Love conquers all, including a treacherous river

SONG KHAI (Thailand) (AP) — After months of planning and two earlier failures, an Australian journalist succeeded in a daring underwater rescue of his Laotian girlfriend swimming with scuba gear under the Mekong River to Laos, and bringing her back to the Thailand side.

The journalist, John Everingham, 28, the last Western correspondent in Laos, was expelled by the Laotian Communist government 10 months ago and was forced to leave behind his girlfriend, Keo Sirisomphone, 25.

Everingham, who had resided in Laos for more than 19 years, said in an interview Monday he began planning the rescue attempt immediately after his expulsion, exchanging coded letters and messages with Keo to set up rendezvous points. But the first two attempts to swim under the river using scuba gear were foiled when Laotian troops approached too close to where Keo was waiting.

Finally on Saturday, Everingham donned his mask, fins and a scuba tank fitted with two breathing devices and made a third attempt. The fast-running river was swollen by heavy rains and he said he could see Keo on the far bank a mile away, where she was waiting with a fishing pole and a child to avoid suspicion.

Battling currents and tossed by whirlpools, he tried to crawl along the muddy bottom using a compass because of the zero visibility underwater. But when he surfaced, he was still several hundred yards short and being carried downstream by the current. He tried again, this time starting farther upstream.

"I made it," he said. "I crawled out on the bank, she seemed to have given up. She was walking away in the distance. I yelled at the top of my lungs. Then she saw me and started running forward. She fell into my arms."

At least three dead in refinery blasts

BY ROB WOOD
TEXAS CITY, TEXAS (AP) — Three persons are known to be dead and 11 others were injured early today in a series of explosions that rocked a Texas City refinery.

At least 15 persons were on duty when the first of about a dozen blasts occurred at the 10-million-gallon-a-day Texas City Refinery. The spokesman, Rick Sherman, said.

The fire is under control. The only thing burning is kerosene and fuel oil with no chemicals involved, a company spokesman said at a 10 a.m. news conference.

At least 15 persons were on duty when the first of about a dozen blasts occurred at the 10-million-gallon-a-day Texas City Refinery. The spokesman, Rick Sherman, said.

One of those reported dead was a guard working with a tractor at the refinery. He had not been considered when company officials were trying to account for the fatalities.

The plant was running normally when a tank erupted, Sherman said. Company officials said they didn't know what caused the blasts.

Bush, Reese fire salvos as GOP runoff heats up

ODESSA — The race for the Republican nomination in the 19th Congressional District will be heated up today as George Bush and Charles Reese began to fire salvos.

At a press conference today, the candidates and their families denied involvement in a Monday press conference in which two Oklahomaans endorsed Reese and attacked his runoff opponent's father's involvement with the Trilateral Commission.

Reese today denied any involvement in the Monday press conference. However, Reese supporters, including J.C. Book, Reese's campaign manager, were at the conference conducted by the Oklahomaans.

Reese charged Bush with "misleading voters about his place of birth and business connections."

At the press conference in Odessa today, Reese said he had decided not to make the Trilateral Commission an issue in the race, although he is concerned about the international aspects and the (David) Rockefeller connection.

Reese said he had been notified of the Monday conference prior to the event.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation designed to cut taxes for families of tuition-paying students will be voted on by the House this week when the lawmakers return to work after the Memorial Day weekend.

and some educational groups support it, including those who speak for church-affiliated schools.

Under the tax deferral plan, a taxpayer would be allowed to defer up to $1,000 per student per year starting Aug. 1. The maximum would go to $1,500 in 1982 and $2,000 in 1986. The deferred amounts would be paid back over a 10-year period at 3 percent interest.

Reese charged Bush with "misleading voters about his place of birth and business connections."

Another amendment would allow the deduction of 50 percent of tuition, but maintain the same ceilings.

Adults could claim the tax benefits if they went back to school themselves or parents could take it for their children's tuition.

'Innuendo' countered by Bush

George Bush of Midland today answered remarks made about his campaign and his father by two Oklahoma men Monday during a press conference at Midland Regional Airport. I am disturbed by the fact that two people from out of this district have come in to try to influence this election by insinuations that my father is involved in a plot to ruin the sovereignty of the United States. Bush said. My father has a proven record for his loyalty to the United States. He has the nation's highest security clearance and ran the CIA during its most troubled times. Against tough congressional inquiries, he stood firm so as not to weaken the CIA.

Cultural challenge boosts student's self-reliance

By MARLEEN RAY

After living in Midland nine months, 18-year-old Torben Qvist, a Youth For Understanding exchange student from Denmark, said he has learned to cope with a whole new culture and has become more self-reliant. I've experienced an inside view of (American) culture unlike a tourist could get, he said. When he first arrived in Midland in August 1977, he said, he didn't know anyone and had to learn how to get along with other people. But he said, he didn't have too much trouble adjusting to West Texas since the people are so nice around here.

Torben Qvist

Through his stay here, Qvist has been living with his host family, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Dickson and their children, B. J. Dickson, 18, Nancy Dickson, 16, and Lee Ann Dickson, 8. The Dicksons voluntarily provide Qvist with room and board, while he pays for his traveling, school and miscellaneous expenses. The Dicksons closely match Qvist's own family in Vraa, a farming community in northern Denmark populated by 3,000 persons. His father, Egon Qvist, is the manager at the local savings bank while his mother, Bente Qvist, is a housewife. He has two sisters, Charlotte Qvist, 11, and Marie Louise Qvist, 6.

With the Dicksons' help, Qvist said he has taken up water skiing and horseback riding. I feel like a cowboy, riding out on the prairie, he said of his experiences on the saddle. In addition, he said, he has gotten his first taste of American football. The excitement of the crowd, he said, is the best thing about it. In Denmark, he said, the only thing that closely resembles this excitement is that of the crowds at national soccer games. Qvist first became interested in Youth For Understanding after he heard about his friend's experiences while living in Seattle, Wash. He said he wanted to stay in Florida or somewhere else in the South to take advantage of the warm weather. As it turned out, he said, he got plenty of that warm weather. Qvist pointed out several cultural differences between the United States and his homeland. Graduation, he said, is a "bigger deal" here. Although students in Denmark are just as happy to be graduated from high school, he said, the school only holds a small commencement ceremony. School ceremonies and spirit, he said, are much more developed here. In Denmark, schools mainly are for learning, he said. Danish children attend public schools 13 years. In their sophomore year in high school, they must decide between going to a vocational school or continuing in high school, taking courses which will prepare them for college, said Qvist, who attended Lee High School this past school year. Usually, he said, students there spend two to three hours doing homework each day and use their week-ends for writing essays. He said they still have time to date, but some find they have to cut down on club activities in their last few years in school because of the increased homework load.

Two Oklahomans give joint Reese endorsement

An Oklahoma Panhandle farmer and a maverick Republican leader from that state called a press conference Monday at Midland Regional Airport to announce their support for Jim Reese of Odessa in his runoff race against George Bush of Midland for the GOP nomination in the 19th Congressional District race. The winner of Saturday's runoff will face Democrat Kent Hance of Lubbock in the November general election. Clarence Warner, Republican national committeeman from Oklahoma and former state GOP chairman, said he supports Reese for four reasons. Reese is aware of the platform laid out by the Republican National Committee and represents those philosophies, he is familiar with West Texas and its people, he has been endorsed by former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and the Republican Party needs a truly outstanding candidate who can win and represent the people. Warner said Reese is "a man of impeccable integrity, honesty and morality." Warner, long associated with the ultra-conservative wing of the Republican Party in Oklahoma, has a nationwide consulting business. He has worked for ultra-conservative candidates. U.S. Sens. Dewey Bartlett and Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma, both Republicans and former governors, and the current GOP state chairman have called for Warner's resignation. Warner has made speeches in support of Oklahoma's Democrat governor, David Boren, who is running for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Bartlett. Bartlett is not seeking reelection due to ill health. The other Oklahoman who spoke Monday in support of Reese was J.C. Lewis, a Guyman farmer who has been active for the past few months in the American Agriculture Movement. Lewis criticized Bush on the basis of his father's membership in an organization known as the Trilateral Commission. Anti-Trilateral Commission literature has been circulated recently throughout the 19th Congressional District. Although Reese has denied that that activity has been part of his

In Denmark, he said, more responsibility is placed on the students. It is left up to them to do their studies and attend classes. Although they are not punished for missing classes, he said, their teachers tell them that this behavior will hurt them and could lead to a failing grade or being held back in school. Because of this responsibility, he said, he thinks high school students in Denmark are more mature than students here. Even though he's listed as a high school graduate here, Qvist said he'll have to take his senior year over again when he returns to his homeland in July. But, he said, it's been worth it since he's discovered his love for hamburgers and learned how to say "y'all."

Hot weather for Midland

The weekend's cooler temperatures are leaving hot summer weather in their wake. High for Wednesday should reach into the middle 90s — this after Midland basked in the cool 80-degree high Monday. Low for tonight should be in the middle 60s, according to the weatherman for the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The record high for Monday is 104 degrees recorded in 1938. Just the year before that, the record low was recorded at 46 degrees. Southerly winds gusting to 15 to 25 mph should be decreasing tonight to 10 to 15 mph, the weatherman said. A 20 percent chance of rain is possible through Wednesday. Area towns reported warm temperatures and clear to partly cloudy skies early today.

Bush, Reese fire salvos as GOP runoff heats up

Bush sold the company in March and that all campaign literature distributed since that date has been modified. The prospectus by Reese, the spokesman said, was distributed in February. As his reporters about campaign financing, Bush said contributions to his campaign haven't kept pace with his expenditures, and he has taken bank loans. He said he is not sure how much debt is outstanding. Reese said there is debt from his unsuccessful 1976 campaign for the same congressional seat, but the only debt the 1976 campaign owes is to me. All bills were paid, he said. I don't think the Republican primaries is for sale, Reese added.

United Methodists open annual meet in Midland

The 69th annual meeting of the Northwest Texas Conference of the United Methodist denomination opened this morning in Midland's First United Methodist Church. Delegates, including clergy and laity from United Methodist churches in a wide sector of West Texas, are in attendance at the meeting, which continues through Thursday. The annual gathering is being held for the first time in Midland. Dr. Alsie H. Carleton of Albuquerque, N.M., bishop of the Northwest Texas and New Mexico conferences (administrative divisions) of the denomination, is presiding at sessions. Dr. Charles Lu-trick, senior minister of First United Methodist Church here, is host pastor. More than 750 delegates and other visitors to the annual meeting were on hand for today's opening of the convocation. They represent approximately 200 churches within the boundaries of the Northwest Texas Conference. A memorial service at 9 a.m. today in the sanctuary of First UMC opened the meeting, after which visitors were

Sickness is a Russian advantage making U.S. negotiate harder

WASHINGTON (AP) — The poor health of Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev appears to be working in the Russians' favor as the United States and the Soviet Union try to negotiate a new strategic arms treaty.

Officials who declined to be named say the health of Brezhnev is making the United States and her allies more anxious than the Russians to conclude a new SALT treaty.

"It's that the United States and other Allies have displayed a greater sense of anxiety and even of haste to conclude the treaty than the Russians have done," one qualified informant said.

"The reason for that almost certainly is that President Leonid Brezhnev, a sick man, gives the impression that he is more committed to negotiating the treaty than others in the Kremlin. If he were to vanish from the scene it could take months if not longer for his successor to resume negotiations and to exercise the same sort of authority he has shown."

Brezhnev reportedly has a heart condition and wears a pacemaker, sometimes has difficulty in speaking, and according to British Foreign Secretary David Owen, a physician, the Soviet leader probably is receiving massive cortisone treatment.

While the arms talks go on, NATO heads of state and government meet here today to devise a strategy for countering the growing Soviet military threat to Western Europe. President Carter was addressing the session.

Judge will rule today Walus, agent or victim?

CHICAGO (AP) — Was Frank Walus a brutal Nazi Gestapo agent who mercilessly killed Jewish women and children, or is he the tragic victim of mistaken identity?

U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman says he will rule on that question today.

If the judge finds him guilty, Walus faces a deportation hearing that could result in his return to Poland.

A 55-year-old retired southwest side laborer, Walus has been accused by the U.S. government of lying to U.S. Immigration officials and covering up his alleged role as a Nazi Gestapo agent responsible for killing at least 13 Jews.

During a three-week civil trial in March and April, 11 witnesses identified Walus as the man they saw help liquidate Jewish ghettos in Poland from 1939 to 1944.

Defense attorney Robert Korenkiewicz countered with four German citizens who testified that they employed Walus as a farm laborer during World War II. He also introduced into evidence certified German health insurance records listing a Franz Walus as a farm laborer who worked for the four German farmers during the war years.

Korenkiewicz noted that the government did not present one document showing that Walus was ever a member of the German armed forces.

The answer is YES. All the chimneys that need cleaning cannot be cleaned in September or October. If you have burned 2 to 3 cords of hard wood or 4 to 5 cords of soft wood in your fireplace and your chimney hasn't been cleaned, you are probably harboring a considerable fire hazard in your home.

Russians lose their African recon base

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians apparently no longer have the use of a strategically located West African airfield for their reconnaissance flights over U.S. Navy sea lanes, intelligence sources say.

The development suggests to U.S. intelligence analysts that Guinea's leader, Sekou Toure, may be reacting to Soviet pressure for rights to build a major naval base near the field at Conakry, although Toure still allows Soviet ships to dock there.

Soviets appear to have lost their access for reconnaissance flights for the foreseeable future.

Portugal since then has given up colonial territory adjoining Guinea and Toure has been trying to improve relations with Western countries, particularly France and Britain.

France, U.S. reportedly agree on African pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing have agreed to help African nations protect themselves against outside aggression if the African states enter into joint defense arrangements, French diplomatic sources said today.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, also said Carter has expressed interest in Giscard's proposal for a European conference on conventional disarmament. The effect of the Carter-Giscard agreement is difficult to gauge because African nations thus far have shown little enthusiasm for entering into any joint defense arrangement. Such an arrangement was proposed at last week's meeting of French-speaking African leaders in Paris, but it died for lack of support.

Mother's a 'box junkie'

By ERMA BOMBECK

Do you know what the basic difference is between youth and old age? Boxes.

Youth has always believed that somewhere around the next bend, there is always a box when they need it.

Old age never wants to take that chance.

I don't think I'll ever forget the first time I discovered my mother was a "box junkie."

She had given me a birthday present and as I lifted the lid off the top to unfold a robe, Mother leaned over, snapped the lid back on the box and took it back.

Later, when I thought about it, I was always receiving a scarf in a stationery box, a blouse in a shoebox, and once I got a small pendant in a box marked "Rectal Thermometer." At Christmas, there was no size too large or small, no form too ridiculous, no present too pithy to be matched up to one of Mother's famous boxes.

After a while I came to recognize them. The box from Saks (Mother had never been to Saks in her life) that always caused the recipients heart to beat a little faster (until I found a floral ironing board cover in it one year), a Christmas box from Neiman-Marcus (she'd never been to Texas in her entire life) that she salvaged from the lost-and-found at the church, and her ace in the hole, a box from Tiffany's which I didn't get too choked up about when she gave me a mood ring in it two years ago.

She had boxes stashed all over the house for transporting cakes, hamsters, laundry and picnic supplies. Boxes for mailing. Boxes for storing. Boxes for science themes, sleeping dogs, snapshots and memorabilia. Boxes for starting fires. Boxes for rainy-day projects. Boxes for boots by the door. And boxes to keep the baked beans from spilling over the car trunk. Boxes for a child's birthday present that you didn't know you had until you went through the catch-all drawer in the kitchen. She had boxes in her boxes.

I worry about Mother. I really do. No one should be that obsessed with boxes. It's really bizarre to get more excited over the outside of a gift than the inside. And what's she going to do with all of them?

Of course, if she leaves them to me. I have 600 pounds of leftover ribbons in plastic bags on the shelf of my closet...bows with a touch of adhesive still left...satin fragments three inches long...tired ready-mades that just a touch of the iron would revive...

DEAR ABBY

Attitude made difference

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am enclosing a newspaper clipping that appeared in a section of the paper that very few teenagers read.

I think it should be in YOUR column—or maybe in the comics, where teenagers would be sure to see it.

If you agree with me, please reprint it. Thank You. —MRS. E. B. CLINGNER, COVINGTON, KY.

DEAR MRS. C: The piece appeared in the Cincinnati Enquirer, in William Raspberry's column. It was written by Karen Rak, who teaches English to students at the Center Junior High School in Strongsville, Ohio.

Ms. Rak composed a letter (ostensibly from an employer) designed to let her youthful job seekers see themselves as they are seen. With so many young people looking for jobs now, I think this piece deserves all the exposure it can get.

"DEAR KID: Today you came to me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids your age can't find jobs. "But I hired a teenager today. You saw him. What was so special about him? Not experience; neither of you had any. Attitude, son. A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He did his best to impress me. That is where he edged you out.

"He wasn't dressed like Easter Sunday, but then that wasn't necessary. His clothes were clean, and he had gotten a haircut. He filled out the application form neatly and completely. He did not ask to borrow a pen. He carried his Social Security card, had basic identification, and did not ask, 'What's a reference?'"

"He didn't have two friends waiting for him by the pop machine. He didn't start to chew gum or smoke while interviewing. He didn't keep looking at his watch, giving me the impression that he had something more important to do.

"He took the time to find out how we operate here, and what his day-to-day tasks would be. I think he'll keep his eyes open and work for me like he'd work for himself.

"He was willing to start at that point where I could afford to pay. Someday, perhaps, he'll get to the point where he'll have more authority over others and a better paycheck.

"You know, kid, men have always had to get a job like you get a girl: Case the situation, wear a clean shirt, and try to appear reasonably willing.

"Maybe jobs aren't as plentiful right now, but there are jobs. You may not believe it, but all around you employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way.

"If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you ask for a job. You will be head and shoulders above the rest.

"For both our sakes, get eager... will you? —THE BOSS"

Billy once took drinking like a fish a step farther

Editor's Note: There are dozens of books about Jimmy Carter and the Carter clan of Plains, Ga., but only one by the president's first cousin, Hugh Carter. The title is "Cousin Beedie and Cousin Hot," "Beedie" (Hugh) and "Hot" (Jimmy) are boyhood nicknames. Hugh and Jimmy grew up together in Plains, played, hunted, fished together as little boys, and stayed in each other's homes. Later they were in politics together.

Hugh Carter has a reputation as a humorist and raconteur in Georgia, where he serves as a state senator. This third excerpt from his book describes his cousins — Jimmy Carter's brother Billy and sisters Ruth and Gloria.

Part III: Billy, Ruth and Gloria
By HUGH CARTER

There are many family stories about Billy's drinking. One that Billy himself enjoys telling concerns the time he had been drinking heavily at a friend's house prior to a fishing trip. As the evening ended and he prepared to leave, he picked up two cups from the table, one containing his bourbon and one containing the minnows he was taking with him on his fishing trip. In the night he got thirsty.

In the morning, when he woke up, the cup with his bourbon was still there but the cup with the minnows had been drained dry.

I wonder what history will have to say about Billy Carter — William Alton Carter III. The short-range view of him is that of a loose-talking, beer-drinking, hard-smoking, irreverent yokel. He likes to project this image, as it has made him almost as popular with the general public as his brother, the president.

But there's another Billy, too. I want to talk about Billy as a businessman — one of the smartest businessmen that I know, the man who skillfully built his family's peanut business into a multimillion-dollar operation.

When Jimmy was constantly traveling to drum up support for his presidency, way before the primaries, he was grateful to have a competent man like Billy handling the family warehouse.

During that time, Jimmy would go in to visit with Billy and talk over a cup of coffee, but it was more a matter of Billy filling him in than Jimmy telling Billy what to do: Billy had outgrown his teacher and didn't need to be told. In fact, Billy was getting a little hot under the collar that his share in the family business was only about 15 percent — the rest being owned by Jimmy and Miz Lillian.

That is the inside story of why Billy split from the peanut business and went to work full time being a businessman on his own and making personal appearances lined up by his Nashville, Tenn., agent, a sharp young man named Tandy Rice.

And I believe this also explains why Jimmy has said nothing about Billy's branching out. To be able to criticize his younger brother, Jimmy would be on firmer ground if he and Aunt Lillian had made Billy an equal partner with them. Since this was not done, Billy's feeling was that he was free to make his own way.

Billy had a checkered educational background. The principal threw him out for drinking beer in school, and he went to a military school for a year. He returned to graduate from Plains High School — almost at the bottom of his class.

Billy just wouldn't study, and he had a girlfriend, Sybil, younger than himself.

Right after graduation, he ran away to the Marines, coming back only long enough to make Sybil a bride at 15 — almost 16 — and take her with him.

Sybil, even though she was only 15 when she married him was a very mature and caring person. She herself admits that one reason she married Billy when they were both so young was that after Billy's father died, Billy needed someone to take care of him and she just felt it was up to her.

In a way, she still acts a little maternal toward Billy, sometimes beaming approval and sometimes mildly scolding him like a disapproving mother.

Billy tries to keep it more or less secret, but he actually did join the Plains Baptist Church when he was 12 years old. But if anybody points this out to him, he quickly defends his record by saying he's only been back six times.

Anytime Billy can take a poke at Baptists, he does, even though his children go to the Baptist Church. He always says that when he dies, he is going to be buried by a Methodist preacher who will tell nice lies about him, and he throws in that at his funeral he wants to have Tom T. Hall, the country singer and composer, sing his song about "faster horses, younger women, older whiskey."

Jimmy's father loved all his children, but he certainly did not treat his four children equally. Two he smothered with affection. They were Billy and his younger daughter, Ruth, whom he named for the biblical character.

It was almost as if she were like some little fairy princess come from another world into that family. Uncle Earl kept telling Ruth that she was the most beautiful child in the world, and I'm afraid that was sometimes a little hard on Sister Gloria, who was cute and vivacious, and excelled in her own way.

Ruth realized eventually that her father's excessive love and praise for her was not beneficial.

Ruth herself admits that hers was a lopsided childhood and that she felt "too much love" from her father and "insufficient love" from her mother, which caused her to be "emotionally crippled" as an adult.

Before her "rebirth" she went to doctors and psychiatrists, who were unable to help her. Then she laid her whole burden and emotional wounds before Jesus, and suddenly she felt her depression lift and her wounds become healed.

Religion was terribly important to her, and she began Monday-night prayer meetings which grew in popularity as other people were helped by her counseling.

First Ruth gently helps a person to look inside and find where the guilt lies. It can be very painful, like the exposing of a raw nerve. But once this person is re-experiencing the incident that led to the feeling of guilt, that person is ready for Ruth's "ministry of inner healing," and they pray together and ask the Lord to take the burden.

Ruth was deeply involved in non-denominational healing before Jimmy ran for the presidency, so she cannot be accused of riding on his coattails. In fact, she would be very careful not to talk about her brother when she was lecturing on faith healing, or talk about faith healing when she was campaigning for her brother.

It is interesting to me that, in her way, Ruth is following in the footsteps of her mother, being just as completely absorbed in ministering to man's mind as Miz Lillian was in ministering to the physically ill, no matter how poor they were or how rejected by society.

Gloria is entirely different from Ruth, who is three years younger than she. For example, Gloria does not like to be around crowds of people the way Ruth — and Jimmy — like to be.

The family has always worried a little about Gloria — me among them — because of the tragedy in her family. It is that she has a son who was tried and sentenced to serve time in a California prison.

William Spann — called Tody — who is now about 31, was convicted of armed robbery committed while under the influence of drugs.

For years, Gloria had lived in a life of emotional upheaval never knowing what would happen next.

She had tried to hold up under the strain of a son who was not like other children. For a time, she enrolled him in a special school which featured therapy as well as classes under a controlled environment.

There is no doubt about it. Gloria has had the hardest life of anyone in the Carter family.

She eloped with a fellow named "Soapy" Hardy, whose only previous work before entering the Air Force had been soda-jerking.

She married in 1945 and returned home alone in 1949 with a little child — Tody — and a broken marriage. A divorce followed, and before the year was over, Gloria had met and married Walter Spann, a prosperous farmer. Walter cared enough to adopt Gloria's little son.

Ruth tried to give Gloria the same kind of help that she is famous for having given Jimmy when he lost his first bid for governorship. But Gloria would have none of it.

As Gloria herself admits, she shooed Ruth away, saying she didn't want to hear about Jesus or anything connected with religion or prayer, and what she really wanted to do was just get one good night's sleep.

To get this good night's sleep she went to Ruth's lakeside cabin. Since she was alone, she looked for something to read, and everything in print was of a religious nature. In sheer boredom she opened a little book of Gertrude Keehn's radio talks.

Almost immediately, her eye hit a line that changed her life. It was the same thing that Ruth had been getting at, but Gertrude Keehn was saying it in a way that she could understand.

The line was: "Give your problem to God for 60 seconds, and rest your mind."

Suddenly she found herself talking directly to God and admitting she could not cope with her son, and asking the Almighty to "take my son for 10 seconds and let me have some peace."

Those were 10 seconds that gave her an entirely new feeling of peace. And suddenly the world looked beautiful again. She had been so busy worrying about her great problem that she had lost sight of the beauty of the world.

Today she is still enjoying the world, although her son is still in prison. She enjoys life from the back of a motorcycle. Her religious experience prompted her to suggest that she and her husband both get motorcycles as an exciting hobby that has the added thrill of enabling a person to pass close to the beauties of nature and viewing them much more intimately than from a car.

Gloria now feels that God has her son in His hands, such as he has her in His hands, and somehow everything will be all right.

China at U.N. shows interest in disarmament

By WILLIAM N. OATIS

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — After years of boycotting disarmament negotiations, China showed an interest in them in a speech to the U.N. General Assembly that predicted the Soviet Union will start World War III.

Speaking Monday at the assembly's special session on disarmament, Foreign Minister Huang Hua condemned the 31-nation Geneva disarmament negotiating committee because the Soviet Union and the United States are its co-chairmen. He called for new machinery "truly free of superpower control."

A U.S. disarmament official, declining to be quoted by name, termed Huang's statement "significant" and a "hopeful sign" that China wanted to participate in arms negotiations.

Huang complained that in the Geneva committee, the Soviet Union and the United States "talk sham disarmament and obstruct genuine disarmament."

"This state of affairs must be completely changed," he said.

The assembly's main political committee now debates disarmament questions for three months each fall, and the Geneva committee negotiates on them intermittently the rest of the year.

Huang, apparently envisioning a similar two-tier system, said:

"Questions of disarmament and international security, which concern the interests of all countries, should be deliberated by an international organ with the participation of all countries under the auspices of the United Nations.... The items and procedures of disarmament negotiations should be decided on by this organ.

"Machinery responsible for disarmament negotiations should be truly free of superpower control and should be set up through consultations by the governments in the deliberative organ."

Huang was cynical about the Soviet-American negotiations for a second SALT agreement limiting the nuclear arsenals of the two superpowers.

"For anyone willing to face up to reality," he said, "the history of the strategic arms limitation talks since they began in 1969 has been a history of strategic arms race between the Soviet Union and the United States...."

"In the eight years of SALT, the Soviet Union has brought its once backward nuclear arsenal up to a par with that of the other superpower."

Holiday death toll no record, 485 die

CHICAGO (AP) — Traffic accidents killed 485 people during the three-day Memorial Day weekend, compared to 432 deaths over the holiday period last year.

The National Safety Council had estimated before the holiday began at 6 p.m. Friday that 400 to 500 people would lose their lives in traffic accidents over the long weekend that ended Monday night.

The worst toll for a comparable three-day holiday was 597 in 1969, and the lowest recent toll was 389 in 1974.

The highest Memorial Day total was 629 deaths in 1968, but that was during a four-day period.

AGA president points to Canada as proof gas deregulation works

MONTREAL, CANADA—The President of the American Gas Association said the natural gas situation in Canada is proof that deregulation of gas prices does work. It stimulates both new supply development and conservation.

George H. Lawrence, speaking before the Canadian Gas Association's annual meeting last week, said "the gas situation in Canada is a test case that deregulation does produce increased supplies of gas." He pointed out that supplies in Western Canada sharply increased as the result of commodity pricing, as many economists had long contended. In the Pacific northwest areas of the U. S. which are 70 percent dependent on Canadian gas, the higher prices that created the increased supply also contributed to a conservation experience of 37 percent over the past four years, compared with about 13 percent nationwide.

Lawrence predicted that approval of gas pricing legislation now pending before the U. S. Congress—which provides for phased deregulation of new gas prices at the wellhead—would stimulate an estimated eight trillion cubic feet of additional U. S. production between now and 1985.

The minimum of two trillion cubic feet per year of new gas supplies by 1985 will reduce oil imports by at least one million barrels per day.

"The bill," Lawrence said, "will provide the added incentives for increased exploration and development of existing U. S. domestic supplies, while supplemental supply sources like coal gasification, biomass conversion, and synthetic gas production capabilities are developed.

Lawrence also noted that a significant contribution to U. S. supply will result from construction of the Alaskan gas pipeline, and said Canadian, Mexican, and liquefied natural gas (LNG) imports, as well as gasification of vast U. S. coal supplies, also will play a major role in future supply.

Lawrence applauded the Canadian government's positive attitude toward energy resource development, citing recent new discoveries in Alberta and the arctic regions as "evidence that when incentives are provided, impressive things happen naturally. We admire the Canadian readiness to treat energy sources as commodities competing in free markets," he said.

Lawrence cited the Alaskan Pipeline Project and the LNG import terminal at St. John's as two recent examples of effective teamwork that can result when Canada and the U. S. are faced with the common challenge of providing adequate energy supplies. "The benefits of our working together are obvious," he observed. Lawrence predicted a brightening of the gas supply picture in future months. "Already we are noticing some results of what is called 'conservation gas'—the 2.67 Tcf coming from industrial conversions, electric generation switchover to coal, and other conservation efforts." As a result a new marketing phase is being adopted to utilize this gas.

Lawrence noted the gas industry has willingly accepted its responsibility of keeping the public informed about the increasing importance of gas to America's energy future. "This dominant source of domestic energy provides 55 percent of the energy used in America's homes and businesses. It provides 40 percent of the energy used by U. S. industry and by U. S. agriculture—far more than any other form of energy—and nearly 30 percent of the total energy requirements of the U. S.," he said.

"The gas industry has the determination, the experience and the technical knowledge to maintain this dominance on the U. S. energy scene," he said, "through the development of supplemental and domestic supplies which will allow the industry to continue to supply the American consumer through its million-mile pipeline, with sufficient gas energy for into the future.

DOE plan limited says Amoco executive

WASHINGTON—A Department of Energy proposal intended to simplify regulations and restore market forces to domestic crude oil production and sales is "extremely limited in scope with little chance of achieving the department's objectives," an Amoco Oil Co. executive said last week in testimony presented to the DOE's Economic Regulatory Administration.

"In fact, the current proposal retains the chief non-market characteristics of the present complex regulations," including the composite price index and entitlements program, stated Lawrence D. Thomas, Amoco's vice president of operations planning and transportation. "This is not what companies in any other industry would regard as market conditions.

"As long as the composite price mechanism is in effect, the DOE cannot make any changes—no matter how worthwhile or necessary—in favor of one crude without penalizing all other classes of crude oil," he explained.

Thomas called on the DOE to petition Congress to remove the composite index, although it was mandated by Congress and is not due to expire until May, 1979. "We don't feel there are sufficient reasons to postpone a merciful death for this arbitrary and punitive regulation," he said.

The Amoco executive pointed out that the entitlements program was designed originally as "a fairly simple concept to equalize crude costs among domestic refiners. However, today it is being used to support employment in Puerto Rico, to subsidize fuel oil consumers on the East Coast, to subsidize production of heavy California crudes and subsidize other special interests. If the DOE wants to simplify on eof the most complex nightmares of the regulatory world, the entitlements program is the place to start."

Thomas cautioned the DOE officials that their current proposal "could have two unintended penalties for domestic producers."

First, by increasing domestic low-sulfur crude prices, the composite price mechanism would require a reduction in prices for medium and high sulfur (sour) crudes. "Sour crudes cannot tolerate further price decreases," Thomas maintained, noting that "sour crude producers, such as those in the Rocky Mountains, would need special relief and additional regulatory programs."

Second, the predicted that all producers would lose revenue under the DOE's proposal. "They would continue to lose it each month until the DOE returned the domestic composite price to the proper levels," he said. In place of the DOE's new proposal, Thomas called on the agency to plan for the elimination of the composite price system, including announcing a timetable to help reduce the uncertainty with which Hall companies must contend.

In the interim, if the DOE feels it is necessary to further equalize crude costs among refiners to reflect quality variations, Thomas suggested the creation of a two pool (sweet-sour) entitlement program.

MGF Oil Corp. 1 W. A. Roberts has been announced as a re-entry project in Frio County, 15.3 miles northwest of Pearsall.

It is 4,924 feet from the northwest and 8,892 feet from the northeast lines of Jinio Culler Survey No. 153, abstract 165. It will be tested in the Edwards formation.

The project originally was drilled by Tenneco Oil Co. and Pennzoil United, Inc. and plugged and abandoned in September 1968 at total depth of 5,055 feet. Operator plans to clean out to the old total depth of 5,055 feet.

King, Lynn get wildcats

Wildcat locations have been staked in King and Lynn counties.

Texas Pacific Oil Co., Inc. and Medders Oil Co., operating out of Midland, staked No. 1 J. C. Moorhouse, as a 6,100-foot wildcat, two miles southwest of Strawn sand production in the Ross Ranch field of King County.

Drill site is 660 feet from northwest and 1,980 feet from northeast lines of section 117, block 13, H&TC survey, abstract 154, 17 miles southeast of Guthrie.

SECOND WILDCAT

An application has been filed with the Texas Railroad Commission to drill No. 1-A Golden, a 12,000-foot wildcat, by Kewanee Oil Co.

BELOW THE sound and fury of a rebound scramble, Seattle's Fred Brown covers the ball in NBA championship playoff action against the Baltimore Bullets. Sonics lead the series 2-1 going into tonight's game. (AP Laserphoto).

Sonics, Bullets clash in dome

SEATTLE (AP) — Game 4 of the National Basketball Association championship series will be played in Seattle tonight, but it won't be on the SuperSonics' homecourt.

Instead, the Washington Bullets and the Sonics will meet in the Kingdome before what could be the largest crowd in NBA history.

Leading 2-1 in the best-of-seven series, the Sonics are talking confidently about winning the title. Three of the four remaining games will be played in Seattle.

The switch to the Kingdome was the result of a scheduling conflict at the Coliseum, where the Sonics have won 21 consecutive games.

There is no clearcut consensus on whether the Kingdome is a neutral court.

"The next game's (tonight's) really a neutral court, in the Kingdome, but we'll still have 40,000 fans rooting for us," said Sonics guard Gus Williams.

"I don't see how anything in Seattle can be considered neutral," said Washington Coach Dick Motta.

"Every court is the same, we'll actually be using the same floor as we normally use," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. "But instead of 14,000 fans screaming for us, we'll have 40,000. Tell me that's not going to get a team up."

The Sonics move to the Kingdome on a permanent basis next season, but tonight's game will be the first basketball game ever in the domed stadium. Game 5 Friday night will be in the Coliseum.

Fans hungry for the first NBA title in the Sonics' 11-year history gobbled up the first 29,000 tickets for tonight's game. An additional 15,000 "distant viewing" seats are on sale for $3 apiece.

Present NBA attendance records are 21,564 for a playoff game in Cleveland, 35,677 for a regular season game in the Louisiana Superdome and 41,165 for a doubleheader at the Houston Astrodome in 1969.

The Bullets now are in the same position the Sonics were when they headed east — they need a split on the road.

Seattle managed the split with a 93-92 victory over the Bullets Sunday at Landover, Md.

"When we came back (to Washington) we wanted at least a split," said Wilkens. "We did what we had to do, and now we have to feel very confident going home."

"The most important thing is we have to go out there (Seattle) and at least split," said Bullets forward Elvin Hayes.

Bullets center Wes Unseld agreed. "They beat us here, we got to beat them out there."

JIM MURRAY Will Jim Rice escape asterik?

(c) 1978, The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Some years ago, in a burst of fervid zeal of ancestor worshiper of all baseball, Ford Frick, loaded up a pitch and threw it right at the game's head when he announced in midseason that, if Roger Maris or Mickey Mantle broke Babe Ruth's record for home runs that year, it wouldn't count. It would be posted with an asterisk after it. Because they would have done it in a season with eight extra games in it. Ruth hit his 60 homers in 154 games, so Mantle or Maris would have to, as well.

Well, I disagreed with the commissioner then, and I do now. And Maris' record, despite the fact he hit homer no. 61 in game no. 162 is safe and un asterisked. Roger is the single-season home run leader. Period.

But now, a new peril arises to threaten the ghost of Babe Ruth and Ford Frick and the record of Roger Maris.

Jim Rice, the Boston Blaster, is a cool six games ahead of Roger Maris' record 1961 pace. He has hit home runs in four consecutive games. He hits a game-winning homer a night, it seems.

But, if James Edward Rice breaks the single-season home run record this year, the purists are really going to choke on their bubble gum. It's a good thing Ford Frick isn't around. He wouldn't put an asterisk on it, he'd even forbid its coming up in polite conversation.

You see, Jim Rice is — come closer, I wouldn't want this to get noised around among the kids — a "designated hitter." To anyone brought up in the John McGraw-Connie Mack era, this is like saying Jim Rice plays the piano in a fancy house. To Rogers Hornsby, a designated hitter is the name of a guy who would suck eggs, a nonplayer, an offense against the memory of Pop Anson, Ty Cobb and Hal Chase.

You see, a designated hitter is an illegitimate offspring of baseball. It has only one parent, the American League.

It has already upset the delicate logarithms of the grand old game, and ruined its century-old symmetry. No longer are there "nine men on a side." Now, there are 10. No longer do you have to remove a star pitcher for a pinch hitter. The pinch hitter is built into the game.

The point is, Babe Ruth and Roger Maris hit their 60 in 61 home runs while spending their time in between bouts chasing down line drives, crashing into fences, trying to throw out springers dashing for third, picking up ground singles and hitting the cut-off man. Standing out under the hot sun or the foggy nights, at the very least.

Jim Rice can spend the time between bats doing his nails, or reading a book, or even taking a nap. He can save his strength.

Is it an unfair advantage? Is it even baseball? Is it even sport? Isn't it a little like having someone putt for you in golf? Only serve in tennis, never have to retrieve? Camping under the basket in basketball.

Baseball will probably never go to complete platooning. There is an excuse for it in football. It's an injurious game. Baseball is not.

Roberto Clemente with a bat was only half of Roberto Clemente. Joe DiMaggio hitting a line drive was not a patch on Joe DiMaggio catching one. Willie Mays with a glove was as big an attraction as Willie Mays with a bat. Babe Ruth's spindly legs camped under hundreds of fly balls the years he hit his thunderous home runs.

Jim Rice last year hit 39 home runs. He hit 31 of them in games where he was the designated hitter. He hit 15 triples, 12 of them as a designated hitter. Twenty of his 29 doubles came as designated hitter, as did 87 of his 114 runs batted in. He appeared in 160 games, but played in only 44 of them. In 116, he only batted.

The graveyards of baseball are white with the bleaching bones of guys who could merely hit — the Smead Jolleys who drove in 114 runs a year and let in 150, the Dale Alexanders who could hit anything thrown at him, but not necessarily catch it. They would be $200,000 ballplayers today, but Jolley didn't last long and neither did Dale Alexander who got traded in a year he hit .367 — and that after years when he had hit .343, .326 and .325.

The great sluggers of baseball historically have been guys who stand in right field and have a little strain as possible put on their arms and brains. Infielders, and catchers, and pitchers have too much on their minds, not to say on their hands, to excel at one phase of the game.

But even the most stationary of right fielders had more to do than a guy who sits on a cushion or stretches out on a rubbering table between at bats. If Jim Rice breaks the single-season homer record — and why not? A look for a flap that will make Ford Frick's asterisk look like a gold star, look for someone in the other league to suggest a designated hitter's record should not even behalf asterisk.

Lee, Monterey clash

more power, but it should be close as the dickens," said Mozgle.

Johnson agrees and likes his team's chances, especially if his youngsters keep battling and playing defense as well as they have been doing. "We have gotten a great effort from this group and we don't beat ourselves," added Johnson, who will be looking for his 300th coaching victory in 17 seasons at Robert E. Lee High School today.

Monterey will start Bob Fanning (.238) at first base; Rick Pinkerton

(.325) at second; Wooten (.274) at shortstop and Phil Bruedigam (.294) at third with Rieger left; Andy Barron (.387) in center and Mike Craig (.298) in right with Harp will catch and Voyles will be the designated hitter.

One last thing that is also in the Rebels' favor is the fact that in two previous playoff series, Lee has won over Monterey and holds a 4-2 edge in six state playoff games, coming in 1964 and 1969.

Monterey stands 30-4 on the year and is currently on a 21-game winning streak while Lee is 25-9 on the year.

Taxidermy requires steady hand, patience

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like woodcarving, taxidermy requires a steady hand, long hours and years of practice. It's Jim Sharber's hobby and he says that like whittling, it's a backwoods art on the wane.

"Growing up on a farm, there weren't a lot of social things to do," said Sharber, a state environmental planner. "I started reading library books and began with pigeons. It's been a satisfying hobby ever since."

It only costs about $10 to get started. The real investment is in patience and time.

"I think it was a more popular hobby at one time," he said. "But it appears we live in a faster-paced life and there's not a long stretch of time between things we have to do and things we want to do."

"And there aren't many stopping places once you get started."

MOUNTING a wood duck takes Sharber about eight hours, nonstop.

The skin is removed intact. Feathers are washed with a light detergent for separation. Legs and tail are cut and wings clipped, remaining with the skin, which is worked down the body. The skull is detached.

"What you have is the body of the bird with the appendages detached. You can still cook the meat and corn meal absorb the blood and juices," Sharber said. "But if you want the mount to last, you have to remove all the fatty tissue from the skin."

Muscles are cut from the legs and tail and skin is washed in detergent to protect it from bugs.

Davis blasts homer for Lions

TOKYO (AP) — Former major leaguer Willie Davis blasted a two-run homer as the Crown Lighter Lions beat the Kintetsu Buffaloes 6-1 Monday in Japanese league baseball action.

The home run was Davis' fourth of the season.

pit crew had given Unser the lead again on lap 111.

Unser had run Ongais into the ground, and a broken turbo-charger rotor put Danny out of the race at 145 laps. By the 160-lap mark, Unser held a 33.2 seconds lead over Sneva, the biggest lead of the day by the Chaparral team.

Sneva had only 40 laps to cut the margin, and an unfortunate pit stop by Unser, his last of the day, made it a closer race than it really was. At the 179-lap mark, Unser came in for a fuel stop, but he overshot the pit area. While breaking hard, he bent a wing over the right front tire, and that produced an unneeded lift effect to the front end.

Unser's speed slowed dramatically, and Sneva made a charge. Fortunately, there were too few laps left, and Unser limped to the checkered flag 8.3 seconds ahead of Sneva.

Unser had an average lap speed of 161.363 miles per hour through the 500 miles. His fastest lap was just over 191 m.p.h. at the 140-lap mark just before Ongais retired from the race.

After a victory lap, Hall joined Unser in the winner's circle for the presentation of the Indy trophy. Later, the two toured the 2½-mile oval in Indy's pace car. A press conference was then held in the press room before a trip back to Gasoline Alley to get the mob awaiting them at the Chaparral garage area.

There hasn't been time for Hall to reflect on the victory up to this point, but there is no doubt that this was his finest moment in a long racing career. There is no higher honor than winning the Indy 500, and Midland can share in the Super Bowl of racing.

Soviets Big Red Machine a fraud?

By KEN DENLINGER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A coach from Kiev told me that before every anniversary of the revolution he'd be ordered to deliver a whole column of Masters of Sport to the parade when he actually had only two for the task. He'd come to the university, hand out dozens of his Spartak uniforms, sit the students on a bus, march them past the government reviewing stand, pay them $5 apiece, and let them go.

"A swimming coach from Moscow recounted that he used to bring his girls team to evening meets at outdoor pools. The light was too dim to show that half his team was made up of young boys."

These are two counts in the indictment of Soviet sport by Yuri Brokhin. The title of his new book, "The Big Red Machine," suggests another bit of puffery about the baseball team from Cincinnati, although the small print on the cover, "The Rise and Fall of Soviet Olympic Champions," invites a look inside.

Not all of the athletes responsible for the Soviets' 658 medals since joining the Olympic movement at Helsinki in 1952 are included. Only a small fraction, in fact. But the reporting on such as Vladimir Kuts and Olga Korbut, Valeri Brumel, Eduard Streltsov and Vasilli Alekseev offers a fascinating portrait of a system that creates winners and then spews them aside — like worn-out cars — for newer, faster models.

The research, Brokhin said in an interview, "took my whole life and a few days." He is a graduate of the Moscow Institute of Cinematography, an athlete of modest repute who "used my Jewishness as a vehicle for transportation (out of the U.S.S.R. and to America in 1972).

"I am not a dissident. In fact, economically I did better there than I'm doing here. I had a car and an apartment on Moscow's Fifth Avenue. I was doing screenplays, sometimes directing.

"But it bothered me as a Jew to be restricted all my life to the Soviet Union. Or maybe Bulgaria. Or East Germany. I liked to see what was going on in Broadway. With this book, I wanted to write about Russia through sports."

The first chapter, titled "How to Kill an Athlete," builds on the obsessed Kuts and comes to an end after a quote from a book by coach Viktor Lonskii: "It's shocking how little interested we are in anything unconnected with breaking records."

Coaches maximize income by training as many athletes as possible.

and Brokhin offers other examples of padding teams, quoting one coach as saying: "I'd keep all forty (gymnasts) in my reports and even my own log just the same, so my salary was sustained by 'dead souls.' And if the one or two (he concentrated on) did well, the principal never asked what happened to the others."

Brokhin writes of the removal of the more competent Liudmila Turishcheva as captain of the women's gymnastics team two days before the Montreal Olympics in favor of the more internationally popular Korbut.

Korbut also is an illustration of a Brokhin question that asks, sort of, how're you gonna keep 'em down in Kiev after they've seen Washington? Or even Cleveland for that matter. The intention of Soviet sport is to create depersonalized champions who stress the motherland rather than self. Instead, many athletes are now becoming celebrities — strong-willed, individualistic and, worst of all, capitalistic.

Consider the super-heavyweight lifter, Alekseev. After he broke eight world records in a single evening, Brokhin writes, the Ministry of Finance re-evaluated its conditions for paying $1,500 for each new record. Each record would have to be set in international competition.

So Alekseev set 10 records in two years in international competition. Whereupon the Soviet-economists reduced the prize to $700 per record. And Alekseev retaliated with 26 more records. By 1976, Alekseev had 80 world records; he pledged to double that by 1980.

Of Kuts, Brokhin writes: "(He) was turned into something that no longer ate but simply carried out the physiological process of ingestion; that no longer slept but took part in a slow-down of cardiovascular activity; that no longer made love but read articles air-mailed by his wife, Raisa, a correspondent for Sovetskii Sport.

Of his book, Brokhin said: "I feel they will not give me the Order of Lenin for it." He laughed. "I imagine they will disregard it, try to avoid noticing it."

And what of the Soviet Union and the 1980 Olympics?

"Organization is the first rule," he said. "Facilities is the first rule. Regardless of the bill, it will run. Co-op housing has been suppressed until 1982, for construction of the Olympic village. They will try to look more liberal — for two weeks, for two summer weeks."

Team tennis still experiencing pain

By BARRY WILNER

In its fifth season, World Team Tennis still is experiencing growing pains. Yet, while the league searches for acceptance and respectability, it has become a haven for some of the senior stars of the sport.

Famed champions like Billie Jean King and Rod Laver, former top players like Marty Riessen and Fred Stolle, even a 43-year-old relative rookie like Renee Richards, are prospering with the one-set team-play format.

"It's an experience where you find out a lot about yourself," says King, who has been involved in WTT since its inception in 1974. "Playing for the team rather than for oneself is a unique situation in tennis, except for Davis Cup and Federation Cup. The team people have stayed in WTT. Those who are not crazy about it have gotten out."

Those remaining include veterans like Laver, once the greatest force in the game, and Stolle, now a player-coach with the defending league champions, the New York Apples.

"Where else can a 39-year-old left-handed Australian tennis player go?" asks Laver. "Actually, the one-set format suits me perfectly. I can go all out for a set without any problems."

"I can still play the long matches but, obviously, I'm not as strong as the younger guys. That evens out in WTT."

Stolle rarely plays for the Apples, preferring to have Vitas Gerulaitis and Ray Ruffels handle the men's work.

"I keep in shape," says Stolle. "I may play eight sets a season. But I don't have any ego. I can still play a respectable set of men's singles or doubles and come out all right. But I don't need it."

King thinks one of the biggest attractions of WTT for the veterans is its uniqueness.

"It takes time for people to understand new things and WTT is still very new," she says. "But those of us who've been playing (tennis) for 20 or more years are looking for different things, new challenges."

"Winning in this league means just as much to me as anything else I've won. For me it's on a par with Wimbledon."

For the 37-year-old Riessen, a member of the Sun Belt Nets, WTT offers a chance to be on top again though his touring days have just about ended.

"Realistically, I'm not a threat to win many tournaments," says Riessen, once among the top two or three American players. "But a WTT championship is a possibility. It keeps me going in tennis."

Richards, the transsexual who also plays for the Nets, has had more success playing in WTT than anywhere else.

"The format surely favors the older player," she says.

Moon plans part of pay to charity

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Quarterback Warren Moon plans to give part of his salary to a worthwhile children's charitable cause in the city — if he makes it with the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

"It's something I've always wanted to do," said Moon, one of 38 prospects at the Eskimos' rookie camp.

"When I was young I had help from youth organizations and now I'd like to give something back."

The 6-foot-2½, 200-pounder grew up in Los Angeles. Warren's father died when he was 7, leaving his mother to raise six children on social security.

"It's been tough on her for a long time. Now it looks as if I'll be able to do something for her."

Moon's chances of getting the money he needs to help his mother and needy youngsters got a boost when he scored two touchdowns and passed for three others to lead the University of Washington Huskies to an upset victory over the Michigan Wolverines in the Rose Bowl game in Pasadena, Calif., New Year's Day. He is reported to have received a $25,000 bonus for signing from the Eskimos.

When he signed with Edmonton it was reported Moon elected to do so because he felt a black quarterback had a better chance to start in Canada.

Stockton, Gullikson post wins

PARIS (AP) — Italy's Corrado Barazzutti survived an early scare from South African John Yuill and went on to a 3-6, 7-6, 6-3 victory Monday on the opening day of the 50th annual French Open Tennis Tournament.

Americans Dick Stockton and Tim Gullikson, and France's No. 2 player, Patrick Proisy, won their opening matches in the $400,000 tournament held under Paris' first spring heatwave at the Roland Garros Stadium.

Stockton ousted Dick Drysdale of Britain 4-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1; Gullikson eliminated Cliff Letcher of Australia 6-3, 6-2, 6-2; and Proisy downed Byron Bertram of South Africa 6-3, 6-3, 7-5.

Last year's winner, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, and Italian Open champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden go into action later this week.

Barazzutti had trouble with the 29-year-old South African right from the beginning. He lost his serve in the sixth game and then a crucial double-fault cost him the eight game and the set 3-6.

The 25-year-old Italian, visibly rattled and talking to himself, came back in the second set with wicked passing shots and a more varied attack, finally winning the tie-breaker and set 7-6.

Second-seeded Vilas, who skipped the Italian Open as part of his new streamlined schedule, goes into action against Onny Parun of New Zealand on Tuesday.

Borg, the number one seed, coming off his gruelling victory over Italy's Adriano Panatta in the Italian tourney, meets France's Eric Deblicker in another opening-round match from the field of 128.

When big fish strike, there's just no warning

By LEW WHEATON

ST. THOMAS, U.S. Virgin Islands (AP) — There's absolutely no warning when the big fish hit.

The boat rolls and pitches in the Atlantic chop as the anglers sip soda and beer under the sun, keeping up a desultory conversation over the dull roar of the engines. Then somebody yells "Strike! Strike!" And frantic action breaks the spell.

Capt. Johnny Harms cuts the throttle, swinging around to watch the stern.

Mate Spike Herbert grabs an 80-pound-test rig from a rod holder in the cockpit, sets the drag with a flick of his thumb to stop the line's mad rush and jams the rod butt into a socket on the center fighting chair.

"Fast down, slow up, reel quick as you put the tip down," he instructs, turning to the right-hand chair where the line has started singing out of a reel packed with 50-pound test line and another novice is reaching for a rod.

The action is strained and anxious as the two anglers pit office-flabby muscles against big fish fighting for their lives.

Harms, 57, uses a light touch on the helm and throttle to keep headway on the boat while Herbert, 31, checks the drag settings and offers advice. "Pick up the rhythm," he says. "Pull up slow, up slow, then put the pole down fast as you reel in. Don't try to reel when he's taking line. If he's gonna run, he's gonna run." The fish feels like a whale or some undersea behemoth long thought extinct. My left arm feels like it's coming out of the socket.

"Smooth, be smooth," Herbert advises. "Watch Jesse."

To my right, Jesse Eckel of Albuquerque, N.M., dips and rises, gaining three or four turns on his reel with each dip of the rod.

"Faster," warns Herbert. "You've got to get him in quicker or the sharks'll take him."

Eckel, 38, brings his fish alongside and Herbert smoothly gaffs and boats it. My line suddenly slackens, goes taut again, then jerks hard and hangs limp.

"Probably a yellowfin tuna, but the sharks got it," Herbert says, and attention turns to Eckel's four-foot-long barracuda flopping around the deck at our feet.

We're part of the growing number of sport fishermen who come to the Virgin Islands on fishing's equivalent of an African big-game safari. Harms takes much of the credit for starting the Virgin Islands sportfishing industry 20 years ago. He charges $300 for a full day of fishing on his 40-foot custom Martensen, split by a maximum of six anglers who bring their own lunches and beer. Summer month expeditions for blue marlin cost $360 a day. "That's because everything we use for marlin costs more," Harms explains. "Those mackerel we're using for bait on the heavy rig go for $3 each. And we stream four heavy rigs for marlin, not the one heavy and three light we've got out today."

Another shout of "strike!" from the stern and Harms instantly cuts the engines.

Eckel plants his feet on the center chair's brace bar and falls into the rhythm, pulling the rod up slowly with his left hand, then dropping it quickly as he reels with his right.

Cheering him on from the left chair is his father-in-law, Sim Christy, 55, of Roswell, N.M.

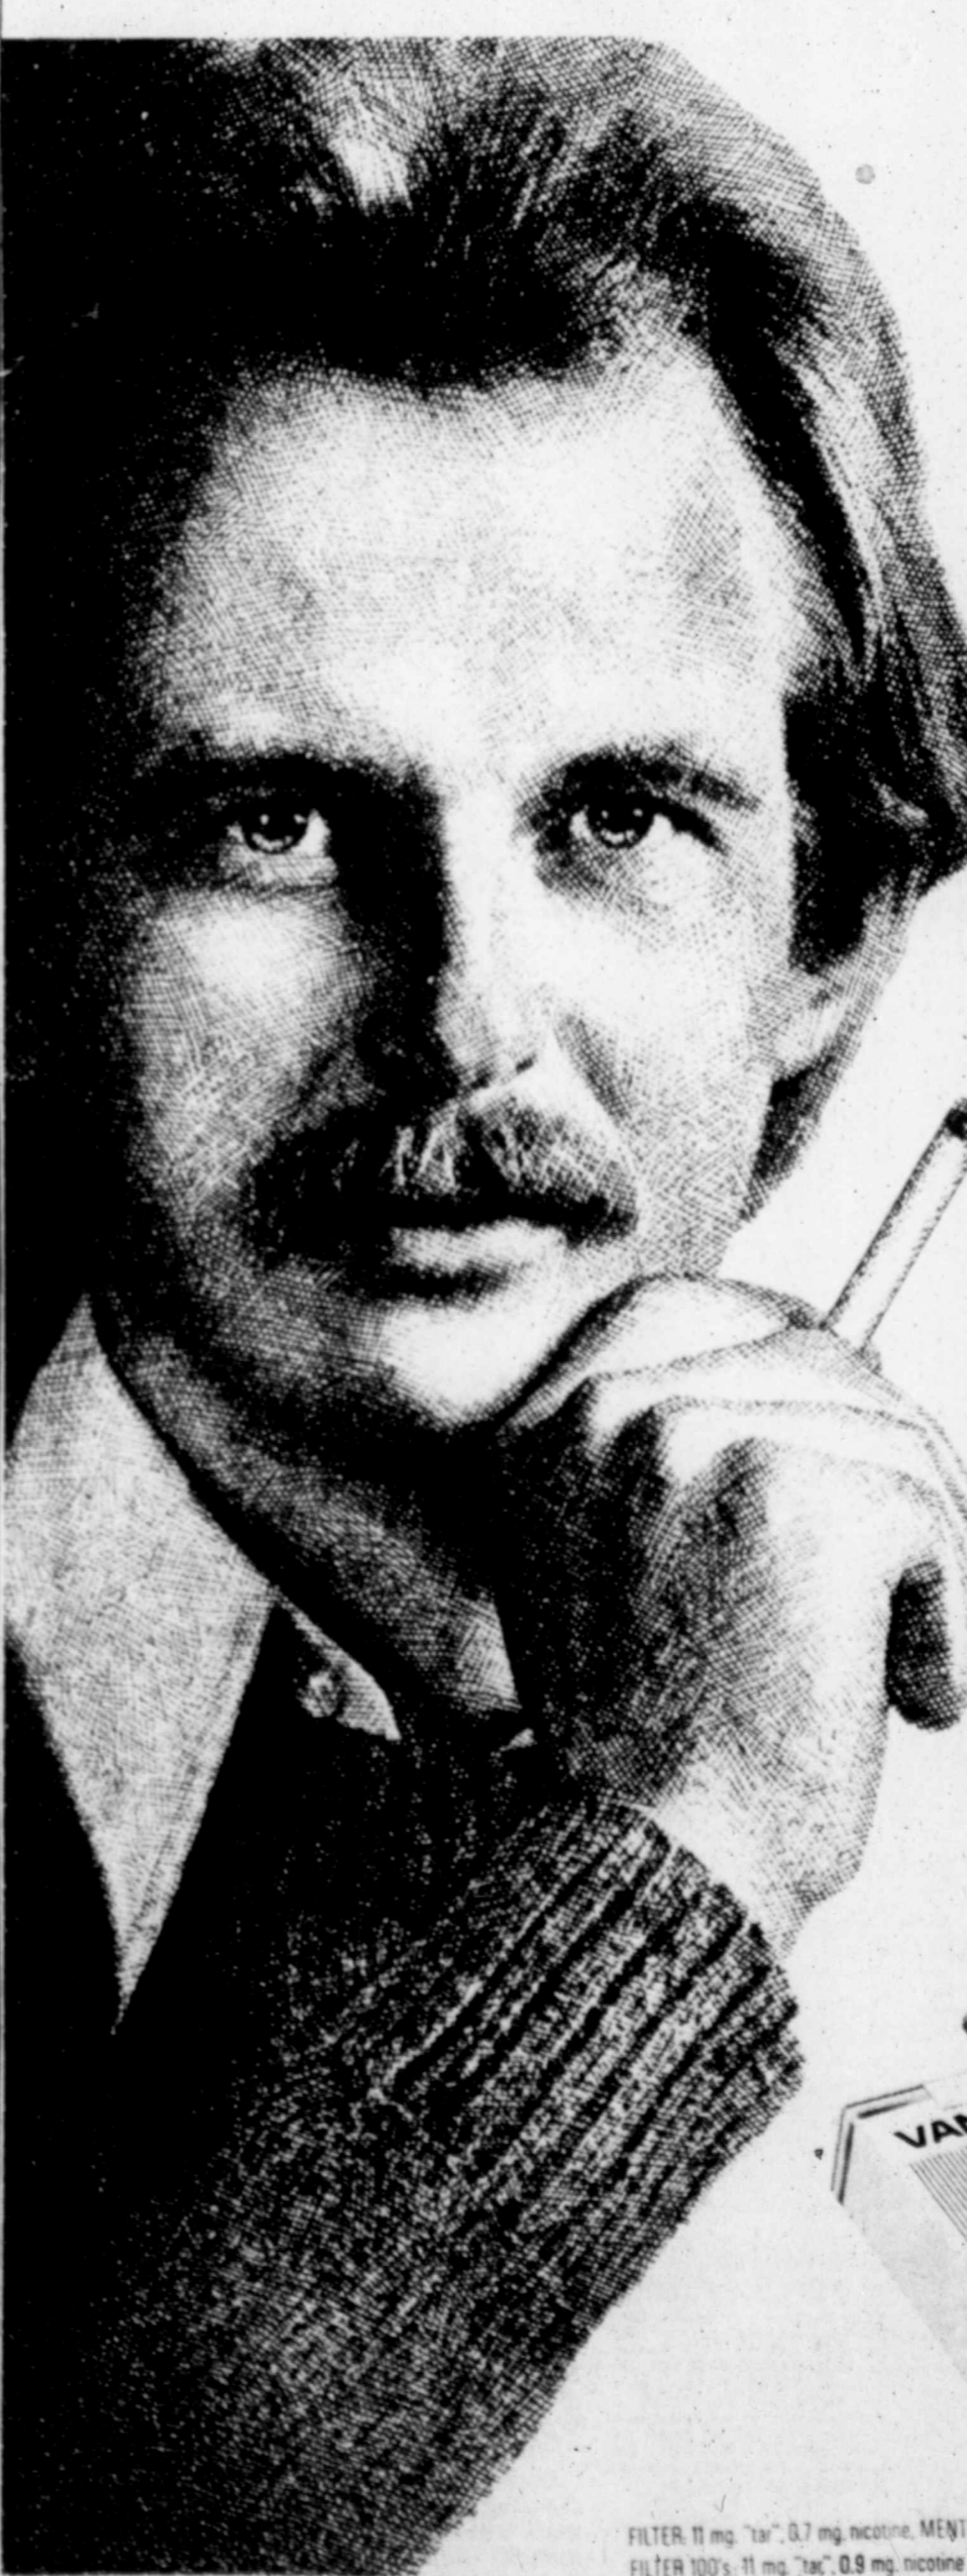

"Actually, we just talked Jesse into coming along so he could prove to my eldest daughter that he could catch a fish and not get seasick," Christy says.

After a 15-minute struggle that could have gone either way, he boats a 30-pound wahoo, the biggest fish we take all day. In fact, he catches eight of the nine fish taken by Harms's boat — two barracuda, four bonito, a blackfin tuna and the wahoo. I get the other, another tuna that felt bigger than he was.

Christy doesn't catch a fish all day, but that doesn't spoil his mood or his enthusiasm. He says he's been fishing in the Virgin Islands for 21 years and he still can't get enough.

The New Mexico lawyer says he used to bring his wife along at first, but she became disenchanted during one expedition.

"She was lying on that side bunk over there when we ran into a school of dolphin," he explained. "We were bringing fish aboard so fast we had no place to put 'em. One fish landed right on top of my wife. It was a mess — blood, water, fish all over the place."

'Why I choose to smoke'

"Why kid anyone? I smoke because I enjoy it. I'm the kind of guy who gets pleasure out of a cigarette. But I'm not deaf to what's being said about tar."

"So I searched out a cigarette that would give me taste with low tar. And two years ago I found it in Vantage. Vantage has all the taste I enjoy yet, surprisingly, much less tar than my old brand."

"Why did I choose Vantage? Because I like it."
