Fed up, they opt for lure of tradewinds

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Jack Triebel was fed up. He was fed up with all the phone calls and the crushing routine, fed up with watching the rest of the world from behind a desk.

In his mind's eye he had seen the dream. Now, 53 and president of the family business, Jack Triebel has decided to pursue it.

"My friends all think we're crazy," says Triebel. He and his wife, Punky, will leave home forever this month, climb aboard their new 40-foot sailboat and spend the rest of their lives at sea, working at odd jobs in various ports to support themselves.

"I was getting stale after 35 years or so in the business and wanted something different," he says. "You get to the point where you're saturated with the same thing day after day."

Triebel has turned over his financial interests in the clothes cleaning business to his son, Hunter, and his brother, Field. The Triebel's fashionable home is on the market. The furniture has been sold or given to seven children, all grown or in college.

"The boat is at Annapolis (Md.)," he says. "It will take a month or so to complete some necessary work and get it fitted out, and then Punky and I expect to sail to the Caribbean islands about Oct. 20."

Their savings will be exhausted by the time they reach the islands, he said. To get by, they will work part-time.

"We figure we will try to work weekends to make ends meet, and still have four or five days for sailing," Triebel says. "I'm a mechanic, a plumber. I could be a guard, a bartender, wash windows — but I'd just as soon not get into the cleaning and laundry business down there."

Mrs. Triebel says she looks forward to the sea adventure. She admits it will be new for someone whose life has been bounded by security and stabi-ty, but says there is something curiously satisfying about making the break.

"I'm going to cook and read until I get tired of doing it, and then I'll try something else," she says.

That might be "working as a teller in a bank, maybe working in a filling station — I never

McGovern wants action to topple Cambodian junta

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern, who campaigned for a decade against U.S. military involvement in Southeast Asia, says genocide in Cambodia justifies military intervention by an international peacekeeping force.

But McGovern, D-S.D., said the United States and other major nations should stay out of such an operation, which he said might be conducted by troops from smaller countries.

He said he sees nothing inconsistent with his current stand against "a clear case of genocide" and his past opposition to military operations by the United States against "a popularly supported revolution" in Vietnam.

The 1972 Democratic presidential candidate raised the possibility of a military intervention at a Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing.

"Is there any thought being given of sending in a force to knock this government out of power?" he asked.

"As far as the administration is concerned, I don't believe this is an option that is being considered anywhere," said Robert B. Oakley, deputy assistant secretary of state for East Asian affairs.

Douglas Pike, a State Department Indochina expert, said it is highly unlikely that a surgical military exercise would succeed or that the Cambodian regime could be quickly or easily toppled.

Pike said that while an invasion force could capture Phnom Penh, the nine-man ruling junta would merely melt into the jungles and renew guerrilla operations with the likely support of Cambodia's rural population.

"I'm somewhat skeptical," McGovern said in an interview later. "I don't believe the evidence is clear that the government in Phnom Penh has that sort of indigenous support."

He said he's "been concerned for some time with the slaughter that's been going on with estimates of 2 million or 2.5 million people killed and with little or nothing being done by the international community to bring it to a halt," he said.

McGovern said he is reconnected to the fact that his suggestion may be misunderstood.

"I'm sure a great number of people would see intervention as the equivalent of what the United States was doing in Vietnam 10 years ago, he said. "I see it as just the opposite."

"I am not a pacifist," said McGovern, a bomber pilot over Nazi Germany during World War II. "I don't find anything I am suggesting here inconsistent with my past career."

Escapees caught; one hospitalized

A federal prisoner scheduled to be released on Friday from the Midland City Jail was in Midland Memorial Hospital today with a broken back and wrist.

Police officers said he received the injuries when he and another prisoner escaped Monday night by jumping from the one-story high porch of the jail.

Authorities said the prisoner, Roy H. Owens, 42, was taken to the hospital after he was arrested at his girlfriend's house in Odessa. He had taken a taxi to Odessa, said police.

A hospital spokesman said today Owens is listed as being in satisfactory condition.

Police are searching for Talton Boyd Burge, 31, another federal prisoner who they said escaped with Owens.

Both prisoners were trustees. According to police reports, the jail trustees were locked up at 9 p.m. At 10 p.m., the report said, the Fire Department reported someone on the roof of the building which houses the police and fire departments and the jail. A search failed to reveal anyone on the roof, police said.

At 10:45 p.m., a Midlander reported seeing someone on the roof, reports indicated. A check of the roof turned up a hat similar to one worn by Burge, police said. A roll call then revealed that Burge and Owens were missing, said officers.

Police theorized today the two left the jail by crawling to the steel tops of the cells from a small closet. Crossing to the north wall, they then apparently crawled to the roof through a hole made by workmen who were installing an air conditioner, police said.

Police said they believe Burge and Owen used a rope left by the workmen to get down to the front porch of the building and then jumped to the ground from the porch.

Federal authorities said both prisoners were in the City Jail because of rule infractions committed at the federal halfway house in Odessa.

Burge was serving a sentence for interstate transportation of forged securities, said police, while Boyd was serving a sentence for interstate transportation of firearms by a convicted felon.

Probation Officer Jack Swan said Boyd was due to be released Friday.

Authorities said they looked for Boyd at his girlfriend's residence after obtaining her name and address from a form requesting visiting privileges at the jail.

The search for Burge was including the use of police dogs to try to track him, authorities said.

Retiring Rep. Mahon gives support to Hance

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Despite earlier statements he would not get involved in the race to choose his successor, U.S. Rep. George Mahon this week threw his support to State Sen. Kent Hance, Democratic nominee for the 19th Congressional District seat.

Mahon has held that seat for 44 years. Hance's Republican opponent in the upcoming November elections is George W. Bush of Midland.

"I sought in every possible way to avoid getting involved in the Democratic primary race for Congress in our district. I stated I would not undertake to dictate the naming of my successor. I assumed that everyone knew I was a Democrat and had been supported by the Democratic Party for more than 40 years in Congress, and that I would vote for the Democratic nominee after the Democrats had selected a nominee," Mahon said today.

The congressman said it would be "unthinkable that I would bolt the party in my final year in Congress."

Mahon, who earlier said he would not endorse any candidate in the race, expressed his support in a telegram to be read tonight at a rally in Wolforth in honor of Hance.

The congressman said he sent the telegram at the request of event organizers.

Mahon said the telegram praises

Assassination probe 'trivial' for Cambridge acoustics firm

By FRED BAYLES

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Rifle fire in Dallas, students' screams at Kent State, an 18½-minute gap on a Nixon White House tape — all are sounds that have punctuated major events of the past two decades.

But for the consulting firm hired to analyze those snippets of history, the job is a minor sideline.

"Congressional investigations are a trivial part of our work," says Samuel Labate, chairman of the board of Bolt, Beranek and Newman. "Most of our work involves acoustic designing for business offices, school dormitories. We only took on the investigations because it is of national interest."

Labate says the firm, named for three former Massachusetts Institute of Technology professors who formed the company in 1948, has built a $30 million-a-year business from acoustic engineering.

He says the firm usually turns down the many requests it receives from police departments around the country that want expert advice in analyzing sound data.

"It's not the thrust of our interest," says Labate. "We're very careful about the work we accept because we don't want to get involved in criminal investigations."

The firm first came into prominence in 1974 when, at the request of congressional investigators, it studied an 18½-minute gap in one of then-President Richard Nixon's White House tapes.

The firm, and one of its founders, physicist Richard Bolt, said the section of tape containing critical discussions three days after the Watergate break-in was deliberately erased.

The company's electronic ears were listening in Dallas over the weekend as the slaying of President John Kennedy was reenacted for the House Select Committee on Assassinations to determine whether three or four shots were fired at the presidential motorcade on Nov. 22, 1963. The Warren Commission decided three shots were fired that day, and experts generally agree a fourth shot would indicate a second gunman.

Labate said the results of the Dallas test will be available sometime next month.

The firm analyzed similar test recordings made at the site of the Kent State shootings to determine the sequence of National Guard gunfire when four students were killed during a 1970 campus anti-war demonstration. That test was done for the Justice Department in its investigation of the shootings.

Labate said both cases involve comparing recordings taken at the time of the actual shootings against test recordings, looking for "sound fingerprints" that will reveal the order of gunfire and even the types of weapons used.

"Every noise has a certain unique frequency, a shape that we can compare with other recordings," he said. "We use standard equipment to analyze the frequency and then make tapes to compare it with known sounds."

Three try to extinguish thirst

BIG SPRING — In what may be a first in the history of West Texas robberies, three men used a fire extinguisher early today to commandeer a few six-packs of beer from a 7-Eleven Store, according to Big Spring police.

Police Lt. Claude Morris said three men tried to purchase some beer at about 2:30 a.m., but the clerk, Norma Reynolds, told them that it was after hours.

"The clerk was sprayed in the face with a fire extinguisher and the men took off with some beer," Morris said.

"She got sprayed all over and the spray also entered the hot dog warmer and contaminated some hot dogs."

Big Spring police later gave a description of the men and a car to Stanton authorities. Stanton police about 3:45 a.m. arrested three men in a car which they said matched the description given them.

A spokesman for the Martin County Sheriff's Department said four six-packs of beer had been found in the car, but that the fire extinguisher had not yet been recovered.

DOWN, DOWN, DOWN goes this 19-foot hole being dug by Darnell Washington at Front and Marienfeld. The cavity is part of a $1.5-million underground telephone cable project by Southwestern Bell to improve long distance telephone service between Midland and Iraan. The project has been under way since June and is expected to be completed in December. Company officials say the underground cable will lower repair costs and provide more reliable service from Midland to the towns of Midkiff, Rankin and Iraan. (Staff Photo by Brian Hendershot)

Memphis strike labeled victory

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The president of the Memphis Police Association says police and firemen won a real victory in their recent strike when the city agreed to submit contract proposals to a fact-finding board.

"It was a symbolic victory in one regard, but it was real because of the fact-finding board," Baker said.

While the agreement is for two years, Baker said, the police and fire unions may submit proposals in the interim to a three-member fact-finding board appointed by the unions and the city.

That provision, interpreted by some union members as a wage re-opener next year, would satisfy a demand for a one-year contract on economics. The board, long sought by the unions but resisted by Mayor Wyeth Chandler, also will serve as an arbiter.

Meanwhile, Police Director E. Winslow Chapman told police lieutenants and captains Monday he would dismiss from the department officers who committed illegal actions during the eight-day strike.

Chapman said any punitive measures would not violate the language of the settlement.

"There was nothing in that settlement to absolve anyone from criminal responsibility or responsibility for acts that are not allowed in this department," he said.

The director said investigations are underway and prosecutions will follow for acts such as destruction of city property, threats against other officers and their families and attempts to disrupt the resumption of police services Saturday morning.

The policemen walked off their jobs Aug. 10 after rejecting the city's wage offer. Some 1,400 firemen joined police on the picket lines Aug. 14, resuming a three-day walkout that ended with a court's back-to-work order July 3.

When the union members returned to work — the police at midnight Friday and the firemen at 7 a.m. Saturday — they had agreed to a contract that was basically the same package rejected in June.

The new contracts call for a 6 percent wage increase retroactive to July 5, a $30-a-month raise in April 1979 and a 7.5 percent increase Oct. 1, 1979. The final raise is subject to the results of the fact finding committee's report, which is not binding on the city.

For the average five-year patrolman, the initial raise amounts to a $17.22-a-week increase on a salary of $287.

The strikers are faced with the loss of pay for the week they were on the picket lines, but city officials said Monday some patrolmen and firefighters could receive full pay for the week.

Jim Herbert, deputy director for administration in the Police Department, said striking patrolmen could either give up accumulated vacation, days off or bonus days so they will receive a full paycheck. They will not be allowed to use sick leave.

Faulty gas line hookup causes one more fire

Monday morning, around 11, Hazel Clarke decided she wasn't putting off the chore any longer.

Although she couldn't see behind it, she knew her gas range was hiding a layer of dirt and grease. She planned to clean it up.

When she began moving the range, however, more than a little grime greeted her.

"I had pulled one edge out when the flame came shooting out," said Mrs. Clarke.

Mrs. Clarke's stove was on fire. Her cries alerted her son, Richard, who quickly ran outside and shut off the main gas valve.

According to Midland Fire Marshal Herb Bloomer, the small fire in the kitchen of Mrs. Clarke's 510 W. Kansas Ave. cottage was caused by a defective gas line connection.

Gas leaked from the faulty connection and was ignited by the pilot light.

The three-foot flexible brass tube connecting the stove to the gas outlet, installed in 1958, used a flared copper connector, which was "sweated" onto the tube with solder.

"You find a lot of these lines on older stoves," said Bloomer. "I suppose there is something in the gas that eats out the solder."

He noted that in recent years Midland hardware stores had stopped carrying gas lines of that design.

Bloomer suggested that Midlanders check their outlet-to-appliance gas lines, looking for a small green band with a triangle stamped on.

"That's the American Gas Association tag, and it means the tubing is a one-piece brass unit," said Bloomer.

A close look is needed, however, since meaningless bands were often put around the old-style gas lines.

Consumers can also check a new tube and connector in the hardware store by looking into the connector. The color of the flared connector's interior should be a brassy yellow, not the darker color of copper.

Bloomer said Mrs. Clarke was lucky she was home when her stove caught fire.

"I can remember neighbors coming home for lunch and finding their whole kitchen on fire," he said.

Vesco loses citizenship bid

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Robert Vesco's last chance to get Costa Rican citizenship so he could not be extradited to face U.S. embezzlement charges has ended.

The three members of Costa Rica's Supreme Tribunal of Elections, the court of final appeal on citizenship matters, voted unanimously Monday to uphold the rejection of Vesco's application by the Civil Registry.

The fugitive financier left Costa Rica May 3 and was last reported in the Bahamas.

Although he owns a $500,000 estate on the outskirts of San Jose and has invested millions in the country, the Civil Registry recommended July 17 that his application be denied because it said he failed to prove he had sufficient economic resources.

Fort Worth man among indicted in fraud case

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted 11 persons from nine states for conspiring to sell distributorships for tire sealants, a grass retardant and a motor oil additive in a fraudulent, false or misleading manner.

Among those named in the indictment opened Monday was Franklin L. Matthews III, national sales manager of the building products division of Southwestern Petroleum Company of Fort Worth, Texas.

The alleged scheme spelled out in the 27-page, 30-count indictment focused on the operations of L.O.C. Industries and its related companies, established since 1975 to sell and promote the tire sealants "Seal-Tite" and "Seal-It," the grass retardant "Less-Mow" and the motor oil additive "Molytex."

The indictment said Matthews provided promotional material, photographs and recommendations for use in sale of the products.

Matthews also permitted his name to be used as a point of contact with Southwestern Petroleum Company, the indictment said, should distributors attempt to call for additional information about L.O.C. Industries and its products.

"All of the personal defendants named in this indictment either owned, managed, supervised, promoted products for, sold products for or supplied material to or appeared customers of some or all of the five corporate defendants in a false, misleading and fraudulent manner pursuant to the scheme to defraud," the indictment said. A 25-item bill of particulars accuses the defendants of making false claims about the products sold and about the promotional effort which would be expended on behalf of the products.

Matthews "supplied L.O.C. Industries with laboratory tests advising that the product 'Seal-Tite' fully met all agreed standards and that its failure to perform was probably attributable to a failure to stir the material or check the pump for performance," the grand jury charged.

It said he continued to assist L.O.C. "although he was aware that their distributors could make no profit using the amounts of sealant actually recommended...and that the product was one which has resulted in numerous complaints when it was sold by

Blood on rock not human; 'Fifi' still mystery

ODESSA — The search for a 19-year-old Odessa woman continued today after area lawmen learned late Monday afternoon that two seeming clues have no apparent connection with her disappearance, according to Chief Deputy George Olesh of the Ector County Sheriff's Department.

Department of Public Safety chemists in Midland have determined that blood and hair on a rock and plank found near Gardendale are not human, said Olesh.

The rock and plank were discovered late last week and touched off a two-day search by as many as 30 Permian Basin law enforcement officers from several agencies.

The search is for Catherine Ann "Fifi" Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Murphy Jr. of Odessa. She disappeared shortly before midnight July 19.

"An examination of items discovered in the Gardendale area of Ector County Friday proved negative," said Olesh.

"It is not human blood," added Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught.

Miss Murphy's car was found not long after she was reported missing but lawmen now have no concrete leads, according to authorities.

Faught reportedly was previously informed by chemists that the rock found near Gardendale, north of Odessa, had human blood on it.

However, after he and deputies learned Saturday that a man had slaughtered some goats in the same area where the stone and plank were discovered, the decision was made to handle the objects re-tested.

In a related aspect, Captain Jack Fillyaw of the Odessa Police Department said Monday afternoon a $5,000 reward being offered by Miss Murphy's parents has resulted in "a few more calls which the attorney handling the reward has referred to us."

He said he and at least two and sometimes three detectives have been assigned to the case, "checking out each and every lead."

Dallas man held in officers' shooting

DALLAS (AP) — A 27-year-old Dallas man is in city jail here in lieu of bonds totaling $525,000 on charges of attempted capital murder and aggravated assault in connection with the shooting of two police officers Monday.

James Monroe Mims, who police spokesman Bob Shaw said had spent some time at the Terrell State Hospital, reportedly was holding his 19-year-old son captive in a Dallas apartment Monday when officers arrived to investigate.

Shaw said a single shotgun blast was fired through the door of the apartment, wounding two of the officers.

Sgt. Alfred M. Cessna, 41, was struck in the right side of the face. Donald S. Ortega, 32, was wounded in the left arm.

Tison, Greenawalt trial date set

FLORENCE, Ariz. (AP) — Raymond and Ricky Tison and Randy Greenawalt learned Monday that they will stand trial Oct. 11 on charges growing out of the escape of Greenawalt and the Tison's father, Gary, from the Arizona State Prison here.

Last Friday, an Oct. 17 trial date was set for them in Yuma County on kidnapping and first-degree murder charges in the shotgun deaths of a vacationing family group. They also are believed involved in the disappearance in Colorado of a honeymooning Texas couple.

The Tison brothers were grinning and laughing throughout a brief appearance as they had done when arraigned in Yuma last week. They and Greenawalt pleaded innocent in Pinal County Superior Court. Each are charged here with 15 counts of assault with a deadly weapon.

Ricky Tison, 18, and Raymond Tison, 19, also are charged with aiding the July 30 escape from the state prison and taking prohibited articles — three sawed-off shotguns — into the prison. Greenawalt also is charged with escape and possession of prohibited articles inside the prison.

Gary Tison, 42, is still at large after three weeks of flight and 10 law enforcement agencies chasing him across the Southwest.

Leon Gaskill, agent-in-charge of the Phoenix FBI office, said the search has gone across the border into Mexico.

"We've been getting full cooperation from the Mexican law enforcement officials," he said.

Monday. "At present, they have a particular spot under surveillance."

Gaskill refused to identify the area watched by Mexican authorities, but sources close to the investigation told The Arizona Republic that it could be a ranch south of Sasabe owned by state prison inmate Arden Smith.

Another of Tison's sons, Donald, 20, was slain when the gang tried to run a roadblock in a van owned by the honey-mooners.

Tison has been reported at about 50 spots around the state since his escape, but most have proved to be dead ends for officials. There have been numerous wild goose chases, one hoax and several scares for men who resembled the fugitive.

Judge Bill Plant set bail for the brothers on the local charges at $25,000. They are being held in the county jail, Greenawalt in the prison.

Their mother, Dorothy, was in the courtroom Monday. She told a reporter later she hopes thing will turn out favorably for the boys because "that's all you can do."

The gang allegedly killed Marine Sgt. John F. Lyons, 24, his wife, 22-month-old son and 15-year-old niece, Teresa Tyson, in the desert near Quartzite.

Grant to guerrillas

The World Council of Churches has approved a grant of $85,000 to guerrilla groups fighting an interim settlement in Rhodesia. Yes, that's correct, to guerrilla groups.

Although not altogether surprising, the action still is somewhat shocking and undoubtedly will be viewed with alarm by many WCC supporters and church members in general.

The grant, according to WCC, is part of a program to combat racism and supposedly is to be used only for humanitarian purposes, such as food, health and social-education programs. It also was pointed out that the money comes from contributions designated specifically for the anti-racism program, rather than from the general WCC budget.

A decision on the grant was deferred a year ago at a meeting of WCC's executive committee, leaving final consideration up to WCC officers. This is why the surprise element was lacking in the recent action.

The grant goes to the "Patriotic Front of Zimbabwe," led by Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo. The leaders have spurned a joint council of blacks and whites created in Rhodesia last spring as an interim government, with provisions for democratic elections and a majority government by year's end.

Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa, a key figure in the joint council and a long-time leader in the struggle for black majority rule, is sharply critical of the guerrilla groups, explaining that they seek to disrupt the settlement plan.

And reports are that the guerrillas are performing in like manner to similar groups in other parts of the world today. Violence is the watchword. This is what makes the WCC grant action appear shocking in the eyes of many law-abiding residents of America and elsewhere. The interim government should be given a fair chance to prove itself.

According to an Associated Press report, the WCC, in making the grant, said the international Rhodesian settlement "leaves the illegal white majority regime still in effective control and gives it a veto over real change for the next decade."

Regardless of how one feels about the Rhodesian situation, there is considerable doubt if the giving of funds to a lawless guerrilla group is the proper way to right a wrong — if one exists.

A white Rhodesian bishop attending the world Anglican Communion's Lambeth Conference in Canterbury, England, suggested that the money should be used to aid African children kidnapped by guerrillas.

News of the WCC grant, incidentally, caused quite a stir at the Canterbury conference. An American bishop, Gray Temple of South Carolina, was most critical of the action. He asked how Anglicans can "come down on one side of a very explosive issue."

"It will be very difficult for us to explain this to our people," said Bishop Temple, who added that he comes from "a very conservative part" of the 64 million-member Anglican Communion of churches.

There undoubtedly will be others who also will find it "difficult to explain."

The Communion's bishops, however, went right ahead in approving a proposal that the Anglican churches "reaffirm their support and strengthen their understanding" of the World Council of Churches.

The unfortunate part of the entire episode is the tragedy of suffering by the innocent people of the African nation. Hopefully peace soon will reign once again in Rhodesia.

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who often acts more like a crotchety tycoon than a Cabinet secretary, is trying to scotch a scheme that would reduce U.S. dependence on Arab oil.

The proposal would move West Coast crude from the oil-saturated Western states to the oil-starved East Coast. President Carter is so intrigued with the idea that he has asked for a detailed study.

But Jimmy Carter's opinions apparently do not carry a lot of weight in James Schlesinger's energy shop. Despite the president's interest, the energy czar and his chief acolyte, John O'Leary, have already proclaimed their displeasure with the plan.

Such an audacious display of defiance is perfectly in keeping with Schlesinger's character. As one of our sources put it, "Whatever he thinks is right is the way it's going to be." The opinions of others — be they presidents, congressmen or taxpayers — are largely immaterial.

Indeed, it was Schlesinger's insistence on marching to his own drummer that provoked former President Gerald Ford into firing him as secretary of defense. On Capitol Hill, he refused to slap backs and bend elbows in the back rooms. His aloof, even haughty demeanor so irritates some lawmakers that they end up shouting at him.

Thus it is not surprising that Schlesinger would come out foursquare against a proposal in which the president himself has expressed great interest.

The idea, originated by the New England Petroleum Company (NEPCO), calls for millions of barrels of West Coast oil to be transported to the Bahamas, where it would be refined and shipped on to dealers in the Eastern United States. But the proposal, if enacted, would apply to other American-owned companies with refineries in the Bahamas.

Experts believe the export-import scheme would shave millions of dollars off the balance of trade deficit and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil imports. The president's top domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, saw merit in the plan and asked Carter to sign a memo to Schlesinger requesting an in-depth analysis.

At the Energy Department, in-house experts had previously examined the export-import plan, found it feasible and determined that objections to it were "entirely political." But Schlesinger and O'Leary had already made up their minds they didn't like export-import. Shortly after the Carter memo arrived on Schlesinger's desk, a DOE press release announced the department was "rejecting" the whole idea.

The president's request for an intensive briefing on the export-import plan was still pending when O'Leary, a few days later, told a congressional committee that Carter supported their opposition to the proposal.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

It's Schlesinger vs. President

This bewildered a number of lawmakers who had been told that the White House was "actively considering" the export-import scheme. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., went so far as to express his dismay over the Schlesinger-O'Leary maneuver to the president.

The White House will answer Cranston and other legislators, presumably, when it receives the DOE analysis, which is finally being prepared — two months after it was requested.

Footnote: We are unable to report why Schlesinger and O'Leary are opposed to the plan because neither DOE nor White House officials have returned our repeated phone calls.

DIXY'S BITE: Dixy Lee Ray, a feisty grandmother of a governor, used to be an Atomic Energy Commissioner in Washington, D.C., before she became governor of Washington state.

She is remembered in the national capital for her devotion to nuclear energy and to her dogs. Her canine companions — a Scottish elkhound named Gillie and a French poodle named Jock — used to accompany her in stately splendor aboard her black government limousine. Her government aides were also occasionally pressed into service as dog sitters.

There are a few officials who wonder nostalgically what happened to Gillie and Jock. But if they have lost account of Dixy's dogs, they may be relieved that her nuclear views are as implacable as ever.

She didn't like a recent congressional subcommittee report, which criticized the escalating costs of nuclear power. So she fired off a private letter to Chairman Leo Ryan, D-Calif., expressing her displeasure.

The congressional study, she wrote, was "biased," "inaccurate" and "highly opinionated." The American people should not be "spoon fed" information, she added bluntly, "influenced" by "emotional reports" which were "inadequate."

The riled Ryan shot back a reply, informing Dixy that he regretted she was "unaware of the facts." The public, wrote Ryan, is tired of energy decisions dictated by "special, vested interests" and "outdated traditional government policies."

ASIA MEMO: Many, varied challenges face Chiang Ching-Kuo

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

TAIPEI — It would be hard to think of a statesman in these times with a more difficult set of challenges before him than President Chiang Ching-kuo of the Republic of China.

As Washington seems to be stepping up the pace — or at least the wordage — about the likelihood of normalization of diplomatic relations with Peking, Chiang faces a coming year in which his leadership will be acutely tested.

The basic elements of challenge facing the son of the late Chiang Kai-shek are well-known: guiding his nation through a period in which the United States seems determined to loosen rather than strengthen ties with his government, creating the proper climate for continued economic prosperity, bringing more and more native Taiwanese into the government without allowing disruptive (to the ruling Kuomintang) elements of the various Taiwanese independence mini-groups to cause frictions, reconciling the need for political control in the light of pressure from the United States to address the human rights issue more directly — the list goes on and on.

Not the least of President Chiang's problems is the correct interpretation of "signals" from the United States. What is to be made of the closing of two of the four American cultural libraries on Taiwan? Which of the press and government reports on the sale of F-4 planes are accurate? What does all this hubbub about sale of Israeli jets to Taiwan — something Taiwan doesn't want anyway — really mean?

Chiang has some good men around him to help sort out these problems. He is also bringing in younger faces and talents to the crucial vice-ministerial level, although the average age of full cabinet members remains at around 64 years.

Chiang's efforts to get former Finance Minister K. T. Li to play a prominent role in the new cabinet and the awarding of the premiership to economic expert Y. S. Sun gave some observers the impression that Taiwan's youth movement had stalled. Both these men have health problems and their staying power was questioned by some.

But Chiang himself has some health concerns; his view was that the best minds should be brought to the task of guiding the country politically and economically over the next crucial half-dozen years.

The president showed restraint in not appointing to high posts some cronies who have been hanging around hoping to gain political plums. Instead there has been a continuing emphasis on young people and an effort to let them gain experience in responsible jobs.

Some of the names in this category — there are many others — are Frederick Chien, vice minister of foreign affairs; Yung Wei, chairman, Research Development and Evaluation Commission of the Executive Yuan; Chiang King-yuh, deputy director of the Institute of International Relations; Ding Moushih, director of the Government Information Office; James Soong, deputy director of GIO; Wang Chi-wu, chief, International Cooperation Section, National Science Council, Executive Yuan; and Frank Chen-chi Lin, the new director of the Central News Agency.

The outgoing CNA director, James Wei, will devote his time to being a senior policy adviser to the president. There have been suggestions that Chiang might be getting ready to play a Soviet card as a counter to U.S. presidential adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski's "China card." That is, Chiang has the option of moving toward Moscow should the United States fully embrace Peking with diplomatic ties.

When survival becomes the question, anything is possible. However, close reading of the situation discounts that as a likely Taiwan move at this stage of the game.

For one thing, Taiwan is in a very strong position today economically and in terms of domestic politics. There is every reason to believe the government will be able to move through the coming (probably January and February) next surge toward normalization with the U.S. with its Washington embassy intact.

INSIDE REPORT:

Technology as political weapon: Whether, how much?

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Madcap confusion over President Carter's trade policy toward Moscow climaxed on Aug. 10 when national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski read a headline in the Washington Post that the celebrated Dresser sale of oil-drilling technology to the Soviets had been approved by Commerce secretary Juanita Kreps.

With Secretary of State Cyrus Vance listening in on an extension, Brzezinski made an urgent phone call to Mrs. Kreps to ask: is it "too late" to reverse this? "No," replied the secretary of Commerce.

Commerce Department officials, who had pushed hard inside the government for approval of the $140 million drill-bit plant for the Russians, held their breath — waiting for the new order clearly suggested by Brzezinski's question. It never came.

That incident captures the ambivalence at highest administration levels on whether and how much to use U.S. technology as a political weapon to moderate Soviet violations of human rights commitments, harassment of American businessmen in Moscow and other political wrongs. Having marched up the hill last month flying the banner of trade reprisals against the Kremlin, Uncle Sam was now marching back down with approval of the drill-bit plant (to be built by Dresser Industries of Dallas).

Hence, the familiar questions: What is Jimmy Carter really up to? What does he want?

Once again, the president has raised a specific expectation by policy pronouncements pointing in one direction—then, without preparation of explanation, going in the other. He retains his new power to veto energy-related technology sales to Moscow. But judging from the Dresser case, the Kremlin can be excused for not panicking.

On Brzezinski's desk when he read that headline was a sharply pointed letter to Mr. Carter from Sen. Henry M. Jackson in his capacity as chairman of the permanent investigations subcommittee. "Given your new policy of controlling energy-related technology," Jackson wrote on Aug. 7, "it would be ironic if the largest such transfer in recent years were the first to be consummated under your new policy guidelines."

Delivered three days before the Commerce Department leaked its final approval of export licenses for the Dresser drill-bit plant, Jackson's letter flashed a political danger sign. Jackson revealed just how far he wants to go to block the Dresser shipment: a full-scale investigation of its military and political implications at a time of heightened U.S.-Soviet tensions.

Jackson's subcommittee staff is now digging into economic facts that may well refute this contention by Mrs. Kreps: if the Russians were denied the Dresser plant, they could buy everything connected with it — including such high technology as electronic beam welders—in Western Europe, Japan or even Eastern Europe.

So Jackson's letter was a polite request for the president to postpone final approval on the Dresser plant "while the subcommittee is inquiring into" national security matters raised by the sale. The only answer to his letter was the Washington Post headline disclosing that the Commerce Department had preempted him. Far from backing down, Jackson still intends to use pressure on the administration by pushing his investigation.

He has powerful allies, one of whom is Energy Secretary James Schlesinger. Schlesinger's office notified Rauer Myer, director of export control in Commerce, by letter on Aug. 4 that Dr. Schlesinger strongly opposed an export license for the electronic beam welder.

Oddly, this went unmentioned when the Commerce Department informed Brzezinski that every agency involved in the matter — with the technical exception of the State Department — had approved the sale.

The reservation of State, strictly temporary, was tied to Soviet treatment of Francis Jay Crawford, the American businessman hauled from his car and arrested on trumped-up currency-violation charges. The Crawford outrage delayed the State Department only until Aug. 8. Immediately thereafter, Commerce formally approved the package.

An angry Schlesinger was not informed about the final Commerce Department decision until he read it in the paper. His Energy Department normally is not involved in export control policy, but the president had made Schlesinger an adviser on the Dresser plant because of his background as former director of Central Intelligence and Secretary of Defense.

How far Schlesinger will now go to block the license for the electronic beam welder is uncertain, but he is concerned that this piece of technology has military value. Beyond that, Schlesinger agrees with Jackson that approval of the Dresser plant makes a farce of the administration's new "policy" of restraining sale of energy-related technology to the Soviet Union.

It also raises this question: what signal did Jimmy Carter really mean to send the Russians when he got "tough" last month?

The Flatlanders Ski Club is the answer for Midlanders interested in the sports of water and snow skiing. This organization, unique for a city in the locale of Midland, is an all year club promoting water and ski sports. Bruce Terrell, current president of the club, reports his group will have a Wine and Cheese Tasting Party to kickoff the snow skiing season. The party will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 8 in Holiday Inn. The party will be free of charge for members and, for non-members, $2.

Terrell says this type of party is customary for the ski season at ski resorts, and the group of 150 members of the club decided they would have a similar one before going to the slopes. Membership in the club is open to anyone interested in skiing. Interested persons may contact Terrell at 682-8641 or 683-8162.

Good score possible

Parents have been under fire a lot lately for not knowing their children. They've been accused of selfishly pursuing their own goals and not giving a tinker's toot who their children are, where they are, or where they've been.

This is quite an indictment, and to make a distinction between parents who take their job seriously and those who don't, I offer today a quiz on "HOW WELL DO YOU KNOW YOUR CHILDREN?"

1. Can you name three of their best friends by their first and last names?
2. Do you know when they last changed their underwear?
3. Do you know for a fact that the voice from under the bathroom door belongs to your nine-year-old?
4. Do you know what books are being hidden that they think you don't know what you know they're reading?
5. Do you communicate? Or was the last time they spoke to you when the smoke alarm went off in their room?

6. Do you know where their school is located?
7. Would you recognize your child if the braces were removed?
8. When it's 11 o'clock do they know where their parents are?
9. Can you read their report card without an interpreter?
10. Did they have to flunk biology before you realized they were taking it?
11. How long has it been since they brought their gym shorts home to be laundered?
12. Do you know what they want to be this week when they grow up?
13. What are their allergies besides soap, homework and closing doors?
14. Who are their heroes? Heroes?
15. What do they do with their allowance?
16. What's under their beds?
17. What makes them laugh? Cry?
18. What size are their shoes?
19. Have you ever watched them play anything competitively?

Plea given for cancer patient

By LEW SCARR
Copley News Service

The mismanagement of cancer pain is one of the great deficiencies in the American health care system today.

That is the contention of one of the world's leading authorities on pain control, who said that cancer pain 95 percent of the time in this country is mismanaged.

Physicians do not have the proper training to treat cancer pain. Cancer literature ignores it. Even major cancer centers fail to provide proper pain-control programs.

These claims were made by Dr. John J. Bonica, who said he deplores the fact that while approximately $1 billion is spent annually in this country for cancer research, only .022 percent of it goes for research into cancer pain.

"Certainly," Bonica said, "the prevention of cancer has to be the primary target, but we should also take consideration of the 800,000 cancer patients in this country who are suffering severe pain and are not getting the relief they deserve."

Bonica, chairman of the department of anesthesiology at the University of Washington and president of the International Association for the Study of Pain, says cancer usually is not painful at the outset, but that pain persists in 75 to 80 percent of the patients with advanced cancer.

Bonica said that about 15 percent of the time, physicians are administering drugs for the alleviation of cancer pain in excessive doses when the pain could be managed with lesser doses or with such less-powerful drugs as aspirin or codeine.

However, he said, from 70 to 80 percent of the time, pain-wracked cancer patients are not being given enough medication because doctors fear patients will become addicts.

He said that drug addiction among cancer patients with pain should be totally ignored. In fact, he said, he supports legalization of heroin for clinical treatment of pain in cancer patients.

"The unfortunate patients who develop pain are soul-stirring sights in great need of relief that frequently does not come," Bonica said.

"Notwithstanding the hopeless prognosis of such cases, the pain problem deserves an intelligent appraisal and, perhaps equally important, a systematic plan for relief which will conserve the patients' physical, mental and moral resources and his social usefulness so long as possible."

He said cancer pain has been especially neglected by teachers, investigators, oncologists, authorities and national and regional cancer agencies.

"Until recently, research on cancer pain per se was virtually non-existent," Bonica said. "One of the most impressive and distressing aspects of this whole problem is that there are no accurate data on the incidence and magnitude of cancer pain."

He said that figures offered for the numbers of persons suffering cancer pain, including his own figures, are only estimates.

"The efforts of (the National Cancer Institute) have produced accurate information on every aspect of cancer except the incidence, magnitude and cost of the pain associated with malignant disease.

"The practice of some physicians to snore the patient under (with narcotics) because the end is (believed) inevitable denotes a lack of understanding of the problem," Bonica said.

"Because it is very difficult to estimate the length of life in individual cases, such false humanitarianism may potentiate the effect of the disease and cause respiratory depression, stupefaction, anorexia (loss of appetite), nausea and vomiting and thus aggravate the cachexia (emaciated condition)."

Sneakers: They're in strong

By NINA S. HYDE
The Washington Post

Once verboten outside the gymnasium and playground, the sneaker of '78 has achieved grace, dignity, has crossed social, ethnic, cultural and class lines, and has high-tailed it into the world of high culture, haute cuisine and heavy thinkers.

The old soft shoe, ladies and gentlemen, is alive and running quite well, thank you.

How can 260 million Americans go wrong in '78 when they drop in their local shoe store and tell the clerk: "Sneak-it-to-me."

Tommy Tucker sang the million-seller in 1964. Later on Sammy Davis Jr., Johnson Davidson, Elvis Presley, Steve Wonder et al sang it. Twyla Tharp saluted sneakers with a dance. Woody Allen wore sneakers escorting Betty Ford to a black tie benefit. Mick Jagger wore them marrying Bianca. Rod McKuen had them on with his tux at a presentation ceremony of the British Academy of Film and Television Arts at the Royal Albert Hall in London.

Joan Quinn, Los Angeles art collector, took a private tour of the White House in a denim dress, David Webb and Cartier jewels, pink-dyed hair clumps and sneakers. Her husband, John Quinn, once head of the L.A. county bar association, was in sneakers.

"When you are an old lady and you wear sneakers, how does it look? asks 77-year-old "Disco Sally" Lippman. So she has curtailed her sneaker wearing to Studio 54 in New York where she goes almost every night, and keeps her collection at a neat number — eight. Her latest additions were electric blue. "I couldn't resist the color," she says.

By the early '70s sneakers became so popular that the pop anthem, "High Heel Sneakers," had a parody, from the group Traffic — "The Low Spark of High Heel Boys."

"We're in a period of informality and this is the way we present ourselves in public today," says Albert J. McQueen, head of the sociology department at Oberlin College. McQueen pegs the trend for "hanging loose and being informal to the hippie era... We want to have open collars and present ourselves as regular ordinary people... in that sense sneakers have snuck into style. But we don't want to be too informal, so we want a sneaker that is better than someone else's, thus the great variety of sneakers. It is possible to have particularly if you're athletic, that is special and sets you apart, lets you show you are a cut above someone else."

There's no record of who wore the first sneaker. The first date of documentation is 1832, the year a patent was issued in New York for attaching rubber soles to boots and shoes. Most historians remember 1832 not for the sneaker, but as the year of the Black Hawk War.

No formally recorded history before that, just some traces. Henry VIII, in his royal account in 1517, noted a fee for the "sooling of syxe paire of shoos with feltys, to playe in at Tennys." And in the wardrobe account of Charles II in 1679 there's record of payment to John Pare of 93L, 7s for "shoes, galoshes, tennis shoes, slippers and boots."

Portuguese missionaries in the Amazon River area are reported to have seen Indians using rubber, not only for wet weather protection as cover-ups, but wadded in round balls to play with.

By 1823 gum shoes were imported from Brazil to Boston retailing for $3 to $5 a pair. Only problem was they were made to fit Indians in Brazil who had smaller feet than proper Bostonians. So they had to be heated and reshaped to fit Boston customers.

Then came the 1832 patent. Enter Charles Macintosh who made and marketed waterproof coats. And Charles Goodyear, who, with the help of Nathaniel Haywood, figured in 1839 a way to use raw rubber in manufacturing. Goodyear was granted patent on his vulcanized rubber in 1842 and licensed Leverette Candee Co. in New Haven to make footwear. The sneaker business was off the ground.

The word "sneaker" appeared in a catalogue in 1873. And by 1895 you could order black or checked tennis shoes from the first Sears Roebuck catalogue for 80 cents for men, 75 cents for ladies and boys sizes.

Twenty years ago they were just plain sneakers, cost about $5, were largely produced in America and came in good ole black and white. Sneakers were the reformed re-note on sneakers.

Tangy, fresh California plums make these tender muffins something special and a perfect accompaniment for a summer fruit salad boasting of sweet, ripe fresh fruit.

Sweet-tart plums give other foods quite a lift

Delicious, fresh California plums make creating meals for two a lot more fun. Available into September, fresh plums, with their sweet-tart tangy flavor, bring out the best in meats and poultry, make spectacular salads and, of course, are a natural for desserts. They're so versatile!

And freezing fresh plums now will let you enjoy their versatility year 'round. It's so easy to freeze fresh plums, too. Just cut plums in halves or quarters. Add about 1 cup sugar per quart of fruit, plus 1/4 teaspoon ascorbic acid mixture to retain that lovely plum color. Or, if you wish, simply wash and prick whole plums and freeze just as is for a wintry diet conscious treat! Properly stored frozen plums will keep up to a year.

Whether freezing fresh plums for later or enjoying them now in favorite recipes or for refreshing snacks, be sure to select ripe, good quality plums. The California plum growers offer these tips:

Choose plums that are firm and full-color for the variety. A slightly soft tip is a good indication of ripeness. Refrigerate ripe plums to keep them fresh and good for several days. And please do leave the skins on! The flavor contrast between tart skin and sweet flesh is what makes plums different from the other summer fruit...it's what makes them plums!

And that very special plum tang is what makes these plum muffins special, too. A rich batter is topped with a cinnamon and sugar mixture and a juicy plum wedge or two. Serve them piping hot with our Sacramento Fruit Bowl Salad for a delightful Sunday brunch for two, or as an accompaniment to a light summer meal. The salad is chock full of bright, ripe summer fruits and crowned with a zingy lime and yogurt dressing.

Plum Picking...What To Look For
Choosing fresh summer plums from the multi-colored array available this season can be slightly bewildering. Some 20 major varieties of fresh plums are shipped throughout the country from California orchards. In August and September, you'll find the popular Casselman variety plentiful. Its lush red skin and sweet-tart yellow flesh make it an especially good choice for jamming, baking and, of course, eating out of hand. When buying fresh plums, the California Plum Commodity Committee suggests you select plums that are full colored for their variety and firm, except for a slightly soft tip. Both characteristics are good signs of ripeness. Let them ripen at room temperature if they're not quite ready. But refrigerate plums when ripe because they can over-ripen very quickly.

Plum-Preserving Possibilities
You can keep fresh summer plums handy all year round, but first you'll have to plan ahead a bit. Remember to use juicy ripe fruit—that's more important than size or shape when preserving fresh plums.

Canning: Prick whole plums and drop into a boiling medium or heavy sugar syrup. Simmer 2 minutes; cover and let stand 20 minutes. Remove plums from syrup; pack into hot, sterilized jars. Reheat syrup to boiling and pour over plums. Seal and process in boiling water bath 20 minutes. Syrup can be flavored to taste with brandy or spices.

Freezing: Halve or quarter plums. Add about 1 cup sugar per quart of fruit, plus 1/4 teaspoon ascorbic acid mixture. Mix gently and pack into freezer containers. Cover and freeze. Or, if preferred, simply wash and prick whole plums and pack into freezer containers just as is.

Conserving: By adding chopped walnuts and golden seedless raisins to your favorite plum jam recipe as you cook it, you'll have a delicious non-purchasable plum conserve.
Pickling: Place 5 pounds washed fresh plums in a one gallon crock or jar. In large saucepan, boil together, for 15 minutes, 3 cups white vinegar, 5 cups sugar, 12 whole cloves, 1 tablespoon mixed pickling spices and 4 cups water. Pour hot mixture over plums; cover and refrigerate 3 to 5 days before using. Makes about 2 quarts.

Plum Facts And Figures
...Peel plums (if you must) by putting them in boiling water until the skins crack. Then peel as you would a tomato.
...Pit freestone plums by cutting along the seam and twisting in half—the pits pop out easily. Som plums are freestone enough to cut along the seam, twist in half and then cut the pit away from one side. With non-freestone varieties, it's best to slice into the pit and then cut the fruit away in wedges.

...One pound of plums equals about 2 1/2 cups sliced plums, or 2 cups diced or pureed plums.

CLOSER ENCOUNTERS

Sometimes you have to change

By LAURA SCHLESSINGER
Copley News Service

Kevin is tired of being lonely, estranged and apprehensive about meeting people. He has never been involved with anyone, including himself; his usual answer to "What do you think or feel about that?" is "I don't know."

He describes himself as uninteresting and uncomfortable about what people think about him. He keeps to himself but really doesn't use any of that time to examine his life, feelings or motivations.

Kevin wants out of his present existence because he can no longer bear the unhappiness. If this is so, then why does he find it so painfully difficult to examine himself and his situation, design some measures to redesign his life and then begin.

As afraid as he is of remaining the same, so is he afraid of changing. Change can be threatening — it means giving up what you know in exchange for what you don't know — therefore, a risk.

There is something about familiarity; it is at least predictable. And there is some safety in predictability because you are familiar with what is expected from you in order to survive.

What do you risk when you venture into the unknown? Hurt, disappointment, rejection and failure are all possibilities. For without trying we may avoid some somber emotional mishap but we also avoid chances at happiness, accomplishment, closeness and success. It's all or nothing.

You also risk that the alternative you have chosen may not appear to be much better than what you had!

Another stumbling block to change for many people is the obvious requirement of having "to do something." For those caught in a long-term state of suspended animation due to perhaps fear or insecurity, the notion of having to get up and act is foreign, scary, and even the thought is exhausting.

There is no simple way around this. You need to build up confidence slowly. Success breeds success. Start out a task for which there is minimal chance for failure.

Kevin felt he was uninteresting and didn't want that confirmed, so he kept a distance. "Interesting" to him was a person who did interesting things and shared thoughts and feelings.

Wisely, Kevin realized that a person is interesting for more than what he does per se. A person is interesting when he allows himself freedom of growth and expression, when he discovers and shares his real self.

So Kevin began his "growth to change" by first seeking out the roots of his feelings of inadequacy. In this way, he came to realize that this perception of himself was learned and not an inherent truth.

Next he set goals for himself, listing what he wanted to become and what he hoped to be able to experience within himself and in association with other people.

Change takes courage, determination, energy and perseverance. It offers no promise other than experiencing life. Joys and defeats are both part of the bargain.

Ultrasound: Improving the medical picture

By JOHN STANSELL
Copley News Service

LONDON — Only a few years ago ultrasound meant little to anyone outside the medical profession, where it has long been used as a diagnostic tool.

Since then the use of sound waves at ultrahigh frequency has spread, first to the cleaning of metallic components, then into crack and flaw detection, and most recently into the monitoring of faults in the insulation surrounding joints in electric cable.

During 1977 further interesting developments occurred in Britain, with a resurgence of interest in medical ultrasound. As the images presented to the doctor have become clearer, its use as a diagnostic tool has become more common.

The resurgence of interest in ultrasound followed the enormous increase in diagnostic power that resulted directly from the development of the EMI system of computerized tomography in the 1960s.

The latest ultrasonic scanners take the external form of these tomographic instruments. Typically they comprise a free moving transmitter-receiver which can be directed over the surface of the skin by the clinician, increasingly sophisticated computers, and a television-type display coupled either to a photographic or teletypewriter output for permanent recording.

Among the most recent ultrasonic developments is the three dimensional scanner from Sonicaid. The maker claims that the ability to build up a three-dimensional picture of organs within the body, or to provide vital information about a fetus as early as the fourth week of a pregnancy, gives it a two-year commercial and technological lead.

Sonicaid also emphasizes the equipment's safety, due to the use of low-energy ultrasound.

The difference between the new device and the scanners commonly used in hospitals is the three dimensional capability. The sensing probe on Sonicaid's Multipolar Scanner can move in any dimension over the patient's body. The probe's movements and the reflected sound signals are fed into the computer, which displays the image on two screens. When viewed through a stereoscopic attachment, these give a three-dimensional picture.

Both slices of the body and composite images can be viewed, and the operating clinician is free to select the angle from which he views a particular area of the body.

At present the ultrasonic scanner is predominantly used in medicine for the monitoring of pregnancy since the X-ray based tomographic scanner cannot be used for this purpose. However, the improvement in the images from devices such as the Multipolar Scanner have widened its scope.

For example, Tom Brown of Edinburgh University in Scotland, who did the research resulting in the new scanner, believes that such instruments will open the way toward much greater use of ultrasound for diagnosis of diseases of the pancreas, liver, kidneys and spleen.

Brown has some examples of detecting a secondary tumor in the liver. If a tumor is very small it can fall between the "slices" of a conventional scanner, but with the three dimensional device the possible area of its location can be "boxed in" and then viewed from several angles.

EMI's subsidiary company, Nuclear Enterprises, has launched a new ultrasonic scanner in the United States and in Europe. Called the EMISONIC 4500, the equipment is designed to provide fast, accurate and versatile real time scanning. Real time in this context means that as the probe is placed on the patient a television screen shows that portion of him or her "illuminated" by the beam of high-frequency sound.

The computer in EMI's machine allows the operator to hold any specific image electronically for detailed examination and then to turn it photographically into a permanent record.

Printers turn to court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas commercial printers have gone to court in an attempt to get the state out of the printing business.

A state district court suit filed Monday by Austin attorney Adrian Overstreet alleges that 35 state agencies now operate printing facilities which they call "reproductive services."

The suit asks that the state be enjoined from further printing activities.

Another company in the field is GEC Medical, whose latest equipment is a mobile artery and vein imaging system and a real time scanner. And ultrasound is also increasingly being used in the diagnosis of heart disease.

One example is the Echocardiogram from Cambridge Instruments. This allows the doctor to study the movements of structures within the heart by aiming a beam of ultrasound at the valves and muscles and displaying the processed reflections on a cathode ray tube. Chart recorders give a permanent record for later detailed examination.

equipment estimated to cost $50,000 to $70,000. It cites a portion of the state constitution that says, with a few exceptions, that all state printing and binding needs "shall be performed under contract, to be given to the lowest responsible bidder."

The suit also asks that District Court Judge Hume Cofer issue a temporary injunction to keep the Department of Human Resources from buying an offset press and accompanying seeds and grains. They're a familiar pest in many households. Weevils are not respecters of persons.

Neither are weevils an indication of the quality of sanitation in pantry or kitchen. Weevils can be brought in the house in spice cans; any webbing in the tin is a sure sign that something other than chili powder inhabits that tin.

They can be brought into the kitchen in any grain or meal: flour, cornmeal, for instance.

They also can make themselves known by burrowing their own luscious tunnels through cakes of chocolate.

Even tender-hearted persons, buying wild bird seed for raucous jays or melodic mockingbirds, have probably brought weevils or the tiny black weevil beetle into the house in that sack of seed. Webbing shows the evidence, if more evidence is needed than the sight of little bitty wiggly worms.

To answer the caller's first question: "Can I go ahead and bake this bread?" The answer was certainly, go ahead and bake it, knowing that you are probably baking weevils, too.

Her convictions gave her hope

By DARLA WELLES
Copley News Service

In the fall of 1975 Laurel Lee's life had settled into a rather comfortable, low-key pattern.

After the turbulence of the '60s at Berkeley. After numerous quests into what it is that makes life meaningful. After seeking alternatives to materialism in the academic world and not finding satisfaction. After turning from that to the Eastern religions. After finally finding her own answer in the Bible, in the teachings of Jesus, while she was on her way to homestead in Alaska.

After all that, Laurel Lee's life was, at last, relatively tranquil. She and her husband were living in Portland where she taught in a private school and he drove a school bus. Their lifestyle was far from affluent, but they loved the free time their low-income careers provided. And they used that time to enhance their family life, spending time with their two small children, going camping throughout the northwest.

Then, that October, when she was 30 and pregnant with her third child, the tranquility of her life was rocked by the last threat she could have anticipated. She found herself facing the specter of death.

The confrontation began inauspiciously with a cold and cough that lingered after it. There were tests and examinations and a diagnosis — Hodgkin's disease. A form of cancer that affects the lymph system and can spread throughout the body. Malignant and potentially fatal, but responsive to treatment by radiation and chemotherapy.

Yet for the pregnant woman, there's a hitch. The very treatment that can save her life can damage the baby she's carrying. And in this case the pregnancy was in its sixth month.

Doctors suggested a therapeutic abortion and immediate radiation therapy.

Lee refused both. She wanted to postpone treatment until after the baby's birth.

She won out on the abortion question.

But the progress of the disease and the doctor's warnings convinced her to accept the need for immediate treatment. And so it was begun with lead aprons being used to shield the developing baby from the dangerous rays.

Medical treatment and hospitalization became a way of life. There was progress. The original tumor shrank away. And setbacks. The disease invaded the spleen, requiring surgery, more radiation and chemotherapy. There were high points. Baby Mary Elisabeth was born strong and undamaged in January. And low points. Her husband left her in May to marry the young woman who had been caring for the children.

And face them she did, with determination to have an understanding of the disease and its treatment. With a will to live, but with the ability to accept death. And with humor. All of which she recorded in a journal.

When her treatment was completed and her disease declared in remission nearly a year after the sickness began, she shared the journal — two notebooks filled with handwritten accounts of her feelings and illustrated with her own water color paintings — with the doctors who had treated her and become her friends.

And again a train of unexpected events was set in motion.

The doctors shared the journal with a physician from New York, who was teaching that summer at the University of Oregon Medical School. Through him the journal was introduced into the New York publishing world and accepted for publication. It was titled "Walking Through the Fire" for a passage from the Bible:

"When thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame be kindled upon thee. — Isaiah 43:2.

It's symbolic of Lee's attitudes and her religious conviction.

She talked recently in an interview of her life since the autumn of '75, how it has changed and how her faith has held firm throughout.

"I became a Christian eight years before I got sick," she says. "I didn't start believing because I was dying. I was looking for something. Something that would give me strength and peace of mind. I knew it wasn't there in material success. My parents and a lot of their friends had that and they weren't happy."

"I soon found that it wasn't in study and research. I talked once with two Nobel prize winners and they weren't happy. I explored the Eastern religions and didn't find it there."

"But in the Bible, in the teachings of Jesus, I found what I needed and it served me well. When I got sick, I remember wondering if this same faith that had served me so well when my life was fairly normal would stand when I was in front of a firing squad of circumstances and everything was falling down around me. It did."

When things were difficult, she looked on them as tests of the strength of her faith.

"You can't be a David without a Goliath."

But if she's found herself facing a Goliath, she feels she's also been blessed. With the health of her baby. With the success of her book and the financial stability it has provided for her and her children. And the opportunities for travel it has provided here and abroad through promotion tours.

And with a year of good health allowing her to enjoy the other blessings before the disease attacked again, last November. It was once more brought under control.

But she knows it's there, could surface again, and could take her life too soon for her to see her children grown.

Still, she's at peace. She is not bitter about what's happened to her. Nor is she fearful.

"Death holds no fear for me now. I'm not looking forward to going through the process. But I am not afraid."

She doesn't let her mind dwell on the topic. Instead she busily crams as much life as she can into each day, spending time with each of her three children individually, doing simple things like gardening and putting up homemade jam when she's at home. Getting to know the people of the cities and countries she visits on her book promotion tours.

She faces the future with hopes rather than plans, remaining ever conscious of the importance of making the best use of the time allotted her.

"I have an unknown quantity of time," she said. "Everyone does. Because of my circumstances I'm more aware of the limitation than some people are. But none of us have infinite time. We all have to watch that we don't live our lives postponing all the pleasures for later."

"I don't make long-term plans. I can't. But I live with long-term hopes. To continue writing. To raise my children well. Maybe even to remarry someday."

Handle your whiz kids with care

By MARGERY CRAIG
Copley News Service

You've just found out what your child may have been telling you all along: He's smarter than you or at least has the potential to be.

The realization comes from learning your youngster has an IQ of 132 or above, a designation used to draw the line between children of "average" intelligence and the "mentally gifted minor," the child with exceptional learning abilities.

Ideally, the gifted child will be placed in a class where his or her potential can be developed, and as a parent you are told to be prepared for problems your child may find in school.

You have heard, for instance, that your child may have difficulties in relating to children with less potential, and you know there's no guarantee that you always will find teachers sufficiently trained to deal with exceptional learners.

What you may not realize is that your gifted child may face as many problems at home with you as in school.

Charlotte Malone, a specialist in the field of gifted children for 25 years, is well aware of problems families with highly able learners often encounter.

Malone, currently director of University of California at San Diego's extension courses for professionals in education, has taught and lectured on the subject of gifted children across the country and is the author of one of California's curriculum guides for gifted students.

She also is the mother of two gifted children, now grown, and says she's gone through all the difficult phases parents of the gifted usually experience. "No matter how smart you know your child is, it's always a shock to find out that he or she, in fact gifted," Malone said.

Malone recalled several years ago when her daughter, then in the third grade, tested out with an IQ above the gifted range.

"Even with all my background, it still took me two or three days to stop wondering if her head hurt," Malone said.

She often calls upon her family experiences in counseling gifted children and their parents.

Malone said it is not unusual for the parent who has just learned he has a gifted child to go "lesson crazy," enrolling the youngster in an array of extracurricular classes — from ballet to scuba diving.

Parents, she said, often make the faulty assumption that the gifted child is, indeed, gifted in all areas.

Malone said it simply does not follow that the second-grader who is capable of sixth-grade math also will be capable of rivaling Mozart on the piano. If the interest is not there, the ability doesn't count.

The overzealous parent who keeps forcing more and more achievements on his gifted youngster runs the risk of the child rebelling, deliberately becoming a non-achiever, she added.

"The child may lose track of what it is that excites him and he may lose his self-confidence."

The same holds true for the parent who lashes out at a child saying, "You're gifted so why can't you do this?"

"This is a line I've heard way too many times," Malone said. "Parents have to realize that every child, including the gifted, has limitations." Parents of gifted youngsters also are susceptible to what Malone described as the "We've-got-to-keep-him-normal-just-like-the-other-kids" syndrome.

She said this is usually manifested by the parent who insists his child participate in such activities as Little League, despite his athletic inclinations. Parents also may demand that a child spend as much time with playmates as with, for example, a chemistry set.

Here again, Malone said, parents may only be encouraging the gifted child to rebel and stubbornly refuse to do anything.

"These parents should back off. Gifted children are not so unlike the so-called 'average.' They, too, want friends and to do things like exercise. Leave them alone and they'll come around."

Fashion world: Color aids Western push

By NATALIE BEST
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It's no secret. Eastern fashion experts have regarded the West a runner-up in the fashion race.

However, one exalted leader in the multi-billion dollar industry sees the West coming of age — a real threat in capturing the brass ring of apparel dictates.

"It'll all be done with color," said Beverly Hudson Marshall, the newest addition to the elite society of women retail fashion chiefs.

The charming, 42-year-old former fashion manager for Lord and Taylor, New York, and an assistant general manager of merchandising for Saks Fifth Avenue, Chicago, has been named general manager of Saks, La Jolla, the wealthy beach community at the southern tip of California.

She is one of five lady managers in Saks' 30 stores and one of perhaps 20 women in the top echelon of the industry.

"Moving to the West was a happy surprise," she said. "I have found that the one thing New York designers are not giving California women is the proper coloration."

The short-coiffed, smartly dressed Marshall added, "Color, you see it everywhere, on the streets as well as in the stores. It's changing my life. I've worn black and browns for a long time. Now I, too, am adding color to my wardrobe."

Wearing a two-piece, bright blue print-on-print, quilted dress — her first California purchase — by West Coast designer Jeanne-Marc, the tall, graceful new manager said she likes Jeanne-Marc designs "because they are timeless, ageless and practical for traveling." She will be doing a lot of traveling in the next few years since she plans to commute. She and her husband, Al Marshall, a real estate broker in Chicago, have decided to maintain their home in Park Ridge, Ill.

"I find we have very organized lives which helps us plan our time together," she said. "When I went back to work I made a pact with my husband and three grown-sons that I would have their complete backing. It works out fine. We have numerous family get-togethers planned from California to Chicago and points in between. On one occasion the Marshalls will meet in Las Vegas."

How does a lady "wheel" feel about her new position? "I think it's a very exciting time. I wouldn't want to be 22 again for the world. I'm now putting together the things I've learned over the years."

"I knew what I wanted to be when I was 10, having played store with paper dolls from age 5. I learned organization at home, especially in my kitchen, which is a key to success in business."

"I now see women in retailing making $50,000 to $100,000 a year or more. We're making inroads in the business world. I'm looking forward to being in the $50,000 a year bracket."

"More important, I'm happy in my job. I can't wait to get up in the morning to find out what I'll start next."

She added: "After three days I began to realize that I was a newcomer — the new girl on the block. I decided then that after years in the New York and Chicago fashion markets I had better keep an open mind."

She has started to make changes. She will adapt many collections to the customers to give them what they want — color.

It will be a radical departure in fashion planning, she agreed. Saks will do more with the West Coast, the population center, and let it influence the rest of the nation.

"Of course," she added, "we will continue with the New York and European designers' collections. And certainly we will see the fall designs reflecting the enlarged padded shoulders and narrowed dresses. But the Western fashion flavor will also be felt in a number of ways."

She noted the new Western cowboy look with its plaid shirts and Stetsons already is seen more in New York than in California.

"New York will wear any look in its entirety from head to toe, whereas the Western women wear only a token of a look such as a belt or shirt," she said. "New Yorkers always complete a 'costume' look," she pointed out with no little pride. "They still feel more restricted in their fashions."

Asked what she thought of the current pants versus skirt controversy, the native of Grosse Pointe, Mich., said, smiling, "I know that a skirt gets a lot more attention than pants."

Her off-white, textured stockings, visible under the Jeanne-Marc flared skirt also looked fashionable indeed, if slightly fashion restricted.

Carter's tax cut not half enough

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of the nation's businesses, usually among the most conservative witnesses to appear before Congress, are calling for a tax cut nearly twice the size recommended by the Carter administration and the House.

There are two catches, though. The Chamber of Commerce says corporations and investors should get a bigger share of the $30 billion tax cut it proposes and that the cut should be accompanied by a slowdown in federal spending growth.

"The time is ripe for Congress to limit 1979 outlays to $480 billion," which would permit a 7 percent growth in spending and still allow a bigger tax cut without increasing the deficit, Jack Carlson, the chamber's chief economist, told the Senate Finance Committee on Monday.

Congress seems likely to limit spending to about $489 billion next year. But the chamber's philosophy on taxes seems to fit well with that of the committee. That panel is expected to enlarge the House-passed tax cut of $16.3 billion — though not to the chamber's $30 billion mark — and is a good bet to increase the share for business and investors.

The Carter administration says it is comfortable with the size of the bill passed by the House, but prefers that a larger share go to lower- and middle-income individuals and that the capital gains relief, aimed at helping investors, be reduced.

The tax on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of stocks, real estate and other assets, was the biggest stumbling block when the bill was in the House. Because the finance committee almost unanimously supports a lower capital gains tax, that issue is not as volatile in the Senate.

Carlson, speaking for the chamber, advocated a bigger capital gains reduction than was passed by the House. Roland M. Bixler, representing the National Association of Manufacturers, urged a separate reduction in the corporate capital gains tax.

They contend the tax is so high it stifles investment in business. As a result, they say, the economy and worker productivity lags and inflation worsens.

Current law taxes one-half of individual capital gains at the same rate as a taxpayer's other income. Except for a $10,000 exclusion, the other half is subject only to a minimum tax of 15 percent, meaning capital gains, in theory, can be subject to a maximum tax of up to 49.1 percent. In reality, the average tax is about 16 percent.

The House-passed bill would reduce the maximum tax to about 35 percent and, starting in 1980, exempt from taxation any part of the profit caused by inflation.

Ready reference, guide for anxious watchers awaiting smoke signals

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Ready reference and handy historical guide for armchair Vaticanists waiting for the smoke signals from the conclave beginning Friday to elect a successor to Pope Paul VI:

Conclaves — from the Latin cum clave, with key — began in 1216 when Roman crowds grew tired of waiting for the election of Honorius III and locked the cardinals inside the papal palace to hurry them along. The longest recorded conclave lasted two years, nine months and three days before choosing Gregory X in 1272.

Adrian Florenz of Utrecht, in the Netherlands, who became Adrian VI in 1522, was the last non-Italian chosen.

Angelo Roncalli was 77 when he became John XXIII in 1958, the first pope in more than two centuries over 70.

Benedict IX, in 1032, is the youngest pope on record. Some scholars say he was 12, others 30. Both his uncles were popes and he disgraced himself by selling the office to his godfather.

Marcellus II, elected in 1555, was the last pope to keep his baptismal name. In the early church, most popes used their own names. The custom of choosing another name was firmly established with the election in 1009 of Sergius IV, who was born Peter Bocca Porci, or Peter Pig's Mouth.

Popes have been chosen by a two-thirds majority vote of the conclave since 1274.

The choice is not limited to cardinals; any male who has "no just impediment" is eligible. But Urban VI, elected exactly six centuries ago, was the last non-cardinal to be chosen. He was bishop of Bari.

Some conclaves were also not so fussy about impediments. Julius II (1503-13), the patron of Michelangelo who commissioned the frescos in the Sistine Chapel, had three children. Alexander VI, the most scandalous of the Borgias, fathered at least five children, including Lucrezia.

The average age of the 111 cardinals who will enter the conclave area in the Borgia apartments on Friday evening is 66. They include 27 Italians, the fewest ever; eight Americans, the most ever; 12 Africans, nine Asians and 29 from the rest of Europe.

One third of the world's Catholics live in South America, a statistic dramatized by Brazil's six voting cardinals.

Unarmed guard felled by gunfire

ODESSA — E.D. Cloninger, the 77-year-old night watchman at Britt Trucking & Construction Co. in northwest Odessa, was wounded shortly after midnight today by gunfire from a pickup truck during an attempted burglary, according to the Ector County Sheriff's Office and a spokesman at the trucking company.

Cloninger, who was shot in the side, was listed in guarded condition today in the intensive care unit of Medical Center Hospital here.

He was shot in the yard of the trucking company and was found by his wife, said R.D. "Shine" Hemphill, Britt office manager. He said the Cloningers live at the trucking company location.

Hemphill said several shots reportedly were fired in rapid succession from the pickup, but only one or two hit the unarmed night watchman.

An Ector County sheriff's deputy said details on the incident were few, and that law enforcement officers have no further leads.

Crystal City revisited: LoVaca may suspend gas

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Faced with a potential "Crystal City situation," Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. says it will suspend gas deliveries to Pearsall in 30 days unless the city pays $108,343 in back bills.

But even while Lo-Vaca vice-president Don Newquist was briefing reporters Monday, a break in the deadlock between the company and the small South Texas town developed.

Near the end of the news conference, a telephoned message arrived that Pearsall wanted to negotiate and make a partial payment.

Like Crystal City, Pearsall owns and operates the natural gas system within its city limits.

Newquist said the company doesn't want "another Crystal City situation on our hands" and urged Pearsall to pay up before the debt gets bigger.

While he was talking, a Capitol employee brought in a note, and a company public relations man went to the telephone. He returned moments later with word that Pearsall city secretary Martin Garcia had requested a Sept. 6 meeting with Lo-Vaca and would bring a partial payment.

Lo-Vaca cut off Crystal City's gas last year after the town failed to pay $800,000 in past-due bills. Service has not been restored.

Newquist said Pearsall has given no reasons why it was withholding payment for February, March, May and June. He said as far as he knew, Pearsall was charging its gas customers the proper rate — a big difference from the Crystal City situation.

Miss Harris County wins title of Miss Texas USA

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A business and geology student who says she plans to work in the oil industry represented Harris County to become Miss Texas-USA in the annual pageant in El Paso.

Anne Hinnant, a student at Trinity University in San Antonio, will compete in the Miss USA pageant in Biloxi, Miss., next May. The winner of that pageant will travel to Perth, Australia, to compete for the title of Miss Universe.

First runner up in the Monday night contest was Bevelyn Pierce, Miss Clear Lake City. Miss Pierce will enter Southern Methodist University this fall to study fashion merchandising and dance.

Second runner up in the contest, Fran Ford, also won the Miss Swimsuit competition. A business student at the University of Texas at El Paso, she entered the pageant as Miss El Paso.

Third runner up was Miss Farmer's Branch, Danone Camden. Miss Camden, a former Dallas Cowboys cheerleader, was also selected Miss Photogenic.

Fourth runner up, Debbie Palmer, was the Miss Irving entry. Miss Laredo, Lizzy Villareal, was named Miss Amity by her fellow contestants.

Entrants in the pageant competed in swimsuit, formal wear and personality categories.

Dam on Panhandle lake unsafe; draining planned

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Buffalo Lake at the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge near Canyon, Texas, is being drained because the dam's spillway would be unsafe if flash flooding occurred, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said.

spillway to be inadequate and unsafe in the event of flash flooding occurring in the area," the spokesman said Monday.

The dam, known as the Tierra Blanca project, was constructed by the Soil Conservation Service in the 1930s.

Buffalo Lake, which has been dry for nearly five years, is now almost full because of flooding that occurred in the Texas Panhandle in late May, the spokesman said.

The water has reached a level of three feet below the spillway.

A spokesman said draining was scheduled to begin today and would continue for about four months.

"Inspections by the Fish and Wildlife Service engineers, the Army Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation and the Texas Department of Water Resources have found the dam's

Impatience grows over museum delay

The Los Angeles Times

MADRID — Spaniards are beginning to show impatience and irritation over the delay by New York's Museum of Modern Art in giving up the "Guernica," the celebrated Pablo Picasso painting that came out of the Spanish Civil War.

In New York, however, museum officials insist that they are faithfully following the wishes of the late Spanish painter. During his lifetime, according to these officials, Picasso decided that the wall-size painting would go to Spain only after his French lawyer, Roland Dumas, determined that Spain had become democratic enough to receive it.

Although the exiled Picasso was hardly a favorite of the Franco government, his worldwide prestige became so great that the government, in a show of reconciliation and respectability, began making a few tepid overtures in 1969 toward acquiring the painting. Picasso rejected them, but the pressure persuaded him that he had better set down in writing what he wanted done with the painting after his death.

He evidently did this in documents left with his lawyer, Dumas. These documents, according to Dumas, confirmed what Alfred H. Barr Jr., the former director of the Museum of Modern Art, and William Rubin, the present director of the museum's Department of Painting and Sculpture.

Dumas has never made public the full text of these documents. But in a statement issued from Paris in April, 1977, the 40th anniversary of the bombing, Dumas said that Picasso had decided that "Guernica" and its preparatory studies belong to the Spanish Republic. "But, Dumas went on, Picasso concluded" that the transfer to Spain could only be envisaged after the complete reestablishment of individual liberties in that country."

According to a snippet of text of a Picasso letter released by Dumas, the painter actually talked about turning the painting over to "the government of the Spanish Republic." Technically, this would eliminate the present government of King Juan Carlos since it is to be a constitutional monarchy under the new Spanish Constitution, not a republic. But Dumas, interpreting Picasso's intent broadly as indicated that he would transfer the painting to any democratic Spanish government, be it a monarchy or republic.

Dumas, however, is in no hurry about making his assessment of the Spanish regime. Picasso, according to Dumas, "intended prudence in the realization of his decision."

Dumas said Picasso stated in the documents that a "certain time should be allowed to pass to verify that, once subject to a forcible coup which might reopen this question and that, finally, political relaxation should accompany a general detente."

There were artistic reasons for prudence as well. At its present age and condition, the "Guernica" could be damaged by too much handling and transportation. Any decision made has to be a final decision. Dumas described Picasso as believing that "the fragility of the painting—precluded any further travel after its installation in Madrid."

He said that moving the painting would require a large number of time-consuming technical precautions.

As a result of all these political and technical problems, Dumas concluded in his 1977 statement, the transfer of the "Guernica" can not be realized for several years.

The Dumas statement did not, however, completely clear up the issue of the painting's ownership and of Dumas' legal role. In a recent telephone conversation, Richard H. Koch, deputy director and general counsel of the Museum of Modern Art, said, "The painting is clearly not owned by the museum. It is owned by the Picasso estate, and the museum is prepared to give it up in due course."

By saying that the painting was owned by the estate, Koch went on, he meant that "for all practical purposes, the painting was owned by the (Picasso) family owns it."

If the family does own the painting, that would imply that members of the family, and not Dumas, will have the final say about what happens to the painting. The family, in fact, acts as if this were true. Paloma Picasso, the painter's daughter, recently told Spanish journalists that the "Guernica" would never come to Spain so long as four Barcelona actors, convicted of assisting the Spanish army, were kept in jail. That sounded like the comment of a person who believed she had the authority to decide.

What would happen if Dumas and the family disagreed about the disposition of the painting? Koch refused to comment on that.

"I'm not going to get into an exchange about a hypothetical case," he said.

So far, almost three years after the death of dictator Francisco Franco, and more than a year after parliamentary elections, Dumas has failed to give Spanish political life his approval. Until he does, museum officials say, the painting stays with them. There is some confusion, however, about the details of Picasso's instructions and the precise legal role of Dumas. As a result, some Spaniards are suspicious of the New York museum's intentions.

In a dispatch from New York in early August, Jose Maria Carrascal, the American correspondent of the Madrid newspaper ABC, concluded that the museum "appears disposed to keep the painting as long as possible."

"When asked about the subject," Carrascal went on, "museum officials say, 'We are waiting for a legal resolution of the question,' and other comments in that vein. But in its publicity campaign to attract more visitors, the museum lists the 'Guernica' as one of its main attractions, and everything points to the conclusion that the museum will give the painting away only when left with no other alternative."

At about the same time, another Madrid newspaper, Diario 16, accused the museum of resistance.

"The museum has demonstrated clearly in the last months," Diario 16 said in an editorial, "that it is not inclined to give up the painting."

Noting that the U.S. Congress was about to adopt a resolution urging transfer of the painting to Spain, the newspaper likened what it called the museum's resistance to "defiance of the law."

At stake is a painting that is perhaps the best-known work of art of the 20th century and the centerpiece of the New York museum's enormously rich collection. In the minds of art lovers, the painting is as closely associated with the New York Museum of Modern Art as the "Mona Lisa" is with the Louvre in Paris.

The painting also has great political significance, and that is probably why Picasso wanted it to belong to the people of Spain some day. The painting memorializes the destruction of the Basque town of Guernica on April 26, 1937, by planes of the German Condor Legion flying for Franco during the Spanish Civil War. The act, which shocked world public opinion, was regarded as the first attempt in history to destroy an undefended town systematically from the air and thus terrorize the civilian population. Perhaps a thousand people were killed.

Picasso painted the "Guernica" the next month for the pavilion of the Spanish Republic in the Paris world fair.

Understanding what is covered by premium dollar important

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Fires and burglaries, hurricanes and explosions. You read about them every day. What would happen if your house were hit?

Insuring your home against danger is important. Knowing what you get for your premium dollars is equally important.

According to the Insurance Information Institute, industry officials say that as many as half the nation's homeowners may not have as much insurance as they need.

One person's idea of need, however, can be another's idea of luxury. How much is right for you?

As a general rule, most insurance companies advise people to insure their homes for an amount equal to at least 80 percent of the replacement cost. Replacement cost, not purchase price. Inflation has boosted the value of housing so rapidly that you could be in for an unpleasant surprise if you have not updated your insurance policy.

For most people, damage rather than destruction is the major problem. "Partial losses are more frequent," said Ronald Arnold of State Farm Insurance Cos. For every home that is totally destroyed, Arnold said, up to 200 are damaged.

This is why the 80 percent figure is important. If you insure your house for less than 80 percent of replacement value, you will not be repaid in full for damages — even if they total less than the amount of your policy.

Here's how it works. Suppose you have a house now worth $50,000. You insure it for 80 percent — $40,000. The roof is destroyed and the bill for a replacement is $11,000. You are covered for the full $11,000.

Assume, however, your home is insured for only 60 percent of the replacement cost — $30,000. Again, the roof is destroyed and, again, it costs $11,000. Because your insurance is below the 80 percent level, you will not get the full $11,000. Your payment will be based on the cash value of the roof less depreciation due to wear and tear.

How much does the extra protection cost? The insurance institute provided some typical coverage figures for a home in Omaha, Neb., worth $57,500. Note: Insurance rates vary widely according to where you live. Rates for inner city houses are higher than those for homes in suburban areas; rates in Omaha — which is subject to torandoes and hail — are higher than those in areas with less weather danger.

According to the institute, insuring the Omaha home for 60 percent of replacement value would cost $208 a year; insuring it for 80 percent would cost $293; and insuring it for 100 percent would cost $378.

How can you keep up with inflation? Many companies offer an "inflation guard endorsement." The amount of coverage is automatically increased by a specified amount every three months. The fee is relatively low. The insurance institute said that increasing coverage by 2 percent a quarter or 8 percent a year, would add about $10 to the annual premium on a $50,000 policy.

You can save money on your insurance without going below the 80 percent limit. The simplest way is with deductibles. You assume the risk on the first several hundred dollars of loss.

Most policies include a $100 deductible clause. If you increase this to $250, you can cut your premium by 10 percent; if you make the deductible $500, you can save 20 percent. In the example used above, a homeowner insuring his or her property for 80 percent of its replacement value, could save just over $29 a year with a $250 deductible and almost $59 with a $500 deductible.

Installation of devices like smoke and burglar alarms also can save money. Insurance company officials generally say premiums can be cut by 2 percent to 5 percent, depending on the type of system you install.

Gaylord Perry wins 15th; Flanagan two-hits A's

By The Associated Press
Gaylord Perry hopes to spend a few more years pitching for the San Diego Padres. Joe Sambito will be hurling for the Houston Astros in the future but wishes he wasn't. And New York's Jerry Koosman probably wishes he could pitch for any team that can score some runs.

All three pitchers worked Monday night with mixed results. Perry, who'll be 40 years old next month, stymied the Philadelphia Phillies on six hits through seven innings for his 15th victory in 21 decisions this year, a 7-3 decision that was the Padres' sixth road triumph in a row.

Sambito, unhappy with the treatment he has received from Houston management, nevertheless signed a contract with the Astros prior to their 8-2 victory over Chicago. He then hurled 11-3 innings of shutout relief to preserve J.R. Richard's 13th win.

Koosman again was victimized by the Mets' offensive and defensive shortcomings, striking out 13 Giants and surrendering two unearned runs in 10 innings in a game the Mets finally lost 4-2 in 11.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal downed Los Angeles 4-2 and St. Louis pummeled Cincinnati 14-9. Padres 7, Phillies 3

Perry, the wily veteran who has recorded at least 15 victories in each of the last 13 years, appears to be making a run at the Cy Young Award as the league's best pitcher. "He's a hell of a competitor," said Phillies Manager Danny Ozark. "He still has pretty decent stuff, he knows how to pitch. He has velocity on the fastball, but I don't think he threw two consecutive pitches at the same speed."

Perry admitted as much. "I threw a changeup, a curve ball, a fastball, sidearm, underhand," he quipped. "I feel like I can pitch three or four more years. The main thing is to be with a team that is willing to take a chance on me."

Perry was helped by Fernando Gonzalez's four hits and a two-run homer by Gene Tenace. Astros 8, Cubs 3

Jose Cruz had four hits and drove in four runs as Houston ran its home hot streak to 15 victories in the last 17 games. However, the triumph was first for Houston in seven games after it dropped six in a row at Pittsburgh. Sambito, one of three Astros pitchers who complained about salaries in early March, handed members of the media a typewritten statement after the game.

"The mere fact that I have signed doesn't mean I am satisfied with the contract or my treatment during the negotiating process," the statement read. "Rather, it reflects the fact I do not find it acceptable to punish myself by not agreeing to accept a raise which is what this contract constitutes."

"I am clearly one of the lowest paid relief pitchers in baseball based on my credentials since coming to the Astros in July 1976."

Sambito, 26, has a record of 4-6 this season and leads Houston pitchers in appearances with 50.

Giants 4, Mets 2
Koosman pitched magnificently but, as his 3-13 record and 3.66 ERA would indicate, got little help from his teammates. His 13 strikeouts tied the high for the NL this season.

"I guess you've got to be lucky and I haven't been," Koosman analyzed. "You've got to get the right hop. The Giants got the right hops and the timely hits in the 11th. Rob An-draws' two-run triple knocked in the decisive runs. Willie McCovey singled to open the 11th, pinch-runner Terry Whitfield was safe when Marc Hill's sacrifice bunt was fielded by pitcher Kevin Kobel and thrown late to second, and Johnnie LeMaster sacrificed. Andrews followed with his hit.

Vida Blue, seeking his 17th victory, went nine innings for the Giants, who moved within a game of first-place Los Angeles in the NL West.

Expos 4, Dodgers 2
Solo homers by Andre Dawson, Warren Cromartie and Gary Carter carried Ross Grimsley to his 15th victory.

"It was a good night," said Dawson, who was 4-for-4, "but not as good as my 4-for-6 game in Atlanta when I had two homers in one inning."

"This is the first time I've hit a bunch like that in a while," added Dawson, who has 22 home runs for the season. "I just hope I can put it together now for the last month of the season."

Cardinals 14, Reds 9
St. Louis belted out 23 hits, including four each by George Hendrick and Jerry Mumphy and three by Lou Brock. That more than offset a two-homer, six-RBI night for Ken Griffey.

By The Associated Press
The tension built with each inning Mike Flanagan kept the Oakland A's hitless. After completing two-thirds of the job, the young Baltimore left-hander couldn't help being aware he was flirting with a pitcher's dream.

"I started thinking about the no-hitter after six innings," said the 26-year-old Flanagan. "There are nine outs to go, I kept telling myself, but the no-hitter was secondary."

Not much later, it was over. After Dell Alton walked and stole second, Flanagan got the first out in the Oakland ninth, then faced 13-year veteran Rico Carty.

"I didn't have the luxury of a big lead, so I couldn't pitch around any of their hitters," said Flanagan.

So he battled Carty and lost. The designated hitter, acquired last Monday from Toronto in the Willie Horton deal, slapped a run-scoring single and Baltimore's 3-0 lead was cut to 3-1.

"That makes about 20 no-hitters I've broken up," said the 38-year-old Carty. "Sometimes pitchers are not that good when they're pitching a no-hitter, but this guy was very good. He's a smart pitcher. I don't care how old he is. He's smart."

He's also 16-11. Flanagan gave up just two more hits — Bruce Robinson's double and Mitchell Page's RBI single in the ninth — while striking out eight and walking three to pace the Orioles' 3-2 victory and hand the A's their ninth loss in 10 games.

In the other American League games, the Detroit Tigers rocked the Minnesota Twins 9-6 and the Toronto Blue Jays bested the Texas Rangers 8-6.

"I'm not surprised Carty got the first hit. He's a great one," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "I get excited like everyone else when a pitcher has a no-hitter, but only think about the next hitter — I don't look ahead."

He didn't have to, after Carty lumbered from the on-deck circle and shattered another dream.

Eddie Murray's third-inning single delivered two unearned Baltimore runs and Kiko Garcia's ninth-inning single scored Terry Crowley with the game-winner.

Tigers 9, Twins 6
Lance Parrish knocked in six runs with the first grand slam of his career and a two-run triple, helping Jack Billingham, 14-5, to his ninth consecutive victory and powering Detroit past Minnesota.

"The first of anything is always a big thrill," said Parrish. "It's the biggest RBI night I've ever had."

Tim Lincecum singled, took second on a sacrifice and took third on Ron LeFlore's single. LeFlore stole second — his 57th theft of the season and 26th consecutive successful attempt — and Rusty Staub walked to set up Parrish's 12th home run of the year. That gave Detroit a 9-2 lead in the seventh.

The steal by LeFlore tied the AL mark for consecutive thefts set last season by Oakland's Mitchell Page and left him 12 short of tying the major league mark set by the Dodgers' Dave Lopes.

Blue Jays 8, Rangers 6
Horton cracked a two-run homer in the fourth and Alan Ashby cracked a two-run single in Toronto's five-run fifth, helping the Blue Jays survive four Texas home runs and hand the Rangers their fifth loss in six games.

"On most days, four home runs is enough," said Texas Manager Billy Hunter, who watched his Rangers waste homers by Bobby Bonds, Jim Sundberg, Kurt Bevacqua and Al Oliver.

"I just hope maybe I can finish out my career here," said the 35-year-old Horton, playing with his fourth team of the season. He started with the Rangers, was dealt to Cleveland in spring training, was released by the Indians three months later, signed by Oakland and traded to Toronto for Carty.

"I've felt comfortable since I put on a Toronto uniform," said Horton, who hopes it'll be the last one he wears this year.

DANNY WHITE, Dallas backup quarterback launches a pass downfield during second half action of the Cowboys' 13-27 loss to Houston Saturday. White had a better night punting than he had behind the wheel of the Cowboy offense, completing only two of seven passes for 13 yards with an interception. His punting was in good form however, as he kicked four times for a 43 yard average.

Nixon becomes Angels fan

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon has become a fan of the California Angels, saying, "If it will take my presence to help win the pennant for the Angels, I'll be at Anaheim Stadium for every game."

Nixon, who came 35 miles from his San Clemente, Calif., home for an Angels game earlier this season, was back Sunday when California beat the Baltimore Orioles 1-0 in 14 innings.

Rookie quarterback paces Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Some have called rookie Mark Miller the Cleveland Browns' "quarterback of the future," but the youngster from nearby Bowling Green University may be changing the timetable.

Miller came off the bench in the second half Monday night to spark the sputtering Browns' offense and guide them to a 14-10 National Football League preseason victory over the Detroit Lions.

He completed his first six passes, including a 39-yard sprint-out throw to another rookie, wide receiver Keith Wright, that set up Cleveland's first touchdown.

Miller then directed the Browns on a long drive that ended with a rookie mistake — a pass into a crowd at the goal line — that resulted in an interception by Detroit's Bruce Rhodes.

The 22-year-old quarterback got a reprieve moments later, though, when veteran running back John Brockington, acquired last week in a trade with Kansas City, fumbled for the second time and Cleveland defensive end Mike St. Clair dashed 15 yards to the Lions' 1.

Fullback Mike Pruitt rammed the ball in on the second play and Cleveland led for good at 14-10. "Miller was exciting," said Cleveland Coach Sam Rutigliano. "He has the ability to get away from the pass rush and he showed a lot of poise for a young kid who has only played four quarters of professional football. Miller is our backup quarterback."

What made the 22-year-old Miller's performance all the more exciting to the slim crowd of 31,345 in cavernous Cleveland Stadium was the flat showing in the first half by veteran quarterback Brian Sipe and the entire Browns' offense.

Sipe completed seven of 11 passes but wound up on the seat of his pants five times, for a total loss of 38 yards, and the offense wound up with 56 yards against the tough Detroit defense in the first half.

Cleveland's defense was about as tough, limiting the Lions to a second-quarter score on Greg Landry's 30-yard strike to David Hill.

"I'm very disappointed in our offensive line," Rutigliano said. "We had some young people playing and that, plus one guy (guard Barry Darrow) working back into shape after knee surgery, hurt."

"Brian did not have the opportunity to get things going in the first half. It's difficult to throw from horizontal parade rest."

Cleveland's first touchdown came on a 1-yard toss to offensive lineman Doug Dieken on a rare tackle eligible play. The veteran tackle, better known for rugged blocking and his propensity for garnering holding penalties, said, "It's good to use my hands for something besides holding. If I had dropped it, I would have kept going out of the stadium."

Detroit and Cleveland are both 2-1 with one preseason game left, and Lions Coach Monte Clark wasn't too disappointed by his team's play. "We could have had it, but it seemed like we just wanted to give it to them," he said. "Miller seemed to ignite them, but the story on our side was just too many mistakes."

Lack of concentration dooms Cowboys

By STEVE O'BRIEN
R-T Sports Writer

It's going to be a long week for the Dallas Cowboys. The defending world champions were literally taken apart by Houston Saturday night in Texas Stadium, thereby giving the Oilers the Governor's Cup for the second straight year. Now comes the task of putting the 'Pokes back together again. The Cowboys looked very respectable for the first half Saturday, despite offensive breakdowns in the first two quarters which kept them from putting the ball in the end zone. The defense had been sharp, blunting the Houston attack for the bulk of that time.

BUT, WITH ONLY five minutes remaining in the first half, the Oilers took the ball at their own 20, after the Dallas offense had once again proved inept.

and marched the length of the field in 12 plays with Ronnie Coleman scooting around the left side for the final 18 yards and a TD.

It was a 7-3 Houston lead, but more importantly it was a sign of things to come for Dallas. Houston scored three times in 10 minutes in the final half of play to deck the Cowboys for the first time in three exhibition games.

With the exhibition season shortened from six games to four games and the regular season extended from 14 games to 16 games, it becomes more than just a pre-season loss for Dallas. It becomes a problem — a problem they have very little time to deal with.

THE COWBOYS open regular season action in only two weeks against a Baltimore club that will be more than able to exploit any deficiencies in the Dallas attack.

So, the Dallas Cowboys have their work cut out for them. "It goes to the practice field from here," linebacker Thomas Henderson said after the 13-27 loss. "We gotta get hungry again. If we don't we're gonna go from Dooomsday to done-in."

"We gonna be ready or we're gonna be embarrassed," Roger Staubach, the Cowboy field general who rarely makes mistakes, made a few Saturday. The problem? "Concentration."

"WE NEED TO START concentrating," Staubach said after the game. "The offense has got to develop more consistency and get to the point we can take the ball and score in seven or eight plays. Tonight we had some big strikes, but no consistency."

"People have to work hard and start concentrating," he added. "We've had that but evidently we haven't had enough. We have a lot of things to improve on and if we don't, we're gonna be up a creek."

"The number of penalties indicated we were not concentrating," Head Coach Tom Landry noted after the game. The Cowboys were saddled with nine penalties to just two for Houston.

"It looked like we enjoyed homecoming (from training camp in Thousand Oaks, Ca.) more than we enjoyed playing football tonight."

JETHRO PUGH AGREED with Staubach and Landry's assessment. "Maybe we didn't concentrate as well as we should have. I know it was more of a mental thing as opposed to a physical problem. We need more work, a little more discipline."

"We learned a lesson," Harvey Martin sighed after the debacle. "We just did not play good football. We had the same thing happen to us last year and we came home with our tails between our legs. We just had to work on it."

"Everybody looked pretty bad out there. It's embarrassing to have to sit through the films and watch your mistakes."

ONE ALMOST had to wonder after watching the failure if it wasn't perhaps a matter of complacency following the super season of a year ago.

Cliff Harris believes that may have contributed to Dallas' lack of success Saturday. "The only thing we have to remember is that when they introduce us as World Champions, that was last year. This is a whole new season."

Fullback Robert Newhouse did not agree. "No, I don't think we were complacent. We went out there but just did not do the job."

"I think it will come to us." Whatever the problem, it is probably one the Cowboys can work out. With the kind of people in the Cowboy organization it's hard to believe otherwise.

"It's just one game," Henderson reminded after the contest. "Nobody likes to lose, but we lost a couple last year."

"We'll work it out — don't get too excited."

A convoy of blockers leads Tony Dorsett around right end during the first half of the Dallas-Houston game Saturday in Texas Stadium. The Cowboys lost 13-27, but Coach Tom Landry said afterward he was mildly pleased with the Dallas running game. Dorsett picked up 75 yards on the ground, including a 25-yard burst in the second quarter. Herbert Scott (68) and Tom Rafferty (64) serve as TD's escort on this play.

No room in baseball for midgets after Ed Gaedel

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Eddie Gaedel came to bat only once, and then, not even officially. But, because he was a part of a major league baseball game, his name dutifully is listed in the game's record books. The only tipoff to his unique slice of the game's history is the entry recording his vital statistics.

Next to his height, it says: 3 feet, 7 inches.

It was 27 years ago this week, in August 1951, when owner Bill Veeck interrupted the dog days of summer to send baseball's first — and so far only — midget up to bat for the late and rarely lamented St. Louis Browns.

You have to understand that the Browns didn't have to wait for August for the dog days. The Browns had dog days in May. This was a bad baseball team. Worse than that, the Browns were boring. Veeck could endure bad. Boring, however, was unacceptable to the flamboyant showman who now owns the Chicago White Sox.

So Veeck decided to inject some pizzazz into the bleak Browns' show. The answer would be Gaedel, a willing little fellow, who signed a standard American League contract on a Friday and showed up as a pinch hitter two days later.

The Browns, playing at home against the Detroit Tigers in the second game of a Sunday doubleheader, listed Frank Saucier as the center fielder and had him leading off. He played the field in the top of the first, but when the Browns came to bat in the bottom half of the inning, he was not the first batter. Instead of Saucier, a large-sized birthday cake appeared at home plate where Detroit catcher Bob Swift and umpire Ed Hurley eyed it warily. On the mound, pitcher Bob Cain was properly curious.

"We thought it was just another one of Veeck's jokes," Cain said of the cake.

At the proper moment, the layers popped open and there was Gaedel, dressed up in his miniature Browns uniform. Cain, Swift and Hurley could hardly believe their eyes.

"I remember, the umpire went over the Browns' dugout and asked to see a contract," said Cain. "Zack Taylor was the manager and he was ready. He had the contract in his back pocket. Then Hurley came out to the mound. He said, 'Bob, it's legitimate. You'll have to pitch to him. He has a contract.'"

Now came the strategy conference between pitcher and catcher. How do you pitch to a midget? "Swift started laughing," said Cain. "He said, 'Try to get a strike.'"

Against a 3-foot-7 midget? That's like the age-old advice that managers often give pitchers. "Don't walk this guy," they like to say, "but don't give him anything to hit."

Cain considered his task. "I'll do the best I can," he told Swift, sounding sincere.

Swift certainly tried to help his pitcher. "Bob lay down on his side, resting his head on his hands, trying to give me a low target," said Cain. Then Gaedel took his batting stance, ending any chance the pitcher had. "He spread his legs and crouched over."

Pitching to the bent-over midget, Cain threw four straight balls and Gaedel trotted down to first base.

"Those four balls were ordinary strikes to anybody else, but they were just too high for him," said Cain.

Jim Delsing pinch ran for Gaedel and, just that quickly, the midget's major league career was over. "I think Veeck said he was on the roof and he swore if Gaedel had swung at a pitch, he would have shot him on the spot," said Cain.

Cain, the innocent victim of the practical joke, wasn't angry over the incident until a few moments later. "I walked the next guy and then gave up a single," he said. "I almost got taken out of the game in the first inning. But I got out of it and pitched a complete game. We won 5-2."

Two days later, American League owners, harrumphing over Veeck's bit of merry-making, voted to bar midgets from their games.

Now, almost three decades after the incident, baseball's rules require clubs to agree not to make a farce out of the game. Chickens and Indian chiefs and donkeys are all right. But stay away from midgets.

Ed Gaedel, a 3-foot-7 midget takes up a batter's crouch in 1951 at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis in a game against the Detroit Tigers. He was pinch hitting for St. Louis Browns outfielder Frank Saucier. Umpire Ed Hurley left, examined Gaedel's contract before allowing him to bat. The Tiger catcher is Bob Swift. Two days after Gaedel's appearance, American League owners voted to bar midgets from their games. (AP Laserphoto).

Spurs rookie sets goals

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Frankie Sanders, a first round National Basketball Association draft choice, went against his parents' wishes when he decided to plead a hardship case and turn professional.

In Sanders' case, hardship does not mean poverty.

The No. 1 choice of the San Antonio Spurs, a 6-foot-6 shooter from Dayton, Ohio, and Southern University, said, "Our family has never been in need of money. We're just an average middle class family."

"In fact, my father wanted me to return to school."

So did Southern University's followers. Sanders averaged 28.6 points and sank 57 percent of his shots as a junior guard last winter. He ranked fifth in Division I national scoring.

But the lure of gold and national glory was too much for Sanders.

"Some of the general managers in the league advised me that if I went this year, I was a first round pick," said Sanders. He was. San Antonio chose him as the 19th player in the opening round.

Sanders showed off a pair of basketball shoes he was wearing in a Columbus summer league.

He will receive $8,000 from the shoe's manufacturer for wearing them this season. "I can't wear any other shoe this year. But that's OK because they're real comfortable," he said.

Sanders is looking for more than a starting berth with the Spurs.

"I want to win Rookie of the Year and I want to play on a championship team. Those are my goals," he said.

Miniature golf deadline nears

Almost 40 putters have qualified for a miniature golf tournament to be held Saturday at Green Acres Miniature Golf Course, with Larry Tidwell's 11-under par 37 the top qualifying round so far.

Thursday is the last day anyone can qualify for the tourney. A qualifying score of par 48 must be turned in by that day to the Green Acres cashier.

The only entry fee for the tournament will be the charge for games played.

Also among the top qualifiers thus far are Adolph Garza with a 28 and David Brigham with a 39.

The first round of the tournament starts at 9 a.m. Saturday.

Rams trade All-Pro Jackson to Oakland

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Monte Jackson wanted out, so the Los Angeles Rams traded the All-Pro cornerback to Oakland Monday.

It was the second time in preseason maneuvers that the Rams traded one of their most respected performers in order to stock the franchise with future National Football League draft choices.

The Rams made a similar trade when they dealt their 1977 pass receiving leader, 11-year veteran Harold Jackson, to the New England Patriots last week. Both trades were for undisclosed choices in future NFL drafts of college seniors.

Monte Jackson, 25, walked out of the Rams' training camp for four days last month, shortly after the team's veterans reported. The following week the Rams said they would honor his request and attempt to negotiate a trade for the fourth-year cornerback.

The 5-foot-11, 189-pound defensive back was the Rams' rookie of the year in 1975 and led the NFL with 10 interceptions in 1976. He has been a Pro Bowl selection the past two years.

"We were reluctant to trade Jackson," Rams' General Manager Don Klosterman said Monday. "But we tried to accommodate him. We appreciate the things he has done for the Rams and wish him the best."

It had been reported last month that Monte Jackson was seeking a trade to the Chargers in San Diego, his hometown, or wanted to join his brother Terry, a rookie defensive back candidate of the New York Giants. But he has consistently refused to talk to reporters about his trade request.

Ray Malavasi, who replaced the fired George Allen as Rams' coach last week, said he would try to talk Monte Jackson into rejoining the team. But Malavasi's effort was rejected, a Rams spokesman said.

The Rams installed Rod Perry at right cornerback this year, and Showmanship still Ali's trademark

LITITZ, Pa. (AP)—He's a 36-year-old warrior trying to muster his eroded skills for one last command performance. But former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali still can draw on an endless source of showmanship.

All, training hard for his Sept. 15 rematch against Leon Spinks in what he says will be his last fight, swept into this tiny south-central Pennsylvania town Monday to unveil the Muhammad Ali Peanut Butter Crisp Crunch Candy Bar and vow that the second fight would be different.

"Come Sept. 15, I want you all to sit in front of your TV sets, take your phones off the hook, don't answer the doorbell and get yourself a nice cheeseburger. I don't want you to miss nothing because I'm going to shock the world!" the 36-year-old Ali bellowed of the rematch in New Orleans.

"I'm gonna surprise him. I'm gonna hit this man so hard it'll jar his innards in Africa." Police blocked traffic on the town's main street to make way for Ali, who made the trip from his training camp in Deer Lake, Pa., in a chauffeur-driven limousine. And townspeople jammed the pavement to catch a glimpse of him.

A crowd of about 200 applauded and cheered, chanting "All-lee! All-lee!" as the former champ tossed samples of the creamy peanut butter and crispy rice bar into their midst.

good I had to throw it down. Really, they're good. They are the greatest," said Ali, bidding to become the only fighter in history to win the heavyweight championship three times.

The 2 1/2-ounce bar, made by the Wilbur Chocolate Co. here and marketed by Celebrity Marketing Inc. of Los Angeles, is made of all natural ingredients, including peanuts, rice, milk and salt. It's price is 59 cents and will go on sale in selected major cities Sept. 1.

All joins baseball players such as Reggie Jackson and Henry Aaron who endorse candy bars. But he said it's an honor that never will fall to Spinks, the tough ex-Marine and former Olympic champion who stunned the sports world by whipping Ali six months ago.

"Well, Spinks couldn't have a candy bar because he's too ugly to have his face on a candy wrapper. You have to have nice looks, which I do, and be kind of pretty," said Ali, wearing a yellow warmup suit and black Army boots during a break from training.

"I'm not going to predict the round, but Spinks must fall. He's too ugly to have the title," he said.

All joked with camera buffs, signed autographs and fielded questions from his admirers, tossing out barbs as quickly as he throws jabs.

"You can tell your great grandchildren that I came into this one-hour town and you saw me in person, the greatest of all time," Ali said before heading back to camp.

HARVEY MARTIN leads the charge of the Dallas defense as they bury an unidentified Houston running back in action Saturday night. The Cowboys lost 13-27 and Martin said after the game it would be "embarrassing" to watch the game films. (Related story page 3C)

Lasorda convinced locker room brawl won't sabotage LA

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

Jovial, wisecracking Tom Lasorda admits he hasn't felt so low since June 5 when it appeared that his National League champion Los Angeles Dodgers were about to come apart at the seams.

"I feel like a man whose two sons just got in a fight," the snow-haired Dodgers skipper said after recovering from the shock of a fist-throwing, floor-rolling altercation in the locker room between two of his biggest stars, pitcher Don Sutton and first baseman Steve Garvey.

"Like any father, you wonder what's the best thing to do. Ignore it and hope the two guys come to their senses. Or bring them together and get it all out in the open.

"I am convinced of one thing — it's not going to sabotage our pennant effort. The NL championship and the World Series means too much to all of us. It was simply spontaneous combustion. Nerves get tender this time of year."

THE SCRAP prior to Sunday's game in New York only goes to prove that it can happen in the best of families.

Nobody — not even a team like the Dodgers, held together by Lasorda's benign, paternal leash — is immune to human frailties.

A personality clash, fed by envy, apparently triggered the Sutton-Garvey confrontation, which has been seething for months. Only mature understanding by two classy guys can erase the bitterness and restore harmony in the Los Angeles camp.

The situation is not too dissimilar from that which threw the New York Yankees' clubhouse into turmoil — Manager Billy Martin's resentment of high-salaried outfielder Reggie Jackson, catcher Thurman Munson's jealousy of the favored newcomer, plus other minor frictions.

ONE MUST SCRATCH the surface of the outwardly happy, dedicated Dodgers to find the source of Sunday's eruption. It could be the Biblical root of all evil — money.

Sutton and Garvey, insiders say, have had a cool relationship since Sutton was given the team's first long-term (four-year), million-dollar contract prior to the 1977 season and Garvey came along a few months later to top it with a six-year pact at $333,000 a season.

In addition, Garvey, a pleasant, attractive personality, has projected an All-America image which a small core of his teammates has interpreted as "uppity" and "phony." Some have ostracized him and his pretty wife, Cyndy.

"There's nothing phony about Garvey," said Dodgers publicist Steve Brenner. "He is what he is."

"A hell of a guy," said Joe Reichler, an aide to baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "He has a star quality yet no big-headedness. He is much in demand for commercials and endorsements. He is very cooperative."

IT'S EQUALLY HARD to say anything bad about Sutton, a top-drawer athlete, clever, witty, brassy.

Sutton ruffled Garvey's normally unflappable feathers when he said in an interview that outfielder Reggie Smith was the team's most valuable player but unsung because he lacked Garvey's Madison Avenue image.

When Garvey took umbrage and confronted his critic, the two came to blows. It took 10 players to separate them. Both carried minor wounds into the dugout. But the greatest pain was borne by Lasorda.

"This has been a tough season," the Dodgers' manager said, "but exciting. We fell six games back in June, went ahead and then fell back again in early July."

"I'LL NEVER FORGET that game with the (New York) Mets (June 5). We had an 8-2 lead going into the ninth and lost 9-8. We fall 5 1/2 games behind the (San Francisco) Giants. I was so discouraged I came back to my office and buried my head in my hands. It was my lowest moment. "Davey Lopes came in and said, 'Don't worry, skip. We'll be okay.' Then Ron Cey. Then Billy North. The whole team rallied. That's the way this team is. Nothing's going to throw us."

The dark mood vanished — then as now. In a lightning flash, Lasorda was swapping quips and record book teasers with friends.

"Here's one," he said, "who had the most saves in Yankee Stadium?" "Willy Moore," someone guessed. "Johnny Murphy?" "Joe Page?" "Nope," Lasorda replied. "Billy Graham — July 20, 1957. One hundred thousand souls."

Montana football star sentenced for burglary

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — University of Montana football star Vernon Kelly, who was sentenced Monday to two years probation on charges of burglary and felony theft, has been reinstated to the Grizzlies team.

Head coach Gene Carlson said he and members of his staff made the decision and that it was approved by UM Athletic Director Harley Lewis.

The 20-year-old Kelly, a wide receiver, caught 42 passes last season, a Grizzly single-season record. He transferred to Montana last year from Los Angeles City College.

Following his arrest in May, he was suspended from the team. The sentence was imposed Monday by Missoula County District Court Judge E. Gardner Brownlee. Kelly originally pleaded innocent to both charges but changed his pleas July 31.

Carlson said the decision to reinstate Kelly was based on three considerations.

"The coaches feel they're in the business of helping young people; they sincerely believe Kelly's reinstatement is in the best interests of the team and they have confidence in Kelly living up to the conditions of the probation."

Carlson said Kelly's scholarship will be issued on a quarterly basis and renewed after evaluation of his good behavior and progress in school.

Kelly will take part in first pre-season practice on Wednesday, Carlson said. The Grizzlies opened fall drills Monday.

Muskie and son win golf tourney

KENNEBUNK BEACH, Maine (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edmund Muskie has found a formidable golfing partner, his 17-year-old son Edmund Jr.

The twosome won the annual parent-child tournament at Webhannet Golf Club in Kennebunk Beach, near where the Muskies have a summer home, with a combined net score of 71 on the par-70 course.

The younger Muskie, known as Ned, shot a hole-in-one on the 158-yard, par-3 15th hole to help clinch the victory Sunday.

Beads of sweat cover Muhammad Ali's face at the end of a daily workout as he readies for a rematch for the World Heavyweight Boxing Title with Leon Spinks. Many boxing fans think Ali was not in top form for his last bout with Spinks, but if hard work counts, he will be for the upcoming one on Sept. 15. Rivers, Roy White fined in latest Yankee saga ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP)—Outfielders Mickey Rivers and Roy White of the New York Yankees were fined $250 apiece for reporting late to Sunday night's game with the Seattle Mariners.

The Yankees were supposed to be in uniform by 6 p.m., but White and Rivers didn't arrive in the clubhouse until 8:32. Rivers said they were delayed by traffic — but Yankee Manager Bob Lemon didn't buy the excuse.

"If you're waiting for me to say something I'm not going to," said the mild-mannered Lemon, who has kept tension down in the Yankee clubhouse since replacing Billy Martin a month ago. "It's between you and the players. They were late, and they're getting fined for it. I'm not going to make a big deal of it."

Rivers, the temperamental center fielder, said earlier Sunday that he was unhappy over his money situation. In an interview with Murray Chass, sports editor of the interim New York Daily News, Rivers expressed anger over not receiving extra money beyond his semi-monthly paycheck.

"Don't try and tell me something, then proving it a couple of days and come up with another excuse," Rivers was quoted as saying. "Don't play games with me. I don't like that."

Rivers' irritation showed in his play Saturday night. (When he reported late Sunday, he was scratched from the lineup.) "I didn't feel like going out there. I didn't want to play." Rivers said of his performance Saturday night in the Yankees' 4-2 loss to Seattle.

Ryan's status still questionable

ANAHEIM (AP) — Nolan Ryan's availability to pitch for the California Angels will be determined on a day-to-day basis, the Angels said Monday after a doctor examined Ryan's rib separation.

X-rays determined there was nothing major about the injury that forced Ryan, 41, to leave Sunday's game against Baltimore after seven shutout innings. The Angels won the game 1-0 in 14 innings.

An Angels' spokesman indicated Ryan probably would miss at least one starting assignment. His turn in the rotation comes up Friday at Boston.

The Angels are in a virtual first place tie with Kansas City in the American League West Division going into tonight's games. Both were idle Monday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Increasing numbers of American companies and their shareholders are taking part in a type of program that seems to have appeal for all concerned — the dividend reinvestment plan.

For the companies, faced with a sluggish market for sales of new stock, these plans provide a means of raising capital.

A prime example is American Telephone & Telegraph, the nation's most widely held corporation with close to 3 million shareholders, which reports that it raised $1 billion through its dividend-reinvestment program in 1976-77, and expects to see another $686 million this year.

For the investor, meanwhile, these optional plans typically offer a savings on the usual brokerage commissions. And recently some companies have added an extra feature, allowing the investor to buy stock at a 5 percent discount from the going market price.

Stockholders join such a plan by signing an agreement with the corporation authorizing it to invest all their dividends in additional shares rather than sending them the payouts in cash.

In a good many cases, they can also periodically invest additional money through the plan.

Like most "new ideas," this one has actually been around for a long time. Many mutual funds have offered automatic reinvestment programs for years.

But as Robert Ferris, senior staff executive at the New York firm of Georgetown & Co., which specializes in investor relations, points out, it is only in the last two to five years that the concept has caught on with corporate America.

"We've really just broken the ice so far," Ferris said.

Robert S. Salomon Jr., head of stock research at the investment firm of Salomon Brothers, estimated in a recent report that some 900 companies now have some sort of dividend reinvestment plan. Of these, the firm counted 43 that offer the 5 percent discount — about twice as many as there were a year ago.

Rep. Harold Runnels, D-New Mex., chairman of the subcommittee on special investigations of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, said two days of hearings here were aimed at finding a solution to the surplus crude oil problem.

Solutions could include exchanging or exporting crude oil to Japan, he said.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said the state had a 12 billion-barrel oil reserve but producers were "unable to get those barrels to market because of misguided federal policies."

Brown said pricing policies and Department of Energy entitlements kept the cost of West Coast oil artificially high and discouraged refiners from modifying their equipment to handle the heavy and sulfur-rich West Coast oil.

He said the entitlements were of "craziest, most complicated set of rules" he had encountered.

Rep. Stewart B. McKinney, R-Conn., said the entitlement program was needed to ensure that the East Coast received oil, but he termed the program "rinkydink, trapezoidal and a monstrosity that nobody understands."

McKinney urged that West Coast crude be kept in this country, contrary to what he said were the wishes of the oil industry. "Contrary to their claims, Alaskan North Slope producers have since 1969 been pursuing plans to export Alaskan oil and have hampered, rather than cooperated in, plans to deliver the oil to the lower 48 states."

He asked for a federal energy policy that would realign commercial interests with those of the nation... to ensure that the long-awaited Alaskan oil is used where it is so desperately needed — the domestic market."

The subcommittee's ranking minority member, Rep. Don H. Clausen,

R-Calif., said the problem of surplus oil was temporary because the planned opening of the Sohio pipeline from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex., in three to four years would ease distribution problems.

"The pipeline will effectively relieve the West Coast of its locally unrefinable oil and supply the rest of the country with needed energy," he said.

Gerstner's comments came at an Environmental Protection Agency hearing on proposals to ban the manufacture and use of PCBs, and to prohibit the servicing and replacement of equipment with parts containing PCBs.

PCB is the common name given to polychlorinated biphenyls, which are believed capable of causing cancer, birth defects, and liver, nerve and skin damage to humans.

The most serious problem facing utilities concerns transformers, which sometimes are filled with mineral oil contaminated with small amounts of PCBs.

Subcommittee told Alaska oil should stay in U.S.

By BRUCE ADAMS
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surplus crude oil from Alaska and California should be distributed in the United States rather than exported, a congressional subcommittee was told Monday.

But before the surplus domestic oil can be used here, federal regulations must be eased to encourage oil companies to refine the low-quality crude and the pricing structure must be
