose in the presidential box, the evening did reach an emotional climax with greetings and congratulatory sent to Hope from not only the queen of England, and not only the pope, but also John Wayne.

Wayne, appearing by special hook-up from Newport Beach, Calif., where he is recovering from open-heart surgery, said, "Well, it looks like I made it to your party, Bob."

Regards from Queen Elizabeth of England, where Hope was born, were relayed by British Ambassador Peter Jay, who said Hope represents "the triumph of laughter over darkness."

The dilemma obviously facing the editors at NBC is whether to sacrifice some of Orlando's song marathon, another in his series of comebacks, in order to fit in the pope and the queen and, presumably, Hope himself, who finally emerged from his seat and came to the stage for a chorus or two of "Thanks for the Memory" at the show's conclusion, just before midnight.

This seemed to send the crowd out — some of them to a party upstairs — on a note of bliss, even though there were probably many who earlier might have agreed with comedian Danny Thomas who said of the show, "It's more than an honor to be here tonight. It's a damn nuisance." Of course, he was only joking. Ahem.

Inmate receives stay of execution

ATLANTA (AP) — A Georgia inmate scheduled to die in the electric chair today has been granted a 20-day stay of execution.

Moreover, legal observers say several avenues of appeal open to him make it unlikely the execution will be carried out anytime soon even after the stay expires.

It was granted by Cobb County Superior Court Judge Luther Hames shortly after the U.S. Supreme Court voted 7-2 Thursday to turn down a request by Ronald Douthit to postpone his May 26 execution date until a formal appeal of the case could be made to the high court.

The justices ruled that Douthit's attorney, Eugene Deal, had failed to file for the review in time. Deal could not be reached for comment.

Douthit originally was sentenced to be executed March 30 1976, but that was delayed while his attorney unsuccessfully sought a new trial.

Hames said he granted the stay "because he (Douthit) has not had any opportunity to make the various appeals that are normally granted to an individual."

Millard Farmer, an attorney with Team Defense, a group that represents indigent defendants under death sentences throughout the country, said late Thursday that Douthit "hasn't begun to exhaust his appeals."

He said Douthit still had avenues of appeal at the state and federal level and predicted the U.S. Supreme Court eventually would allow Douthit's attorney "a late filing" of an appeal.

Charles Tidwell, Gov. George Busbee's legal adviser, said Busbee would have granted a stay of execution if he had been asked.

The governor's news secretary, Duane Riner, said that when the 20-day stay expires, Douthit still may seek commutation of his sentence by the state board of pardons and paroles, which would cause Busbee to issue a stay of up to 90 days.

Busbee has said he will grant such delays upon request to any inmate who apparently has exhausted other avenues of appeal.

PRODUCT CAUTION NOTICE

It is believed that a very small number of Remington Women's Rechargeable Shavers, model number 382L or 882L, may pose a shock hazard. If you have one of these shavers, please discontinue use of it until it has been corrected.

How To Identify A Shaver To Be Corrected:
If model number 382L or 882L is stamped on the metal plate (see picture) on the bottom of the shaver, and if there is no R in the center of the plate, the shaver should be corrected. No other shavers are involved.

Look for model 382L or 882L

On the right track

It may sound subversive on Capitol Hill, but Transportation Secretary Brock Adams has dared to admit it: There's no reason why American taxpayers should keep on subsidizing Amtrak passenger trains just because they run through the districts of powerful members of Congress.

That kind of thinking may get Mr. Adams into political trouble, but it's time to replace politics with prudence in the Amtrak experiment.

If the U.S. government is going to subsidize railroad passenger service, the system at least can be designed around some principle other than congressional seniority.

Last year an Amtrak official told Congress that the route system was built by political pressure rather than sound transportation planning — "a train running through every city in the country that has a powerful congressman."

That's been costly to the American taxpayer. The present 27,000-mile Amtrak system is requiring an infusion of half a billion dollars a year in federal funds. By 1984 the deficit would reach a billion dollars or more — without the pruning Mr. Adams has recommended.

It's too early to say whether the specific routes the secretary would cancel, and those he would retain and add, will represent "adequate" rail passenger service for the country. Public hearings will shed more light on the rationale for his choices. However, the need to redefine what is adequate is obvious.

Almost three years ago, in fact, the Ford administration called on Congress to make a basic policy decision about Amtrak. The question, said Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman, was "whether national priorities justify long-term federal subsidy, and if so, at what level."

Congress never came up with an answer — except for keep shoring up Amtrak's budget, no matter how many people want to ride its trains.

Under Mr. Adams' proposal for a reduced, 18,900-mile system, the nation's 36 largest cities still would be linked by passenger service. There would be three major routes from coast to coast, and three running north and south from border to border.

This sounds like skimpy rail service for a country as big and broad as ours, but even such a slimmed-down Amtrak still would need an $800 million subsidy in 1984.

This, of course, hinges on whether Americans in greater numbers overcome their taste for travel by air, bus or auto.

So far, the economies of travel have not induced a major shift back to the rails.

The need for a basic policy decision about the scope of Amtrak is as great today as it was three years ago. A prompting from a Democratic administration, this time around, could persuade Congress to make Amtrak something better than a Pork Barrel Express.

Like the beleaguered U.S. Postal Service, Amtrak was designed to combine the efficiency of private business with the anxiety-free flexibility of federal funding. As did the Postal Service, Amtrak toppled into the gap between theory and practice.

Rail passenger service has not experienced a dramatic rebirth under government sponsorship. Air travel is much faster. Bus travel is cheaper. As government moves away from strict regulation of air fares, super discounts offered by the airlines add to Amtrak's woes.

Adams' plan to eliminate routes for which there is little demand should not be thwarted by parochial interests.

Texas would lose a train route in the move, but Sen. Lloyd Bentsen undoubtedly is right in questioning the wisdom of "trying to perpetuate a mode of travel which doesn't get that much use anymore."

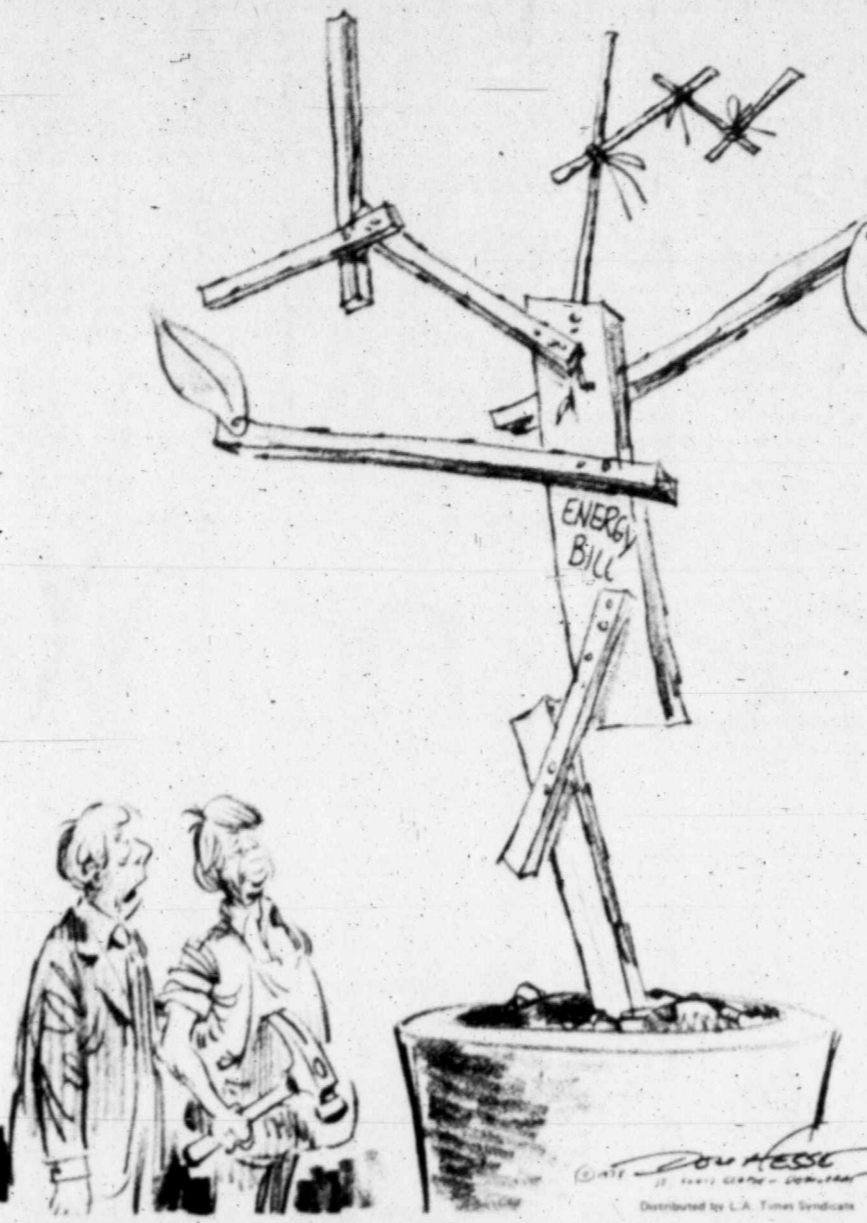

The ultimate decision will be made by the taxpayers, who once again must determine how much service they are willing to pay for.

Jackson editor creates a frenzy

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — The role of the village editor and the dissenting pamphleteer is embedded as a fundamental of the American system. Our founding fathers intended that any wanderer, if he was cantankerous enough, should be allowed to set up his press and begin to assail his townsmen.

Such an ornery editor has set up shop on a quiet side street in Jackson, Miss., where he has been creating a frenzy. He is now engaged in a mortal battle with corrupt politicians, racketeers and Ku Klux Klansmen. He has been subjected to financial pressure from city hall and violence from the streets. His name is Bill Minor, and he publishes a weekly newspaper called the Capital Reporter.

Unwittingly, we helped to provoke Minor's ordeal. Last fall, we published a series of columns on the cozy relationships between certain racketeers, politicians and businessmen in Jackson. The series caused a momentary sensation in Mississippi. A group of outraged citizens demanded a full investigation of our charges. A federal strike force, which had been disbanded, reopened its investigation into Mississippi corruption.

But the cries of indignation faded; the dust settled; and no meaningful reforms were adopted. Bill Minor, however, refused to keep still. He dug deeper into the corruption we had exposed. In edition after edition he flung his findings into the faces of the city fathers.

Then the retaliation began. The city government stopped publishing paid public notices in the newspaper. The advertising dropped off sharply, despite a substantial increase in readership. Then a rock was hurled through the paper's front window. A few weeks later, another rock shattered a window pane. Inside the office, the typesetting machine, was vandalized. Vandals have also damaged the vending machines, which offer the newspaper for sale.

Finally, a flaming cross was leaned up against the newspaper office after Minor took a job at the Ku Klux Klan. An off-duty fireman managed to knock the fiery cross to the ground, thus saving the building from burning.

Today, the embattled Capital Reporter is struggling for survival. Minor can no longer afford to replace the shattered window panes, which are boarded up. Yet each week, he somehow manages to grind out another edition.

Thomas Jefferson had men like Bill Minor in mind when he declared that if he had to choose between a government without newspapers and newspapers without a government, he would take his newspaper.

GRIM AFTERMATH: The grim after effects of the government's 1976 swine flu vaccination fiasco — legal as well as lethal — linger on. A disturbing total of 26 people, who took the shots at the government's urging, have subsequently died of an identical crippling disease. Hundreds of others have suffered paralysis. The $135 million inoculation program was pushed upon the public, with a dire warning from then-President Gerald Ford that a swine flu epidemic was

CHARLEY REESE Collectivism appeals to persons who are afraid

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Are you afraid? Afraid of poverty? Of getting sick and not being able to afford medical care? Of losing your job? Of being disliked by other people? Of being physically attacked? Of growing old? Of dying?

If so, then you are a prime candidate for collectivism. People interested in creating a collectivist society base most of their appeals on fears such as those described above. The reason they do is very simple: a collectivist society has no positive virtues.

The toughest thing about freedom is that it requires courage. Being free is like riding a bicycle — at some point you have to remove the training wheels and just take off, relying on your self-confidence instead of external support.

Some years ago, a friend who was a policeman complained about a change in the civil service rules which allowed an officer to be suspended for up to three days without a hearing or appeal. He thought that was a great blow to his job security.

I couldn't help but laugh at him. At that time and up to this day, I've worked in industries in which that kind of job security is non-existent, where your boss can walk in and say, "You're fired," and that's it — no appeal, no discussion, just get up and walk out the door.

Yet it's never bothered me. In the first place, I've never considered that I had a "right" to a job. People who have hired me, hired me for their own selfish reasons — namely because they wanted something done. My "security" has been my ability to do what they wanted done. So long as I continued to do it, it was in their self-interest to retain me.

As Ayn Rand pointed out so well, a free society functions because individuals whose self-interests run parallel form voluntary associations. That is the basis of trade and contracts and so long as the people are honest and rational there is no need for a third party to act as an enforcer.

The essence of collectivism, however, is the exact opposite. In a collectivist state, individuals are not allowed the freedom to determine what is in their self-interest. Their self-interests are sacrificed to the self-interest of the state and consequently the state must always resort to compulsion. The only "benefit" the collectivist state offers is the "security" of not being responsible for your own life.

And that is why collectivism appeals to people who are afraid because the tap root of all fears is the fear that you, for whatever reason, are not competent to live. People afflicted with this fear can never bring themselves to give up their training wheels, not because of any external dangers, but because of their own internal opinion that they are incompetent to handle the affairs of life.

I'm not talking about normal healthy fear which is nothing more than a rational recognition of real dangers, but the morbid fear that paralyzes an individual and which is based on an internal exaggeration of real dangers.

The world is dangerous, of course. For one thing, we are all going to grow old and die. For another, there is no 100 percent sure way to avoid all sickness or accident. A great many things which could cause us harm, like a war or an economic disaster, are beyond our individual ability or control. In short, uncertainty comes with the territory.

I don't know why some people are afraid and some are not. My guess is that courage is like religious faith — you either have it or you don't and if you do, it's very hard to explain to someone else why you do, most attempts ending up with the words, "Well, I just believe."

At any rate, it's an important part of politics, this business of fear, because scared people can vote as well as brave ones and they'll vote usually for the person who promises to take care of them.

So in the long run one factor which determines whether a country is free or not free is, as the social scientists would say, the distribution of courage and fear among the populace.

The Country Parson

"I usually can forgive folks for being conceited — unless it's justified."

Mark Russell says

After the vote to sell planes to the Middle East comes now the hard part — convincing Israel that we still love them.

It's the same selling job that the unfaithful husband has — returning from a night out with flowers for the wife.

Walter Mondale and Zbigniew Brzezinski are the husband's family who say to the wronged wife, "Sure old Charlie fools around once in a while, but deep down he's a good man."

Prime Minister Begin, the wife, says, "Oh, yeah? Well, if he still loves me, he's going to have to prove it."

Just then old Charlie walks in with some flowers and a box of candy. But as he kisses his wife he drops a book of matches from the "Arabian House of Delights."

INSIDE REPORT:

Black and white: Dramatically different reactions

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

ATLANTA — Growing disparity between white and black perceptions of Jimmy Carter's performance as viewed from his own backyard poses political problems for the beleaguered president, embodied in this question:

Can President Carter hold the 90 percent-plus black support he gained in 1976 without endangering his support by whites with their wholly different values and standards of what makes a good president?

On issue after issue, Mr. Carter gets a dramatically different reaction in two neighborhoods — one black, one white — in Georgia's 5th Congressional District on Atlanta's southwest side.

By a 15-to-1 ratio, 50 black voters we interviewed in trim houses along quiet, tree-lined streets approve of the way Mr. Carter is handling the national security issue. But in the nearby middle-income white neighborhood, 40 white voters came down stridently against the president by a 4-to-1 ratio.

This disparity runs deep, with 30 blacks giving the president a "good" or "excellent" rating but not one white scoring him "excellent" and only 9 "good." To black voters here, the president is on top of his job. The recurring complaint of whites was broken promises and lack of presidential qualifications.

plained why he wishes he had voted for Gerald Ford instead of Mr. Carter: "He doesn't know what he's doing half the time." Another white switcher away from Mr. Carter, a 41-year-old lift operator, blamed Congress for lack of cooperation, but told us Mr. Carter "has shown his inexperience."

adding: "The most important problem in the country today is getting men capable of running our government."

Armed with questionnaires prepared by Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, we interviewed voters in two precincts with the help of Judy Tannenbaum, Caddell's top Atlanta field representative, and four polltakers. Black precinct 9E gave Mr. Carter 97 percent support in 1976. White precinct 8P gave him 61 percent support.

Our political scouting expedition showed continuing immense strength for the president in the black precinct. "He's been traveling the world for peace," a middle-aged black housewife told us. A young truck driver praised his "honesty." A 25-year-old bride said that "putting Andy Young in the United Nations" had helped make Mr. Carter a good president.

Against this black approval were implications that Mr. Carter's white Southern base is eroding. Mr. Carter's greatest voting gains in the country over recent Democratic presidential tickets came among white Southerners, who gave him about 50 percent support — far above recent Democratic nominees.

Of the 40 white voters we interviewed, 25 said they backed Mr. Carter in 1976, 10 picked Gerald Ford and 5 would not say. Today the president keeps only 17 of those 25, with 5 defectors moving to Ford and 3 to "don't know."

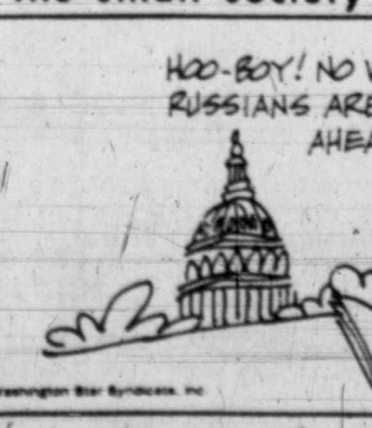

A 39-year-old sales engineer epitomized the white criticism: "Carter hasn't kept his word. He is a weak president who hasn't demonstrated the strength he promised in the campaign."

No such defections showed up among black voters, who gave Ford not a single vote in 1976 and wouldn't today. Their only change was hesitation: 4 of the 40 pro-Carter 1976 voters have switched to "don't know" today. Indeed, Mr. Carter gets extraordinary credit from black voters here. He has "cut expenses in the White House," "helped the solar program" and "visited countries no other president ever went to."

The president's standing with black voters could be hurt if he shifts into a harder anti-Soviet posture, forcing an increase in defense spending (at the cost of federal job subsidies and welfare programs) — clearly desired by a majority of the white voters interviewed. Or he could risk black reaction if he switched to a tougher anti-Cuba policy in black Africa, particularly if United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young — a hero to blacks here — raised objections.

But Mr. Carter's problem today clearly is not blacks but whites. Given the wide contradictions between white and black views of his presidency, he may have to risk colliding with the views of his overwhelming black constituency to shore up his flaking white Southern support before 1980.

The Duke: 71 today and getting over operation

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — When John Wayne celebrates 71 years today, it will be nothing like his rip-roaring birthdays of yore. "I keep thinking I'm well, but when I try too much I realize I'm not," said the actor, who underwent heart surgery April 3. "It hurts where they cut me open. When I do too much I feel sore."

Wayne said he was getting stronger every day, and doctors advise he can return to work in July. He spoke by telephone from his sprawling house beside Balboa Bay, sounding like the John Wayne of 20 years ago.

At appearances earlier this year, his voice was only a raspy replica of his familiar California drawl. He had also seemed cranky and depressed.

"Getting the voice back was a residual I didn't expect out of the operation," he remarked. "I had undergone all kinds of tests to find out why my voice had gone bad, and nobody could tell me. I just couldn't get any timbre out of it."

There's a blood vessel that runs from the heart to the vocal cords, and one of the valves wasn't working. The operation fixed that.

The faulty heart valve was replaced with a similar part from the heart of a pig during surgery in Boston.

"You know, I still got only one lung; that's one thing you can't fix with pig valves," he said. He lost a lung in a cancer operation in 1964. "One of the reasons I want to get back to work is so I can make some more ads for Great Western Savings," he said. "I'm sick and tired of seeing the same ones over and over again."

Terrorists hold Japanese businessmen captive

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Left-wing terrorists threatened to kill a kidnapped Japanese businessman today unless they get $4 million and freedom for 38 political prisoners.

A member of Fugio Matsumoto's family said the ransom demanded was the equivalent of three years' profits from his synthetic fiber manufacturing firm.

Some of the prisoners listed by the terrorists were the same as another group demanded last year in exchange for kidnapped Foreign Minister Mauricio Borgonovo.

The government refused to deal with that gang, just as it has refused to negotiate with Matsumoto's kidnapers.

Southwest seeking interstate route expansion to 4 cities

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines has announced plans to expand its service to Denver, Kansas City, Oklahoma City and St. Louis if it can get the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Herbert Kelleher, chairman of the airline, said Thursday that Southwest's application this week for CAB approval to fly nonstop between Dallas and New Orleans will be the test case. If the CAB approves the request, Southwest will bid to serve other close-range interstate routes, he said.

Southwest Airlines instituted a no-frills, reduced-fare operation that has sent airplane boardings zooming in Texas in the airline's fairly new history as an concern flying strictly within the state. Other airlines were forced to lower fares to meet the competition. "We'd like the opportunity to take our service into the short-haul interstate markets, and we hope to be able to," Kelleher told the Dallas Times Herald.

Marcos reneges on pledge to hold local elections

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, reneging on a 1977 pledge, has ruled out local elections this year because of "disruptions and divisions" in the April 7 national elections.

A palace spokesman said today that Marcos felt the turmoil from the interim National Assembly balloting "raised doubts on the capacity of the nation to endure another election while in the midst of a crucial political transition."

The Work Group August 13, which takes its name from the date in 1961 that the Berlin wall was erected, said the group included 17 West Germans or West Berliners imprisoned for attempting to smuggle East Germans out of the country.

There was no indication why the Communist government released the prisoners, who were serving terms for such offenses as "anti-state activity" and "maintaining anti-state associations."

Prisoners freed in East Germany

BERLIN (AP) — The East German government has released 125 political prisoners within the past two weeks and deported them to West Germany, a West Berlin human rights group said today.

Such reports, last March, West Germany's minister for intra-German affairs, Egon Franke, said the Bonn government paid East Germany about $65 million in 1977 for unspecified "humanitarian purposes."

Sources in West Germany claim the Bonn government pays large sums of money to the East Germans for the release of political prisoners.

Novelists aren't novelists any more

Newsday

"She lay on the couch, beneath a single glaring light. She held her body stiffly; shoulders back, arms down at her sides, in the touchingly vulnerable pose of a sacrificial victim. Her breathing was shallow. She was naked to the waist..."

So goes the opening paragraph of a new novel called "In the Night Season" just published by Prentice-Hall and written by, of all people, Dr. Christian Barnard, the same South African surgeon who won fame and fortune performing heart transplants and who has lately been operating in the literary field as well. His heroine in the above scene, a woman who has breast cancer, is undergoing a medical examination; the only one being seduced is the reader. The book is already in its second printing and Publishers Weekly predicts that Barnard will soon be as well known as a novelist as he is as a doctor.

These days, a number of novels are being written by people who ordinarily would not be expected to write novels and who are being published by publishers who know a good market when they see one. "In the Night Season" falls neatly into this relatively recent fictional phenomenon: the novel written by a celebrated individual who has inside information or an unusual experience behind him, and who finds it infinitely more profitable — and sometimes safer — to impart it as fiction rather than fact.

As Roger Straus of Farrar, Straus and Giroux points out, there are all kinds of novelistic categories, from the serious to the gothic, and now "there is this new category — I'm a big name so I can write a novel and people are going to read what I have to say."

And people do. William F. Buckley, another late-blooming fiction writer, wrote a highly successful CIA novel, "God Save the Queen," a year or so ago and has just published another work of fiction. Tony Curtis, the actor, is plugging his first novel, "Kid Andrew Cody and Julie Sparrow," in a current television commercial. Singer Mel Torme has written a novel called "Wynner," former Mayor John Lindsay wrote a novel after leaving office that fortunately or unfortunately hardly anyone can remember. Spiro Agnew's novel did pretty well on the best-seller lists for a while, and New York Times columnist William Safire struck it rich with "Full Disclosure."

Even a book publisher, William Jovanovich of Harcourt Brace and Jovanovich, has satisfied a lifelong ambition and is coming out soon with an autobiographical novel, "Madmen Must." And of course Watergate figure John Ehrlichman did better than most first novelists with "The Company," his insider's account of the CIA and life with "President Monckton." He, too, is busy on his second.

More recently, there has been Ron Nessen, former press secretary to Gerald Ford, who is turning his Washington experiences into a novel about how Washington women spend their days — and nights — while their husbands are running the government. People will be trying to guess who is really who, he says. "I've always wanted to write a novel," he added, "but like most journalists I couldn't find the time." His agent, William Adler, is presently "structuring" a deal for Nessen's book that he expects will be worth $1 million.

Not long ago, CBS's Marvin Kalb collaborated with his brother, Bernard Kalb, on a formidable biography of Henry Kissinger, then turned around and wrote, with ABC's Ted Koppel, "In the National Interest," a fictionalized account of foreign policy exploits with a Kissinger-type individual as the central character. Simon and Schuster reports 40,000 hard-cover copies sold and a paperback payoff in the six figures.

Not too long ago, many of these "novels" probably would have been written as nonfiction, but fiction, according to publishers, is stronger than fact in today's market, particularly when it comes to subsidiary rights — paperback, movies and TV. The marketing practices and pressures of publishing fiction today are so great, industry sources say, that someone with instant public recognition is a prime candidate for literary opportunism. "Unless the author is a celebrity in his or her own right," says Dan Green, a vice president at Simon and Schuster, "it's terribly difficult to get the radio, television and press attention that is often very successful in selling books."

From the point of view of these new novelists, whose plots have a Harold Robbins sameness about them — highly placed individuals struggling for power, a nymphomaniac or two, the mandatory sex scenes — there is a lot more freedom and probably more fun in knocking out a novel than in struggling with dreary old non-fiction. They can push a cause, settle a score, even tell the truth, if they want to, and still make a bundle without worrying too much about being sued for libel.

Kalb, for example, found he could say a lot more in his Kissinger novel than he could in his Kissinger biography. Barnard quietly pushes his belief in "passive euthanasia" in "In the Night Season."

Not all of these "celebrity novels" emerge from their creators' minds ready for the printer. Sometimes they get a little help. "A celebrated name sometimes overcomes the lack of literary skills," says Stuart Applebaum of Bantam. "You can always hire somebody to do that."

Literary agent Scott Meredith, for example, played more than a minor editorial role in shaping Agnew's novel. Barnard has the unusual distinction of writing a work of fiction "with" someone — in his case Siegfried Stander, a fellow-South African.

Even Safire, a respected and polished writer who just won the Pulitzer Prize for his commentary in the Times, got the idea of centering "Full Disclosure" on a disabled president from Nessen's present agent, William Adler.

Statewide anti-nuclear protest slated Saturday

GLEN ROSE — The first statewide anti-nuclear demonstration in Texas is planned for Saturday at the entrance to the site of the Comanche Peak nuclear power reactor near here.

It is being sponsored by the Texas Mobilization for Survival of Austin and Armadillo Coalition of Texas of Fort Worth.

Speakers and music will open the rally at 11:30 a.m., followed by a balloon release at noon. Helium-filled balloons will be set off, with postcards attached to notify the finder that the balloon has taken the path radiation would take if emitted from an operational plant, according to a spokesman for the rally.

Workshops will deal with various aspects of nuclear energy. Expected to attend are members of anti-nuclear groups in Dallas, Arlington, San Antonio, Denton, Sherman, Houston, Bryan and Corpus Christi, in addition to the groups from Fort Worth and Arlington, the spokesman said.

DEATHS

Meriel Stuart

LAMESA — Services for Meriel Stuart, 78, of Austin and formerly of Lamesa will be at 2 p.m. Saturday in the First United Methodist Church here with burial in Lamesa Memorial Park directed by Branon Funeral Home.

Mrs. Stuart died Wednesday in an Austin hospital after a lengthy illness.

A Merkel native, she moved from there to Dawson County in 1916. She married Ralph A. Stuart Sept. 4, 1917, in Lamesa. He died in 1970. She was a former Lamesa school teacher. She received her doctorate in psychology from Columbia University and soon afterward, joined the teaching staff at Angelo State University.

Mrs. Stuart retired from teaching in 1965 and moved to Austin about one and a half years ago. She was a member of Delta Kappa Gamma and several other professional organizations. She was a Methodist.

Survivors include a son, R.A. Stuart Jr. of Austin; three sisters, Lois McCandless of Lubbock, Christine McPherson of Idelwild, Calif., and Mona T. Thorton of Pasadena, Calif., six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Sam Wills

OZONA — Sam Wills, 74, died Thursday morning at his home in Ozona.

Services were to be at 3 p.m. today in the Ozona Church of Christ. Burial was to be in Cedar Hills Cemetery directed by Larry D. Sheppard Funeral Home here.

Wills was born July 24, 1903, in Bell County. He married Hallie Kirkpatrick Dec. 9, 1941. He was a rancher. He was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors include his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Jackie Womack of Ozona; three sisters, Mrs. Earl Berry of Ozona, and Mrs. Charlie Hunnicut and Mrs. Dub Arnett, both of Fluvanna; two brothers, V.A. Wills of Fluvanna and Hood Wills of Quanah, three grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Jack Cunningham

LUBBOCK — Services for Jack Cunningham, 74, of Route 4, father of Bobbie Simmons of Midland, were to be at 3 p.m. today in Springlake Church of Christ in Springlake. Officiating was to be Jack Eckman, minister of Earth Church of Christ.

Burial was to be in Earth Cemetery directed by Franklin-Bartley Funeral Home in Lubbock.

He died Wednesday in a Lubbock hospital after a lengthy illness.

Cunningham was born in Hollis, Okla., and moved to Lubbock from Springlake 14 years ago. He was a member of the Springlake Church of Christ and the Oddfellows Lodge.

He is survived by his wife, a son, two other daughters, a brother, six sisters, 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Brooke concedes a 'misstatement'

BOSTON (AP) — Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., has admitted falsely testifying during his divorce proceedings that he owed $49,000 to a personal friend, the Boston Globe reports.

Brooke, claiming that he was under "tremendous pressure" during the divorce proceedings last year, said Thursday he made the "misstatement" to increase his financial liabilities, the Globe reported in today's editions.

Brooke's divorce from his wife, Remigia, becomes final June 15.

The newspaper also reported that Brooke apparently avoided paying pay up to $20,000 in French sales tax on his Caribbean island home because the purchase price listed on the deed of sale was less than what he actually paid for it.

The Globe said Brooke admitted in an interview that he had not told the truth in divorce court testimony last May when he said he got the interest-free loans from A. Raymond Tye, a longtime friend and president of United Liquors Ltd. of Boston.

Both Brooke and Tye were unavailable for comment.

Early today Brooke's press secretary, Robert Waite, said "We have no comment except to say that he met with the Globe on three separate occasions and provided them with all information requested."

The Senate's recently-enacted code of ethics requires disclosure of all loans over $2,500.

A former member of the Senate Ethics Committee, Brooke filed legislation last year proposing tougher financial disclosure requirements than those finally adopted.

No loans from Tye were reported in Brooke's current financial statement to the Senate, the Globe said. The Senate's recently-enacted code of ethics requires disclosure of all loans over $2,500.

The Globe reported three contradictory statements about the loans by Brooke during three interviews it conducted with Brooke this week.

At first, the state's junior senator said the $49,000 in loans was still outstanding. At a second interview, he said the loans totaled less than $2,000. And in the third, Brooke admitted testifying the amount was $49,000, but said his sworn statement was untrue, according to the Globe.

Brooke said in the deposition last May that he used the money from Tye to pay off financial obligations, and claimed that Tye loaned the money as a friend and never asked for anything in return.

Brooke has said publicly that he paid $180,000 for his home on the Caribbean island of St. Martin. However, the newspaper said that a copy of the deed of sale states the selling price was $22,800 francs or about $40,000, according to the rate of exchange at the time.

The clerk who made out the document has since been removed from office after allegedly taking kickbacks for lowering property values on deeds, the Globe said.

Brooke said he did nothing improper in the transaction and added that until recently he did not know a lower selling price was listed on the deed, which was in French. The home goes to Mrs. Brooke as part of the settlement.

Rex Fariss

BROWNFIELD — Services for Rex Fariss, 11, of Welch were to be at 10 a.m. today in the South Side Church of Christ with Doyle Kerby, minister, officiating and Bob Reynolds, minister of the Crescent Hill Church of Christ, assisting.

Burial was to be at 5 p.m. in the Goldthwaite Memorial Cemetery directed by Brownfield Funeral Home.

The youth was the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Warren of Andrews and the great-grandson of Etta Warren of Big Spring.

He died Wednesday in a Brownfield hospital of injuries he received in a hunting accident.

The youngster was a native of Brownfield. He was a student in the Welch school system.

Other survivors include his parents, four brothers, his paternal grandparents and two great-grandmothers.

Luw Kimbrough

TEMPLE — Luw Ann Kimbrough, 47, formerly of Midland died Wednesday in a Temple hospital.

No services are planned.

She was born in July 1930 in Big Spring and was graduated from the high school there in 1947. She attended Texas Christian University and Harris College of Nursing. She married H.C. Kimbrough in 1949. The couple lived in Stephenville, moving there from Midland.

Survivors include her husband; a daughter, Nancy White of San Diego, Calif.; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith of Big Spring; a sister, Betty Priest of Collinsville, and a brother, Joe Howard Smith of Houston.

Euna Love

LAMESA — Services for Euna L. Love, 74, of the Lamesa area were to be at 2 p.m. today in Midway Baptist Church in the Midway community with the Rev. Chester Guinn of Texarkana officiating and the Rev. Jim Mosley, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Ackerly, assisting.

Burial was to be in Lamesa Memorial Park directed by Branon Funeral Home.

Mrs. Love died Wednesday in a Big Spring hospital of injuries she received in an auto accident in Ackerly on U.S. Highway 87.

A native of Erath County, she had lived in Dawson County since 1918 when she moved here from Eastland County. She married Vesper Love in November 1923 in Lamesa. He died in May 1973. Mrs. Love was a longtime member of the Midway Baptist Church.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Derrill (Sandra) Bearden of Ackerly; three sons, Howard Love of New York City, Wayne Love of Lubbock and Donald Love of Lamesa; two sisters, Margaret Guinn of Texarkana and Nora Friday of Midland; a brother, Edward Lauderdale of Lamesa, 10 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Jimmie Welcher

SEAGRAVES — Services for Jimmie Glenn Welcher, 48, of Seagraves, brother of Doyle Welcher of Lamesa, were to be at 4 p.m. today in the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. John Becker, pastor, officiating.

Masonic graveside rites were to follow in Seagraves Cemetery directed by Connally Funeral Home.

Welcher died Wednesday following a motorcycle accident near Seminole.

He was employed at the City Services Columbian Carbon Plant here.

Other survivors include his wife, his parents, two brothers, a sister, a son, a daughter and three grandchildren.

Dr. John Waller

AUSTIN — Dr. John Le Roy Waller, 88, of Austin, father of Mrs. Julian Cole of Midland, died in Austin Thursday. Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at the Weed-Corley Funeral Home here.

A former professor of history at The University of Texas at El Paso,

Midlander critical

Mark Wayne Carlton, 19, of 1105 W. Missouri Ave. was listed in critical condition today in Midland Memorial Hospital with a gunshot wound to the head.

Carlton was involved in a reported accidental shooting which occurred about 6:20 p.m. Thursday, according to police.

Police said Carlton was sitting in a chair in a friend's apartment in the 700 block of North Carrijo Street, talking on a telephone. A friend of Carlton's was sitting next to him, holding a .22-caliber pistol, police were told. According to reports, the gun discharged and a bullet struck Carlton in the head.

Reunion slated

LAMESA — The annual Dawson County Pioneer Reunion is scheduled to begin Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Dawson County Community Center.

A business session and musical program will follow the noon meal, leaving the morning free for visiting. A memorial tribute will be given in honor of all Dawson County pioneers.

Waller was a member of the Texas Historical Association, the West Texas and East Texas Historical Associations and the Southwest Social Science Association.

Other survivors include his wife, son, sister, six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Lawrence Nickols

KERMIT — Lawrence S. Nickols, 49, of Kermit, formerly of Big Spring, died early Thursday in his home after an apparent heart attack.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in Cooper Funeral Home here. Burial will be in Kermit Cemetery with military honors.

Nickols was born March 6, 1929, in Texas. He was a retired taxi operator, a veteran of World War II and a member of the Wade Yates VFW Post No. 6284 in Kermit. He was a Baptist. He had lived in Kermit two months.

Survivors include his wife, Barbara Nickols of Kermit; a son, Daniel Nickols of Odessa; a daughter, Marilyn Grogan of Kermit; two brothers, a sister and a grandchild.

Faustino Sanchez

Rosary for Faustino Sanchez, 62, of 1302 N. Whitaker St. will be said at 8 p.m. today in Thomas Funeral Home. Services will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

Sanchez died Thursday morning at his residence after a sudden illness.

He was born Jan. 15, 1916, in Terlingua. He was a veteran of World War II. He married Maria Elena Martinez in 1968 in Granbury. He recently moved to Midland from Granbury.

Survivors include his wife; two daughters, Maria Pule of Granbury and Cuca Ortega of Alpine; four stepdaughters, Gloria Gomez, Josephine Rizzo, Lucy Felix and Ernestine Martinez, all of Tularosa, N.M.; two stepsons, Edward Martinez and Tommy Martinez, both of Tularosa; four sisters, Paubla Rojo of Lubbock and Petra Sanchez, Maria Lopez and Jessie Lopez, all of Midland, and 17 grandchildren.

Lamesa woman killed

BIG SPRING — A Lamesa woman died Thursday morning in a Big Spring hospital from injuries received in a two-vehicle accident which occurred Wednesday afternoon north of Big Spring, according to a Department of Public Safety spokesman.

Una Love, 74, of Lamesa was driving a vehicle east on an unmarked county road about 23 miles north of Big Spring, according to the DPS report. David Thacker, 21, of Big Spring was driving a truck-tractor with a semi-trailer south on U.S. 87. The two vehicles collided, said the DPS, and Mrs. Love was pinned in her vehicle about 20 minutes.

She was taken to a Big Spring hospital where she died about 10:03 a.m. Thursday, the DPS reported.

Guidelines printed on legality of job inequalities

By JANET LOWE
Copy News Service

At a working women's conference the questions were flying fast, and both a female judge and several women attorneys attempted to answer the barrage of questions.

One issue came up again and again, in different ways, by different women. It boiled down to this. What, exactly, is sex discrimination on the job? How do you know for certain when you've been discriminated against, and what can be done about it?

These questions have bothered women and minorities for many years. Fortunately, easy-to-read guidelines are available from several sources.

The Boston, Mass., YWCA, for instance, has printed a pamphlet listing common examples of discrimination. These include being hired to work in a lower-paying job than male employees whose qualifications are comparable to or less than your own.

Other examples of discrimination were: training men to fill jobs that are higher paying than yours; being hired or promoted to a job formerly held by a male employee, but being paid less for it than he was.

Other discriminatory situations, however, are not as obvious as these.

Few women realize that if they are clerical workers or secretaries using special skills, such as typing or stenography, and if they are paid the same or lower than male messengers, unskilled laborers or trainee-apprentices, they are being discriminated against.

Editorial Research Reports of Washington, D.C., published another small book, "Women in the Workforce," which elaborates on the Equal Opportunity Commission guidelines defining sex discrimination. These guides point out that the refusal to hire an individual cannot be based on assumed employment characteristics of women in general, and that the preferences of customers or existing employees should not be the basis for refusing to hire an individual.

If you discover a large gap between the legality of discrimination and the reality of it, a complaint can be filed with the Equal Opportunity Commission, the secretary of Labor, or the Office of Civil Rights of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. On state and local levels there are similar agencies. The National Organization of Women or the American Civil Liberties Union may be able to help you find financial aid for your suit.

DEAR ABBY

Intentions fine but still wrong

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is in a home for unwed mothers, has decided to put her baby up for adoption. She's not even sure who the baby's father is, so I think she's doing the right thing. (She's only 14.) She doesn't even want to see the baby after it's born. She says it will be easier to forget if she doesn't.

Abby, even though it would be a lie, what harm would there be in telling her that her baby died at birth? I wouldn't ask the doctor to tell the lie—I will take all the responsibility myself. I just want the doctor and the people at the hospital where she will have the baby to back me up on my story.

My daughter has suffered enough already, and it will be much easier for her if she thinks that her baby died. Then she won't have to go through life wondering where her child is. I can see only good in this lie, but if you think I'm wrong, please tell me why and I'll do as you say. Thank you.—HEARTSICK IN SEATTLE

DEAR HEARTSICK: Although your intentions are good, you can't accomplish good through evil acts. Please, dear, abandon this dishonest scheme. Regardless of how well-intentioned it is, it's wrong.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am bragging, but my problem is that I am too attractive. When I was in high school I never had any girlfriends because they were all afraid I'd take their boyfriends away from them. When I went to work I had to quit one job after another because my bosses were forever making passes at me. Now that I am married, I have the same problem.

All of my husband's friends proposition me, and I have to tell them off. And we don't have any married couples to go around with because the wives are afraid of the competition. Sometimes I wish I were born ugly. What's the solution?—"RED" IN REDWOOD CITY

DEAR "RED": Face it, dear, if you aren't consciously inviting the attentions of the opposite sex, you must be doing so unconsciously. No man in his right mind makes a pass at a statue. He needs some encouragement. A woman who has to beat off every man she meets should find out why.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became engaged to a very pretty girl. She's from a good family and so am I. All our friends and relatives think we are just right for each other, but the more I see of her, the more doubts I have about how this marriage would work out.

She can be sweet as honey one minute and very sullen and pouty the next. She has at times revealed a side of herself that I never saw before. She's spoiled, demanding and selfish. And stubborn, too. I'm not saying I'm perfect, but I don't think I could take this girl's unpredictable moodiness for a lifetime.

Why I am trying to ask, my dear Abigail, is this: How does a gentleman break an engagement?—IN DEEP IN INDIANA

DEAR IN: The same way a lady breaks one. He simply tells his intended in the kindest manner possible that he's decided to keep his bachelor button and forgo the orange blossoms. You may be in for a few unpleasant moments, but you'll both survive it. Better a broken engagement than a broken marriage.

Female captain alone on seas

BALTIMORE (AP)—The 52,000-ton Polish grain ship, "Unwersytet Torounski," maneuvered cautiously to its mooring alongside the Port Covington Grain Pier. Its female captain stood on the deck to supervise the handling of mooring lines and the start of cargo transfer.

Capt. Danuta Kobylinska-Walas believes she is the only woman in command of a freighter on the high seas.

Petite and auburn-haired, Capt. Kobylinska-Walas has been a seaman nearly 30 years and has held her master's papers since 1963. She signed onto a coastal freighter as a "deck boy" at the age of 16 in 1948.

She's a graduate of Poland's Marine Academy. Her husband, who once served as her first mate, died in a hunting accident a few years ago, she said.

Not all Chisox find pot 'o gold

By STEVE TAUB NEW YORK (AP) — Like Richie Zisk, Lyman Bostock and Rich Gossage, Bob Molinaro signed his 1978 contract as a free agent.

Unlike Zisk, Bostock and Gossage, Molinaro is not a millionaire. "I didn't make that much money," said Molinaro, who signed a one-year contract with the Chicago White Sox last Sept. 23 for $65,000.

Last season, the 28-year-old outfielder from Newark, N.J., spent his 10th season in the Detroit Tigers' organization, without a contract. When he was recalled in early September, he was forced to sign for the remainder of the season and for 1978.

Wilson Ranch downs Tulsa SAN ANTONIO—Wilson Ranch remained undefeated in the Texas Polo League going into matches here today and Saturday.

Wilson Ranch scored two goals. For Tulsa, Dick Alberts, Nometo Garcia and Red Armour all had two goals while Tulsa, with a 21 goal rating to Wilson's 23, received a two-goal handicap.

Sox' Lynn suspended NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Lynn, the Boston Red Sox' usually mild-mannered center fielder, was suspended for three days and fined an undisclosed amount by the American League Thursday for an incident during last Sunday's game at Detroit.

Bauer still wears the scars

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent It's that darned, infernal telephone that finally gets you, says Hank Bauer, a two-striper in baseball's most unique club — managers fired or simply bounced out of the job by Charles O. Finley.

"I've had it both ways — one time I quit, the other time I got the sack," the former New York Yankees outfielder said from his home in Overland Park, Kan.

"MANAGING FOR Charles O. Finley is quite an experience. He calls you day and night, 24 hours. He wakes you up in the middle of the night with some hair-brained suggestion. He calls you in the dugout with the game in progress.

Bullets win, 106-98 (Continued from 2C) and the hub of its defense, saw the difference immediately. "They were playing with more intensity tonight," he said. "Their forwards took a lot of shots. It was like they knew that sooner or later, they were going to start hitting."

HAYES, MEANWHILE, shot 12-for-22 and got 12 of his points in the third quarter when the Bullets turned back a Seattle challenge and put the game away. Washington had raced to a 16-point lead in the first period, beating the Sonics downcourt to score on layups and short jumpers.

Tanana notches eighth victory

By JOHN NELSON AP Sports Writer

Frank Tanana, California's lanky left-hander, doesn't have to reach very far back in his memory to recall a season like the one he is enjoying now. But he doesn't like to think about it.

Tanana became the major league's first eight-game winner in 1978 with a four-hitter Thursday night as the Angels whipped Chicago 6-0. He has lost only once and has four complete games, including his last two.

How does it feel? "I went through it last year," said the 24-year-old Tanana, who lowered his earned run average to 2.49. "I got high and thought it was tremendous. Then I got hurt."

Tanana started the 1977 season by winning 10 of his first 12 and had 14 consecutive complete games. Then his left arm went dead—an inflamed triceps tendon. He struggled for seven weeks and finally called it quits on Sept. 9 with a 15-9 record. Still, he led the league with an ERA of 2.54.

"I thought it was like the end of the world and I'm not going to put myself through that again," said Tanana. "I'm going to take each game as it comes, and if I don't win, I'll be miffed."

Tanana, who says he has relied less on his fastball this year while concentrating more on finesse, had a no-hitter through 52-3 innings. Junior Moore broke it up with a clean single to center field.

"I've always heard, 'Don't get beat on your best pitch,'" said Tanana. "I gave him my best pitch, a changeup, and I got hurt."

Rick Miller and Ron Fairly each drove in two runs for California, which scored four times in the first inning. Bobby Grich hit a solo homer in the fourth, his second in two nights and third of the season. The victory gave California a half-game lead over Oakland in the AL West.

Orlando 2, Tigers 1
Lee May hit his ninth homer of the season, a two-out solo shot in the eighth inning, to lead the Orioles past Detroit for the third time in their four-game series.

Left-hander Scott McGregor, 43, threw a six-hitter and won his fourth straight. It was his third complete game in a row, and in 27 innings he has allowed only 14 hits.

Baltimore scored its other run in the third when Larry Harlow hit his third homer of the season, and Detroit's lone run also scored on a homer, Lance Parrish's fifth of the season in the seventh inning.

Detroit came into the series leading the AL East and now trails Boston and New York in third place after scoring only four runs in four games, including two shutouts.

John Hiller, 42, was the loser in relief. Red Sox 9, Blue Jays 5

Jim Rice ended an 0-for-11 slump with a three-run homer, and Dwight Evans hit a two-run blast to power Boston past Toronto, which has lost five of its last six games.

Boston right-hander Dennis Eckersley, 4-1, gave up a solo homer in the sixth to Alan Ashby, his first of the season, and had to be relieved in the eighth. Dick Drago got his fourth save.

Tom Underwood, 1-5, was the loser after pitching five-plus innings. Yanks 9, Indians 3
Bucky Dent hit a two-run single in the second inning, and pinch hitter Jim Spencer had a two-run double in the fifth to back Dick Tidrow's eight-hit pitching. Tidrow is now 3-3.

The Yankees strung together seven consecutive hits over the second and third innings off Cleveland's Rick Waits, 3-4. Dent ended the second inning when he was caught trying to stretch his RBI single, allowing the Yankees to continue their string of hits.

The Indians scored twice in the fifth, highlighted by Wayne Cagle's RBI triple and a sacrifice fly by Ron Hassey.

Rangers 7, Twins 1
Richie Zisk and John Lowenstein each drove in a pair of runs, Zisk with two singles and Lowenstein with a double, and Ferguson Jenkins, 5-2, scattered seven hits.

Jenkins, a 34-year-old right-hander obtained before the start of the season from Boston, gave up two hits over the final six innings as he won the fifth game in his past six starts. Gary Serun, 3-1, was the loser.

"Last year, I was stuffed into the bullpen by an ugly, old bald-headed man who didn't know anything about pitching," Jenkins said of Boston Manager Don Zimmer. "Now I have the opportunity to start, and I'm doing what I do best—pitch."

Royals 8, Mariners 4
George Brett hit a two-run triple in the third inning, and Amos Otis sparked a four-run Kansas City fourth with a two-run single, giving left-hander Paul Splitteroff his first victory since April 22.

Splitteroff, 34, yielded seven hits to snap a four-game losing streak before being relieved after seven innings.

Ruppert Jones doubled in a run for Seattle in the third with his fifth two-bagger in five games, and Juan Bernhard homered for the Mariners in the sixth.

Buerkle sidlined
BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Leg problems have forced Dick Buerkle, the world indoor mile record holder, to call off his plans to compete in the Prefontaine Classic next week at Eugene, Ore.

right-center to score White. Calhoun followed with a single to make it 4-3 and Van Horn blasted a triple past the diving Marda in right for a 5-3 advantage.

Things looked great for Lee fans until the Texans scored twice in the top of the seventh. Dunn and Marlow had base hits and Dearman walked to fill the bases. Urquidí popped up to third, but Gibson, who had gone hitless in nine previous trips to the plate in the series, singled in two runs.

Lee did not score in the bottom of the seventh even though Willis singled, Urquidí threw out Willis and Dearman struck out Schmidt, swinging.

Then came that wonderfully exciting bottom of the eighth after the Texans took its 6-5 lead on a single and stolen base by Sheffield along with Marlow's double into right.

Pitts, White and Clements all came through to eliminate the Texans from the playoffs with one swing of Clements' bat the clincher.

Sam Houston winds up 23-12 on the year while Lee takes a 25-9 mark into next week's quarterfinal series against either Lubbock Monterey or El Paso. Lubbock Monterey bombed Anderson, 16-4 Wednesday night in El Paso and a win Friday in Lubbock will move the Plainsmen into the series with Lee for a shot at a berth in the state tourney in two weeks.

BATTLE SCENE

Cubs try to keep cap on bullpen ace

Two years ago the Chicago Cubs bled Bruce Sutter into the National League. That was in 1976 when he was first brought up from Wichita after the start of the season.

Now they are trying to put a lid on the enthusiasm of the off-season printer from Pennsylvania. Back in 1975, Whitey Lockman, then the bossman of the Chicago Cubs, sat in Midland's Cubs Stadium and scanned the incoming National League scores as they came over the ticker tape while watching Midland. Bruce's name showed up at the tailend of a close game and Lockman noted:

"We spotted Sutter for the first few relief appearances, hoping to help him get adjusted without ruining his confidence. He has done so well, we'll start using him in 'game-on-the-line' situations."

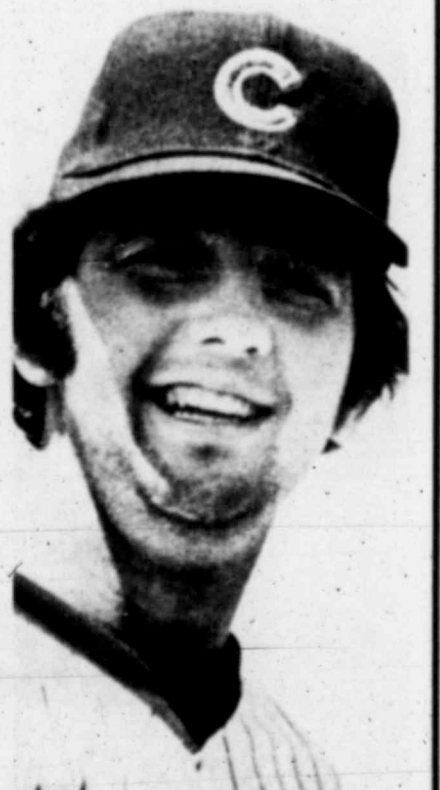

The 6-2, 190-pounder who had 13 saves in Midland's Texas League pennant winning year in 1975, showed the jump from AA ball to the majors wasn't too big a leap, recording 10 saves to lead the team and being named Chicago's rookie of the year.

THAT WAS just an appetizer. Last year, Bruce and his spit-finger fastball were the most feared late-inning menace in the National League. He was 7-3, won-lost, but notched a remarkable 31 saves. For a while, the Cubs looked pennant-bound, as Sutter waited impatiently in the bullpen for the call that almost became a daily ritual.

It finally caught up with him, all the work, and an injury put him on the disabled list for three weeks and the actual time missed was almost twice that.

Still, he had the kind of year that earned him recognition as the National League All-Star relief pitcher on two different teams.

THIS SPRING there were some anxious moments, but the arm is sound again and the spit-finger is working its magic. In the first 21 games, Sutter

Bruce Sutter. either won, lost or saved eight of them. But there's a difference. Manager Herman Franks is guarding against a repeat of the overwork that cost the Cubs Sutter just when they needed him most.

Big time pros own emotions, too

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

In the complex, tensiled and gilded world of big-time professional sports, it often is difficult to realize that the components are not cold machines grinding out their million-dollar extravaganzas but actually human beings with normal frailties and sensitivities.

And sometimes they are confused, introverted individuals who need understanding or maybe just immature 18-year-old kids.

THIS WAS brought graphically to light in recent days with the latest eruption of dissension in the New York Yankees' clubhouse, not totally unexpected, and in the stable of the great 3-year-old race horse, Affirmed — totally shocking.

Two different situations in two widely separated sports, yet on common footing in that they both represented snap responses to frustration, wounded pride and absence of maturity.

Let's look at the second case first — the dramatic victory of Affirmed in last Saturday's Preakness.

It should have been a moment of great rejoicing for everyone connected with the effort — Lou and Patrice Wolfson, the owners; Laz Barrera, the cagey trainer, and 18-year-old Steve Cautchen, the jockey. It was time to laugh and celebrate.

But Barrera, a pleasant, easy-going Latin from Cuba, used the post-race occasion to unleash some built-up frustrations. That lovable old Laz should be irked was understandable; that he should pick this particular forum for his outburst was most uncharacteristic.

BARRERA WAS upset first by the fact that Cautchen, flying in from New York after fulfilling a heavy riding schedule, reached Pimlico while the horses were being saddled for the big race.

"I waited and waited," Barrera fumed, "but he did not show up. I have only a few minutes to talk to him in the paddock."

The trainer's frayed nerves were further jabbed after the race when Pimlico officials whisked the young jockey aboard the single press box elevator while Barrera and his wife were shunted to the rear, forced to wait 20 minutes for the next trip.

"He knew we were back there," Barrera said, referring to Cautchen, "He should have stepped back to make sure we got on the elevator, too."

It was a case of punctured pride which might have angered any of us. Here was a man who had spent hours, days and months preparing a horse for the big occasion only to see all his efforts drowned in adulation over a kid who — not undeservedly — had mesmerized the sports world.

It was Cautchen who was interviewed by Howard Cosell on national television. It was Cautchen, not Barrera, who was fawned over and accorded royal treatment although track experts concede that a winning race is 90 per cent horse and trainer, 10 per cent jockey.

Told of Barrera's chagrin, Cautchen was crestfallen. He said he had reached Pimlico as quickly as possible. He said he was a victim of circumstances in the elevator incident. Of Barrera, he said, "I love the guy."

One can appreciate Barrera's dismay at not being given the recognition he deserved. But the trainer should understand also that Steve Cautchen still is 18 years old, and on that Saturday, he was swallowed up by the post-race hullabaloo.

The Yankees' incident is less excusable. These guys in pinstripes are grown men, champions of their sport, should be examples of maturity and decorum.

"He knew we were back there," Barrera said, referring to Cautchen, "He should have stepped back to make sure we got on the elevator, too."

It was a case of punctured pride which might have angered any of us. Here was a man who had spent hours, days and months preparing a horse for the big occasion only to see all his efforts drowned in adulation over a kid who — not undeservedly — had mesmerized the sports world.

It was Cautchen who was interviewed by Howard Cosell on national television. It was Cautchen, not Barrera, who was fawned over and accorded royal treatment although track experts concede that a winning race is 90 per cent horse and trainer, 10 per cent jockey.

Told of Barrera's chagrin, Cautchen was crestfallen. He said he had reached Pimlico as quickly as possible. He said he was a victim of circumstances in the elevator incident. Of Barrera, he said, "I love the guy."

One can appreciate Barrera's dismay at not being given the recognition he deserved. But the trainer should understand also that Steve Cautchen still is 18 years old, and on that Saturday, he was swallowed up by the post-race hullabaloo.

The Yankees' incident is less excusable. These guys in pinstripes are grown men, champions of their sport, should be examples of maturity and decorum.

Rusty Staub turns hobby into business

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Rusty Staub took off his baseball cap and donned his chef's hat the other day to cook a sumptuous lunch for some friends at his mid-Manhattan eatery.

The assignment was almost as tough for Staub as swinging against Nolan Ryan. "The kitchen's hot today and we needed three different sauces for you guys," said Rusty, who has turned his gourmet cooking hobby into a thriving business.

At 34, Staub is the senior citizen in the lineup of the surprising Detroit Tigers, who have been residing in first place in the East Division for most of the American League season.

And Rusty can't hide his enthusiasm over the young Tigers.

Detroit's success has been built around some hot hitters, including Staub. Rusty is hitting .285, but the bat he likes to talk about most belongs to first baseman Jason Thompson, who is hitting a hefty .306 with 11 home runs and 29 runs batted in.

"He's got some sweet swing," said Staub. "The first time I saw him swing, I knew he'd be something special. What's he got, 11 homers? He'll have 15 by the end of the month."

Thompson is, of course, an everyday player in Manager Ralph Houk's lineup, but the rest of the infield is a platoon operation that would make Houk's old boss, Casey Stengel, proud.

At second base and shortstop, Houk uses a full platoon with four youngsters. Rookies Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell form one pair while Steve Dillard and Mark Wagner comprise the other. Whitaker and Trammell play against right-handers and Dillard and Wagner go against lefties. At third base, the platoon is veteran Aurelio Rodriguez and young Phil Mankowski and again, Houk has been successful with it.

The manager also platoons catchers, with Milt May playing against right-handers and Lance Parrish against lefties.

The pitching staff has been a picture of patchwork, with Houk juggling bodies like Bob Sykes, Milt Wilcox and Jack Billingham while heavyweights like Mark Fidrych and Dave Rozema rest their ailing arms.

Put it all together and it spells first place so far for the Tigers and a whole lot of fun for the designated hitter, Chef Staub, who is swinging a productive bat and does quite a job with barbecued short ribs on his days off. "The kids have been great," said Rusty.

So was the veal picata.

From FANS, the Ralph Nader sports consumer watchdog group, comes the interesting information that the New York Yankees have the highest ticket price scale in the major leagues. It costs an average of $5.19 for every ticket sold to a game at Yankee Stadium. That's 54 cents more than the Boston Red Sox, who finished second in this derby at $4.65.

On the other end of the scale are the San Diego Padres, whose average ticket price of $3.12 is the lowest in the majors. Of course, the Yankees won the world championship last season and the Padres finished fifth in the National League West.

You might assume, then, that winning has its rewards ... at the box office cash register. But then again, that's not surprising. You'd expect to pay more for a first-run show than you would for an off-Broadway production.

The average price ticket for a baseball game is $3.98, which would seem to support Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's contention that baseball is the most economical entertainment around.

But Peter Gruenstein, executive director of FANS, says that's a deceptive statistic, pointing out that baseball teams play twice as many games as professional hockey and basketball teams and 10 times as many games as pro football teams.

Still, the fact remains that for a single fan to buy his way into a single baseball game, it costs less money than it does for any other sporting event. All the other statistics don't mean much. What really counts is the dollar outlay and in that department, baseball remains a pretty good buy.

Midlanders at WTC play in JC nationals

SNYDER—Chris Brown and Steve Wise of Midland will travel to the National Junior College Athletic Association tournament at Chapel Hill, Tenn., June 6-9, competing in the event for Western Texas College.

Brown, cocaptain of the Westerners, is a two-year letterman and led the Westerners with a 72.7 average, 1.5 over par, this season. He was named on the All-Western Conference team and the All-Region V team. He tied for runnerup in the regional.

Brown's low round this year was 65, seven-under at Huber CC

Great champions never in a hurry

The Los Angeles Times

I didn't see it, but they tell me Joe Louis used to stretch out on a rubbing table 10 minutes before he was to go out and defend his heavyweight title before 80,000 screaming fans — and go sound asleep.

I have seen Henry Aaron yawning in the on-deck circle as he awaited his chance to bat in the World Series with the bases loaded and 60 million looking on.

I have watched Notre Dame teams walk boredly onto the field at USC games while 104,000 fans go quietly crazy in the seats.

I am told they had to wake up Grover Cleveland Alexander in the bullpen the day he went in to snuff out a seventh-inning rally by the Yankees and save the 1926 World Series.

Look, did you ever see Joe DiMaggio hurry anywhere? Did you ever see Carl Hubbell patiently standing there fingering the ball while some fidgety batter dug himself in at home plate, crossed himself, pounded his spikes and pounded the plate in a shower of dirt —, and then Hub calmly threw him a double-play ball? Ever see Whitey Ford with that little half-smile on his face waiting for the batter to get comfortable up there before he struck him out?

LIKE TO see Chrissie Evert standing there icily at the baseline making her opponent lunge and dash and sweat and miss? Recall Walter Hagen just barely making the first tee on time and then smilingly closing out Sarazen on the 16th hole playing in street shoes?

The great ones are always relaxed. They are always sure of themselves. They win without seeming effort. Remember the Dallas Cowboys looking on in amazement at this year's Super Bowl as the Denver Broncos leaped on each other and pounded backs and helmets frenziedly like Hudson High just before the Cowboys manhandled them 27-10?

AFFIRMED, THE race horse, is the four-footed equivalent of all these great relaxers of sport. He is Crosby singing in the shower. Tracy playing a priest. Louis blinking himself awake during the introductions. Evert at a baseline. Dean Martin with a joke. Hagen over a four-foot putt. You picture him humming.

Watch him as he comes out on a racetrack. Not a speck of foam on him. He looks like a bride-path horse.

He doesn't need that lead pony. He's not fighting the bit, bowing his neck, bucking the jock. He looks like a waiter taking an order, a guy who has just come to fix the plumbing. Thoroughbreds are notoriously high-strung, but bands are playing, balloons are rising, flash cameras are popping — and Affirmed comes out like a guy in his robe to pick up the morning paper.

Nothing bothers him, much less these clowns he's being asked to beat in the race. If Affirmed were human, he'd be a ballplayer whose hat never fell off. He'd be a lineman who never talked much. Gary Cooper. The other horses look as if a swarm of bees were after them. Affirmed looks like the butler, A Cadillac, The Easy Rider, A Shakespearean actor doing Hamlet for the 300th time.

HE MAY get collared in the Belmont. That other horse may finally get past his saddle cloth. But it's my bet he'll still be Mr. Cool. He'll be like that tough, grizzled old pro pitcher that my friend, the editor, Frank McCulloch, used to tell about. Seems this old-timer had pitched an impeccable shutout game for 11 innings in his fading years in Pocatello one night, until some raw young kid came up in the 12th and knocked the ball over into Montana for a 1-0 win. The youngsters on the pitcher's team cringed. They thought he'd come in and bust up the furniture and break windows with his bat. Instead, he just came down the dugout steps, spit a stream of tobacco juice, stuck his glove in his pocket, and said, "Son of a gun, he hit a good pitch."

If he could talk and he gets beat, I think that's what Affirmed would say. And, if he wins, he'd just shrug, "It's a living!"

Panatta wins over Pfister

ROME (AP)—Hometown hero Adriano Panatta, with a little help from the crowd and some disputed calls, edged Californian Hank Pfister in a thrilling marathon tiebreaker Thursday and advanced to the quarter-finals of the $230,000 Italian Open Tennis Championships.

The 27-year-old Panatta, unranked although a winner here two years ago, knocked off the 24-year-old Pfister 5-7, 6-3, 7-6 after the tiebreaker went to 15-13.

Stock market losses

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market lost more ground today, confronted with the rapid spread of a prime rate increase in the banking industry.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, off 20.01 points in the past three sessions, dropped another 3.90 to 831.51 by noon today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Numerous large banks across the country raised their prime rates this morning from 8 1/2 to 8 7/8 percent.

The latest increase in the basic charge on blue-chip loans was initiated Thursday by Chicago's Continental Illinois Bank.

Analysts said traders also were put off by the market's failure to make a rally attempt at midday Thursday stand-up.

General Foods topped the active list, off 1/4 at 31 1/4. A 100,000-share block traded at that price.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks slipped 12 to 54.12. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index managed a .03 gain to 144.00.

Free enterprise, socialism part of Israeli life

The Los Angeles Times BET HERUT, Israel - Rivka Tsur quietly slipped away from the discussion about her hereditary way of life to get some more tea and another platter of cake and cookies for her guests.

While she was in the kitchen, her husband, Yehuda, told her U.S. visitors, "Our system here at Bet Herut is so radical those Russians, with all their talk about socialism, cannot even understand what we're doing, much less copy our ways."

"We all voluntarily live out our socialist beliefs in Israeli communities like Bet Herut."

Yet, somehow everything about the Tsur family looked nonradical and middle-class American.

Rivka, piling sweets onto the platters and then urging everyone to "eat, eat," was surely almost a caricature of an American Jewish mother.

The Tsurs live in one of the 600 rural collective and cooperative Israeli villages that turn out nearly 70 percent of the nation's farm products.

All 85 families at Bet Herut (House of Freedom) earn exactly the same basic income. And collectively, the families own 250 acres of citrus trees, a turkey ranch, a supermarket, a printing company that produces more silk screen prints than any other company in the Middle East and the modern meat processing plant where Yehuda works.

Last year he was elected executive officer of Bet Herut, known as a moshav, where leadership and most jobs are rotated regularly and where each family lives in individually owned homes.

The Tsurs were included as part of a 12-Nation Los Angeles Times survey of the worldwide trend toward industrial democracy, which is giving millions of workers more control over their own jobs than they have ever had before.

Industrial democracy is a relatively new concept for most European countries, but it is spreading rapidly in various forms, most often at the individual job level.

However, industrial democracy in Israel is unique in the world.

There is relatively little of it in private industry, which accounts for about 40 percent of the country's economy.

Industrial democracy plays a significant role in government enterprises, which are now required by law to encourage worker participation in their decision-making processes.

In firms owned by Histadrut, the country's labor federation, industrial democracy is widely practiced. That involves 25 percent of the country's economy. Histadrut members, who work in all sectors of the economy, make up more than 75 percent of the work force.

But by far the most complete system of industrial democracy is practiced in the rural cooperatives and collectives known as moshavim and kibbutzim.

Political democracy has been functioning since Israel was founded in 1948. It is continuing to function despite terrorist attacks that some feared would be used as an excuse to substantially curb political democracy and despite the state of war between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

But the existence of political democracy is not connected directly with the question of whether workers should have a significant voice in running their places of employment.

Israel's industrial democracy goes back to the early 1920s when few capitalists were willing to invest money in a badly underdeveloped desert area that some Jews hoped would some day become a Jewish nation.

Those who believed in the eventual creation of a Jewish state pooled their money and efforts to create collective farms and small enterprises, which were usually operated by what was then the new Jewish labor federation, Histadrut.

All members of each kibbutz and moshav, such as Bet Herut, are members of Histadrut, and decisions about most of the country's farm production are made at community membership meetings directly by those who work on the farms.

That degree of industrial democracy is practiced nowhere else in Israel. It is limited to about 5 percent of the population. (The rural communities now include businesses other than farming, but farming is still the principal occupation on all of them.)

Unlike a moshav, there is no private property in a kibbutz. Families live in community-owned houses, eat together in communal dining rooms, and children sleep in dormitories.

Each member draws what he or she needs from community stores.

A kibbutz is operated on the theory that all work that is useful and necessary to the community is of equal value.

This theory is used at Bet Herut, but it also combines the kibbutz philosophy with that of a moshav, or cooperative, where each family cultivates its own land, lives in private homes and joins other families for group marketing, purchasing and selling.

In both types of rural communities, though, "corporate" decisions are all made directly by the workers and their families.

Indirect industrial democracy is practiced in the union-owned companies whose managers are appointed by worker-elected Histadrut officers.

The union is into every phase of the Israeli economy. It is the country's second largest employer, next to the government. It operates a daily newspaper, the country's second largest bank (Hapoalim), a major insurance company; most Hebrew language classes for new immigrants, national sports events, theaters and the bulk of Israel's health care system.

But it is Hevrat Ovdim, the economic arm of Histadrut, which allows Israelis to legitimately claim that their country practices as much industrial democracy as any other nation and far more than most.

New York's famous skid row, Bowery, changing

The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — The young black man leaned against the door and seemed to shove against it with all his weight. The resisting door swung open and the man stood, rocking slightly, blinking in the pale fluorescent light, a fist jammed inside the pocket of an old Army field jacket. Across a desk, another young man stared at him impassively.

"Can I help you?" Tony Gardner, the man at the desk, asked.

"Yeah, I want help. I want to stop drinking."

"When is the last time you had a drink?"

"This morning."

Gardner looked at him a moment, long enough to let the man standing in front of him know that he was being questioned, in a way, by the silence.

"Come with me," Gardner said.

It is the inspiration of such moments that can cause Gardner, 36, to believe that things on the Bowery, perhaps the most infamous skid row in the world, are actually getting better.

Having spent a small slice of his own life in the Bowery's doorways and flophouses, Gardner has some perspective on the matter and, although he cannot say that derelict drunks are a vanishing breed here, their numbers are declining.

And the Bowery, slowly and almost imperceptibly, is changing.

In the 1960s, it was estimated that the Bowery was home to about 15,000 down-and-out and generally besotted wanderers, nearly all of them men, who survived on pensions or panhandling, welfare or day laborer jobs and who sometimes died of the wine their money bought or froze to death in alleyways.

Although the derelict population is not easy to count, a New York state Senate study in 1976 determined that Bowery residents had declined to about 5,000. Some say that many Bowery alcoholics have moved to other neighborhoods in the city, most notably the upper West Side.

An indication of the shrinking Bowery population is the decline in the number of flophouses operating there. In recent years, at least five of the larger ones have been closed. The owners of a number of those remaining have complained that their costs are rising and that they are being forced out of business by changing times.

"You have more people getting sober down here," Gardner said one afternoon recently as he sat in the office of the Bowery Residents' Committee, which he described as a "social rehabilitation and self-help alcoholism treatment center" operated by the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism.

"There are more people getting sober and more people who are dedicated to helping a sick, suffering alcoholic. We are beginning to get a lot of cooperation from people here. We've had merchants call us, hotel clerks, people who work here and are realizing that alcoholism is a serious problem down here."

Actually, a person would have to be blind not to recognize the problem of alcohol here. Even with the supposedly diminished wine population on the Bowery, the number of men to be seen unconscious on the streets, their mouths lolling open and their clothes — such as they are — covered with unspeakable filth and grime, remains astonishing.

"You see more men out on the sidewalks now that the weather is warmer," said Rudy Ricks, who works with Gardner on the Bowery Residents' Committee. Ricks and a nurse, Elizabeth Mudd, were making the rounds of some of the flophouses on their daily "outreach" calls, offering to aid the sick and to help a willing but stumbling drunk get sober.

The sick are common. Drunks who want to get sober — and stay sober — are harder to find.

Flophouses in the Bowery look very much alike. The Comet, for example, is reached by a long tiled stairway with brass railings. The sign on the second-floor cashier's window says that there are no rooms available. Other signs prohibit drinking in the lobby and playing radios without earplugs. A television set is tuned to the morning quiz shows. Old men sit in the rows of chairs on the tiled floor, reading copies of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's newspaper, which sells for a dime. The headline at the top of the front page reads, "The Life of the Lonely Lush."

Elizabeth Mudd smiled as she passed through the room, saying hello and nodding to men she had seen there before.

"How are you?" she asked a man sitting by a window. His eyes were watery-sick, his skin a blotchy red.

"Not so good," he said.

"Do you drink?" she asked.

"Would I be down here if I didn't?" he answered.

She talked to him for 10 minutes, gave him the address of her office and told him to come by if he felt that he needed help.

"I'll be all right for a while," he said, his eyes twinkling as he spoke to her. He lifted the raincoat on the windowsill next to him. Under it was a green pint bottle of wine.

Most of the Bowery flophouses offer a tenant either a locker and a bed in a dormitory or a cubicle, usually about 6 feet long and 4 feet wide, that provides some privacy. The cubicle, tax included, costs $2.68 a night. The bed and locker cost $2 a night. The difference will buy a pint of wine.

The man who has no money at all for shelter can still get assistance at the city-run Men's Shelter on E. 3rd St., which issues tickets to the destitute. The tickets are good for lodging and three meals a day. Restaurant owners and hotel keepers are reimbursed by the city.

The hotels are not particularly clean (the odors in some of them are overpowering), but they do offer shelter from the elements.

After 3-year hiatus, Cassidy coming back

The Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — A few years ago David Cassidy had the American Dream pretty well locked in his hip pocket. He was the golden boy, Keith partridge, the baby-faced star of the hit TV series, "The Partridge Family," a bubble-gum music messiah whose records were certified gold, a flutter of untold millions of prepubescent hearts.

He played to packed concert halls and was mobbed wherever he went. Teen magazines wanted to know what David Cassidy ate for breakfast. Toy stores stockpiled a healthy inventory of David Cassidy dolls. Kids wallpapered their bedrooms with David Cassidy posters. It was the star-maker machinery at full throttle.

And then he quit. Quit cold. Three years ago Cassidy called a press conference in England to announce that he was taking time off for a long rest. Insiders exchanged a few knowing winks. He'd come back, but fast. The teen-idol business is a short, swift ride and you'd better let it carry you as far as it can. Ask the Monkees. Ask Bobby Sherman. But David Cassidy decided to step out at the summit.

Cassidy is coming back now. On Sunday he returns to television as the star of a two-hour "Police Story" in which he plays a rookie cop who goes undercover at a high school to crack a narcotics ring.

"I was emotionally and physically drained," Cassidy said the other day of his career break. "I was all used up. You can look at an experience like I had, that incredible media experience, and I think I took it to its farthest point. From there, it would have been a downhill ride and I just had to get out."

"I wasn't bored, I didn't sit around," Cassidy said, "and there was a time in those first couple of years when I wasn't sure I ever wanted to work again. But there's something about getting up in the morning and having something to look forward to. I discovered that I did want to work, I did want something to invest my time in."

"Police Story" was just something that happened," Cassidy explained of his return. "I felt that the quality of the show merited my reading the script and I'd been wanting to work but hadn't yet found anything to do. This script was good, the cast (Vince Edwards, Dane Clark, Anne Lockhart, Dee Wallace) was good and the time was right."

Cassidy added that he and "Police Story" executive producer David Gerber have a further agreement to do an NBC World Premier movie and a possible series beyond that. Cassidy also has a new record contract with Warner Bros.-Curb, with a single due out shortly. So, if there was ever any question, David Cassidy has definitely retired.

Cassidy, 28, could well pass for that high school senior if looks were the judge. Very little has changed in that regard.

Youth baseball big in Midland

Youth baseball is a very active and vital part of the City of Midland.

The Midland Junior Baseball Association starts its 28th year in the Tall City with the program stronger and more popular than ever.

More than 1,200 youngsters participate in the Little League program while an additional 700 athletes play in the Sophomore, Hi-Junior and Senior Leagues with all but the Senior loop being governed by the MJBA.

The Little League program is set up for kids in the nine to 12-age bracket and is composed of six leagues with the North Central and Central Leagues being changed this year to the Mid-Cities League for the first time in the history of LL ball.

THERE ARE THREE divisions in Little League, the American, National and Texas Leagues which are the A, B and C Leagues. This type of setup gives young baseball hopefuls a chance of getting valuable playing experience and starts each youngster at the level he needs to play in order to gain some confidence and improve as he or she moves up the ladder in the MJBA program.

There is not a set rule stating that each kid has to play in every game, but each gets an opportunity to play lots of ball in the program.

The six divisions this year include Tower, North Central, Mid-Cities, Eastern, Southern and Western Leagues with the new setup.

THE SOPHOMORE LEAGUE is divided into two divisions -- Eastern and Western with boys from the 13-14 age group participating in the program and the Hi-Junior League has one division.

Last year Midland was the host for the State Hi-Junior Baseball Tournament at Simon Field in Hogan Park with Houston beating Dallas in the championship game. That Houston team was from Bellaire and in high school ball this year, Bellaire is in the Class AAAA state playoffs with a 34-8 record to show the kind of competition that comes from the program.

In the Sophomore League, the age group is 15 through 16 with the Senior League made up of youngsters from 16 to 18 years of age.

The Little League season runs each year from early April until mid-June while the older boys compete until August, depending if they qualify for the state meets in the sophomore, hi-junior and senior leagues.

To close out the Little League season each summer, the National and American Leagues hold a city tournament with the Nationals playing a single game elimi-

Dodgers' Lasorda relaxes at park

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A look at the schedule of Tommy Lasorda leads you to believe that his time for relaxation, for getting away from it all, comes when he arrives at the ballpark to manage the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The 50-year-old self-proclaimed ambassador for the sport of baseball in general and the Dodgers in particular is constantly on the go in a variety of endeavors, all of which he says he enjoys.

"How can you feel burned out when you're doing something you love to do? I'm giving something back to the Dodgers and to baseball. I'm honored that I'm asked to do so many things," says Lasorda, in his second year as a big league manager.

Among those things are speaking engagements, television commercials and — one of his most recent endeavors — a starring role in a 25-minute sales training-motivational film entitled "You Gotta Believe."

"I hope he can manage as well as he can act," Al Campanis, the Dodgers' vice president in charge of player personnel, said at a recent special screening of the movie.

The screening was held on a Thursday night when the Dodgers were idle. The previous Monday Lasorda attended a circus for crippled children. The Dodgers played a game that night. The following day, he spoke at a luncheon before heading to Dodger Stadium. On Wednesday, there was another luncheon and another game. On Friday, another benefit for crippled children; that night, another game.

"I never dreamed things would be like they are," said Lasorda. "I can't believe what's happened to me. I think I'm the most blessed man in the world. Anytime you do something you hope somebody else can gain from it."

The motivational film is somewhat similar, although more contemporary, than "The Second Effort," which stars the late Green Bay Packers' coach, Vince Lombardi.

"Our objective is to replace the Lombardi film, which has been very successful, with Tommy's film," says 31-year-old George Campanis, one of the sons of the Dodgers' executive and the film's associate producer. "We're very happy with the way it turned out."

Has the relatively sudden acceleration to celebrity changed the man who "bleeds Dodger Blue?"

"Not really. He's just a little busier," says Jo Lasorda, Tommy's wife of 28 years. "He's doing the same things he's always done, just on a larger scale. You just fall into a groove."

Rose has misgivings about giving up his bat

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Pete Rose is having second thoughts about donating the bat for his 3,000th hit to the Baseball Hall of Fame and Museum here.

After learning of the lack of security at the center, the Cincinnati Reds' star said he was delaying sending the bat that put him into an elite group of 13 players when he singled against Montreal May 5.

"If something happened to it, yeah, it would upset me a lot," Rose told the Binghamton Evening Press in a telephone interview Tuesday. "It is upsetting if you know they are not going to take care of it."

Meanwhile, Edward W. Stack, president of the hall, said he had had calls from at least six persons saying they would not donate baseball memorabilia to the 39-year-old facility because of security problems.

But he said an alarm system would be installed within two weeks, and that other security measures were being considered. He refused to give details.

In a recent article, the Press revealed the museum lacks burglar alarms, is guarded around the clock only in the summer, has residential-type locks and latches, and that many displays and paintings are unsecured.

Besides upgrading security for the current facility, officials plan to have more safety features in a $2.5 million addition to the Hall, scheduled to open next March, according to Director Howard C. Talbot.

The privately owned facility gets about 90 percent of its funding from admission fees.

Harrod fined by court

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — Delmar S. Harrod, a St. Bonaventure University basketball player accused of shoplifting two jars of auto polish, has been fined $50.

Harrod, 20, originally charged with petty larceny, was permitted to plead guilty Wednesday to a reduced charge of disorderly conduct. Judge Anthony J. DeRose of City Court imposed the fine.

Harrod was arrested May 16 on a complaint filed by a security officer for the Hills Department Store.

Indy dress rehearsal is a big day for fans, drivers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Marge Decker came in from Appleton, Wis. Wilbur Spohn flew in from Portland, Ore. Patty Johnson made the trip from Fort Meade, Md.

They were among 60,000 fans who battled traffic, heat and confusion to get to the Indianapolis Motor Speedway for carburetion tests Thursday. In dusty T-shirts and lace blouses, bathing suits and sports jackets, the fans began their pilgrimage to the stands five hours before the 33 drivers reached the track.

Carburetion day, an annual event, serves as a dress rehearsal for Sunday's Indianapolis 500-mile race. For drivers and crew members, it could mean the difference between winning and merely finishing the grueling race. For uninitiated track employees, it is a practice run for the more difficult jobs they will face Sunday. And for the fans, it is the difference between a glimpse and a conversation with the driver of their choice.

It provides both a good view of the track and a bit of elbow room — two things that are virtually impossible to achieve on race day.

For Spohn, an automotive instructor, it was a chance to scrutinize the cars he has dreamed of working on. For Decker, it was a bird's-eye view of "the guys in the pits." And for Johnson, on leave from the Air Force, it was an opportunity to capture on film the driver she calls "my man."

"It's him, Mom," she shouted as Mario Andretti strolled out of Gasoline Alley en route to the track. The shutter clicked, and the job was finished. Seconds later, the camera produced a fuzzy image of Andretti and Johnson was content.

So, too, was Martha Weissert of Carmel, Ind., who muscled through the crowd to reach the area of Spike Gehlhausen.

"Write on my back, Spike, next to Unser," she ordered, and Gehlhausen obligingly signed his name on her white embroidered shirt.

"When I get home, I'll just go over it with black thread like the others," she said, pointing to the signatures of Larry Cannon on her rib cage and Bobby Unser on her shoulder.

Stanford keeps grid contest

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The 34th East-West Shrine football game will be played in Stanford Stadium after all.

A few weeks after it had been announced that the Shrine was looking for a new game site, Stanford Athletic Director Joe Ruetz said Wednesday that an agreement had been made to play the game at Stanford next Jan. 6.

UT raids Carolina's Wolfpack

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — North Carolina State lost the National Invitational Tournament to Texas, and now it is losing one of its players to the Longhorns.

Freshman Ken Montgomery, a 6-foot-6 sub who was the No. 2 career scorer in Indianapolis high school history, is transferring to Texas and will be eligible for the 1979-80 season.

He played briefly at the end of the Wolfpack's 101-93 loss to Texas in the NIT championship at Madison Square Garden and missed two free throws.

Lemons signs two

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas basketball Coach Abe Lemons says Larry Wilson, a 6-foot-4 forward from Kilgore Junior College, and 6-5 Paul Atkins of Norwalk, Conn., have signed to play with the Longhorns.

Lemons said the signings would end UT's recruiting this year. Atkins reportedly will attend a junior college before transferring to UT.

It was also disclosed that 6-6 freshman Ken Montgomery of North Carolina State would transfer to Texas and be eligible for the 1979-80 season.

Montgomery is the second-leading scorer in Indianapolis high school history with 1,926 points in 94 games.

He averaged 23.2 and 23.3 points a game his junior and senior years.

Texas' other signee is 6-6 Wade Blundell of Metairie, La.

"I'm disappointed we don't have a big guy for the future but there weren't that many out," said Lemons.

Kansas' AD resigns post

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Clyde Walker, athletic director at the University of Kansas, has resigned, University Chancellor Archie Dykes said today.

Dykes said Walker planned to return to his home state of North Carolina.

Doug Messer, assistant athletic director, has been named acting director of men's athletics, Dykes said.

Rose calls Ty Cobb his hero

When Pete Rose surpassed the 3,000-hit mark recently, he often referred to his prototype and hero, Ty Cobb, whom he called "the greatest baseball player who ever lived."

Cobb, whose career total of 4,191 hits and lifetime .367 average are two of baseball's safest records, may have been the game's greatest player, but he was one poor press agent for himself. According to many ballplayers from Cobb's era, Will Rogers would have hated Ty Cobb and Dale Carnegie wouldn't have made a dent in the Cobb personality.

Ty Cobb never had a candy bar named after him; no movie immortalized him as a great humanitarian, and all that remains of the Ty Cobb Museum in Royston, Ga. is a plaque hanging in the city hall.

In their informative book, Baseball's Best, Martin Appel and Burt Goldblatt paint a picture of Cobb that certainly isn't in the "best interests of baseball." Appel says the information on

Cardenal is back

CHICAGO (AP) — Jose Cardenal, idolized by fans but driven out of Chicago by management, is back home and waiting to hear the cheers from the bleachers again.

But he has no desire to relive the way he was treated last year by the Cubs' new braintrust of General Manager Bob Kennedy and Manager Herman Franks.

"Last year I had a reason to be upset because before Herman and Kenny came I was playing every day and I was a successful ballplayer and they put me in the doghouse for no reason," said Cardenal.

"I don't have hard feelings against Herman and Kennedy. But the way they treated me was lousy."

Cardenal is in Chicago with the Philadelphia Phillies, who wind up a series with the Cubs Friday. He was traded Oct. 26 for pitcher Manny Seane, now in the minor leagues.

After last season, Cardenal said, he and his lawyer told Kennedy he wanted to be traded to Pittsburgh or Philadelphia. As a 10-year veteran who spent five years with the Cubs, he could veto any deal.

"I wanted to stay in the East Division so I could come home three times a year instead of two," said Cardenal, who lives in suburban Northbrook. "To me it's like coming to any ballpark. The only difference is I have a home here and people are here to cheer for me."

The 34-year-old outfielder, now with his seventh major league team, said he enjoys the loose attitude of the wise-cracking Phillies and the communication between the front office nation tourney and the American League playing a double elimination tourney.

THE HI-JUNIOR and Sophomore Leagues will compete in district play-offs as well as a best-of-three city playoff. If they win in district playoff games, they move on to state competition which moves around each year all over the Lone Star state.

The MJBA has an annual budget of more than $35,000 with the money coming from three sources. A $10 registration fee is required from each team and all sponsor fees are $200. Thirdly, the Dads Club also contributes to the funds in making yearly contributions.

The majority of the leagues have concession stands at the games to provide extra money for the program and different fund-raising drive are held from timeto time to offset added expenses.

Cobb comes from Cobb's own autobiography and from old-time ball-players.

"From the time he first put on a Detroit Tiger uniform on August 30, 1905, Cobb was unpopular with his teammates," Appel and Goldblatt wrote. "He ate his meals alone and kept to himself... some players passed years without speaking to Cobb."

"Personal duels between Cobb and opponents were not uncommon. In 1909 there was the celebrated spiking of Philadelphia's Home Run Baker, and for years fans debated whether it had been intentional. Cobb once engaged in a terrible brawl with the New York Giants' Buck Herzog during an exhibition game, continuing the fight later in the club's hotel and badly beating up the smaller man."

The authors speculate why Cobb played with such a fierce drive, alienating both teammates and opponents. They suggest that "in 1905, an event outside of baseball and the players, both of which were missing on the Cubs.

"When I went to spring training (coach) Tony Taylor told me 'don't get afraid. This is just the way they are. They're loose,'" Cardenal said with a grin. "Sometimes they call me 'grandpap. You played with Lou Gehrig. You're really doing a good job for your age.' They say I'm 46."

Cardenal hasn't played much with the talented Phillies. Heading into Wednesday's game, he'd played in 12 games and was batting .360 on nine hits in 25 at bats.

"He's played left, right and first base for us. He's been super. He's become one of the guys," said Phillies Manager Danny Ozark. "He wants to play. I play him as often as I can. He doesn't gripe when he doesn't play."

Cardenal had been bitter about not playing last year. After five seasons in which he had never batted less than .291 or had fewer than 500 at bats, he hit just .239 on 226 trips to the plate.

"I'm very happy here. I know I can play here but I came into a new team and they already had a ballclub," he said. "When the season is over and if we win at least I come out with $30,000 in my pocket."

Hulman won't be around for 500

By NANCY SHULINS
INDIANAPOLIS (AP)
— Tony Hulman won't be around this year to say "Gentlemen, start your engines," and that's creating some confusion at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

With four days remaining before the 62nd Indianapolis 500-mile race, no one seems to know who will call for the start of this year's race. But nearly everyone has a theory.

Hulman, who owned the speedway for 32 years before his death last October, signalled the start of 22 Indy 500s, taking over the job after former track president Wilbur Shaw died in 1954.

The tradition traces back to 1946. In 31 years, the simple, four-word script changed only once — when Janet Guthrie became the first woman to qualify for the 1977 race.

"Last year, with Janet in the race, it was a great secret, too," says Don Foltz, a long-time Hulman associate. "No one knew until he said it how Tony was going to announce the race."

After much speculation — and several rumors — Hulman upped his intro to 15 words, recalls Foltz, who keeps the hand-written script in his desk drawer. Foltz pushes his yellow cap back on his forehead, clears his throat and intones: "In company with the first lady ever to qualify at Indianapolis, gentlemen, start your engines."

Since Janet Guthrie again will be among the field of 33 drivers starting this year's race, rumor has it the speedway simply will play a tape recording of last year's announcement.

But rumor also has it that Tony Hulman George, Hulman's grandson, will signal the start of the race.

Some think that speedway President Joseph Cloutier will carry on the tradition, and others are betting on Hulman's daughter, Mari.

One popular rumor calls for Hulman's widow, Mary, to start the race.

"That one was big before Janet qualified again this year. The story was Mrs. Hulman wouldn't mind starting the race if she could say it simply."

"But with Janet in the race, that complicates the announcement somewhat. So that rumor doesn't seem to be so popular now," Foltz says.

"We'll have someone here to do it, that much I'm sure of," says speedway Vice President Al Bloemker, running his hands through thinning gray hair. "But there are certain questions you just don't ask, and if you do, it's a tradition that you don't get an answer." So far, Bloemker estimates that hundreds of Hoosiers have broken with tradition and asked (Continued on 12)

Nicklaus attraction physical, professional

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Her name is Marlene, she works for Ohio State University and made endless drives in a courtesy car between a motel and the Muirfield Village Golf Club the week of the Memorial Tournament. She didn't flinch much when asked if Woody Hayes and Jack Nicklaus ran against each other for Columbus mayor, who would win.

"The men would vote for Woody and the women would vote for Jack," she replied.

Nicklaus' popularity has grown and spread. He is attractive physically, professionally and commercially.

There are 15 reproductions of Sports Illustrated covers featuring Nicklaus hanging in the hallway leading from pro shop to lounge. His books are prominently displayed. Reminders of him are everywhere.

He is indeed the master of this plantation.

Nicklaus has now turned 38 and skeptics wonder if he ever will win another major tournament to go with the unprecedented 16 he already owns.

He hasn't won a major tournament since 1975, a year he won both the Masters and the PGA crowns.

Nicklaus went to the Masters this year superbly tuned, confident, buoyed by victories in the Tournament Players Championship and the Inverrary Classic.

"That sounds funny, but sometimes you get an attitude when you're playing that well."

Nicklaus now is concentrating his energies on the second major tournament of 1978, the U.S. Open in June at Cherry Hills in Denver.

Houston tabs former star

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Deryl Ray McGallion, a former University of Houston star linebacker, has been named defensive coordinator at Sam Houston State University, head football Coach Melvin Brown announced Wednesday.

McGallion, 26, who played for UH in 1971-73, comes to Sam Houston after two years at Silsbee High School.

The selection of McGallion completes Brown's coaching staff.

USOC seeking Olympians

OLYMPIC VALLEY Calif. (AP) — The U.S. Olympic Committee is looking for former Olympians, hoping to compile a complete list of athletes who have represented the country in the Games.

"Once the Games are over, communication stops," said Bruce

Burch of the USOC in asking Wednesday for cooperation of news media in rounding up the names of former Olympians. "We wish to correct this situation."

The USOC, he said, wants to have on-going communication with the athletes because "their support of the presently training athletes would greatly aid the moral of our teams."

The USOC asks that former Olympic athletes send their addresses to the USOC office at the training center here.

The address: USOC, PO Box 2368, Olympic Valley, CA 95730.

Oakland manager has enough, quits

By ERIC PREWITT
OAKLAND (AP) — Up until the strange end of his term as Oakland A's manager, Bobby Winkles showed no signs of cracking under the pressure of working for Charlie Finley.

Then, as coach Red

Schoendienst said in the wake of Winkles' unexpected resignation, "He said he had just had enough. I didn't want to ask any questions about what he meant by that."

And Winkles, who walked out before Tuesday night's game against Milwaukee, could not be found to answer questions from anybody else.

Jack McKeon, back in the managing job he lost when Finley fired him last June 10, said he and the other coaches noticed a change in the usually cheerful Winkles when they reported to the Oakland Coliseum Tuesday night.

"We thought he was going to do something, just from the way he was talking," said McKeon, whose second time around as Finley's manager began with a 3-2 loss to the Brewers that cut the surprising A's lead in the American League West to one game.

What the 48-year-old Winkles did was phone Finley in Chicago and tell him he was resigning because, according to the surprised owner, "He did not think I was satisfied with the manner in which he was managing the team."

Relief pitcher Bob Lacey said the players noticed that Winkles was not in uniform and had been on the telephone.

"We knew something was up. But I thought he was probably just talking to Charlie about getting another pitcher, since Joe Coleman was sold to Toronto Monday," Lacey said.

"I thought maybe we were going to move to Denver after all," said third baseman Wayne Gross.

Then, about 20 minutes before gametime, A's Traveling Secretary Bobby Hofman came around with printed press releases, that went to the players before the press saw them.

Life style images bother Staubach

NEW YORK (AP) — "He Runs, Passes and Walks on Water." Roger Staubach, quarterback of the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys, acknowledged that he shivered when he saw that headline on the cover of a sports magazine.

"I don't know why they should try to make me out as being some sort of a kook just because I don't fit a certain mold," he added in an informal yet introspective dialogue this week after receiving a trophy as Pro Quarterback of the Year.

"I see no point in categorizing us on the basis of our life styles. We quarterbacks are all different, yet we have much in common. Competitive instincts, for instance, and dedication — you don't get to be a quarterback in the National Football League without working hard."

To Staubach, there are no such animals as strict Mr. Cleans or inveterate hell-raisers although he is realistic enough to admit that football heroes, as other sports stars, are more than mere competitors. Because of wide television exposure and outlandish salaries, they also are show business personages thrust into the public domain.

Joe Namath, for instance, becomes Broadway Joe, the swinger who walks barefoot on llama rugs and makes the Hollywood scene with a sexy doll on each arm while Oakland's Ken Stabler is the "good ol' boy" who spends idle hours swigging and swinging in the seamy neighborhood honky-tonks.

They are inheritors of the "free-wheeling" legends of Bobby Layne, Sonny Jurgensen and Billy Kilmer.

"I don't resent that at all," Staubach said. "I think quite a bit of what we read and hear of these off-the-field activities are greatly exaggerated. They make good stories. "From personal experience, I find Namath not at all like the person he is made out to be. He is very modest and low-key, sensitive and caring. I know Stabler much better. He is a tremendous guy, with a great deal of character and social consciousness."

"After all, Joe and Kenny are bachelors. Their life styles may be different from mine. I am married and have five children. Even if I weren't so involved in my deep Christian commitments, which I am, I would have boundaries for what one calls the fast and free life."

In the heat of the last football season, sharp contrasts were drawn between the game's premier signal-callers — Stabler, the whip hand of the 1977 Super Bowl champions, and Staubach, who was to lead the Cowboys to the succeeding title.

These word portraits had to make deep impressions on countless kids with visions of Super Bowl stardom dancing in their little heads.

Stabler was quoted by Sport Magazine as saying, "I like to run around, keep bad hours, drink, stuff like that."

Staubach said: "I just don't believe you can be a full person until you've given yourself over to Christ. I know that I have reasoning power, and that reason just naturally tells you that there is something higher than all this ... so I try to live the kind of life that will get me there."

The former Heisman Trophy winner from the U.S. Naval Academy said he felt that his comments were treated with cynicism and ridicule and he was given the image of being a fanatic.

"I was compared with Charlie Huggers of the 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman' show," Staubach said. "I am not ashamed of my religion. I am not ashamed to expound on it. But I don't wear it on my sleeve. I can't put up a false front. I don't consider myself something special."

Staubach added that while he understands there is no way that the modern athlete can cloak his private life, he feels that life styles and paychecks should not overshadow performances.

"In a way, we all are in show business," he conceded. "We are human beings. We all have tremendous egos. We like to be patted on the back and we enjoy public attention."

"But we have to be realistic. They cheer us only until we throw that intercepted pass and blow the ball game."

Walker resigns at Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Clyde Walker, athletic director at the University of Kansas, has resigned, University Chancellor Archie Dykes said today. Dykes said Walker planned to return to his home state of North Carolina.

Doug Messer, assistant athletic director, has been named acting director of men's Athletics, Dykes said.

Stadium loses money

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The $23 million stadium that the taxpayers of Erie County bought for the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League operated at a deficit of about $2.5 million last year, an audit shows.

A financial report prepared by the county comptroller's staff said the county received $525,337.53 — the lowest amount in the five-year history of Rich Stadium.

The audit showed the Bills took in $3.7 million in ticket sales last year, paying the county a $406,799 slice. The Bills and the county split $86,428 in concession fees. The county also got $65,324 from parking receipts.

Meanwhile, the county was paying more than $3 million on loans it took to construct the 80,020-seat stadium. That figure was high because of the cost of converting the loans from short-term to long-term. Next year, the payment will be about $1.9 million.

Receipts to the county were highest in 1975 when they totaled $824,678.

The Bills won three games and lost 11 in 1977, one of the worst records in the league. They sold 397,043 tickets for 10 home games.

Problems stalk Olympic history

In Munich in 1972, it was Arab terrorists. In Denver a couple of months later, it was the voters. And in Montreal in 1976, it was the staggering cost.

In 1978 in Los Angeles, it is the fear of repeating past history which fuels the controversy surrounding the city's desire to host the 1984 Olympics.

Problems and controversy have been companions of the modern Olympics since they were founded in 1896 by French Baron Pierre de Coubertin.

The first controversy was in Athens. In 1896, Athens was a small town of 130,000 people and ill-equipped to host the first modern Olympics.

That did not concern Coubertin and a group of sports figures and physical educators from eight other nations who met in Paris and decided the event should be in Athens.

The people of Athens were appalled. They could not afford it. Some money was raised with the sale of commemorative stamps and from contributions, but the first games became largely the gift of one man, a Greek merchant named George Averoff.

He paid $184,000 to build a white marble, 50,000-seat stadium and became the only person to personally finance an Olympics.

Not surprisingly, the 1896 games were the last to be given to a city without that city's asking to host them.

Through the first third of the century, the Olympics were modest events utilizing mostly existing facilities.

But Los Angeles in 1932 changed that. With its new 100,000-seat coliseum and history's first Olympic Village, the city set an international pattern to be followed for years to come.
