

Somali Guerrillas Attempt To Revive Ogaden War

EDITOR'S NOTE: Since the Somali army several months ago retreated from the Ogaden desert in the face of massive Ethiopian and Cuban forces, a group of Somali guerrillas has been trying to revive the conflict, often successfully. Special UPI correspondent William Campbell traveled to northern Somalia to interview the guerrillas and talk with some of the refugees of the Ogaden conflict.

By WILLIAM CAMPBELL, HARGEISA, Somalia (UPI) — The flames of war are again being fanned on the Horn of Africa. A deadly hit-and-run bush conflict between Somali insurgents and Ethiopian government troops is threatening to engulf the entire region and again involve the superpowers.

"The Ogaden war has just begun," a sand-grimed guerrilla confidently predicted after riding into this northern administrative capital from the nearby battlefield. "We've only now started to fight." Four months ago, Ethiopian troops, backed by up to 17,000 Cuban soldiers, blitzed the Somali army in the Ogaden and threw it back across the border, apparently ending the conflict for the disputed region.

But up to 6,000 local guerrillas, stiffened by Somali regular troops, confounded most military analysts by rekindling the deadly bush conflict and expanding operations in recent weeks deep into the heart of a territory the size of Britain. The Ethiopians initially ignored the guerrilla threat but recently acknowledged insurgents had again attacked and severed the vital Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad. The Ethiopians responded by bombing Somali villages in this northern region.

But he admitted, "We are certainly not strong enough yet to even think about retaking Jijiga or Gode. We are still learning from our mistakes, but we are learning very fast." The guerrilla war simmered for years until the Somali army last summer invaded the region in full strength and captured most of it — only to have the Soviet- and Cuban-backed Ethiopians hit back in a stunning blitzkrieg that shocked even the insurgents. The devastation lingers on in their minds.

The Somali government continues to give the insurgents moral and political support but recently apparently has been cutting back on military supplies to the rebels. The United States and Western nations have demanded that as a precondition to Mogadishu receiving weapons from them to rebuild its own shattered armed forces, Somalia must publicly renounce its claims to the Ogaden and stop supplying the guerrillas.

welcomed the Somalis as liberators. But thousands were killed in the conventional fighting and tens of thousands of others were forced to flee into neighboring Somalia as refugees. Some have returned to their former homes and grazing areas. But they are more wary of showing their support for the insurgents now.

"Well, thank goodness. Now, maybe Alfred will go to bed." — THEO LANDON, wife of Alf Landon, after their daughter, Nancy Landon Kassebaum, won the Kansas Republican primary election for the U.S. Senate.

Pryor Pleads 'No Contest'

VAN NUYS, Calif. (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor has pleaded no contest to a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon — the weapon being his car which he rammed into a second car driven by two friends of his wife, Deborah.

PRYOR

Pryor, free on $5,000 bail, will be sentenced on the misdemeanor charge in Superior Court on Sept. 14. He originally was also charged with shooting several times at the women, who had been visiting at his home last New Year's Day, but the charge of assault with a deadly weapon was dropped for lack of evidence.

The 36-year-old comedian and his wife had an argument which precipitated the car-ramming incident, according to the complaint of Edna Solomon and Beverly Clayborn, Mrs. Pryor's friends.

Neither woman was injured.

Ky Fights Welfare Cuts

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Nguyen Cao Ky former premier of South Vietnam and now manager of a Norfolk liquor store, led a delegation of refugees into an Orange County Board of Supervisors meeting to lobby against welfare cuts.

KY

Ky urged the board to increase funding for health care and education of refugees. The former premier, who lives in nearby Huntington Beach, said children and senior citizens who are refugees need the most help.

"We come to a system that's completely different. We come to this country with a big zero and we really have to do our best to start a new life," Ky said.

Nudists Anger Fred MacMurray

HEALDSBURG, Calif. (AP) — Usually mild-mannered actor Fred MacMurray has his dander up.

MACMURRAY

He and hundreds of other residents of this resort area 70 miles north of San Francisco are up in arms over nude bathing on the banks of the Russian River. Some residents complain the nudists are even making love in public.

MacMurray owns a 2,600-acre cattle ranch that has turned into one of the nudists' favorite hangouts. Although he rarely comes here himself, his agent, C.L. VanSickle, said Tuesday, "Fred doesn't like trespassers and trespassing has risen to epidemic proportions this year."

"It's like Sodom and Gomorrah in Sonoma County," said

Alice Hinton, who has gathered 1,000 signatures on a petition calling for a ban on all nude bathing in the area. "We're ready to drop a bomb in the middle of all those nude bodies if we have to," she said.

The County Board of Supervisors drew up various resolutions on Tuesday to limit nude bathing. Public hearings will be held before the board meets again next week to vote on the resolutions.

'Tokyo Rose' Not Going To Japan

CHICAGO (AP) — Iva Toguri D'Aquino, World War II's "Tokyo Rose," will not be making her first visit to Japan in 29 years next month, says a nephew.

MRS. D'AQUINO

Mrs. D'Aquino was unavailable for comment, but her nephew, David Toguri, said Tuesday that his aunt feels such a trip would be too expensive.

Reports of a visit surfaced after Mrs. D'Aquino's friend in Japan, writer Fuyuko Kamisaka, said Mrs. D'Aquino planned a reunion with her Portuguese-born husband, who still lives in Yokohama.

Mrs. D'Aquino, 61, was born in the United States but was sent to Japan by her family to care for a sick aunt in 1941. She was stranded there when the war began and took a job with Radio Tokyo to support herself and her husband.

In 1949 she was convicted of making propaganda broadcasts for the Japanese to U.S. troops during the war. She served 6½ years in prison. Gerald Ford issued a presidential pardon to Mrs. D'Aquino and restored her citizenship just before he left office in 1977.

Cheese On Their Faces

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — Several Nez Perce County deputies apparently were moonstruck the other morning when they turned in a call that a fire-like glow filled the sky about 13 miles east of Lewiston, near Lapwai.

Deputies said the glow came from areas that previously had burned. They reported that the closer they got, the bigger the glow.

After a few minutes of silence, a radio dispatcher asked the deputies more about the fire. It was a false alarm, the deputies radioed back. They had seen the moon on the horizon.

Playboy Report Alleges CIA Anti-Onassis Plot

CHICAGO (AP) — Then-Vice President Richard M. Nixon, now-Chief Justice Warren Burger and one-time Howard Hughes aide Robert A. Maheu were part of a 1954 CIA plot to ruin the late Aristotle Onassis, according to the September issue of Playboy magazine.

An article by Jim Houghan excerpted from his forthcoming book, "Spooks," said the plot against Onassis came after the Greek shipping tycoon received permission from the late King Ibn Saud to carry Saudi Arabian oil in his ships. Today's Washington Post quotes Maheu as confirming the basic elements of the article in a phone interview from Las Vegas, Nev. But he denied Houghan's allegation that his actions were part of an international conspiracy, adding, "that's a crock."

Burger, who worked for the Justice Department at the time of the alleged plot, denied through a spokesman that he received intelligence reports on the anti-Onassis campaign.

Nixon could not be reached for comment and the CIA refused comment. "I wouldn't take the assignment (from Onassis' in-law and rival Stavros Niarchos) until I cleared it with the outfit," Maheu was quoted as saying. The "outfit," he said, was the Central Intelligence Agency, which at the time paid him a $500 monthly retainer.

He said he reported his anti-Onassis activities regularly to the CIA. The CIA also helped his operatives in Rome, where derogatory stories about Onassis were given to a newspaper, he said.

Maheu also acknowledged briefing Nixon.

Houghan contends that the Jidda Agreement between King Saud and Onassis broke the monopoly control of Saudi oil shipment by the Arabian-American Oil Co., angering many American oil company executives as well as Niarchos. Quoting extensively from financial journalist John Gerrity, who said he was in on the plot, Houghan says Niarchos, the CIA, the FBI and various government officials began a calculated "dirty tricks" campaign against Onassis.

Houghan said the campaign involved wiretapping Onassis' New York headquarters, shadowing his top employees and spreading anti-Onassis smears throughout the world press by means of government leaks and bribed journalists. Houghan said the campaign even involved the bombing and strafing of one of Onassis' whaling ships by a Peruvian fighter plane.

In the article, Houghan quotes Gerrity as saying he and Maheu, whom Gerrity believed was a CIA agent, were recruited for the campaign at a meeting in Nixon's office early in 1954, when Nixon was vice president.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A piece of rock 'n' roll and Memphis music history — the former Sun Record Co. studio — is being restored for the first anniversary of Elvis Presley's death.

The studio is where the singer, then employed as a truck driver, cut his first records under producer Sam Phillips in the mid-1950s.

"We want to restore it as much as possible to the way it used to be when Elvis recorded there," Ed Moore, manager of Gray Lines Sight Seeing Tours Inc., said Tuesday.

USSR Silent About Reporters

MOSCOW (AP) Soviet authorities took no action against two U.S. correspondents whose newspapers defied today's deadline to publish court-ordered retractions of articles riddled with slanders.

"I haven't heard a thing," said Craig R. Whitney of The New York Times who was found guilty July 18 along with Harold D. Piper of The Baltimore Sun. Piper is vacationing in the United States until Aug. 14.

Meanwhile, the Soviets twice postponed today's scheduled interrogation of businessman Francis J. Crawford, another American caught in the squeeze of increasing East-West tensions.

Crawford, a 38-year-old International Harvester representative in Moscow, has been accused of violating Soviet currency laws, a charge he has repeatedly denied.

Whitney, who recently returned from vacation, said he hoped Soviet authorities would drop the slander case.

"I'd like them to quash the whole thing right here. That would be the most favorable thing from my point of view, and I think it would be reasonable," Whitney said.

Whitney and Piper were convicted of "crudely slandering" Soviet television in articles they wrote quoting relatives of Georgian dissident Zviad Gamsakhurdia casting doubt on the authenticity of his televised confession.

Gamsakhurdia testified that the confession was authentic and that the reporters' stories were incorrect.

Both Whitney and Piper refused to take part in the court proceedings, arguing that the case was "tantamount to censorship."

Whitney said his newspaper decided not to print the retraction "with my full support" but noted that his editors have yet to make a decision on whether to pay court costs, as ordered July 18.

The Baltimore Sun has said it will pay its share of the $3,342 legal fees, due on Sunday.

Asked if he thought the slander charges would affect his credibility as a journalist reporting in the Soviet Union, Whitney said:

"I don't think the Soviet authorities have a different attitude towards me than toward any of the rest of my colleagues really. We all work under the same conditions here and I don't see how this case changes that."

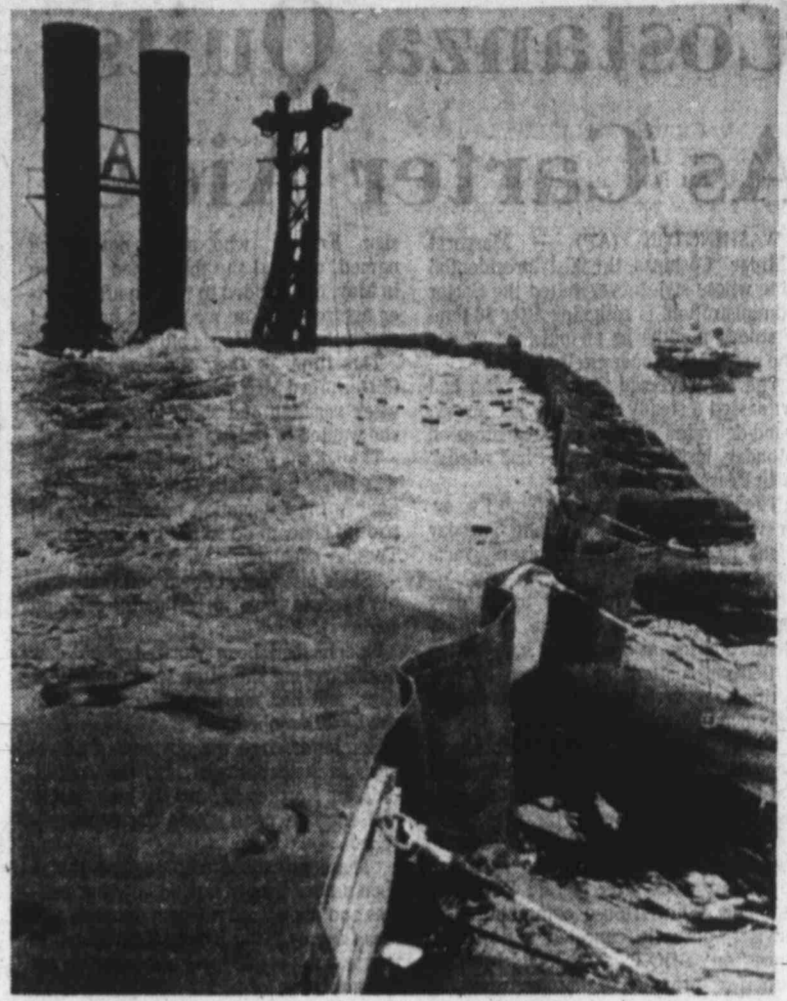

There has been speculation that Soviet authorities might decide to lift the accreditation of the two correspondents, which would prevent them from continuing their reporting duties here. But Whitney said he has not contacted the Soviet Foreign Ministry about this.

"I will not make any such inquiries because I have no reason to think my accreditation is at issue in this case," he declared.

Crawford appeared at Moscow's Lefortovo Prison for a second round of questioning but the interrogation was postponed twice by Soviet authorities who said they "weren't prepared." The officials reserved the right to call him back to the prison on the eastern edge of Moscow at a later date.

Crawford was questioned for five hours Monday and told to return today.

"I don't know what they have in mind," said Crawford, who was accompanied to the yellow stone prison by U.S. Consular official Robert Pringle and John Chellman, International Harvester's chief Moscow representative.

Soviets Top U.S. Space Record

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union, capping a series of spectacular space flights in the past 10 months, today broke a cherished United States record as the most experienced nation in space.

As Soyuz 29 cosmonauts Vladimir Kovalenko and Alexander Ivanchenkov circle Earth in the Salyut 6 space lab, the Soviets broke the American record of a total of 937 man-days spent in space at midnight Tuesday.

The United States had consistently held and expanded the time-in-orbit record since 1965, when the successful Apollo-Skylab program got rolling.

Karpov Ends Game After Surprise Move

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Challenger Viktor Korchnoi's unofficial Israeli second found a sensational variation that brought the seventh game of the world chess championship to a surprise draw today instead of an expected victory for Soviet champion Anatoly Karpov.

It was the seventh straight draw of the match, in which one of the players must score six wins to get the world championship and $350,000. Experts figure the match, now in its third week and at three games a week, will last two or three months.

The 27-year-old Soviet champion offered a draw after Korchnoi's sealed 42nd move — an expected queen to rook check — was opened.

It was Yasha Murey, who emigrated to Israel from the Soviet Union in 1976 and who was celebrating his 38th birthday, who came up with the series of moves that turned expected disaster for Korchnoi into an acceptable draw.

Members of the Karpov delegation said nothing after the game. Experts said it was impossible to know whether the Russians knew of Murey's discovery but that it was obvious they had found the move themselves, assumed Korchnoi's analysts had found it and didn't want to risk playing out the game.

Korchnoi second Raymond Keene of England said, "Either they found it, or they're scared of playing a double-edged position" in which either side could win.

"This was Yasha's birthday present for Viktor, and it was found late last night," said Michael Stean of England, one of Korchnoi's official seconds.

"In a position which most onlooking grand masters considered to be helpless for white, Yasha found a most unlikely looking king move which would have given Korchnoi surprising defensive possibilities."

"Karpov clearly respected Yasha's analytical abilities on his own birthday and offered a draw, rather than investigate the ramifications of Yasha's discovery."

Stean said the key move, which never was played, was king to knight 1.

Korchnoi later told reporters that when the champion arrived about eight minutes late, he expected that Karpov would "immediately offer a draw."

The challenger added that Karpov might have had a better position but there was "no coordination of his pawns." He conceded that when he made his 32nd move Tuesday night, a pawn to queen knight 4, his play became "crucial."

Experts said then he had thrown away his third chance for a win.

The unexpected draw overshadowed the latest flap over a Russian parapsychologist who Korchnoi believes is trying to hypnotize him and muddle his thinking. The parapsychologist, who the Soviets say is not a member of their official delegation, had been sitting in the first or second row at every game, staring intently at the challenger.

After an informal protest by the Korchnoi camp, match organizer Florencio Campomanes decided that starting with Thursday's eighth game the parapsychologist would be banned from main floor seats in the convention center. On Wednesday, Campomanes decided to remove all but all but four rows reserved for VIPs will be removed from the main floor of the Baguio convention center.

For today's play-out of the adjournment, the parapsychologist, identified as Vladimir Zouchar, sat in the front row facing Korchnoi.

Petra Leeperwick, head of Korchnoi's delegation, said Zouchar's presence "disturbed Viktor so much during last night's game that whenever he made a move, he left the stage to get away from him."

Stean added: "If you understand how badly Viktor played in the closing stages of yesterday's game, it's clear something upset him."

Parapsychology is the branch of psychology that investigates psychic phenomena such as telepathy and extrasensory perception.

Korchnoi blundered not only on the 32nd move but also on the 35th when, under terrible time pressure he sent his queen to bishop 2. Before the 32nd move, the experts said Korchnoi had played an excellent game and had winning possibilities.

Karpov and Korchnoi last played in 1974 when the young Russian won by a single game. That victory gave Karpov the world title the following year, when American champion Bobby Fischer defaulted.

But an American hiatus, while waiting for development of the next generation spacecraft, the Enterprise space shuttle, has allowed an increasingly active and ambitious Soviet space program to catch up.

Earlier this year a pair of Soviet cosmonauts, Georgi Grechko and Yuri Romanenko, broke the U.S. manned spaceflight endurance record of 84 days and went on to spend 96 days in orbit.

The American manned spaceflight program will remain at a complete standstill until the first flight of the revolutionary reusable Enterprise space shuttle, scheduled for late 1979.

The shuttle technologically far outstrips anything Moscow has on the drawing board — but by the time it goes into space, the Soviet Union will have milked every drop of potential out of its current space capsules and space labs.

A series of spectacular firsts chalked up in the 10 months since the Salyut 6 space lab was launched has moved the Soviets ever closer to the dream of a permanently manned orbiting space lab.

Since the Sept. 29 launch of the Salyut, 10 Soviet cosmonauts have lived and worked aboard the lab.

The Soviets have carried out two spacewalks, the first double-docking in space history, the first docking of an unmanned cargo capsule, the first refueling of a space lab, the longest manned orbital mission and the first spaceflights by a non-Russian and non-American.

Western scientific experts have watched with interest, and some envy, Soviet experiments to smelt and combine dissimilar metals and metallic compounds in the weightlessness of space and other experiments aimed at growing semiconductor crystals in orbit.

"After all, you could create in space a perfect hollandaise sauce which would never separate," one Western expert said. "Why not a similarly perfect metal or crystal?"

Californian Works To Bring Hope Back To Watts

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The man walked out from between two houses with a coil of wire, four feet in diameter, slung over his left shoulder and, at his heels, a waist-high girl carrying something yellow in her hands.

With the businesslike solemnity worn by looters — no looking to right or left, no more haste or less dignity than a supermarket shopper, no dog trot of a petty thief's shame — the man and girl crossed the street in front of Ted Watkins' automobile and strolled over an empty lot and into a shed.

Watkins had been showing white visitors the new face of black Watts, the Los Angeles ghetto that burned and looted itself for five nights 13 Augusts ago, at a cost of 34 to 37 persons killed, 875 injured and 3,345 arrested amid damage up to $200 million.

The sight of the man with the wire coil stilled Watkins' laughter, his rolling recital of progress. Watkins, his mood suddenly as black as his face, now spoke low and with nononsense judgment, a saint seeing a sinner.

"What that guy's doing is stealing copper wire. Looks like his daughter picked up something, too."

Watkins groaned. Theft is bad. What is worse, this was Watts stealing from Watts.

Watkins' Watts Labor Community Action Committee (WLCAC) had just moved into the area near the houses from which the copper coil was plucked.

Ted Watkins took the theft personally. Public modesty is not overvalued in a community whose population, 75 percent black, is building pride. Certainly, there are low bows by the thousands of members of WLCAC to the good wishes and purses of the U.S. and California governments and the unions and the Rockefeller and Ford Foundations.

But, in the 50 square miles of Watts — a spread of low rise neighborhoods south of Hollywood and not far north of the poverty line, WLCAC is Watts and Watts is Ted Watkins.

In 13 years Watkins has, in his estimate, managed to spend some $30 million through WLCAC. The spending came after the Watts rioting, which began when black crowds attacked police.

The money, granted and loaned by the governments, the unions and the foundations, has gone into job training, home-building, retirement centers, service stations, youth groups, groceries and farm production. "But the big product is hope," Watkins said.

"This all started, like the rioting, because progress had passed Watts by. Sure, through unions, some of us had won health, safety and income benefits.

"But, during the riots, what did it mean? It meant I was sitting there in my yard and watching, down the block, fellows making gasoline bombs under palm trees."

It was now noon. The sun over Watts made it 98 degrees. Smog fuzzed the horizon. Watkins' car crossed 103rd Street, so blazing during the 1965 rioting that it was called "Charcoal Alley."

The blash of seeing the coil theft was past. Watkins' right arm pointed to a neighborhood of houses on steel beams. The houses are not your basic ghetto variety.

They are stucco and have bay windows and, that California mark of middle class wealth, red-tiled roofs.

"They were bulldozing these $150,000 houses before I came along," Watkins said. They had been located in land bought up by the state for a freeway. The highway has yet to be built; 17 miles of governmental inaction," Watkins said.

Using federal and union money, Watkins' WLCAC got bank loans and began moving the houses to Watts, on steel beams with wheels. More houses came from middle-class areas too near airport runway noises and left by richer southern Californians.

Watkins hopped from the car and marched over carpenters' ladders and into one of the transplanted houses.

He raised his arms and smiled and pointed out the type of houses moving into Watts. Working fireplace. A kitchen as big as a New York apartment. Curved archways between rooms. Wrought iron inside staircases. Parquet floors.

"This will rent for $225 a month and at the end of 20 years it will belong to the renter," he said.

A Watts carpenter, hired by WLCAC, to help resettle the houses, nodded at Watkins and said he himself might buy it.

Watkins said sure. Or, he said, if any of its dozens of sister transplants could go to, well, there is Nellie Jefferson working as a plasterer and she might just buy it.

"Right, chief," she said, spreading more plaster.

Other workers, trained and employed by WLCAC, addressed Watkins as "boss" or "Ted" or "T.W." He grinned.

Back in his car, Watkins dove through quiet streets. This was not broken bottle ghetto. The lawns were mowed. The same real estate agency (Celtury) whose signs are stuck on the manicured lawns of Beverly Hills has put up its "For Sale"

South African Riots Top $9.7 Million

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Rioting in the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg in 1976 cost more than $9.7 million, the government claims in a 100-page indictment of 11 former members of the now banned Soweto Students Representative Council.

The 11 face possible sentences of life imprisonment or death on a charge of sedition and a second charge under the Terrorism Act. They will appear in court Sept. 18. The indictment, published in local newspapers Monday, alleges the West Rand Administration board, which administers Soweto, suffered property losses of $8 million and the Putco Bus Co., which operates in Soweto lost about $1.7 million.

and "Sold" markers in Watts.

And, in the middle, rises the $90 million Martin Luther King Hospital. Watkins is not all praise.

"The hospital has the finest facilities. But the quality of its care? Well, it needs more trained personnel."

Watkins, administrator of WLCAC, is faultfinder as well as cheerleader. "Yes, Watts is improving. But, still, this is a community of 500,000 with a third of the people still living in public housing and 50 percent on welfare."

His car passed on of Watts' many churches. This one has 99 door-sized panes of glass on a front wall that resembles a three-story ashtray. Is the church helpful in rebuilding Watts?

"The church is shut six days a week. Open on Sundays. Open one day in seven," Watkins said.

A grocery store has evidence of Watts not yet having a happy ending. By each door, near the cash registers, is a sign quoting television policeman Baretta:

"If you commit a crime with a gun, you go to prison. If you can't do the time, don't do the crime."

The store has a customer counting out U.S. government food stamps of one-cent denomination.

Watkins, back at his office, up a narrow flight of stairs on a corner of a main street where the retail world of Los Angeles, its shops crammed with the tourists into such streets as Hollywood, Melrose, Sunset and Wilshire to the north, has meekly moved a service station, a hamburger stand and a few other outlets. After all, the rioting of yesteryear is alive enough for police in cruisers to slow down and examine that Watts oddity, a white motorist.

Watkins' office has aides with clipboards stuffed with problems (it is all very nice for WLCAC to help sponsor bus trips for the elderly but, says Watkins, you better check on the insurance just in case), ringing telephones ("Oh, you'd like to bid for the job," says Watkins, "and just how many Watts residents would you hire to do the work?") and a cardboard box of first aid kits someone brought in and architects' drawings and pictures of houses being moved in.

"You want to recycle that house?" an aide asks.

"I want to recycle Watts," Watkins said.

He laughs. "I am such a genius." He laughs again.

"This genius came out of Mississippi. I came out at midnight. From Vicksburg. I was a boy of 14. I had punched a white boy who had shoved me off a sidewalk. I left at midnight when they told me I'd be lynched if I was still there the next morning."

"Here I worked in the auto union until WLCAC came along."

He rubbed a hand over his nearly shaven skull.

"There's so much to do. And never enough time. You do what you can with what you've got. And I think Watts, since the riots, has done one thing. We're still poor but Watts has hope.

"All of which means I don't think there's much of a chance of the riots happening again."

Watkins looked through a window beside his desk. "See those trees? WLCAC has planted 22,000 trees in Watts. A tree grows in Brooklyn; 22,000 grow in Watts."

He laughed. "I'm a one-man Watts riot," he said. "Sure, T.W.," an aide said. "Now about the new apartment house..."

Luxury Items From U.S. Find Market In Asia

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Exporting tea from the United States to Japan seems at first a rather unrewarding proposition; the Japanese are big tea drinkers, but they also are among the world's biggest tea producers.

Nevertheless, Boston Tea Co., of Secaucus, N.J., has shipped about 2,000 cases of its fancy teas to Japan in recent months by air and the company's founder, Jerry Jacobs, says he believes one or two other blenders of fancy black or fermented teas in the United States also have been able to sell on the Japanese market.

Like the Chinese, the Japanese blend and drink unfermented or green tea traditionally. Boston Tea Co., so named because it used to be in Boston, blends such specialties as creme de menthe tea, Bing cherry, cinnamon and chocolate tea and Darjeeling tea.

It also makes a decaffeinated tea, and it considers the market prospect for that in Japan very good. Caffein-free tea, like decaffeinated coffee, is often recommended for persons with heart conditions or other health problems.

"Exporting tea to Japan may be like carrying coals to Newcastle, but that's not the real significance of the business," says Alex Milovic of Flying Tigers, the air express and freight line that handles Boston Tea's shipments. "The real story is that Japan, Hong Kong and some other Asian areas are excellent markets for many kinds of American luxury merchandise."

Jacobs said the Japanese and residents of Hong Kong are so eager to buy western delicacies that they cheerfully pay the equivalent of $5 for a canister of fancy tea bags blended in America that would sell in a New York shop for perhaps $1.75. Air express and other costs create the big markup.

Jacobs said freshness is important in marketing tea and quick air delivery counts.

The teas, of course, come originally from Asia mainly, although some is imported from Africa and even Argentina, which has been developing tea plantations. Tea will grow in many parts of the world. It even was grown on a tiny scale in the southern part of the United States before the Civil War but even with slave labor, the cultivation and harvesting was too labor intensive and costly in America to compete.

The Russians recently reported they have developed a tea picking machine to harvest tea in the Soviet republic of Georgia, but this announcement has aroused much skepticism among the world's tea merchants.

"An air freight line has to treat tea the way other airlines treat first class passengers," said Richard Haberly, a Flying Tigers vice president.

"This will be true, in all probability, in the marketing of other American luxury merchandise being shipped to markets like Japan and Hong Kong. We have to be prepared to give the shipper an awful lot of individual attention, particularly with customs and paperwork. But most importantly, we must be aware that the cost of using air freight must be justified by adding economic value to the product being shipped and that means giving careful attention to details."

Witness Shuns Mask At Congressional Drug Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — He looked more like a refugee from the Ku Klux Klan than a formerly successful drug smuggler who was currently spilling the beans to a congressional hearing.

"Hooded to protect his identity" had read the "news assignment tip" issued by Rep. Mario Biaggi's office. And the remnants of a white pillowcase were successfully hiding the witness' face — but reporters already had been informed in an official witness list that the man in the white mask was Robert Guy Ebey.

He was described in the assignment tip as a "convicted drug smuggler" whose current address was "Richmond City Jail, Richmond, Va."

He began serving a 30-year term last year after being convicted on charges of possessing marijuana with intent to distribute.

The hood didn't last long. A couple of questions as the television cameras rolled and then the masked witness asked, "May I take this mask off?"

The setting was a recent meeting of the House Merchant Marine subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation, a panel headed by Biaggi, a New York Democrat.

The purpose, according to Biaggi, was to elicit testimony on a bill, sponsored by him and by Rep. David Treen, R-La., that would give the Coast Guard new powers to search some vessels believed to be carrying narcotics.

But the first witness, former Customs Service official Allen Seeley, told the committee he was "totally unaware of what your hearing is concerned with."

And a second witness, a former narcotics undercover agent armed with a formidable mound of information told to him by others, had little to which he could personally attest — so little that Rep. Don Bonker, D-Wash., termed his most sensational information "second and third-hand hearsay."

As for Ebey, he had plenty of first-hand knowledge of how drug smugglers work — even if most of his hundred or so missions involved not marijuana but orchids — "you get a better price for them," he said. And he presented it convincingly after he had dropped his mask on the witness table.

Biaggi spokesman Larry Mallon said the mask was the idea of "law enforcement officials concerned with his case" and not a publicity stunt.

Mallon said the committee agreed to go along with the mask. He said the purpose was to keep Ebey's appearance secret since "a lot of people know Robert Guy Ebey but they don't know his face."

Mallon said the subcommittee was unaware until after the hearing started that Ebey's face previously had been seen on regional television in connection with his Virginia trial.

Ebey said during the hearing that he had no objection to the television camera as taking his picture.

LA Still Battling 'Adult Entertainment'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Los Angeles observed a different kind of anniversary the other day — 100 years of trying, mostly unsuccessfully, to stamp out or control the world's oldest profession and its satellite activities.

The City Council took note of the centennial by making yet another attempt to limit "adult entertainment." The council passed an ordinance prohibiting sex-oriented enterprises within 1,000 feet of each other or within 500 feet of any religious institution, school or public park. The aim is to scatter these activities throughout the city instead of allowing them to group in a "combat zone" of red-light district.

A century ago, in July 1878, an amendment was passed by the Common Council — precursor to the present City Council — in a vain effort to enforce an 1874 ordinance. That ordinance was the first to name and prohibit "houses of ill-fame and prostitution in certain parts of the city."

At first the City of the Angels saw little attempt to control vice by American authority after the 1848 victory in the Mexican War.

Possibly the most disreputable on the U.S. frontier, the tough and violent pack-trail passed few measures to control individuals' conduct. Ordinances that managed to pass referred to misbehavior in a conveniently vague fashion.

Growth and prosperity in the 1870s prompted an editorial "decency" campaign by the Los Angeles Star. Inspired citizens protested immoral conditions.

Encouraged by petitions, the Common Council approved a vice-control ordinance in 1874. By law, brothel-keepers and streetwalkers were ordered to move outside the central business area to the streets along its edge.

Later amendments tried unsuccessfully to push the redlight district farther away or to prohibit it altogether.

San continued to skirt the Plaza until 1909 when the wide-open days came to an end. Bawdyhouses were closed and scatter women were scattered by a city "Good Government" reform campaign.

Vice was no longer openly tolerated by authorities. Instead, it went underground and flourished illegally.

After the 1965 Watts riot, hustlers abandoned the central city areas for Hollywood and circled through the suburbs, vice officers report.

Many establishments assumed disguises to escape regulation. Posing as legitimate concerns, they became known as "sexual encounter" or "dancing adult" clubs.

In August 1977, a one-year moratorium banned the opening of new massage parlors along with adult bookstores.

Trade Issue Divides Government, Industry

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A split has developed within both the administration and the business world about the wisdom of cutting sales of American goods to the Soviet Union as a form of pressure.

International Harvester, whose Moscow technical representative, F. Jay Crawford, was arrested last month on alleged currency violation charges, has stopped all sales negotiations with the Soviets.

The chairman of the corporation, Brooke McCormick, sent letters to other American firms with Moscow offices saying, "I encourage you to express your own official concern."

A spokesman for the corporation said McCormick had in mind that the companies send letters of protest to Anatoly Dobrynin, Soviet ambassador in Washington, but a State Department official said "a number of firms have decided to

Company Monitors Weather

NEW YORK (UPI) — Betting $1,000 on the exact date of a crop freeze would put off even the most hard core gambler. But Nash C. Roberts Jr., of New Orleans, head of one of the oldest weather forecasting and consulting firms in the country, did just that.

Nash said one of his clients insisted on betting when a freeze would occur in the Memphis cotton area a few years ago. Even though the freeze hit near the region, it was two or three days off and Roberts lost the bet.

"This was the one and only time he bet, and it has been a long time since he's been wrong."

Roberts, in New York for a client news conference recently, told UPI he realized the vast potential of meteorological forecasting as early as World War II, when he was engaged in active naval duty in the Pacific.

Flying a surveillance plane, he would trace the progress of many adverse weather conditions, some as catastrophic as typhoons. By closely monitoring weather activity, Roberts said, he could provide military authorities with forecasts that aided strategy — taking advantage of the cover typhoons offered to maneuvers, for instance.

Returning to New Orleans after the war, Roberts reapplied the potential of these forecasts to benefit peacetime industry and business. In 1946 he founded his private firm, Nash C. Roberts Jr. Consultants Inc.

Using the pitch that he could offer an earlier and more precise forecast than the United States Weather Bureau, complete with 48-hour projections and a summary of the last 24 hours, Roberts finally persuaded a handful of cotton traders to buy his service.

More than 30 years later, Roberts has a world-wide reputation as a forecaster and acts as consultant to major firms such as Exxon, Tetaco, Union Carbide and American Cyanamid as well as many small enterprises in the citrus, wheat and potato regions.

Roberts claims about an 80 percent accuracy record in his predictions over the last eight years or so. But he is emphatic that his forecasts are not to be taken for "gospel." He explained they can change drastically at times, especially in highly localized situations.

Roberts does not trade in any market he forecasts. "Even though the temptation is tremendous at times," he said, "I feel my clients should get the 'inside information' first. It would be unethical and should be illegal if it is not already so."

Roberts uses a method of 'model comparison' to arrive at his conclusions. His resources cover almost one hundred years of surface and atmospheric data to which he refers, finding a pattern similar to the one he's working on. If his research produces indications which are out of line, Roberts will refrain from advising his clients.

In a report commissioned by a client, Thomson McKinnon Securities, Inc., and released at the news conference, Roberts warned of the possibility of wet harvest weather and early frosting on this year's late cotton, soybean and corn crop. Although the summer for these crops is expected to be nearly ideal, killer frosts in the Texas area, which accounts for almost 50 percent of the nation's cotton produce, could damage 10 to 15 percent of the harvest.

"This could mean a rise of 15 cents per pound to 75 cents in the cotton market," according to Herman S. Kohlmeier, a director of Thomson McKinnon. A shortened growing season will curb production, keeping prices firm in those areas.

Roberts feels "70 percent confident in the precipitation prediction and almost 80 percent confident in the frost prediction."

HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — CIA plots to assassinate President Fidel Castro and other acts of sabotage were foiled by double agents who posed as CIA operatives while working for the Cuban secret police, five Cubans told a "tribunal" at a world youth conference.

An American speaker before the invitation-only audience Tuesday, ex-CIA man Philip Agee, claimed the U.S. agency was responsible for the death of 100 Cubans in 1960 in the explosion of a ship carrying weapons Cuba had purchased from Belgium. But he gave no details.

One of the Cuban speakers, Jose Fernandez Santos, said one attempt on Castro's life was to have taken place in Mexico in 1976, a year after the U.S. Senate Intelligence Committee issued a report on Central Intelligence Agency assassination plots against Castro and other foreign leaders.

The Senate committee said it knew of eight plans against Castro, and Castro has said he knows of 25 attempts against his life.

Fernandez Santos said two men, Francisco Manuel Camargo Saavedra and Patricio Sanchez, scouted Mexico City's airport and a downtown monument as possible sites for killing the Cuban leader. He said both men worked for the CIA.

He added that he was informed of planned attempts on Castro's life during a visit to Chile in 1971 and later in Cuba. Another Cuban, Abel Haidar Elias, said the CIA assigned him to give a high-powered rifle to an agent named Saturnino Rondon on Jan. 1, 1965, for an assassination attempt the next day. Haidar said he did not turn over the rifle.

Nicolas Alberto Sirgado Ros displayed a brick and a two-foot-long stone, both of which he said were hollowed out to hold listening devices, miniature cameras and other equipment.

He said the CIA was so pleased with his work that a man who said he was a representative of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger presented him with a watch.

Two other Cubans told of efforts to send weapons to Cuba from the United States by sea and by air and of CIA tutoring of counter-revolutionaries in ways to sabotage the Cuban economy.

The audience also heard videotape testimony from persons purporting to be former CIA operatives who were caught and jailed and who said they had been "rehabilitated."

The anti-CIA hearing was held on the fifth day of the 11th World Festival of Youth and Students, attended by 20,000 delegates from 145 countries. The theme of the week-long festival is "anti-imperialist solidarity."

Agee, who quit the CIA in 1969 after 12 years of service and has written or co-authored two books critical of it, told of the agency's alleged activities in the early 1960's to persuade Latin American governments to follow the U.S. lead and break diplomatic relations with Cuba.

He said the CIA fabricated a document purporting to contain names of Peruvians on the payroll of the Cuban Embassy in Lima, and after it appeared in a Lima newspaper, the Peruvian government broke relations with Havana.

Retraining Of Workers Suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — City and state governments should retrain workers for other available jobs rather than abruptly lay them off during staffing cutbacks, a top official of the nation's largest union of public employees contends.

This is common practice in private industry but a rare one in government, said Donald S. Wasserman, director of research and collective bargaining services for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

Until Jan. 1, he told a House subcommittee on the cities, state employees were not even automatically eligible for unemployment benefits.

Unlike their counterparts in private industry, he said, public employees get no retraining for other jobs and no severance pay during budget crunches.

He was one of a panel of specialists testifying on what he sees as likely consequences of California's passage of Proposition 13, which required a dramatic scaling down of property taxes and thus of many city and state payrolls.

"We do not favor featherbedding. We do not favor redundancy. We do not favor keeping unneeded people hanging around doing nothing," Wasserman said.

"We think, however, that the employer does have the obligation to retrain them for other jobs which they could perform in their current occupations. This has been a concept in private industry for a long time," he said.

In answer to questions, he said it might not be possible to retrain a police officer to be a social worker but there are many specialists who can be sent to similar departments and perform well with very little new training.

Laborers and clerical workers are examples of employees who could easily be transferred from one department to another where jobs still are available, he said.

R. Scott Fosler, government studies director of the Committee for Economic Development, said there is growing support for the concept of business helping government solve problems such as unemployment, inflation and urban deterioration.

Generally, he said, government still can learn much from business — and this has been happening across the country.

Court Absolves Firm In Suit

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Volkswagen of America, Inc., has been absolved of all liability in the case of a Colusa man, paralyzed from the waist down when his 1972 Porsche 914 flipped over.

Dennis Miller, 29, claimed his back was broken in the accident because the roll-over in the vehicle's roof was faulty. But a San Luis Obispo County Superior Court jury ruled Thursday that Volkswagen was not responsible for Miller's injury.

Miller had asked the court to award him $500,000 for the September 1975 accident on Avila Beach.

During the 20-day trial, Volkswagen design expert Jurgen Heise from Germany and showed films to bolster testimony that the 914 was as strong structurally as other 1973 sports cars.

The jury voted 9-3 that Miller, who was reportedly driving along the beach at 65 mph when the accident occurred, should not receive any compensation from the firm.

Judge Denies Request By Mail Union Leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge refused today to block the nation's largest postal union from proceeding with a rank-and-file contract ratification vote, saying balloting increases the chances for averting a mail strike.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker denied a request by a dissident local union leader to stop the vote by 300,000 postal workers on the grounds that the vote would be illegal and could lead to more labor strife.

"The public interest in having the mail undisrupted is obvious," Parker said. But he said it is preferable to hold a ratification vote "sooner rather than later."

Acceptance by the rank and file "increases chances for labor peace," he added.

The American Postal Workers Union said after the decision that the union would begin mailing ballots today. The union estimates it will take about three weeks to complete the ratification process.

The suit for an injunction was brought by John Richards, president of the APWU's Pittsburgh-area local. Richards contended in the suit that union leaders should renegotiate the beleaguered contract with the U.S. Postal Service rather than seek rank-and-file approval.

But the Postal Service has indicated it would be unwilling to return to the bargaining table despite mounting calls by local union leaders for rejection of the pact.

Richards' attorney said he would appeal the decision by Thursday.

Threats of a mail strike have continued since a tentative accord was reached on July 21 because of strong opposition within union ranks.

The three-year agreement has come under increasing attack from local leaders of the APWU and the National Association of Letter Carriers, which together represent 482,000 of 570,000 unionized postal workers.

Last week, APWU members staged wildcat walkouts at postal centers in New Jersey and California to protest the settlement.

On Monday, leaders of the APWU's 23,000-member New York Area Postal Union called for the contract's rejection while delegates to the letter carriers' national convention in Chicago rejected the pact in a non-binding voice vote.

APWU President Emmet Andrews said the main objection to the pact centers on a proposed 19.5 percent wage increase, spread over three years, which dissidents say is not high enough. The typical postal worker now makes about $16,000 a year.

But Andrews said Tuesday that despite opposition to the contract from local leaders, he was receiving favorable mail indicating that the agreement would be ratified by his members.

He added that ratification would not be affected by a rejection by the letter carriers union, which has begun mailing ballots to its members.

If the Postal Service were to refuse to renegotiate after a contract rejection by either union's membership, federal law requires that the dispute be settled through binding arbitration. That process takes up to 90 days to complete.

Richards contended in his suit that a vote by an APWU advisory committee last Thursday to reject the settlement bars the union from seeking rank-and-file ratification under its constitution.

The committee, composed of local union officials, unexpectedly voted 29-15 to reject the pact, but agreed to send it out for ratification.

Leaders of two smaller postal unions, the National Rural Letter Carriers and Mailhandlers Division of Laborers' International, said they have not encountered significant rank-and-file resistance to the contract.

Probation Handed To Lubbock Woman

A six-year probated prison term Tuesday was assessed a Lubbock woman who had been charged in the April 1976 slaying of her husband.

Katherlyn Marie Nunley, of 1704 E. 2nd Place, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter. She could have been given maximum punishment of 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine by 137th District Judge Robert C. Wright.

Vic Nunley was pronounced dead on arrival at a local hospital April 11, 1976. Police had responded to a reported automobile accident on Weber Drive in which Nunley's car had gone out of control and crashed into a building. After investigating, officers found the man had been shot in the head.

Medical Professor Files Against Tech

A Texas Tech University professor filed suit against the School of Medicine in federal district court Tuesday, charging his superiors accepted a "fictitious resignation" and asking the court to award him $980,000 in damages.

James Frederick Johnson, who said he was hired last year at $70,000 for Jan. 1 through Aug. 31, 1978, also wants Judge Halbert O. Woodward to issue a preliminary injunction requiring that the physician be kept on as an associate professor until the matter is settled.

In his complaint Johnson said he never resigned, neither in writing nor orally, though he received a letter from Richard A. Lockwood, vice president of the Health Sciences Center Hospital, saying, "Pursuant to our meeting on June 27, 1978, I am considering your resignation effective Aug. 31, 1978."

Johnson said the university's official policy is to notify faculty members no later than April 15 of its intention to terminate contracts.

The doctor referred to the "malicious, willful, and conspiratorial nature of the transactions" and asked $100,000 each in damages from Lockwood and Jay Sackler, the acting chairman of the radiology department where Johnson teaches; $100,000 damages from George Tyner, dean of the medical school and $100 from Cecil Mackey, university president.

Johnson also wants a year's salary of $70,000 awarded him and another $700,000 for loss of personal and professional reputation and damage to his career.

The "fictitious resignation can only be construed by fellow professionals as some form of shameful discharge," the complaint reads.

Legal counsel for the university has 20 days to respond to the complaint.

ACLU Seeks Ban Of Speech Rules

SEATTLE (AP) — A committee of the Washington chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union says a Seattle School Board policy barring use of racial or other slurs violates the First Amendment.

The policy prohibits use of an expression "which reflects personal prejudice toward any individual, person or group because of race, sex, age, handicapping condition, religion, national origin or language." The policy was developed after a secretary directed a racial slur at a minority employee last spring.

Javits Raps Sadat's Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jacob Javits today called on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to drop his conditions for resumption of peace talks if Sadat expects the United States to continue as a mediator in the Middle East.

Sadat demands that Israel promise to return all captured Arab lands before any peace talks resume.

"I hope that President Sadat will recognize that if Egypt wants a continuation of United States mediation, President Sadat cannot create conditions in which that becomes impossible," said Javits, a staunch ally of Israel.

The New York Republican also called on Saudi Arabia, Jordan and other moderate Arab states to declare their support of continued negotiations.

Failure of the Arab states to support peace talks "will range them on the side opposed to a negotiated solution, and the American people will have to draw the appropriate conclusions," Javits said in a Senate speech.

Javits described Sadat's refusal to continue negotiations as a strategem to force the United States to offer its own peace plan, a move the senator has warned in the past would be a grave mistake.

"President Sadat's headline position is particularly unfortunate in coming as a reaction to significant new indications of flexibility in Israel's position," Javits said.

He said Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's scheduled weekend Mideast trip should have been cancelled and special Mideast ambassador Alfred Atherton should have been withdrawn.

Such decisions "would have been more compatible with the mediating role of the United States, which is that of a mediator and not a salesman," the senator added.

Vance is scheduled to leave Washington Friday night for a trip to Jerusalem and Alexandria at a time when Israeli-Egyptian peace negotiations appear to be at a low point.

While U.S. officials say Vance's trip has taken on aspects of a salvage operation for the peace negotiations, Javits said, "My discussions with responsible United States officials lead me to believe that our State Department in fact sees the terms of an Egyptian-Israeli agreement gradually taking shape."

Javits said the government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin has taken a more flexible stand in its peace proposals since meetings last month involving Egyptian officials and Vance at Leeds Castle in England.

The flexibility, he said, includes a willingness to negotiate a compromise on the question of territory and the future of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

In the past Javits has urged the Israeli government to be willing to compromise on such issues as the future of the West Bank.

But in his most recent speech, he was critical of Sadat's attitude.

"The facts are that Sadat's refusal to resume face-to-face negotiations with Israel, and his insistence on preconditions — which prejudges the very issues which are at the heart of the dispute — as a price for further negotiations can only be a severe embarrassment for President Carter and a challenge to the very basis of the United States mediating role," Javits said.

Meanwhile, gunfire flared in north, central and south Lebanon today, and the government of President Elias Sarkis was reported considering asking for an emergency session of the U.N. Security Council.

Police said 11 persons were killed in clashes between Syrian peacekeepers and Christian militiamen in Beirut, Palestinian guerrillas were battling Iraqi-backed guerrillas near Tripoli, and Christian militiamen were blocking a Lebanese army advance in the south.

Guerrilla sources said at least six Palestinians were killed and 24 wounded at camps near Tripoli, 60 miles north of Beirut. The camps house 20,000 refugees.

The sources said the clashes were part of the terror war between Yasser Arafat's main guerrilla group Al Fatah and the Iraqi regime of President Ahmed Hassan Al Bakr, which opposes Arafat's attempt to reach a settlement with Israel.

Rain Hopes Get Boost On Plains

A Canadian cool front pushing southward through the Great Plains may combine with a southeasterly flow of moisture to bring rain to the Lubbock area Thursday, according to National Weather Service forecasters.

No rain is forecast for today, but the probability Thursday is 30 percent.

An NWS forecaster at Lubbock International Airport said this morning that the moist air from rainstorms downstate is not enough in itself to relieve the latest dry spell here.

"We've got quite a bit of moisture in the air, but we don't have anything to start it," he said.

Only .15 inch of rain fell at the Lubbock airport in July.

Temperatures are expected to be in the mid-90s today, high 60s tonight and high 80s Thursday. Tuesday's high was 96 and the low this morning was 68.

Southerly winds of 10 to 15 mph today and tonight are forecast.

Thunderstorms are expected to start in the Panhandle tonight and spread southward Thursday with the passage of the cool front.

The West Texas forecast calls for partly cloudy skies Friday and Saturday with a chance of showers or thunderstorms mostly in the Panhandle.

It should be mostly fair Sunday with a warming trend.

In New Mexico, it should be mostly sunny in the southeastern part of the state with widely scattered afternoon thundershowers elsewhere.

Locally heavy rains are possible in the western New Mexico mountains, weathermen said.

The extended forecast for West Texas brings more bad news for the parched region. Temperatures next week, Monday through Friday, are expected to be about normal and no precipitation is indicated.

Senators Urged To Rescue ERA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., urged Congress today to extend the deadline for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment to clear the way for "an unmistakable signal to the courts on the will of the American people with respect to equal rights for women."

Appearing as the lead-off witness in a three-day hearing on the time extension, the widow of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey described herself as a member of a "minority of two" — one of only two women in the Senate.

Among the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on the Constitution listening to her testimony was Sen. Marjory Allen, D-Ala., a declared opponent of the time extension. The two women chatted amicably before the hearing.

Time for ratifying the ERA, which would prohibit discrimination based on sex, runs out next March 22 unless extended by Congress. The House Judiciary Committee has voted to extend it to June 30, 1982, and action by the full House is expected soon.

The bill being considered by the Senate subcommittee is a seven-year extension, but its principal sponsor, Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the subcommittee chairman, said, "I would be prepared to go with what the House recommended."

Indications are that the extension could run into a filibuster when it reaches the Senate floor.

Mrs. Humphrey said the time limit should be extended because "a majority of Americans have already expressed their support for this proposal," because "the forging of a national consensus on any important issue takes a long time and because 'despite progress in the area of women's rights, the ERA is still needed.'"

"Clearly, enactment of the Equal Rights Amendment is needed to give an unmistakable signal to the courts on the will of the American people with respect to equal rights for women."

Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., told the subcommittee that he favors extension only if it is accomplished by a two-thirds vote rather than a simple majority. Volkmer is expected to make this same argument on the House floor.

The ERA must have the approval of 38 states.

The amendment has been ratified by 35 states, although the legislatures of Kentucky, Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska later rescinded their action. The Kentucky vote was vetoed by the state's acting governor. It will be up to Congress to determine whether those states are counted as having ratified the proposal.

Patricia M. Wald, assistant attorney general in charge of legislative affairs, told the panel the Justice Department believes Congress has the power to extend the deadline by a simple majority.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said that unless the extension measure sent to the floor allows states that have already ratified to withdraw their approval "I believe it is my duty to support those efforts, under the rules of the Senate, which will provide for a thorough debate of the many issues surrounding extension."

"This would be the first time that Congress has extended the time for a proposed amendment to be ratified.

City Tax Foes Laud Council

responsibility," West said. The council was told the city began paying for the guards about 20 years ago.

Increased fees in three city departments would permit the budget to be cut an additional $198,000.

A 15 percent increase in Health Department and building inspection fees would generate $51,000 and $42,000 respectively.

The building inspection fees, lower here than in virtually every Texas city, would increase $4.50 for a 2,000 square foot house and place the building inspection department on a break-even level.

The charge for commercial garbage collection would be raised from $5.50 to $8.50 per cubic yard to bring in an additional $105,000. It's believed most private companies collecting commercial garbage charge more than $8.50.

Also in the proposed budget is a reduction of a cost-of-living raise for all city employees from 7 to 5 percent for a savings of $200,000.

However, a controversial reclassification of city employees, recommended by a consulting firm at a cost of $576,000, remained in the budget — at least for now.

West placed the reclassification at the head of each of his lists of proposed cuts, although he said he realizes it could eventually save the city money by reducing employee turnover.

Other council members, particularly Carolyn Jordan, argued that city services are only as good as the city employees charged with providing them. Therefore, she said, it's imperative to make city salaries competitive.

The remainder of the $4 million budget cuts are primarily the result of shifting funds from one budget area to another.

The council decided not to let Lubbock Power and Light retain an additional $440,000 in revenues, which the utility planned to use for capital improvements. That brings the total LP&L contribution

Police Recapture Escaped Convict

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A convicted bank robber who bolted from a San Jose courtroom after a judge sentenced him to 15 years in prison has been captured by narcotics officers here.

City Tax Foes Laud Council

to next year's city operating fund to about $2 million.

A reserve fund begun last year to purchase large capital equipment will be drained of its $275,000 total under the proposed budget. That could lead to more bond elections to purchase such equipment, Councilman Alan Henry predicted.

For the first time, council members reluctantly decided to budget $1 million in federal revenue sharing funds for city operations. Such action had been avoided in the past to keep the city from growing dependent on federal funds.

Exactly what the city won't be able to purchase next year if the federal money is used for city operations isn't known yet. But the $1 million is half the city's revenue sharing fund allocation for next year.

Another $1.2 million is simply what remained at the present tax rate in the original $71.9 million proposed budget.

Although many of the proposed cuts will not be available to the council when members prepare the next budget, West said the city was "really hoping for tax relief from the state level," to help the city move away from its dependence on the property tax as a funding source.

The city council had been faced with demands by the Lubbock Property Owners Association for a 25 percent tax cut, the removal of the property tax on automobiles and a $10,000 homestead exemption for the elderly.

Although West said he was willing to risk a lawsuit by removing automobiles from the tax roll, the mayor received little support from his colleagues.

The consensus was to wait to see what the state legislature does about removing the automobile tax and to discuss possible ways to remove the tax with the school board.

The liaison committee, composed of West and Mrs. Jordan, will also approach the school board about finding an alternate method of revaluing property to avoid what West called "the tax lightning." That, West said, is a phenomenon which struck this year with the revaluation of Southwest Lubbock property. The committee also will attempt to find a way to get the school board to assume the school crossing guard cost.

The proposed budget will be available for public inspection after Aug. 9 in the city secretary's office in city hall.

a.m. today. He said rainfall rates in the same area were continuing at about two inches per hour.

There were reports of evacuations in the area, but telephone and power lines were downed in heavy thunderstorms and reports from the area were sketchy.

Lightning damaged some communications equipment at the DPS office at Kerrville, the spokesman said.

Some urban flooding was reported during the night in San Antonio as heavy amounts of rainfall were reported across a wide area of South Central Texas and in the Hill Country.

Skies were cloudy early today over most of Central and Southeast Texas. The low cloudiness associated with the warm, moist air blowing in from the Gulf of Mexico was expected to move northward into North Central Texas today, taking with it some of the heavy rainfall activity.

Early morning temperatures were quite warm. Most readings were in the 70s with extremes ranging from 58 at Marfa in the mountains of Southwest Texas to near 80 along the gulf coast.

Forecasts called for partly cloudy skies over most of the state today. Showers and thunderstorms were expected to develop in areas from the Big Bend region eastward across the state and northward into many sections of North Central Texas.

She said she "picked up the microphone and told everyone to get out...Some people — would you believe it — wanted to be checked out" with their groceries.

Joan Guinan, who lives near the supermarket, said, "When the firemen were on the roof — I'll never forget it as long as I live."

"It's hard to accept," said Mayor Edward Koch, who rushed to the scene. "It indicates how much we owe our firemen. It's just overwhelming. It's very difficult to talk about."

About 150 firemen from 30 companies fought the fire that escalated to a four-alarm in a short time.

Three injured firemen were admitted to Coney Island Hospital, which reported none of them was "in any life-threatening situations." They had suffered smoke inhalation and minor burns, a hospital spokesman said.

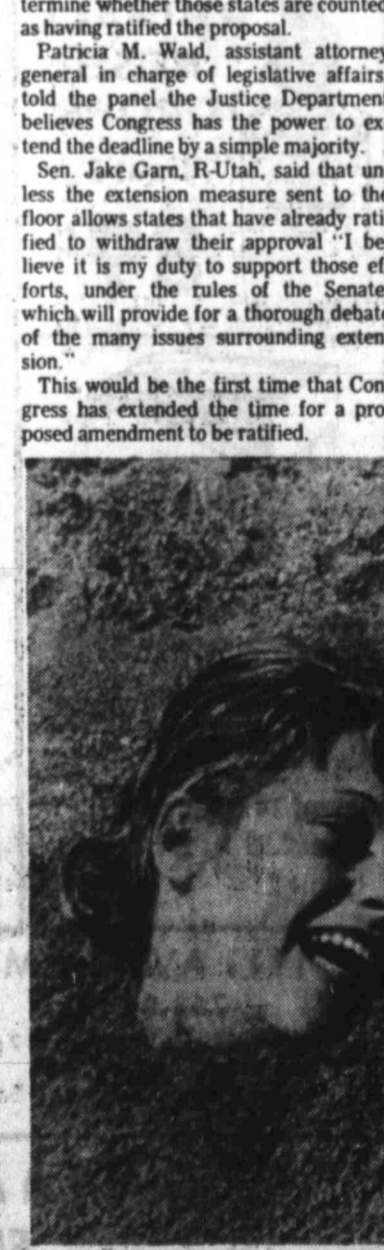

It was later determined, however, that one fireman was in serious condition and was being transferred to the burn center of New York Hospital in Manhattan.

The fire appeared to have started in a section of the building undergoing renovation, said Margaret Trudden, who lives nearby. She said she could see heavy smoke coming from the building.

It was the greatest loss of life the department has suffered since 12 firefighters died in a fire that destroyed three buildings in Manhattan's Madison Square on Oct. 17, 1968.

The two said, however, that the city council and chamber in San Antonio have passed resolutions supporting the amendment and that a corporation already has been formed there to issue bonds if it passes.

They said the amendment is designed to create jobs, and St. Clair said it discourages industries "where you have a $3-million building but only 21 jobs."

The capability would be entirely by local option, they said.

Texas is one of only three states in the Union where cities and counties do not have the authority to issue revenue bonds for industrial development, they noted.

Washington and South Dakota are the others.

would have to first assess Turkey's needs. Lifting of the embargo, defense officials said, also will result in: —Unblocking $99.6 million in military grant aid which was in the pipeline when the embargo was imposed.

Cautious Reactions Heard From Ecevit

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit today reacted cautiously to a congressional vote to lift the U.S. arms embargo against his country, saying he saw both "positive" and "unrealistic" aspects to the plan.

The embargo was imposed by Congress in February 1975 in reaction to Turkey's use of American-supplied arms in its invasion of northern Cyprus during the summer of 1974.

The Senate gave its approval to ending the embargo last week. There are minor differences between the Senate and House measures that remain to be worked out in a conference committee. The embargo repeal is part of a larger $1 billion military aid package.

The shutting off of the U.S. intelligence observations by radar and other electronic means led to frantic U.S. efforts to fill the gap from stations in Iran and elsewhere on the periphery of Russia.

Municipal Strikes Continue In Detroit

Emergency police telephone operators returned to their jobs today in Detroit but striking sanitation workers and mechanics defied a court order and refused to end their wildcat walkout despite the threat of dismissal.

When asked about bus service today, a dispatcher at the city DOT said: "Bus service is going to be running just like it did yesterday — none."

White House and State Department officials credit the administration's recent victories in part to an energetic system of maintaining liaison with the Congress.

Lewis had filed suit against Texas International asking Miner to block the Houston-based airline from buying more National stock until it complies with a 1977 state law requiring the airline to make extensive disclosures and notify all National stockholders before the purchase.

Embattled Mayor Raises Anti-Recall War Chest

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich's campaign against recall has raised almost $60,000, to a reported $100,000 donated to the group trying to convince voters they should vote for recall on Aug. 6.

The recall committee reported last week it had raised $10,000. Contributions from the steelworkers' committee, which is acting independently, will be reported separately.

Administration eagerness to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea, and to expand U.S. relations with Vietnam and China has been slowed — although not stopped — by conservative legislators who see no need to rush.

Civic Ballet Opens Membership Class

Persons interested in joining the Lubbock Civic Ballet corps may attend an open class at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Clapp Party House at 4500 Ave. U.

The open class will be conducted to prepare dancers for the audition for the ballet group. The audition is scheduled for Aug. 12.

The recall action was started after Richard Hongisto, who Kucinich had hired as police chief in January, alleged that the mayor had pressured officers to commit unethical acts. Kucinich then fired Hongisto.

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Nancy Landon Kassebaum rode the name of her famous father, a pleasing personality and a middle-of-the-road political philosophy to victory in the race for Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate. And Alf Landon, her father, finally got to sleep.

legally separated from her husband, finished with 31 percent of the GOP vote. Roy, 52, bowled over three political neophytes to win his second chance at a U.S. Senate seat — a bid Kansas Democrats think will land them their first senator in four decades.

Carlin, on the other hand, scored a smashing victory over his two opponents — state Sen. Bert Chason of Hutchinson and Topekan Harry Wiles.

Henry VII's Miserly Attitude Confirmed By Account Ledgers

By ROBERT MUSEL
 LONDON (UPI) — King Henry VII has confirmed in his own handwriting what historians have long deduced from the affairs of his reign some 4½ centuries ago — he was a greedy fellow who viewed his subjects as so many bankable assets.

The British Library has just obtained from a private collection Henry's "Chamber Issue and Memoranda Book" for the years 1502-1505 and scholars hitherto denied this insight into the first of the Tudor kings now know a bit more of the avarice that made him the richest prince in Christendom when he died in 1509.

The books record payments of all kinds — the expense accounts of the royal establishment, so to speak. And who personally audited them weekly, monthly, annually? Henry himself over his own signature, for when it came to spending money the king had to approve it all personally down to pennies.

To this task he applied the dedication that on the field of battle gave him victory over Richard III ("my kingdom for a horse") on Bosworth Field and brought to an end the bloody War of the Roses.

One can almost see the king gloating over the news that "dyverse folkes in Kent, whereof there be some of them thrifty and rich men hath conveyed woules (wool) overseas without license (and are) able to make good fynes." Another entry estimates that a man who burned down a house in Wales "shal be worth 100 pounds for his fine."

Henry had good reason for his thrift. Only 45 years earlier Henry V inherited a treasury on the verge of bankruptcy. There were men in the kingdom then rich enough to raise private armies that could threaten the poverty-stricken monarchy.

So, although Henry VII's thrift accorded well with his own personal desires, the surplus he amassed enabled him to hand on a stable nation to his heir, the much-married Henry VIII.

But it is not in global or even national affairs that the fascination of the Chamber account book lies — it is the day-to-day expenses of a king in the long ago. The Chamber was Henry VII's chosen instrument for exercising a continual, detailed, personal control of the finances by which he made the monarchy and thus the state solvent and stable.

The actual accounts are in the handwriting of John Heron, Treasurer of the Chamber, who submitted them to Henry for signature. The variety and interest of the payments are inexhaustible, from the 108,000 pounds loaned Archduke Philip to the 10 shillings given "to him that Watcheth the Crowes" (the ravens in the Tower of London).

"Litell Mayden the tumbler" got 20 shillings for entertaining the royal court but "Watt the Luter who played the foie" — obviously a comic turn with the lute — was down for only 13 shillings fourpence. John Sudborough was paid the handsome price for the time of 20 shillings "for a song" and someone named Clement got two shillings for a nightingale.

Senate Rejects Hugh Yantis For State Insurance Post

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators turned down the confirmation of State Insurance Board Chairman Hugh Yantis today by a vote of 27-1.

The vote came after Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, exercised his traditional prerogative as hometown senator and said he considered Yantis "personally objectionable."

The sole objector to Doggett's move was Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan.

Yantis, board member Durwood Manford and water commissioner Dorsey Hardeman — Gov. Dolph Briscoe's most controversial recent appointees — went before the Senate for confirmation today.

Sen. Lloyd Doggett, D-Austin, said he still intended to exercise his hometown senator's veto of Yantis but would not oppose a motion that would delay confirmation until next January.

"If you review his entire experience as a regulator, you will see it is one that is biased in favor of the regulated, not the general public," Doggett told reporters.

He indicated he was generally unimpressed with Yantis' pro-consumer record as chairman.

Before becoming insurance board chairman, Yantis was executive director of the Texas Water Quality Board.

The Senate Nominations Subcommittee cleared Yantis, Hardeman and Manford for floor consideration Tuesday by 7-0 votes.

Hardeman was grilled intensely by an old foe from his Senate days, Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-Galveston, but the subcommittee and Doggett treated Yantis and Manford more or less gently.

Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, asked Yantis about his statements advocating an end to car insurance distinctions based on sex and occupation.

"My concern is, do you intend to socialize the rate making?" Jones asked.

"To an extent, yes, but not totally...The question of equality of the sexes and some occupations should supersede the statistics involved... I wouldn't want to distinguish between my daughters and my sons...knowing their insurance exposure is not the same," Yantis replied.

He told the committee he thought he had been "a good chairman" and wanted to continue. He also said he if were passed over this session he would resign before the January regular session so Briscoe could appoint his successor — assuming Doggett continues to insist on his veto.

Doggett asked Manford about his public fist fight with board member Ned Price two years ago and about former chairman Joe Christie's recommendation he not be reappointed.

"I have never had any problem with working with anyone on this board or anywhere," said Manford, a board member since 1961.

Schwartz and Doggett tried to make a case for subjecting Hardeman to Doggett's veto, since he lives in Austin. Hardeman insisted he is legally a resident of San Antonio, where he votes.

Hardeman also defended his telling a lawyer to "kiss my —" after a water commission hearing. He said the lawyer tried to speak to him in violation of a state law forbidding participants in contested proceedings to talk informally with quasi-judicial officeholders.

Krueger Takes Aim Against Senate Foe

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger parried Republican opponent John Tower's most recent campaign thrust Tuesday, denying Tower's claim that Krueger distorted the incumbent senator's voting record during two West Texas news conferences last week.

"Although John Tower accused me of attempting to deceive Texas farmers," Krueger said, "he could not deny that everything I attributed to him was true.

"One way to avoid being fooled by politicians is to look at the record," Krueger continued. "And the Tower record is very clear."

The Democratic congressman's most recent remarks were made in letters forwarded to executive editors Dave Knapp of the Avalanche-Journal and Jerry Huff of the Amarillo News and Globe-Times.

The letters released Tuesday represented the latest exchange in the Tower-Krueger donnybrook which has heated up in recent weeks. The candidates are squaring off for the U.S. Senate seat occupied by Tower.

In a news release Saturday, Tower accused his New Braunfels opponent of being "more than a little loose with the truth on a number of significant issues."

In a 2 1/2-page rebuttal, Tower repeatedly accused Krueger of distorting the incumbent's record, at one point noting that "There were so many distortions and inaccuracies...that I am forced to conclude that they were a deliberate series of falsehoods."

Tuesday Krueger defended his statements and renewed his attack on Tower.

He said Tower had "adamantly" opposed price supports for farmers, even going so far as to write a book ("A Program for Conservation") arguing against price supports.

"This year, in election year, (Tower) suddenly belittled the farmers, to the extent of campaigning a full party bill," Krueger said.

The New Braunfels Democrat said Tower had supported price controls on beef under President Nixon. By contrast, Krueger said, he'd questioned President Carter's move to raise imported beef ceilings, an action which would allow more foreign meat to enter the country.

Krueger also castigated his opponent for a statement made last Saturday in which Tower said he did not believe inflation could be checked by freezing prices.

Despite his recent statement, Krueger said, Tower voted to expand the wage and price control authority twice, in 1971 and 1972.

San Antonio Solon Asks Federal Help

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Striking garbage collectors clashed Tuesday with police officers and a city councilman, hoping to avoid future confrontations between strikers, non-union workers and police, is seeking assistance from the U.S. Justice Department.

About 15 strikers and their supporters planned to pitch tents at City Hall Tuesday to demand the re-hiring of refuse collectors dismissed for participating in the wildcat walkout.

Police officers came to enforce a city ordinance prohibiting erection of a structure without a permit and brief altercation followed. Five strikers were arrested.

"The city attorney's office said it could do nothing about people staying out here in front, but they've got a hang-up about tents for some reason," said Ed Camara, attorney for the striking San Antonio Refuse Collectors Association.

Camara said he planned to file brutality charges against the police and would file suit on behalf of all strikers who are not required.

City Councilman Rudy Ortiz, one of two councilmen opposed to the city's locking out of 157 employees who walked off their jobs, Tuesday sent a telegram to Gil Pempa, director of the Community Relations Service, asking for mediation assistance.

"The resolution to this conflict has reached an impasse," Ortiz said. "Majority of fired workers are minority members, blacks and Mexican-Americans."

Camara also said he had worked out a modified restraining order with city attorneys deleting two restrictions ordered by District Judge Fred Shannon in an effort to halt sporadic violence directed at strikebreakers last week.

Camara said he convinced city lawyers it violated constitutional guarantees of free speech to prevent the strikers from talking to non-striking city workers and others to gain support for the work stoppage. At the same time, city attorneys added a provision restricting picketing at the city's three garbage pickup centers.

Four strikers arrested on misdemeanor charges Tuesday were released on $300 bonds and returned to City Hall to show news reporters various injuries they claim were inflicted in the scuffle which broke out in a light rain storm about dawn.

Among those arrested were Chris Gutierrez, vice president of the striking organization, and activist restaurant owner Mario Cantu, who was pummeled by former Mexico President Luis Echeverria during a protest of Echeverria's San Antonio visit two years ago.

Cantu, a strike sympathizer, was charged with simple assault on a police officer and was released on $40 bond.

Farm Union Wants To Continue Vigil

AUSTIN (UPI) — The weather has been against them this week and the Legislature has not heard their demands, but members of the Texas Farmworkers Union intend to remain on the Capitol grounds and continue their hunger strike.

About 10 of the protesting farm workers huddled on the steps of the Capitol reading newspapers. The group has staged a vigil since July 24 and has lived on water and juices since last Wednesday.

"Our spirits are still pretty good. We've decided to stay until the special session is over and we will," TFWU leader Antonio Orendain said Tuesday.

Counselor Offers Advice For Troubled Teenagers

By RICH KIRKPATRICK

YORK, Pa. (AP) — Tom, a teasing 14-year-old always ready with a quip, is making a comeback.

Just a few months ago, Tom — not his real name — was a teen-ager in trouble. His father wouldn't exercise any authority over him and his mother was uptight and nervous about dealing with him. On a spree, he and some friends broke into a bicycle shop near his Maryland home, but were caught.

Many times, such a case would land the teen-ager in an institution. But Tom was referred to the Pennsylvania Youth Advocate program, a 3-year-old privately run project.

Instead of stewing in a lock-up, Tom was given a full-time advocate, Ralph Smith, who provides advice, guidance and a chance to live in a normal family setting. Tom is staying with Smith, 33, a bachelor, for a six-month trial period. If the arrangement works, it will be extended.

"We always have nice times," says Tom, leaning over a chair in a local bowling alley. He, Smith and several other kids and their advocates had just finished one of their regular outings.

"I've changed a heck of a lot. I've become a real lot better. I think I've been getting better grades," Tom says.

Smith says he is pleased with Tom's progress. Tom had been having trouble in school; he had twice failed the seventh grade and was discouraged about ever getting anywhere in class.

Sensing that something physical was wrong, Smith had Tom checked and it was determined the boy had a reading problem. He was given a tutor.

"We've started to see the beginning of the climb," Smith says. "He's begun to pass some of the courses he's had trouble with."

Working with youth is a specialty of Smith's. He had been a Christian youth worker, a juvenile court counselor and a youth director at his church.

Smith, who was attracted to the youth advocate program by a newspaper ad, says he tries to influence Tom with a Christian lifestyle.

"There's a tremendous quality in good, clean living. We're trying to keep them from being second offenders," he says. Referring to Tom, he adds: "At age 14, he's still flexible. By 16, he'll never change."

"If there's not something positive for a kid, where does he go? Prison? Do we want to see him incarcerated half his life?" Smith says. "It doesn't make sense."

The Slim Gourmet

It's a peachy time of year for waistline watchers. Peaches are in ample supply. The only thing not ample about them is the calorie count, about 38 a piece.

What about their fuzziest brethren, nectarines? The difference between peaches and nectarines is more than skin deep. The same size nectarine, about two and one-half inches in diameter, weighs in at 88 calories, more than double a peach. (But as snackfoods go, a nectarine is a lot less fattening than a chocolate bar.)

Peaches (and nectarines) are great on your morning cereal, your luncheon salad plate, your mid-afternoon yogurt snack, for dessert instead of ice cream (or on top of ice milk) or as an ingredient in slimmer sweets. Here are some easy ideas:

PEACHY CHEESE DESSERT FONDUE
2 cups skim milk, ice cold
1 cup low-fat cottage cheese
4-serving envelope instant vanilla pudding mix
1 tsp. cinnamon (or to taste)
8 peaches (or nectarines, unpeeled), ripe, sweet, peeled juice of 1 lemon

SAUCE: Combine cold milk and cottage cheese in covered blender and beat completely smooth. Add pudding mix and beat smooth. Pour into a bowl and sprinkle with cinnamon.

Surround with fresh fruit slices, which have been lightly tossed with lemon juice. Spear the fruit with party toothpicks or use fondue forks. Dip the fruit slices in the cold sauce to eat. Makes eight servings, 130 calories each with peaches; 180 with nectarines.

PEACHY CHEESE STRATA — Prepare the dipping sauce and chill. Layer in parfait glasses with fresh sliced peaches, nectarines or other fruit.

RAW PEACH PIE
half of a 4-serving envelope peach or lemon gelatin, regular, or sugar-free lemon 1 cup boiling water ready-to-fill graham cracker pie shell
4 cups peaches, fresh, peeled, sliced

Measure contents of gelatin dessert mix envelope (save the other half for a future fresh fruit pie). Dissolve in boiling water and mix well. Chill until syrupy. Meanwhile, fill graham cracker pie shell with peach slices arranged in a circular pattern with all slices facing the same way. Spoon partially set gelatin over peaches until encased in a thick "glaze." Chill until set. Makes eight servings, 135 calories each (115 with sugar-free gelatin).

MRS. DAVIS'S NON-FAT PEACH 'ICE CREAM'

1 cup fresh skim milk
1 egg white
3 tbsps. brown sugar
pinch of salt
1 envelope plain gelatin
2 peaches, very ripe, peeled, pitted and mashed
1/2 tsp. lemon juice
1 tsp. vanilla

Beat milk and egg white together lightly in top section of double boiler. Mix in sugar and salt. Sprinkle gelatin over surface of liquid. Allow to soften 1 to 2 minutes. Heat and stir over boiling water about 5 minutes until completely smooth, but do not allow to boil. Remove from heat.

Mix peach pulp, lemon juice and vanilla. Stir into milk mixture. Freeze until mushy. Beat thoroughly. Refreeze. Allow to soften slightly before serving. Makes about two cups, 90 calories per half-cup serving.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Our daughter climbed into a giant teacup ride at Disneyland that whirled her around like a centrifuge, bounced her around until her eyeballs scrambled and came to rest with her chin hooked over the safety bar.

She laughed so hard I thought her teeth would catch cold.

She climbs into the back seat of the family car (the one where the ride is so smooth, a jeweler cuts diamonds) and before you can get out of the driveway, she threatens to throw up.

I guess every family has a "queasy rider." It's the kid who turns every vacation into a question: "What am I doing here?"

According to my husband, I have no right to complain. After all, I'm the one responsible for passing on the up-chuck chromosome.

Didn't I view the Statue of Liberty from the center of the ferry with my head between my legs? Wasn't I the one who took Dramamine to watch Gilligan's Island? And I'm the one who blew $20 on a never-to-be-forgotten fishing venture in Florida a few years back. (They tell me I tried to choke a small child who was eating a mayonnaise sandwich with bait on his hands as I was on my final approach to death.)

In the interest of all you Moms and Dads who will be traveling this summer with a child who suffers from motion sickness, I'd like to offer you a few suggestions that might make things easier for you.

Motion sickness pills are very effective. When given as directed, a child can sleep for many miles. A word of warning: they may be habit-forming. (To the parents, not the child.)

Keep the child's mind off being sick. Tell her you're going to abandon her at the next exit ramp if she persists in this nonsense.

Give the child her own window — especially if it is in another car.

Cool it on the rich food and drink. Keep her busy by having her hang her head out of the car to see if the left-rear tire has a bubble on it or is smoking.

And above all, don't let the driver of the car stop and start...stop and start...stop and start...excuse me.

Now, you're a business woman, Abby, and you know how hard it is to keep a good secretary. Mine has been with me for five years and she does a great job. She's always on time, she's efficient, and the price is right.

Well, last week my wife dropped in at the office, and she happened to see me hug my secretary. I've made friendly gestures like this for some time to show I appreciate her, but now my wife is

The distributional odds can be learned from various sources—most notably "The Official Encyclopedia of Bridge." But knowing the odds is no substitute for counting out the hand.

After South entered the auction with four hearts, East decided that his length in partner's suit weakened his side's defensive prospects, so he chose to sacrifice at four spades. North felt that he had sufficient values to give his side a shot at closing out the rubber, so he went on to five hearts.

West led the king of spades and declarer ruffed. He tried the club finesse, but East won the king and continued spades. Declarer ruffed, crossed to the ace of clubs and ran the ten of trumps to West's king. Back came a spade, forcing declarer to ruff again.

Declarer drew the outstanding trumps, and the fate of the contract now hinged on the diamond suit. South knew that the probabilities favored a 4-2 split, so he cashed the king and queen and then finessed the ten. That lost to the jack-down one.

Declarer's knowledge of bridge mathematics was faulty. While the a priori odds suggest a 4-2 split of six cards, once both defenders follow to the first two rounds of the suit, the odds now favor a drop rather than a finesse. But more importantly, South failed to count the hand, which would have virtually ensured the contract.

From the bidding, it was almost certain that West had started with five spades and East with four. After losing the trump finesse and ruffing the spade return, declarer should enter dummy with the nine of trumps and ruff a club. Next, he gets back to dummy with a high diamond and ruffs the last club. These maneuvers will bring to light the fact that, in addition to his five spades, West started with two hearts and three clubs. That accounts for ten of his cards. Therefore, he has to have three diamonds.

So declarer should simply cash his top diamonds. When the jack falls, as expected, the ten becomes declarer's eleventh trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked, "There's so much going on in a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" # Japanese Living In U.S. Not Profiting From Dollar's Devaluation

By WILLIAM GLASGALL
NEW YORK (AP) — The estimated 80,000 Japanese businessmen and diplomats stationed in America aren't reaping the same bonanza that Japanese tourists are finding as they spend their increasingly valuable yen here.

"The basic salary of most Japanese working for private companies in the United States is based in U.S. dollars," said Makoto Hara, chief economist of the Bank of Tokyo Trust Co. in New York. "The appreciation of the yen has no effect on their lifestyle," he said, because they are receiving fixed dollar salaries and are paying for food, rent and other expenses in dollars, not in Japanese currency.

Japanese government officials stationed here are paid in yen — but their salaries are revised annually to cancel the effect of changing exchange rates. The dollars they get in exchange for their yen paychecks haven't increased with the devaluation of the dollar.

The situation of the Japanese diplomats is similar to that of many American businessmen in Japan, whose salaries are paid largely in dollars and who receive increases to compensate for the U.S. currency's declining buying power. But many other Americans stationed in Japan don't enjoy that protection and are struggling as their dollars shrink.

At Japan's United Nations mission, Yasushi Akashi, minister for budgetary, financial and organizational affairs, said he and his colleagues "have not felt more affluent than before, and our wives say this too."

The yen has appreciated by more than 30 percent against the dollar in the past year, in part because of worries over inflation in the United States — which cuts the dollar's buying power — and also because of persistent American trade deficits.

Because of the appreciation, American visitors in Japan often are finding themselves hard-pressed to make ends meet. At the same time, a Japanese tourist here is finding a bus ride or a steak dinner is 30 percent cheaper, even though the price in dollars hasn't changed.

According to the Japanese consulate here, there are about 133,000 Japanese citizens living in the United States, including the 88,000 executives and government officials, their wives and children, and students.

New York bureau chief Hiroshi Fujita of Japan's Kyodo news agency said that only seven or eight years ago, Japanese workers here "used to receive much less than their American equivalents." Hara added: "The Japanese couldn't afford to buy many things here because the standard of living was much higher."

Today, "Japanese employees abroad are paid about the same as their American counterparts," Fujita said, adding that even so, "we're not rich enough to go to fur stores or jewelry stores every day."

For example, Akashi, whose rank is one step below the ambassadorial level, is paid the equivalent of around $54,000 a year, while junior diplomats receive about $32,000. He receives his pay in three parts: a base salary, denominated in yen and related to rank and seniority; an overseas allowance also linked to the yen and based on local living costs and other factors; and a housing allowance, paid in dollars.

Labor Laws Under Study In Tanzania

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — Tanzania is working on a new "get tough" set of laws for the country's work force to try to prod its sluggish economy into greater productivity.

Legislation now under study would create "disciplinary committees" in industry made up of workers, managers and ruling party members with the power to expel, retire or even imprison errant workers.

Tanzania in recent months eased many restrictions in its strictly socialist setup to attract private investment and has succeeded in wooing back many Asian businessmen who previously left the country to settle in Canada.

Analysis

Locusts Plague Africa
HARGEISA, Somali (UPI) A 100-strong team of Somali experts is fighting against the clock to try to save East Africa from the threat of billions of locusts.

The locust swarms are currently bottled up by strong, adverse monsoon winds in mountains in northern Somalia with the result that extermination teams in light spray planes can't reach them.

Once the winds drop, however, the locusts are expected to swarm down onto the plains of Somalia, Ethiopia and Kenya.

The team from the Locust Control organization of Eastern Africa is currently assembling a fleet of vehicles and planes in the area to do battle with the locust clouds once they emerge from the mountain strongholds.

Rhodesia Talks Predicted
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith still says a conference with the guerrilla's Patriotic Front as proposed by Washington and London would be "disastrous" under the circumstances.

But he and black members of the "internal settlement" interim government now say they would attend talks if convinced the country would benefit.

The shift is believed to reflect an attempt to get from London and Washington the best possible ground rules for a conference.

Soviets Seek Base
VICTORIA, Seychelles (UPI) — The Soviet Union is making a new pitch for military facilities in this tiny but strategically important group of Indian Ocean islands.

A team of Soviet advisers and technicians recently visited the islands and reportedly explored the possibilities of a submarine base and deep water harbor for surface vessels.

The Russians have revived their interest in the Seychelles after the advent to power of the left-leaning President Albert Rene last year.

The United States currently operates a radar tracking station on the main island of Mahe.

Small Town Searching For Nurse
EADS, Colo. (UPI) — Banker Eldon Gulley can't understand why people aren't rushing to get to a lovely little community like Eads in southeastern Colorado.

"Peace of mind and clean air and all those things ought to be worth something," said Gulley, president of the First National Bank of Eads. "Half the people here don't even lock the door when they go out for the evening. A broken window is a major crime."

With all of that to offer and more — a movie theater, a golf course and a bowling alley, not to mention a community college 35 miles away in Lamar — Gulley can't figure out why the town is having so much difficulty in trying to locate a nurse.

Gulley, who also is chairman of the Weisbrod Hospital Board of Directors, said the community has been looking for a nurse for several months without success. The situation has reached the stage, Gulley said, where the hospital has decided to offer a $100 finders' fee for anyone who can locate a nurse who will move to the city.

Gulley said that really shouldn't be very difficult, considering everything this agricultural community of 1,000 residents has to offer.

"The nurse that is hired will receive $1,000 a month and all of the benefits that come from living in a small town. If the nurse is a woman and has a husband, the town will even help find him a job."

The town already has two nurses for the Weisbrod Hospital, but the facility needs a "minimum of three." The hospital has been using "pool" nurses from throughout the state, but wants a full-time local nurse.

Gulley said the hospital will pay half the travel expenses of a licensed practical or registered nurse, or a medical laboratory technician, if he or she will come to Eads for an interview. If the person is accepted and decides to stay, the hospital will pay the entire cost of the trip. All moving expenses also will be paid.

Gulley said anyone interested should write to the administrator at the Weisbrod Hospital in Eads. He said the administrator's last name is Laughridge and he thinks the man's first name is Rex, although everybody in town calls him Rusty.

That's just another example of the way things are in Eads — nice and friendly, Gulley said.

Zambian Rail Crisis
LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) — Chinese technicians are back in Zambia to train new railway personnel, replacing those who were arrested for stealing railway cargo.

Zambia, desperately in need of foreign exchange, needs to revamp its 1,600-mile, Chinese-built railroad linking Zambia and Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. Less than 50 percent of rail trucks and only eight locomotives are servicable to haul Zambia's vital copper exports to the Tanzania port on the Indian Ocean.

International Monetary Fund experts studying Zambia's shaky economy suggest a new railroad be built, to neighboring Malawi, for a connection with the Mozambique port of Nacala, to unblock the vast copper export backlog which costs the country millions of dollars.

To Help Trade Unions
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The black Zulu movement Inkatha, with a membership of more than 500,000, wants to help black trade unions get a better deal from employers.

The move means that employers who don't recognize black unions could face boycotts from black consumers.

Inkatha will work with existing unions to ensure compliance with employment codes. Firms whose products do not depend on the black market, thus avoiding possible reprisal boycotts, will be reported to overseas trade unions, employer organizations and governments.

Colleagues Note Byrd's Leadership Efficiency

By STEVE GERSTEL
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the Senate, they like to call Democratic Leader Robert Byrd the man "who makes the trains run on time" — a description that fits him well.

Although respect for the West Virginian's ability as a well-rounded leader who knows what it takes to move the legislative program grows almost daily, it was not the way his reputation was made.

Byrd climbed to the top of the leadership ladder as a hard-working technician with a gift for bringing some order into the chaos which served as the normal operating procedure in the Senate.

As the whip for former Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield, Byrd, without ever seeming to tire or grow bored, carried out the menial tasks that are part of the leadership's duties.

His two immediate predecessors, Russell B. Long, D-La., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., couldn't have cared less for that kind of work.

When Byrd assumed the post of leader, he continued to carry much of the same load — scheduling speeches, getting time agreements and so forth — in addition to becoming a major figure in almost all large and controversial issues.

But a new impediment to making the "trains run on time" has arisen within the last two years, which is making life unpleasant for the engineer and could make the Senate run late as any railroad in the country.

In recent weeks, Byrd has run into two examples of railroad derailment. More can be expected.

The first came when Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, took control of the Senate late one afternoon and shocked his colleagues by announcing that he would stage an all-night filibuster.

The filibuster was against a bill which would declare 120 million acres of Alaska as wilderness and recreation areas which Gravel violently opposes. The only trouble with the filibuster — in Byrd's eyes — was that the bill was not even out of committee and might not be called up before adjournment.

Although Byrd pointed out these flaws, Gravel was hard to convince. He didn't go all night, but he did keep the Senate in session past 10 p.m. and, in the process, delayed action on other legislation.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., — who called his brand of filibustering "guerrilla" warfare — decided one day last week to publicize his opposition to a compromise bill which would deregulate the price of natural gas.

The method he chose was to delay the Senate — not by talking at length — but by slowing down proceedings so that a bill providing federal help for the aged was delayed for hours.

As Byrd himself said, "any senator can make any use of the rules" which is all Gravel and Abourezk did.

But there is no question that the one-man filibusters and delaying tactics when the bill in question is not under consideration are irking Byrd and Byrd's penchant for keeping the Senate moving.

In fact, Byrd was so irritated by Abourezk that he threatened night sessions, Saturday sessions and post-election sessions "as the price that's got to be paid for the kind of intertemporal practice that we saw around here yesterday."

Byrd is no stranger to filibusters. He once spoke all night against a civil rights bill.

And he knows how to handle one of the old-time, traditional talk-a-thons. If he can't get cloture, he takes the bill down.

But he has yet to find a way to deal with the Gravel-Abourezk tactics. Until he does, Byrd cannot make the Senate "trains run on time."

The betting is that he will fashion some new rules for consideration by the Senate when it convenes in January. And if enough senators are upset by the delaying tactics of a few rebels, the filibuster rule might undergo still another change.

Case Of Missing Street Solved

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The mystery of the stolen street has been solved.

The street — actually, its cobblestones — turned up in Livingston, South Orange and Florham Park, and warrants were issued Monday for two South Orange men, police said.

About 50,000 cobblestones were ripped from Jeliff Avenue a week ago as residents looked on, believing the workers were city employees.

"We know where the stones are," said Police Director Hubert Williams. "We know who has them."

But the stones may never be returned to Jeliff Avenue — it might be cheaper to resurface the street with asphalt.

Pension 'Gravy Train' Spurs Spurious Retirings

By SUSAN GARLAND
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Early this year Washington's police chief, fire chief and assistant police chief all reported physical setbacks and all quickly retired with hefty, tax-free disability pensions.

Not only are the District of Columbia's disability pensions substantial — about two-thirds of salary — and tax free, they are also increased automatically to match increases in the cost of living.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., saw more than coincidence in the retirements of Police Chief Maurice J. Cullinane, Deputy Police Chief Tilton O'Bryant and Fire Chief Burton Johnson.

The retirements raised "the question of whether they are simply trying to get on the gravy train before Congress acts to correct the obvious abuses," Eagleton said.

Eagleton's subcommittee on governmental efficiency and the District of Columbia is considering legislation to eliminate abuses in an incredibly lucrative pension plan blamed by most on Congress itself.

Some of the figures:
—In 1969, 92 percent of the city's policemen and 99 percent of the firemen who retired took disability pensions.
—During fiscal 1975 the percentage for both groups combined declined to 83 percent, far higher than any comparable city in the nation, according to testimony before a subcommittee headed by Eagleton.

In Denver during the same period, 56 percent of the policemen and 65 percent of the firemen took disability pensions; in Seattle 27 percent and 71 percent; in St. Louis 22 percent and 44 percent. In Baltimore the combined total was 57 percent.

In supposedly profligate New York City 15 percent of the policemen and only 3 percent of the firemen retiring took disability pensions.

—Although the D.C. percentage declined last year to 52 percent for police and 62 percent for firemen, there were still more retiring on medical disability than on service credit.

In the District most disability pensions are at two-thirds salary with no adjustment for the degree of impairment. A veteran of five years as a policeman or fireman can get no less than 40 percent of his salary — tax-free.

Many disability pensions are given not only for job-related injuries but also for the aggravation of injuries received when they are not working.

In comparison, those taking regular pensions after 20 years of service receive half their salaries, but the income is taxable. Although efforts are made to find abuses, there has been little effort to provide lesser duties to officers with temporary or limited disabilities or to return recovered officers to work in some capacity.

There's another difference between the District's pension program and that of other cities — the system was created by Congress and paid for by the federal government. Congress is now bailing it out.

"If there is a ripoff in the pension systems, Congress has ripped itself off," said Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., a sponsor of a bill to revamp the D.C. pension system.

The District of Columbia had no control over its own affairs until Congress granted limited home rule in 1974, but even then Congress retained line by line control of its budget, a power it has exercised in some areas.

Mathias and Eagleton made it clear at congressional hearings they think the federal government has a responsibility to assume much of the burden of the pension system in any legislation approved. Eagleton said that since the federal government created the pension system, it should assume the burden of paying for the pensions of those who retired before home rule.

The reform legislation has been approved by the House and is before the Senate after passage by the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs.

But on July 13, the House Appropriations Committee used its power of the purse with hopes of spurring the city to take some immediate action.

It slashed $10 million from the city's disability retirement fund and told city officials to block or revoke pensions of police and firefighters who are able to perform at least limited duty.

Rep. William H. Natcher, D-Ky., chairman of the committee's panel on the D.C. budget, told the city to "stop this racket."

Hadley Roff, staff director of Eagleton's subcommittee, said the House committee action "certainly emphasizes congressional concern about the high cost of the programs."

But Roff said pending legislation, which he feels confident of passing, deals with the long-term administrative problems of city pensions and that budget cuts would not deal with the basic problems.

The attractiveness of the D.C. pension plan was emphasized, and the interest of congressional critics renewed, by the retirements of Cullinane, O'Bryant and Johnson.

Police investigators looking for abuses have found former officers, who retired on disability, working strenuous jobs. Some are truck drivers, or laborers, or carpenters, or security guards.

The investigations were made by a special unit set up in 1976 in the police department's internal affairs division as a response to widespread publicity of pension system abuses. Some cases are not clearcut.

Oversupply Of Doctors Anticipated By 1985

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (UPI)—Medical authorities project an oversupply of doctors by 1985, which they say could cause already crowded and hard-pressed medical schools to face a sharp cutback in federal aid.

Dr. James E. Lewis, dean of the University of Oklahoma's Tulsa Medical College, made the projections at a seminar sponsored by the Richmond-based Health Care Management Institute.

"It is relatively easy to manage institutions in a time of growth compared to managing them in a time of stability or decline," Lewis said.

Lewis told participants at the three-day health care seminar that medical schools would take most of the blame for the doctor surplus even though society had demanded a greater number of doctors.

"It was felt at the time that we needed facilities to turn out an additional 50,000 physicians a year," Lewis said.

Studies by medical consultants project the number of doctors in the U.S. to increase by 24 percent by 1985, according to a summary of the Williamsburg seminar.

Lewis said an overall increase in the number of doctors has done little to ease a health care crisis in rural areas, where more physicians are badly needed, or slow the rate of growth in medical bills.

"That's because the payment mechanism for physicians rewards them with high fees even where there's a high concentration of practitioners," he said.

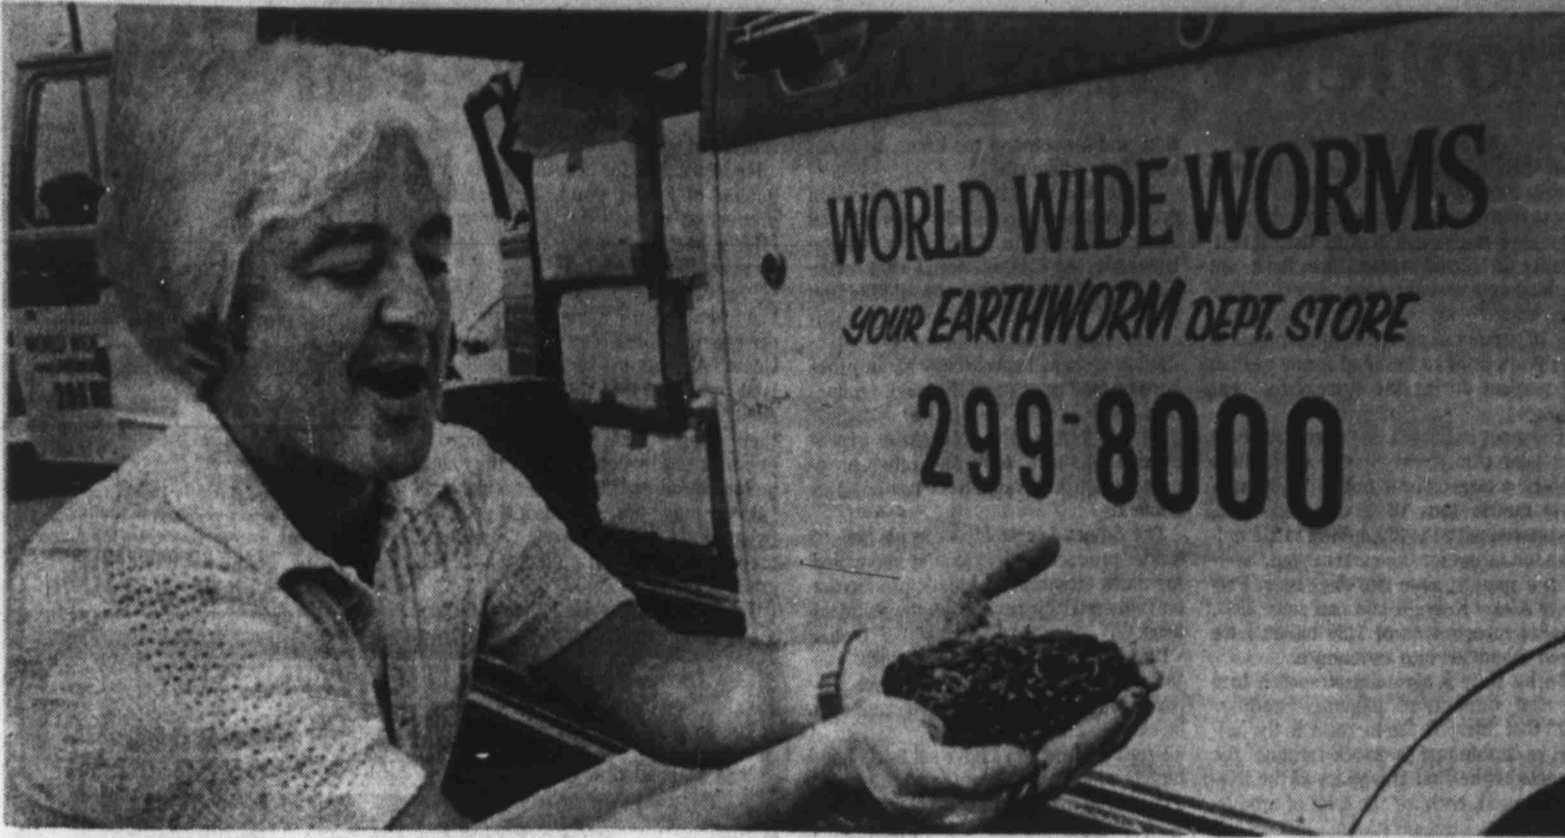

"There's no real financial incentive for doctors to move into small towns and the professional isolation and lack of amenities for families further discourage physicians from locating in these areas."

"The federal government seems always to oscillate from one extreme to the other, either overfunding and overstimulating or suddenly cutting way back," Lewis said.

Dr. Genaro J. Vasile, administrator of the Medical College of Virginia, said if federal aid is cut back there probably will be less money for research grants.

"And there will be more strings attached to what federal money is available," Vasile said.

"There is already a drying up of traditional sources of health sciences funding from federal, state and local sources, as well as decreased private contributions from individual foundations," Vasile said.

Soviet Farming Below Targets

By SONJA HILLGREN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A monthly publication monitoring Soviet issues reports that Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev said early this month that investments in Soviet agriculture have not yielded anticipated results.

Brezhnev said agriculture accounted for 20 percent of all Soviet investments in the years prior to 1965 and for more than 27 percent during the current five-year plan.

Brezhnev indicated that during the next five-year plan, from 1981 to 1985, there will be a target of 238 million to 243 million metric tons of grain production, compared with the 210 million to 215 million ton target for the current plan.

In a speech made two days later, Premier Alexei Kosygin said that since 1965, capital investments of $130 billion have been channeled into agriculture.

In his July 3 agricultural speech to a Central Committee plenum, Brezhnev said that "despite the increase in the output of arable and livestock farming, the targets of the first two years of the five-year period, both for the total of production, and for some of the items, have not been fully achieved."

Soviet World Outlook, a publication prepared by Advanced International Studies Institute in Washington and the University of Miami, noted that twice during the speech, Brezhnev said that agricultural returns were "not yet sufficient compared with investment."

He complained specifically about problems of feed grains and livestock production.

He said that in spite of increases in production of meat, milk and other products, livestock development has not met demands.

The Soviet leader also complained of fodder production deficiencies and called for more attention to fodder production on individual farms and at the national level.

Last year's Soviet grain harvest was 195.5 million tons. The Agriculture Department predicts this year's harvest will be close to 215 million tons.

Brezhnev said, "We have set fairly high targets which would require assurance of a growth in the material and technical resources of agriculture."

He also called for improvements in the quality of Soviet grain, for large-scale production of soybeans and for greater efforts to fatten cattle before sending them to market.

The commitment to fatten livestock has prompted the Soviets to buy American grains. After a May visit to the Soviet Union, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland predicted that they could not raise enough wheat and feed grains to feed their people and continue stepped-up livestock production. He said they could be forced to buy U.S. grains regularly.

So far this year, the second year of a five-year U.S.-Soviet grain agreement, they have bought 14.1 million tons of U.S. grain.

Brezhnev acknowledged that interfarm cooperation and greater specialization, which have been mentioned as means to solve problems of Soviet agriculture, have run into difficulties.

He said that "prices of some kinds of products still fail to cover the outlays of collective farms and state farms," adding that "the growth rate of production slows down, and at some places for this reason attempts are being made to curtail it."

Smoking Women Risk Hurting Unborn Children

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
WASHINGTON (AP) — Women who smoke face the same health risks as men, and also run a greater risk than nonsmokers of giving birth to stillborn or unhealthy babies, the government reported today.

In its 10th report to Congress on smoking and health, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare also said smokers can reduce their risk of dying from cigarette-related diseases if they smoke low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes instead of brands with relatively high nicotine and tar content.

Women who take birth-control pills substantially increase their risk of suffering a heart attack or other cardiovascular ailment if they smoke, the report said.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. released the report at a Washington conference that has brought many traditional enemies in the health care field together to discuss preventive health care.

He received sustained applause when he announced he is sending a new smoking study to the Civil Aeronautics Board and urging it to ban all smoking on commercial aircraft.

The study Califano cited showed that non-smokers who suffer from recurring chest pain due to heart disease are more likely to experience angina attacks after exercise if they are exposed to the "sidestream smoke" of other smokers.

The report to Congress summarized recent findings of studies involving women who smoke and the special risks they take.

It said pregnant women who smoke cigarettes significantly increase the risk that their babies will be born dead, prematurely, dangerously small or will die during their first year.

The more a woman smokes the more likely her baby is to suffer the consequences, the report said.

It cited other studies showing that nicotine is present in the breast milk of mothers who smoke and may cause nausea, vomiting, diarrhea and rapid heartbeat in their babies. Another study said smoking can increase throumt of DDT pesticide in mother's milk.

In a report on mortality rates for cigarette smokers, HEW said those who smoke cigarettes with less than 17.6 milligrams of tar and less than 1.2 milligrams of nicotine reduce their overall risk of dying by about 15 percent when compared to those who smoke cigarettes with 25.8 to 35.7 milligrams of tar and 2 to 2.7 milligrams of nicotine.

But smokers of low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes still have mortality rates 50 percent higher than non-smokers, the report said.

Smokers who quit reduce their risk of dying each year they stay off cigarettes until, after 15 years, their death rates nearly equal those of non-smokers, the report said.

The Tobacco Institute, a trade association, called the report "a classic of bias and omission while deftly crafted to support Mr. Califano's personal views about tobacco."

In a statement, the institute said: "To the extent that this new report completely ignores published scientific criticism of the major studies on which it is based, including the insurmountable problems of non-response, selectivity and inadequate sampling, it is faithless and of no service at all in the public interest."

"It is paradoxical indeed to hear that tobacco smoking by women accounts for their problems of illness and pregnancy at a time when their longevity is highest and infant mortality rates lowest."

China, U.S. May Agree On Relations By Spring

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Though there is no official timetable, the administration hopes to negotiate an agreement by next spring for establishing full diplomatic relations with China.

The agreement almost certainly would entail the United States breaking diplomatic ties with Taiwan and abrogating the 1954 mutual defense treaty.

That probability already has caused deep distress in Taiwan. It could also spark a bitter political debate in the United States.

In advance of the administration's expected move, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. Dick Stone, D-Fla., have readied an amendment they plan to unveil this week calling on Carter to consult Congress before any action is taken to rescind the defense treaty or to break ties with Nationalist China.

bill expected to come before the Senate soon.

A hint of the administration's hopes for early completion of diplomatic relations with Peking came in a recent statement by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., on U.S.-China relations.

"I believe that the president can and should establish full diplomatic relations with Peking as soon as possible," Kennedy said. "To do so, the administration should engage in serious negotiations over the next few months, followed by necessary consultations with and action by the Congress."

An aide told UPI that Kennedy had consulted closely with administration officials before making his statement and found they shared his hopes for diplomatic relations with Peking by spring.

The aide said the period between the November midterm elections and March 1979 was a "political window" during which the move could most easily be achieved from the point of view of domestic politics.

Peking has set three conditions for establishing full diplomatic relations with the United States:

—The United States must break diplomatic ties with Taiwan and recognize the People's Republic of China as the legitimate government of China.

—The mutual defense treaty between the United States and Taiwan must be rescinded.

—The United States must withdraw its remaining 1,000 troops from Taiwan.

Last month Carter disclosed at an off-the-record session of the Trilateral Commission that he has three counter-proposals:

—The United States will insist on continuing its economic, cultural and military supply relationship with Taiwan even if it breaks formal diplomatic and military ties.

—An U.S. trade office must remain on Taiwan.

—The United States will continue to take a keen interest in the security of Taiwan and the peaceful resolution of the Taiwan problem.

Officials insist there is no formal timetable for completing diplomatic relations with Peking, largely because President Carter has not yet decided to make an all-out push on the issue.

But such specialists as Michael Oksenberg of the National Security Council and Richard Holbrooke, assistant secretary of state for Asian affairs, are anxious to keep up the momentum for improving U.S.-China relations.

Thus, the prospect now is for quiet negotiations with the Chinese.

These may be carried out largely by Leonard Woodcock, head of the U.S. Liaison Office in Peking with his opposite numbers in the Chinese Foreign Ministry, according to State Department sources.

When negotiations are complete, a high Chinese official may come to the United States to sign the final documents and issue a joint communique.

No high level Chinese official has visited the United States, although U.S. secretaries of state and presidential advisers on national security affairs frequently have visited Peking.

Negotiations with Peking are likely to be long and hard as the United States strives to maintain the substance of its current relations with Taiwan under a new guise.

The United States is insisting on maintaining some channel of governmental communications with Taiwan even after it breaks diplomatic relations, State Department sources say.

A formula being discussed is one in which the United States would retain its trade office in Taiwan run by the Department of Commerce. Foreign service officials might be assigned to the trade office to facilitate communications.

But an equally difficult problem is the domestic political reaction to "denormalizing" Taiwan — a faithful U.S. ally in the Far East.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a fervent supporter of Taiwan, has threatened to move to impeach any president who would break the mutual defense treaty without a congressional vote.

Another problem is that the mutual defense treaty with Taiwan calls for one year notice before abrogation.

If the administration recognizes Peking and then insists such action automatically nullifies the defense treaty, conservative legislators may charge the White House with disregarding due process. (Next: Taiwan: Determined to survive)

Modification Of Weather Progresses

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — People have wanted to do something about the weather as far back as recorded history goes. They've used prayer, sacrifice, wizardry, chanting, dancing and monuments to try to influence whatever brought the wind and rain.

But the ambition to change the weather remained largely the domain of the mystic until the past 100 years or so.

According to a recent report by the government's new Weather Modification Advisory Board, observations of increased rain after Civil War battles led to abortive experiments with firing cannon volleys into clouds to bring rain.

The first workable theory on how nature produces rain was developed early in this century by European scientists. They said the formation of a few ice crystals in a cloud of water droplets would accumulate moisture and grow in size until they fell as precipitation. On their way to the ground, they often would melt and arrive as rain.

Science Today

On Nov. 16, 1946, Vincent Schaefer of the General Electric Research Laboratories put that theory to test. He dropped some pellets of dry ice from an airplane into a thick bank of clouds over Massachusetts and a few minutes later observed streaks of snow coming out of the base of the clouds.

This is considered the beginning of real weather modification and formed the basis for cloud seeding, the technique that is the foundation of most weather modification attempts today. Silver iodide crystals, similar in structure to ice, are used as seeds upon which ice can accumulate.

Commercial rainmakers appeared almost overnight, but despite their inflated claims, it soon became apparent that the physics of the atmosphere was far more complex than believed. It was virtually impossible to prove that cloud seeding was working.

And the new advisory board report says that cloud seeding technology is still in its infancy.

But the board said it is persuaded that a usable technology for enhancing rain and snow by seeding certain types of clouds is "scientifically possible and within sight."

Although there is no consensus among the experts on what can be done or when, the board said the most knowledgeable believe a stepped up effort could lead to cloud seeding that would increase mountain snowpack in the West in the early 1980s, increase rain in the High Plains and Midwest by the late 1990s, and reduce hail and moderate hurricanes by the 1990s.

The report said rain and snow probably can be increased by 10 to 30 percent, hail losses cut by 30 to 60 percent under favorable conditions and hurricane winds cut by 10 to 20 percent.

Scientific breakthroughs might well increase the numbers and shorten the times but a "starvation diet" for research and development might lengthen the waiting period and curtail the benefits, the board said.

"Like most of man's interventions in nature, efforts to make the weather serve human purposes are likely at best to operate at the margin and then only if modification is undertaken after the benefits of the particular interventions are carefully weighed against costs to the beneficiaries and damages to others."

Five Solons Seek Trade Surcharges

WASHINGTON (AP) — If five House members had their way, the United States would be imposing a temporary surcharge on Japanese exports to this country.

The lawmakers, members of a House trade subcommittee, said Japanese officials have been asked to voluntarily increase the volume of U.S. goods to Japan and to reduce the current trade imbalance. The five said in a letter to President Carter that the requests apparently were not taken seriously. Signing the letter were Reps. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio; James R. Jones, D-Okla.; William Steiger, R-Wis.; Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Bill French, R-Minn.

Carter Shifting On Tax Ideas

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — Back when Candidate Carter was campaigning for a top-to-bottom overhaul of the federal tax code, his program was short of specifics except for one clear target.

He wanted to do away with the tax break for capital gains, the income derived from the sale of stock, real estate and other assets. But Congress has other ideas. Now President Carter does, too.

"We have spelled out our position very clearly," he said the other day. "I am not opposed to capital gains reductions as such."

Clarity never has been the Carter trademark on the tax issue. During his long campaign, he fended off questions about the specifics of what he said would be a total revision of the tax laws, saying he would need time in office to study the questions involved and put together a complete package.

But he did say from the beginning that all income should be taxed alike. "One provision would be to tax capital income and earned income the same way," he said as a candidate.

He tried to move in that direction in his tax proposal early this year, seeking an increase of about $140 million in capital gains taxes.

Analysis

But Congress is headed in the opposite direction, and the House Ways and Means Committee has approved a bill that would reduce capital gains taxes by about $1.3 billion.

Carter said he would not accept a tax bill that would undo the minimum tax on sheltered income in the process of lowering the capital gains rate.

"I think that is an unfair approach and it is unacceptable to me," he said. "Other modifications in capital gains rates would be acceptable to us."

But the modification obviously is going to be downward, not up, as he wanted it to be in the first place.

Carter said he is "flexible enough." It is flexibility with a purpose: to get the best deal possible out of Congress.

That certainly represents a change in tone from the position Carter took on June 26, when he said the capital gains tax provision pending then would be a step backward, away from the reforms he wanted, and threatened a veto.

His position now is that he will look at the final product, sign it if it is in the best interest of the nation, and veto it if not.

Whatever he gets, it will not come close to the proposals he sent Congress early this year, let alone the terms he outlined during the campaign.

"It is time for a complete overhaul of our income tax system..." he said then. "It is a disgrace to the human race. All my life I have heard promises about tax reform, but it never quite happens. With your help, we are finally going to make it happen. And you can depend on it."

There is nothing mysterious about the transition from that point to this. Carter is not the first president to seek more than he could get, or to get provisions he does not want as part of bills he does want.

Part of his problem, and not only on taxes, may be that the changes from one point to the next come abruptly. It is not that Carter has not tried to keep campaign commitments on issues like tax revision but, rather, that there has been no attempt to explain why he can't when he can't.

Doctors Isolate Gene

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors say the first application of a technique for isolating human genes allowed them to diagnose a rare blood disease in a fetus and pointed the way to what may be a method for determining a host of other health problems in unborn babies.

The doctors said the technique permitted them to isolate a single missing gene among the thousands in a single human cell, and demonstrated the presence of a type of generally mild thalassemia, a blood disease, in the fetus of a Turkish woman.

But, they said, the method also can be used to detect the presence of a fatal form of thalassemia, and may eventually be adapted to finding other, more common birth defects such as cystic fibrosis and sickle cell anemia.

The work, reported to be the first such isolation of a human gene, was done by a group of doctors and scientists headed by Dr. Stuart Orkin of Harvard and reported in this week's New England Medical Journal.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Arthur W. Neimnis predicted that the techniques used by Orkin's group signal "an impending explosion of knowledge in molecular genetics."

Previously, diagnosis of blood diseases required drawing blood from the fetus, a demanding and often dangerous technique that could only be done after the fetus was well along in its development.

With the new method, the doctors predicted that parents who risk transmission of a fatal blood disease would elect prenatal detection to "avoid the psychological trauma and potential toxemia associated with carrying an affected fetus to term."

Thalassemia is fatal when the accidental omission of a gene prevents the victim from producing hemoglobin, the protein that carries oxygen from the lungs to tissues.

In detecting thalassemia in the fetus of the Turkish woman, doctors used a long needle to withdraw cells from the amniotic fluid surrounding the fetus so they could isolate the genes that code for hemoglobin.

Once located through a process involving X-rays, the genes were placed on a jelly-like substance and exposed to electric current producing a graph showing different bands, each representing single genes. One of the genes that codes for part of hemoglobin was missing, meaning that the unborn baby was without that gene.

Colorado Town Invaded By Stink Bugs

NEW CASTLE, Colo. (UPI) — Stink bugs have diminished in numbers, but Garfield County residents are concerned about the legacy the insects may have left.

Named for the distinct aroma they emit when crushed, the orange and black bugs moved into the Western Slope community in droves earlier this month.

"We were hit the worst. They were so thick marching down the street, it looked like a whole sidewalk was moving," said Barbara Ferris.

She described a neighbor's house as covered so thickly with the bugs that the structure's white color was hidden.

However, the numbers have diminished due to spraying efforts and residents are replanting damaged vegetable gardens and replenishing flower beds. But Ray Cogburn, county extension agent, said the worst may be ahead.

"We don't know how often they go through an egg-laying cycle. Our spraying has left graveyards of dead bugs, but they just seem to multiply faster. We've seen a couple of generation increases already," he said.

And the two-toned stink bug has a green cousin that prefers grain to gardens, Cogburn said, and the unwelcome relative has been seen in area fields.

"The green bugs don't eat, they suck the juice which makes the barley kernel fall off," said rancher Eric Williams.

Individual Negligence Costs Public, Expert Says

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — What is the public's responsibility to individuals who fail to protect themselves?
 Homeowners in the northern New Jersey town of Plainfield suffered heavy flood-damage in early August 1973, much of it uninsured.
 Following the destruction, there was a rush to buy protection. Of 329 flood policies sold during the entire year, 220 of the purchases came in August and September, right after the flood.
 Wherever you go the pattern is repeated. "When it comes to locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen, human beings are without peer," says Howard Kunreuther, concerned but not surprised observer.
 Kunreuther worries not just for the property owners who suffer losses, but for the public which, he says, is bearing more and more of the bill for the negligence of individual property owners.

"Between 1966 and 1976 the Small Business Administration made 19 times as many disaster loans (worth 11 times as many dollars) as it did during the preceding 12-year period," he reports.
 That money came from taxes, Kunreuther points out. That is, the public was asked to share the individual's loss, even though the individual in many instances had the wherewithal to protect himself — and did not.
 As chairman of the University of Pennsylvania's Department of Decision Sciences, Kunreuther has observed procrastination often, and not just in regard to earthquake, flood or other disaster insurance.
 "We cannot continue to assume that human beings are — or can easily be turned into — that phantom we traditionally have called a 'rational' decision maker," he wrote recently for The Wharton Magazine.
 Through 3,000 interviews, the professor and his staff sought to learn why homeowners in susceptible areas spend hundreds of dollars on fire insurance, but decline protection against other potential disasters.

 "Basically," he found "it is not the magnitude of the potential loss that inspires people to buy insurance voluntarily — it is the frequency with which a loss (no matter what size) is likely to occur."
 These frequent losses might be minor, and financially manageable for the policyholder without insurance. But the owner insures. Meanwhile, the less likely but disastrous event is not covered.
 This, suggests Kunreuther, is illogical. "Standard models of rational economic behavior would predict just the opposite choice," he said. Rational or not, tests show it is the way people act and react.

 Even with heavily subsidized premiums under the National Flood Insurance Program, people have declined to buy, Kunreuther states, and he cites the Rapid City flood as evidence.
 When that South Dakota city was ravaged in June 1972 by water pouring from storms in the Black Hills, only 29 policies were in force, although the city had qualified under the national plan a year earlier.

 In California, where some 550,000 wood frame dwellings can be almost fully insured for about $100 a year, relatively few homeowners are protected. Even following earthquakes, says Kunreuther, sales lag.
 Kunreuther's concern is not only about the burden imposed on the public by the individual's reluctance to part with the price of an insurance premium. The ramifications go beyond disaster insurance, he says.
 "For example, how can we design a meaningful health insurance program that will not cost the government billions of dollars? How can we persuade individuals to adopt preventive health care measures?
 "How can we deal with crime prevention by convincing individuals to adopt protective measures? What measures are likely to be most effective in increasing seat belt usage?"

 Good questions. We know the explanation — that human beings are contrary, failing to take care of themselves, especially if they feel the consequences of their negligence will be borne by the public.
 Now we need good answers to the questions.
Study Cites Increase In Poverty
By HENRIETTA LEITH
NEW YORK (AP) — Unseen participants in the wild night of looting during New York City's 1977 blackout were poverty and unemployment — and the poverty is spreading, according to a new Ford Foundation study.
 The events of that hot, muggy July 13 night "give a sneak preview of economic and social changes" in the city that would otherwise not have shown up for years, said the study.
 "What the brief picture showed of the deterioration in neighborhoods and general proliferation of poverty throughout the boroughs was alarming indeed," the report, compiled by Robert Curwin and Bruce Porter with foundation support, noted.
 "The proliferation of poor people throughout New York City... has spread with such wind-like speed that the concept of a 'ghetto' — wherein the poor are contained by geographic boundaries — may indeed be obsolete.
 "It would be easier to say where they are not, rather than where they are."
 The authors said patterns of looting showed, as was expected, that traditionally poor neighborhoods with high crime rates — such as Harlem, Bedford-Stuyvesant and the South Bronx — were hard hit.
 The report noted that 58 percent of the 473 stores looted in the Bronx were north of the Cross Bronx Expressway, often regarded as the border of the poor, crime-ridden South Bronx area.
 "The biggest surprise that night, though, came in Manhattan where of the 348 stores looted, 44 percent were outside the traditional ghetto neighborhoods of Harlem, East Harlem and the Lower East Side," the report noted.
 "On the West Side, from the 40s to 110th Street, 57 stores were hit, more than in any other section."
 The authors expressed the opinion that the looting's "fundamental source was the poverty and growing hardship in old ghettos and new neighborhoods of the city's poor."
 A separate study cited by the report shows that several of the city's transitional neighborhoods have absorbed large numbers of minorities and experienced sharp rises in crime in the last decade.
 "The object (of the looting) was to obtain goods either of immediate value or which could be easily sold for cash. It is important to note that one-third of the looted stores were those that sold food and clothing," the report said.
 The report said that as in other affected neighborhoods, looting on the upper West Side "tended to be initiated by criminally oriented street people, then joined by thousands of normally law-abiding poor people."
 "The only supermarket to be heavily looted on the upper West Side... is opposite the Regent Hotel at 104th Street, which is a large, temporary residence for 'burn-outs' — welfare families, mostly women and children, who have been burned out of their apartments elsewhere in the city and are waiting to find other places to live," the report said.
 The report also analyzed such post-blackout reports as that by Brooklyn District Attorney Eugene Gold which left the impression that many of the looters had full-time jobs at good pay.
 Actually, the report said, investigation showed that the more than 3,000 persons arrested for looting had a high rate of unemployment.
 One defendant listed as a $125 printer, actually was an $88-a-week trainee. Another supposedly earning $150 a week by making bedsprings never made that wage except with overtime — and sometimes made as low as $66 a week. He is now unemployed, the report added.
 The misleading reports resulted partly from efforts of defendants to get bail by proving community ties, the authors said.

Intercity Truck Tonnage On Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Trucking Association says intercity truck tonnage handled through terminals in 35 metropolitan areas throughout the country in the week ending July 22 was 8.7 percent above the preceding week.
 The association said 20 of the metropolitan areas reported an increase, while 15 reported decreases.

Congress Reduces Jet Test Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House conferees have agreed to spend about half of what the Carter administration sought in order to test the suitability of using civilian jumbo jets to carry and launch cruise missiles.
 The conferees agreed on Monday to authorize $20.6 million for the test program. The Senate had approved the full $41.2 million sought by Carter, but the House said the jets would be too vulnerable to Soviet missiles, and that the program was too costly.

Trolley Car Buffs Operate Museum

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press Writer

BRANFORD, Conn. — If you willingly consort with people who admit to being slightly off their trolleys over old trolley cars, you have to expect to get some axle grease on your double knits.

Trolley buffs like Tosh Shade take you down into the pit to inspect the double truck nether side of old No. 948, a gleaming green beauty of a streetcar built in 1926 to carry paying passengers through Atlanta for the Georgia Power Company.

"We found her in Senoia, Ga., where she had ended up her days as a chicken coop," said Shade, who is chairman of the board of the Branford Electric Railway Association, a non-profit historical museum that runs 93 restored cars over 3 miles of authentic surviving track. "To re-do the air brakes we had to send off for photographs to Seoul, Korea, where 50 cars like this were sold in 1948."

Meanwhile motorman Ed Watson, a retired architect from Manhattan, opened up the throttle on No. 1414, a lovely yellow enameled open car, and headed out over the trestle across the East Haven River to the picnic grove. The 75 passengers on the wooden benches enjoyed the breeze off the salt marshes, just like back in 1911 when she entered service for the Connecticut Railway Company. Right here, on the same run, except the tracks went for 17 miles then.

Conductor Bob Brown, on vacation from his regular job as senior communications engineer for Conrail in Philadelphia, moved precariously along the running board punching tickets. Times had changed in his department, however. Folks now were anxious to have their ticket punched so they could retain the stub as a souvenir of their visit to the trolley museum.

"Open cars vanished from America's street railway systems in the early '30s," sighed car starter Lou Iasillo, a church organist and music teacher from Cliffside Park, N.J., "because too many customers jumped off without paying and the conductors could use that as an excuse for shortchanging the company. But cars like this one ran through New Haven up until 1954 because the Connecticut line kept 100 open cars to run football crowds out to the Yale Bowl. On big weekends like the Harvard game, the cars would be decorated with pennants and bunting and the fans would be hanging from the roof."

An unpaid volunteer like all the others at the museum, Iasillo is such a trolley buff he never has learned to drive an auto — "that foul smelling menace to society" — and blames the demise of the streetcar on "a conspiracy cooked up by the big automotive interests to promote Detroit's obnoxious products."

Trolley buffs come in all ages. Bob Paradise, age 14, has "found true paradise" working around the barns and helping restore new acquisitions like the Toronto trolley that has a pot bellied stove but can be converted to an open car in summer. In Bob's mind, the thought that in 1913, when this car was built, you could go from New York City to Sheboygan, Wis., by streetcar, if you were patient and willing to transfer, seems a wilder concept than anything in "Star Wars."

Guide Linda Beach, 19 and studying to be a nurse at Bridgeport University, loves showing visitors No. 61, "the oldest electric streetcar in captivity," which ran along Butler Avenue in Providence back in 1893, and No. 500, the green plus velvet parlor car with the inlaid oak woodwork, level edged mirrors and ornate scrollwork that was the show piece of the line for the Connecticut Co. and the president's private car back in the era when having a toilet aboard your own trolley was considered more opulent than owning a yacht.

Linda, who has soloed at the controls of a trolley is one of the few kids on campus anywhere who knows that a "clerestory" is the raised glass-in part of a streetcar's roof and that "Ding, ding, ding went the trolley" has got to be wrong, no matter what the Trolley Song says.

Three bells, anywhere in the world of trolleys, signal an emergency. "One to stop, two to go, three for emergency, four to back up, that's the bell signals in use everywhere, even now," says motorman-architect Ed Watson, yanking down the pulley at the end of the line and advising the folks to turn their seats in the other direction for the ride out to the cemetery. A real one, of course.

"Streetcar lines always ran out to the cemetery," pointed out Iasillo. "Many of them had ornate funeral cars. They also delivered mail, milk, produce, some even had sprinkler cars to water the town flowers. Duluth, Minnesota, had a fire car to aid the fire department in a section of the city with narrow streets."

Most of the old cars still wear their old display ads over the lacquered rattan seats: "Fels Naptha Soap," "Burnett's Vanilla," "Arrow Shirts: $1.50," "Lux...10 cents a Box... Won't Make Shirtwaists Yellow" and an incredible array of laxatives, purgatives, emetics and expectorants. As James Thurber said of his own streetcar riding days in Columbus, Ohio, "Americans have ever been a bowel-fearful people."

For someone like me, who always got "car sick" in the lurching trolley ride out to Dreamland or Olympic Park (all streetcar companies built their own amusement parks to increase revenue) on the outskirts of Newark, N.J., consorting with the trolley buffs, grease and all, was like returning to a simpler less hurried America when people hopped on the open car and sometimes even willingly paid just to catch the cooling breezes on a warm summer night.

Booth Tarkington in "The Magnificent Ambersons" paid the noble trolley its noblest compliment: "The car was genially accommodating: a lady could whistle to it from an upstairs window, and the car would halt at once and wait for her while she shut the window, put on her hat and cloak, went downstairs, found an umbrella, told the 'girl' what to have for dinner, and came forth from the house."

He called them "bunty little streetcars" and numbered them among America's most missed "vanishings," things that pass so quickly and so silently from our daily lives that we hardly notice they have vanished.

Texas KKK Leader Reveals Role In Klan

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Gene West says he has been a member of the Ku Klux Klan for more than nine years, but came out of the closet only recently after losing his bid for election to the Texas Legislature.

Now West claims he is the Texas klan of the Invisible Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a group that has gone public, so to speak, and says it will confine its actions to legal methods, mainly by exercising the rights of assembly and free speech.

"As long as I am the klan, the Klan will not burn any crosses or tar and feather anybody," West said while maintaining there still are some folks around who need to be tarred and feathered — and hanged for that matter.

West said Texas klansmen in recent months have gone to Tupelo, Miss., for a rally to counter a black protest about alleged police brutality, met this month in Decatur, Ga., and were in Midland last week as "observers" in an investigation of the death of Larry Lozano, who Mexican-American groups contend was killed by police in violation of his civil rights.

"Nah," West replied when asked if it were widely known he was a klansman when he ran for the Democratic nomination in Rep. Don Cartwright's District 57-H. "We were trying to keep everything quiet until we got situated, then we could come out public. We met in private at Denham Springs, La., and all the officers of the organization voted to go public.

"It has changed a little bit. They don't get out there and tar and feather them anymore — which, by God, some of them need it, you know what I mean? I'd like to see the old hanging tree come back down here at the courthouse."

Asked how many San Antonio klansmen there are, West said, "I'd never tell you that," but he claims the Invisible

Knights are the largest of three KKK groups with more than 2 million members nationwide.

He said the KKK was a vigilante group in the old days and did not limit its discipline to blacks and it tarred and feathered white people when they did not live up to the Klan's expectations.

West said his Klan movement was a "backlash on this discrimination thing," and his group was "highly fed up with this police brutality thing" and "all you hear is 'minorities, minorities, minorities.'"

Another big gripe of the Klansmen, he said, was racial intermarriage.

Strikeout Stops Streak For 'The Rose'

ATLANTA (AP) — Pete Rose's dramatic chase of Joe DiMaggio's all-time record of hitting in 56 straight games has ended at 44.

"I would have liked to see what would have happened if I had gotten up in the 50s," Rose said Tuesday night after failing to hit for the first time since mid-June. He was 0-for-4 with a walk against rookie left-hander Larry McWilliams and veteran reliever Gene Garber of the Atlanta Braves.

"But 44 is not bad," said the scrappy 37-year-old captain of the Cincinnati Reds. "I'm not really disgusted because I hit the ball well. I'll come back tomorrow and get a hit."

It was a sensational catch by McWilliams in the second inning that prevented Rose from moving out of a tie for the all-time National League record set by Willie Keeler in 1897 when he hit safely in the first 44 games that season.

Rose, who had walked on a full-count pitch to open the game, drilled a vicious liner through the middle on his first pitch from McWilliams in the second. The lanky 6-foot-5 McWilliams, appearing in only his fourth major league game, reached back and speared the shot about waist high.

Rose later grounded out to shortstop Jerry Royster in the fifth inning and lined into a double play to rookie third baseman Bob Horner in his first trip against Garber in the seventh, setting the stage for the final drama.

It came in the ninth after Garber had fanned the first two Reds he faced. The crowd of 31,159 gave Rose a half-minute ovation as he strolled to the plate.

Rose fouled off the first pitch, attempting to bunt toward Horner at third. He then took two straight balls, low and inside, drawing a scattering of boos from the crowd. Rose fouled a 2-1 changeup at his feet and then struck out on another changeup, tipping it into the mitt of catcher Joe Nolan.

"Garber was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series," Rose said. "He had a 16-4 lead."

Asked if he were saying the Braves' right-hander should have laid one in for him to hit, Rose replied:

"No, I don't mean that. But I hope I get to see him (Garber) again tomorrow in a one-run game," he added. "I hope I hit a frozen rope right up the middle."

Garber, who recorded his 13th save since coming to the Braves in a trade with Philadelphia earlier this year, was undaunted.

"I don't know how I'm supposed to pitch in the seventh game of a World Series, because I never had done that," he said. "I have an idea if I was pitching like it was the seventh game of the World Series, he probably was hitting like it was the ninth inning of the seventh game of the World Series."

"I wanted his streak to continue, but I wanted to get him out, too," Garber added. "That's what I get paid to do."

It has been a season of two major accomplishments for Rose, who broke into the major leagues in 1963 with the nickname "Charlie Hustle" for the extraordinary effort he put forth in games.

He started the year — his 16th in the major — reeling only 34 hits to become the 13th player in history with 3,000 career hits, and he attained that goal on May 5 with a single off Steve Rogers of the Montreal Expos.

Asked if that had presented more pressure than the hitting streak, Rose said, "No, I couldn't visualize a 24-for-400 season."

Rose was asked if he thought he might have another long streak in him.

"I don't know if I'm too old to have another streak like that or not," he said. "There are only what, about 50 more games left. I don't want to do that again and go crazy all winter. But I'll be trying to start another streak tomorrow night."

Rose had equalled the 5-foot-4 Keeler's NL record with a sixth-inning single off a rare fastball from Atlanta knuckleballer Phil Niekro Monday night before a crowd of 45,007, lured by the greatest run ever made at DiMaggio's mark.

The Yankee Clipper began his streak on May 15, 1951 — only one month and one day after Peter Edward Rose was born in Cincinnati.

When DiMaggio's streak reached 44 games, he had recorded 66 hits in 174 at bats for a .379 average. Rose went 70 for 182 with a .385 average during his 44-game streak that started on June 14 before taking the 0-for-4 collar Tuesday night. He had lifted his season batting average from .267 to .316 during the streak.

McWilliams was booed when he walked Rose in the first inning, although the Reds' infielder drilled a liner that landed about five feet foul. He fouled off two straight 3-2 pitches before the walk.

IT'S OVER FOR ROSE—Cincinnati's Pete Rose walks away from home plate at Atlanta Stadium Tuesday night after striking out in the ninth inning to end his 44-game hitting streak. The Reds also lost the game to the Atlanta Braves 16-4. Braves catcher Joe Nolan, left, holds the ball that stopped Rose in his glove. (AP Laserphoto)

New Nicklaus Eyes PGA Championship

OAKMONT, Pa. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is back on top, and two fallen stars may have omens going for them in this week's PGA Championship — the golfing prize that may forever elude Arnold Palmer.

Play starts Thursday at the Oakmont Country Club, where Nicklaus was a chubby 22-year-old when he won his first pro title by edging Palmer in the 1963 U.S. Open.

Recently, Nicklaus won the British Open with 72 holes he called "the best major championship I've ever played."

He hadn't won a major tournament in nearly three years, but that raised his career total to 17: three British Opens, five Masters, four PGAs, three U.S. Opens and two U.S. Amateurs.

"If I continue to work at it, I'll win several more," Nicklaus predicted.

But there may not be any more for Johnny Miller, who won the 1973 U.S. Open here with a record final-round 63.

Golf's top money-winner in 1974 with $353,021, Miller ranks 102nd among the pros this year with winnings of $16,000.

After a practice round this week, he reported soreness in his neck in the same spot where he developed pain before taking the 1973 U.S. Open.

Is Miller counting on that as a sign of impending success this time?

"No, I'm not superstitious," said Miller. "Maybe Oakmont just has an allergy for necks."

Another young player here welcomed a little superstitious support. That was Lanny Wadkins, the defending PGA champion.

Last year, Wadkins missed the cut in a tournament that preceded the PGA. He missed the cut last week at the Hartford Open.

"Maybe," he suggested, "the same thing could happen again."

Maybe, but Wadkins has yet to win a tournament this year and he's missed the

Pollution, Bad Weather Force Swiss Restaurants To Import Fish

By ANDREW WARSHAW
 GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Switzerland's lakes are so low in stocks of gourmet fish that restaurants are serving substitutes imported from as far away as Canada.

Experts blame pollution and unusually bad weather for the sudden decline which, in addition to forcing many restaurants to rely on imports, is making others close down and take vacations at the height of the summer tourist season.

Over-fertilization of the lake water, involving an excess of oxygen-consuming phosphorus, nitrogen and other chemicals is the reason many leading Swiss experts believe supplies of the gourmet fish are reaching rock bottom.

The oxygen which is vital to the lives of the fish is being used up by the algae whose growth is spurred by excess fertilization," says Heinz Ambuehl, professor of hydrobiology at Zurich University.

Worst hit by the over-fertilization, Ambuehl adds, is the small, central Swiss Gotensee, a lake near Zurich, Switzerland's largest city. He says swimming there is "virtually out of the question."

More of a danger, says Ambuehl, is that for the first time ever, experts have witnessed a zero rating of oxygen at the bottom of Lake Geneva, the largest supplier of Swiss gourmet fish. The lake, 45 miles long and 8 miles across at its widest, has a maximum depth of 1,017 feet.

A recent government report said the lake was in danger of "suffocation" unless its phosphate content, which has tripled in the last 15 years, is quickly lowered.

In an effort to replenish the lake fish population, the Swiss government is operating a system of fish-breeding grants to each canton (state) affected by the crisis.

With the government money, the cantons take pregnant adult fish, hatch the offspring artificially and then put them back into the lakes when they reach self-supporting age.

This, said government fisheries spokesman Bernard Buttiker, is "essential to maintain at least a minimum supply" of fish.

Despite these measures, however, an even more pressing problem faces fishermen and restaurant owners on the Swiss side of Lake Geneva.

In Switzerland only adult perch — one of the most popular lake fish — can be caught legally, but no such rules exist on the French side, where babies can be caught. As a result, many young perch raised by Swiss fish breeders are caught by French fishermen as soon as they reach the other side of the lake.

"This is, of course, a major headache for us," said Buttiker. "But we are in the process of trying to come to a fishing agreement with France that would regulate fishing rights on both sides of the lake."

Arnold Martin, president of the Swiss Association of Professional Fishermen, maintains that weather conditions, particularly heavy rains, led to the shortfall in Swiss lake fish supplies.

"Masses of water just poured into the lakes without plankton for the fish to feed on," he said. "Consequently, they just starved to death."

With the lack of perch, trout and other lake fish giving rise to even greater competition among the hundreds of restaurants which, like the fishermen, rely on local stocks for their livelihood, many eating places are getting over the problem by importing.

Hans Albers, owner of a leading lakeside fish restaurant in Geneva, says that in high season he sells 130 to 175 pounds of perch a day.

But now, he can get a maximum of only 4½ pounds of local fish a day and is importing mainly from Canada.

Early in the summer, Albers said, he imported a ton of perch from Canada and is now considering buying up an additional two tons. He added that he pays about $11,000 a ton for the imported perch.

Another Geneva restaurant owner believes, like Arnold Martin, that stocks of local fish will pick up again in the autumn after some expected good weather. Until then, his stocks are coming from Ireland. But restaurant owners Roger and Mir-eille Fillion decided to close down and go on vacation two months ahead of schedule — in the hope their return will coincide with the reappearance of the perch, trout and ferra which have been the restaurant's speciality since 1949.

KIDS-ONLY CLUB

Children Helping Older Neighbors

By SHARI LEWIS

Tony Lamb of Ventura County, Calif., says it's so. Peter Patenaude of Cherterville, Ont., Canada, wrote to me about it. And from South Houston came Margie Aulenbacher's note, and she agrees.

Kids are reaching out to help their older neighbors on a regular basis, and loving it. Peter wrote, "My grandmother has a hard time walking, so on weekends I would go to the senior citizens home and run errands for her (to the store and post office.) Then I got the idea that I could run errands for other people too. Now, for 25 cents or 50 cents I go to the store and get their groceries for them." Margie takes her older neighbors for walks, and she says, "I let them know they are special. Old folks are lonely in their apartments. When I get old, I would want young people to talk to me. I find most old people have interesting stories about their lives."

Tony Lamb is the expert. As Senior Citizens Coordinator for Ventura County, he sees more and more 10 — and 12-year-old stopping by the homes of older people one afternoon a week. The senior citizen knows that for an hour, this young person will do those little things that become too difficult to do. Mr. Lamb says that even turning on a bath can be a problem for arthritic hands, and knowing that young strong hands are going to be available on a regular basis is very reassuring. He suggests that if you would like to find an older person who can use your help, the recreation department might be able to guide you, as might the local church, synagogue or senior center.

Researchers To Begin Work On Tracer Drug

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Research will begin next month on a tracer drug that could help doctors quickly diagnose most types of cancer and allow them to check the progress of treatment.

The drug is a new combination of radioactive agents that would be injected into a person's bloodstream as a tracer. Cancerous cells would absorb more of the drug than healthy cells, and the subsequent gamma ray emissions from the cancerous cells would be detected easily by a scanner.

Dr. Buck A. Rhodes, director of radiopharmacy at the University of New Mexico College of Pharmacy, said Monday that the procedure probably would take only two or three hours at a doctor's office or a hospital, although additional scans may be required up to 24 hours later.

"The drug would have about the same radioactive effect (on a patient) as an X-ray," Rhodes said.

The cost to a patient, he said, would be about the same as the present cost of similar tracer tests — $100 to $200.

Rhodes, who with David R. Crockford has applied for a patent on the drug, said related research in other countries indicated the drug may be able to detect 90 percent of the known types of cancer.

Crockford, director of research at Serono Laboratories, an international firm with U.S. headquarters in Boston, said the drug not only should be able to detect most types of cancer, it should detect malignant tumors at an early stage of development.

"In theory, the agent (drug) will be able to detect one cancer cell," he said. Crockford and Rhodes said the drug also could be valuable in checking the efficiency of cancer therapy by taking gamma ray scans before and after treatment. A series of scans also would allow doctors to determine if, and how, the disease is spreading through the body, they said.

A contract between UNM and Serono Laboratories and two Albuquerque firms to begin research on the new drug was signed Monday. Although research is scheduled to begin in September, Rhodes said it would be at least two years, and probably more, before the drug is tested on a human.

Judge Says 'Pulpit' Violates Constitution

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A U.S. magistrate has ruled that "Pentagon Pulpit," a religious program in the Pentagon course, violates First Amendment guarantees of separation of church and state.

The decision was handed down in the case of John Shiel, a member of a District of Columbia anti-war group, who was arrested last Thanksgiving for interrupting the program as part of a protest against the neutron bomb.

Shiel was found guilty of disrupting the program and served eight days of a 30-day sentence. But an appellate court sent the case back to Alexandria Magistrate Quin Elson for a re-hearing on two grounds.

The first was Shiel's contention that he was merely exercising his First Amendment right to free speech; the second, that the service violated the amendment's provision for separation of church and state.

Elson found that Shiel had disrupted the service, rather than simply interrupting it, and was therefore not protected by the First Amendment on that count.

The "Pentagon Pulpit Program" was started by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1942. A Pentagon spokesman reached Wednesday evening was unable to say whether services continue to be conducted under the program.

Glenn Ford To Continue Acting Career Past 200-Movie Mark

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Among the endangered species facing extinction, unprotected by environmental laws, is the motion picture leading man with 200 or more movies to his credit.
 The breed is dying out.
 There are John Wayne, to be sure, Jimmy Stewart and Henry Fonda. Perhaps Bill Holden.
 The 200-mark in movies is an increasingly rare milestone for leading men. Contemporary superstars Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, Warren Beatty and Robert Redford will never appear in half that many pictures. Quite probably they wouldn't want to.
 But in the '30s, '40s and '50s top name stars made as many as seven or eight movies a year. The quality of the films might have been suspect, but there was quantity. As contract players, they worked—like it or not.

 Until going strong and still playing leading men is Glenn Ford, who has racked up his 203rd movie with "Evening in Byzantium," a four-hour TV feature.
 Ford, relaxing in the living room of his Beverly Hills mansion, looked back over the years, the 203 screen credits and grinned contentedly. If he had to do it all over again, he wouldn't change very much about his career.
 Most of the actors who were stars when he came along are dead or long since retired. When Ford was a Columbia contract star, Gable and Tracy were at MGM, Cooper was at Paramount, Bogart was at Warner Bros., Tyrone Power was at 20th Century-Fox.

 Ford was a contemporary. Like them, he enjoyed astonishing longevity. Luck, he says is responsible for his long success. But there is a great deal more to it than that and Ford cheerfully acknowledged as much.
 "It doesn't hurt to be lucky," he said. "But there are other elements that keep you around, too. As I think back, my career has been equally divided among comedy, drama and westerns.
 "Not being typecast helped. Audiences seldom knew what to expect to see me in next. But that can be a hindrance, too, I suppose. Some of the most type-cast stars lasted the longest because the public knew what to expect of them. I guess you could say John Wayne is an example, always the strong-willed hero.
 "Versatility has been my strong point. How many actors go from the tense drama of 'Blackboard Jungle' to 'Teahouse of the August Moon'?"
 "I only played a half-dozen bad guys and those were fairly recent. No one was ever able to categorize me."
 There was no such thing as a "Glenn Ford part." But there were typical Cary Grant, Clark Gable and Errol Flynn parts.
 Ford also credits the people he's worked with for his longevity. He particularly singled out director George Marshall for whom he did seven films.
 "I've been exposed to some unbelievable talent," he said. "I was Tallulah Bankhead's stage manager. I worked with Edward G. Robinson, Margaret Sullivan and Frederic March.
 "I did pictures with Barbara Stanwyck, Rita Hayworth, Shirley MacLaine. But the best actress I've ever worked with was Julie Harris. We co-starred in 'The Family Hour,' a television series that really didn't work.
 "Another thing that contributed to my longevity was the people behind the camera who are more important than anyone in front of it.
 "I have the luxury of not having first-day jitters when I begin a movie. I walk on the set and know at least a half-dozen members of the crew, men and women I've worked with somewhere in the past."
 Ford doesn't dwell much on the good old days. His first picture, however, stands out clearly in his mind, "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," in 1938.
 His first major hit was with Frederic

March and Margaret Sullivan in "So Ends Our Night." But the picture that made him a top-flight star was "Gilda" with Rita Hayworth. She lives next door to Glenn in Beverly Hills.
 "When I was under contract to Columbia I did three or four pictures a year for the studio," Ford said. "Then they'd loan me out to MGM for two or three others. I went from one picture to the next without taking a deep breath.
 "But I didn't give a thought to over-exposure. I don't believe an actor can be over-exposed unless he becomes repetitive. The secret is to play different roles as often as possible."

 Another contributory factor to Ford's longevity is his physical appearance. Long after others his age were having wrinkles, crowfeet and other marks of time, Glenn managed to stay young.

Firestone To Offer New Tire Warranty

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. has announced a special promotion offering a full two-year warranty on its steel-belted radial 721 passenger tires.
 Firestone's 500 series radial tire was the subject of criticism during recent congressional hearings.
 The special warranty will be offered to the owners of 721 series tires purchased from July 1 to Oct. 31, and is in addition to the regular warranty, the company said.
 The warranty provides for free replacement within a 24-month period for tires with defects in workmanship or materials.

Paperworkers End 12-Day Strike

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—The American Can Co.'s paper plant at Halsey, Ore., was resuming operations after acceptance of a two-year contract by the United Paperworkers International Union.
 The 466 union workers approved the pact Monday, and Bill Bergren, UPIU representative, said the settlement should spur progress toward settling strikes at 21 other West Coast pulp and paper mills.
 The American Can Co. plant was struck July 20.
