Victory spelled M-I-D-L-A-N-D at Indy race

BY TERRY WILLIAMSON R-T sports writer

INDIANAPOLIS, IND .- What were the chances of the Midlandbased Chaparral-Lola racing team winning the Indy 500 Sunday?

METRO EDITION

Long time observers of this event were saying their chances were slim and none. Most were striking the slim part, and not without reason.

First there was Jim Hall, the Midland owner who was bringing the car to Indy for the first time. Rumors have persisted for years that the West Texan of 17 years would one day make a charge at Indy, but it was still his first year here. It's not that Hall's genius with race cars was questioned here, but most felt he still had to pay his dues

Then there was Al Unser, the driver who won back-to-back 500s in 1970-71. There was no question that Unser is one of the best in the racing world, but some thought his crackup this year in the Coors 200 at College Station could have taken its toll on him. He hadn't raced competitively since he received a concussion in that race.

And chief mechanic Hywel Absalom had a crew that was working together on Indy cars for the first year. To make matters worse, the crew had to ready Hall's back up car for the race since the No. 1 Lola was demolished at the Coors 200. Froanz Weis, Troy Rogers, Dennis Swan, Ben Hall, Gene Grimm and Andy Cisternino formed the crew. All live in Midland with the exception of Cisternino, who is from Atlanta, Ga

Sunday, they shocked the race's 400,000 spectators by winning the world's most prestigious race. Unser. who became the fifth driver in Indy history to win the event three times, took the checkered flag at an average speed of 161.363 miles-per-hour and it could be a million dollar victory for all concerned after all is said and

Hall said last Friday that he had set up a three-year program to win the 500, and Sunday he said, "I guess this puts us ahead of schedule. I thought we could win this thing, but I'm a little surprised we did it in the first rattle out of the box. I don't think it is supposed to happen this way."

Although the Chaparral-Lola was overlooked by most prognosticators, Hall said there was at least one in his

"You know, Jimmy the Greek (Snyder) picked us to win this year," Hall said in amazement: "I don't really know why: There doesn't seem to be any reason for it, since this was a new team and a new car, but he picked us.

The brash Unser, who celebrated his 39th birthday one day early Sunday, 'was a little surprised at winning, but not at the expense of his confidence.l

"I don't race if I feel I don't have a chance to win, but I'm still surprised that everything ran so smoothly. We didn't have any trouble untilYthe las few laps, and I'm glad we had a big lead to work with because I couldn't have raced with anyone at the finish. The car wasn't handling properly,"

"Al just overshot the pit area on our last pit stop. He had to brake hard and it bent the right front wing, so we were getting a little bit of lift on the front end after that," Hall said.

Unser won by 8.3 seconds over pole sitter Tom Sneva, but the race was never really in any danger of slipping away since Unser had built a huge 29-second lead going into the final 20

In fact, it wasn't Sneva who gave Unser the toughest battle. Danny Ongais stayed close to Unser throughout the race, but a broken turbo-charger rotor sent him out of the race after 145 laps.

"I think we could have won it if we had stayed together," Ongais said. "Al was losing speed there at the end, and if we had been racing together like we were before I went out, we could have won it. But those things happen in racing."

Unser didn't take the lead until he made his move on the 76th lap to pass Ongais. He then led on 103 of the remaining 124 laps.

Now that Hall has won an Indy title. will he be back in 1979? "Sure," was the only answer Hall would give, but wife Sandy didn't let the question slip by so easily. "Al has won the Indy three times, but we haven't. We still have a ways to go," Sandy offered. And if the beautiful lady is right, Indy drivers may be in for a long seige of chasing the West Texas wind.

CANYON, Texas (AP) - Trying to find the body of a suspected fourth drowning victim from the weekend floods that hit the Texas Panhandle "would be like finding a needle in a haystack," officials of the normally drought-plagued region said early

The Canyon area includes scenic Palo Duro State Park about 10 miles east of this college town of 9,610. The area, which has a flat terrain broken by the canyons, has an average annual rainfall of 20.16 inches but received 7 inches on Friday and Saturday alone

Officials estimated the storm damage may reach $10 million, and Gov. Dolph Briscoe is expected to ask that the county be declared a federal disaster area. An estimated 400 persons were left stranded or homeless by the

The National Weather Service said there was a 20 percent chance of more rain today, but officials considered the worst behind them "All the water has gone down, but it

Heaviest hit by the flooding were two housing developments situated in low-lying areas. An 18-year-old boy stood on the knobs of a bedroom door from 3 a.m. until 7 a.m. Saturday, with six inches of breathing space from the top of the water to the ceiling, before being rescued about Ruth Booch, executive director of the Red Cross in Amarillo, said a preliminary damage survey indicates at least 15 homes and cabins and 14 mobile homes along Palo Duro Creek were destroyed. Eight more mobile homes and 50 additional houses suffered major mud and water damage.

Some chance of rain predicted

Partly cloudy skies and a 20 percent chance of rainfall are in the forecast for Midland through tonight, according to the weatherman.

However, by Tuesday, skies should become sunny and temperatures are expected to be a little warmer. The low temperature tonight should fall to the lower 60s with southeasterly winds decreasing to 10 to 15 mph. Tuesday's high temperature is pre-dicted to reach the lower 90s.

Sunday's high temperature was 87 degrees, while the overnight low was 59 degrees, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Rain was reported in some area towns over the weekend. Lamesa had from .5 to 1.2 inch of precipitation Sunday night. Rankin recorded approximately .2 inch Saturday night, and Big Spring had about .7 inch of rainfall Sunday night.

Otherwise, all area towns reported partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures this morning.

flood waters hit, sending a 12-foot wall of water crashing through picnic and camping areas. But higher ground was available to them.

About 30 persons were airlifted from the park Saturday by helicopter. Among the ones rescued was an elderly man with a heart condition. He was perched in a mesquite tree near a power line.

Park rangers said the waters should have receded enough in the park by this afternoon to allow campers to drive out. Flood crossings were still under 6 feet of water Sunday afternoon. The body of 24-year-old Kenneth Marler was found Sunday in a submerged car along Palo Duro Creek. Earlier, rescuers found the bodies of teen-ager Nita Stribling, who had become separated from her boyfriend when they attempted to swim away from their car, and Grace Taylor, whose home in Timbercreek Canyon was flooded.

Rosalynn, the unknown Carter

Editor's Note: There have been dozens of books about the Carter clan, but only one by the president's first cousin, Hugh Carter; boyhood friend of Jimmy Carter, Georgia state senator, humorist, raconteur, worm farmer and the "Worm King of Ameri-

In this second part in a series excerpted from his book, "Cousin Bee-die and Cousin Hot," Hugh Carter describes the relationship between first lady Rosalynn Carter and her mother-in-law, Miz Lillian.

By HUGH CARTER

Rosalynn is the unknown Carter. Everyone is so busy talking about the exuberant, colorful members of the family - Lillian, Jimmy, and Billy, not to mention religious healer. Ruth and motorcyclist Gloria - that Rosalynn gets pre-empted.

But Rosalynn is one of my favorite people - a person who exudes sweetness from within and a shyness that is sometimes mistaken for coldness. But around people she knows well, Rosalynn is far from shy.

She can handle any situation, but then if she is hurt, she will go off alone somewhere and cry. During the presidential campaign something said about her had hurt her very much, and she came home to Plains and cryed for three days. I never did find out exactly why, but I wished the people who call her "the Iron Butterand also "the Steel Magnolia" could see her then.

Rosalynn's father, Edgar Smith, died when she was 13 years old. Her mother, Miss Allie, was one of the most respected women in town, though in modest circumstances. She worked to support Rosalynn and the younger children, and Rosalynn added to the family earnings by working at the local beauty parlor after school and Saturdays. But since she hadn't taken a beauticians course, Rosalynn was not permitted to set hair. Instead she could only give hair washings and tidy up the parlor. Rosalynn went to Georgia Southwestern, which is a two-year junior college in Americus. I believe the family story goes that she was planning to go to a university afterward to complete her education, but she chose Jimmy and marriage instead.

The first date of Jimmy and Rosalynn took place in 1945. Jimmy was a midshipman on leave from Annapolis. According to the family gossip, Aunt Lillian hit the ceiling when Jimmy came home with his glowing account of Rosalynn and his avowed goal of marrying her.

She commented with characteristic bluntness that Rosalynn was not good enough for her son and not good enough to enter the Carter family. If there is anyone who is a hero or heroine in the Carter family, I would choose Rosalynn. She had done the most adventurous campaigning, been the most self-effacing and modest, and taken the most abuse from her mother-in-law, Miz Lillian.

For her handling of Miz Lillian alone, she deserves a medal. For her modesty, she deserves another medal, because I am not sure that without her Jimmy could have won. Yet I have never heard Miz Lillian acknowledge her daughter-in-law's true part in the campaign.

The general public does not know that it was gentle Rosalynn who went into neighborhoods seeking the black vote. And the vote of the underprivileged. She walked unafraid because she felt in her heart that God was protecting her because Jimmy had a mission to perform as president. She really felt part of a divine plan.

According to the story that circulated around our family, Rosalynn and her mother-in-law had their first showdown at the Governor's Mansion back in 1971. When Jimmy and Rosalynn were moving into the beautiful and spacious governor's home, Miz Lillian simply went along, too, and cheerfully announced that she would be the acting first lady because Rosalynn wasn't sophisticated or knowledgeable enough to handle it. To Rosalynn's credit, she did not cry and carry on or make Jimmy do her fighting for her. She waited until they both were in the kitchen out of Jimmy's earshot, and with a voice that was as steady as she could muster, she told her mother-in-law that she fully intended to run her own household but that Miz Lillian could always "come and visit. She even dared to tell her that it would be better if she packed and left and came back when things were in better order.

Miz Lillian was stunned, but she did pack her bags and leave. And Rosalynn became a marvelous hostess and homemaker, even branching out in projects outside the home.

Miz Lillian's slight haughtiness toward her daughter-in-law has had a psychological effect on Rosalynn. Rosalynn could never feel completely at home with her mother-in-law. She always felt somehow on probation, as if she were being judged worthy or unworthy of the privilege of being a member of Miz Lillian's family.

Because of this, I think, Rosalynn worked much harder than any young wife could be expected to, to be perfect. And because it was almost a relationship of judge and humble serf, Rosalynn never felt close enough to her mother-in-law to call her anything but Miz Lillian.

My own observation is that the two women - Rosalynn and Lillian have learned to cope with each other and to accept each other more now than ever before. Because each one has become a star in her own right, neither one needs to work so desperately to be a star with Jimmy.

Aunt Lillian is still the dominating force in almost any company, but this has made her, in her new status, a kind of folk hero and beloved curmud-

Rosalynn, on the other hand, has become more relaxed and tactful and sure off herself as the world-traveled and much honored representative of the president.

The family was used to Aunt Lillian's tendency to downgrade, but even so, I still cringed a little for Cousin Jimmy when she kept insisting that Jimmy was nothing special. As she told some reporters, Jimmy was "just a little redheaded, frecklefaced boy who lived in the country. There was nothing outstanding about Jimmy at all. He made good grades, but so did the rest of my children. There was nothing special about Jimmy.

I thought to myself that Miz Lillian hadn't really known her little boy after all Aunt Lillian takes a delight in flaunting the fact that she drinks a bourbon highball or two just about every evening. Other ladies in a church town like Plains would hide it, but Miz Lillian wants the ladies to know that she will smoke and she will drink if she wants to, and she does want to.

She freely says that the secret of her energy and long life is, "I live right - and don't forget that little shot of bourbon." She says, "I'm a bourbon woman.

During the presidential campaign it was hard not to snap at Aunt Lillian's bait when she was being particularly high-handed or needling me. I remember one night when all of us were guests for dinner at my brother-inlaw's house about a mile south of Plains. When Aunt Lillian walked in, she looked at me and said sharply as her opening gambit, "Hugh Carter, you're getting rich off Jimmy. She was referring, of course, to my antique store in town, where I had added Jimmy Carter and Plains souvenirs, as had all the other shops on Main Street, no matter what their basic business was.

I knew I should just laugh off this remark and say nothing, but she had struck a raw nerve because she had actually been helping one of my competitors with their souvenir business. "I am not making any more than

Maxine and Buford Reese," I said. 'What about them? It was a trivial thing, and I was almost ready to change the subject to something more pleasant when she snapped, "I don't want to ever speak to you again." Stung again, I bounced right back with, "If that's the way you feel, I don't want to speak to you again either.' Well, the damage had been done. I was ready to forgive and forget, but obviously she wasn't. Aunt Lillian didn't speak to me anymore that night or for several weeks following. She always turned her head or avoided me entirely. It's ironic that Lillian should sometimes turn against Rosalynn, because Rosalynn had been her daughter Ruth's best friend for years. And more important than that, Miz Lillian had taken care of Rosalynn's father when he was dying of leukemia. In fact, when Rosalynn's father died, Aunt Lillian took Rosalynn home with her so that she and Ruth could comfort her, and Rosalynn spent that night in the Carter home. I admire what Aunt Lillian did - going to India at the age of 68 after volunteering for the Peace Corps, and ministering to the sick. And I think she was very courageous to have nursed and actually embraced leprosy patients. It was a fine Christian act, and one that I am not sure I would have had the faith that passeth all understanding, to put myself in that jeopardy.

Like almost everyone in Plains of my generation, I have much to be grateful for to Aunt Lillian, whom the town calls Miz Lillian. And even though on and off she has become irritated and angry with me, I love her very much.

When I was very small, even before her firstborn, Jimmy, was born, I remember I used to visit with her and Uncle Earl, and I will always cherish the attention she gave me.

She loved my mother, Annie Laurie, her sister-in-law, very much, and was very kind and attentive to her when Mother was ill. I remember when my mother died in 1940, Aunt Lillian was right there at her bedside looking after her in a professional way, as she was a registered nurse.

Miz Lillian also attended my wife, Ruth, when all my children were born - Hugh Jr., Laurie Gay, and Connie.

I will always be grateful to her for the love and consideration she has shown the various members of my family throughout our lives. (NEXT: Billy, Ruth and Gloria)

China, Vietnam urge meeting

HONG KONG (AP) - Chinese fleeing Vietnam say persecution by the Communist authorities made them leave, Hong Kong Communist newspapers reported today. Hanoi denied this and proposed talks with Peking to settle the dispute.

Hsinhua, China's official news agency, says Vietnam has thrown out 89,700 "victimized" Chinese residents of Vietnam since April and is accelerating the expulsions.

Hanoi said the Chinese are leaving because of untrue rumors that they will be punished because of China's aid to Cambodia, now locked in a border conflict with Vietnam. But Nhan Dan, the Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper, indicated today that they were leaving because the conversion of South Vietnam to a communist society is taking away their businesses.

"We cannot stop our transformation just because there are Chinese businessmen in Vietnam." said the official Hanoi paper. "China, with her experiences in socialist transformation, should sympathize with Vietnam instead of fanning up fabrications against it.'

Hong Kong's two leading Communist dailies, Ta Kung Pao and Wen Wei Po, reported that Chinese who left Vietnam recently held meetings Saturday in Kwangchow and Foochow, two southern Chinese provincial capitals, and reported that Chinese technicians and skilled workers were forced to work as laborers in Vietnamese mines and forbidden to speak Chinese among themselves. Those who violated the regulation were forced to wear hats marked "subversive elements," the report

set of chisel handles

There are all sorts of wall mounted tool holders for screwdrivers. There's the wire look type for pegboards, and the one piece angle iron type with a series of holes. However, your wood chisels won't work in most of these because the holes are too small for the wider chisel blades. An easy tailormade chisel holder can be fashioned from a strip of old inner tube. Cut the strip about an inch wide and staple one end to the shop wall or end of the Next, place a chisel handle next to the staple and bring the strip over the handle. Stretch the rubber slightly. Bring the strip down against the surface and staple it. Keep this up for each chisel handle until you have your entire set up on the wall, and then cut off the remainder of the strip. The rubber snaps back and holds the handles in place, and yet a slight tug will release the tool for use. I saw this idea in a shop where the strip was looking for something to plant in a sunny spot that will provide fast color from summer to fall with little care? Then try marigolds, suggests Everett Janne with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

By selecting the right type of seed, you can have tall, medium or petite plants with various size flowers from creamy white to yellow to deep orange. Some marigolds are even multi-colored.

"Marigolds are excellent for massing, as borders, or as container plants," says Janne, a landscape horticulturists. "A few rows placed in the cut flower garden will yield cut flowers galore.

To get a head start you can plant seed indoors before danger of frost is past or you can sow them directly in. the garden about the same time you sow Bermuda grass. Nothing is gained by planting marigolds outdoors before the soil warms up, advises the horticulturists.

"Marigolds develop rapidly. The flower bud on the center stalk opens first, followed by buds on the side shoots. The younger side shoots reach above the older flowers, so there is always a mass of new flowers opening as a canopy over the plants." explains

Since marigolds are naturally bushy and free flowering, they never need pinching. They are easily transplanted from flats, requiring only a good watering to get them established

"About the only care marigolds need is a well-drained soil, frequent irrigation, and a light application of fertilizer about every four weeks." says Janne. "The major pest problem is spider mite damage. Spider mites seem to thrive on marigolds. An occasional hosing with a fine stream of water will aid in keeping them under control. I bought them for peach orchards. And I enjoy doing that very much. And these little old operations that go on down there, drilling a hole or two looking for uranium, that mess that's left with a little old oil well with pipe laying all over the place is a nuisance to me. Poerner, 48, was asked if he thought he had been rude and disrespectful in questioning Sadler's ability to perform because Sadler is 70.

'No," replied Poerner, "I think maybe Mr. Sadler would do a better job being a comedian for Texaco.'

Poerner said he thought Sadler led the first primary balloting because of his name identification with the voters. He said, "I don't think he had pro votes. I think it was just the fact that the Texas Railroad Commission is rather low on the pecking order politically in Texas. I think we just sort of got lost in the tide."

as source of uranium

ALPINE-There is a good indicatin that West Texas could become another source to feed the nation's hunger for uranium, said Dr. C.C. Reeves, Texas Tech geology professor, however, uranium companies. will not recognize the uranium poten-

"I cannot say the area has great potential for uranium exploration and mining, but at the same time I cannot say that it hs no potential," he said.

Reeves' remarks came after delivering a paper to more than 125 geologists from across the United States and Mexico attending the recent Trans-Pecos Volcanic Field conference sponsored by the Sul Ross State University Department of Geology.

Reeves pointed out that a tri-county area comprised of Brewster, Jeff Davis and Presidio Counties contains a number of uranium source areas. These sites take the form fo ancient volcanic centers which ceased to erupt some 10 million years ago.

In addition, the area also contains a number of structural entrapments which collect and retain the radioactive minerals that leach and weather out of the volcanic source sites

Reeves and Pat Kennedy and Elwood Wright, both of the Meeker Company, an independent oil operator based in Fort Worth, have plotted 11 localities where sensitive geiger counter equipment indicated the concentration of possible radioactiveminerals and uranium deposits.

Uranium minerals have been found at seven of these sites, however the bulk of the minerals are not found on the surface, but 30 to 100 feet below ground level. "Herein lies the problem of extracting the uranium and one of the reasons the uranium companies fail to recognize this area's potential," Reeves said.

Most of the companies use surface mining methods to extract uranium from seconary enrichment deposits currently found in Wyoming and Arizona. "When these companies send exploratory teams to this region, they consequently look for surface deposits and find none. They fail to recognize that the otentially good deposits lie underground."

Reeves labels the situation a "matter of economics. The problem arises in drilling through hard underlying rock to get to the uranium deposits. This cost of extracting the uranium in turn discourages any exploration of the area," he

Reeves could not say if uranium companies are planning more exploratory moves into West Texas. The activity fluctuates from year to year, he added.

In the paper, co-authored by the three geologists, they oint out that the Energy Research Development Administration has "flown" this threecounty area, plotting radioactive sites as part of the National Uranium Resource Evaluation program. Maps of these sites will be released in the next few months, Reeves said, and "should draw some attention to the area."

According to Wright, all it will take is "one good discovery and a good financial situaion, and the area will experience an oil boom type situation." The Meeker Company holds lease interests in the MaRFA BAsin where a number of the radioactive

Trade deficit gets boost

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rising imports of oil and automobiles contributed to a $2.86-billion trade deficit last month, the fourth largest on record, the Commerce Department said

A trade deficit means Americans are spending more money on foreign products than other countries are spending on U.S. goods. The deficits in the past two years have led to a decline in the value of the dollar overseas and contributed to inflation in this country

The April deficit, the 23rd in a row, indicated the trade imbalance is growing faster than it did last year, when it reached $26.5 billion.

U.S. businesses exported a record $11.6 billion in April, but foreigners also sold a record $14.5 billion in goods to this country, the department said. Department analysts said one reason for the record figures was accelerating inflation, which grew at a rate of about 9.3 percent early this

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (APP) workers who ended a weeklong cat strike Sunday are expected to be scheduled as soon as possible now that pickets at a refinery here have been removed. Company officials earlier had refused to talk with the workers who walked off the job last Monday protesting promotions without regard to seniority, which they termed "harassment.

About 3,000 union members honored the picket line. The plant employs 5,300 persons, and jobs were performed by management personnel during the strike.

"I'm directing all appropriate parties to contact management to arrange for a return to work right away without further loss of pay," said Frank Arnaud, president of Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union Local 423:

Robert Towne, a spokesman for the lab workers, said he sent a letter to management saying federal mediator Hal Stookey had assured him management would meet and enter goodfaith bargaining.

World's oil output down

TULSA - Worldwide crude-oil production declined 2.3 percent durig the first quarter of 1978 from the same period a year ago, the Oil and Gas Journal reports.

Output from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) dropped to 28.2 million barrels a day from 31.5 million barrels a day as rising production from the North Sea, Mexico and Alaska crowded some OPEC crude out of the mar-

Crude-supply excesses forced many exporting countries to cut prices, ease credit terms, and resort to toehr sales inducements, the Journal reports in its May 22 issue. Inflation pressure is expected to reduce price-trimming the rest of the year, however.

Most analysts expect the global crude surplus to last another 3-5 years, with some predicting it to last into the late 1980's.

Total world production for the first quarter this year averaged slightly more than 57.9 million barrels a day. That's 1.36 million barrels a day less than during the first quarter of 1977, the Journal reports.

First-quarter U.S. output averaged 8.5 million barrels a day, reflecting Alaskan North Slope production of about 1.14 million barrels a day. The Soviet Union, the world's biggest producer, increased its production of crude and condensate to 11.28 million barrels a day at the end of the first quarter.

Production in Saudi Arabio declined to 7.75 million barres a day during the first quarter, compared with 9.15 million barrels a day in the same period a year earlier.

coffee. The former president did not have a sip. He was too busy answering questions. Politics, foreign policy, inflation, more politics.

Concidentally, this was one day after the publication of a Louis Harris poll that showed Ford leading President Carter, 48 percent to 43 percent, if the 1980 presidential election were to be held now.

Would that impel him to run

"I haven't really thought of that poll in that context," Ford said. " I've never thought polls were that

Republican Ford by three percentage

There is a school of thought that holds Ford might not be inclined to give up the good life of Palm Springs, the celebrity golf circuit, part-time politics and lecturing to return to the rigors of running - unless Ronald Reagan is a 1980 candidate for the Republican nomination.

Reagan is not saying, either. The same Harris poll showed Reagan and Carter about even in a hypothetical 1980 contest.

Ford said he will make his decision about 1980 in a year, perhaps a year and a half. "I have not thought it out carefully," he said.

Whenever Reagan is asked, he says pretty much the same thing - it is too early to think about 1980.

But a good many people are, and it is hard to believe that Ford and Reagan are not among them. Ford, now 64, and Reagan, at 67, will have at best one more chance to run, and even now they may have trouble with the political generation gap. A younger crop of Republicans already is suggesting that both of them should stand aside for a new generation of GOP

Beyond that, there is the fact that a rematch between them would ignite again the GOP ideological strife that has been characteristic of the party

In 1976, the relatively conservative Ford became the candidate of moderate and liberal Republicans because the alternative was Reagan.

John Deardourff, a campaign consultant who worked for Ford in 1976, suggests in the new magazine Public Opinion that the Republican Party machinery is in such conservative hands that there is only a remote possibility a moderate GOP candidate can be nominated in 1980.

He said there may not even be a major modérate candidate unless Ford, "now viewed as apostate by the leadership of the Republican right, decides to make the race.

In the same journal, Reagan campaigners David Keene and John Sears write that competence will be the key issue in the next campaign.

"The American people aren't going to send Jimmy Carter back to Plains for purely ideological reasons, but they will if he convinces enough of them that he isn't up to the job,"

"Lyndon Johnson and George Romney could speak volumes on what can happen to a politician once his compe tency is called into question," Sears writes. "For Mr. Carter, that issue could become devastating.

That would be ironic indeed, since it was precisely that issue that helped him oust Ford from the White
