Farmers Urged to Establish Out-Of-County Cotton

Farmers who want their full vote to count in the cotton referendum and promotion referendum were reminded today to establish their volume interest in full with local ASCS offices.

The Plains Committee for Cotton's Future explained that a cotton farmer who operates in different areas will gain by notifying his local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office of all of his production.

Through a change announced by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the grower has until the final day of the referendum, December 9, to establish his interest through the ASCS office.

The program can go into effect if approved by two-thirds of the cotton farmers voting. It can also go into effect if a simple majority vote "yes" providing these farmers account for two-thirds of the volume of those voting.

It is of utmost importance, the Committee stated, that farmers producing in different counties or states notify the ASCS of the total volume, combining all acreages - the total from all counties and states - in the one report.

This is not a requirement for voting. If it becomes necessary to compute the volume of cotton represented in the referendum, however, county ASCS offices will make this calculation on the basis of their records of 1966 planted acreages and protected lint yields per acre for each farm.

If a grower fails to establish See FARMERS on Page 5

Education Demension Explained

Elizabeth Watson, Curriculum Director for Muleshoe School was guest speaker at the Tuesday meeting of the Rotary Club.

Mrs. Watson pointed out some of the most interesting points presented at the 20th Annual Conference of the Texas Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development which she attended in mid-November in San Antonio.

The Conference, "Exploring New Dimensions in Education" included such valuable sub-topics as "Promise and Problems in Secondary Education.

This promises a way of thing, rather than memorizing in math, social studies, the core of the curriculum and not isolated facts of how and why, but questions of inquiry and research.

Audio-Lingual, Linguistics (System of Patterns) and Research.

Finding out for oneself; Inquiry and discovery and Lab experiences.

Intellectual challenge; Excellence resides in student not in subject.

Freedom of Inquiry, Spirit of adventure or risk, such as what would our country have been like if Spanish Armada had not suffered defeat in 1588?, and Controversial issues.

Looking at Values. Curriculum Organizing, Team Teaching - where teachers pool their talents; Ungraded School - Child progresses at own rate, Humanities - ASwing from emphasis on Science to emphasis on humanities; independent Learning Centers, Quiet Commons, Talking Commons and Computerized Age.

Problems; Loss of Humanizing Element, Few teachers are prepared for revolution in education. Not able to measure objectively - more subjectively, Excessive pressure - Evaluation reports, etc., Less thought to values, Little relevance of some materials, Lack of commitments and Pseudo-movements.

TRENDS "Hardware" with "Software", General Electric has consolidated with Time, S.R.A. with I. B. M., Zerox with Weekly Reader, Linton with American Book Co. and Sylvania with Readers Digest.

HUMAN SIDE OF TEACHING Knowledge is least important, Instant reaction-like a giant computer. Wait is fed into the computer is the important thing. (Must have a wide range of rich experiences), What you believe is important.

Becoming a teacher, Lawyers don't learn "to law", Teachers don't learn "to Teach", and "Kindergarten story".

Helping a person to discover the way to teach, Sensivity - how do things look to the other fellow?, Listen with third ear, Ideas about people - to believe they are; able, dependent and Friendly.

How people felt about themselves - Positive, rather than negative.

What are your purposes? Freeing rather than controlling or Self revealing rather than self-concealing.

WHAT IS SUCCESS? Doing your job the best you can. If it is worth doing, it is worth doing well.

BE THE BEST by Douglas Mallock

If you can't be the pine on the top of the hill Be a scrub in the valley-but be The best little scrub by the side of the hill, Be a bush if you can't be a tree, If you can't be a bush, be a bit of the grass, And some highway happier make.

High-sounding though they be; Nor by the gold that's put aside; Nor by his sanctity.

He's measured not by social rank, When character's the test; Nor by his earthly pomp or show,

Displaying wealth possessed, He's measured by his justice, right;

'BRING THE KIDDIES'

I live in the country I have a horse, a calf, some ducks, a baby brother, and a lot of other things they won't let you keep in the city.

But I watch TV and we have electric heat. Mother has an all electric kitchen and Daddy has a workshop. Mother also has an electric washer and dryer which keeps her from sending my baby brother back.

The electricity comes from the electric Cooperative and my Daddy says service is as good as you will find anywhere. So if you want a pony, or a goat, or a baby brother move out to the country with us. The electric cooperative has plenty of electricity. My Dad says they keep upgrading their system with bigger poles and heavier lines.

I don't know what their grade is now but I give them A+

Ike And LBJ

One fortunate relationship on the high-level political scene in the United States is that between President Lyndon Johnson and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower. The reason for this relationship is clear.

When Eisenhower was President, Johnson was Majority Leader of the Senate during the final years of Ike's service. The Majority Leader didn't play an all-out political game to embarrass the President. On issues of national defense he put the nation's interests—not a party's first.

No doubt President Eisenhower appreciated this attitude and this has been clearly evidenced by Eisenhower statements on Vietnam. At no time has he attacked the LBJ policy or undermined his efforts. He has said the President deserves bi-partisan support in such situations.

President Johnson's suggestion that Ike make a goodwill trip to Asia and other parts of the world is in keeping with this relationship. It is refreshing to see men of different parties, at such a level, put petty politics aside.

Israel's Attack

Israel, angered by Arab terrorists, recently launched a military foray against neighboring Jordan, sending a column of tanks and men three miles into Jordan. The force evacuated a number of families and destroyed their homes.

The action has been denounced by the United States, through U. N. Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, and by Russia, Great Britain and other countries. Even U.S. Newspapers inclined to favor Israel in the Mid-east, such as the New York Times, questioned the expedition.

It may be that the greatest service being performed by the U.N. today (and the only successful peace-keeping function) is its supervision of borders in the Middle East. U.N. authorities arranged a truce after the latest fighting, as they have done on other occasions.

No doubt Israel suffers provocations; by allowing these to provoke her into overt military actions which alienate world opinion and which inflame anew the Arab world and provide propaganda for various Arab nationalist organizations, Israel plays into her enemies' hands. Israel's hope for the future lies in resisting force with force, all the while remaining obviously the defender, not the aggressor.

Headlines Bemoan Strife, Poverty; History Will Record Opulence

Contemporary happenings have a way of changing appearance as they recede into the pages of history.

It is interesting to conjecture how historians will record the economic status of the U. S. during the 1960's. The headlines will tell of strife and poverty. Production indices, on the other hand, will indicate an abundance such as no nation had ever known.

For the sake of the record, it should be reported that although large numbers of people are classified as poor by government definition, very few Americans today are actually denied the minimum acceptable level of health, housing, food and education.

In 1960, according to M. A. Wright, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, only about seven per cent of American dwelling units were dilapidated. By 1964, more than 90 per cent of American households had television. Four out of every five households had telephones and at least one automobile.

Among families, officially classed as "poor," earning $3,000 or less, there is more material well-being than might be thought. For example, over 75 per cent own a television set, about half own both a television set and a telephone, three fourths own a washing machine, 20 per cent own a home freezer, 65 per cent have a dwelling unit that is not dilapidated, with running water and bathroom facilities for their own use, and approximately one in seven bought a car last year.

Admittedly, statistics are unreliable guides in measuring poverty. However, the foregoing should be of more than passing interest to historians.

December, 1966

And now comes the last month of the year. It seems only a short time ago that we were at the very beginning of 1966.

December is probably the most memory-filled month for most of us. For it contains Christmas, the wonderful Santa Claus memories, and the holiday season, with its reverence and emphasis on peace.

It is also a month full of historical anniversaries. The Monroe Doctrine was announced in 1823 on December 2nd.

Illinois joined the Union in December, 1818.

The 7th is the immortal anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, which occurred in 1941.

December 14th is remembered as the day on which Washington died, at Mount Vernon, Virginia, in 1799. The first successful flight in a heavier-than-air machine, by the Wright brothers, occurred at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina December 17th, 1903.

The Pilgrims landed December 22nd, 1620, and this year Winter begins on that same day.

And, finally, in looking over the days of December, on December 30th, 1855, James Gadsden arranged the Gadsden Purchase, a strip of land that is now New Mexico and Arizona, from Santa Anna for $10,000,000.

NEWS REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

The Party Struggles—Both Are Split—Nixon's Chance—Kennedy's Strategy—

Washington, D.C.—A major struggle is developing within each political party and will continue into the convention in 1968. The recent elections made this a certainty.

The struggle within the Republican Party is between moderates, led by Rockefeller, Romney, and others seeking to bar the party nomination to Richard Nixon or a more conservative candidate and the conservatives, led by Reagan, Goldwater, Tower, etc., who are out to prevent the traditional "eastern" progressive wing of the party from picking the 1968 nominee.

In the Democratic Party there are rumblings which reflect a lack of confidence in an LBJ victory in 1968. In certain daily newspapers ads are appearing in behalf of a Kennedy-Fulbright ticket in 1968—an appeal for funds to aid this cause.

The polls show the President's popularity down. What some Democrats fear most is a continuing war in Vietnam, perhaps an enlarged conflict; this with the declining popularity of the President and an attractive G.O.P. ticket might spell defeat for the Democratic ticket in 1968.

There is also a chance Senator Robert Kennedy—if the President's popularity slips far enough—will attempt to force himself on the 1968 ticket with the President. No one believes the party could refuse to nominate the President if he desires to run again but there are those who say he may not be able to turn back such a Kennedy bid if most Democrats feel he is the underdog.

There is also the slight chance that the President—like Harry Truman before him—will decide not to run again or refuse to run because of failing health. Because of these various possibilities activity in the Democratic Party is intense—with Robert Kennedy having scores of dedicated and able employees working night and day for the Kennedy cause.

The Republican intra-party fight will be more open and perhaps more interesting. Nixon is seeking to maintain his role as a moderate and his image as one with high-level experience in government—the senior statesman of the party (after Eisenhower). He is almost sure to have Barry Goldwater's support and is probably still the leading contender for the nomination as of this date.

Romney's chances are suspect; those of Reagan might be surprisingly good in two years if he makes a good Governor. Dark horses are Rhodes and Taft of Ohio and Percy of Illinois, among others. Should Reagan line up behind Nixon, as second man on a prospective G.O.P. ticket, or should Eisenhower endorse a Nixon slate, such a combination would be hard to stop at the Republican convention.

to withhold the vote from its women, will continue to do so, its male voters decided in an election Sunday. They rejected a constitutional amendment giving the country's women equal voting rights."

This was stirring around in the back of my mind when two nights later I ran across another article on Switzerland, which said it is one of the most civilized nations on earth. It hasn't had a war in hundreds of years, the people are prosperous, its banks are so good lots of people from other countries keep money there, it hardly knows what depression is, very little crime there, the government is efficient and democratic, it's not in debt, the schools are excellent, everybody seems happy and healthy.

As I said, I don't want to get into a squabble, but you reckon there could be any connection between Switzerland's splendid condition and the fact women there can't vote?

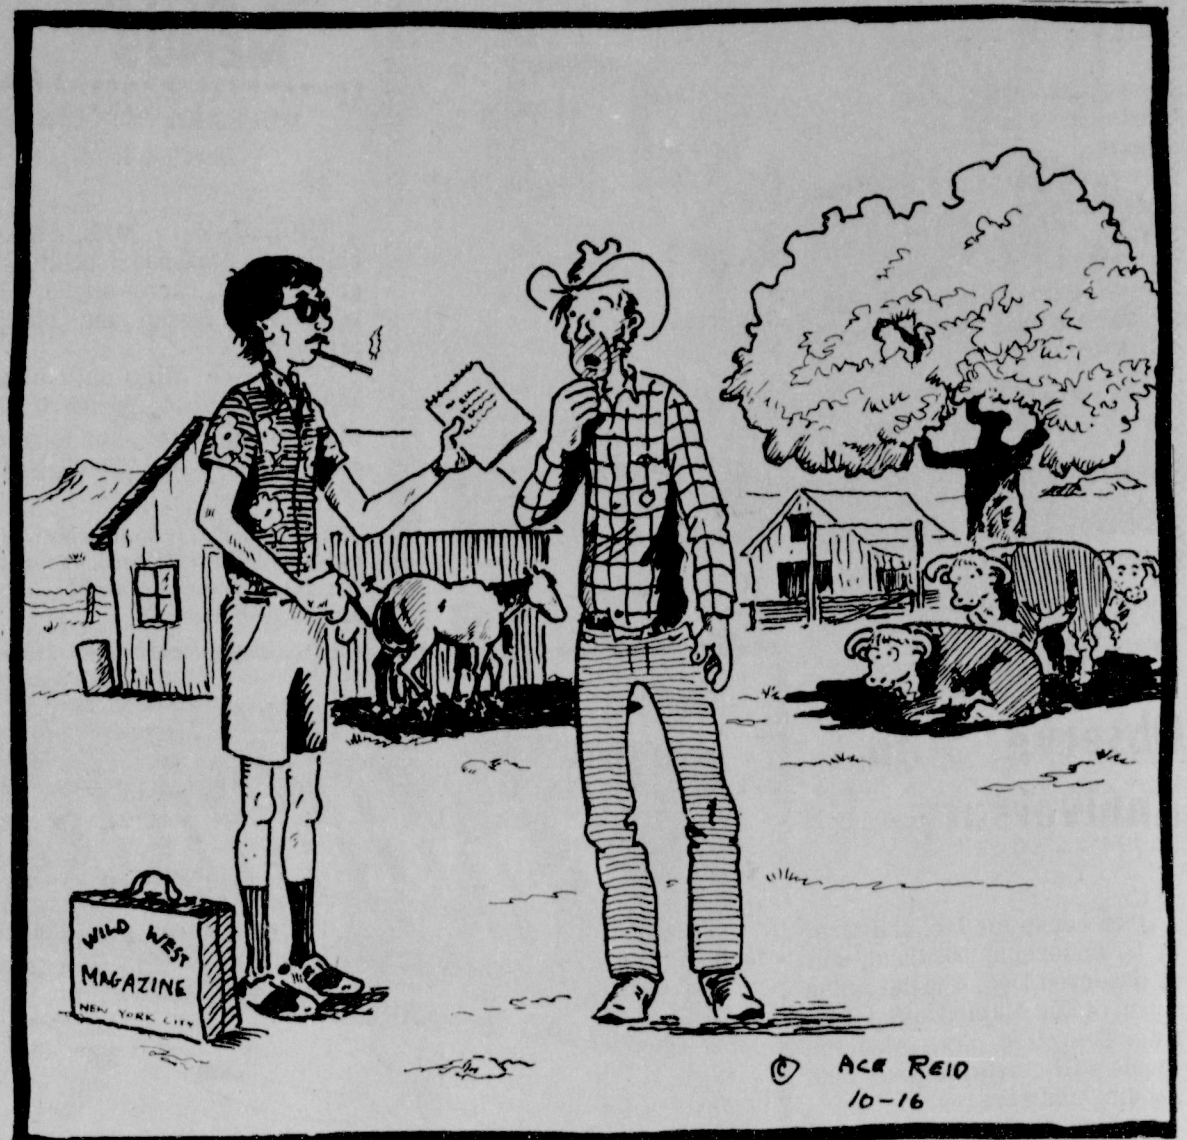

Understand, I'm not claiming there is. All I know is that when women were agitating for the vote in the United States, they kept arguing if we let them vote they'd straighten out the politicians, eliminate inefficiency and graft in government, restore peace to the world, wipe out crime, end most injustices, elect better school boards, better city officials, better governors, etc., but I'm not prepared to say it all came true.

It's something to think about, but I suggest most men would do well to think about it somewhere off by themselves.

Yours faithfully,
J. A.

Research and Promotion Referendum:

DO-OR-DIE DECISION FOR COTTON FARMERS

By W. R. POAGE (D-Tex.)

This speech by Congressman Poage was transcribed at Waco, October 28, 1966 for TV and radio broadcast over the Cotton Belt.

AS ONE who has been fighting the battles of the cotton farmers in the Congress for some 30 years, I could not fail to comment on the great significance of the referendum on cotton research and promotion which will be held in the cotton-growing states early in December.

I cannot remain silent because, as I see it, it is a do-or-die decision that cotton farmers will make in this referendum.

Of all our major American crops, cotton is in the deepest trouble. The carryover has reached almost 17 million bales, an all-time record high. And why have we accumulated this staggering total? Purely and simply because we have not been selling enough cotton.

Cotton's markets, at home and abroad, are being taken over by the man-made fibers. And the big guns they are now using to take our markets are research and promotion. Fifty years ago 90 per cent of our textiles were made of cotton. Today cotton supplies only 60 percent. If only half the American textiles which are presently being made of synthetics were made of cotton, we would have no surplus.

In this day and age, the producers of any product have to put up big money to improve it and to sell it through advertising and other techniques of promotion. Either they do this or they go out of business. In essence, this is the decision farmers must make in the referendum on cotton research and promotion.

Of course, the price of cotton is always a problem for the farmer. It has been a problem in the past and it could be a problem in the future in the competitive position of cotton, but it's not a problem for cotton right now—thanks to our direct payment program. I don't think that program goes far enough but it is helping to move cotton.

Since the mid-1950's, the Congress has enacted program after program aimed at helping farmers compete in price while maintaining their income. Across these years billions of dollars have been involved in price subsidies. These subsidies have helped American cotton farmers a great deal—especially in their fight against the competition from rayon and foreign-grown cotton. Without these subsidies, most cotton farmers would have been put out of business long ago.

I have long thought that we should make cotton completely competitive in the markets by letting it sell at world prices with the government making up the difference between the world price and a fair price, just as we do in the case of wool. I still believe this is the best approach, but as things now stand—under the emergency four-year program in effect—the government has gone just about as far as we can reasonably expect in making cotton competitive in price, in the domestic as well as the foreign market.

Even so, cotton is still suffering market losses, and farmers are continuing to lose acres. The reason is plain to even a casual observer of modern textile competition. While cotton is right now competing in price, it is not competing in research and promotion. All you have to do to see this is to pick up your daily newspaper and look at the ads. The synthetic producers are pouring over $200 million a year into efforts to improve and sell their fibers. By comparison, cotton producers are only putting up about $4 to $5 million.

That is why I was so pleased, early this year, when cotton producers came to the Congress with a self-help plan which would give farmers the opportunity to put up a dollar a bale for a research and promotion program that they would operate themselves.

I immediately joined in—and helped build support for—the successful effort to pass the Cotton Research and Promotion bill, which authorized the referendum.

I did this because the need for big money for cotton research and promotion was so desperate and so obvious.

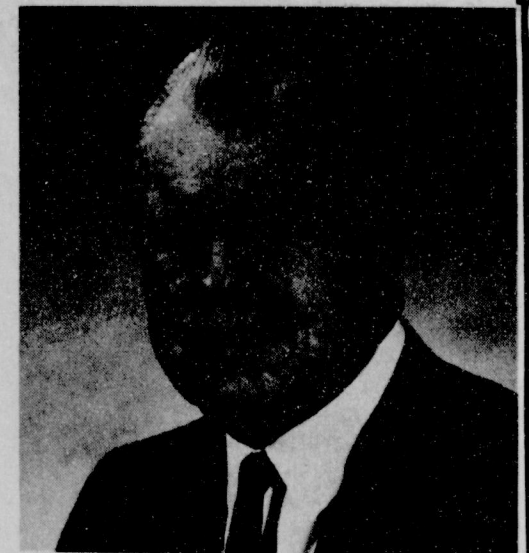

I did it because it was completely apparent that if anyone was going to put up this money, it would have to be the farmer.

I did it because it offered the farmer a clear-cut choice of whether he wanted to compete or get out of growing cotton.

I also supported the self-help approach because it would be such an enormous asset in getting public support and further constructive action from the Congress on the government cotton program.

With farmers a small, shrinking minority in this nation, it is getting harder and harder to get legislation in behalf of agriculture, and especially in behalf of cotton.

There are many in the Congress who are ready to throw up their hands on cotton. There are many who either believe that cotton can't be saved, or isn't worth saving if it is going to be a heavy, perpetual drain on the Treasury. This is what we have to contend with, and it is deadly serious. I believe that the attitude of Congress will be profoundly affected, for better or for worse, by the cotton farmers' decision in the referendum on research and promotion.

If cotton farmers show they want and intend to compete—by approving the one-dollar-a-bale assessment for research and promotion—I think the Congress will be inclined to go along with further substantial assistance after the present four-year program expires.

And never overlook the fact that the assistance cotton farmers are receiving this year is quite substantial. To protect the farmer's income, to meet price competition, and to reduce the surplus, the government is making domestic allotment payments and diversion payments. For a typical farmer who has an allotment of perhaps 30 acres, who has average yields, and who took the 35 percent diversion, the total payment on his production this year would come to about $72.50 a bale.

Think about that. Government help of about $72.50 a bale for the typical farmer. Surely many Northern Congressmen are asking: "Is it worth this much to the country to try and save cotton?"

In my judgment, Congress will feel that it is very much worthwhile—if it can see genuine promise that there will be programs capable of putting cotton on its feet and making it self-sufficient within some reasonable period of time.

If there is to be such an outlook, a greatly expanded program of research and promotion must be at the very heart of it.

If farmers agree in the referendum to build that kind of outlook by putting up the sum of one dollar a bale, I believe the Congress will continue to provide substantial assistance over a reasonable period of time.

On the other hand, if farmers refuse to put up the dollar a bale—if they show by their votes that they are ready to give up on cotton—I think the majority of the Congress will be ready to give up too.

With this much involved I feel that sound business requires that we appraise the referendum on cotton research and promotion by an overwhelming majority.

END OF DAY
by Dorothy B. Elstrom

Sometimes I've had the feeling
As I watched the setting sun,
That life was swiftly passing by
And too soon would be done.
As I stood there filled with reverence
At Nature's wondrous way:

I asked myself the question
What good have I done today?
To my less fortunate neighbor
Did I lend a helping hand;
Did I listen to his woes and Really try to understand?
Have I reached a rung that's higher
On the ladder toward my goal;
Have I taken out a moment for Communion with my soul?
Was I honest with my fellow man
And also with myself;
Did I admit when I was wrong,
Putting pride upon the shelf;
Have I been a friend to those I met
In the things I did and said;
And when tempted to speak sharply
Did I count to ten instead?
Did I take time out to laugh-to love-
To think to see- to pray?
These are the thoughts that cross my mind
As I watch the dying day.

Going onward, despite defeat, and fighting staunchly, but keeping sweet.
DON'T QUIT

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh
When care is pressing you down a bit
Rest, if you must-but don't you quit
Life is queer with its twists
and turns,
As everyone of us sometimes learn,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow-
You might succeed with another blow.
Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man,
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup,
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.
Success is failure turned inside out-
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt-
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit'
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit.

It's looking up at the stars above, and drinking deeply of life and love.

Sister of the bride, Mrs. Gene Gardner, was matron of honor.
She was attired in a gold vel-

Texas A & M Expands Work In Agricultural Marketing

COLLEGE STATION--Texas
A & M University has a three-phase agricultural marketing program underway to help producers and consumers stay abreast of selling and buying opportunities.

Dr. John G. McNeely, research leader in the A&M Agricultural Economics and Sociology Department, said the program involves 17 projects on improving the marketing of diary foods, meats, fruits and vegetables. About 12 economists are assigned to the program.

The first phase is focused on new ways to expand food and fiber consumption and greater efficiency in the marketing system.

Another goal is to find effective ways to expand local, out-of-state and foreign markets for Texas products. Mc-Neely said market competition between Texas and other production areas is a tough, fast moving business.

"Constant research leading to alternative marketing organizations, to new product development, improvements in packaging, new product processing and transportation, storage, and retailing methods is required if Texans are to keep ahead in inter-regional competition for top markets in the U. S. and the world," the economist emphasized.

He said aggressive action is being taken to secure and maintain a skilled staff in the economics of agricultural marketing so that research can be geared to growth of the Texas economy.

The third phase of the program is to develop new scientific and more accurate methods of analyzing markets.

The faster and more accurate the method, the more A&M market researchers, through the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, can help producers, marketing agents, and consumers, McNeely explained.

All of this, he said, is to keep Texas producers and consumers on top of existing marketing opportunities.

WHITE'S the home of greater values

Representative Praises Cotton Research Program

McAlester-The "self help" program of research and promotion proposed by cotton farmers drew high praise today from Rep. Carl Albert (D-Okla.).

He said the program, which would be financed by producers at the rate of a dollar a bale, is urgently needed to sell more cotton.

The cotton surplus is at an all-time high, he pointed out, and this has forced Oklahoma cotton growers to divert about 30 per cent of their allotted acres out of production this year.

Main reason for the surplus, he explained, is that the giant corporations producing synthetic fibers are taking cotton's markets by spending many millions of dollars on developing new products, improving them, and advertising them.

"The individual cotton farmer is much too small to fight back against the synthetic producers," he said, "but if the farmers join forces and each puts up a dollar a bale, they can save their markets and acres."

A means of doing this was provided by Congress earlier this year when the Cotton Research and Promotion Bill was enacted. As House majority leader, Rep. Albert had a key role in passage of the producer-sponsored legislation.

Under the law, cotton farmers will have the chance to approve the research and promotion program in a mail referendum to be held December 5-9. Farmers themselves would operate the program, and any grower who didn't want to participate could get his dollar a bale refunded.

Rep. Albert said that approval of the self-help program would be a great aid to him and other Cotton Belt legislators in winning a reasonable extension of the current four-year government program which is providing emergency assistance to farmers.

Under this program, he said, the price of cotton has been reduced to make it competitive with foreign growths and rayon.

the father of Joe and H. E. Sowder.

The cotton harvest is almost over in the community.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruel Kirby and boys and Mr. and Mrs. Freddy Parkman and children spent the week end in El Paso.

Mr. and Mrs. Rayford Masten attended the funeral of her grandmother, Mrs. Lillie Poer at Musket, Texas Sunday. Grandsons were Paulbearers. Mrs. Poer was 88 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Dee Clements, Muleshoe were dinner guests in the Paul Carlisle home on Tuesday night.

To protect the farmer's income and to cut the surplus, the Congress has provided a great many dollars per bale in the form of diversion and domestic allotment payments.

"We face a real problem in being able to get an extension of this kind of income support," he declared, "because of the growing concentration of our people in urban areas and the shrinking influence of agriculture."

"This will be especially true," he added, "if it seems that there is no prospect that cotton farmers will ever be able to stand on their own feet without massive assistance from the Treasury."

"Cotton farmers can offer proof-positive that they intend to become self-sufficient," he said, "by agreeing to put up a dollar a bale to reduce costs, improve cotton quality, and promote cotton products."

With this kind of program in operation, Rep. Albert believes the government will be inclined to along with further assistance to cotton farmers. "The Congress, and the public generally, will surely take a favorable view toward helping farmers who are willing to help themselves."

Skin Blooms Again with 2nd Debut

With this non-surgical face lift, lined, prematurely aged faces appear to have suddenly been reborn. Hard to find are even the most fearsome signs of on-coming crows feet and wrinkles that inconsiderately shouted your age just a few days ago. Smoother now is your skin to a fingertip touch with a fresh young feeling of moisture beneath, and roses tinting your cheeks. For 2nd Debut gives a true lift without the surgeon's scalpel—a lift that lasts a long time, an ageless look that's much more intriguing than common youthfulness. The lift comes from underneath as you apply 2nd Debut on the surface. 2nd Debut [with CEF 600] for the woman of no more than 40, 2nd Debut [with CEF 1200] for the impatient lady a few years older—at good department and drug stores.

LUBBOCK - "The rather drastic shake-up of the House Agriculture Committee coming out of the November 8 elections marks the beginning of a new ball game in the efforts of cotton producers to secure from the Department of Agriculture a more enlightened and more equitable administration of the current cotton program."

"We now have new hope that administrative decisions on the program will be more in the interest of cotton producers and will more nearly carry out the intent of Congress when the law was passed."

This is the opinion of Donald A. Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., which represents approximately 24,000 cotton producers in 23 Texas High Plains counties surrounding Lubbock.

Johnson was referring of course to the fact that when Congress next convenes, three republican and ten democratic members of the House Committee will be missing from the ranks. Among the missing democrats will be the committee's chairman for the past 16 years, Congressman Harold Cooley of North Carolina.

Rising to the chairmanship from his post as vice chairman of the committee will be 30-year House veteran W. R. (Bob) Poage, 11th District Representative from Waco. Congressman E. C. Gathings (D-Ark.) will take over the number two spot.

Poage has almost invariably in the past been an outspoken champion of cotton producers," Johnson said, "but as chairman of the House Agriculture Committee he should now be in a better position to command the attention of USDA officials in matters pertaining to the administration of our cotton program."

Department's action in "Freezing" it. "Second," Johnson continued, "we are going to try again to get a revision of the current skip-row regulations which penalize the farmer who wishes to use this perfectly legitimate production tool to increase efficiency and the quality of his product."

This is a ruling put into effect by the Department in 1965. It requires that a percentage of skipped rows in a field be counted as planted to cotton, thereby reducing the number of actual planted acres a producer can have within a given allotment.

This provision has proved doubly treacherous for 1967 in that it has been used to reduce projected yields in areas where skip-row has been a prevalent practice. Both diversion and price support payments are based on these projected yields, so when they are cut it has a direct effect on the farmer's income.

"And here there is no room at all for doubt as to Mr. Poage's feelings. He has repeatedly and vehemently expressed his objections to the Department's skip-row regulations. Last year in a meeting at Dallas, he scathingly denounced the Department on this point, so I feel sure we can count on his support," Johnson stated.

This latter denunciation of the Department's actions on skip-row planting was made by Poage while on the same speaker's platform with Undersecretary of Agriculture John A. Schmitz. Johnson went on to say that producers in virtually every section of the cotton belt are opposed to these skip-row regulations, and that efforts to get them changed have been strong and continuous.

"But there are now new and valid reasons why they should be changed," he said, "and with the help of the new House Agriculture Committee and others in Congress there is some hope we can be more successful than in the past."

Indications are that the cotton surplus at the end of this marketing year on August 1, 1967 will be down by 4.5 or 5 million bales, and there are definite signs that additional production of certain qualities will be needed in 1967 to meet market demands.

And Johnson says that "By removing the penalty for planting skip-row cotton, the Department can achieve both a quantity and a quality increase. Producers would benefit substantially from more cotton produced at higher market prices, and the only added cost to the government would come through the establishment of slightly higher projected yields, which wouldn't show up at all before 1968."

Projected yields for individual farms are set on the basis of actual production for the previous three years, taking other factors into consideration.

Nursing Homes To Get Returns

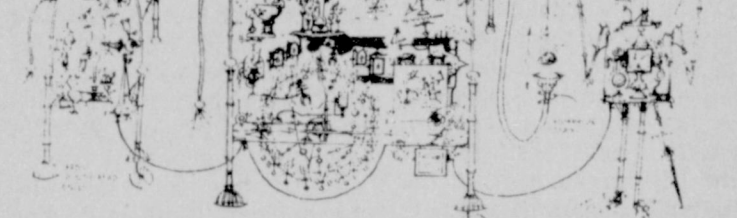

The Social Security Office in Lubbock, advised today that the nursing homes which qualify for Extended Care Facility status under the Medicare program, will receive a good return on equity capital. This was brought about as a result of a change in the Medicare law under the Miller Amendment, passed just before Congress adjourned. The Miller Amendment proposes to pay nursing home owners or administrators a reasonable return on their equity capital, as well as provide a reasonable return to the administrator, who is usually the owner of the nursing home. Meetings of the Texas Nursing Home Association, Austin, have taken place throughout Texas, with good results, it was reported. Nursing Homes which qualify for Medicare payments will begin to receive these payments January 1, 1967, according to Jim Latimer, the Social Security field representative for Muleshoe. Not all nursing homes will qualify, he stated however. Only nursing homes which provide first class service for their patients have applied generally, and only the better nursing homes are qualifying.

LIBRARY News

By Anne Camp, Librarian

Many, many, requests have been made for these new books: In Cold Blood by Truman Capote; The highly documented account of the slaying of the Kansas family; superbly written, tensely exciting, but not for the reader who is disturbed by gruesome detailed facts.

Valley of the Dolls, by Jacqueline Susann; this is the story of three gifted women, of their climb to fame and wealth, and of the soul-crushing price they pay for their precarious place on the mountain peak. Here are their worlds, behind the lights of Broadway, on the movie lots of Hollywood and Europe. Here, too is the horrible nightworld of alcohol, and pills, pep pills, sleep pills, pills to chase the world away, and pills to help one clutch at sanity—the lethal “dolls” of the glittering people. Also, not recommended for the reader who enjoys light fiction.

How to Avoid Porbate, by Norman Dacey, which like the two books above, has been on the best-seller lists for many weeks, is another book purchased because of the unusually high demand for it. It is rumored that there is a demand in parts of the country, that this book be banned. Not, because of any similarity to be controversial books above, but because it gives instructions, explicit, and easy to understand, how the average head of the family may make arrangements for his or her estate to be left to the heirs, intact without benefit (?) of probate court proceedings.

On the lighter side, and just received is: Bob Hop's, Vietnam Story, as is his usual custom, Bob tells of his Christmas visit to the GI's in Vietnam. In his inimitable humorous manner, the kind the GI's eat up—this is Hope's own story—one most will enjoy.

Just in time for the Christmas season, the library has received Norah Lofts, How Far to Bethlehem? The inspiring, well researched, and always wonderful account of the Christ's birth, told in the language of today.

Also, along with our large collection of party books, home, and club entertainment (plays, & Program suggestions) books, is a newbook—entitled, All about Christmas. I am usually wary of the “All About,” books, because commonsense tells me, no one person can write or know “All About” any subject, but this one is different, and very appealing. It has eighteen chapters just crammed filled with a wealth of material about our most important holiday. And each of the chapters is named for a Christmas carol. “It Came Upon the Midnight Clear” describes the origin of the holiday, how the date was determined, and how it has been celebrated through the years. “We Three Kings” tells the story of the Wise Men. Another chapter shows the evolution of St. Nicholas into our Santa Claus. Others deal with the origin of the Christmas tree, the use of candles, lights, bells and stars.

Another inspirational book just received is Ezra Keats, God is in the Mountain. Keats, a notable illustrator, and a Caldecott winner for illustrations in a childrens book, does excellent line drawings for each of the thoughts, sketches, and verse collected from religions of the world. Each brief saying, or sketch also notes from which religion it was taken. Invaluable in its witness to the universality of religious thought, this book reveals at the same time the many forms taken by God in the beliefs of diverse peoples. Excerpt: (Sikhism) “God is in the water,
