Growth of Baby Teeth When a baby is born his first teeth are already formed in the gums, although they usually don't begin to come through until between the sixth and eighth month

The diet of the mother before the baby was born determines the health of the baby's teeth, which begin growing five or six months before birth.

The permanent teeth as well as the baby teeth begin to form before birth. The baby's diet affects the condition of these second teeth. Calcium in milk and Vitamin D in fish-liver oil are essential for strong healthy teeth.

Some people still this notion have about prophets in the Bible, as if they had been gypsy fortune-tellers, tea-leaf readers or astrologers. They were nothing of the sort. It is not possible to open the Bible to Dr. Foreman the books of the prophets and read history-in-advance, finding out when the next of the world is scheduled. If we could really use the prophets of the Bible in this way, then any reader of these books could write history accurately in advance; but no one has done this

Hired Man and Aristocrat

THE genuine prophets, whose writings make up so much of the Bible, are something far loftier than mere fortune-tellers. They are authentic voices of God. Because of the way they spoke, the timeless truth of what they said, they are God's spokesmen to our own times as well as to their own, and to all

The Bible prophets were not "professionals." They had no churches to support them. No regular meetings were arranged for them. You never would have read in the Jerusalem Journal, if there had been such a newspaper, that the Rev. Dr. Isaiah would preach at the temple at 11 a. m. and there would be special music. Few ever knew when or where a prophet might speak.

No one knew beforehand where a prophet might come from. Amos, for example, was a hired man from a sheep-ranch. Micah was a smalltown preacher. Isaiah was a highly cultured citizen of the capital, intimate with all the important people. Ezekiel was a trained priest, loving ritual and pageantry. Jeremiah was a lonely, hunted man, living often in jails. Daniel was a member of a king's council, wealthy and famous.

They were all kinds of men, these prophets, but one and all, they were God's voices, pleading, warning, teaching all who would hear.

Their Times and Ours

HUMAN nature is always much the same. One man alone, or one man with another man, or a man with a woman, or a man in a crowd—in the Eighth century before Christ when Amos preached, or now in the 20th century after Christ, the same sort of situation brings out the same temptations, the same sins. The prophets often sound quite modern, but that is only because the human race is so old-fashioned

The prophets looked about them and saw a world much like our own. They saw people spending more than they could afford; they saw wealthy women dressing in competition with one another while poorer women starved; they saw crowds of business men attending religious services on Sabbath mornings and spending the rest of the Sabbath figuring out how to cheat their customers on Mon-

The prophets lived in evil times and they brought the judgment of God to such times-then, now and always.

Sins of Society

IN AN American town there was a lynching one Saturday night. The next morning there were four sermons in the four little churches of the town: but not one of the preachers had a word to say about that lynching or any lynching or about the causes that produce such crimes.

The prophets never would have missed an opportunity like that. They were not afraid to speak out, even when they had the whole community against them.

. . . What Does God Require?

T IS easier to say "Don't" than "Do." It is easier to criticize than to construct. But the prophets did not stop with warnings. They have given us a pattern for living, which Micah summed up in those matchless, inspired words: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Everything that is good, in public life or in private, is included in those 22 words.

IKE' TAKES A LEAP

It now can be said officially that 'Ike" Eisenhower is president of Columbia university. The formal installation was held the other day with a distinctly global touch. Representatives of 310 American colleges, 38 foreign universities and 37 learned societies showed up.

Columbia is a dignified university and needs no ballyhoo, but publicity of the right sort hurts no institution and Columbia couldn't have won more space in newsreels and newspapers if Ike's installation had had an assist from Billy Rose, Larry MacPhail, Twentieth Century Fox and the Ringling Brothers.

It was the greatest attendance of educational celebrities ever gathered under one tent, and the first time there was emphasis on choreography.

To a casual passerby the ceremonial had touches of the New Or leans Mardi Gras, the Rose Bow game, the landing in France, the inaugural of Teddy Roosevelt and the funeral of Rudolf Valentino. Colossal was the name for it.

And it could only happen here. A man, never a teacher in his life, unnoted for book learning, essentially a great soldier and the leader war was just placed in charge of the largest in chargest in charge of the largest in charge of t war was just placed in charge of one of the largest universities on are rewardingly handsome. Use earth. A few years ago "Ike," pictured in cap and gown, would have and have short or push-up sleeves. aroused suspicions of sabotage; today he would look odd in a brass-

From the beaches of Normandy to the campus of Morningside Heights is as long a drive as any the general made in Europe. Grant would have seemed impossible as head of Harvard, it would have been hard to picture Pershing as dean of Yale and nobody ever suggested Admiral Dewey as top man at Princeton. But such is the personality, ability and prestige of General "Ike" that his transformation from the shot and shell to book and quill seems fine and dandy.

What other country could call its top army hero "Prexy"?

"Abilene Ike," conqueror of the Nazis, winding up on University Heights, giving zip to the college spirit, hoping for a good season on the gridiron and wondering how the kids are doing in sociology . . what a leap and what a man!

We have a notion that once in a while even now the general locks iself in the library, looks at him self in the mirror and then calls the university phone exchange, saying softly, "I think this is Dean Eisenhower; will you please confirm it?"

"Ike" must be an inspiration to the kids. It will seem silly to say "I just can't lick this subject" to a guy who licked the Nazi menace from a standing start, with broomsticks as the early training weapon.

"Ike" could have been our next President without half trying. The time cries for a personality of his charm, horse sense and fiber. And he may make it sometime in the days to come. We wish to warn him, however, that he is in great peril. The great roast squab, green pea, wet toast and watercress salad peril, to be exact. (With red, white and green ice cream and the half warm demi tasse.) Those New York banquets may do what Hitler never could do. Don't accept all the invitations, general, and bring your own food now and then. * * *

Honey During the Ages Interesting are the stories of symbolic ceremonies associated with weddings among people of Asia, Africa, and Europe. Not the least of these tells of the part played by honey. Honey was respected as an important commodity, as a symbol of sweetness in family relations and of protection against evil spirits, and as a food. History records that in the marriage contracts of ancient Egypt the bridegroom has to promise his bride a definite amount of honey each year. Among the Hindus and certain Central European people honey was used to bless the home or anoint the bridal couple. In Rome and among the Slavs honey or a honey beverage was served to the bride and the bridegroom as a special part of the ceremony. In a
