Pal Hopes Jimmy Hall, MIA, Will Come Home

By ROBERT CAREY

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — In Hanoi, the visiting American congressmen are supposed to pick up the remains of 11 American servicemen. I wonder if one of them will be my old high school buddy, James Hall.

In the last few days of hostilities in Vietnam, Lt. Cmdr. Jimmy Hall took off from a carrier in his Navy jet and never came back. A wingman said his plane had been hit by a missile. He had seen no parachute.

James Hall was born in Shawnee, Okla. We had gone through school there and played just about everything there was to play together — basketball, baseball, football. We had hunted the same girls, gone to the same parties, shared our families' bed and board, and hunted doves in the empty, rolling fields behind the Starlight Drive-In Theater.

We had drunk beer together, scattering the empty cans from a hurtling 1951 Ford burning up the back roads of Pottawatomie County. Acted in high school plays, we did, kissed girls on hayrides, laughed and skinny-dipped in the early spring, before the pools opened, in Hereford stock ponds outside the city limits. In many ways I thought he was a gifted guy. He was an excellent piano player, not a bad mechanic, could do spot welding, and was one of the few people I have known who could manage both a one-handed pushup and a one-legged squat thrust.

He was also an excellent student — when he felt like it — and might have made it as an auto racer. He sure as heck could handle that Ford. I imagine that stood him in good stead, flying a jet.

After high school, we both enrolled at the University of Oklahoma. Jim got a job playing piano in a bar and thought so much of that he sort of lost interest in going to class. He dropped out and later joined the Army. "I just ain't ready," he had said.

So we went our separate ways. He did his time in the Army and went back to college, eventually getting his degree and going into Naval aviation. He seemed to thrive on speed.

He used to climb into that Ford, roll the windows down and hold it right on it along that 30-mile strip of highway between OU and Tucuman on the way back to Shawnee, one-handed it most of the way. The other hand was holding the beer can or tossing the empties out the window.

I never worried though. You could tell when a guy could handle a car. I figured he'd get us there. He never scratched a fender.

I figured he'd never crack up a plane either. They'd have to shoot him down. They did.

He left behind a fine wife and two children.

It comes to me still, every now and then, when I read a news story under a Southeast Asia dateline. I think, well what was that all about? For what? Why? I have no answers.

Sure, it's an old story. But, to me anyway, it doesn't weigh any less at times. This is one of those times.

Star Witness Goes Blank At Hearing

FORT WORTH (AP) — The state's key witness in the murder-for-hire case against Cullen Davis said today he could remember little of a meeting last spring with the millionaire at which the killings allegedly were discussed.

"You can't pin it down as to the month, day of week, time of day, or whether it was light or dark, is that right?" David McCrory was asked during cross-examination by attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

"Yes sir, that is right," McCrory replied.

The prosecution has contended that Davis and McCrory first met during the spring to discuss the killings.

McCrory has alleged that Davis plotted the killings of two judges, his estranged wife and three witnesses who testified at Davis' murder trial last year.

Davis, 44, has been jailed since he was arrested and charged Sunday with solicitation of capital murder in connection with a purported plot to have a professional gunman kill Joe Eklson, the presiding magistrate in his high-stakes divorce case.

McCrory claims Eklson was one of 15 persons marked for execution by Davis. He has testified Davis asked him to arrange the killings, after which he told authorities of the plot and became an informant.

Courtroom spectators listened Wednesday as prosecutors played recordings of conversations allegedly between McCrory and Davis discussing the murder plans. Prosecutors also showed a videotape of the pair meeting and more than a dozen photographs of the two at a Fort Worth parking lot. McCrory narrated the videotape.

The voice tapes were of two conversations — a telephone call early Sunday morning about six hours before Davis' arrest, and another made as McCrory, wired for sound by the FBI, met Davis in a parking lot.

Haynes declined to attack the integrity of the recordings, saying "I have no reason to think it is not Cullen at this juncture."

Smiling, he added, "I have no reason to think it is Cullen."

The parking lot conversation has McCrory showing Davis a posed photo of Eklson in the trunk of a car, apparently the victim of a shotgun blast in the back. McCrory shows Davis some of Eklson's identification cards and the photo.

McCrory said he then produced a .22-caliber pistol with a silencer on it that he said Davis had requested and eventually put into the car.

Asked if Davis told him why he wanted the pistol with the silencer, McCrory said, "He jokingly said he wanted to protect himself and he wanted to be real quiet about it."

At one point in the tapes, McCrory expressed fear:

"When you kill a man like Judge Eklson ... there's going to be more heat caused than you can imagine."

At another point, McCrory says: "I got Judge Eklson dead for you."

The other man: "Good."

The "death list" allegedly compiled by Davis is said to include the names of Eklson; Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla; Beverly Bass and Gus Gavrel, who testified against Davis at his murder trial last year; Gavrel's father, who Davis fears has put out a contract on his life; Judge Tom Cave, who presided at Davis' first murder trial in Fort Worth that ended in a mistrial; Bill Davis, Cullen's younger brother; and W.T. Rufter, a former lover of Mrs. Davis.

Bond Sale Delay To Cost City

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff

If $2.4 million in general obligation bonds sold this morning by the Lubbock City Council had been sold on schedule last year, the city could have saved nearly $100,000 in interest.

The city council this morning accepted the low bid of the First National Bank of Dallas and the Fort Worth National Bank to buy the bonds at an interest rate of 5.12 percent. The city will pay net interest of $1.25 million over the 20-year life of the bonds.

However, city financial adviser Joe Smith told the council an interest rate of approximately 4.75 percent likely could have been obtained had the bonds been sold in August of last year.

Sale of the bonds, the first to be sold of a $26.4-million package approved by voters in May 1977, was delayed because of litigation challenging their legality by city hall critic James G. Marshall.

The general obligation bonds will finance water, street and firefighting system improvements, including the construction of a southwest Lubbock fire station.

The council will convene at 8 a.m. Fri. See BOND SALE Page 14.

Guerrillas Fly To Freedom

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Leftist guerrillas flew to freedom today after releasing a throng of hostages and ending a two-day stand-off at Nicaragua's National Palace, reporters at Managua's airport said. The guerrillas took with them an undetermined number of hostages and political prisoners freed by the government.

They were aboard two planes, a Venezuelan air force C-130 transport and a Panamanian jet, and were headed for Panama and Venezuela. The total number of those aboard was not known.

It was believed that the estimated 40 to 50 guerrillas took a handful of diplomats and churchmen with them to guarantee safe passage out of Nicaragua. The political prisoners were released and put aboard the planes to meet one of the guerrillas' demands.

Two of the Nicaraguan legislators held during the two-day siege at the capitol building said the guerrillas freed 1,214 persons held since Tuesday. Then the guerrillas boarded a school bus for the drive to the airport.

Earlier it was reported that the guerrillas had released all but 200 hostages.

A reporter at the palace said the guerrillas left with at least eight hostages, including three Roman Catholic churchmen, the Panamanian and Costa Rican ambassadors to Nicaragua, and three or four members of the Nicaraguan Parliament, including Luis Pallas Debayle, a cousin of President Anastasio Somoza. The churchmen and diplomats had volunteered for the flight. The legislators were expected to be freed at the airport, but this could not be confirmed.

Earlier, Justo Garcia, a spokesman for President Somoza, said the government had agreed to guerrilla demands for ransom money, the release of an undisclosed number of political prisoners and safe passage out of the country.

After the guerrillas drove off, the hostages emerged in small groups and were led to waiting buses. Those freed included 54 members of Parliament and 25 reporters.

Garcia said he believed the guerrillas had agreed to accept a $5 million ransom, half their original demand. But Rafael Cano, chief of the president's office, said the guerrillas left with only $71,000 in cash. He said the rest of the ransom was supposed to have been made out in checks.

The guerrillas had said three Catholic bishops and the Panamanian and Costa Rican ambassadors, who had been negotiating with them, must go along as guarantees of safety.

The guerrillas, members of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, had freed about 300 hostages in groups Wednesday.

The Sandinistas shot their way into the National Palace while the Chamber of Deputies was in session Tuesday afternoon, killing eight persons, most of them National Guard officers, and wounding 15 others.

Police Keep Pressure On Massage Parlors

By JACK DOUGLAS

Avalanche-Journal Staff

Police continued a crackdown on massage parlor employees under the city's new ordinance Wednesday, arresting four women, including an 18-year-old.

All four were released from county jail under $100 bond later the same day.

During the past two weeks, several massage parlor employees have been arrested for alleged violations of Lubbock's massage parlor ordinance which became effective July 1.

"We expect to strictly enforce the massage ordinance," said Capt. Wayne Love of the police detective division.

The ordinance requires massage parlor owners and personnel to obtain a license from the city at a fee of $500 for owners and $100 for masseuses, and also sets other regulations for the establishments.

The first three arrests Wednesday came about 3:30 p.m. when a city detective went to a location in the 2400 block of Seventh Street. According to reports, the officer was met by a woman who said "she had a young pretty girl who would be back soon."

He said in his report that he was eventually directed to a woman who quoted him a price of $20 for a massage. The detective then identified himself, and all three women, the youngest 20, were arrested.

Two of the women were arrested for allegedly giving massages without a permit, and the other suspect was taken in custody on a count of allowing unlicensed masseuses to work in a massage parlor.

About an hour later, the same detective went to a massage parlor in the 2200-block of Avenue Q, where an 18-year-old woman was arrested for allegedly giving massages without a permit.

Reports show a woman was arrested at the same location last Friday and eventually charged with prostitution and failure to have a license to give massages.

The detective said the woman arrested about 4:30 p.m. Monday told him a rub would cost $20 — and $40 if he wanted to massage her. The policeman said he gave the woman some money and then arrested her.

The officer also said he talked on the phone to a man claiming to own the parlor. The owner reportedly told the officer he had a license from the city, but, according to police, no city permit could be found.

The detective said the owner of the Avenue Q parlor violated city ordinances by operating a massage parlor without a permit, allowing women to give massages without a valid permit, failure to keep an appointment book, failure to change bed sheets for each patron and failure to have a qualified masseur.

Woman Sues Over Hairdo

A Lubbock woman took a trip to her hairdresser — and, she claims, the visit turned out to be a disaster.

In fact, you might say the young woman feels the business was, figuratively as well as literally, a "clap joint."

The wife of a local attorney has filed suit in 99th District Court against the hairdresser and the owner of the business.

The plaintiff contends that, armed with a picture of her desired hair style, she went to the hairdressing place and asked an employee if the style in the picture could be reproduced.

The woman says she was told the effect could be achieved.

The plaintiff says she allowed her hair to be cut and was given a permanent, but complained in the suit that the style she received was nowhere near picture-perfect.

The plaintiff is asking $30 for cost of services, plus $2,500 for alleged mental anguish and humiliation.

'Angel' Gets Marriage License

BOSTON (AP) — Is it Kate Jackson or Mrs. Andrew Stevens today?

The actress, star of "Charlie's Angels," and Stevens, the actor son of actress Stella Stevens, took out a marriage license in Municipal Court Wednesday, and unconfirmed reports say the pair exchanged vows hours later on the island of Martha's Vineyard.

Stevens, 23, played the lead role in the recent syndicated television miniseries, "The Bastard." Miss Jackson, 29, plays "Sabrina" on her weekly TV series.

Jarvis Plans TV Program

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tax rebel Howard Jarvis is taking his campaign for federal tax reform to national television.

The co-author of California's tax-licing Proposition 13 will star in a half-hour show that the Robert Wold Co. said would be aired on 125 stations on Sept. 26.

The special, sponsored by an activist group called the American Tax Reduction Movement Action Committee, Newport Beach, Calif., will cap a 14-city tour Jarvis began last Thursday to speak on tax reform.

Concerts To Be Televised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four artists' concerts at the White House this fall and early next year will be nationally televised by Public Broadcasting Service stations across the country.

Officials said Wednesday the series will start with a Sept. 17 recital by Mstislav Rostropovich, cellist and music director of the National Symphony Orchestra here.

Others are opera singer Leontyne Price on Oct. 8; ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov on Feb. 25 and classical guitarist Andres Segovia on March 11.

Station WETA will offer the programs to the more than 200 PBS stations across the country.

Officials declined to give further information on the condition of the 82-year-old former leader.

Chicken Magnate Criticizes Law

TORONTO (AP) — Mandatory retirement laws are an enormous tragedy in terms of wasted human resources, says Colonel Harlan Sanders, founder of the Kentucky Fried Chicken empire.

"I know what I'm talking about and I've practiced what I've preached," he said. "I didn't start in this business until I was 66 years old."

Sanders said there is no decent argument for forced retirement.

"I care about old folks because I expect that someday maybe I'll be old myself," said Sanders, who will be 88 on Sept. 9.

Businessman Eyes Meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — A summit meeting between Leonid Brezhnev and Jimmy Carter?

That's what American businessman Armand Hammer says he will recommend to Brezhnev. Hammer said Brezhnev has invited him to fly to the Crimea, where the Soviet president is vacationing, on Friday, and he said he will recommend that Brezhnev meet Carter "as soon as possible."

"If they can face each other, they will learn to trust each other and to communicate with each other," the chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp. said Wednesday in an interview with The Associated Press.

The 80-year-old Hammer is a long-time business friend of the Russians dating back to 1921 when he helped with famine relief here and came to the attention of Lenin, who later became a good friend. Hammer first met Brezhnev in 1972.

Hammer, who inaugurated a $66 million chemical fertilizer complex Tuesday near the Black Sea port of Odessa, said he would recommend to Brezhnev that the summit be held "without preconditions" and before the end of the year.

Graham To Preach In Poland

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham, who preached behind the Iron Curtain for the first time last September, is planning another mission to Eastern Europe this fall.

Graham said he will make a 10-day trip to Poland in October to hold religious services in six cities. Last year's trip was to Hungary.

"I will preach the same gospel in Poland that I have preached around the world for 30 years," Graham said. "There will be no restrictions in my preaching."

He said services are planned in Warsaw, the capital; the university and religious center of Cracow, and the cities of Poznan, Wroclaw, Katowice and Biaystok.

Representatives of the evangelist's organization met with government and church officials in Poland last month to set up the trip, which stems from an invitation by the Polish Baptist Union and the Polish Ecumenical Council.

Trump: Clumsy, But Faithful

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Some people might have been upset at Trump, Dolly Heinemann's faithful watchdog. He did burn the house down.

But Dolly's not putting Trump in the doghouse. He saved her life by rousing her out of bed when the fire broke out.

Mrs. Heinemann said she left a candle burning Tuesday night to serve as a night light for her dog. He got up in the middle of the night, bumped a dresser and knocked the candle into a curtain.

"What would you want me to do?" she asked. "Take him to the pound? You can't blame him for what he did."

Collector Saves Radio Diagrams For Technicians

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In the market for a schematic diagram of a 1928 Atwater Kent Model 40?

Well, Henry V. Golden has those and other electronic maps in his library of service data. He has them all stored in a small building behind his southside Kansas City home.

Golden's library is officially known as the International Society of Certified Electronic Technicians Technical Clearing House.

"What we're trying to do is retain all this service data, tons of it actually, which people are just throwing away," said Golden, 72. He says the library is "the only one like it in the world."

Pointing to a black box that resembles a safe-deposit box more than a radio, Golden said: "Look at this Atwater Kent Model 40."

"Back in the early 1930s these things were going from $75 to $100 — each. Figure that out in terms of today's prices. It was a nice piece of change. So somebody finds one in a closet. They want it fixed. But where? I'll tell you, you just don't run down to your local radio-television repair shop," he said.

"I worked on these as a young man. Lots of them. But I wouldn't touch one without the diagrams. Wouldn't touch it," Golden says. "And except for here and a few other collectors, the diagrams just don't exist any more."

He said his library has an annual budget of about $2,000. The electronic technicians' society claims the library as its own and has pledged for $10 annually from each of its 150,000 members to support it.

Firemen Refuse To Answer Alarms

VERNON, Calif. (AP) — This city's 101 firemen have carried out their threat not to respond to fire alarms, and at least one city official says the next step may be to hire a new fire department.

City clerk Bruce Malenhorst called the action Wednesday an illegal strike.

"What we'll do is probably begin terminating and wind up with a new firefighting force.... I would think that those who do not show up for (scheduled) work will be fired," he said.

Vernon firemen stayed off the job Wednesday in what they called a "job action" for safety's sake and began picketing the city's four fire stations.

"We decided it was unsafe for our firefighters," said spokesman Ron Cummings. He said this city on the southeastern boundary of Los Angeles has suspended so many firefighters that there weren't enough left to safely fight fires.

"Our firefighters have been effectively locked out," said Mike Farrier, president of the striking union. "There is not a sufficient number of men to protect the community and the firefighter himself."

Los Angeles County Supervisor Ed Edelman said county firefighters would handle on a temporary basis any fire or other emergency in Vernon.

The 5 1/2-square-mile industrial city has only 225 residents, but about 90,000 people work there, Bowers said.

The dispute involves the city's announcement in late July that it would terminate the jobs of 17 firefighters and replace them with lower-paid employees within the next two months.

Disputed job categories include dispatchers and mechanics. The categories do not involve fighting fires, although they had been filled by fully trained firefighters, Bowers said.

Sixteen other firefighters were suspended indefinitely for alleged insubordination that occurred during the dispute.

Washington Resident Specializes In Creating Elaborate Parties

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Tom Tuell threw his first unusual party 10 years ago.

"I had a date. I didn't just want to go to a movie," recalls the 28-year-old Tuell. "I wanted it to be a different kind of an evening."

It was.

The date began with a golf cart ride through the Fircrest Golf Club. There is a lake with a small island at the fifth hole. The couple rode a rubber raft to the island where a table was set with two orders of takeout fried chicken.

A carton of milk, wrapped in a towel, was kept cool in a champagne cooler. A portable radio played softly.

"It was nice," said Tuell, who operates Tuell Enterprises. "But we had to eat fast. The rubber raft had developed a leak on the way out."

Since that first meal, Tuell has staged scores of memorable dinners in parks, homes, restaurants, ice cream parlors, under the Narrows Bridge, even on the Seattle monorail.

Tuell's business cards proclaim, "I'm a creative genius." He also is involved in real estate investment and development and is manager of the apartment complex where he and his wife, Sheri, live.

A lot of planning goes into one of Tuell's events.

"It usually takes a couple of weeks of work. Often we have to locate a bunch of friends and make sure they are at the right spot at the right time," says Tuell, a Tacoma native and graduate of the University of Puget Sound.

"We have had as many as 26 people working behind the scene. Actually, the dinners have just about priced themselves out of a market. It is pretty expensive. You would have to really, really want one to make it worthwhile."

One of Tuell's favorite events was a birthday party he arranged for his wife before they were married. It began at 7:30 a.m. when Sheri was escorted through Seattle-Tacoma International Airport by two men dressed in tuxedos as a comedian and "reporter" interviewed her.

She was put on a plane. "She kept thinking I would come aboard and take her off because she had never been on a plane before," Tuell said.

But the plane flew her to Portland where she and Tuell enjoyed an outdoor day in the park and then returned by car to her parent's home in Tacoma.

"Inside we had it all decorated for a little girl's party. There were about 200 of her friends all dressed up in little girl dresses. We ended the evening by going to dance with her parents."

Soccer Center

Coaches and players make plans before the season begins to visit our special Soccer Centers now being set up at the Sports Center, downtown, and Cardinal's Sport Center on 50th. Airline Seeks Mainland China Routes

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Airlines has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board to approve routes linking eight American cities with three cities in mainland China.

The carrier is seeking permission to schedule regular flights to Shanghai, Canton and Peking, the only Chinese cities with airports that can accommodate jetliners.

The U.S. cities are New York, Chicago, Denver, Seattle-Tacoma, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Honolulu.

At the same time United asked for authority to fly from these same American cities to Hong Kong and to Tokyo and Osaka in Japan.

The applications will be considered as part of a Transpacific Low-Fare Route Investigation initiated by the CAB. The investigation will consider whether several airlines can provide low-fare service from any point in the United States to Hong Kong, South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore, the Philippines, Okinawa, Japan, Thailand, Sri Lanka and India.

In announcing its intention last week to make the application, United said it did not expect a decision from the CAB before 1980. The carrier asked for the China routes once before, in 1971, but the board has not acted on that request.

If the CAB approves the China routes, United also would have to receive permission from Chinese officials, and the U.S. and China would have to sign a bilateral agreement before service could begin.

Several international carriers fly to the Orient, but none has scheduled flights to mainland China.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Pay Nothing, Get Less

TWO HEALTH CARE policy analysts reaffirmed the obvious this week when they warned that a proposed "free" national health insurance plan providing complete coverage for the entire population can only lead to an explosive rise in costs followed by a decline in the level of medical care.

bears none of the cost of services and therefore the price of services is irrelevant to him...The quantity of services he will demand is also clear—he will demand all care (even of) the slightest value to him.

THE INTERACTION of public insurance and private health care markets will require skillful coordination, they say, "because the influence of insurance on the cost and quality of medical care can be overwhelming." If the national health insurance plan ultimately chosen is one that covers everyone like a blanket, it must include some cost sharing on the part of the patient, they write.

WHILE SUCH A step would artificially control costs, it would also lead to a situation in which demand exceeded supply as doctors cut back their services in response to the new level of compensation, the authors contend.

"With excess demand for their services, health care providers would have an incentive to cut quality and amenities to the lowest level consistent with malpractice law." "For example, waiting times would lengthen, less time would be spent with patients for each procedure, and so on."

James J. Kilpatrick: The Farber case, if you came in late, involves reporter Myron Farber of the Times. As a consequence of his investigative digging, Dr. Mario Jascalevich is now on trial for murdering several patients at the small Riverdell Hospital in New Jersey 12 years ago.

IF WE OF the press have rights under the First Amendment (and the Supreme Court never has bought the proposition we are trying to sell), it is beyond question that Dr. Jascalevich has rights under the Sixth Amendment.

The Farber Case: It's A Lemon

WASHINGTON—If my brothers of The New York Times are as smart as they universally are thought to be, they will wriggle out of the Farber case as gracefully as they can.

THE TRIAL JUDGE brushed aside the shield law as if it never had been written. Some of us in the news business agree with him in that position of disdain.

ON TWO POINTS, in my own view, the trial judge erred. His subpoena was entirely too sweeping; it goes far beyond the particularized limits implicitly imposed by the Fourth Amendment.

Offhand Thoughts... I've never trusted a man who needed a watch to tell him what day it was.

Trying to find out why high school graduates have trouble reading newspapers, the New York State Education Department determined that news writing is more complex than it was a generation ago.

Actually, the idea is not original. We got it from the nation's mayors. But if it works for them, why not for us?

Treasure Hunter Wins Florida Lawsuit

MIAMI (AP) — Mel Fisher, a balding, former chicken farmer turned treasure hunter, feels vindicated — and richer.

Fisher won a major court victory when U.S. District Judge William O. Mehrtens ordered the state to give up its claim to 25 percent of the estimated $18 million in Spanish treasure recovered in 1973 by Fisher's Treasure Salvors.

"The state has been very troublesome for me," Fisher said of the Monday ruling. "I let my heart pour out at the trial. They were insinuating we were pirates and profit-mongers, destroying artifacts when, in fact, the opposite was true."

Deputy Attorney General James Whisenand said the state will re-appeal its claim to the treasure, which has been locked away in the state archives since Fisher recovered it from the sea 30 miles off Key West.

Dave Horan, attorney for Treasure Salvors, called the ruling a final victory, although he had predicted the state would appeal again.

The state took possession of the silver coins and artifacts, raised from the remains of the sunken Spanish galleon Nuestra Señora de Atocha, which sank during a hurricane in 1622, by claiming a contract it had with Treasure Salvors Inc. entitled the state to 25 percent of the find.

Mehrtens, saying the government had no right to the treasure find, ordered the entire find turned over to Treasure Salvors and Armada Research Corp., both founded by Fisher.

Mehrtens ordered that the state Division of Archives, History and Records Management "take nothing for its claim and that its claim is denied in all respects and that all costs be taxed against" the division.

"The finding of a great treasure from the days of the Spanish Main is a cherished dream of not only United States and Florida citizens; countless people from other lands have shared such thoughts," the decision said.

"It would amaze and surprise most citizens of this country, when their dream at the greatest of cost was realized, that agents of the (state of Florida and United States) governments would, on the most flimsy of grounds, lay claim to the treasure," the decision said.

State officials claimed they owned 25 percent of the find even though a U.S. Supreme Court ruling declared the wreck had been outside U.S. territorial waters.

Chocolate Bananas Easy To Prepare

By SHARI LEWIS

Have you tasted those frozen chocolate bananas on a stick? Delicious, aren't they? They're easy to make at home.

Peel each banana and slice in half. Stick a wooden skewer into each half (as a handle), place on separate pieces of wax paper and freeze.

After the bananas have been in the freezer for 30 minutes, fill a pan half full of water and start it heating. Fill a small, empty frozen juice can with 3/4 of a cup of chocolate chips. Add 1 1/2 tablespoons of vegetable oil and place the can into the water in the pan, in order to melt the chocolate.

Take the bananas out of the freezer one at a time. Dip each into the liquid chocolate, and give the banana a twist as you pull it out of the gooey chocolate.

If you wish, lay chopped nuts out on another piece of wax paper, and roll the banana in the nuts while the chocolate is still wet. Then place each banana back on wax paper, and put into the freezer once again for about an hour.

YESTERDAY'S BRAIN TWISTER: How many words can you think of that contain a double "a"?

ANSWER: I've thought of aardvark and bazaar—did you think of any others?

FBI Seeking Stolen Paintings

COHASSET, Mass. (AP) — The FBI is looking for $500,000 worth of paintings and Chinese jars stolen from an ocean-side mansion while the owners slept.

The FBI said the thieves have made no attempt to contact police or the owner, Arthur C. Harrington, about the six paintings, including a Rembrandt and an El Greco, and two Ming Dynasty Chinese jars stolen Friday. The paintings are well known, officials said, particularly the Rembrandt, "Portrait of a Lady," painted about 1635. They said this would make them hard to sell.

Pioneer Photographer Kertesz Tries To Tell Story In Pictures

By FRANK T. CSONGOS
 NEW YORK (UPI) — Andre Kertesz pulled the chair closer to his desk and winked.
 "I'm an old man," he said. "I can die any time. Is that why you came to see me? To catch me for a final interview?"
 He pointed to the photographs scattered around his apartment.
 "I let my pictures talk for me," he said. "But, why not?"
 Kertesz, a pioneer photographer in the fields of literary reportage and artistic nude pictures, has been taking pictures for 66 years.
 "I try to tell a story with my pictures," Kertesz, 84, said in an interview. "That's what they call literary reportage. This type of photography wasn't common before me."
 "I always clicked my camera when I happened to like something, whether it was two naked gypsy children kissing in the fields or a young man falling asleep in a cafe house, my first work back in 1912. Never cared for posed pictures, you know, the studio photography style that was so common in the early days."
 Born in Budapest, Hungary, on July 2, 1894, Kertesz gained recognition during World War I with his candid portraits of Hungarian soldiers.
 One showed a soldier hugging a peasant woman as they were walking through the fields. Another picture of Kertesz' early period portrayed a blind violin player who was being helped across the street by a barefoot boy.

 "I did what I felt, not just what I saw," Kertesz said. "I take pictures from the heart."
 Kertesz emigrated to Paris in 1925 and presented his first one-man photographic exhibition two years later. He became one of the most famous photo journalists in Europe.
 "Paris was a magnet for artists," he said. "Paris took me in and gave its soul."
 Kertesz left Paris in 1936 for the United States, hoping to introduce his pictures to American audiences.
 "It was a struggle for many years," Kertesz said. "At first, editors told me, 'Andre, your pictures talk too much.' When I took pictures of nude women, I was told not to show the pubic area. Can you imagine Rembrandt or Rubins covering up their nude paintings?"
 Kertesz is now viewed as a major force in making nude photography a respectable art form. His book, "Distortions," is considered a classic in nude photography. For years in the United States he was reduced to freelancing.

 "What happened to me in America was shameful," he said. "I wanted to go back to Paris with my wife, but then came the war in 1939. We stayed in New York. And after the war, well we thought it was too late for us to move again."
 Eventually, recognition did come. In 1964, Kertesz had a one-man show at New York's Museum of Modern Art. It was followed by similar exhibitions in Paris, Tokyo, Stockholm and Budapest.
 Two recent events hurt Kertesz. "Some of my old pictures have wound up in unauthorized hands," he said, "and I'm trying to get them back. I don't want my pictures to be used for commercial purposes by others. I want to retain control over my pictures."
 The other was the death of his wife, Elizabeth, 10 months ago.
 "I have little purpose left in life now that she is gone," he said.

Government Conducting Food Label Hearings

By JEFFREY MILLS
 WASHINGTON (AP)—Those vitamins and minerals many have come to think necessary in their foods may be in for some reduced emphasis.
 The government is thinking about changing the labeling requirements for food to take into account the growing feeling among nutritionists that the "recommended daily allowances" are out of date.
 Three federal agencies began joint hearings this week in Wichita, Kan., the first of five cities where consumers, food industry spokesmen and scientists will testify on what people should be told about what they are eating.
 Congressional panels and federal regulators are ready to begin work on overhauling the labeling laws after the hearings.

When current labeling regulations were developed, nutrient deficiencies were considered the most pressing issue, and policy makers began trying to educate the public about vitamins and minerals through the labels.
 However, nutrient deficiencies are rare today and concern is focused on health problems posed by overconsumption, especially of fatty foods, salt and sugar. Imbalances in the American diet have been linked to heart ailments, cancer and other diseases.
 The law now requires nutritional labeling only if the food has added nutrients or makes a nutritional claim, such as "low calorie." Many foods are sold without nutritional information.
 One of the issues to be considered at the hearings is whether food labels should give percentages for each ingredient. Ellen Haas of the private Community Nutrition Institute, testifying recently before the Senate nutrition subcommittee, held up a box of a popular cereal that said it was "fortified with 10 essential vitamins."

 "If this package were subject to a requirement that it say the contents are 60 percent sugar, a person who would ordinarily buy such a product due to the presence of some synthetic sprayed-on vitamins might think twice," she said.
 Among other topics for the hearings are whether food labels should include graphic or pictorial symbols to improve understanding; when a food should be labeled "imitation," and whether detailed information on such components as cholesterol should be given.

 Timothy Hammonds, senior vice president of the Food Marketing Institute, an association of food wholesalers and retailers, said it has studied consumer attitudes and found many who say, "I don't want the government telling me what to eat."
 Doctors say one medium carrot supplies all the vitamin A you need for one day, and one serving of broccoli fills your daily need for vitamin C.

Russian Museums Awe Visitors

By TED J. SIMON
A-J Travel Editor

Russia — The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics — is vast. From east to west is a distance of 7,000 miles; from north to south it measures 3,000 miles. Within this land mass are mountains, rivers, seas, deserts, permanently frozen tundras and sub-tropical areas.

Its people number close to 252 million, and over 67 different languages are spoken. Its 150 nationalities include Armenians, Tatars, and Uzbeks. The people's faces represent the borders that touch Western Europe, India and China.

Until about 25 years ago, Russia was described as "an enigma wrapped in a mystery." Today the wraps have been removed (somewhat) and the doors have been opened (considerably) to foreign visitors. The enigma is disappearing — so much so that Lubbockites Doug Babcock and Gregg Hudspeth (both 18 years of age) thought nothing of using the vast subway system in Moscow or walking the streets of Leningrad on their own.

Babcock and Hudspeth are members of the First United Methodist Church's Wesley Singers who toured behind the Iron Curtain. The Lubbock singers, consisting of high school and college-age youths, presented concerts in Russia, Latvia and Poland. The tour was under the auspices of Ambassadors for Friendship, an organization that promotes understanding and goodwill through the exchange of the arts of various countries.

When the Wesley Singers arrived in Moscow, Babcock noted, "For a city of 7½ million there was almost no traffic, although the boulevards we traveled were very wide. Of course there isn't a great need for private transportation because of mass transit consisting of buses, trolleys and subways.

Hudspeth recalled, "The subway, which we used several times, was really something to see, especially the stations. Some of the stops have murals, mosaics, paintings and statues. There were beautiful chandeliers in many of the corridors. It was like visiting an art gallery each time we took the subway." He added, "We used the subway to get to other parts of the city so we could explore and do some shopping."

"It's easy to use the subway there," said Babcock, "and you can always get off at a station and figure out where you are. Also, the hotels have a policy of giving you a card when you leave your room key at the desk. On the card is the name of the hotel and its address. I figured if I ever got lost, I could show the key card to a taxi driver and get back to the hotel."

The Lubbockites also found shopping to be rather easy. On arrival in Russia, 15 U.S. dollars were exchanged for approximately 10 rubles. Knowing the exchange rate and learning to say "skoi-kah" (how much does it cost?) helped the Moscow visitors to find bargains. Usually the sales clerk helped by writing the amount of rubles on a piece of paper for the Texans. The most popular items purchased by the young travelers were carved wooden boxes and small figures that stacked within each other.

A concert presented by the Wesley Singers the first evening in Moscow proved to be a success, although most of the audience didn't understand English.

"We were not allowed to sing any religious music," explained Hudspeth, "so we presented a program consisting mostly of Broadway hits and folk songs."

"The audiences really enjoyed the selections that we had choreographed," noted Babcock, "and they liked the faster songs so they could clap along with the beat." All of the audiences recognized and enjoyed the arrangements of "Windy" and "You Light Up My Life."

Babcock recalled, "I've always heard that Russians don't smile. But, I think that's a stereotype of people in many big cities. We saw lots of people over there that were smiling and seemed to be happy."

Hudspeth said, "We had plenty of free time, so we were able to walk about without being a part of our group." He continued, "I used to think if you went over there you'd feel as if you were continually being watched or followed. But people only looked at us because of our attire and cameras. It was quite obvious that we were foreign tourists."

Attending a Russian Orthodox Church service one Sunday, Hudspeth recalled, "Although I didn't understand any of the service, it was impressive to see. The church was full, but I noticed most of the people were elderly women. There were very few young people attending the service."

Moscow is a city of museums and historic buildings — more than 150 museums in number. Most of the historic buildings are inside the Kremlin's walls. There's the 15th-century nine-domed Cathedral of the Annunciation. Gold, silver and exquisite jewels are to be found in the Armory Museum. Visitors should try to see the King of Bells (standing 22 feet high and acclaimed to be the heaviest in the world with a weight of 200 tons) and the King of Cannons.

Easily the most recognizable structure in Red Square is St. Basil's Cathedral (built by Ivan the Terrible) with its onion-shaped domes. Across the square is Lenin's Mausoleum. The long line of visitors to the mausoleum is a familiar sight, but the Lubbock travelers only had to queue up for approximately an hour.

A favorite tour in Moscow is the two-hour boat ride on the Moskva River — the cost for the memorable ride is about 25 cents in American money. A visit to the Moscow Zoo and a walk through Gorky Park make for an enjoyable excursion away from museums and the homes of such notables as Dostoevsky and Tolstoy.

Leningrad is also a city of museums (a total of 50), but what surprises most first-time visitors is the beauty of the city accentuated by numerous canals, 600 bridges, and the Neva River.

Formerly known as St. Petersburg, the city was the capital of Russia from 1713 till 1918 and the Fortress of Peter and Paul was the beginning of a great building program. The city's beautiful tree-lined avenues, gardens and parks are the result of Peter the Great's admiration of the architecture and art of Western Europe.

On the outskirts of Leningrad is Catherine the Great's summer palace. Its fountains and gardens are some of the most beautiful in the world.

No visit to Leningrad would be complete without a tour of the Hermitage that contains more than two million exhibits in its six buildings.

Recalling the visit to the Hermitage, Babcock noted, "What impressed me the most was seeing all of the paintings by Rembrandt."

"I think they've got more art by Rembrandt than any other place in the world," added Hudspeth. "There's also art by Leonardo da Vinci, Michelangelo, and there's some modern art by Picasso."

Babcock remarked, "It surprised me to see that much great art in Leningrad. You expect to see it in the Louvre in Paris, but never in Russia."

Most visitors to Russia try to arrive in Leningrad during the month of July when the historical city enjoys the White Nights. From late June through July, the former capital almost experiences a mid-night sun and the nights never really get completely dark.

"Russia is an interesting place to see one time," said Babcock. "But, it isn't the best country to visit if you are recreation oriented. In my opinion, there isn't that much to see and do to justify more than one visit. On the other hand, our visit to Poland was very interesting and I'd like to go there again."

Recalling the ordinary sight of armed military guards in Russia, Hudspeth concluded, "A trip like this is especially good — if only to help you to appreciate the United States more."

Color Added To Gardens

The famous Butchart Gardens near Victoria, British Columbia have recently undergone a massive illumination facelift which has resulted in a spectacular new color display. A beautiful fountain has been created which jets to heights of 60 feet in ever-changing patterns of movement and color.

Waterfalls cascade down steep walls, and a mirror-smooth lake framed by alpine rockeries reflects the blossoms.

Visitors can now wander through the brilliant color of the transformed Sunken Garden, then view 160 varieties of roses in the English Rose Garden.

Puppet and magic shows and strolling musicians also are on the program.

Stock Market Grim Despite Indicators

NEW YORK (AP) — An onlooker who relied on nothing but the stock-price indicators might conclude that Wall Street is in the midst of a solid bull market.

But if that's what it is, hardly anybody seems to be enjoying it.

The Value Line composite index, made up of some 1,700 stocks, has doubled since the end of 1974.

Indicators for the American Stock Exchange and in the over-the-counter market are at or near all-time highs.

Trading volume records were set in April and again early this month at the New York Stock Exchange.

And even the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which has consistently been lagging behind most other market measures, recently touched its highest level in more than a year after climbing 150 points from the end of February to mid-August.

Yet most market commentaries being issued by brokers these days read like anything but invitations to a party.

A typical letter bemoans the "scandalous" federal budget deficit and the "shocking" decline of the dollar to which it has led.

The voices of Wall Street are virtually unanimous in their criticism of the Carter administration and its handling of the economy.

By all indications, pension fund managers, the giants of the marketplace, are more bearish than ever. New data show that they sold more stock than they bought in the first quarter of this year — the first time that has happened since the government began keeping track of their activities.

Mutual funds, for their part, have a near-record 12 percent of their assets out of the market.

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner Smith, the nation's largest brokerage firm, says its cash accounts — a means of measuring patterns among individual investors — have shown stepped-up selling lately after a period of buying, on balance, earlier in the year.

International Moneyline of New York points out that if the Dow Jones industrial average is adjusted for inflation back to 1967 dollars, it stands at about 450, even after its sharp rise this summer.

"This is strictly a selective market," observed Eugene Peroni, an analyst at Paine, Webber, Jackson Curtis Inc. Internal market factors have exerted a favorable influence this summer, he said, but the fundamental news is no better than it was. "There is no check on inflation whatsoever, and the dollar is still in trouble."

Normally, a rising market is taken as a sign of better things to come in the economy, even if it is hard to see any signs of improvement in the current news.

But this time, some brokers maintain that investors are buying out of fear rather than hope: Fear that inflation and the dollar's decline against other currencies will continue. Under their reasoning, people looking for a financial haven are turning to stocks as — in the phrase coined by Salomon Brothers — "the only bargain left."

"It seems to be a bull market without that many participants," said Leslie M. Pollack, chief investment officer at Shearson Hayden Stone Inc. "When they all get in it, then it will be recognized. And of course then it will probably be too late."

It was suggested to Pollack that these seemed to be especially confusing times for investors. "The market is always at least slightly confusing," he said. "If it was easy, everybody would be rich."

U.S. Makes Advances In New Energy Tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has taken a stride ahead of the Soviet Union in trying to harness the sun's fire in a nuclear reactor, scientists say, but it may be 20 years before such reactors produce commercial power.

Project officials say the new development — using a Princeton University test reactor to produce briefly a temperature of 60 million degrees centigrade, four times hotter than the inside of the sun — was made possible by special hydrogen heat injectors.

The injectors, invented at the Energy Department's Oak Ridge, Tenn., National Laboratory and attached to a tokamak fusion test reactor at Princeton, boosted temperatures inside the reactor from 10 million to 60 million degrees in less than half a second.

Dr. Melvin Gottlieb, project chief at Princeton, said the injectors "enabled us to get a jump ahead" of the Soviet Union in the effort to control fusion energy and use it to produce virtually limitless amounts of electricity.

Fusion is the nuclear process that makes the sun blaze and, on Earth, gives the hydrogen bomb its power. The Energy Department is trying to harness that process in a reactor because it could generate electricity using virtually limitless fuel made from seawater and creating almost no radioactive waste.

In contrast to existing reactors which split atoms, a fusion reactor would produce energy by joining atoms together.

Energy Department officials and Gottlieb spelled out details of the Princeton achievement in a news conference Monday. Initial reports of the development, but few details, were reported during the weekend.

Gottlieb said operation of the fusion test machine at 60 million degrees proved for the first time a number of key theories needed for eventual construction of a full-scale reactor producing electricity by the fusion process.

John Deutch, deputy chief of federal energy research, said the Princeton development achieved more than the department expected, sooner than expected.

The 60 million degree temperature attained in the Princeton tokamak device — a kind of doughnut-shaped magnetic bottle 18-inches in diameter — was four times hotter than the interior of the sun and more than twice the previous record of 25 million degrees, also set at Princeton.

"It is unique," Gottlieb said of the achievement.

The high temperature was reached for only about one-tenth of a second because the Princeton device is designed to operate only in half-second spurts.

But Deutch said the result at Princeton suggests a new machine being built at the university, twice as large as the present test device, should be able to achieve a sustained release of fusion energy after it starts operating in 1981.

Free Milk Plan Hits Obstacles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressional effort to provide free milk to needy children backfired for some, when red tape forced thousands of schools to drop the special milk program altogether.

A new study released by the Agriculture Department indicates the 1973 law, which was implemented in fiscal 1975, caused 4,000 to 8,000 schools to drop the program.

The special milk program is separate from the school lunch and breakfast programs.

The 1973 law forced schools to make two half-pints of milk available at lunchtime for needy children, one for the milk program and a second for the separate school lunch program.

Officials said it was difficult to pinpoint exactly how many schools dropped out because other changes made about that time also encouraged dropouts.

In fiscal 1975 participation was reduced by 8,300 schools to 83,742 schools.

Last year Congress tried to reduce the problem. Now free milk under the special milk program is served to needy children at times other than during meals. Free milk under the school lunch program was unaffected.

Before the latest changes, school administrators said they got out of the program because of excessive regulations, too much paperwork and an accountability problem of separating free and paid milk.

"A number of respondents stated that the cost to the school of administering the free milk provision was too high to allow for continuation of the program," the study said.

Others dropped out of the program because of "problems in protecting the identity of free milk recipients."

The study contained several positive results from the program.

It showed that free milk helped raise milk consumption by needy children to the level of other children. Those eligible for free milk received 43 percent more milk at school and 22 percent less milk away from school than other children.

If soft drinks were available at schools, students consumed 6 percent less milk.

There was less milk waste in schools where flavored milk was available, the study said.

The special milk program was established to support dairy prices by providing subsidized milk for school children.

Japanese Continue To Converge On Mount Fuji

By ANDREW HORVAT
MOUNT FUJI, Japan (AP)—When a Japanese becomes indignant about a foreigner's ignorance of things Japanese, he is likely to say, "You still think of Japan as a mysterious Oriental country, the land of Fujiyama, geisha and cherry blossoms."

While the geishas, Japan's traditional female entertainers, have given way to brush bar hostesses and the cherry blossoms must be searched for in valleys formed by concrete and glass, the white cone of Mount Fuji rises above the smog, 70 miles southwest of Tokyo, if not eternally at least 85 days of the year at last count.

There may not be much mysterious about a dormant volcano that last sputtered 173 years ago. However, the fact that 3.6 million Japanese converge on Fuji's slopes each year, and the sight of 18,500 of the climbers, scaling grueling rocky paths to a crater 12,385 feet above sea level on any summer weekend does leave the foreigner thinking he may have come in touch with one of the last mysteries of Japan.

At about 4:30 a.m. the light from the east pierces the grey of dawn, coloring 180 degrees of landscape two miles below with shades of forest green and sea blue.

By sunrise, the 1,500 people who spent a sleepless night crowded in one of five huts on the cinder cone's eastern ledge are joined by thousands making their way from equally cramped resting places below.

Despite the people, the garbage, the smell, the Japanese continue to climb the mountain, venerating it on the one hand, defiling it on the other.

Eighty-year-old pilgrims still chant, "Cleanse the six sins, hope for good weather," as they climb. One still meets the exorcising faith healers — the yamabushi — on their way up, and even the ordinary climber will buy a walking cane with two tiny bells whose tinkle is said to ward off evil spirits.

The religious nationalistic ritual of Fuji climbing has become a popular pastime only in the 20th century. Many of the older climbers who today take their families on an arduous picnic to the top of the mountain made the climb as school children in the 1920s or '30s as part of patriotism-instilling exercises.

The mountain's conical shape presents no sheer cliffs and though the climb may take six hours for adults, children manage to go up in two or three. The patriotic importance of Fuji can still be seen in the pre-World War II "Rising Sun" flags that sell well on the mountain top.

The religious part of the mountain is now confined to the area just below the peak which was awarded to the Sengen Shinto shrine in an 18-year-long dispute with the government that ended in 1973.

From the shrine, where priests still scatter water, rice wine and salt as part of a purifying ritual, one can see some of the 16 golf courses that surround the solitary volcano.

An official of the environment protection section of Yamanashi prefecture said the national park status of the mountain did not prevent its huge forests from being cut down by promoters of one sort or another.

The golf ranges are thriving enterprises, making enough money for one club manager to have been charged with embezzling the equivalent of $5.5 million. Conservationists believe the expansive greens have upset drainage patterns, causing cave-ins and landslides in the area.

Shizuoka prefecture, late in exploiting the tourist attraction of Mount Fuji, has given the go-ahead for a private company to develop a year-round safari park to be inhabited by herds of jungle animals including lions, tigers, and other wild game.

About the only aspect of Fuji that is being left virtually untouched is the garbage left by climbers. Yamanashi prefecture has contributed $1,600 a year to a group of volunteers who periodically help clean up. Over a year, they bring down about 165 tons of soft drink cans, rice wine bottles and other trash, a tiny portion of the mostly non-biodegradable junk abandoned on the slopes.

The money spent for cleaning up is minor considering that merchants on Fuji's Yamanashi side alone take in $175 million in revenue just in July and August when the slopes are open for climbing.

On the Shizuoka side there is an organized attempt to collect garbage at all. The central and local governments have withdrawn all assistance because local vendors were unwilling to put up their share.

For the first time this year, the central government will spend just under $1,000 on a campaign to urge climbers to take their garbage home.

Legal Clinics Springing Up In New York

NEW YORK (AP)—A chain of storefront legal offices has sprung up in the New York metropolitan area, and its founders have turned to television to advertise their bargain-basement prices for legal work.

"The idea of a legal clinic is to allow people to know how much it will cost them before they take legal action," said Michael Heffernan, a founder of The Legal Clinic, a chain with nine offices in Manhattan, The Bronx, Queens, Brooklyn, and Westchester and Nassau counties.

"The reason for the television commercial is to let people know that we can serve them quickly, efficiently — and rather cheaply," he said.

In line with last year's Supreme Court decision allowing lawyers to advertise their fees, the cost of legal services at the Legal Clinic is right up front, in the window of each office.

Each office has in its window a list of fees, ranging from $195 for bankruptcy to $210 for adoption to $95 for a name change. The clinic's fee of $150 for an uncontested divorce, Heffernan said, is "well below what it would cost you elsewhere."

Heffernan, 30, is a former litigation director with the Legal Services Corp. His partner, Robert Goldman, is a former Manhattan assistant district attorney who specialized in litigation.

Last March, Heffernan and Goldman assembled a dozen lawyers and an equal number of paralegal assistants to open The Legal Clinic.

Since then, 600 persons have stepped into the offices and 450 have become clients, paying an initial $15 fee to find out exactly how much their proposed legal action will cost, including court costs.

The firm's first 30-second commercial focuses on a man behind the desk as he ticks off the prices of various services at the Legal Clinic.

"It's very low-key," Heffernan said. "The message is, if you have a legal problem, we can help you, and help you for less money."

Crane Habitat Areas Eyed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Interior Department wants to list eight additional areas in five states as critical habitat for the endangered whooping crane.

The new areas — in Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, North and South Dakota — would be protected against any government action that could hurt the cranes.

All of the proposed areas "provide secure nightly roosting sites and food during the spring and fall migrations of the Wood Buffalo-Aransas whooping crane flock," the department said in a statement Wednesday.

The flock, which numbered 70 in April, migrates each year from its nesting grounds in Canada to its wintering grounds in an area near Aransas National Refuge in Texas.

The areas the department wants to protect contain sand bars and other shallow water sites where the cranes rest for the night, as well as insects, crayfish, frogs and plants needed for food.

Merge Attempt Defeated

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Board members who didn't want their company, MBPXL of Wichita, Kan., to lose its separate identity have succeeded in defeating a proposed merger with ConAgra Inc., a spokesman for MBPXL has said.

The opposing board members "had decided MBPXL would be better off staying independent of the larger conglomerate (ConAgra)," Erving H. Priceman said. "They just didn't want to lose the company's identity — basically, that's it," he noted.

The board's vote last week came two days after the proposed merger of the Wichita meatpacking firm into ConAgra was announced.

Officials of ConAgra said they were surprised by the MBPXL announcement. President Charles M. Harper said, "We regret the decision... We continue to believe the merger would have been mutually beneficial to the shareholders of both companies."

ConAgra would have been the surviving company after the merger, although the Wichita firm would have continued as an autonomous subsidiary. The merged firm would have been one of the largest food companies in the nation.

Tiny Borough Breaks Away From 'Drys'

By KAREN SOUTHWICK
SNPJ, Pa. (UPI) — "Do you know the way to S-N-P-J?" just might become the new drinking song among beer lovers in picturesque Enon Valley.

Tiny, 480-acre SNPJ Borough — with 17 registered residents — broke away from "dry" North Beaver Township in Lawrence County so it could direct its own development. One of the first changes was to permit the use of alcoholic beverages.

The new borough, about 40 miles north of Pittsburgh, encompasses the national resort area of the Slovenian National Benefit Society (SNPJ stands for the Slovenian equivalent).

To get there, motorists take meandering Pa. Route 108 through the rolling hills of extreme western Pennsylvania and, just short of the Ohio border, turn in at an even narrower road with a small sign proclaiming: "Borough of SNPJ." SNPJ split off from the township to form its own government in July 1977 to take control of its own destiny, Mayor Raymond Russ said.

Russ, a three-member council and a secretary-treasurer were elected from among SNPJ's 17 residents in an election that drew 93 percent of the voters. Russ explained Pennsylvania law requires three council members and a mayor for borough government.

Council member Claire Jergal denied rumors that SNPJ left the township primarily because of a dispute over the use of alcoholic beverages, but she acknowledged "everybody enjoys a cocktail."

The SNPJ club and bar is "for members only," but it's easy enough to join. Just purchase insurance from SNPJ, originally formed in 1904 as a fraternal society by Slovenians who emigrated from Yugoslavia to work in steel mills and coal mines. They also started their own insurance agency, with some 80,000 members nationwide today.

The resort was established here in 1965 through contributions from the national society. Western Pennsylvania and Ohio have the bulk of SNPJ membership.

Camp SNPJ offers fishing and boating on a man-made seven-acre lake, swimming in an olympic-sized pool, camping, hiking, tennis, handball, balina, basketball, softball and a nine-hole golf course.

A heritage room displays donated heirlooms from all over the country, including the unique "button box" accordion favored by Slovenian musicians.

The resort's 48 cabins were booked solid for the summer, and officials anticipate a turnout of 8,000 for the Labor Day weekend — designated "SNPJ Day." A new "Miss SNPJ" will be chosen then.

Russ and the Council foresee a future for SNPJ as more than a resort community. They intend to add to the mobile home park already built and are considering construction of condominiums and homes for SNPJ's senior citizens.

Police and fire protection handled under an intergovernmental agreement with North Beaver Township, but "there'll be no problem with environmentalists," Mrs. Jergal said. "We have our own sewage system."

School Report Says Firing Teachers Difficult

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
United Press International Writer

Dismissing teachers is a critical issue on the schoolfront, the American Association of School Administrators reports. And it's tough — even if the teacher is among the 10 percent rated incompetent. And it adds to the expense of running a school. The dismissal process often means the school must dip into its budget for lawyer fees and other expenses connected with a hearing or perhaps a court trial.

A new association report aims to help administrators deal with the reduction in staff problem and includes a survey of 1,700 school districts showing dismissal problems "of serious proportions."

"Declining enrollments and determined, economy-minded voter taxpayers of the California proposition 13 variety are forcing schools to do something totally foreign to their experience of recent decades: cut back their teaching staff," the report states.

School officials participating in the association survey said they can't see the taxpayers being mute on the subject of retaining all currently employed teachers when there are fewer students.

Some of the additional problems inherent in the dismissal situation:

- How the best teachers be retained when they don't have seniority?
- Can districts keep recently hired minority teachers if layoffs are based on a last-in, first-out rule?

The report advises:

- Where a reduction in force is foreseeable, even on the distant horizon, school district planning and preparation should start two to three years before the cutting.

The report gives superintendents, school board members, principals and other school officials "how to do it" information they need to fire incompetent and to make a legal, defensible reduction in force.

Paul B. Salmon, AASA executive director, said:

"Often the administrators are up against tough lawyers and teachers determined to hang onto their jobs, no matter how much disservice they have done to kids, their parents, and the community."

"We're trying to make the administrator's job a little easier."

In all but five states causes for teacher dismissal are described in state laws. There are 23 causes specified in the laws, according to Floyd G. Delon, Professor of Educational Administration at the University of Missouri.

These include: incompetence, 33 states; unfitness for service, 4; neglect of duty and negligence, 26; incapacity, 19; insubordination, 22; conviction of specified crimes, 12; immorality, 23; drunkenness and intemperance, 7; conduct unbecoming a teacher, 10; good, just or sufficient cause, 24.

Administrators responding to the association survey were asked to name the most successful means of dismissing a teacher whose performance is unsatisfactory.

The answers included:

- Illinois superintendent: "The most successful method is — 1, documentation, 2, documentation, 3, documentation."
- New York superintendent: "Build an air-tight written record of at least 18-months duration, hire a lawyer and proceed from day to day with the hearing and trial considered inevitable."
- Oregon superintendent: "Have plenty of documented evidence of incompetence and lack of influence."
- Connecticut superintendent: "Follow state guidelines and law. This requires having volumes of data and following due process. While it's lots of work, it's the only way."

Some administrators see a cutback as a chance of weeding out deadwood, eliminating wasteful practices, giving parents and taxpayers a better buy for their education dollars.

The challenge is maintaining student achievement or improving it.

The report, "Staff Dismissal: Problems and Solutions," notes that school bosses believe dismissal of staff is more difficult today than it was a decade ago. The tight teacher market and tenure laws are the reasons.

"Many incompetent teachers stay on their jobs because school administrators frequently do not know how to fire them, not because of tenure laws," the report states.

Too many school principals are not tough-minded enough in evaluating teachers, don't know how to collect evidence that can be used to dismiss teachers, and fail to follow the dismissal and due process requirements established by state law, according to lawyers quoted in the report.

Teachers unions complicate the dismissal problem, even when it is a reduction in staff dictated by declining enrollments.

The unions these days are more intent on building job security clauses into local negotiated contracts than in obtaining pay raises for their members, the report said.

Projections show public school enrollment will be down 6 million students in 1986, from a 1971 high of 46.6 million.

Senior and junior highs by 1990 will be serving an estimated 25 percent fewer students.

Woman Tells Aging Panel Of Hardships

CINCINNATI (AP) — Mable Rottinghaus says she "learned the lessons of the Depression." She never turns on the lights at home, but uses a flashlight, and lives on hamburger, bologna and instant soup.

The 71-year-old retired bookkeeper told a hearing of the House Select Committee on Aging she was not eligible for food stamps because her income is more than $300 monthly.

She allows $70 a month for food and works at a part-time job in the fall to pay her winter fuel bills, she said.

"I look at steak but at $3.95 a pound, it's too rich for my blood," she said. "I learned the lessons of the Depression."

The woman was one of several people who testified this week as the committee held its first hearing outside Washington.

The committee is gathering information for a proposal to help the elderly cope with the economic realities of old age and inflation. More hearings are scheduled in other cities.

Bessie Hardaway, a member of a local panel on housing for senior citizens, pleaded for more public housing.

"We put a price tag on our antiques. We polish them up and shine them and we put them in a place where they won't get hurt. Why do we just shove our elderly any place?" she asked.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, said the elderly poor constitute little more than one-tenth of the population, but account for 29 percent of those with annual incomes below $3,200.

"The stingy benefit levels of federal programs for the elderly poor save the taxpayers little money," Luken said.

"When we hold back on benefits that allow elderly persons the means to satisfy basic nutritional requirements or heat their homes, we pay back twice the amount in medical care costs."

"What we are really talking about is people spending years going to bed hungry every night, living in housing unfit for human occupation, living in perpetual fear of catastrophic illness and sinking deeper into want and despair."

"The statistics are appalling. They stand as an indictment of American society," Luken said.

Peking Given Ominous Warning

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union escalated its war of words with China today and warned Peking's leaders they are on a "militarist expansionist course" that could lead to a real war and cause vast destruction and loss of life in China.

"The Soviet Union will resolutely oppose China's militarist expansionist course," Pravda declared. "No reasonable person can believe that the Chinese people want the Peking leaders to plunge the country into war. # Foes Of School Busing Claim Victory In Sight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Opponents of court-ordered school busing to achieve desegregation believe a "death knell" is sounding for the controversial practice. They point to a narrow 49-47 defeat of one of the most sweeping anti-busing proposals ever to reach the Senate floor.

Roth said if President Carter had supported the amendment, as he said he would in his campaign, it would have succeeded. Both men attributed the tabling of the amendment to a maneuver by Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., who was armed with almost 100 amendments to the education bill which he would have called up if the Roth measure was adopted.

It would have required a court to find "a discriminatory purpose in education" was a "principal motivating factor" behind the racial segregation before busing could be ordered as a remedy.

Vacca declined to say whether he would call a strike by his 181,000-member union. "I am fully aware of the law on strikes," he told reporters. Vacca supported acceptance of the proposed pact.

Veniremen Deliberating Sentences For Robbery

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A jury this afternoon was deliberating punishment for two men who pleaded guilty to a June 20 holdup at a local convenience store.

Dan Curtis Fitts, 21, of 1103-B 52nd St., and Larry Dwayne King, 17, of 2618-C Weber Drive, admitted participating in the 3 a.m. holdup at a 7-Eleven Store at 27th Street and Avenue Q in which approximately $90 was reported taken.

Both men pleaded guilty at the start of the trial, but prosecutors proceeded with evidence before jurors.

Defense attorneys Tommy Turner and Charles Snuggs today requested probation for the two, arguing that neither had ever been convicted before of a felony.

Prosecutor David Nelson asked for lengthy prison terms.

Earlier, former convenience store clerk Bryan Jackson O'Neal told jurors how he felt when he allegedly saw a pistol leveled at him from a distance of two to three feet.

"I felt a sudden flush, whether blood, adrenalin, or what, it's hard to describe," he said.

O'Neal testified that three youths entered the store around 3 a.m. and asked for help in locating a taxi.

Suddenly, he said, one of the three — whom he identified as Fitts — produced a pistol. At Nelson's request, the witness then told jurors his reaction to the reported shock. He added that he had been terrified and afraid for his life.

O'Neal said Fitts escorted him to a small storeroom.

"He simply told me not to come out. He said he was not going to kill me. He then told me to turn around and face the wall," the witness recounted.

Nelson asked what was running through his mind.

"Quite frankly, I felt that if I was going to be shot, that would probably be the most likely time," O'Neal said.

He said he obeyed orders to turn and face the wall. The gunman, he said, then left.

O'Neal said a second of the trio later checked him in the storeroom, warning him not to cause trouble.

The complainant said he remained in the storeroom for approximately five minutes, exiting when he heard a radio. He said he walked out of the storeroom to find that a police officer was already there in response to a possible robbery.

Testimony indicated that the three suspects were apprehended within minutes of the holdup because of quick actions by a neighborhood resident.

Charles Lokey, 25, said he was on the balcony of his apartment when he saw a car park behind the convenience store. He testified that he became suspicious and called police before any of the group from the car actually entered the business.

Lokey also testified that he later saw the car leave the area, traveling north on Avenue S, and informed police.

Officer James H. Taylor testified he stopped a car containing both defendants — along with another adult male, an adult female, two juvenile females and a baby — at 19th Street and Avenue S.

Police Cpl. Charles Hosmer testified that he searched the car and found an automatic pistol, cocked and with a live round in the chamber, under the right front seat.

He also testified that $87 in cash was found in the car.

Hosmer said that he found three live rounds in King's possession when frisking him.

Boren Takes Oath About Accusation

By JERRY SCARBROUGH
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Gov. David Boren, his hand placed squarely on a Bible, swore Wednesday that he is not and never has been a homosexual.

A minor U.S. Senate candidate, Anthony Points, accused Boren of being a homosexual during the Democratic Senate primary campaign and another candidate, George Miskovsky, demanded that Boren state under oath whether or not he was a homosexual.

The governor labeled the allegation "a vicious lie" at the time the charge was aired, but he said he waited until after the primary election to make the denial under oath because he wanted to wait until his critics had been eliminated from the race.

Boren led the seven-man field in the primary election Tuesday and will face former U.S. Rep. Ed Edmondson in the Sept. 19 runoff primary. Miskovsky finished fifth and Points finished last.

"I do have a modicum of self respect," Boren said. "There's not a person in the state who would not resent these kinds of charges."

"As long as the primary campaign was in progress, I did not think it was appropriate to allow myself to be diverted from my campaign by the vile and malicious charges made against me by some candidates," he stated at a Capitol news conference.

"Now that those candidates are no longer in the race, I think it is time once and for all to put to rest the vicious lies which have been hurled against me," he said.

Then, pounding his fist on a Bible he said was used in his inaugural ceremony as governor and his wedding, he swore the oath Miskovsky had requested that he swear several weeks ago.

"I know what homosexuals and bisexuals are," he said. "I further swear that I am not a homosexual or bisexual. I further swear that I have never been a homosexual or bisexual. And I further swear that I have never been engaged in any homosexual or bisexual activities, nor do I approve of or condone them."

Asked why he answered the charged anew, after the issue had subsided without any apparent effect on his Senate race, Boren said, "I have been faced with these vicious lies through the campaign. One thing I would want to pass on to my children is a good name and a good reputation."

He said he felt the charges had no effect on the campaign because "by the time it was over with, half the people of the state almost were included in those charges."

Teacher Group Raps Tuition Tax Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Federation of Teachers voted unanimously today to deny campaign support to congressional candidates who favor tuition tax credits for the parents of children in private elementary and secondary schools.

Tuition tax credit proposals in Congress are "the most devastating proposals to hit public schools in their history," said Edward J. McElroy Jr., an AFT vice president from Rhode Island.

McElroy introduced the resolution today and urged its passage to end a potential "purposeful misuse of scarce (financial) resources."

Only one no vote was heard as the resolution was adopted by a voice vote of 2,700 delegates attending the AFT convention.

Albert Shanker, president of the 500,000-member teachers' union, had predicted the delegates would not support tuition tax credits.

Alexander Barkan, executive director of COPE, the political arm of the AFL-CIO, told a breakfast session today that the members should increase their political activism to fight what he said was the worst labor movement opposition he had seen in his 40 years of union work.

"Common to all unions is what I regard as a threat from the right — the union haters, the union baiters — to the labor movement as an institution," Barkan said.

He cited the creation of an anti-union council by the National Association of Manufacturers and congressional defeat of several union-backed bills, including labor law reform proposals.

"We have to be much more careful than we have been in the past with our endorsements," he concluded.

Union leaders also announced that Shanker had been re-elected to his third, two-year term as president of the teachers' federation. Shanker, also president of the New York City union, received the equivalent of 313,923 votes to defeat his only opponent, Graciela M. Nelson of Kansas City. She polled the equivalent of 1,735 votes.

The politically active union wants to punish those congressmen on an issue Shanker has termed "life or death for public education as we know it."

The AFT and other opponents claim the tax breaks for parents who pay their children's tuition at private elementary and secondary schools will siphon badly needed money from the nation's public schools and encourage segregation.

The Senate last week voted 65-27 for a bill that would allow parents or students to claim a tax credit of up to $250 for each semester spent in a private college or vocational school. Before the final vote, however, 41 senators voted to retain sections in the bill that would have provided parallel benefits for elementary and secondary school levels.

In the House, the vote was 237-158 for a bill containing provisions for elementary, secondary and college tuition tax credits.

The measures now are before a conference committee, which will try to resolve the differences. Also pending is the threat of a veto from President Carter, who sees the bills' estimated $1.2 million to $1.7 million annual cost as too high.

Clayton Proposes Abolishing Tenure

AUSTIN (UPI) — Speaker Bill Clayton is drafting a proposal abolishing tenure for faculty members at state universities, but a member of the speaker's staff says that does not mean Clayton will push the proposal when the Legislature convenes in January.

The plan would replace tenure with a 10-year renewable contract for college and university faculty members but would not affect professors who already have tenure.

The Coordinating Board — Texas College and University System has been working for three years on a revision of its policy regarding tenure, academic freedom and responsibility and is scheduled to present the proposed new policy at its October meeting.

Chess Masters Adjourn Game Amid Storm

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Defending chess champion Anatoly Karpov and challenger Viktor Korchnoi adjourned the 16th game of their world championship match today after 42 moves and chess experts predicted it had the makings of a draw.

They played as a tropical storm lashed this northern resort city with heavy rains and winds, touching off landslides and a power blackout.

The game will be resumed Friday.

Karpov, the 27-year-old Soviet champion, has a 3-game-to-1 edge over his 47-year-old challenger, a Soviet defector.

The first to win six games takes the $350,000 first prize and the world title. The loser gets $200,000. Eleven of the previous 15 games ended in draws, which do not count in the tournament scoring. Play began July 18 and could take months.

Korchnoi, playing black, sealed his 42nd move after 4 hours and 45 minutes of play.

He used a French defense for the first time in this tournament, although in their previous encounter, in 1974 in Moscow, Karpov and Korchnoi used the French tactic seven times with neither man able to score a victory.

"Black is slightly better, but it will probably end in a draw," said British grandmaster Raymond Keene, chief second to the challenger.

Former world champion Mikhail Tal of the Soviet Union also predicted the game would end in a draw, as did Eugene Torre, of the Philippines, Asia's first grandmaster.

The game started quietly, with Karpov opening with a pawn to king four. But the tempo picked up on the ninth move, when Korchnoi engaged the champion in an exchange of major pieces, including their queens.

Following is the move-by-move of the 16th game Thursday:

Local Judge Revokes Villarreal's Probation

District Judge Deniz Bevers today revoked the five-year probation of Damacio Villarreal, recently indicted for injury to a child in a case in which the child — reportedly practically a vegetable when admitted to a local hospital — subsequently died.

Villarreal, 25, whose address was listed in records as 2134 Emory St., had been assessed the probation after a Jan. 20, 1976 theft conviction.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Darnell today introduced evidence concerning the alleged child abuse incident to back his request that the theft probation be revoked.

The defendant was indicted for injury to a child after four-year-old Elias Caballero Jr. was admitted to Methodist Hospital July 24.

Darnell today said that, because of developments since the child was first admitted, it is possible that the case will be reconsidered by the next grand jury.

According to testimony from a pediatrician at Methodist, the child, covered with bruises, had no spontaneous respiration when first admitted July 24, and had to be hooked to a machine.

The doctor said the patient's pupils were dilated and fixed and that the child exhibited little reflex action.

Social worker Ray Dominguez told Darnell he had spoken with both the defendant and the defendant's common-law wife — the mother of the Caballero child — July 24.

Dominguez said the defendant told him that he had been preparing breakfast for the child about 9 a.m. when he heard a loud noise. The defendant had indicated the child had been standing on a chair, Dominguez stated.

According to Dominguez, Villarreal said he looked around and saw the little boy on the floor, apparently after falling backward from the chair.

Dr. George W. Reichl, a pathologist who performed the autopsy on the child after he died Aug. 2, said the cause of death was brain injury.

The pathologist's testimony indicated there had been trauma toward one side of the head.

The doctor said that in his opinion if the child had fallen backward, trauma would have been toward the back of the head.

Guam's Constitution In Center Of Controversy

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
AGANA, Guam (UPI) — Guamanians go to the polls in November to ratify or reject their constitution amid accusations that the document is discriminatory and assurances that any defects can be ironed out after approval.

The constitution would replace the Organic Act imposed by the U.S. Congress on the territory in 1950, which made the Pacific islanders U.S. citizens and established a civilian government.

Since then swift political changes have given America's outpost 3,300 miles west of Honolulu more local autonomy and ratification of the constitution would be another milestone.

While election of a 21-seat legislature came with the Organic Act, until 1970 the island's governor was appointed by the U.S. president. Changes in the court system in 1974, put all three branches of the territorial government — executive, legislative and judiciary — under local control.

Thirty-two delegates worked on the proposed constitution during the early months of 1978. Certain provisions were included to preserve the customs of the Chamorros, the largest ethnic group in the population of 106,000.

Senators and Guam officials were able to overcome the first objection by the Justice Department that the constitution did not state the supremacy of federal laws over local statutes by pointing out at hearings in May that the constitution left no doubt that federal laws take precedence.

But in June, the Guam bar association submitted its own brief to Congress, contending the proposed constitution violated the U.S. Constitution.

The brief said the clauses specifically referring to the Chamorros, descendants of ancient Micronesians, were discriminatory. The association said allowing Chamorros special rights to offshore fishing and marine resources would be discriminatory to non-Chamorros.

"Courts have time and again struck down legislation which granted special privileges to certain groups or individuals regarding fishing and the harvesting of marine resources," the brief said.

Also recommended for deletion from the constitution was a clause upholding a Chamorro custom of orally transferring property rights.

Another target was the proposed division of the island voting districts based on voter registration figures instead of population. The brief called the provision "unconstitutional" and a "violation of equal rights protection."

While the constitution drafters were relieved when the 60-day deadline for the senate to suggest changes passed in July without any comment, the bar association's criticisms have been widely publicized.

The document's fate now rests with the voters. Rejection would send it back to Congress.

The initial reaction has been confusion. Chamorro fishermen said they did not understand how practices that have become a part of their culture could be considered discriminatory. Some worried that the intention of the constitution writers to protect them could backfire by drawing attention to what was previously accepted.

Several businessmen who moved here from different states questioned the sense of ratifying a document which, as the first constitution, would go down in local history with obvious discrepancies.

Carl Gutierrez, the head of the constitutional convention, urged voters to approve the document. While admitting there were some possible areas for challenge, he said changes could be made by amending the document after ratification rather than by rejecting it.

Guamanians have a tendency for large voting turnouts. While the Chamorros are 44,000 strong, there are 25,000 military personnel, 7,000 Americans who decided to move to the territory, a growing Filipino community with the rest Chinese, Japanese and Koreans.

Gutierrez, a local democratic senator, and other supporters say they cannot see any major flaw to warrant a vote against the constitution.

But no one can predict the outcome the bar association's opinions will have on a multiracial community voting on its first constitution, with clauses lawyers consider discriminatory and unconstitutional.

Test Hole Drilling Resumes

AMARILLO (AP) — Drilling resumes today on a 4,000-foot test hole to determine if radioactive nuclear waste materials can safely be buried in the Texas Panhandle.

State District Court Judge George Dowlen refused Wednesday to issue a temporary injunction that would have further halted work at a site in Randall County southeast of Amarillo.

Randall County commissioners won a temporary restraining order Aug. 15 that stopped the drilling. Dowlen declined Wednesday to continue the prohibition on drilling.

He said he would rule Friday on motions by defendants to either dismiss the county's suit or move the case to a district court in Austin.

Randall County commissioners filed suit to stop the test hole drilling after several hundred residents signed petitions early this month protesting the project.

Defendants in the suit include Rex H. White, executor of the estate left by his parents on whose land the drilling site is located; Gruy Federal Inc. of Houston; Megargel Drilling Co. and the Texas Department of Water Resources.

A spokesman for Gruy Federal, which contracted with the U.S. Department of Energy to drill the test hole, said about 865 feet had been drilled when the project stopped. Megargel Drilling subcontracted with Gruy for the action site work.

At Wednesday's hearing, Rick Wilcox, first assistant criminal district attorney for Randall County, argued that Dowlen's decision should be based on possible harm to subsurface water supplies that could occur as a result of the drilling.

Robert Adcock of Canyon, an engineer with Texas Department of Public Health, testified that if the drilling operation is mismanaged, water supplies could be contaminated by salt in the Palo Duro Basin formation.

But Ed Larman of Perryton, who supervised cementing of the drilling operation, testified for Gruy Federal that the test hole was cemented 550 feet beneath the ground — 100 feet deeper than any known water strata.

LP&L Board Seeks Reserves

The Electric Utilities Board agreed Wednesday to appeal to the city council today to allow Lubbock Power and Light to retain nearly $440,000 of its revenue for capital improvements.

City Manager Larry Cunningham's proposed budget would have permitted the city-owned utility to retain a larger slice of its earnings, but budget paring by the council eliminated the utility board's proposed reserve fund.

Board chairman George Meenaghan said the nearly $440,000 is earmarked for a possible interconnect system with Southwestern Public Service Co.

Board member Betty Wheeler said she was "concerned about a reserve fund" and added, "It's imperative that (such a fund) be established."

Meenaghan, who plans to testify at the council's last public hearing on the budget today, said a bond issue would be the only recourse for future capital improvements if the utility is not allowed to set up a reserve fund.

The board also heard from Coy Harris, who represents a local firm experimenting with wind power generation.

Harris is seeking to gain permission to link generators to the city power source so that customers might one day avail themselves of an alternative energy source.

Bill Wood, director of electric utilities, said he anticipates no problems with Harris' request, but he cautioned that additional study of the proposal is necessary.

Tom Nevins, the city's right-of-way agent, told the board an appraiser has estimated it will cost the city about $24,400 to secure easements along the route that would be followed by a proposed power line. The large line would replace smaller lines which already tie into the Holly Avenue Power Station southeast of the city.

Private Tax Meet Bared

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock school trustees acknowledged Wednesday that a majority of them met privately last week with leaders of the local tax revolt. But trustees said that, in their minds, the "unofficial" gathering did not violate the Texas Open Meetings Act.

Indeed, said school board president Charles Waters, it was "completely unintentional" that four of the seven trustees showed up at the session of the Lubbock Property Owners Association directors.

The breakfast meeting at a local cafeteria took place Friday morning, four days before the school board held a public hearing on the school system's budget and tax rate for the coming year.

Waters said school trustees individually were invited to sit down with the association — unaware that their fellow board members also were coming.

"When I was invited — I believe it was on Thursday — I thought I was going to attend. When some other board members showed up, what could we do?"

"It was their (the association directors') meeting. We (the school trustees) didn't have any control over who was there," Waters said.

At any rate, he said, "no business, not even tentative" matters were conducted by the four school board members in attendance. School trustees "simply answered some questions about the budget and heard their (the association directors') platform" for more tax relief.

School board members Harold Harger, Brad Crawford and Lynn Stafford also showed up at the meeting, Waters said.

Mrs. Stafford confirmed Waters' account of the gathering. "I had no idea that anybody else had been invited," she said.

Even though a majority of the school board ended up attending, Mrs. Stafford said she was unaware the gathering could have been a violation of the law. "It was so informal. We were there not as a board, but as individuals."

The Texas Open Meetings Law defines a "meeting" as any deliberation by a quorum of members of a governmental body at which public business or policy is discussed or considered, or formal action is taken.

The law specifically excludes as a meeting the gathering of public officials for social functions and for conventions or workshops as long as no formal action is taken and there is no deliberation of public business.

In order to hold a meeting, the school board must post notice of the time, place and agenda. No such notice was given regarding the get-together between school trustees and the property owners' association.

Robert Green, an association director who Tuesday protested the school district's new budget at a public hearing, disclosed Wednesday that the breakfast meeting had taken place.

Dr. Gene Hedley, who chairs the association's board, said an attempt was made to keep the meeting secret. Hedley said he thought he had mentioned the meeting to reporters.

He said he saw nothing wrong with the gathering because school trustees were acting in their "unofficial" capacities. It was just an informal gathering. We invited several of the school board members to come have breakfast with us and discuss some of our problems. We just wanted to visit with them."

Waters said it was at the Friday meeting that the association asked school trustees to cut the district's tax rate a dime more than the school board had proposed, remove cars from the tax roll and increase the district's homestead exemption for the elderly from $1,000 to $10,000.

On Tuesday the board approved a 20-cent tax cut, two cents more than originally planned, but rejected the other requests.

School Board To Buy Land

Lubbock Independent School District trustees have voted to acquire a 20-acre site south of Loop 289, at 80th Street and Avenue N, for a new junior high school.

The school board voted late Tuesday to authorize the deal with Tera Land Company. In essence, the transaction involves swapping a 10-acre site that the school district already owns but doesn't intend to use, for the junior high tract.

"We're trading them 10 acres for 20 — and getting $37,000 to boot. It's a good deal," Superintendent Ed Irons said.

The 10-acre tract at issue is located in northwest Lubbock, inside Loop 289. Irons said the district has no foreseeable use for the property.

Technically, Tera is buying the 10-acre tract for $100,000, and selling the 20-acre site to the district for $63,000. The school district has had an option to buy the 20-acre site for five months.

The site will be the location for a new junior high school originally proposed to be built in Farrar Estates. Under its court-ordered integration plan, the district in April agreed to move the proposed Farrar Estates junior high eastward to accommodate students from the recently closed Struggs Junior High School.

On Sept. 29, 1972, Japan and mainland China agreed to resume diplomatic relations. Japan and Taiwan severed relations.

"Life imitates art," wrote Oscar Wilde. In 1965, a hand was widely published and was credited to Giorgio Belladonna, regarded by many as the world's best player. He denied having made the play, and subsequent research proved the deal to be a composition by Paul Lukacs. This hand, from the Open Paris event in the Fifth World Bridge Olympiad, is almost a carbon copy of that problem, and earned for the declarer, Joe Amsbury of England, an entry in the Bois Brilliancy Prize competition.

The contract of four spades was a popular one. Looking at all four hands, it would seem that the contract is doomed—except for the club ace, every important key card is badly placed. If declarer discards two hearts on the diamonds, he must still lose two hearts, the ace of clubs and the king of spades.

Amsbury chose to take advantage of the favorable opening lead by discarding his two clubs on the high diamonds. Even now it seems that he will have to lose three hearts and a trump, for if he comes to his hand with a club ruff to lead a heart to the king, East can win the ace and shift to a trump. When West wins the second heart, he can remove dummy's last trump, and the defenders must score another heart trick.

Declarer's solution was elegant. After taking dummy's high diamonds, he ran the nine of hearts! West won the trick cheaply with the ten, but the contract could no longer be defeated.

West found the best defense—a trump shift. Declarer won the ten and led a heart to the king and ace, but East did not have a second trump to return. His club return was ruffed by declarer, and a heart ruff felled the queen and set up the jack for the game-going trick. Declarer lost only two heart tricks and a trump.

Canned Sardines: Convenient, Nutritious

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (Special) — When you're planning that next outing — whether it's boating, camping or picnicking, and you're faced with too much gear and not enough room, stow away a few cans of delicious and versatile sardines. They're big on nutrition, flavor and convenience and small on space.

The perfect carry-along food, sardines are packed with vitamins, minerals and a healthy portion of protein — in fact, 40% of your daily requirement is found in one 3-ounce serving. That same serving contributes all the vitamins D and B12 you'll need all day, plus almost one third the recommended amounts of calcium, phosphorus and niacin. In addition, sardines supply iron, magnesium and riboflavin to your diet.

Even more good news! A whole can (3½ ounces) of sardines contain only 260 calories — so they're ideal protein source for reducing diets — on the go or at home. And the most exciting thing about sardines, naturally, is their uniquely melon, smoky flavor. They complement most hearty foods and are tasty and filling all by themselves.

With storable, tailable sardines, nutrition-loaded meals are always at hand and so quick and easy to prepare. Serve sardines with hot crusty bread and a favorite beverage, or surprise the crew with a pasta dish featuring sardines, such as Ships Ahoy Casserole. Quickly made on a portable stove or in a small galley, this robust dish starts with two types of noodles, then bacon and seasoned peas are added.

Eggs and savory sardines garnish this tempting meal-in-one.

Hearty appetites are usually the order of the day for all kinds of adventurers, so let sardines — with their high quality and smoky flavor, fill the bill for the outdoorsmen in your family.

ROAST DUCK
Add flavor to roast duck by stuffing its cavity with chunks of fresh Bartlett pears, prunes and onions before roasting. A good way to cook out the excess fat is to roast the duck for the first hour tightly wrapped in foil. Carefully uncover and drain off fat. Finish roasting, uncovered, until brown and crisp. Fill pear halves with orange marmalade and bake around duck during last 20 minutes of cooking.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Is losing things a disease? And if so, is there a cure? My son is 30 now, and you would not believe the number of things he has lost in his life. In college he was constantly losing his billfold, books, car keys, briefcases, coats and practically an entire wardrobe! Since that time, he hasn't improved. He keeps losing watches, sunglasses clothes, computers and every type of sports equipment you can name. (He even lost an electric blanket once!) This week his billfold was mailed to him from the sports arena where he had lost it. I must have at least 50 beautiful argyle socks — but only one of each kind, because he "lost" the mates. I am so tired of looking for his things, I am ready to give up. Is there any hope? He's such an easy-going, charming guy, he never gets upset at losing anything. Even a girl. Help me.

LOSER'S MOTHER
Dear Mother: The fact that you wrote to tell me about your son's problem might be a clue to the solution. He has never had to develop a sense of responsibility because he has always had a mother to run interference for him. Let him keep track of his own belongings or suffer the loss. Losing things is not a "disease" — it's a careless habit.

DEAR ABBY: I have been trying to find an insurance company that will cover maternity expenses for a single woman and have been unable to locate one so far. I would greatly appreciate your assistance in finding an insurance company offering this type of coverage.
STILL LOOKING IN CALIF.

Dear Still: I don't know where in California you've looked, but apparently you have overlooked some of the most familiar names in insurance companies. I am informed that in almost every case, whatever a married woman is covered for, a single woman must also be covered for — no discrimination!

DEAR ABBY: There is a local hang-out in our small town where I met a boy from another state. We just rode around and talked and he asked to see me the next night. I liked him, so I said OK. That night he told me he was married and had two kids. I should have said goodbye right then and there, but I liked him too much. Abby, I only intended to have a good time and forget about him, and he said he had the same intentions, but it wasn't that simple for either of us. He says he's in love with me, and I know I love him. He says he's thinking about divorcing his wife and marrying me. It's gone beyond the point of turning back. I think about him night and day; I can't give him up, even if he is another woman's man. What should I do?

HUNG UP AT 17
Dear Hung Up: As long as you keep telling yourself you CAN'T give him up, you won't be able to. Tell yourself you CAN give him up because you must.

Wipe the stardust out of your eyes, little girl. If he should divorce his wife and marry you, what would you have? A guy who romances another girl when his wife is out of sight. Is that the kind of man you want for a husband? Think about it. Then lose him.

If you put off writing letters, because you don't know what to say, get Abby a booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long-stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby: 152 Lady Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

U.S., Haiti Settling Aid Package

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The United States and Haiti are ironing out details of an agreement that could double U.S. aid to this impoverished nation, conditional on wide-ranging reforms by the Haitian government, U.S. officials here said.

They added that the program could pump in up to $125 million in new assistance over the next five years. Officials in Washington confirmed that a substantial aid boost conditioned on reform is being considered, but said the $125 million figure is excessive. They declined to give a dollar estimate.

U.S. Ambassador William B. Jones described the program last month to Haiti's 27-year-old president, Jean-Claude Duvalier, and made clear it depended on the execution of the reform program, sources said.

Duvalier is reported to have understood and accepted the program, under which the United States would provide up to an additional $25 million annually over the next five years to fund Haitian development ministries and start public works projects in the countryside to get people working. Regular U.S. aid to Haiti for 1978 is projected at $33 million, up from $27.7 million last year.

Lawrence E. Harrison, director of the U.S. Agency for International Development, confirmed that Jones had presented the program and its conditions to Duvalier.

"The discussions are continuing and things are moving ahead" in talks between the two governments on details of implementing the package of assistance coupled with reform, Harrison said.

He said the United States was merely seconding a call for fiscal reforms by the International Monetary Fund, which wants all Haitian revenues combined into one common fund and reform in the areas of taxation, budgeting, auditing and accounting.

Western economists claim that because of a lack of adequate budget and accounting controls a third to a half of the national income is unaccounted for, raising suspicions that it ends up in private pockets.

Haitian representatives announced at a meeting of international aid donors last month a series of reforms in the areas of budgeting, taxation and accounting, Harrison said.

"Reform in these areas has been an issue between Haiti and the donor community for some time now," he added, "and the donor community feels this (the Haitian statement) is major step forward."

But sources said the conditions imposed by the United States for sharply higher aid went far beyond the fiscal reforms needed to unsnarl Haiti's finances and make it possible to clamp down on corruption.

The other U. S. conditions reportedly include higher salaries and a full eight-hour day for employees now working only four to six hours in ministries concerned with development; a sharp increase in Haitian funding for these ministries; more effort toward industrialization, and a statement from Duvalier on the importance of birth control to keep down Haiti's soaring population.

The birth rate is 37 per 1,000 population but is offset by a death rate of 16.5 per 1,000, highest in this hemisphere, leaving a population growth of 2.1 percent.

The country's five-million-plus people are crammed into an area the size of Maryland, making Haiti one of the most densely populated rural nations in the world.

U.S. Embassy statistics show the desperate need for more assistance: life expectancy is 45 years; illiteracy 80 percent; 75 percent of the children are malnourished.

President John F. Kennedy suspended most U.S. aid to Haiti in 1963 during the repressive regime of the current president's father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, whose private police terrorized the people.

General U.S. aid programs were resumed modestly in 1972, after Jean-Claude was declared his father's successor as president-for-life, and have grown slowly but steadily since then, Harrison said.

Haiti's record on human rights is poor but improving from the "Papa Doc" days, and one U.S. Embassy official said the human rights situation had been fully considered before the greatly expanded aid program was offered.

"We felt the greatest need was for some very basic human rights — the right to shelter, employment and something to eat," he said.

Harrison said a study conducted for the U.S. Agency for International Development last year, when drought in the countryside drove thousands of farmers into Port-Au-Prince, found "many thousands" in this dusty capital were living on five cents a day.

"One penny went for shelter, one penny for water, one penny for bread and two cents for a double handful of rejects from the vegetable market — the sweepings at the end of the day," he said.

Aviation Historians Surprised At Report Of Wright Airplane

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Everybody's agog over this," says aviation historian Charles Harvard Gibbs-Smith, himself clearly agog over the news that one of Orville and Wilbur Wright's original planes appears to have been found in a barn in France.

If the plane turns out to be a genuine Wright "and there is no reason to suspect that she is not," the find would be among the great events in aviation history since the Wrights first took off at Kitty Hawk, N.C., 75 years ago Dec. 17, he said.

Gibbs-Smith says he would sense it from the photographs if the plane were a fake or a replica.

"There's a certain look about the real ones," he says. "If you've been in this business as long as I have, you can tell a fake in a flash."

Gibbs-Smith, 69, a Briton, a distant descendant of Harvard University's first benefactor and a 1932 graduate of Harvard, is considered the world's foremost authority on the Wright Brothers. He is spending a year as a visiting professor at the Smithsonian's Air and Space Museum.

He said Wednesday he had been told that two Danish bicyclists found the old wooden biplane in a barn in France and bought it from a farmer for Baron J. O. Raben-Levetzau, who runs a museum of old automobiles in Nysted, Denmark.

After studying photographs, Gibbs-Smith says he thinks the plane is a Wright Type A, a lineal descendant of the Kitty Hawk Flyer, which is in the Smithsonian. He says it was probably built by the Wrights and sent to Europe by ship in 1908 or 1909. Wilbur made 113 flights in Europe on a Type A, was airborne 26 hours, took 60 passengers aloft and energized European aviation research.

Gibbs-Smith wrote Raben-Levetzau begging for more information.

"I can already give you some facts about her straight away," he wrote in a letter that reflects his excitement.

"There is only one other of this type surviving in the world, and that is in the Deutsches Museum at Munich. This makes your plane a machine of very great rarity."

"The type of propellers shown in the photos makes it almost certainly one of those which the Wright brothers built in 1907 in Dayton, but which were not assembled and used in Europe until late in 1908 or any time in 1909. This again adds to its rarity."

"It is just possible, but unlikely, that she was built in France under license from the Wright brothers in 1908-09. This would not lessen the rare and virtually unique character of your plane."

He added two afterthoughts: "P.S. — Among the many things I would like to know would be how the Danish boys found the machine and the exact locality in France."

"P.P.S. — Did either yourself or your boys notice any number on the old fabric of the rear rudder? This might be a vital clue to the machine's identity."

Firefighters Contain Brush Fire

LAKE ELSINORE, Calif. (UPI) — A deliberately set fire that charred 2,500 acres of brush and for a time threatened a community of 200 homes was contained just before dawn today.

Fire spokesman Bruce Bundick said a combination of cool marine air and diminishing winds enabled the force of 500 firefighters to gain the upper hand. Full control was expected at 6 p.m.

The fire, which broke out shortly after 3 p.m. in the sparsely-populated hills of southern Riverside County, was deliberately set, Bundick said.

The flames advanced within one-quarter mile of the Canyon Country community on the edge of Canyon Lake, five miles east of Lake Elsinore. The fire burned north along Highway 71 and east up Railroad Canyon.

The California Department of Forestry said five men suffered second and third-degree burns when the fire, fanned by erratic winds, changed direction and trapped their engine in the rugged terrain. Three of them were admitted to hospitals and the other two were treated and released.

No other injuries were reported and the only structures lost were two small outbuildings.

Earlier in the day, in Orange County about 20 miles to the northwest, firefighters contained a brush fire in the Cleveland National Forest that blackened almost 400 acres and swept past 300 homes in Silverado Canyon without damaging them.

Teen-Ager Assessed Five-Year Sentence

By FRANK PATRICK
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A district court jury here Wednesday returned a five-year prison term for a youth who had been certified as an adult to stand trial on an armed robbery charge.

The punishment was meted out to Jeffrey Vincent Springer, 16, formerly of Falcon Heights.

The same 137th District Court jury Tuesday had found Springer guilty of aggravated robbery in connection with the April 27 holdup of the Imperial 400 Motel, 910 Ave. Q.

Normally, persons 16 or under are classified as juveniles under Texas law. But Springer had been certified to stand trial as an adult after an earlier hearing.

It took the eight-woman, four-man panel more than four hours to decide on the five-year term, and it marked the second time a jury had deliberated the defendant's punishment.

Springer's case had gone to trial Monday, with the youth pleading guilty to the aggravated robbery charge. But a mistrial was declared later Monday after jurors were unable to reach a punishment decision.

When the case was called for trial again Tuesday, Springer changed his plea to not guilty of aggravated robbery, but guilty of robbery — a plea based, in part, on the defense contention that a shotgun used in the holdup was a makeshift weapon incapable of being fired.

Department of Public Safety firearms expert Glen Johnson testified during the second trial that he had fired the weapon during a test Tuesday morning.

Testimony indicated that attendant Larry Anderson was robbed about 10 p.m. by a young man and woman.

Anderson said the man announced a stickup and leveled a shotgun at his chest.

Springer and a female companion, Stacy Staggs, 17, formerly of Brownfield, were reportedly arrested by police later that night.

During punishment arguments in the hard-fought case, Asst. Dist. Atty. Everett Seymore urged jurors not to grant probation, arguing that potential robbers would interpret such a verdict as a ticket for one "free" violation.

He cited Anderson's testimony as crucial. "He said 'I thought I was going to die. All I could think of was that ball of fire coming out of the barrel,'" Seymore recited.

Springer had testified that the shotgun was constructed out of spare parts and was not loaded.

Defense attorney Tom Giovannitti said his client had not intended to harm anyone. "If there's ever been a case for probation, this is it — a 16-year-old boy and a gun he never thought would work," the attorney argued.

He said Springer had been incarcerated for four months and was not now the same person that "walked into that motel lobby."

He urged jurors to "save" a citizen, rather than to "destroy" one.

Two Buslines Say Future Bright

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — Some Wall Street analysts have been making somber predictions about the intercity buslines but the heads of the two biggest buslines aren't discouraged.

The gloomy Wall Streeters suggested there might be something like an Amtrak in the busline future but chairman James L. Kerrigan of Greyhound Lines and J. Kevin Murphy, head of Continental Trailways, took time out from feuding over fare cuts to say that's nonsense.

Kerrigan said Greyhound's traffic has improved steadily in the past year. Murphy conceded that but said he fully intends for Trailways to take away some of Greyhound's business — "they've got too much."

Both Kerrigan and Murphy have been attacking Amtrak's subsidized passenger train operations, particularly in the northeastern corridor.

"The ones who are hurt most by the Amtrak subsidy," Kerrigan said, "are the urban and rural poor. They pay once in their tax bills and again at the fare box where they ante up full price for a ticket on the bus."

Kerrigan charged that taxpayers are subsidizing Amtrak riders to the tune of $29 a ticket while bus riders get no subsidy except use of the highways. And, in addition to other taxes, he said, Greyhound pays $48 million a year in highway user funds and other buslines pay in proportion.

But Murphy, who has been in the bus business only about a year (he used to run Purolator's Courier division) said the bus industry does need more government cooperation.

"The buslines are an essential industry to a degree that passenger trains ceased to be after our great national and local highway network grew up," he said. "Buses serve 15,000 communities against only a few hundred each served by the airlines and the remaining passenger trains. The rural communities and small towns are utterly dependent on buslines for survival and so is the disadvantaged portion of the population that cannot afford to own and operate automobiles."

He said the only part of the railway passenger business that still is essential to the country is the urban commuter lines. "Buses and private cars can't handle all the commuters; you simply can't park enough vehicles in the cities," Murphy said.

He said Amtrak shares the credit of revenues buslines badly need in such thickly traveled routes as between Boston and Washington at heavily subsidized fares.

"Congress doesn't even require Amtrak to earn its operating costs, much less its capital costs and that's grossly unfair to the buses," Murphy said.

He believes Congress should simultaneously compel Amtrak to raise fares to cover its operating cost and deregulate the buslines and allow them to compete freely for business.

Also, Murphy said, local government should recognize the need for more attractive and efficient bus stations, "local transportation centers," he calls them.

Murphy said not even the airlines, much less the buslines, are presently able to compete effectively with the private automobile for some 80 percent of the total intercity travel in the United States.

"I don't know how much the price of gasoline and cost of automobiles will have to go up before people voluntarily return to public transportation," he said. "But there is no doubt that the bus is the most economical and overall efficient means of medium and short range transport we will have when that happens. The bus also pollutes the air the least of any means of transport."

Sociologist Claims Collegians' Grades Inflated By Teachers

ARLINGTON (UPI) — In numerous households across Texas this week, the young men and women packing to return to college will do so with a good deal less nervousness than in years past.

Statistically, it has been shown: —Far fewer of them are going to flunk out;

—Far more of them are going to graduate with honors;

—Far fewer are going to make less than a B in their coursework.

The reason, a sociologist says, is a phenomenon called "grade inflation." Simply stated, the grade point average for college students these days is far higher than in years past.

"It's to the point that the old 'Gentlemen's C' is more like a B-plus," said Dr. David Bromley of the University of Texas at Arlington's sociology faculty.

Bromley, Dr. Mary Lynn Crow of UTA's Faculty Development Resource Center and Martha Gibson, student in UTA's Graduate School of Social Work, wrote an article for a recent issue of Phi Delta Kappan entitled "Grade Inflation: Trends, Causes and Implications."

Bromley said the reason for grade inflation is not so much a matter of faculty members getting easier, though that is a part of it, as a basic structural change in American higher education.

Bromley said he noticed grade inflation while studying grade differences in normative subjects (English, liberal arts, humanities) and utilitarian subjects (math, science, engineering). He found that grades were rising steadily in both categories. In a survey of 33 Texas colleges and universities, he found that the number of honor graduates had gone from 10.8 percent in 1960 to 18.8 percent in 1975.

In a questionnaire to the schools, Bromley said most registrars listed faculty permissiveness as the major reason for higher grades, and that the permissiveness grew out of the faculty members' dependence on the institution for his job, budgetary pressures to keep more students in school, reaction to student evaluation of teaching performances and reduced expectations of student performance.

The second most frequently listed cause was changing student quality: some registrars said students were getting better, and so there were more A's and B's, but the rest said students were of a lower quality now and so schools lowered their standards.

Listed third were various types of rules changes, such as later withdrawal dates, pass-fail courses and rules eliminating low grades for a course when that course is repeated.

Bromley said the concept of higher education has changed radically since a few decades ago when college was open to only an elite few. The concept now, he said, is that everyone ought to have a chance to attend college, and that factor contributes to grade inflation at the high school level. The same attitude affects higher grades in college, he said.

"The only potential problem," he said, "is that if everybody gets A's, the principle of selectivity will be affected. How would graduate schools know who to admit?"

Pipe Cleaning Complicated, Expensive

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — The oil and chemical industry that provides the backbone of Louisiana's economy has created demand for many specialized services and supplies.

Some, like helicopter shuttles to offshore rigs and construction yards to fabricate the huge drilling and production platforms, are highly visible. Others go largely unnoticed.

The job of cleaning pipelines that carry fuels, liquid chemicals and gases is perhaps one of the least known facets of the industry.

"Mainly, you clean pipelines when first installed," said John Hill, regional spokesman for Union Carbide Corp. "Going through swamps you don't keep all the muddy water out. Some of the mud and dirt gets into it."

Union Carbide has a wholly owned subsidiary, Nitrogen Services, that cleans its pipelines and those of other companies.

Pipeline cleaning is a complex and expensive process. Union Carbide paid $2.5 million to clean a 425-mile line from Seadrift, Tex., to Napoleonville, La., last year.

"What you do is just send through a series of brushes — you call them pigs — and then you finally just put a ball through, literally a big rubber ball," Hill said.

"Then you just put air pressure behind it and literally just push the pig through. The pig has a turbine on it and it'll rotate and turn the brushes."

Bob Mullert, business manager for Union Carbide Industrial Services, said cleaning can increase the capacity of a pipeline and thereby increase its efficiency. He said flow rates were gauged at 3 to 5 percent higher in the Seadrift-to-Napoleonville line after cleaning.

"At the current value of ethylene, this improved flow capacity will engage the line to carry some $3 million to $5 million worth of additional product each year," Mullert said.

Pipelines that carry relatively "clean" substances such as gases can go many years without cleaning, Hill said. Those used for transporting crude oil and other products that deposit residue along the way have to be reworked periodically.

Alaska Bill Vote Near

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Energy Committee is moving toward a final decision on legislation to set aside Alaska lands for use as parks, preserves, refuges, wild river corridors and additions to national forests.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., committee chairman, said Wednesday, "I think there is a real desire to finish the bill before we recess" this weekend.

Jackson said he tried privately to impress on each member the urgency of finishing work on the bill, which has consumed nearly all of the committee's time since June.

In a lengthy session Wednesday night, the committee settled on solutions to uses and boundaries for 10 proposed national parks, wildlife refuges, and national forests. Previously, two and three daily sessions were consumed in settling a single area. Conservationists, the main force behind the bill, do not like the committee product.

"They're watering the bill down to the point that it's a significant disappointment," said Chuck Chusen of the Sierra Club.

On the other hand, Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the committee's work to date would please most Alaskans.

Alaska's other senator, Democrat Mike Gravel, wants the whole issue put off until next year when he thinks a better deal could be struck for the state. He said the committee's pace means he'll have to fight the bill on the floor with a filibuster and any other stalling tactics allowed by the rules.

Doctors Suggest Joggers' ID

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors are recommending that joggers pin their names and other vital information on their sweat suits, in case they meet tragedy while loping along city paths and country highways.

In a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine, two Pennsylvania physicians reported that treatment for two joggers was impeded because no one knew who they were.

One jogger suffered a ruptured cerebral aneurysm — a burst blood vessel in the brain — and another was struck by a car.

"In both cases, identification was totally absent," the doctors wrote. "Although emergency measures and diagnostics were performed, vital patient information was unobtainable."

The doctors, Morris Rosman and Roberto Carvajal of the Delaware Valley Medical Center in Bristol, Pa., recommended that joggers "wear an identification tag with their name, age, address, telephone number, known medical conditions, medications and allergies."

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers and rain are forecast Friday for large parts of the Pacific Northwest and Southwest. The National Weather Service also predicts a band of showers turning to rain from the western Gulf Coast to parts of the Great Lakes and most of New England. Showers are also due in the upper Plains. ## Florist Suing SPS, City For Negligence

Another local businessman has filed suit against The City of Lubbock and Southwestern Public Service Company in connection with alleged fire losses.

Filing suit Wednesday in 99th District Court was Joe Davis, doing business as Davis Floral Company.

The suit claims defendants were responsible for alleged fire damages and seeks $135,000 in compensation.

Larry D. and Thomas C. Sides, doing business as Sides Printing Company, filed a suit last week seeking $194,000 against the two defendants as a result of the same reported incident.

The two businesses are located adjacent to each other.

The suits claim city firefighters and employees of Lubbock Power and Light Company (LP&L) were negligent in responding to a Feb. 16 fire call.

Davis' suit contends firefighters and three LP&L employees were dispatched to the fire scene about 10:30 p.m. and determined that an electric line was hanging on the roof of the floral company.

According to the plaintiff, one or more city employees cut the wire from a Southwestern Public Service Co. pole, but failed to apprise Southwestern of the situation.

After the flames were extinguished, the suit claims, units were again dispatched to the scene because the wall of the structure seemed hot. The suit says the wall seemed close to restarting the fire that had been contained earlier.

But, according to the suit, the fire department failed to find any reason for alarm.

There was a report of a fire at the plaintiff's business on or before 7:30 a.m. Feb. 17, the suit says. It says that units were dispatched, and the fire put out.

Staff To Quiz Sen. Talmadge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., will meet with Senate ethics committee staff members within the week to answer questions about his financial dealings.

Committee officials said Talmadge will not be placed under oath for the session to be headed by counsel Carl Eardley, but the senator is expected to testify under oath before the full committee in the future.

The committee also agreed on Wednesday to consider whether Talmadge must pay interest on the $37,125 in excess expense funds he received from the Senate from 1972 through 1977.

He already has reimbursed the Senate for the excess funds and has agreed to pay interest when and if it is computed.

Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., the committee chairman, said the panel had agreed to decide that question but has yet to reach a conclusion.

"Since Sen. Talmadge himself has agreed there should be interest, the question becomes, how much," Stevenson said.

He said an interest rate of 6 per cent has been charged in similar situations.

Eardley told reporters that the committee expects to receive soon subpoenaed records from a Washington bank involving $13,000 in questionable Senate reimbursements.

Gas Bill Shows Impact Of Conference Committee

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The natural gas pricing issue, involving tremendous amounts of money and extremely touchy politics, points up the flaws as well as the powers of a House-Senate conference committee.

The conference committee is the bipartisan group charged with reconciling the different House and Senate versions of a bill.

But it can pick up new concepts that appeared in neither House nor Senate version. Where the congressmen themselves are fuzzy or undecided on an issue, the staff can write the language for them. No transcript is kept — not even full notes sometimes — of the proceedings.

At times, the wording of the conference bill comes out in ways some conferees did not anticipate.

With a proposal as complex as the natural gas bill, with its dozens of types of gas and their respective prices and regulations, the conference committee system's very flexibility can virtually paralyze it.

That happened to the natural gas bill, interviews with various conferees and staff members showed. The bill is one of the most controversial in years, designed to phase out price controls on newly produced natural gas by 1985. Between now and then, prices would be allowed to increase sharply at first and follow a steep upward slope until deregulation.

Conferees agonized for weeks to reach an agreement that got bare majorities of both House and Senate members of the conference.

But they had left precise wording of many things to the staff.

When the staff had finished writing the whole thing into legal language and that report hit the desks of conferees for their signature, some of them cried, "This is not what we agreed to."

The refusal of some of them to sign the document sent the leadership into an agonizing new round of negotiation to persuade them.

How could such a long process almost come apart at the last?

Several reasons are given:

—The bill is so complex that there are differing perceptions — among staff as well as conferees themselves — on some legal points.

—The stakes are high. Americans will spend billions of dollars more for their natural gas under the price deregulation plan the bill envisions.

—Sometimes, conferees may be uncomfortable with a certain decision and deliberately leave it unclear. Or, they could change their minds.

—Interest groups giving advice to the conferees change their own stands at times.

Court rulings while the conference is going on can affect it. An example is a Supreme Court decision saying gas wells dedicated to sales across state lines cannot be rededicated at will to sales within the state at higher prices. That prompted demands by some conferees for changes in the natural gas bill.

Congressional reforms have thrown conference meetings open to public and press. But the energy legislation got so touchy that its conferees were finally closed up again and called something else — "caucuses" and "private meetings."

Even back in secrecy, congressmen were unable to streamline the system enough to get a firm consensus.

Analysis

Despite Fire, Herbarium Still Going

HUNTSVILLE (UPI) — On Feb. 3, Claude McLeod smelled smoke and saw fire in the herbarium at Sam Houston State University. He saved a stack of near-extinct plants but that was all.

He watched as 15,000 plants — carefully selected and dried, some rare, all unusual and difficult to replace — burned, taking 30 years of McLeod's work and dedication with them.

Included in the collection were specimens gathered by Dr. S. R. Warner, former head of the biology department at Sam Houston; the collection of F. M. Thrown, a botanist who worked along the Gulf Coast from 1862 to 1925 and hundreds of plants gathered by McLeod — an authority on the plants of the Big Thicket — or under his direction.

"It's all burned; it's gone," McLeod, in a daze, said later that day to Dr. Maynard Voes, chairman of the Department of Life Sciences. "If you want this space for something else, it's all right with me."

That was despair talking. Concern, hard work and rededication have rebuilt McLeod's herbarium.

"We're coming along very nicely," McLeod said. "We hope to be back in the herbarium within a couple of weeks. We are very cheered. Very optimistic. We are back in business."

The effort began within a few days of the fire. University President Elliott T. Bowers led the support and encouragement which has raised the money to rebuild the herbarium. McLeod has supplied the work and leadership.

The Sam Houston student government donated $300. The Beta Beta Beta biology honor society coordinated the raising of $1,000 from former biology students. Other persons donated money with the largest donation of $16,500 from Wilbourn S. Gibbs, senior partner of Gibbs Bros. & Co. of Huntsville.

The money was used to build the herbarium in the same space it used to be and to buy file cabinets, stereoscopic microscopes, specialized containers, high quality herbarium paper, insecticide for the cabinets, presses, books — some no longer in print — and to employ students to mount, label and file plants.

"We're lacking plants," McLeod said. "It will take a matter of years and years collecting plants to get these things back. It takes a lot of time. You don't just go out and get the volume. Some were quite rare. We lost a few plants over 100 years old."

"Collecting is difficult. Some are seen very infrequently. Some are only collected on a seasonal basis."

"But, despite all that, we hopefully will have, by the end of the summer, a teaching herbarium. About 5,000 to 6,000 plants. We'll have a good cross-section of plants in East Texas."

Donations established the foundation for the new plant collection.

Sul Ross State University in Alpine sent what McLeod described as a "fine trans-Pecos collection." Texas A&M University and Lamar University — which were assisted recently by McLeod in establishing herbariums — and St. Edwards University in Austin, Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos and Southwest Texas Junior College in Uvalde also contributed.

McLeod and selected students have been doing what they all like to do best: gathering plants.

"We've traveled far and wide into the Big Thicket area," McLeod said. "We're putting forth a concerted effort to get as many plants as quickly as we can. I'm looking for quality plants, properly identified. We want another quality herbarium."

"I've enjoyed this summer. It's hard work and hot work, going into swamps, canyons and various habitats. But I like field work. It hasn't been that bad a chore. It's been sort of a holiday. I feel like I'm accomplishing something."

Jackie O. Buys Island Property

NEW YORK (AP) — Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis has purchased 375 acres of undeveloped land on the island of Martha's Vineyard and will preserve it in its wild state, her attorney confirmed here today.

Alexander Forger said Mrs. Onassis paid $1.15 million for the land, which was purchased from the Hornblower family, who are associated with the brokerage firm-Hornblower and Weeks-Hemphill Noyes.

He said the sale was made last January, but was not confirmed until this week because Mrs. Onassis feared that publicity about the sale would result in "intrusions" on the Massachusetts island's "tranquillity."

Martha's Vineyard is about eight miles from the Massachusetts coast and Cape Cod. The island is a fashionable summer resort.

Forger said Mrs. Onassis bought the land to save it from development. He described the property, in Gay Head on the Massachusetts island's southeastern tip, as "beautiful, with marshes, dunes and ponds."

There are no structures on the property, he said.

Beef Cycle Signifies Profits

By United Press International
The old cycle in the beef industry is ending and within six months a new one will begin, experts say. If the new one is like the others in history, it will provide a profit for the next few years for Texas' cattle ranchers.

Sources throughout the state report that Texas cattlemen are nearing the end of the market phase when cattle were sold off to reduce the size of herds. And, the sources said, there are indications that a buildup will begin by early next year.

If that is the case, then these months are the period between two beef cycles, the end of the bad times and the beginning of an era of better times.

Beef cycles, historically, last 10-12 years. The last one began in 1967. There were good times for a half-dozen years, but then the market price for beef started falling, hitting the low period between 1974 and 1977.

"Those years from '74 to '77 were some of most depressed economic years we've had," said livestock marketing specialist Dr. Ernest Davis of the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service. "During that time, we experienced the most severe rate of liquidation (of herds) than at any other time in the history of the United States."

A&M statistics showed cattle and calf inventories in Texas on July 1 were 7 percent below a year ago, while beef cow inventories were down 9 percent.

The mysterious factor, Davis said, is the increase in these same statistics in neighboring states. Inventories actually are increasing, giving weight to the idea that the old cycle has ended. "Cattlemen in Texas just haven't had the weather and forage range to stimulate the increase in herds," he said. "But our prices this summer for feeder calves coming off ranch operations have gotten to the point where they are breaking even or even making a profit."

"The break-even price is about $66 a hundredweight, and we've had that price for a while. It is beginning to stimulate ranchers into holding back more heifers and more cows to start increasing their herds for the future."

"This might be signaling a somewhat different attitude among cattlemen and may point toward a buildup by next year. Thus, it appears cattle production is ending the old cycle which began in 1967. If this prediction is correct, cattle numbers should increase during the next few years.

"This new buildup, however, may be extremely rapid and somewhat shortened. I look for another peak in numbers by 1985 to 1986."

If a new cycle has begun, or will begin near the end of this year, Davis said cattlemen should expect profit for two to three years, a break-even situation for 2-3 years, and then four to six years of losses. "Cattlemen," Davis said, "are cautiously optimistic now."

The outlook, in Texas, for 1978 is for fewer cattle and slowly rising prices in the grocery for beef products. The rise will continue as long as cattlemen hold heifers off the market to increase the size of their herds.

"They will be building their herds by holding back cows rather than taking them to slaughter," Davis said. "So, total beef production will actually drop as we build up our herds; that will cause higher prices in the retail market. But, you have to have higher prices to stimulate growth."

"The cattlemen understand the cycle. They know prices are going to be up."

USDA Revises Price Statistics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has completed a massive overhaul of its meat price statistics that indicates consumers have been paying a bit more for beef at retail counters than official government figures previously indicated.

Officials said Wednesday that retail pork prices as computed under the new system are, on the average, still about the same as had been reported over the years but that prices of some individual pork cuts were higher and others lower than previously stated.

For example, a weekly report on beef and pork prices said that in June the average retail price of beef — measured on an all-cut basis — was almost $1.92 a pound under the new system of measurement.

A week ago, using the old system, the average all-cut beef price in retail stores was reported at $1.81 cents a pound in June.

Retail prices of pork in June averaged about $1.44 a pound, the same under both methods of accounting.

An outline of the new procedure for figuring beef and pork costs was included in a recent livestock and meat situation report. The article was written by Lawrence A. Duerer of the department's Economics, Statistics and Cooperatives Service.

Duerer told a reporter that the revision in how USDA computes meat prices is the first major overhaul in almost a decade and reflects changes in how meat is produced, cut into wholesale and retail portions and in consumer preferences.

The retail prices of meat are surveyed regularly and compiled by the department each month to get average prices, Duerer said. Some 35 to 40 chain store divisions, representing hundreds of individual stores in 26 cities, are checked, he said.

By using a list of about 30 cuts of beef and 15 cuts of pork, composite or all-cut average retail prices are derived.

Until this summer, the department's survey figures were supplemented by monthly checks made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Labor Department, but that agency has discontinued publishing prices of retail cuts.

Duerer said the new list includes more boneless cuts of beef such as boneless sirloin steak, which is more expensive than the bone-in steak used previously. Also, an allowance was made for less ground beef from each carcass.

The prices are based on choice-grade steers, the kind usually produced in feedlots and which provide much of the beef displayed in supermarkets.

More statistical weight also is given to steaks and other more expensive cuts, he said.

Hell Gate passage in the East River between New York and Long Island takes its name from the Dutch words "helle gat" which means clear passage.

Weeds May Replace Petroleum

PEORIA, Ill. (UPI) — Scientists say they have found nearly three dozen types of weeds and plants that can replace the ever-dwindling supplies of petroleum and natural gas in the making of products such as rubber and plastics.

Such a development, say scientists at the Agriculture Department's Northern Regional Research Center, could eventually reduce the nation's need for oil and natural gas by about 7 percent, or about 2 million barrels daily in oil and its natural gas equivalent.

In the past two years, researchers have looked at nearly 300 species of plants and identified at least 34 of them. They include milkweed, quackgrass, poinsettia, sow thistle and guayule, as potential sources for the hydrocarbons necessary to manufacture rubber and plastics, which are presently made with petrochemicals.

Dr. William Tallent, the center's director, said, "It's something between 5 and 10 percent and I think 7 percent is probably a pretty good guess."

"That is the amount of our petroleum and natural gas that goes into the petrochemical industry to make plastics, to make synthetic rubber, to make all kinds of chemical products that have become such an important part of our lives."

But Tallent warned the speed of any industrial movement to replace petrochemicals and rubber with similar wild-plant products will depend on the price of the final products and industry's willingness to develop the wild plants.

Russell Buchanan said his group rated several species of wild plants, usually called weeds, based on their hydrocarbon, oil, protein and fiber content as well as adaptability.

He said they found four main groups of plants — those that can produce rubber, gutta, rubber and oil, and oil alone. Most plants probably would be specifically bred for one product, he said, but some could provide multiple products.

The hydrocarbons contained in some plants could be used for lubricants, petrochemicals and rubber, Buchanan said, while the oils from other plants could be used as plasticizers for rubber and plastics, as waxes and as replacement for vegetable oils and alcohols.

Buchanan said some of the grasses produce gutta, a rubber-like ingredient of golf ball covers and similar plastics. The grasses, quack grass and wild rye, may help make gutta plentiful enough to make it cheaper than plastics presently made with petrochemicals, he said.

At least one plant, called the "gasoline plant," has oil in it that can be refined to gasoline, Buchanan said. But he said he is skeptical that enough of it can be produced at a reasonable price.

French Crack Down On Drunk Drivers

PARIS (AP) — Tipsy motorists are blamed for 40 percent of France's deaths on the roads, and the gendarmes are warring on the traditional wine-soaked country lunches and dinners with breathalyzer bags and a tough new drunken-driving law.

Since the start of the summer vacation, thousands of drivers have been flagged down and asked to blow into little plastic bags filled with crystals that go green when hit by boozy breath.

Two thousand were checked last weekend alone, and in only 10 cases did the tell-tale green show up, leading some Frenchmen to think that perhaps they weren't such heavy drinkers after all.

But authorities attribute the meager haul to advance publicity for the areas where tests are conducted. "We're not trying to catch drunken drivers but to make them not drink when they're about to drive," explained a road safety official. "And you can't accuse us of violating civil liberties if we warn motorists in advance."

The new permissible limit on alcoholic content in the blood of 1.8 milligrams per liter is similar to that in most West European countries but far more generous than the Communist bloc, where no alcoholic content is tolerated.

The law allows a judge — and in serious cases a police chief — to suspend a driving license for three to six years and fine the offender up to $9,200 if he is in an accident while drunk.

A poll of some 450,000 Frenchmen, including youths and non-drivers, found that only 40-50 percent approved of "T-cool test." Most thought "education rather than repression" would cut highway carnage.

Civil libertarians contend the test extends police powers. The motorists' lobby considers it a new onslaught against freedom of the highway. The wine growers and restaurateurs bewail the threatened drop in sales, which is already beginning to show.

Lawyers To Mull Guard Payroll

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Whether school crossing guards will be paid by the city or the Lubbock school district will be determined by attorneys, city and school officials decided Wednesday.

In an informal joint meeting, the officials considered the city council's request that the school district assume the $54,000 cost of the uniformed crossing guards.

A proposed city budget for next year, which will be voted on by the council today, does not include funding for the guards.

However, school Superintendent Ed Irons said there is a legal question about whether the school district can pay for "protection or security on public streets."

"We do feel a moral obligation to pay for the crossing guards," Irons said, and suggested that if it were determined the school district legally could not pay for the school guards a "trade-off of services" for the $54,000 might be worked out.

Mayor Dirk West said the group decided to 'have their lawyer meet with our lawyer to see if they can resolve' the question of whether the school district can pay for the guards.

The group agreed the city will provide the crossing guards during the first month of school and West emphasized the discussions "don't mean any children will be crossing streets unguarded."

Lawyers for the city and school district are supposed to set up a meeting "as soon as possible," West said.

The group also discussed instituting an annual revaluation program, rather than the present program of revaluing one-quarter of property in the city each year.

West said the consensus was that the cost of immediate initiation of annual revaluation would be prohibitive, but that the city and school district should gradually work toward annual revaluation.

Annual revaluation is appealing to city and school officials who are still shocked by the response to recent reappraisal of property in Southwest Lubbock which had not been revalued for four years.

A drive to collect delinquent auto taxes will begin next month, the group decided. Abandoning the tax collection drive would be "grossly unfair to those paying their taxes," West said.

GAO Reports IRS Tax Seizures Fair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office says that taxpayers generally are being treated fairly in the rare cases where the Internal Revenue Service seizes property to pay back taxes. The congressional auditors' main complaint was that some persons were disadvantaged when IRS sold seized

School board president Charles Waters said the collections would continue even if one car per family is exempted from taxation through a proposed state constitutional amendment because it wouldn't be fair to let delinquents off the hook.

Representing the city at the meeting were West, Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan and City Manager Larry Cunningham.

property at less than a fair market price. IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz said his agency had revised its procedures since 1975, the year studied, to establish more realistic minimum bid prices for seized property. Kurtz said seizures had been reduced from 18,000 in 1975 to about 4,000 annually in 1977 and 1978.

Coal Reserves Use Incentives Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans for Energy Independence called on the administration Wednesday to develop incentive programs so the United States can use its valuable anthracite coal reserves.

"Between the anthracite fields of Pennsylvania and the promising anthracite resources in Rhode Island and Massachusetts' Narragansett Basin, the United States has sufficient low-sulfur anthracite coal to displace the equivalent of more than 38 billion barrels of costly imported oil," said Clarice Feldman, general counsel of the organization.

Death Of Kenyatta Reduces Africa's 'Old Guard'

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The death of Kenya's President Jomo Kenyatta has reduced to only six the "old guard" of African leaders who led their nations to independence and have survived the ensuing turmoil.

Some 42 coups, countercoups and palace revolts and several civil wars over the past two decades have all but cleared the roll of black nationalist leaders who presided over the demise of colonialism across the African continent.

Kenyatta, a witch doctor's son born in the last century, was probably best known as the African leader who led revolts against European colonial powers and most admired for guiding his nation to prosperity and stability.

Unlike the majority of his colleagues, he died peacefully in bed. His body is now lying in state following his death Tuesday.

By contrast Ghana's legendary Kwame Nkrumah, who opened the era of decolonization in 1957 when his nation gained independence from Britain, was deposed while on a visit to Peking and died in exile.

By contrast Ghana's legendary Kwame Nkrumah, who opened the era of decolonization in 1957 when his nation gained independence from Britain, was deposed while on a visit to Peking and died in exile.

Zaire — then known as the Congo — was independent from Belgium only five days in 1960 when it plunged into chaos. Within a year its radical first prime minister, Patrice Lumumba, was dead.

The surviving members of the "old guard" include two presidents of former British colonies, Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and Julius Nyerere of Tanzania. The other four govern nations once ruled by France: Leopold Senghor of Senegal, Felix Houphouët-Boigny of Ivory Coast, Sekou Toure of Guinea, and Ahmadou Ahidjo of Cameroon.

Until a palace coup two months ago, the list also included Moktar Ould Daddah of the former French colony of Mauritania.

Those who still rule have persevered through varying combinations of charisma, ruthlessness, skillful politics and just pure luck.

Like all but a handful of the leaders of Africa's 53 independent states, they have abandoned all but vestiges of participatory democracy to counter the sharply conflicting and often incompatible ideologies, tribal cultures and languages that pull this continent apart.

Zambia's 54-year-old Kaunda, for example, presides over 76-odd tribes in a landlocked nation wedged among a chronically unstable Zaire; Angola, which is supported by Cuban troops; and Rhodesia, which only now is headed toward black rule.

Although a Christian idealist who preaches nonviolence, Kaunda supports guerrillas fighting in Rhodesia and has detained political opponents at home.

Kaunda's pivotal role in southern Africa and his aspirations to an all-Africa mantle have been somewhat eroded by economic chaos at home prompted by the drop in the world price of Zambia's major export, copper.

Tanzania's Nyerere, 66, has earned the title "the conscience of Africa" for his quiet efforts to create a new socialist philosophy for the developing world.

A quiet visionary, Nyerere has given his relatively poor nation a stability unusual in Africa. His famous Arusha declaration of 1967 has made "Ujamaa," the Swahili word for familyhood, common across Africa as a symbol of an African brand of rural socialism.

Sekou Toure of Guinea, 56, has had the longest reign of the old guard, leading his West African nation since 1958.

In a bold move that made him somewhat of an enduring hero to younger black pan-Africanists, Toure severed all links to France at independence. "We prefer poverty in liberty to riches in slavery," he declared.

But Toure's years in power have been marked by numerous real or imaginary coup attempts and ruthless repression of opponents.

In the past three years he has taken steps to restore economic links to France, but he maintains close relations with the Soviet Union and still regards Lenin, Fidel Castro and Luminista as his guiding spirits.

Senegal's President Senghor is somewhat unusual among African leaders in that he was born to relative wealth 72 years ago. He is also a highly regarded poet, who writes in French and has been considered for the Nobel Prize in literature.

The elder statesman of French-speaking Africa, Senghor has promoted relations with both East and West in his 19-year rule while preserving special ties with France.

In Ivory Coast, Houphouët-Boigny presides over a land he has turned into a showpiece of West Africa through partnership with the former colonial overlord, France.

His open encouragement of "neo-colonialism" has lured 50,000 Frenchmen to Ivory Coast and has provoked the decision of African nationalists. But the resulting prosperity has given Ivory Coast stability and at 72, Houphouët-Boigny rules virtually unchallenged.

The last of the "old guard," 54-year-old Auidjo is into his 18th year as president of Cameroon and appears to have overcome the ancient tribal feuds, communist-backed uprisings and widespread terrorism that plagued the nation's formative years.

Ahidjo has been accused of authoritarianism and ruthlessness in pursuing national unity, but his efforts have promoted modest economic progress in the West African land.

Despite the turmoil that toppled African revolutionaries and troubled the "old guard" survivors, the drive for independence continues. Today, across all of Africa, only the city-sized Spanish enclaves of Ceuta and Melilla remain under European control.

Yugoslavia Stresses Non-Aligned Status

By BORIS BOSKOVIĆ
BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav officials are stressing that their government doesn't intend for Chinese Chairman Hua Kuo-feng's visit to damage its relations with the Soviet Union and the United States.

Ranking government and Communist Party officials, who asked not to be identified, cited President Tito's trips within the last year to Moscow, Peking and Washington as proof that "a small country can successfully develop relations with big powers, even though among them (these powers) relations are not the best."

The officials told reporters Yugoslavians' example proves it can have good relations with one power without spoiling ties with any other.

These assurances were prompted by Soviet criticism of Hua's swing through Romania, which pursues a foreign policy independent of Moscow, and Yugoslavia, which successfully defied Soviet domination 30 years ago. Moscow charges that Peking is trying to gain influence in Eastern Europe at Russia's expense.

Commenting on rumors that Tito would visit the Soviet Union soon after Hua's trip to Yugoslavia ends, the officials said: "Such visits are always possible because our relations are developed and active, but nothing has been fixed."

Asked whether it was intentional that Hua arrived in Belgrade on the 10th anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, Aug. 21, the official said: "Any date in the year can be maliciously made to coincide with any event. In this case there is no connection whatsoever."

The officials said the talks between Hua and his Yugoslav hosts are chiefly concerned with relations between China and Yugoslavia, which they said have been improving at a rapid pace since Tito's trip to China last year.

That trip ended almost three decades of extremely poor Chinese-Yugoslav relations, resulting from Peking's attacks on the Yugoslav Communists for breaking with Stalin. In those days, the Chinese and Soviet Communists were the closest of allies.

Although Hua in his first speech after his arrival attacked Moscow and the United States in stronger language than he used in Romania, Tito used moderate language that could only indirectly be interpreted as aimed at the Kremlin. The Yugoslav media also avoided highlighting Hua's criticism.

On Wednesday the Chinese leader met with the heads of the diplomatic missions in Belgrade, shaking hands with the U.S. and Soviet envoys but nearly ignoring the ambassador of Albania, until recently China's sole ally in Eastern Europe.

Diplomats at the reception said Hua did not speak with the American and Soviet charges d'affaires as they shook hands. They said he gave the Albanian ambassador only a "brush handshake" before moving quickly to the next person.

Albania is on the verge of breaking relations with China, in part because of Peking's growing closeness with Yugoslavians.

Legion Disease Kills Woman

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — An Orlando woman has died of Legionnaire's Disease and at least 10 other cases of the disease have been found in the state this year, the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta says.

The CDC said the death of Avis Pearson on July 16 was caused by Legionnaire's Disease, a sickness similar to pneumonia.

Mrs. Pearson died in an Orlando hospital 11 days after being admitted, hospital administrator Joseph Boykin said Tuesday.

The woman's physician, Dr. Thomas B. Thames, said he didn't know how Mrs. Pearson became infected with the disease. She was treated with potent antibiotics and placed on a respirator, he said.

The disease was suspected during her hospitalization but confirmed only last week after laboratory tests were completed in Atlanta.

Cosell's Athletic Career Short

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Because Howard Cosell makes so many deep technical comments that are wrong, I wonder about his actual participation in sports. Please give us a detailed background of Howard as an athlete.

—W. C. Regan, Fort Lavaca, Texas.

A. This will be a short answer. Cosell says he lettered in track as a broad jumper, and Howard always tells it like it is. There is also some ill-defined talk about a career as a sandlot touch-football player. We suspect Howard owned the ball.

Howard's expertise in sports is due to his total recall of anything he reads or anything said to him. Even when it's wrong, Howard remembers it.

Q. After all that has been written about the Billy Martin firing and dramatic rehiring, do you fellows have an opinion about what really happened behind the scenes?

—Randy Koenig, Louisville.

A. We don't think it's all that complex. One of George Steinbrenner's closest friends explained it to us simply: "George couldn't stand it that in the end he was wearing the black hat, so he rehired Billy."

Q. What is happening at Green Bay? I know the team isn't winning, but I just saw that the club had only a profit of $266,000 on a $7.1 million gross. What are they doing with the rest of the money?

—Oscar Levane, Jackson, Miss.

A. The Packers chose to pay their part of the NFL contract with the Players Association in one whack—$600,000—instead of spreading it out over five years.

Q. In stories about Pete Rose's 44-game streak, one writer said Wee Willie Keeler's streak came at a time when foul balls did not count as a strike. Is this so? It was never mentioned when Joe DiMaggio had his streak going. If true, when was it that foul balls began counting as strikes? Also, do you agree that Rose's streak created more fanfare than DiMaggio's did in 1941?

—Francis Paniela, Tampa, Fla.

A. Keeler's streak happened in 1897. He used a bottle-bat and gripped it half-way up the shaft, dumping close pitches aside until he got one he liked. It was not until 1903 that foul balls were counted as strikes.

In no way did Rose cause as much furor as DiMaggio did. In 1941, pro football was an up-east sport unknown to most fans, there were no golf or tennis tours as we know today, and professional basketball was a barnstorming team out of New York named the Celtics, starring Davey Banks and Joe Lapchick. DiMaggio's streak boosted the ratings of every local station which carried broadcasts of minor league baseball games, because some time during the game the announcer would pass on the news about DiMaggio's streak. There was even a song, "Joltin' Joe DiMaggio," which went, "Joe, Joe DiMaggio—we want you on our side."

Meyer Charts Bowl Timetable

By DON HENRY
Executive Sports Editor

DALLAS—It was hot in Dallas Wednesday, but just wait another few days. Wait until Sept. 9; the Mustangs can't wait. Neither can SMU coach Ron Meyer, the ambitious young man who has smoldered for almost a year now after leaving the sister city of Fort Worth all burned up.

In a football opener a year ago, SMU chilled TCU 45-21 in a game played in the heat of the afternoon, 4 p.m. was the starting time.

And Wednesday, when Meyer spoke on the first stop of the Southwest Conference press tour, some of his most positive remarks concerned the heat in Fort Worth and the way it affected his troops.

"They said the early start was to conserve energy," Meyer related, "but, they (TCU) were on the shady side, and we were in the sun. I had one player lose 35 pounds in the first half alone. Then, when I leave the stadium at 8 o'clock that night, every tennis court in Fort Worth was lit up."

"I don't have anything against F.A. Dry (the TCU coach), it was the administration. But, no sir, I didn't like it."

And, he hasn't been silent about it. He isn't keeping it under hat, either, that the Mustang program is going up faster than the Dallas skyline. A pass-catch combo of Mike Ford and Emanuel Tolbert are the offensive keys. But, they're all on a timetable, and this year's phase has been labeled—on bumper stickers, billboards about Dallas and in advertising—Mustang Mania.

"Our goal is a continuing upward swing," Meyer related. "If we can win five games this year (three and four in his first two seasons), we'll be in a bowl next year and if we get a good bounce or two, we'll be in the Cotton Bowl the next (1980).

But, with a passing-catch team like Mike Ford-Emanuel Tolbert, and with both of them back for that 1979 bowl year, Meyer doesn't have to dwell on last year's heat. This year's team will have more depth, more football players, more and better balanced offense, but some problems on defense. As Meyer put it, "We'd like to play great defense, like the state schools."

Meyer did admit to a lack of experience and a flock of young players defensively. The top hand defensively is linebacker Pitt Choate, a 225-pounder from Coahoma, but only seniors have starting positions nailed down. And in instances, freshmen could be playing regularly, an indication of both the team's lack of depth as well as the quality of players recruited last winter.

The offense is different, where Ford, one of the league's most prolific passers a year ago as a freshman, is back, healthy, more mature, and stronger of arm. And, to catch his passes is Tolbert, the nation's leading returning receiver. The big, boyish-looking Ford completed 133 passes a year ago, and Tolbert caught 64 of them.

"Tolbert is a bona fide All-American candidate," commented Meyer, "but we'd like to see him catch less passes this year, for more yardage. We'd like to be throwing less, maybe run 60 per cent of the time, throw 40. If I had my druthers, that's the way it'd be."

"That passing combination will be exciting, though."

"Our runningbacks are youthful, but there is a ray of hope. There is a void (Arthur Whittington's) to fill. We're on the way upward in the offensive line. We have some fine freshmen linemen, but their presence will be noted more on defense than offense."

Getting back to his quarterback, Meyer commented "Obviously, Ford is good. I like this guy. He can throw the ball, he can move the ball. His weight is up (to 237), and he's in better shape than he's ever been in. As an example, while we were working with the other quarterbacks, he ran 33 100-yard dashes the other day."

"And, this year, we can do more (offensively) with him, because of his maturity. Ron Calgani (Arkansas) is what makes Arkansas go, but, for what we do, no one in the league can touch Ford."

Few touched Tolbert last year, as he

Red Raiders Eager As 'Hitting' Begins

By JIM FERGUSON

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Rex Dockery isn't the only one ready for the Red Raiders to strap on the pads and get down to what football's all about—which, incidentally, happens to be hitting.

Godfrey Turner will second the motion. "I'm ready and anxious," said the 6-0, 185-pound flanker, following Wednesday's workout. "I've been working hard for two and a half months—all summer—for it."

Neither Dockery nor Turner have long to wait now.

Starting today, the Raiders begin the contact work. But instead of three sessions each day, the team will face only a pair of practices—one at 8:45 a.m., the other at 5:15 p.m.

And that—the hitting—suits Turner just fine.

"When you're out like this (in shorts)," said Turner, "everyone looks good and fast. But you really can't tell anything until you start hitting. Then you know what people can do and what they can't."

This time coach Dockery seconded.

"Of course, we're anxious and I think the players are too," said Dockery. "We've had the chance to evaluate them the past three days in shorts. Now we're ready to do some things in pads."

For Turner, today's workout will be a chance to test an injury he sustained to his right thigh during a workout session last fall. The injury kept the receiver out of quite a few games.

"I stayed up here all summer, working out," Turner said, massaging the injured spot. "That's two and a half months of hard work every afternoon. Right now, I'm in the best shape of my life and so is the leg."

The leg isn't the only thing of his that has healed. His attitude—which wasn't the best around, he said—has improved, too.

"After I got hurt," the Dallas South Oak Cliff product pointed out. "I really got down on myself. It was tough to come out to practice and see your teammates work, but things have changed now. I'm in good shape and happy to be out here."

About Wednesday's workout, Turner commented: "I thought we had a slow practice in the morning, but it picked up all right in the afternoon. Our momentum was not up and we were dragging around like it was a Monday or something. I guess it being the end of three-days had something to do with it."

Overall, though, Turner feels the three-day practices went extremely well.

"We haven't been picked too high as everyone knows," Turner said, referring to the fact the Raiders have been selected no higher than seventh in most pre-season polls, "and that has made us work hard. We've got a lot out of this."

Again, Dockery agreed.

"We were able to tell a lot the past three days," he said, "but now it's time to get down to some blocking and tackling."

The defensive secondary and offensive backs are two matters the coach plans on watching closely today, he said.

"We want to find out who can do what back there," he pointed out. "We'd also like to find out who can think when they get tired."

There were no injuries or personal changes during any of the three workouts Wednesday.

The head man has called for a scrimmage Saturday morning. He also plans contact sessions Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

Steve Comer went to visit his sick grandmother Wednesday but it wasn't an excuse to go see a baseball game.

Comer reported for work as scheduled Wednesday night and hurled a six-hitter for his first major league shutout, snapping a four-game Texas losing streak and pitching the Rangers to a 2-0 victory over Baltimore.

the Minnesota Twins.
It was a happy Minnesota homecoming for Comer, a 24-year-old right-hander who was born in Minneapolis, was a star pitcher for the University of Minnesota and lives in Excelsior, just minutes from Metropolitan Stadium.

Asked how he spent the day, Comer said: "I visited my grandmother in the hospital. I was running around all day visiting friends. I guess I didn't have that much time to gear up for the game. But it's really nice to come back here, to come back home. I had about 60 people watching, 20 from my family and probably about 40 friends."

The victory left the third-place Rangers seven games out in the American League West. The Kansas City Royals were beaten by the Chicago White Sox 3-0 and had their lead over second-place California sliced to one percentage point when the Angels downed the New York Yankees 6-3.

In the AL East, the Boston Red Sox lost to the Seattle Mariners 5-3 and are six games ahead of the Milwaukee Brewers, who trounced the Cleveland Indians 9-4.

Comer, a rookie making only his fourth start, kept the Twins off balance with his changeup. He struck out six and walked one as he went the distance for the first time in his major league career. The Rangers got Comer the only run he needed in the fourth inning when Al Oliver doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on Richie Zisk's single.

"I've had the change-up all my career," said Comer, who wasn't drafted but impressed the Rangers when Pete Kramer, coach at St. Thomas College in St. Paul, got him a chance to pitch in a rookie league. "The Twins saw me for four years, but I never really had four pitches that I could throw for strikes before."

"I played four years in college here, and over those years the Twins usually drafted one or two of our players in the later rounds of the draft. I just hoped to get drafted, even low like that, and maybe get a chance. But I'm glad to be with Texas."

White Sox 3, Royals 0
Ken Kravec fired a four-hitter, striking out nine, and Claudell Washington's third hit of the game, a two-run single in the eighth inning off Dennis Leonard, broke up a scoreless tie. Washington's hit followed two-out singles by Greg Pryor and Bob Molinar and a stolen base by Molinar. Washington went to second on the throw to the plate and scored when Mike Squires singled.

Angels 6, Yankees 3
Don Baylor slammed his 26th home run, doubled and singled home a run, Joe Rudi hit a pair of sacrifice flies and Chris Knapp, subbing for Don Aase after an auto accident, picked up his 13th victory with help from Tom Griffin and Dave LaRoche. California took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Carney Lansford's double, a walk, Baylor's RBI single and the first of Rudi's sacrifice flies. Bostock opened the third inning with a single and Baylor doubled. Rudi's second sacrifice fly scored Bostock and Baylor came home on a sacrifice fly by Ron Fairly.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 3
Two-run singles by Ruppert Jones and Lee Stanton off Mike Torrez in the sixth inning rallied Seattle from a three-run deficit to a 4-3 lead. It was the Mariners' fourth victory in a row. Boston's Jim Rice hit his 31st homer, a two-run shot off Byron McLaughlin in the first inning.

Brewers 9, Indians 4
Sal Bando, whose 15th homer tied the score in the sixth inning, singled and scored the go-ahead run on loser Sid Monge's throwing error in a five-run eighth as the Brewers won for the 10th time in their last 11 games. Bando singled to lead off the eighth and Monge fielded Gorman Thomas' bunt but slipped and threw wildly past first as Bando raced all the way home and Thomas took third.

Blue Jays 4-5, Tigers 3-4
Dave McKay and Otto Velez clubbed two-run homers in the nightcap after McKay singled home the winning run in the 12th inning of the opener following Alan Ashby's double. Al Woods' homer accounted for Toronto's first three runs.

Rusty Staub picked up his 100th RBI in the nightcap, the first time a Tiger has driven in 100 runs in two consecutive years since Willie Horton did it in 1965-66. The game ended when catcher Rick Cerone threw out Ron LeFlore on an attempted steal of second, snapping LeFlore's AL record of 27 consecutive stolen bases.

Orioles 11, A's 0
Jim Palmer pitched a three-hitter for his sixth shutout of the season as Baltimore beat the A's for the ninth time in as many meetings. The loss was the 13th in the last 15 games for the A's, who haven't beaten Baltimore in Oakland since July of 1976, losing 12 straight.

Doug DeCinces drove in three runs, two of them with a double in the four-run first inning and the other with a single in a five-run third, and veteran Elrod Hendricks hit his first home run of the season.

Dunbar To Try Pecos In Scrimmage Today

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Van Jefferson was keeping busy Wednesday. Between filing and straightening his desk, the Dunbar coach barely had time for an interview.

However, Jefferson wasn't avoiding the conversation. He was just trying to keep his mind off of football.

Today, Dunbar will compete in its first scrimmage of the season against Pecos. The action will take place in Big Spring. The contest will get underway around 5 p.m.

"It's only a scrimmage and the basic concern is to evaluate our kids," said Jefferson. "But that doesn't mean I won't get uptight. It'll hit about an hour before the scrimmage."

Jefferson considers himself a realist, optimist and perfectionist. It's the realist in him, that makes Jefferson worry.

"Sure, it doesn't count and we don't keep records of scrimmages," said Jefferson. "But I'm worried because if we suffer one injury, we will be wiped out."

The Panthers will enter the scrimmage with a 49-man roster. Jefferson has divided his team into three squads—maroon, white and gray.

Jefferson instantly added: "We're going into this scrimmage with no positions nailed down. We don't have any starters. Just three teams."

When asked if he comprised the three squads on the basis of talent Jefferson nodded his head in a negative direction.

"All three squads are equal," said Jefferson. "Now we're going to try and find out which kids from these three squads can do the job."

Hasn't anybody been impressive in workouts? "Tight end Thomas Patterson (176, Sr), runningback Ernest White (176, Sr), quarterback Daryl Green (173, Sr) and guard Kevin Lust (173, Sr) have been impressive on offense," said Jefferson.

What about the defense? "Defensive end Geoffrey Crawford (176, Jr), linebacker Reginald Swearingin (176, Sr) and tackle Sammy Williams (216, Jr), have been our most consistent players," concluded the Dunbar coach.

The optimist in Jefferson then took control of the coaches' speech. Jefferson isn't expecting for any of his players to perform badly against Pecos.

"I expect all the plays we will practice on to go smoothly," said the Panther mentor. "That's right, I don't expect any screwups. After all, how my kids perform is a direct reflection on me. If something does go wrong, I'm going to see it gets corrected in a hurry."

To prove his point, Jefferson said he will be on the playing field with his kids during the scrimmage.

"If I see someone not clogging a hole on defense or not opening a hole on offense, I'm going to direct him to the problem area," said Jefferson.

Palmer Still Works On Putting

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Arnold Palmer is trying something new.

He hunched over a putt on the practice green, his hands some four inches apart and the forefinger of the right hand pointing down the shaft.

"What's this?" asked Bob Rosburg, television commentator and former PGA champion. "You only go to that style when you're over 70 years old."

Palmer just grinned and hit another 30-footer dead into the back of the cup.

"A little experiment," he said before teeing off in today's first round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

There have been countless little experiments by the most popular player in the game's history. Many of them have concerned his putting.

"No matter what anybody says, I was never a truly great putter," said the 48-year-old Palmer. "I putted out of desperation. I putted because it was my salvation. Sometimes it was the only alternative I had."

"With most of us, putting goes from day to day. As we get older, it's going to go. But some of us still try. Some of us still try to find a way..."

And Palmer, a non-winner in the United States in more than five years, still is trying.

"No, I'm not satisfied with my game," he said. "I'm driving well. My irons aren't always all they should be. My putting comes and goes. But the difference between now and 20 years ago is that I can more or less accept it. I'm not satisfied, but I'm not unhappy."

"I still enjoy the game, the people, the competition."

Palmer, however, remains among golf's greatest drawing cards and is, at worst, a sentimental favorite in the event that began on the No.2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club, a famed old layout that has been toughened and lengthened since Hale Irwin's 20-under-par winning effort last year.

Chargers Report Mitchell Trade

LYDELL MITCHELL

BALTIMORE (AP) — With hopes of reconciliation evaporating rapidly, and bitter feelings building even more quickly, the Baltimore Colts have apparently decided to solve their problems with Lydell Mitchell by trading him to San Diego.

The Chargers announced Wednesday night that they had traded running back Joe Washington and an undisclosed draft choice for Mitchell, Baltimore's all-time leading rusher.

"We have not come to contractual agreement with Lydell," said Tank Younger, San Diego's assistant general manager. "We have not signed him to a contract, but we have traded Joe Washington and an undisclosed draft choice for his services."

But the Colts called the announcement premature, since Mitchell and San Diego had not reached the contract agreement necessary to consummate the trade.

But whether or not Mitchell plays with the Chargers this season, his prospects of wearing a Colt jersey again became even more remote Wednesday.

In addition to their contract troubles, the former Penn State star and the Colts are still embroiled in a grievance filed by Mitchell with the National Football League Player-Club Relations Committee.

Mitchell charged the team with racial discrimination, bad faith bargaining and illegally fining him $500 a day for missing practice.

The racism charge was apparently the last straw for Colts' owner Robert Irsay, who demanded an apology from the running back.

"He tells me I'm like a father, that I treat him so beautifully. Then he calls me a racist. I can't tolerate a man like that on the Baltimore Colts," said Irsay in a statement issued from his Skokie, Ill., home.

After spending two days debating the matter, the PCRC also gave up on a solution to the dispute Wednesday.

"The PCRC believes because of the seriousness of the charges, that all parties should be heard under oath. Therefore, the entire grievance has been referred to the arbitrator."

Mitchell has the option of dropping the grievance after he leaves the Colts, or pursuing it to a final solution, according to observers.

The PCRC said James Soarce, a former federal arbitrator, is expected to begin hearing testimony from both sides in Washington early next week.

At a meeting of the PCRC on Monday, a tentative agreement was reached between Mitchell and his attorney, and a Colts' delegation which included General Manager Dick Szymanski.

But Irsay scuttled the agreement. In addition to objecting to terms of a three-year contract, which would have reached $225,000 in the third season, Irsay reportedly was disturbed because it failed to call for an apology from Mitchell on the racist charge.

Mitchell, in the option year of his current $99,000 contract, failed to report to training camp while demanding pay of $300,000 in 1978. The Colts reportedly offered $130,000 at the start, later upping the amount to $175,000.

Cowboys Cut Young, Butler

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran fullback Charles Young, Dallas' No. 1 draft pick out of North Carolina State in 1974, and placekicker Skip Butler were cut by the Cowboys on Wednesday as the National Football League team trimmed its roster to 50 players.

Seven other players were waived. Head Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday that Butler, acquired only weeks earlier to help shore up the Cowboy kicking game, would go. That made rookie Jay Sherill the No. 1 Dallas kicker.

Young's career with the Cowboys was hampered by injuries which kept him out of action much of the time.

Kenny Randle, a rookie from USC, was placed on the injured reserve list because of a bad shoulder.

Also waived were tight end Bryon Billcik, a free agent from Brigham Young; safety Darrel Davis, a free agent from Northwest Missouri State; cornerback Devon Ford, a free agent from Appalachian State; guard Greg Peters, No. 12 draft choice from California; guard Tom Randall, No. 7 draft pick from Iowa State; linebacker Harold Randolph, No. 6 draft choice from East Carolina; and linebacker Kinzie Weaver, a free agent from Vanderbilt.

JOE WASHINGTON

Johnson Still On Sidelines

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers will get running backs Rob Carpenter and Anthony Davis off the injury list but Billy Johnson likely will remain sidelined for the team's final exhibition game Saturday against the New Orleans Saints.

Davis, obtained in a trade with Tampa Bay this year, broke his leg on the first day of training camp. Carpenter suffered a deep knee bruise in the Oilers exhibition opener against the Denver Broncos.

Both started working out Tuesday and are expected to be in uniform in the Astrodome Saturday night.

Texas Snaps Slump With Shutout Over Twins

By The Associated Press
Steve Comer went to visit his sick grandmother Wednesday but it wasn't an excuse to see a baseball game.

Comer reported for work as scheduled Wednesday night and hurled a six-hitter for his first major league shutout, snapping a four-game Texas losing streak and pitching the Rangers to a 2-0 victory over Baltimore.

the Minnesota Twins. It was a happy Minnesota homecoming for Comer, a 24-year-old right-hander who was born in Minneapolis, was a star pitcher for the University of Minnesota and lives in Excelsior, just minutes from Metropolitan Stadium.

Asked how he spent the day, Comer said: "I visited my grandmother in the hospital. I was running around all day visiting friends. I guess I didn't have that much time to gear up for the game. But it's really nice to come back here, to come back home. I had about 60 people watching, 20 from my family and probably about 40 friends."

The victory left the third-place Rangers seven games out in the American League West. The Kansas City Royals were beaten by the Chicago White Sox 3-0 and had their lead over second-place California sliced to one percentage point when the Angels downed the New York Yankees 6-3.

In the AL East, the Boston Red Sox lost to the Seattle Mariners 5-3 and are six games ahead of the Milwaukee Brewers, who trounced the Cleveland Indians 9-4.

Comer, a rookie making only his fourth start, kept the Twins off balance with his changeup. He struck out six and walked one as he went the distance for the first time in his major league career. The Rangers got Comer the only run he needed in the fourth inning when Al Oliver doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on Richie Zisk's single.

"I've had the change-up all my career," said Comer, who wasn't drafted but impressed the Rangers when Pete Kramer, coach at St. Thomas College in St. Paul, got him a chance to pitch in a rookie league. "The Twins saw me for four years, but I never really had four pitches that I could throw for strikes before."

"I played four years in college here, and over those years the Twins usually drafted one or two of our players in the later rounds of the draft. I just hoped to get drafted, even low like that, and maybe be a catcher. But I'm glad to be with Texas."

White Sox 3, Royals 0
Ken Kravec fired a four-hitter, striking out nine, and Claudell Washington's third hit of the game, a two-run single in the eighth inning off Dennis Leonard, broke up a scoreless duel. Washington's hit followed two-out singles by Greg Pryor and Bob Molinaro and a stolen base by Molinaro. Washington went to second on the throw to the plate and scored when Mike Squires singled.

Angels 6, Yankees 3
Don Baylor slammed his 26th home

run, doubled and singled home a run, Joe Rudi hit a pair of sacrifice flies and Chris Knapp, subbing for Don Aase after an auto accident, picked up his 13th victory with help from Tom Griffin and Dave LaRoche. California took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Carney Lansford's double, a walk, Baylor's RBI single and the first of Rudi's sacrifice flies. Bostock opened the third inning with a single and Baylor doubled. Rudi's second sacrifice fly scored Bostock and Baylor came home on a sacrifice fly by Ron Fairly.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 3
Two-run singles by Ruppert Jones and Lee Stanton off Mike Torrez in the sixth inning rallied Seattle from a three-run deficit to a 4-3 lead. It was the Mariners' fourth victory in a row. Boston's Jim Rice hit his 31st homer, a two-run shot off Byron McLoughlin in the first inning.

Brewers 9, Indians 4
Sal Bando, whose 15th homer tied the score in the sixth inning, singled and scored the go-ahead run on loser Sid Monge's throwing error in a five-run eighth as the Brewers won for the 10th time in their last 11 games. Bando singled to lead off the eighth and Monge fielded Gorman Thomas' bunt but slipped and threw wildly past first as Bando raced all the way home and Thomas took third.

Blue Jays 4-5, Tigers 3-4
Dave McKay and Otto Velez clubbed two-run homers in the nightcap after McKay singled home the winning run in the 12th inning of the opener following Alan Ashby's double. Al Woods' homer accounted for Toronto's first three runs. Rusty Staub picked up his 100th RBI in the nightcap, the first time a Tiger has driven in 100 runs in two consecutive years since Willie Horton did it in 1965-66. The game ended when catcher Rick Cerone threw out Ron LeFlore on an attempted steal of second, snapping LeFlore's AL record of 27 consecutive stolen bases.

Orioles 11, A's 0
Jim Palmer pitched a three-hitter for his sixth shutout of the season as Baltimore beat the A's for the ninth time in as many meetings. The loss was the 13th in the last 15 games for the A's, who haven't beaten Baltimore in Oakland since July of 1976, losing 12 straight.

Doug DeCinces drove in three runs, two of them with a double in the four-run first inning and the other with a single in a five-run third, and veteran Elrod Hendricks hit his first home run of the season.

Dunbar To Try Pecos In Scrimmage Today

By BOB BAJACKSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Van Jefferson was keeping busy Wednesday. Between filing and straightening his desk, the Dunbar coach barely had time for an interview.

However, Jefferson wasn't avoiding the conversation. He was just trying to keep his mind off of football.

Today, Dunbar will compete in its first scrimmage of the season against Pecos. The action will take place in Big Spring. The contest will get underway around 5 p.m.

"It's only a scrimmage and the basic concern is to evaluate our kids," said Jefferson. "But that doesn't mean I won't get uptight. It'll hit about an hour before the scrimmage."

Jefferson considers himself an realist, optimist and perfectionist. It's the realist in him, that makes Jefferson wary.

"Sure, it doesn't count and we don't keep records of scrimmages," said Jefferson. "But I'm worried because if we suffer one injury, we will be wiped out."

The Panthers will enter the scrimmage with a 49-man roster. Jefferson has divided his team into three squads—maroon, white and gray.

Jefferson instantly added: "We're going into this scrimmage with no positions nailed down. We don't have any starters. Just three teams."

When asked if he comprised the three squads on the basis of talent Jefferson nodded his head in a negative direction.

"All three squads are equal," said Jefferson. "Now we're going to try and find out which kids from these three squads can do the job."

Hasn't anybody been impressive in workouts? "Tight end Thomas Patterson (176, Sr), runningback Ernest White (176, Sr), quarterback Daryl Green (173, Sr) and guard Kevin Lust (173, Sr) have been impressive on offense," said Jefferson.

What about the defense? "Defensive end Geoffrey Crawford (176, Jr), linebacker Reginal Swearingin (176, Sr) and tackle Sammy Williams (216, Jr), have been our most consistent players," concluded the Dunbar coach.

The optimist in Jefferson then took control of the coaches' speech. Jefferson isn't expecting for any of his players to perform badly against Pecos.

"I expect all the plays we will practice on to go smoothly," said the Panther mentor. "That's right, I don't expect any screwups. After all, how my kids perform is a direct reflection on me. If something does go wrong, I'm going to see it gets corrected in a hurry."

To prove his point, Jefferson said he will be on the playing field with his kids during the scrimmage.

"If I see someone not clogging a hole on defense or not opening a hole on offense, I'm going to direct him to the problem area," said Jefferson.

LYDEL MITCHELL

BALTIMORE (AP) — With hopes of reconciliation evaporating rapidly, and bitter feelings building even more quickly, the Baltimore Colts have apparently decided to solve their problems with Lydell Mitchell by trading him to San Diego.

The Chargers announced Wednesday night that they had traded running back Joe Washington and an undisclosed draft choice for Mitchell, Baltimore's all-time leading rusher.

"We have not come to contractual agreement with Lydell," said Tank Younger, San Diego's assistant general manager. "We have not signed him to a contract, but we have traded Joe Washington and an undisclosed draft choice for his services."

But the Colts called the announcement premature, since Mitchell and San Diego had not reached the contract agreement necessary to consummate the trade.

But whether or not Mitchell plays with the Chargers this season, his prospects of wearing a Colt jersey again became even more remote Wednesday.

In addition to their contract troubles, the former Penn State star and the Colts are still embroiled in a grievance filed by Mitchell with the National Football League Player-Club Relations Committee.

Mitchell charged the team with racial discrimination, bad faith bargaining and illegally fining him $500 a day for missing practice.

The racism charge was apparently the last straw for Colts' owner Robert Irsay, who demanded an apology from the running back.

"He tells me I'm like a father, that I treat him so beautifully. Then he calls me a racist. I can't tolerate a man like that on the Baltimore Colts," said Irsay in a statement issued from his Skokie, Ill., home.

After spending two days debating the matter, the PCRC also gave up on a solution to the dispute Wednesday.

"The PCRC believes because of the seriousness of the charges, that all parties should be heard under oath. Therefore, the entire grievance has been referred to the arbitrator."

Mitchell has the option of dropping the grievance after he leaves the Colts, or pursuing it to a final solution, according to observers.

The PCRC said James Pearce, a former federal arbitrator, is expected to begin hearing testimony from both sides in Washington early next week.

At a meeting of the PCRC on Monday, a tentative agreement was reached between Mitchell and his attorney, and a Colts' delegation which included General Manager Dick Szymanski.

But Irsay scuttled the agreement. In addition to objecting to terms of a three-year contract, which would have reached $225,000 in the third season, Irsay reportedly was disturbed because it failed to call for an apology from Mitchell on the racist charge.

Mitchell, in the option year of his current $99,000 contract, failed to report to training camp while demanding pay of $200,000 in 1978. The Colts reportedly offered $130,000 at the start, later upping the amount to $175,000.

Cowboys Cut Young, Butler

DALLAS (AP) — Veteran fullback Charles Young, Dallas' No. 1 draft pick out of North Carolina State in 1974, and placekicker Skip Butler were cut by the Cowboys on Wednesday as the National Football League team trimmed its roster to 50 players.

Seven other players were waived. Head Coach Tom Landry said Tuesday that Butler, acquired only weeks earlier to help shore up the Cowboy kicking game, would go. That made rookie Jay Sherill the No. 1 Dallas kicker.

Young's career with the Cowboys was hampered by injuries which kept him out of action much of the time. Kenny Randle, a rookie from USC, was placed on the injured reserve list because of a bad shoulder.

Also waived were tight end Bryon Billik, a free agent from Brigham Young; safety Darrel Davis, a free agent from Northwest Missouri State; cornerback Devon Ford, a free agent from Appalachian State; guard Greg Peters, No. 12 draft choice from California; guard Tom Randall, No. 7 draft pick from Iowa State; linebacker Harold Randolph, No. 6 draft choice from East Carolina and linebacker Kinnie Weaver, a free agent from Vanderbilt.

Johnson Still On Sidelines

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers will get running backs Rob Carpenter and Anthony Davis off the injury list but Billy Johnson likely will remain sidelined for the team's final exhibition game Saturday against the New Orleans Saints.

Davis, obtained in a trade with Tampa Bay this year, broke his leg on the first day of training camp. Carpenter suffered a deep knee bruise in the Oilers exhibition opener against the Denver Broncos.

Both started working out Tuesday and are expected to be in uniform in the Astro dome Saturday night.

Meyer Charts

Timetable

dashed for 996 yards, six touchdowns and an average of 15.1 yards per catch. The 180-pound junior from Little Rock thus finished second in the nation. But, the Mustangs must try to build a running game, with Darold Turner, a transfer from Navarro JC, at tailback and Derek Shelton, a 200-pound soph, at fullback.

But, depth? "It's somewhat scary right now," admits Meyer.

"We must stay away from injuries on defense," the coach said. "We have six tackles that can play, and three of them are freshmen. They aren't starting now, but they will play as much against TCU as the others."

And, at linebacker, a sophomore, Jimmy Smith, is starting. Behind him is a freshman, Eric Ferguson (220) of Houston Kashmere who "will be the finest linebacker ever to play at SMU. He knows what it's all about."

And, as a freshman, Ferguson will around next year—and the next—to help Meyer keep his bowl schedule.

NOTES BOX—EMANUEL TOLBERT, on TCU, "That's what I'm thinking about. Sept. 9. Like Coach Meyer, I hate 'em'..."

MEYER, on his problems with TCU over playing at 4 p.m. in September with the temperature above 100: "It was an administrative decision, and I don't like it. One of our players dropped on the 50-yard line and didn't move; I thought he'd been shot. I was in a stadium—50,000—one time when five people died. I don't want that to happen to our players."

PUTT CHOATE, on the same TCU affair: "We checked it out, and they were on the shady side, where it was 30 degrees cooler. Mad about it, I damn sure am."

Punter KEN ROSENTHAL, on UT punter Russell Erxleben: "He's the best in the country. I tried to compete with him last year, but now, I compete only against myself. He's in another league."

Quarterback MIKE FORD, on his passing: "I was hurt my senior year in high school and then again last year, but I feel I have more velocity on the ball now than any time since my junior year in high school." On his size (237 pounds): "If I worried about it as much as everyone else, I'd probably have a heart attack."

Murray OLDERMAN'S PRO CHARTS

PROSPECTUS

The new regime has taken complete hold. This is a Joe Thomas team, with old deadwood cleaned out, exciting addition of O.J. Simpson and new coach in untried Pete McCulley. Team figures to turn around from 5-9 of '77 and be instant contender, though there's a tremendous amount of reliance on rookies.

OFFENSE

So much depends on arm and leadership of Jim Plunkett, who's had two mediocre seasons. There's nothing reliable behind him. He should work well with McCulley. Presence of O.J. lends whole new tone to attack. They'll utilize him more as receiver. Teams with Wilbur Jackson in backfield. Long gamble is green line, with rookies at guards (Walt Downing, Ernie Hughes) and tight end, where top draftee Ken MacAfee is impressive but slow. Gene Washington finally has adequate foil in wide posts, with Freddie Solomon coming west from Miami. Also exciting rookie in Terry LeCount. There's more balance to the attack. Ray Wersching suffices as place-kicker. Rating — B+

DEFENSE

Likeliest area of breakdown is deep secondary where only Bruce Taylor on right corner has any real experience, and even he's not sure of job. Really threadbare at the safeties. Improved look at linebacker, particularly in middle, where Dan Bunz is considered rookie prize and maybe 49ers best in decade. Bruce Elia should oust vet Skip Vanderbundt on left side. Big switch up front finds Cleveland Elam, all-pro at tackle, moving to strong side end, with Ed Galigher taking over at tackle. Elam and Cedrick Hardman should provide strong pass rush. There's depth, too, from such as Tony Cline. The special teams can't be as bad as last year, though punter Tom Wittum, injured in off-season, is out for year. Rating — B-

PREDICTION

49ers look like team that can do turn-around and go from 5-9 to 9-5 if those rookies come anywhere near potential. Pick 'em to finish SECOND in NFC West, with shot at wild card spot.

Dodgers Finish Trip With Win

By The Associated Press
The Los Angeles Dodgers, clinging tenaciously to a one-half game lead over the San Francisco Giants in the National League West, returned home today after what Manager Tom Lasorda called a very successful trip East.

"It's been a long trip," Lasorda said Wednesday after the Dodgers defeated the Montreal Expos 4-2, "and we're very happy to be going home. But it was a much better trip than the last time we came East when we were three-and-seven."

On their Eastern swing this time, the Dodgers went 6-2 with series in Philadelphia, New York and Montreal. The Dodgers, who face Philadelphia tonight at Dodger Stadium, swept the Phils and lost single games to the Mets and Expos.

The Giants, meanwhile, are keeping pace with the Dodgers. San Francisco completed a three-game sweep of the Mets Wednesday with a 2-1 victory.

The Dodgers now play 24 of their last 36 games at home.

"I don't even think about it (the schedule)," said Lasorda. "When you start thinking about the schedule, you get into trouble. I just think about tomorrow's game. I take it one game at a time. I don't care what anyone says."

Elsewhere in the NL, San Diego edged the Phils 6-5, Houston shut out the Chicago Cubs 3-0 and Pittsburgh nipped Atlanta 4-3 in 12 innings.

Burt Hooton, 14-4, got the victory for the Dodgers, giving Lasorda eight strong innings before Charlie Hough, who got his sixth save, relieved him in the ninth.

Four Montreal errors figured in Los Angeles' scoring.

The Dodgers scored twice off Montreal starter Steve Rogers, 13-9, in the second. Rick Monday's single scored one run and errors by Expos center fielder Warren Cromartie and catcher Gary Carter after the hit allowed another run to score.

In the sixth, Dusty Baker singled and look (third when Montreal second baseman Dave Cash let Monday's grounder get by him. Baker scored on right fielder Ellis Valentine's throwing error.

Tonight, lefties Tommy John of Los Angeles and Steve Carlton of Philadelphia face each other, while San Francisco is idle before beginning a homestand against Montreal.

"We're not going to get to bed at home before four o'clock in the morning," said Lasorda. "But Philadelphia had a noon game today so it'll be easier for them."

Thomas' game-winning hit.

Robbie Fingers, 5-11, got the win in relief of Randy Jones, who breezed through the first four innings before the Phils exploded for four runs on five hits in the fifth.

The Phils retained a four-game lead over the Cubs in the NL East, while Pittsburgh picked up a game and moved to within 4½.

Atlanta, Cubs 6

Ken Forsch, 7-4, won his first game as a starting pitcher in three years and combined with Joe Sambito on a six-hit shut-out over the Cubs, who blew another chance to gain ground on Philadelphia.

Forsch allowed four hits in seven innings and Sambito hurled the final two innings for his ninth save.

All of Houston's runs were unearned, the first two coming off Chicago starter Dennis Lamp, 5-13, who has been on the mound six times this year when the Cubs have been shut out.

Pirates 4, Braves 3

Dave Parker singled home a run in Pittsburgh's three-run fifth inning and scored the winning run in front of Ed Ott's 12th-inning single, as the Pirates extended their winning streak to nine games.

The Pirates were nine games out of first when the streak began and have since picked up 4½ games on Philadelphia.

With one out in the 12th, Parker tripled off reliever Dave Campbell, 4-3, and came home on when Ott singled to left.

Midland Edges Past Amarillo 5-4

By The Associated Press
Dave Biallus drove in two runs with a top-of-the-ninth single to cap an Arkansas rally and clinch an 11-10 Texas League victory over Tulsa Wednesday night.

In other league action, Midland claimed sole possession of the Western Division lead with its 5-4 win over Amarillo. San Antonio dropped a game behind by losing to El Paso, 6-4.

The Drillers squandered an 8-1 lead and then saw a 10-9 advantage slip away to the Travelers in the ninth as they committed four errors.

Arkansas moved to within a half-game of idle Eastern Division leader Jackson. John Littlefield evened his record at 7-7 with the win, while Mike Arrington, 2-4, took the loss.

Joe Hernandez slashed a double that scored Bill Evers in the top of the ninth for Midland's 5-4 victory. Reliever Mike Allen picked up his first win of the season.

Five San Antonio errors helped El Paso to its win, as the Diablos scored three unearned runs. El Paso's Bob Clark sent in two runs with a seventh-inning triple.

Rick Foley, 3-2, was credited with the victory. The losing pitcher was Dave Stewart, 14-10.

Tougher Competition Facing Savings, Loan Associations

NEW YORK (AP) — Competitive investments with higher interest rates continue to cut into deposits at savings and loan associations, but officials of the thrift institution industry say six-month savings certificates are relieving some of the strain.

CB Convac

By INK DIPPER

It was the first CB funeral ever held. More than 100 CBers, many of them members of the Signal Seekers of Polk County, Fla., were present to bury their chaplain, Gordon Van Noske.

It was a touching occasion as the pallbearers wearing their red, white, and blue uniforms buried "Flash Gordon" in reverence. He, too, as he had requested his family, wore the prescribed attire of his club.

Marlin Fagan, president of the Signal Seekers, presided at a private club prayer for Van Noske the following Sunday and dedicated the mini-jamboree, which the club had been planning for months, to his memory. CBers from throughout Polk County came to participate in the event and to honor their fellow CBer's passing.

"We organized the club in mid-December, 1977," explained Fagan, whose handle is "Yellow Jacket." "Our first meeting was in January, 1978. We've got 54 members. It was started by seven CBers who were tired of the abuses that we found on citizens band radio. People who harass CBers talking, who yak on top of conversations and who dead key are doing CB an injustice. We decided to do something about it."

At their first meeting they agreed that their efforts would be directed toward this objective. They set initiation fees at $10 per member (which included the wives) and monthly fees at $2. With their initial organization there was enough money to buy three signal tracers for finding offenders. Working together, the club has nailed five so far. Two of these have been reported to the FCC for refusing to cooperate reasonably.

Signal Seekers like "The Wild Man" (Leonard Wilts), "Crusader" (Reese Griffin), "Elevator Man" (William Davis) and "Alligator" (Louie Mitchell) all wanted some structure for what they term a "decent CB family that could enjoy each other in good fellowship." Their meetings are primarily about projects they can undertake. Their uniforms indicate their pride in their organization.

In a county of Florida with about 200,000 population there are more than 30 CB clubs. Their total membership is estimated at 8,000 active CBers. At a mini-jamboree in Lakeland, the county seat, between over 4,000 CBers came to enjoy the bingo games, various family competitions and strive for the prizes. A joint effort of all the Polk County clubs is in their combined efforts at raising money for Jerry Lewis' annual muscular dystrophy can do better than a Tampa television station.

"Right now the biggest problem on CB is the non-stop talkers," Fagan said. "Recently, as an example, a woman was heading south on Interstate 75 and there had been a death in her family. She was from Ohio, so a member of her family called a friend in Winter Haven to see if she could be headed off before she got to Miami. He put it on Channel 12 (our channel) and I picked the message up. I wanted to relay it to Tampa or Orlando, but I couldn't get a break because of this. That's wrong."

There are many things wrong with citizens band radio. But clubs like the Signal Seekers are dedicated to making it a better and a more valuable resource.

(Newspaper Enterprise Association)

According to figures compiled by Strunk's organization, savings deposits have risen $2.6 billion to $411.2 billion. The amount of the rise was 38 percent less than the $4.2 billion rise a year ago. The drop in June was 14 percent, from $2.1 billion to $1.8 billion.

The problem is money-market instruments — such as Treasury bills and commercial paper issued by corporations — that produce higher interest than regular savings deposits. Those instruments have taken away many of the SL's customers.

The difficulties have grown particularly acute in recent months, as the Federal Reserve Board has moved to raise short-term interest rates in an attempt to stem inflation. The rise in short-term rates has pushed up the rates on the money-market instruments, making them even more attractive.

To combat this, banks began June 1 to issue savings certificates whose interest is tied to the rate on six-month Treasury bills — currently more than two percentage points above most passbook accounts.

The savings certificates seem to be doing the trick of winning back deposits lost to other investment devices. According to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, about 42 percent of the more than $20 billion spent on saving certificates in their first two months of issuance was "new" money — in other words, money not already in savings accounts.

The FHLBB survey found that at the nation's 247 largest savings and loan associations, about 3.4 percent of the total savings deposits in July came from savings certificates, up from 1.5 percent in June.

"The significance of this survey," said FHLBB Chairman Robert H. McKinney, "is confirmation that after two months, these new money-market certificates enjoy wide public acceptance and are an established working tool to maintain the stability of consumer savings deposits and the availability of mortgage credit."

Houston Revamps Purchasing Policy

HOUSTON (AP) — The City of Houston expects to save as much as $1.25 million dollars this year because of its new purchasing policy.

Purchasing Director Jack Key said Thursday the city has saved $1 million on automobile and truck supplies alone since it eliminated open purchase orders.

The previous policy allowed department heads to get purchase orders of less than $1,000 for miscellaneous supplies without taking bids or getting City Council approval, Key said.

He called the open purchase order policy "a $4 million worth of blank checks," referring to last year's 5,053 purchase orders written by city departments that cost that much money.

The departments were allowed to buy supplies such as spark plugs or oil any where they had an open purchase order, Key said. The order didn't have to specify what items could be purchased or put a limit on the amount paid for each item, he said.

Consequently, a department might be charged retail rates in one store, while another might charge twice that amount, Key said.

"When the limit of about $950 was reached, the dealer or vendor would send the city the bill," the purchasing director said.

Now the city takes the lowest bid for such small, but often needed, items such as spark plugs, alternators and oil filters.

"Right now we know if we need X number of spark plugs, we're going to be paying 63 cents apiece for them," Key said. "Last year we paid an average of $1.40 to $1.50 each."

At first, Key said, department heads and their purchasing agents complained about the new system, saying the paperwork involved in taking bids was excessive and worrying that the new policy would delay their getting the supplies they needed.

Equipment Sale Set Next Week

By MARY KOCH
SEATTLE (AP) — It's billed as the largest heavy machinery sale in history. Alaskan pipeline construction equipment valued at $14 million to $15 million will be sold next week to the highest bidder.

William Miller, 51-year-old head of Miller and Miller auctioneers of Fort Worth, Texas, will direct the auction, but he won't say what his fee is.

"But it beats chopping cotton in Oklahoma," he drawled in a phone interview from St. Paul, Minn., where he was handling another equipment auction.

Miller says his company runs some 70 machinery and equipment auctions throughout the country each year. And if you think next week's pipeline equipment sale in Moses Lake, Wash., is a biggie, just wait until December, says Miller.

The final sale in the series of five pipeline auctions being held both in Moses Lake and Fairbanks, Alaska, will be "the granddaddy of them all," he said. That sale, also scheduled for Moses Lake, where heavy machinery is lined up across a one-time Navy airfield, will bring in between $18 million and $20 million, said Miller.

Another $11 million worth of equipment was sold earlier in Fairbanks. Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium of eight oil firms that spent three years building the 800-mile, $7.7 billion pipeline, hopes to recover about $100 million of the $275 million to $300 million it spent on equipment.

Some equipment is being sold in direct retail sales, but the bulk is handled through the auctions — "the best way to get the most out in the shortest length of time," says Miller.

Everything will go, says James McGary of Morrison-Knudsen Co. of Boise, Idaho, the contractor for repairing and selling the equipment. Asked what will be done with left-overs, McGary said, "We don't anticipate that."

This week the gates were opened at Moses Lake for potential buyers to inspect the equipment. McGary says he has been told to expect as many as 3,000 persons.

There are no money-back guarantees, McGary said. Although Morrison-Knudsen has been repairing and rehabilitating the goods, they are being sold strictly "as is," he said.

Ex-Atomic Energy Locations Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department is asking the public to help identify possible sites throughout the country where radioactive materials were processed or stored in the early days of the atomic age, starting in the 1940s.

The department already has identified more than 70 former atomic energy sites in 33 states, most of which it says will require some radioactive decontamination. The department is looking for additional sites formerly used for processing uranium and thorium ore for which records have been misplaced or destroyed.

Food Class Reserved For Serious Students Only

DAVIS, Calif. (UPI) — Michael Lewis may be the only professor at the University of California at Davis whose class attracts students eager for homework assignments.

Lewis, professor of food science and technology, teaches a unique course entitled "Malting and Brewing Technology." In other words, his students brew beer — not for consumption but for scientific analysis.

But eager though his students may be for a thirst-quenching sample of their schoolwork, they have to settle for academic satisfaction.

Lewis, a Welsh descendant of a long line of brewers and pub owners, said the class is far from a suds-swilling den of tipsy students.

"It's not a drinking or beer-swilling class," he said. "There's no fooling around." He said only seniors with "strong scientific backgrounds — serious scholars" — are allowed to enroll.

Lewis said many of his students find employment in the brewing and malting industries.

"I was tempted to take a sip of the beer," admitted Monica Osa, a fermentation science major. "Everybody's tempted."

"But we're not here to make tasty beer; we're here to analyze its physical characteristics," she said.

"Everybody thinks just because it's a beer making class it's a lot of fun; nothing is further from the truth," said Miss Osa, noting that "it's not an easy class."

"Everybody thinks we do all our beer swilling at school instead of after, but that's not true," she said.

Miss Osa said the class made her more conscious of a beer's characteristics when she sips a glass of the golden refreshment.

"The class made us more aware of when we drink beer," she said. "The way it smells, what color it is. Before I kind of guzzled it down."

Under the supervision of Lewis, students test the beer they brew, as well as commercial beer for color, bitterness and raw materials.

It takes from six weeks to more than four months to brew beer. Beer is usually aged for one to three months at the Davis laboratory.

While Lewis deals with the refined techniques of brewing, he has a few recommendations for the beer-drinking public.

"Each beer is right for an occasion," said Lewis. "If you're thirsty after mowing the lawn on a hot day, a light beer is ideal. It will relieve the dryness without weighing you down."

A heavier beer, one that is darker and higher in alcoholic content, would be suitable for "sitting around when you can concentrate on what your mouth is doing," he said.

Lewis said the fermentation laboratory at the university is the only such facility on a college campus in the Western Hemisphere.

Class enrollment has increased steadily to its present number of about 70 students. Lewis said university officials have supported the program, which also has financial backing from the brewing industry.

While wine is thought to be an upper class beverage, he said, beer is viewed as the working man's drink, a beverage for the less affluent.

"But that's not necessarily a valid image," Lewis said. In the past, beer has had an inferior image because it was less expensive than wine, said Doug Muhleman, a research assistant.

"The working classes bought beer," he said. "Wine had more of a mystique to it."

But Muhleman thinks beer is gaining respect among connoisseurs of drink.

"More people, and that includes the affluent, are drinking beer," he said. "They're becoming more conscious of quality, being more selective, they're getting more tuned into beer."

Mondale Pokes Fun At Administration

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
WASHINGTON (AP) — It seems that Walter F. Mondale is being asked the same question over and over these days. In fact, it is a question he has been asked since he took office:

Are you planning to run for president in 1980?

He has an answer for journalists who insist on repeating the question.

"Some reporter every day wonders if I am dumb enough to answer that. That is a basic I.Q. question," he told one person unfortunate enough to fall into the trap.

It is just another example of the wit and wisdom of the vice president that spiced almost any public address he makes.

In a recent 30-minute interview by editors and news directors from outside the Washington area, Mondale managed half a dozen jokes. More often than not, he and his colleagues in the administration were the butts.

A standup comedian he isn't, but try this:

"We have an open administration. As a matter of fact, it is a sieve."

"It is almost inhuman what a president goes through. No issue hits his desk that doesn't have a knife in it, or a bomb in it. If it were good news, it would have been announced by someone else."

"I am reminded of Bismarck's gag that, 'he who likes sausages and laws should never watch either being made.' I didn't say that when I was in the Senate. I do now."

"I am sort of a Kentuckian, you know. I rose to private first class in the Army down there, after two years at Fort Knox. I think even the Army was glad to see me go."

'Rafshoon Production'

One of the more pressing questions around the White House these days is what, exactly, has Gerald Rafshoon been doing?

Rafshoon is the Atlanta advertising executive brought into the White House to help patch up Carter's image around the nation.

White House wags have taken to suggesting that the curly-haired would-be media-master has had a hand in all sorts of things presidential, at least those seen as creating a "presidential image."

When Carter flew to Columbia, Mo., last week to address a farm group, an armor-plated limousine, as usual, arrived there ahead of him. However, it was missing the U.S. and presidential flags that fly from the front fenders. They were carried out to Missouri from Washington by a Secret Service agent.

"Jimmy wouldn't miss them," said a television cameraman, kidding the agent who was part of an advance detail flying aboard a chartered airliner carrying journalists and others.

"But Rafshoon would," said one reporter.

It has also been suggested that after a presidential speech or "media event" that has been engineered by Rafshoon, those in attendance be given a special notice, much like the logo at the end of a television show or movie, that would read: "This has been a Gerald Rafshoon production."

Keiser Breaks Rules

Richard Keiser, a Secret Service chief who until last month headed the Secret Service detail at the White House, always made sure the agents flying aboard Air Force One with the president remained awake, even on transcontinental flights.

When he left the White House for a job in the agency hierarchy, he was given a large, color photograph of himself on the president's airplane.

What was he doing in the picture? He was fast asleep.

Crabgrass Invades Yard

It might seem to some that the best place in Washington to find a perfect lawn would be the White House. That may be, but even the expansive South Lawn of the executive mansion isn't perfect.

Groundskeepers have all they can do to counter the heat of the nation's capital in August. This summer there has been a series of heavy rainstorms and the lawn has stayed exceptionally green. But there are more than a few blades of crabgrass.

And the clean-up crew leaves something to be desired. A dead bird that had apparently fallen out of a tree remained on a sidewalk in the White House complex for several days.

The children in the Carter family seem to enjoy the outdoors facilities.

There is a sandbox and baby's swing for the president's 18-month-old grandson, James Earl Carter IV. And raucous laughter can be heard coming from the swimming pool on summer evenings as Amy Carter and friends cool off.

'Girlie' Show Schedules Iowa State Fair Date

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — The "girlie show" has made a shaky return to the Iowa State Fair this year.

"We didn't have it for two years," said Al Kunz, president of the Century 21 Midway, Tampa, Fla. "And we don't even carry it permanently with us any more."

He said the show is traveling with his midway only to places they think there will be an audience.

"Iowa is usually a pretty good girlie show date," Kunz said. "They will also be with us at the Nebraska fair — because that's also pretty good for that kind of entertainment. But, we will be looking at it closely this year to see what happens."

Today's girlie show carries around three girls and a comedian, he said, and is modeled in content around the traditional burlesque show.

Kunz said there are various problems associated with carrying this sort of show in a carnival midway — but they aren't what you would expect.

"Surprisingly enough, it's not the church groups complaining that makes them so hard," Kunz said. "The man who runs this show is even married to a school teacher."

The problem is that times have changed — leaving the old-time girlie show behind in most cases.

Kunz said his shows do not show nudity. "I know there are some fairs that do it. But, we go to pasties and g-string — and the girls have to have some talent to pull it off," he said.

"The new liberal movement has changed all that. I might as well say it. The X-rated movies and so many of the peep shows in bars have really killed the girlie-show business," Kunz said. "They just really aren't profitable anymore. You can't make any money with them."

Nevertheless, Kunz said, he's optimistic the traveling burlesque show still has a place.

"You need a little spice. There are some folks who don't get to a major city outside of fair time. So, he can send mama to look at the preserves, put the kids on the rides and then go to the girlie show," he said. "It does them a lot of good."

A food booth run by the Easton Place Methodist Church borders the show. Officials there say they are delighted to have the girls back.

Researcher Has Firsthand Knowledge Of Cancer

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. O. Carl Simonton's medical career was shaped by his intimacy with cancer.

"It was only natural that in medical school I should become so interested in the disease," said the radiation oncologist. He and his wife, Stephanie, a psychologist, direct the Cancer Counseling and Research Center in Fort Worth.

Simonton's maternal grandmother died of cancer. His mother-in-law had stomach cancer surgery at 72 and lived to be 90 until a blood clot killed her. Carl had skin cancer when he was 16 and thought at first that a "pimple" was simply acne.

"It was on my nose," he said, "and was removed surgically and I had no radiation. But I still become afraid at some simple skin eruption."

The Simontons, who lecture widely to hospitals and medical groups, give the "will to live" a scientific basis to be used in conjunction with standard medical procedures. It's sort of a power of positive thinking in recovering from cancer.

"We're treating body and mind," said Simonton. "They're so intertwined. What a person does can influence the outcome of disease. The person's attitude can make the difference."

The Simontons are authors of a book, "Getting Well Again" (J. P. Tarcher, Los Angeles) in which they outline a step-by-step guide for patients and their families to create the best environment internally and externally for recovery.

The Simontons explained their book during a swing through the East and South, including an appearance at the American Psychiatric Association convention in Atlanta where 10,000 gathered.

Simonton became interested in the "will to live" aspect during his residency as a cancer specialist at the University of Oregon Medical School. Why, he asked, do some patients recover and others die when the diagnosis is the same for both? Then he noticed that some patients who said they wanted to live would often act as if they did not. There were lung cancer patients who refused to stop smoking, liver cancer patients who wouldn't cut down on alcohol, and others who wouldn't show up for treatment regularly.

These, he said, were people whose medical prognosis indicated that with treatment they could look forward to many more years of life. Yet, they showed a greater apathy, depression and attitude of giving up than did a number of others diagnosed with terminal disease.

In the latter category were patients who had been sent home after minimal treatment, with little expectation they would live to see their first follow-up appointment. Yet several years later, they were still arriving for their annual or semi-annual examinations, remaining in good health and inexplicably beating the statistics.

Simonton said these patients, asked to account for their good health, would give such answers as, "I can't die until my son graduates from college" or "They need me too much at work."

The common thread was the belief that they exerted some influence over the course of their disease, he said.

Mrs. Simonton's background was in motivational counseling where she studied the unusual achievers — those people in business who seemed destined to go to the top.

Simonton began experiments with mental imagery techniques for cancer patients after discussions with two leading biofeedback researchers, Drs. Joe Kamiya and Elmer Green of the Menninger Clinic. Such imagery is an important aspect of biofeedback.

The first case described in the Simonton book is a dramatic one, a man of 61 with a form of throat cancer that carried grave prognosis. He was very weak, his weight had dropped from 130 to 98 pounds, he could barely swallow his own saliva and was having difficulty breathing.

There was less than a 5 percent chance he would survive five years. But Simonton began treatment by explaining how the patient might influence the course of his own disease.

The physician outlined a program of relaxation and imagery to go along with the radiation the patient was receiving. The patient was to set aside three 5- to 15-minute periods during the day — in the morning, after lunch, and at bedtime for total relaxation, telling each set of muscles to relax. Then he was to picture himself in a pleasant, quiet place and imagine his cancer vividly in whatever form it seemed to take.

Then Simonton asked him to picture his radiation therapy as consisting of millions of tiny bullets of energy that would hit all the cells, both normal and cancerous. The physician suggested that since the cancer cells were weaker and more confused than normal cells, they would not be able to repair the damage. The normal cells, though, would remain healthy.

The next step was to ask the patient to visualize his body's white cells swarming over the cancer cells, picking up the dead and dying ones and flushing them out of his body through his liver and kidneys.

The patient was to visualize his cancer decreasing and his health returning to normal. After he completed each such exercise, he was to go about whatever he had to do the rest of the day.

The doctor reported that the radiation therapy worked exceptionally well, half-way through treatment he was able to eat again, he gained strength and weight, and the cancer progressively disappeared. Two months later, said Simonton, the patient showed no signs of cancer. Seven years have gone by, and the remission continues. Simonton said of the terminally ill with whom he has worked in Fort Worth (and the patients come from around the nation), those now alive have an average survival rate more than twice as long as the national norm. Those who have died were able to survive 1 1/2 times longer than the national average after a terminal diagnosis. To those who would charge the physician with raising "false hope," he said,

"There is always uncertainty, as there is with standard medical procedures, but hope, we feel, is an appropriate stance to take toward uncertainty...Without hope the person has only hopelessness..." Simonton was asked why, despite all the billions of dollars spent on research and all the research going on in both the private and public sector, science has not found a cancer cure or at least a preventive, as it did in one concentrated drive on polio?

"Cancer is much more complex than polio," he said. "I think if there is ever such a thing as a 'cure' it will be through immunology. Most of us in medicine would like to see an end to so much duplication."

New TV Season Features Sex, SciFi, Specials

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI)—Sex, science fiction and stunting will be highlights of the new television season.
 That's what BBDO, one of the country's biggest advertising agencies, says in its "Report on Prime-Time Network Television 1978-79."
 Only the science fiction is new.
 Sex of the "jiggle" variety was ably represented last year by "Charlie's Angels" and two of the "Three's Company" cast, and there'll be more of the same in the upcoming season.
 "Stunting" means trying to boost ratings by putting specials on the air without much notice, giving the competition no time to program. All three networks stunted a lot last year as they aired 400 special programs and disrupted scheduled broadcasts 14 percent of the time. BBDO says despite network disclaimers about stunting in 1978-79, more than 150 special programs have already been announced.

 The science fiction shows, including last year's comic book variety, will be led by ABC's "Battlestar Galactica," which opens Sept. 17 with a three-hour special that reportedly cost $3 million, an unprecedented sum to spend on a series show.
 While the huge success of the movie "Star Wars" undoubtedly inspired some of the science fiction activity, there's another motive. SciFi brings masked violence to the small screen in a form the PTA — and advertisers — might more readily accept.

 "New and returning science fiction type shows and their special effects portray very unrealistic, and therefore less objectionable, violence," BBDO contends, pointing out that the violence on "The Incredible Hulk" and "Galactica" are "a world away from the street crime and murder of the defunct action-adventure-mystery emperors like 'Baretta' and 'Kojak.'"
 Instead of the realism of "Police Woman," the viewer gets the fantasy of "Wonder Woman."
 In the area of comedy, the emphasis is on family comedy — but not the blood-relative kind. Instead the comedy "family" increasingly consists of colleagues at work — not a new notion since that was the "family" of the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and still works its magic on the medical personnel in "M*A*S*H," the schoolmates of "Welcome Back, Kotter," and the squad room buddies of "Barney Miller."

 BBDO also reports that for the first time in six years, the amount of scheduled movie hours has increased — and since a lot of theatrical movies are not fit for home screen consumption the networks are rolling their own. Some are star-studded, while others resemble the old B movies "starring" actors as well known as a roll call from the producer's high school yearbook.

 Except for the fact that the bang-bang of pistols will be replaced by the zap of ray guns, it sounds like business as usual in network world.

tion, and "Charlie's Angels," 19.6 or 14.2 million, both ABC, and "Carter Country," ABC, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC, both 19.2 or 14 million.
 The next 10 programs: "Love Boat," "Starky and Hutch," "Happy Days," all ABC; "Lou Grant," "All in the Family," "60 Minutes," and "The Incredible Hulk," all CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and "Hawaii Five-O," CBS, tie.

ABC Retakes Nielsen Lead

NEW YORK (AP)—A couple of ABC programs, including a previously shown movie and a rerun of "Three's Company," bounced "One Day at a Time" from first place in the ratings, a spot the CBS comedy had held for two weeks in a row.
 The strong showing at the top — ABC had three other shows in the Top 10 for the week ending Aug. 20 — left the network ahead of CBS and NBC in their battle for the prime time viewer.
 "One Day at a Time," one of four CBS shows in the first 10, was third for the week, while NBC's best, "Quincy, M.E.," tied for ninth.

Here are the week's 10 most-watched programs:
 ABC Sunday Movie — "Joe Kidd," with a rating of 24.3 representing 17.7 million homes, and "Three's Company," 21.8 or 15.9 million, both ABC; "M*A*S*H," 21.6 or 15.7 million, "One Day at a Time," 21.2 or 15.5 million, "Barnaby Jones," 20.6 or 15 million, and "Alice," 20.2 or 14.7 million, all CBS; "Laverne and Shirley," 19.8 or 14.4 million, and "Charlie's Angels," 19.6 or 14.2 million, both ABC, and "Carter Country," ABC, and "Quincy, M.E.," NBC, both 19.2 or 14 million.

 The next 10 programs: "Love Boat," "Starky and Hutch," "Happy Days," all ABC; "Lou Grant," "All in the Family," "60 Minutes," and "The Incredible Hulk," all CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and "Hawaii Five-O," CBS, tie.

Historian Tells Court About Indian Treaty

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)— Research fails to back up a claim that the University of Michigan promised free education to three Indian tribes, a UM Indian history expert says.
 Helen H. Tanner, assistant director of the university's center for continuing education, was to resume her testimony today in Washtenaw Circuit Court in a suit brought against the UM on behalf of descendants of the Chippewa, Ottawa and Potawatomi tribes.
 Ms. Tanner was the first witness called by UM general counsel Roderick Daane, who is defending the class action suit brought by former UM football star Paul J. Johnson.
 She is on leave to a Chicago institution, which is compiling historical information on Michigan Indians.
 Johnson's attorney, Elmer E. White, argued that an 1817 treaty, known as the Treaty of Fort Meigs, committed the university to give free education to descendants of three tribes.
 In exchange, Johnson's suit claims, the tribes gave the university some 2,000 acres of land.
 In his opening statement Tuesday, defense attorney Daane denied that the Fort Meigs treaty committed the university to educate the Indians.
 "This treaty was between the U.S. government and the Indians, not between UM and the Indians," Daane said.
 "The absence of a mention of education (in later treaties) indicates it was an unimportant detail of the original treaty," Miss Tanner said.
 She said the education of Indians was a government policy and schools which were set up were arms of the government's Indian administration.
TAX ON THEFT
ATLANTA (AP)— Persons convicted of drug smuggling and gambling in Georgia are subject not only to criminal penalties but also to taxes on their ill gotten gains. In 1973, the first year the Revenue Department began to press for taxes, $675,000 in sales and use taxes were collected on such proceeds, said H.R. Jones, the department's administrative deputy. About 90 percent of the money came from drug seizures, he said. To assure collection, state and federal officials occasionally place an assessment on a convicted person's assets.

How to pull the plug on high electric bills.

Getting angry at the electric company about high bills won't help one bit. Because the problem is probably in your own home. If your heating and air-conditioning system is one of the old, low efficiency types, for example, a General Electric Executive high efficiency system is probably just what you've been wishing for. It's the most energy-efficient GE unit available today.

Imagine what that can do for your pocketbook!

So, don't get mad at the electric company next time your bill seems too high. Replace your old inefficient unit with a GE Executive high efficiency air conditioner. It has the lowest operating costs in the entire GE line. And, that's a pretty good plug, wouldn't you say.

Famed Photojournalist Battling Back After Crippling Stroke

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — When internationally acclaimed photojournalist W. Eugene Smith agreed to join the University of Arizona faculty as a visiting professor, it was an attempt at a fresh start.

Now, after a stroke, Smith is once again fighting for a new life. Smith, 59, received a joint appointment to the departments of art and journalism, and agreed to donate his archives, collected over 46 years, to the university's Center for Creative Photography.

A poll taken in 1958 by Popular Photography magazine named Smith one of the world's 10 best photographers, and in 1975 he reached a milestone in his career with publication of "Minamata," the story of a Japanese fishing village whose residents became ill from industrial wastes dumped into the water.

His pictures have appeared in Life magazine, the New York Times, Colliers and Harper's Bazaar. His works include "Country Doctor," "Nurse Midwife" and "Man of Mercy," on the life of Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

Smith joined the university last November, and a month later suffered the crippling stroke while undergoing routine medical tests.

"There are times I would have preferred to be dead," Smith said in an interview in his cluttered, modest home. "Many times about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning I would lie there and try to figure out why I couldn't walk. I fought with all the power I had to straighten my legs."

The stroke left him near death, almost voiceless, partially paralyzed and unable to walk.

Smith, however, is known for his stubbornness, and has bounced back from adversity before.

Indeed, he disregarded warnings and attended a photographic seminar in Tempe in March, still confined to a wheelchair. His presence, as well as his appearance, shocked other participants.

But he can now walk with a cane and said the day he regained the use of his legs marked "one of the greatest efforts of my life."

His voice, occasionally slurred, has returned, and he used it in public for the first time since his stroke only recently, when he met with a handful of art students. He said he plans to return to teaching in the fall.

Smith injured his back as a boy in Wichita, Kan., and was told he would never walk again. In 1942 he was hurt in a dynamite blast while he photographed simulated battle conditions. And three years later he was hit by shell fire on Oknawa while shooting "24 Hours With Infantryman Terry Moore." Two years of operations and treatments followed. During the two years of his work on "Minamata," he ate the same poisoned fish as the village residents, a practice friends blame for some of his recent health problems.

Mart Steady; Trading Moderate

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market held steady in moderate trading today as Wall Street awaited government figures on money supply and trade.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off just .34 at 896.66. Advancing issues outnumbered losers by a slight 6-5 margin in a middly talk of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The NYSE composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gained .09 to 59.21. By midday Big Board volume came to 14.00 million shares, down from heavy trading of 17.29 million in the same period on Wednesday.

There appeared to be little trend in the market after gains in the previous two sessions tied partly to improvement of the dollar in currency markets. The dollar was mixed in early currency trading today.

Analysts said some traders may be awaiting the Federal Reserve Board's weekly money supply report after the close of trading today and Friday's monthly report on the latest U.S. trade figures to provide some direction.

Dow Chemical, up 1/2 at 28 1/2 topped the noon NYSE most active list. Trading included a 199,000-share block at 28.

Among other actively traded issues, Dell Webb rose 1/2 to 26 1/2 and Bally climbed 1/4 to 4 1/2.

Fan American, the most active NYSE issue Wednesday after a report that it offered to merge with National Airline, had not traded by midday because of an imbalance by buy orders. It closed Wednesday at 8 1/2, up 1 point. National has not traded since Tuesday when it closed at 30 1/2.

On the American Stock Exchange, Texas International Airline which had earlier expressed interest in a merger with National, rose 1 1/4 to 14 1/4 in active trading. The Amex market value index gained .86 to 166.53.

Police Nab Suspected Forgers

Police tracked down and arrested two suspects Monday who allegedly forged checks totaling $1,338.75 at two jewelry stores in the South Plains Mall, 6002 Slide Road.

The 29-year-old Lubbock man and woman, 22, from Los Angeles, were arrested after they allegedly wrote a check for $630 for a diamond ring at Anderson Bros. Jewelers, and then one of the suspects made out another check totaling $708.75 for a dinner ring at Zales Jewelers.

Employees at Anderson Bros. told police they called the phone number on the check they received from the suspects and found out the real owner of the checks had lost her checkbook about a week ago.

After the reported forged check at 7 p.m., two mall security guards spotted one of the suspects purchasing another ring at Zales with the reported stolen check.

The female suspect was arrested after attempting to purchase the dinner ring, and her companion was arrested shortly afterwards at his car parked in front of the mall.

In other reported crimes, a 24-year-old man was reportedly caught by officers as he allegedly was burglarizing Carol Lynne Murphy's car about 1:45 a.m. today while it was parked in front of her apartment at 505 University Ave.

Officers also found a knife in the car, which was thought to be owned by the suspect. Mitchell Monte Allen, operations manager at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, told police Wednesday two lounge chairs, five tables and a love seat were stolen from the city facility. She said there were no signs of forced entry at the center.

Vernon Cline of 5014 15th St. said he suffered about $1,800 in damage after his trailer was vandalized. He said someone had broken the trailer windows, and rocks had been thrown at the trailer's aluminum siding.

Two women went to police headquarters Tuesday and told detectives they were prostitutes and that the pimp they worked for had threatened to kill them. The women said the man had warned them that if they ever left him, he would kill them.

Police received a report Sunday night that one of the admitted prostitutes, 19 years of age, was being held against her will at an apartment by the pimp, and that he had beaten her.

However, when police arrived at the Lubbock apartment Sunday, the woman, who was found locked in a back room, would not talk, reports show. When the woman, with her 21-year-old companion, talked to police Tuesday she said she was wanted in Arkansas for kidnapping. She said the charge stemmed from a time when she was with a man who forced another woman to travel with them.

A check, according to reports, showed the 19-year-old was wanted in Arkansas and she was placed in county jail. Ivey Lee Carter of 1504 21st St., Apt. C, said her home was burglarized and jewelry stolen between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday. Entry was made through an unlocked window.

The take in a recent house burglary included a one-month-old toy poodle, according to police. Jimmy C. Mata of 3213 Colgate St. said he suspects the one, described as having a beard and wavy hair and the other with straight hair and clean-shaven, walking in a back alley.

Mata said one of the men was carrying the poodle, and the other holding Mata's car covering. Sheriff's deputies were investigating the break-in of David Michael Hubbard's trailer house in Idalou Monday or Tuesday. Hubbard said several of his guns were stolen in the burglary.

Shiite Moslems Want Pure Islamic State In Iran

EDITOR'S NOTE — AP Correspondent Nicolas B. Tatro recently returned to Cairo from a news-gathering visit to Iran during which he interviewed religious leaders.

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
CAIRO (AP) — The conflict between Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and Iran religious leaders was set in motion by a series of reforms the ruler initiated 15 years ago.
 The reforms, known as the "white revolution," stripped the leaders of the Shia Moslems, the predominant sect in Iran, of control over vast land holdings and gave equal rights to women. The move was designed to advance the country's transition to a modern society.

 Ayatullah Khomeini, the spiritual leader of the Shiite community, led demonstrations that turned into bloody riots and confrontations much like the ones in which at least 100 persons have been killed since January.

 Khomeini was exiled in 1963, but from Iraq still leads a radical faction made up mostly of young theology students who seek creation of a pure Islamic state.
 The leadership of the mainstream has passed to soft-spoken Ayatullah Shariatmadari, an 80-year-old theologian who lives in spartan simplicity in the holy city of Qum, 100 miles south of Tehran.

 He does not seek to supplant the secular government with a religious one and in several recent interviews made clear he thinks coexistence is possible. But he and other religious leaders also made clear that they think the government has gone too far in allowing Western influences to erode traditional values.

"One roof cannot have two weathers," Shariatmadari said, quoting an ancient Persian proverb to illustrate his belief that Western permissiveness won't mix with Islamic traditions.

"One of the things we demand is an end to the showing of sexy films and films of violence which corrupt our children and undermine our families," he continued. "This sort of thing creates disbelief, and that paves the way for communism."
 Movie theaters have been a major target of religious rioters in the last eight months along with banks and liquor stores, because the Koran, Islam's holy book, forbids Moslems to drink or charge interest on loans.

The attacks intensified with the start of the holy month of Ramadan, and on Saturday night arsonists set fire to a movie house in the oil-refinery city of Abadan, killing at least 377 persons. The police chief of Abadan blames the attack on the Islamic Marxists, which the government says is an organization of terrorists who mix religious fanaticism with Marxist ideology. But the Shiite leaders say there is no such thing as Islamic Marxists.

The conservative Moslems also demand separate schools for boys and girls. They express concern over women walking unescorted in the streets at night and the trend among city women to shed the black "chador" veil in favor of figure-revealing Western dress.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though you might feel your pride has been wounded, you would be better off not to buck the person responsible. Things will right themselves if you'll have patience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't be too adventurous tomorrow. You may not realize it, but you're not up to your usual ability to judge the odds that face you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The investigative skills you rely on so heavily are temporarily out of order, so be extra careful tomorrow not to be taken in by one who is deceptive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) If you hope to have a successful day tomorrow you'd best depend only on yourself. You will not be able to depend upon allies and partners.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Sweeping important matters under the rug tomorrow would be a serious mistake. Face up to your tasks, no matter how difficult they appear. You'll spare yourself worse headaches.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Counting on things that are not visible or in the palm of your hand is like betting in the blind. Believe me, the odds won't favor you tomorrow.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep your promises tomorrow even if it means bending over backward. Another could be sorely disappointed, because this will be more important to him or her than you may realize.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Co-workers will need to be treated with kid gloves tomorrow, so be extremely careful of what you say and don't take part in any pettiness.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order to satisfy your whims tomorrow you're liable to spend more than you can really afford. Later, you'll be sorry for this extravagance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're really not good at flexing your muscles in order to get what you want, so don't try it tomorrow. Patience and logic will be the keys to your success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't pass on hearsay information or make statements based on partial facts. You'll regret it if you find out what you said hurt someone.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A friend of long standing could place you in an awkward financial situation tomorrow. If you feel his demands are unreasonable let him know your position.

Your Birthday

August 25, 1978

You will not be intimidated this coming year by projects more demanding than usual. It will be important, however, to keep your life in balance so it's not all work and no play.
