

WE COST YOU, POP -- Sons who drive automobiles (and there no other kind) cost Pop money these days as a result of revised auto insurance rules. Like, for instance, the big Murrah boys in the Progress community ganged around Pop (Gordon Murrah) as he writes a check for the upped insurance rates. Gary is 16 and Mike is 21. (Journal Photo)

Young Sons (Who Drive) Wear Black, Black Hats in New Insurance Set-up

If you have sons under 25 who drive family vehicles you can:

1. Pay more automobile insurance because of said sons or:

2. Shoot them, or
3. Get them to get married. Since only two of the above alternatives are legal, it probably would pay you just to write a bigger check to your insurance man, especially if you are fond of Junior. And that might be even cheaper than have Junior get married the cost of weddings being what they are these days.

And then for the next year you should drive as carefully as you possibly can and get Junior and the missus to drive carefully too. And your daughters as well, since everybody's record is figured next year when the insurance man goes doping out your 1967 insurance fee. And maybe in July, 1967, you'll wear a white hat - you and your whole family, including Junior even if he hasn't got married by that time and is still under 25 years of age.

It's all a part of a very complicated automobile insurance system which went into effect last weekend while you slept--you and your male single children under 25, of course. (It doesn't really matter whether your unwed daughters slept or not, they aren't counted as menaces unless, of course, they run a stop sign; then they'll be blackhat wearers next year, too. If we make ourselves clear, which we probably do not.

Take Farmer Gordon Murrah as an example. He and Mrs. Murrah have two sons, both under 25. Mike will be a sophomore at Texas Tech this autumn, but he drives and he's single and that's the worst kind. Unless, of course, it's a boy who is only 16. The Murrah's have one of those too--Gary who is 16. He drives and he has a car too. So Murrah is just waiting for word from his insurance company. Then all the next year he hopes the whole family will drive carefully so next July when the rates for 1967 are figured, the insurance company will let him wear a white hat.

Major violations--like driving while intoxicated, negligent homicide, hit and run or felony driving offenses--will cost drivers three points.

Two points will be assessed for driving while a license is suspended or for violations resulting in suspension. One point will be charged for accidents where there is injury or death--or property damage over $50--and for speeding. Speeding points are not counted until after one or two "free convictions" in the preceding year or three years.

After 1969, penalties will be based on driving records over a 36-month period.

Twelve exceptions to the "point" rule are listed, however, and one of them includes accidents in which the driver is not at fault. Unlike the old retroactive, statewide plan of 1960-62 which created so much controversy, the current plan is based on experience in 26 separate rating territories and considers no offenses prior to August 1.

Penalty points now are being assessed motorists for accidents and major violations... including speeding.

One penalty point will mean a 15 per cent hike, two points 35 per cent, three points 60 per cent and four or more 90 per cent.

Youth Leaves Heel print In Sand; Justice Fixes Bond at $1000 B&E

A trademark on the heel of a shoe--a neat emblem that transferred its pattern into the soft sand in the alley behind a Muleshoe jewelry store may have been the undoing of a 17-year-old Latin-American youth and a 15-year-old companion.

To say the least, the heel mark led to the arrest of the lad and his companion. And it also led to recovery by county and city officers of most of the loot taken in two successive nights at Murray Lemons Jewelry on Main Street.

At midweek, only six watches were missing, Sheriff Dee Clements said; two of these had been sold and the other two given away, the sheriff explained.

But most of the $1470.49 in merchandise taken in the two nighttime raids had been recovered by midweek.

Meantime, Justice of the Peace Joe Vaughn set bond at $1000 for Danny Morales Bare, 17 on a charge of breaking and entering. The other youth will be tried in juvenile court.

Clements said the jewelry firm was entered both Saturday and Sunday nights. The first night, he said, the thieves entered through an unlocked back door and made off with a considerable supply of merchandise valued at $741.53. The store's owner discovered the missing items Sunday afternoon when he went in to the store to

Springlake Man Dies on Highway

Funeral services were held at the Springlake Baptist Church at 3 o'clock Tuesday for Donald Ray Watson, 28-year-old Springlake farmer who was killed early Sunday six miles northwest of Muleshoe when struck by an automobile on U.S. 84-70.

The accident, near the Progress Community, involved a car containing the Don Robert Morris family of Wichita Falls. The Morris car, according to investigating highway patrolman Freddy Jack, was headed northwest when the car lights were dimmed to meet an on-coming vehicle.

After passing, Morris told officers, he brought his lights up and caught sight of Watson standing in the highway. Morris said he swerved to the right to avoid a collision, but Watson also ran the same direction and into the path of the car.

Justice of the Peace Joe Vaughn pronounced Watson dead at the scene. The victim's

Robin Taylor Is New Agent

Robin Taylor, wife of C. L. Taylor, has been named Bailey County Home Demonstration Agent, it was announced Wednesday, succeeding Jean Martin who resigned several weeks ago. She and her husband, James Martin, are moving to Beaumont where he will teach in Lamar Tech. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have one son, Kenneth, a high school senior, and a daughter, Mrs. Don Parker, Amarillo. The family are members of the Church of Christ.

School activities for the 1966-67 school term get under way at mid-August and the actual opening of school for the new year is only three weeks off, school officials pointed out Wednesday.

Superintendent Neal Dillman announced the schedule of events for the pre-opening and opening activities and at the same time said building renovations and improvements are being completed. The schools last year were faced with a feverish last-minute round of activities occasioned by an elaborate building program, barely completed in time for the opening. This year's equipment program has been limited to repairs and re-decorating of certain units.

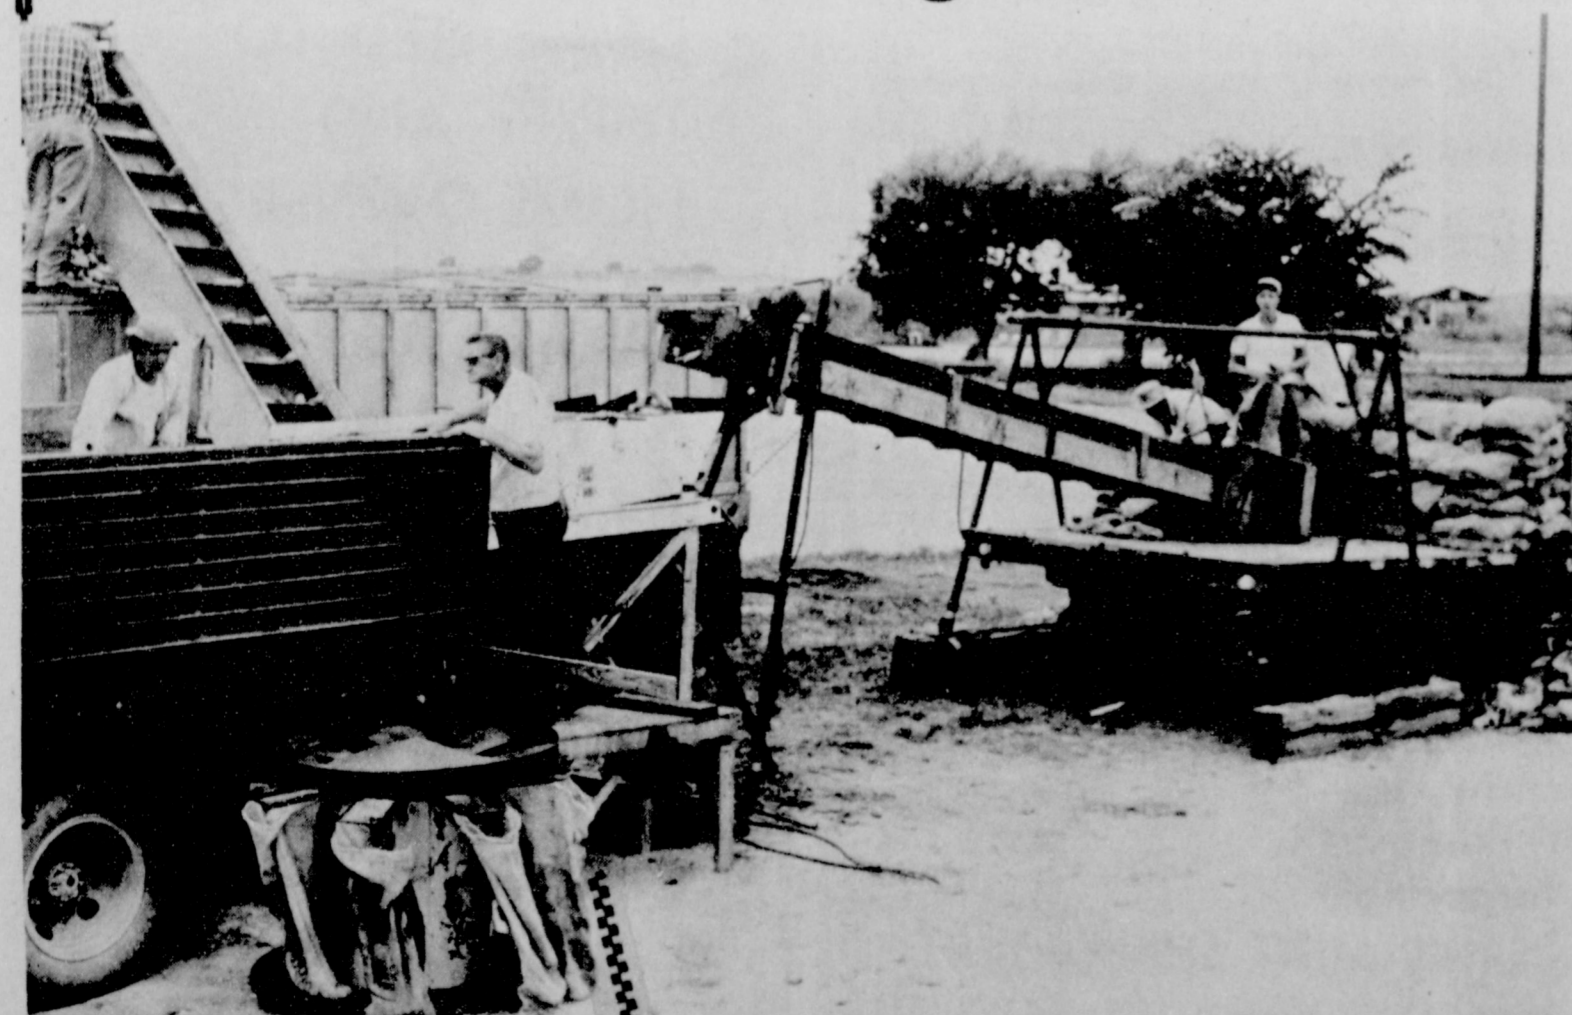

Among the first events slated for the pre-school program is the beginning of band rehearsals Aug. 15. Band director Bob Breckenridge is attending a band institute but will return to Muleshoe soon to start arrangements for the first practices. Breckenridge, who has been director of the junior high band, will take over the senior high post this year in the place of Bill Bradley. Bradley resigned to accept a post in his home town, Big Spring.

Many of the pupils registered for the new term last spring before the close of the 1965-66 term. However, registration will be held again this month starting Monday Aug. 22 with the two top classes. Seniors are to register from 8:30 until noon that day, and juniors from 1:30 until 5 p.m. at the senior high school.

Tuesday, Aug. 23, will be devoted to registration of the other two classes. Sophomores will register from 8:30 until noon Aug. 23, and freshmen from 1:30 until 5 p.m. that day. Teacher workshops are slated for Aug. 23 through Aug. 29 in the various buildings, start- Continued on page 6

Cucumbers Take Important Role

Cucumbers may become big business in Bailey County within a season or two. In fact, it's already a 350-acre industry and shows no signs of reaching its peak, a check made by the Journal this week revealed.

Virtually all the cucumbers grown in this county are under contract to Morton Foods, Inc., growers say, and there is talk of expanding the local acreage to 1000 or more by next season. A potential buyer was in the county this week, it is reported, trying to sign up additional growers for the 1967 season. Seven growers in this area are reported under contract to Morton Foods, with acreages ranging from a few acres up to more than half a hundred acres. The industry for the most part is concentrated in the West Camp district, although extends north well beyond the county limits.

Increased acreage for cucumbers is in keeping with increased vegetable growing for this year, a grower pointed out. "We have the water, the climate, and the soil for vegetable production," he explained, "so it is only natural that this industry should expand. I believe the day will come when thousands of acres will be devoted to vegetables in this immediate area."

Other growers this year include Tim Campbell, Bill Jim St. Clair, James Young, Max Bush and David Stovall, Jr. Increased acreage for cucumbers is in keeping with increased vegetable growing for this year, a grower pointed out.

PLANNING AHEAD

NEENAH, Wis. (AP) — A local firm reports that it is getting its material ready for orders expected 33 years from now. Seedlings planted this year, says A.G. Sharp, senior vice president of Kimberly-Clark, will by 1999 be harvested and used to produce books, newspapers, tissue products, etc. Paper production by then is expected to be about triple its current output, with Americans using 140 million tons of paper a year. Contrast that with the 50 million tons for 1966.

CUCUMBER INDUSTRY—Bailey county has a bumper cucumber crop this year which is just rolling to market. Here are two scenes at Progress where the vegetables are being processed. Looking on are E. V. Tanner and his daughter, Suzy, as culls roll down the chute. Two other pictures on Page 1.

sleeves which came to points over her wrist. A short flowing chapel train fell from the waist. Her veil of silk illusion was attached to a crown of seed pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade arrangement of white gardenias and stephanotis tied with white streamers atop her white Rainbow Bible. The bride carried out the tradition of something old with her mother's engagement ring; something new was her wedding ensemble. She borrowed her veil from Mrs. Gary Goetz and wore a blue garter. For good luck she had pennies minted in the year of her birth and the grooms in her shoes. She also wore heirloom pearls a gift from Mrs. Mary Lou Cason.

Mrs. Lee Jesko, cousin of the bride was matron of honor. She wore a yellow brocade street length dress. It was fashioned with an empire waist, scoop neckline and cap sleeves. Her cricket veil of yellow net was attached to a matching pillbox. She carried a single yellow long stem rose. Miss Angie Jesko, flower girl wore a yellow brocade dress with a self bow hat. She carried a white and gold basket of pom pom mums.

Misses Cindy Cason and Tammie Parvin were candle-lighters. They wore yellow brocade dresses identical to that of the flower girl and shoulder corsages of white gardenias. Misses Pat and Sherry Tannahill played traditional wedding selections at the piano and organ. They also accompanied Wayne Cason as he sang "Because" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Attending the groom, as best man was Kenneth Fry of Summerfield. Mat Moten of Bovina served as ring bearer. Ushers were Darrell Collier brother of the bride, and Lee Jesko. Miss Gayla Ivy of Pettit, presided at the guest registry. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Collier chose a white knit suit trimmed with blue.

Tower Says Aid Bill Improved

By Sen. John G. Tower

The Senate has spent most of the last two weeks perfecting the 1966 foreign aid bills. A good deal of wasted money was cut from the bills, but too much waste remained, and I voted against the economic aid bill on final passage. I supported the separate military assistance bill.

This year's Foreign Economic Aid Bill does have many improvements over foreign aid bills of recent years. For the first time in the contested and somewhat muddled history of the United States foreign assistance programs, there is evidence this year of considerably more realistic approach toward the feasibility of giving away huge sums of money.

I was particularly pleased to note the determination of the Senate to exercise an annual review over the vast majority of the programs created by the bill. Congress must continue to scrutinize closely the administration of the foreign aid program so that Congress may determine if the program is accomplishing the goals for which it was intended. And, Congress must have the courage to admit errors and to eliminate the unworkable parts of the program when common sense and clear facts indicate that plans have gone awry. The retention of annual review over the bulk of the foreign aid program is a necessary precondition to a realistic and effective program.

I believe it most significant that the Senate slightly modified this annual-review position to allow two-year planning of Alliance for Progress programs. In the past, the Alliance has suffered severely from a proliferation of socialistic programs in areas where private enterprise might better have served. But, the Alliance is such an important part of our worldwide effort that it deserves special attention.

Our own state has special ties to Latin America, and Texans are especially desirous of seeing the Alliance improved and successful. By its action, the Senate has served notice that it, too, regards the Alliance as of extraordinary significance. I now hope that the administrators will give it the extra attention the Senate deems wise.

I also am pleased that the military and economic assistance sections of the Foreign Aid Bill have been separated. I have felt for several years that economic aid and military assistance could be more rationally considered by Congress as separate measures.

The assistance, both military and economic, which have been applied in Southeast Asia has been unusually well administered. Despite some very difficult burdens and some losses to blackmarketeers and to a few corrupt officials, our aid to South Vietnam has been making a major contribution to our efforts to achieve stability and peace in Asia. This is an example of U. S. aid skillfully and effectively applied. With a little tightening of security precautions, Southeast Asia will be a showplace of how foreign aid may be best used to further American foreign policy and national security.

Perhaps the most important improvement in this year's Foreign Aid Bill over those of previous years is the $400 million cut, authorized by the Senate, in the total amount of aid to be included in the program. That cut will do much to reassure the American taxpayer that his money is not being thrown away and unnecessarily wasted in a time of pressing domestic inflation.

Given a smaller amount of money with which to work and a limited number of countries eligible to receive aid, we can hope that the administrators of the foreign aid program will at last abandon the scattergun approach to economic and military assistance.

I have long been a critic of this scattergun approach to foreign aid. I have argued on many occasions that our foreign aid funds should be used on a more selective basis; that we should not contribute to the building of socialistic governments or socialistic schemes abroad.

Yes, this year's Foreign Aid Bill is an improvement, a step in the right direction. But it is not a large enough step. We have only begun to move in the direction of an effective foreign aid policy. I look forward to the day when we will start with a very minimal amount of money in our plan and add to it when proposed projects are worthy of the support of the American taxpayer.

Under the present system, we start with a large sum of money and then whittle away at it, placing the burden of proof upon those who seek to eliminate unwise projects. This is not right. Those seeking funds should be required to show the worth of their plan and then, and only then, should they receive the funds to carry it out.

As I said, I withheld my support from this bill. I cannot be satisfied with a token gesture or even with a single step towards the goal of a sound and effective foreign aid program. My duty to my constituents, and to all other Americans who must pay for our foreign aid programs, forced me to say "no" to this bill which did not weed out all the weaknesses and waste which have for so long been a part of our aid programs.

Plastic Mulch Boosts Melons In Early Yield

HEMPSTEAD--Drive by Roland Dreahn's farm on U.S. highway 290 near here and you'll see two strips of shiny black plastic along the ground. Cantaloupes are growing up through the plastic.

Looks kind of odd at first. If you stop and talk to Dreahn, he'll tell you that so far this year he's harvested 1490 pounds of cantaloupes from those two rows. Two identical rows--except for the plastic--have yielded a measly 60 pounds to date.

In this lights, it doesn't look so odd, it seems almost fantastic instead.

Dreahn is using the plastic in a demonstration for the Waller County Agricultural Agent, Burl Richardson. Richardson is out to show the truck garden farmers in Waller county the benefits of using the black plastic mulch.

Dreahn's demonstration is a good talking point.

"Actually," says County Agent Richardson, "the rows without the plastic will yield more than 60 pounds. But it will come later--and the early-season price is nearly always better." He figures the rows without plastic may yield 500 pounds at the most. All the rows are 40 feet long.

Richardson says benefits of the plastic are getting early yield (and the higher price) and a higher yield. Reason for the higher, early yield is the plastic conserves moisture and absorbs sunlight--allowing earlier planting and faster germination.

Also, there is less cultivation labor since weeds won't grow up through the plastic. Nutgrass is the exception. Don't use plastic on ground where there is nutgrass, says Richardson, unless the soil is sterilized first.

The plastic comes in rolls 3 to 4 feet wide. It is rolled down the row before planting, and each edge covered slightly with dirt to hold it down. Then, holes are punched and the seeds planted.

Dreahn says the plastic keeps his cantaloupes from rotting since they rest on the plastic instead of the ground. The plastic can also be used on watermelons and tomatoes and most other vegetables, he says.

Hi-Plains Happenings

Billy Graham of Billy Graham Foods, Inc., Friona, announced this week that the company had been asked to stock salad dressing in 64 Furr's Super Markets in a three state area.

Graham hailed the order as a giant stride in the short history of the Friona salad dressing factory. The order place the Friona-made salad dressing in every one of the Furr's stores in Texas and New Mexico, and the company's Arizona store, located in Tucson.

The long, hot summer may be hard on residents but it's good for cucumbers.

Cucumber picking is under way in the Olton area and full production in most of the fields is expected in the next week.

W. C. Gunter, representative of Brown-Miller Pickle Co., noted that "ideal conditions" for growing cucumbers have prevailed this year.

This he described as "mainly hot weather". Most residents would readily agree with this description of the weather which has been unusually hot and humid for this area.

"Top picking" for cucumbers, which are harvested twice a week for approximately six weeks, is usually the third or fourth picking.

A full three days of activities are being planned for Bovina's third annual Bull Town Days celebration this year. Dates of the 1966 event are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 18, 19, 20.

The celebration will be similar this year to those of the past two years. There are however, some changes in major attractions as well as some additions.

One of the additions is a professional wrestling card.

Morton will soon have a new U.S. Post Office. That announcement, released by local postmaster Murray Crone last week, came after seven months of thorough investigation by federal survey teams to determine the city's growth potential and a possible site for the new facility.

Crone said he learned of the expansion approval several months ago but delayed making it public to give the federal teams an opportunity to take options on property in the area that would meet the strict qualifications for the plant.

The new post office, like the present one, will be privately owned and financed and leased on a long-term basis by the post office department.

Littlefield stores, who continue to remain open on Thursday night, report shoppers continue to express their appreciation for the opportunity to shop late, one night a week.

As the program swings into the third month of its existence, merchants say more and more shoppers are becoming aware that they can shop with the entire family one night a week in Littlefield and can find just about anything they want at local stores.

Prevention Called 'Cure' To Accidents

COLLEGE STATION--Accidents are caused. Since they are caused, says the Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council, they can be prevented.

Almost 2300 persons died in non-transport accidents on United States farms in 1964.
 More than half the deaths were caused by accidents involving machinery or drownings, reported the TFRSC.

In most cases, the cause of accidents involves both man and his environment. Man, explains the council, sets the accident stage by things he does or does not do; at the same time, certain environmental conditions exist, then and there, that bring on the accident.

Human error, believes the Council, can be reduced through education and attention to accident prevention. Public acceptance of safety as a part of every activity in daily living could improve human performance and remove many environmental hazards often related to accidents, says the Council.

The farm and home accidents rate in Texas can be reduced, emphasizes the council, if rural families will make safety training a part of their daily operations. The big thing, explains the Council, is for every family to have constant awareness of the accident hazards that exist and to be mentally and physically alert at all times. Hazards which are removable should be eliminated and practices initiated to make the farm surroundings equal in safety to those found

 Because of the complications of modern farming, the Council believes, training in safety methods and procedures will pay good dividends on every farm.

Witnesses Go To Dallas Meet

Congregational activity of Muleshoe's Jehovah's Witnesses will be suspended this week as the entire group has been invited to serve as official delegates to the "God's Sons of Liberty" district assembly in Dallas, which began Wednesday and continues through Sunday. "All program sessions will originate at Dallas' giant, new Market Hall," Elmer B. Lowery said. "The Dallas convention is one of ten set for the United States this summer, and our delegation will help make up the more than 30,000 anticipated for the five-day event."

A series of Bible-based discourses, dramatizations, symposiums and panel discussions will complement the total program. All local meetings will be held at their regular scheduled times next week at the Kingdom Hall.
