Court to host unusual 'cast'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A millionaire industrialist, a Houston attorney with a flair for courtroom dramatics, a determined prosecutor and a frightened police informant were due in a Fort Worth courtroom again today to resume a sensational bond hearing that began last Tuesday and has uncovered a bizarre murder-for-hire plot allegedly authored by Cullen Davis.

Fort Worth district attorney Tim Curry says his office has "some additional evidence" but "nothing big" to introduce in an attempt to keep Davis in jail without bond.

"We're just about through," he said. "I think we've put on enough evidence. Maybe too much."

Defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes is expected to continue his cross-examination of the state's star witness against Davis, who is accused of plotting the murder of the judge presiding in his four-year-old divorce case.

Visiting District Judge Arthur Tipps of Wichita Falls signed a temporary bond denial order Thursday and recessed the proceedings until this morning. Texas law requires that a decision to deny bond must be made within seven days of a suspect's arrest.

Davis, 44, was arrested Aug. 20 after a meeting with David McCrory, a former employee of a Davis-controlled company who became an FBI informant two weeks ago, claiming Davis had approached him to hire a professional gunman to kill Judge Joe Eidson.

During three days of testimony last week, prosecutors introduced into evidence tape recordings of conversations that allegedly took place between Davis and McCrory after the informant had been wired for sound by FBI agents. A videotape showing Davis and McCrory in and around their cars during one of the alleged discussions was also introduced.

McCrory testified Davis paid him $25,000 in $100 bills after he produced a posed photograph of Eidson in the trunk of a car as "proof" he had carried out Davis' orders.

The witness also testified Davis had a "hit list" that included the names of 15 persons marked for death, including Davis' estranged wife Priscilla, another judge and witnesses who testified against the millionaire at his murder trial in Amarillo last year.

At the time of his arrest Sunday, Davis was free on $325,000 bond on charges stemming from a shooting incident at the Davis mansion in August 1976 that left two dead and two wounded. Davis was charged with two counts of capital murder and two counts of attempted capital murder. He was acquitted of one of the murder charges in Amarillo last November after Texas' longest and costliest murder trial. The other charges are still pending.

School year may receive rainy greeting

Back-to-school weather isn't going to be as clear and sunny as the summer trend of recent weeks.

Rain and cooler temperatures are being forecast in the Permian Basin through Tuesday.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is forecasting partly cloudy weather today, becoming partly cloudy tonight with a chance of showers and thunderstorms through Tuesday.

There's a 30 percent chance of rain today and tonight and a 40 percent chance of rain Tuesday, according to the weatherman.

Showers fell on the area Sunday and accumulated to .14 inch of rain during that period, according to the National

Dealey Plaza claims revealed

DALLAS (AP) — Five persons claim they met men who identified themselves as Secret Service agents in Dealey Plaza just before the assassination of President John Kennedy, though the Warren Commission claims none of the 28 agents protecting Kennedy were on foot at that time.

In a copyright story in Sunday editions, the Dallas Morning News said all but one of the encounters were in the parking lot of the Texas School Book Depository, from which the commission concluded Lee Harvey Oswald alone fired on the motorcade.

Gordon L. Arnold said he was moving toward a railroad bridge over the nearby triple underpass to shoot movies of the motorcade when he was approached by a man who flashed a badge and claimed to be a Secret Service agent.

After taking up a position on the grassy knoll adjacent to the depository, Arnold said he "felt" a shot come from behind him.

"I had just gotten out of basic training," he said. "In my mind live ammunition was being fired. It was being fired over my head. I hit the dirt."

He said the first two shots came from behind a fence behind the knoll.

During a re-enactment for acoustic analysis recently, the Assassinations Committee ordered rifles and pistols shot from that position as well as the depository.

Arnold said he turned his film over to a policeman but never reported the story because "I heard after that there were a lot of people making claims about pictures and stuff and they were dying sort of peculiarly."

Two Dallas policemen were assigned to guard the railroad bridge, keeping unauthorized persons off the structure, but were not assisted by federal agents, according to the Warren Report.

"If there was one (Secret Service agent) up there, we didn't know it," said officer James C. White. "He wasn't on that bridge. I know that."

But a railroad signal supervisor, who aided the officers in identifying railroad personnel on the bridge, said he thought "a plainclothes detective or FBI agent or something like that" was helping the officers guard the bridge.

About 9:30 or 10 a.m., Julius Hardie of Dallas was driving a truck on Commerce Street when he noticed three men on the bridge.

"I looked over on the railroad bridge and I saw three men," Hardie told The News. "And I thought I saw two of them carrying guns, long guns. I glanced to my left to check for traffic and then looked back, because even in Texas it's unusual to see people carrying long guns."

"Now I can't tell you whether it was rifles, shotguns or what. But two of them had long guns."

Minutes after Arnold's encounter with the "agent" on his way to the bridge, Mrs. Jean Hill witnessed the assassination from a few feet away from the presidential limousine.

She saw a man dashing into the parking lot adjacent to the depository before other stunned spectators began to rush up the knoll past Ar-old, she said.

She ran after the man and was met in the parking lot by a "tall and slender" man in a business suit who "whipped out" identification claiming he was a Secret Service agent.

Mrs. Hill said

"I thought he was trying to get

Carter to resume energy fight

By MAUREEN SANTINI

GRAND TETON NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — President Carter, determined to win the congressional fight over his embattled energy legislation, is ending his vacation two days early and returning to Washington on Wednesday.

White House press secretary Jody Powell announced Sunday that Carter would have two days from his two-week western holiday to work on "some very crucial domestic matters that are before Congress."

Heading the list is delicate natural gas compromise legislation that is the centerpiece of Carter's energy plan.

Powell called the fight over the measure — in serious trouble on Capitol Hill — "as difficult as any that we have faced in Congress." He vowed,

"We don't intend to lose."

But he said the administration also is concerned about a Sept. 7 House vote on overriding Carter's Aug. 17 veto of a $37 billion defense appropriation bill.

Powell said the administration expects to sustain the veto and then help rewrite the bill "to reflect the president's views more completely than before."

Carter objects to the bill's provision of $2 billion for a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. He maintains that Congress cut too much money from other defense areas to authorize the carrier.

As Carter was fishing for trout, Powell told reporters there was no point in continuing the vacation if the president had to spend "all day and a good portion of the night working on these domestic concerns."

But, when asked if Carter has spent most of his time since he arrived here Thursday working, Powell replied, "No. He hasn't been doing that. That is the whole point. We have decided — or the president decided — he wants to go back."

Although the president will find Congress out of town when he returns, Powell said Carter will be busy all next week with a Mideast summit at Camp David, Md., and needed Thursday and Friday to work on domestic legislation that Congress will consider shortly after it returns from a Labor Day recess Sept. 6.

The three-way summit among Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat begins Sept. 5 and will last indefinitely in an effort to find a formula for peace in that region.

"The president will be talking by telephone and perhaps meeting personally with members of the Congress on these (domestic) matters, particularly energy," Powell said.

Carter's natural gas legislation became endangered when a group of Democrats and Republicans, led by Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., withdrew support for the compromise measure.

The president said Friday he expects a show-down vote on the bill soon after Sept. 11.

The measure to lift federal price controls from newly discovered natural gas by 1985 is opposed by some liberals who claim it would drive up gas bills and by conservatives from natural gas-producing states who want immediate deregulation.

Surrender seems only postal strike alternative

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a nationwide mail strike possible at midnight tonight, the Postal Service and its unions are hardened into positions that appear to make a surrender by one side the only alternative to a strike.

Postmaster General William F. Bolger repeated on national television Sunday that he would not return to the bargaining table for further talks with his unions.

Meanwhile, one union president is mandated by his members to call a strike by midnight tonight if there is no resumption of bargaining. Another union president, under similar mandate, has a midnight Wednesday deadline.

"We have completed our negotiations as far as I'm concerned. I still am not going back to the bargaining table," Bolger said.

He was interviewed on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Bolger continued to press for the processes provided by law for instances where union members, as they have in this case, refuse to accept a tentative agreement. Those processes are fact-finding under the supervision of federal mediators and, if a settlement is still not reached, binding arbitration.

The unions, however, have rejected this course, saying the choice for Bolger is to renegotiate or face a strike.

Despite the seemingly dug-in positions on both sides, Bolger continued to predict there would be no strike. "I think most of the postal employees are law-abiding people. They will certainly carry out the intent of the law, and not strike, in my opinion," he said.

There was no sign Sunday of any give in the union positions. Union leaders met on and off with federal mediators and for a time informally with Bolger. A source close to the situation said, "Of substance, nothing really has changed."

Congress faces key votes on return

By CARL C. CRAFT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, in recess through Labor Day, will return Sept. 6 for a showdown on a vetoed defense bill, key votes on the budget and taxes, and a final test on the natural gas compromise.

Here is the status of major legislation:

DEFENSE

President Carter's first big veto confrontation with Congress is expected Sept. 7 when the House decides whether to uphold or override his apparently unprecedented rejection of a $37 billion defense authorization bill.

In casting the fifth veto of his administration on Aug. 17, Carter concentrated his attack on the bill's authorization of $2 billion for a new nuclear-powered aircraft carrier. White House officials launched a drive last week to sustain the veto.

Carter's rejection of the weapons authorization measure, which sets spending limits for later legislation that actually appropriates funds, brought a halt to Senate committee work on the House-passed record general $119 billion defense spending bill.

BUDGET

Senate action is set Sept. 6 on binding budget figures for federal government spending programs and tax collections in fiscal 1979, the budget year which begins Oct. 1.

The Senate Budget Committee proposes running a $42.3 billion deficit, with spending of $489.5 billion and tax revenue at $447.2 billion. The House voted for a deficit of $39.8 billion with spending at $489.8 billion and revenue at $450 billion.

The Carter administration's latest detailed budget recommendation proposes a $48.5 billion deficit, but the president's budget director is suggesting a figure closer to $43.5 billion.

TAXES

The Senate Finance Committee is working on its version of a House-passed $16.3 billion federal income tax reduction bill, and Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., the panel's chairman, is expected to press for deeper tax cuts.

Congressional tax experts figure that major parts of the House-approved measure would result, for example, in an income tax cut of $36 for a typical family of four with an annual $8,000 income, or a 30 percent reduction of such a family's taxes under current law.

In all, the bill would grant about $10.5 billion in general tax reductions for individuals plus a $1.8 billion cut for those with capital gains, profits from sale of real estate and stocks. The remainder of the $16.3 billion package would go to businesses.

ENERGY

With administration forces pressing for final approval after a year of work, a Senate vote is likely next month on the congressional compromise natural gas pricing bill, a central feature of Carter's energy package.

The measure, to lift federal price controls from newly found natural gas in 1985, is opposed by some liberals who claim it would drive up gas bills and by conservatives from gas-producing states who are demanding immediate deregulation.

Meantime, a House-approved congressional compromise bill revamping rules for offshore oil and natural gas drilling was passed last week by the Senate and sent to Carter.

seven years to vote on ratification of a proposed constitutional amendment that would give the more than 700,000 residents of the District of Columbia full voting representation in Congress.

The amendment was presented to the states last week when the Senate, with one vote to spare, approved the House-passed measure. If ratified by 38 of the 50 state legislatures, the amendment would expand the Senate by two members and would give the district at least one House seat.

REORGANIZATION

Carter-advocated legislation to streamline the federal civil-service personnel system was approved last week by the Senate and delivered to the House where a similar measure is stalled.

The Senate-passed bill is aimed at making it easier to fire government employees deemed incompetent while increasing protection for federal workers blowing the whistle on waste in government.

Carter calls it "the centerpiece of government reorganization during my term in office."

JOBS

The Senate voted last week to authorize a four-year continuation of multibillion-dollar federal jobs programs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). Current programs are set to expire at the end of next month.

The senators decided to put more emphasis on jobs and training for hardcore jobless, and to include features designed to prevent abuse and fraud.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

State legislatures have men, were submitted along with the Bill of Rights. One, withdrawing citizenship and exiling people who accepted foreign titles, was submitted in 1811, seven years after the last previous amendment had been ratified and 50 years before another one was proposed.

In 1861, Congress submitted an amendment designed to prevent the abolition of slavery, but it was not ratified. The next amendment, submitted in 1865, abolished slavery. The last amendment which didn't make it was submitted in 1924 and would have prohibited child labor.

House action on a similar measure had been postponed earlier this month by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who said big city mayors were doing a poor job of arguing their case in lobbying involving this bill.

$1 COIN

Legislation providing for minting a small new $1 coin bearing the profile of Susan B. Anthony, the pioneer crusader for women's rights, was passed by the Senate last week and sent to the House. She would become the first American woman to appear on a coin.

The Treasury estimates it can save $17 million annually by having such a coin to replace worn-out paper dollar bills.

CONSUMERS

Carter signed legislation last week creating a consumer cooperative bank. It will be funded with $300 million and is authorized to borrow in private money markets. Consumer advocate Ralph Nader says it will boost the economic power of consumers.

EDUCATION

Last week, the Senate passed a bill to extend for five years federal programs to aid public elementary and secondary schools. The bill, which would provide more than $10 billion annually for the programs, was sent to a compromise-seeking conference with the House, where a similar bill was approved last month.

The legislation contains a Carter-supported plan for a so-called basic skills education in reading, writing and arithmetic. Carter asked Congress in February to provide such aid.

For first time since 1791, two amendments up for approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — For one of the few times since the ratification of the Bill of Rights in 1791, state legislatures are being asked to consider two constitutional amendments at once.

With the Equal Rights Amendment still before state lawmakers for ratification, Congress last week submitted the additional question of full congressional representation for Washington, D.C.

Except for the Bill of Rights, which makes up the first 10 amendments to the Constitution and was submitted as a single package, amendments that have been adopted have almost always been considered one at a time.

The only ones that have overlapped were the 16th amendment, authorizing the federal income tax, and the 17th amendment, providing for the direct election of senators. Senators were chosen by state legislatures before then.

The direct election amendment cleared Congress and was submitted to the legislatures on May 13, 1912. It was not until Feb. 25, 1913, that the income tax amendment was ratified.

The last amendment to the constitution, lowering the voting age to 18, was ratified on July 5, 1971. The Equal Rights Amendment was submitted to the states by Congress on March 22, 1972.

The ERA, barring discrimination based on sex, has until March 22 to be ratified by the necessary 38 states, or three-fourths of those in the Union. Thirty-five have ratified, but four have voted to reverse their action. In one state, Kentucky, the reversal vote was vetoed. The Justice Department says it would be up to Congress to decide whether the reversals are valid.

A resolution extending the deadline until June 30, 1982, has passed the House and is awaiting action in the Senate, where it faces a filibuster.

The District of Columbia voting representation amendment would entitle the district's 700,000 residents to two senators and the number of representatives they would have if the district were a state. This would probably be one.

Backers of the amendment are hoping that the California legislature will become the first to ratify it this week. They are aiming for ratification by 38 states in time for the 1980 elections.

Backers of both the ERA and the D.C. voting amendment were uncertain how having both of them up at the same time will affect their chances.

Five amendments, none of them with any time limit for ratification, have failed to make it. Two, regarding election and pay of congressmen, were submitted along with the Bill of Rights. One, withdrawing citizenship and exiling people who accepted foreign titles, was submitted in 1811, seven years after the last previous amendment had been ratified and 50 years before another one was proposed.

In 1861, Congress submitted an amendment designed to prevent the abolition of slavery, but it was not ratified. The next amendment, submitted in 1865, abolished slavery. The last amendment which didn't make it was submitted in 1924 and would have prohibited child labor.

Case of hateful spy

Philip Agee, CIA renegade, long ago forfeited any claim to the role of legitimate critic of either his former employer or his country.

A self-professed "revolutionary socialist," Agee has converted his loathing for the American intelligence community and its mission into a crusade to expose the identity of agents and generally discredit the agency at every opportunity.

Since resigning from the Central Intelligence Agency in 1969, Agee has published a book which purported to disclose the identities of almost 250 persons he described as agency officers, foreign agents and informers. He reportedly is preparing a second book which, he says, will include the names of additional hundreds of CIA and National Security Agency personnel.

Agee also is involved in the publication of a newsletter, the chief purpose of which is to undermine American intelligence-gathering efforts by telling CIA secrets.

At the recent Communist-sponsored World Festival of Youth and Students in Havana, Agee announced his intention of publicly identifying as many CIA operatives stationed outside the United States as possible.

The question is what can or should the United States government do about Philip Agee?

Last year, the Justice Department announced it could find no grounds for prosecuting Agee under the Espionage Act for his disclosure of CIA secrets. It could, presumably, file appropriate civil charges against Agee for breach of contract in that he violated the employee secrecy oath he signed when he joined the CIA.

But for Agee and others like him, whose disclosures of classified information are clearly intended to harm the national interest, something stronger is needed.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas has the right idea. He favors passage of legislation which would make unauthorized disclosure of the identity of a CIA agent a federal crime. If the Espionage Act cannot prevent or punish the sort of destructive activity Agee is guilty of, Congress certainly ought to enact legislation which can.

Armed with such a law, and further evidence of Agee's continued subversive activity, the Justice Department could seek his indictment and extradition should he fail to return to the United States.

Yes, it very definitely is time to take action to curb the subversive activities of Philip Agee and his kind.

Plan is overruled

The veto by the Israeli cabinet of a plan to establish five more settlements in the occupied Jordan Valley is consistent with the peace goals of a Mideast summit meeting at Camp David in a few days.

Members of Israel's Ministerial Committee for Defense admittedly were embarrassed when the settlement issue surfaced recently. The decision had been made in June before President Carter invited Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to the Sept. 5 talks.

The American view of the settlements is one of disapproval. The defense aspects of the communities might be accepted as temporary. The agricultural activities sponsored by the World Zionist Organization, however, have the connotation of permanence.

The cabinet should disavow hints that the settlement plans may be reactivated following the summit meeting.

The idea of permanent occupation of areas at the center of contention between Israel and its Arab adversaries violates the spirit in which the Camp David talks were scheduled.

INSIDE REPORT:

Design of Carter's Mideast plan comes into focus

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Behind the careful stroking of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin the past few weeks, President Carter is moving toward a Camp David breakthrough to Mideast peace that belies the caveats from U.S. officials, including Jimmy Carter.

This is the essence of the Carter plan, now shaping up behind closed doors in Washington: acceptance of new raw outlines of Begin's own plan for self-autonomy by West Bank Palestinians as the foundation for assured Arab sovereignty after five years.

Private signals have been sent to Mr. Carter by the Israeli government almost, but not quite, spelling this out. Publicly, Begin opened the door to future Arab sovereignty July 24 when Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan committed Israel to discuss the sovereignty question at the end of five years.

Begin himself will not commit Israel to Arab sovereignty over the area, but his private talks with American Jewish leaders are pointed: start with my five-year self-rule plan; when it ends, I will no longer be prime minister; the momentum of successful self-rule can only lead to full Arab sovereignty, probably in a federation with Jordan.

It is here that the design of Mr. Carter's plan comes into focus. The U.S., not Israel, will act as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's guarantor for Arab sovereignty following the five years of local self-rule; the U.S. will act as Israel's guarantor for West Bank security safeguards that Sadat himself agrees must extend far beyond the five years of self-rule.

This Carter plan makes a major concession to Israel by leaving out the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO). It requires a major concession from Israel by curtailing inflammatory Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

Point 20 in Begin's Dec. 28 self-rule proposals demanded virtually unlimited new settlements during the five years. But highly placed figures in the right wing of Begin's government feared that new settlements would be forbidden or sharply curtailed by the Camp David summit.

Consequently, on Aug. 13, they leaked a secret Israeli government plan for five immediate new settlements in an effort to engineer a preemptive decision. Instead, within hours after the leak, the Begin cabinet ordered the settlements "postponed."

Throughout this intergal maneuvering in Jerusalem, the Carter administration was relatively dispassionate. That reflected the president's soft treatment of Begin, a key component of preparations for Camp David.

Until recently, any question about Israeli settlements caused a small earthquake in the White House. Settlements, according to the president and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, were "illegal" and "an obstacle to peace." Yet, when Mr. Carter was asked about the five new settlements on Aug. 13, he replied quietly: "Well, I wish they wouldn't create any more settlements." Whatever Vance's real reaction to five new settlements, he sent Begin a courteous, low-key message asking only that they be "reconsidered" in view of the Camp David summit.

When Vance testified behind closed doors to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last week, he strongly emphasized this fact: whatever happens at Camp David or after, the Carter administration would never, never use military or economic aid to pressure Israel.

Soft-stroking Begin is part of the Carter plan to obtain from him absolutely necessary settlements concessions at Camp David or later, after Camp David has set the guidelines for new negotiations between Israel and Egypt.

The Carter administration has come full circle in its psychological handling of Begin. It began with kid-glove treatment when Begin and his hard-line Likud coalition took power in the summer of 1977.

After Sadat's memorable trip to Jerusalem, Mr. Carter was increasingly tough toward Begin. Some Carter officials even explored ways of moving Begin out of the premiership in favor of a more flexible politician. That questionable tactic not only failed; it consolidated Begin's political power in Israel and threatened a break between the U.S. and Israel.

Today, with new reasons to believe that Begin will come to Camp David Sept. 5 in a mood to negotiate, Mr. Carter's soft-stroking is designed to enhance that mood. He even took the trouble to send Begin a birthday telegram for his 65th birthday Aug. 16.

Not in 30 years has there been so real a prospect for breaking the Arab-Israeli deadlock. Wisely, the president is playing it down. But if — as now seems probable — the summit pays off, credit will go to Mr. Carter himself at a time when his presidency desperately needs a lift.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

The $100,000 per-penny puzzle

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — A penny saved could be $100,000 earned, given the right time and place — and the right penny.

The right time was late 1973, the place was Capitol Hill and the penny was an aluminum model proposed as a means of easing the copper shortage that had developed that year.

Sixteen of the specially minted coins were handed out to members of the House and Senate banking committees by then-U.S. Mint Director Mary Brooks. For a number of reasons — opposition from vending machine companies, aesthetic objections to the flimsy coins and ultimately the evaporation of the copper shortage — the aluminum penny proposal was turned down.

But when Brooks asked for the sample pennies back, only two were returned. We found out about the missing 14 pennies three years ago, and suggested that some distinguished members of Congress may have purloined the rare prototypes. After we broke the story, the FBI was called in to investigate.

According to Justice Department documents, the G-men could account for only two of the coins, claiming a recovery value of $50,000 for the pair. With that, FBI officials closed the case.

The reason for sweeping the Pilfered Pennies Puzzle under the rug, of course, was Mint officials' reluctance to risk offending congressional poobahs who oversee their agency — and who might prove to have pinched one or two of the valuable coins. So great was the strain on Brooks, in fact, that it helped send her to the hospital with nervous exhaustion.

Meanwhile, the numismatic world buzzed with speculation on the elusive pennies' whereabouts, with experts placing the value of the coins at astronomical figures. When the FBI closed its files with 12 of the coins still missing, the coin pros appraised the remaining pennies at five-figure values.

Recently, however, our associates Les Whitten and Jack Mitchell did some digging and discovered that four more of the rare coins had been accounted for, leaving only eight as potential prizes for wealthy collectors.

Informed of this, one knowledgeable coin dealer informed us that just one of the aluminum pennies could command as much as $100,000 if a transaction could be arranged.

Here's how the six recovered pennies turned up:

One was quietly returned to the Mint in July, 1975 by House banking committee staffer Orman Fink. "It's quite simple," he explained. "Brooks was passing out samples and I got one. The first time she asked me to return it, I did ... I wasn't 'sticky-fingered,' as you've reported in the past."

Two more were recovered that same year from the office of Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. A former staff

CHARLEY REESE

Price willing to pay is real test of commitment

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

The real test of a person's commitment to anything is the price he or she is willing to pay for it.

To use the simplest example, you can measure a prisoner of war's honor by the amount of torture and abuse he is willing to endure in order to preserve it.

It is easy to say you are loyal to your country when saying it costs you nothing but the quart or so of air necessary to vibrate your vocal cords.

It is different when saying it means you will be tortured, beaten, deprived of food and sleep, threatened with death, and made to suffer other indignities. The man who keeps faith with his country in those circumstances when just a few dishonorable words will buy him an end to pain has earned the respect and admiration of all decent people.

That is why I so revere the American POWs and so despise and loathe those miserable creatures like Jane Fonda who praised and aided their tormentors. That Fonda remains a celebrity through the patronage and tolerance of the American people is a national disgrace.

But I pick this scab only to induce you to think about the subject of beliefs in general. Just what do you believe? What price would you pay to keep faith with those beliefs?

For awhile it was a fad for some people to talk of discovering "where they are." Well, one way to do that is to sit down and list your beliefs and think about what you would be willing to sacrifice to maintain them.

There are some Americans today who have no more backbone than a jelly fish. When capable people tell me, for example, that they will not run for public office because they are unwilling to endure public criticism, I can't but think that if you put a gun to their heads, they would renounce God, family and country. After all, a bullet stings worse than an insult.

The kernel in this nut is the answer to the question: what do you value more than your life and your comfort? If the answer is, "Nothing," then you join the long dirty line of cowards and opportunists who have polluted every society in which they have been present.

At the moment, though, we are lucky. Circumstances are such that we can avoid this question. No one is putting a gun to our heads. We can be Christians in a nation where Christianity is the faith of the majority or Jews in a land where anti-Semitism is not only not official policy by unfashionable.

We can pursue our own brand of happiness with little thought for our freedom because there is no immediate, easily recognized threat to it. Like the grasshopper, we can play our fiddles while the summer sun shines.

But there is no advantage to deluding ourselves. Look at the sky. The sun is already sinking. Totalitarianism is sliding over the earth like the shadow of the moon during an eclipse. People are dying and suffering in prison in every time zone of their beliefs.

Listen and you can hear them. The single shots of the executioners — the echoes of steel doors slamming shut. For believing people are dying in Eastern Europe, Russia, China, Vietnam, Cambodia, Africa, the Middle East, and Latin America.

It is only a matter of time before the shadow reaches us and then we, too, must answer the questions: what do we believe and what price are we willing to pay?

There will be no sanctuary, no hiding place, no exemptions. Events will divide us, not according to wealth and influence, but according to beliefs and courage. Fate will draw the line and we will have no option but to choose the side on which we will stand.

Now is the time to begin thinking about the answers lest events catch us unprepared. I have no idea what the outcome will be, whether the shadow will advance or retreat. Most of us will probably never know.

The dead never know whether they died in victory or defeat, only whether they died honorably or dishonorably.

ROBED KU KLUX KLANSMEN watch from sidewalk Saturday as black demonstrators march through Okolona to demand increased minority hiring. (AP Laserphoto)

Racial turmoil compromises 'New South' image

By DAVID CRARY

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Racial tension is simmering in three Mississippi towns, with the Ku Klux Klan holding ever more strident rallies in reaction to well-organized black boycotts of white merchants.

This weekend, 12 pickets in a boycott-connected march were arrested, including four Roman Catholic nuns. At a Klan gathering, four Klansmen were emboldened to strip off their hoods and reveal themselves as a businessman and three local police officers.

"There's no such thing as the New South," says Alfred "Skip" Robinson, a contractor and veteran civil rights leader who heads the United League of Mississippi. "There's more racism in Mississippi in 1978 than there was in 1962."

Indeed, the situation is strangely reminiscent of Mississippi's racial troubles in the 1960s.

A boycott of white-owned businesses in Tupelo and Okolona, spearheaded by the United League and punctuated by weekly League marches and occasional Klan counter-rallies, has spawned arrests and tense confrontations.

The latest arrests came in Lexington, a town of 2,700 people about 150 miles from Tupelo in the central part of the state, where other groups are leading the boycott, also against white-owned stores.

The protests, which began in February, stem from the Tupelo police department's refusal to dismiss two captains who were held responsible by a federal judge for beating a black inmate.

The officers were demoted and transferred to the fire department. They eventually resigned, but by that time demands for their ouster had coupled with broader economic demands and the boycott began.

Lexington's boycott, also by blacks upset over alleged police brutality and insufficient minority hiring, is in its third month.

On Saturday, police claimed the marching pickets were blocking pedestrians on the sidewalks and charged 10 people, including the nuns, with disorderly conduct. Two men were charged with threatening an officer and assaulting an officer.

The nuns, members of a Franciscan order that has done social work in the black community and actively supports the boycott, have been sharply criticized by some residents.

The nuns said last week that men parked in cars outside their house had insulted them and eggs had been thrown at their car. The harassment prompted a rare news conference by the Rev. Joseph Brunini, bishop of the Diocese of Jackson.

The Klan has reacted to the new black activity with increased action of its own. Klansmen have not appeared in Lexington, but in Okolona Saturday, some three dozen robed Klansmen watched silently from behind a row of helmeted police as about 300 blacks marched downtown to demand more public and private sector jobs.

Later that night, the Klansmen reassembled for a rally about 20 miles away in Tupelo, a city of 25,000 residents whose businesses have been boycotted for six months.

About 70 Klansmen were joined at the rally by some 200 sympathizers.

The grand titan of the Tupelo chapter unmasked himself to reveal he was local businessman Bill Howard, who had remained hooded at all previous public appearances and used an assumed name.

Health policy at top of governors' program

BOSTON (AP) — The country's governors are vowing to work together on a 50-state approach to the economic distress now sparking the taxpayers' revolt but admit they cannot agree on a national health policy.

The quest for a national health policy was at the top of the program today for the National Governors' Association annual meeting, with Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as the featured speaker.

Kennedy is one of the chief congressional advocates of a strong national health program and has attacked a plan proposed by President Carter as inadequate.

In an opening news conference Sunday, Gov. William Milliken of Michigan, chairman of the group, and host Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts agreed there was no agreement among the governors either.

Dukakis said there is "clearly a division of opinion within the association" on health care and that is why a major portion of the agenda was given to the issue.

"It is very true that we have not been able to reach general agreement across the whole association," Milliken said, "and I strongly suspect that we will not reach that at least until after the elections, until there are a number of new governors and we have had an updating on the problem across the country."

The governors have been debating the issue for years, and there is felt to be a majority in support of comprehensive national health care. However, it takes a two-thirds vote to get a policy resolution passed by the association and a bipartisan bloc of political and fiscal conservatives has been able to prevent an agreement.

A resolution endorsing a universal coverage health care program was defeated at the governors' winter meeting in Washington early this year. Milliken said it would be the main topic of the next winter meeting in February, however.

The governors were more positive on the taxpayer revolt, saying each state has individual problems but there is a common concern.

"I don't think any governor takes the issue of growing property taxes and the inequity of those taxes lightly," Milliken said.

"What we are attempting to do is put together a comprehensive 50-state approach on the problem of economic and community distress," Dukakis said.

"The governors are united on one thing, and that is we think the states can play a much more effective role in this and we can also help relieve the Congress and the federal establishment of an awful lot of wasted money if the states are increasingly looked to in this federal system as the key element in a national distressed communities and development policy."

Tropical storm may be starting

MIAMI (AP) — Satellite pictures indicate the tropical depression in the Gulf of Mexico is becoming better organized, and the National Hurricane Center says it could grow into a tropical storm before landfall.

Forecasters expected the disturbance to reach the upper Texas coast today around midday. A few squalls accompanying increasing showers were expected to hit the Texas and Louisiana coasts early today.

At 5 a.m. CDT today, the hurricane center in Miami estimated the storm about 100 miles south of Galveston, Texas, moving toward the north northwest at about 10 mph. The storm's highest sustained winds were estimated at 35 mph with gusts in squalls of 45 mph.

Forecasters said tides along the upper Texas and southwest Louisiana coasts would run two to four feet above normal. The center said heavy rains might produce flash flooding.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some people are able to produce their own pain-killers — natural narcotics — after being given a useless solution of sugar known as a placebo, medical researchers said today.

That conclusion points toward dramatic new directions in the study and control of pain and may account for maladies and cures often dismissed as being "all in your mind."

Doctors at the University of California-San Francisco said their research shows that as many as one-third of all patients can combat pain by unconsciously ordering the brain to produce endorphin, a chemical similar to morphine.

Results of the study were to be outlined in Montreal today during the Second World Congress on Pain.

Dr. Howard Fields said in a telephone interview that the experiment indicates that endorphins can explain a long-standing medical puzzle: why patients are frequently helped by taking a placebo.

A placebo is a sugar or saline solution that does absolutely nothing. Yet, Fields said, decades of research prove that about one-third of all patients respond to them.

The placebo effect traditionally has been written off as a purely psychological reaction. Fields said the new study proves otherwise.

"Something the patient has in his body makes the placebo work," he said. "The pain is real. And the fact that you get relief (from a placebo) depends on your expectation of getting relief. So to that extent, it may be psychological. But the pain suppression is real."

Fields said a better understanding of the endorphin-triggering mechanism might one day lead to drug-free treatment for people suffering from severe burns, progressive diseases or other maladies.

"But at this point, we don't know why it works in some people and not in others," Field said.

The trick would be to teach patients how to pull the endorphin trigger themselves.

Your toilet can leak more than 1,000 gallons of water a month if your toilet tank ball doesn't seat properly. The annoying noises are a nuisance and the wasted water a real expense.

Water Master's new FLAPPER Tank Ball stops these problems. Thanks to the exclusive "Thrust-Back" pyramid, FLAPPER seats perfectly — stops the flow of water after every flushing.

"Last year, using lignite coal saved Texas Electric's customers $48 million. It's a step in the right direction."

"Prior to 1972, Texas Electric made all your electricity by burning natural gas and oil. By last year, lignite coal had replaced gas as boiler fuel for about a third of this. In dollars and cents, here's what that meant to you, our customers:

The cost of lignite burned in 1977 was about $20.5 million. Had that same amount of electricity been generated using natural gas at then-current market prices, it would have cost $107.7 million. That's $87.2 million more than the lignite cost!

Even after deducting the annual cost of the new lignite plants, Texas Electric saved its customers $48.4 million last year because of the switch to lignite.

And that's just the beginning. As gas prices continue to rise, Texas Electric plans to become less and less dependent on this increasingly scarce fuel. By 1983, lignite coal and nuclear-fueled plants are scheduled to provide more than half of our customers' electricity.

It gets harder all the time to provide dependable, economical electricity. But this has always been Texas Electric's goal. And it always will be."

Texas Electric engineer Damon Holditch: "We burn 55 pounds of lignite to generate the electricity to run a three-ton air conditioner for a day."

Choosing the lead helpful to partner

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

An expert defender leads a low card to indicate a real interest in the suit, but a high or middling card to suggest a suit of no great merit. The distinction was the key to the defense to the Olympic Open Pair Championship in New Orleans a few weeks ago.

New York expert Edgar Kaplan led the eight to indicate no great interest in hearts. Declarer, Brazilian expert Gabriel Chagas, took the king of hearts and led dummy's singleton diamond. West took the ace of diamonds and switched to the three of spades. This low card suggested that he was leading from something rather than from nothing. Therefore East (Philadelphia expert Norman Kay) resisted the temptation to cash both of the top spades before the mice got them.

RETURNS SIX

Instead, East took the king of spades and returned the six of spades. West took the queen and returned a spade, allowing Kay to defeat the contract with the ace and nine.

At rubber bridge Chagas would have taken his six clubs and three hearts before trying for a diamond trick. In a pair tournament, however, playing safe may win a hand but never wins a championship.

Remember to take risks if you wake up some day and find yourself competing in the Olympics.

DAILY QUESTION

After a pass by dealer you are next, holding: S 10 8 5 2; H K 6; D 3; C A K Q 9 5 4. What do you say?

ANSWER: Using standard methods, bid one club. The hand, is much too strong for a shutout bid of three clubs. In the recent Bridge Olympics some players, using a different bidding method, opened with three clubs on this hand.

Farming tough business to start

EDITOR'S NOTE — Starting out in any profession can be difficult and farming is no exception. If you go into it, you can expect to lose money for a while, as a young Iowa couple is finding out.

By STEVE DAUGHERTY
Associated Press Writer

MASSONVILLE, Iowa (AP) — Would you borrow $30,000 and work all year without wages knowing you would probably lose about $4,000 anyway.

That's exactly what Homer Showman, 25, and his wife Gail, 24, did during their first full year of farming. They are working on their second year and expect to show a small profit, not counting wages.

They have been living on what Gail makes as a school teacher. "If it weren't for her salary we wouldn't be farming today," Showman says. "We have to have that off the farm income."

"It was a hard year," he adds "full of new experiences and things you had to learn. Just a different situation altogether than what we were used to."

The couple rented the 193-acre farm in March, 1977, and has experienced more bad luck than good.

Showman grew 20 acres of soybeans on contract at $7.05 per bushel, a nice price with the market below $5 a bushel because of the large nationwide harvest. But he had to plant the crop twice, in June then again in July, when rain didn't come.

Because of old equipment, his potentially Grade A milk must be sold as cheaper Grade B. And one of the worst winters in history left their country road closed most of the time.

The land is poorly tilled and the wet ground left Showman behind many neighbors in spring fieldwork.

Three dilapidated outbuildings are "cramped full of livestock and machinery. There is no grain storage facility. The small, old, two-story, frame house is furnished with family heirlooms."

Such struggles are typical of farming in general. But a lack of ready cash is the biggest problem for young farmers trying to get started without access to family land.

Statistics compiled by the Iowa Farm Bureau show the average farmer in the state is nearly 50 years old; farms 266 acres; nets about $7,600 a year; has $459,000 invested in land, machinery, buildings, crops and livestock.

Showman says his total expenses last year were almost $20,000. Gail's teaching salary plus farm receipts brought in about $16,000.

"If you include my labor then, of course, we'd be losing a lot of money," he says.

Showman is a 1975 graduate of Iowa State University with a degree in farm operations and animal science. After graduation, he worked briefly as a state conservation commission officer, then for two different cattle farmers. The commission job convinced Showman he wanted nothing to do with bureaucracy and the cattle job showed him how to lose money gracefully.

When it's not a family farm, he says, "You'd just better plan on losing money that first year."

Besides the beans, Showman planted 80 acres of corn and 15 acres of oats to feed his livestock. He has 21 cows and tries to keep 17 giving milk at all times.

The dairy operation is far from modern. There is a floor strewn with hay and a plastic pipe running along the ceiling, no raised concrete floor to prevent the backbreaking process of using the milkers.

"The best money I've spent on my dairy operation," said Showman of the pipe, which carries the milk to a holding tank.

Showman's hog operation — 20 sows — lacks the polish of a fair exhibit. To get to his farrowing house, you have to climb through a mud lot over a pile of reed. Inside, there are no wooden or concrete slatted floors.

But it is clean and warm, and each pig crop has been sold on grade and yield to Rath Packing Co. at Waterloo, making an average of about $2 per hundredweight above market price.

Showman discusses his problems frankly.

"First of all," he says, "we don't run enough acres to make living off this farm and the way we're doing it right now. If we owned the land and were getting every dollar out of it, we probably could. But we don't own the land."

"I feel sometimes you could just throw the whole thing in a bucket and bury it. But that's the way with everything."

Flood decision due soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision on what action to take against Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., could come as early as this week, sources close to the investigation say.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said the government has nearly completed the grand jury probe of allegations that Flood accepted bribes and obstructed justice.

The New York Times News Service reported that the government was prepared to seek an indictment this week but delayed action pending meetings with Flood's attorney, Axel H. Klei-boemer. The Justice Department and Klei-boemer declined comment on the investigation.

Stephen Elko, a former aide to the veteran congressman, has alleged that Flood took more than $100,000 in payoffs. Flood, 74, has denied any wrongdoing.

Elko is serving a three-year prison term after being found guilty last year of accepting $25,000 in bribes to influence Flood in connection with federal funds for a new-defunct chain of trade schools in California.

Flood, chairman of a House labor, health, education and welfare subcommittee, has influenced S. ney's office in Philadelphia and by a federal strike force in Washington.

Scientist has it figured

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A University of Arizona scientist believes he has a way to tune in on any planet that might be beaming messages into space.

Dr. Krzysztof Serkowski, associate professor in the school's lunar and planetary laboratory, said the first step was to find another planetary system, using a technique that measured the speed of a star.

Next, you aim a radio telescope at it to find out whether there is anything to listen to.

Exchange student gives some Oriental recipes

By CAROLYN COIL
Copley News Service

American foods are not as spicy as those she's used to in her home, says Champim Nakarat, an American Field Service exchange student from Thailand.

Although most exchange students complain that they gain weight during their American visits, Nakarat says she's watching her weight. She's going to be a model in a fashion show soon and wants to be sure she'll be able to fit into the clothes she'll model.

At home, Nakarat says she does all the cooking for her father, a school principal. She keeps in practice by cooking Thai foods for her American family in Los Angeles, Calif.

Here are her recipes for two foods native to Thailand — dumplings with pork and batter potato balls.

The dumplings are made from wonton filled with pork. She pulls the wonton together forming a peak.

KA-NOM-JEEP (Dumplings With Pork)
1 pkg. wonton skins
1 cup ground cooked pork
2 tbsps. bamboo shoots, diced into small pieces
1 tbsps. minced onion
One-half tsp. garlic powder
1 tsp. nampla (Thai fish sauce)
1 tsp. coriander

DEAR ABBY Wife slovenly, TV addict

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read so many letters about cheating husbands, I wonder if anyone ever wonders how they got that way? Well, here is MY day:

I go to the breakfast table to find my usual bowl of cold cereal and instant coffee. (No toast; we're out of bread.) My wife, who went from 120 to 180 pounds in two years, joins me in a soiled bathrobe, pinned together because she's been too busy watching soap operas and talking on the telephone to sew on buttons.

I'm wearing the same shirt I wore yesterday because she didn't have time to iron. (I couldn't even match up a pair of socks morning.)

It's only 7:30 a.m. and I'm already disgusted and irritable before going to work as a supervisor in a noisy office. When I return home at 5:15 p.m. I find our 2-year-old still in his pajamas, and my wife is wearing the same soiled robe. The breakfast dishes are in the sink, and I notice an empty one-pound box of chocolates and a half-eaten pie by the TV.

When I'm about ready to go to the nearest McDonald's she tells me "dinner is ready." ("Dinner" is canned spaghetti, instant potatoes and a tossed salad that should have been tossed into the garbage.)

Two years ago, she quit work to have our baby, saying she'd return to work when the baby was a year old. Obviously, she has no intention of going back.

No matter how late I stay up, I go to bed alone because she wants to watch more television.

Would you blame me if I started looking for a woman who cares how she looks, and offers me some pleasant conversation, companion and a little affection? So far I haven't, but I'm considering it.

I'd be better off being a bachelor, eating out, and sending my clothes to a laundry. At least, I'd have good food, clean clothes and warm arms, and it would be cheaper than keeping a worthless woman.—DISGUSTED IN BLOOMINGTON

DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, your wife is not the same woman you married. But why are you telling ME all this? Do you want to improve the situation, or set up some justification for cheating on her?

Has it ever occurred to you that your wife may have become lazy, slovenly and addicted to food and television because she's sick?

Before you write her off as a "worthless woman," try to find the reason for her apparent deterioration. With loving concern instead of criticism, plus professional help (starting with a physician) you might be able to save her. It's certainly worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: If you knew for a fact that your sister's husband had been keeping another woman for over five years, would you tell your sister?

Many other know it. My sister is bound to find out some way, and when she does, she will surely realize that I must have known it, too.—LONG ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: There are exceptions, but in most cases, the wife also knows, but has too much pride to admit it to anyone.

Keep your lip zipped, and should she one day admit that she knows, please be big and don't chime in with those who would say, "I knew it all along."

1 tbsps. pounded dried shrimp
1 egg
Yolks from two hardboiled eggs, cut fine
2 tbsps. soy sauce
Dash of pepper and monosodium glutamate (MSG)

In a mixing bowl, combine ground pork, bamboo shoots, onions, dried shrimp, garlic powder, nampla, coriander, pepper, MSG and one egg.

Place one teaspoon of the ground pork mixture in the center of each wonton skin. Top with chopped egg yolk.

Dampen edge of skin and fold into shape. Steam for 10 minutes. Serve hot with soy sauce. Makes two dozen.

Note: Nakarat says the dumplings also may be fried in deep fat.

KLUEY PODE (Potato Balls)
6 medium potatoes
1 egg, lightly beaten

Designer's style simple, delicious

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

Edith Head, the costume designer who collects Oscar nominations the way other people collect stamps, has had her share of glamorous Hollywood bashes, with finger bowls, service plates and guest lists in the hundreds.

But now she opts for a more simple style, tailoring her entertaining to fit the casual style of her ranch house.

I usually don't phone up Oscar-winners just to chat about cooking, but good taste, I believe, is pervasive. If she can design clothes that look that good, she also should have a flair for entertaining and food.

Since her work is so concerned with figure and appearance, food plays a very important role in her life, Head says.

"I love to eat," she said. "I eat everything, three meals a day." She keeps trim by eating small portions. "I would rather have less food and have whatever I want. I don't want to be a fat old lady."

A balanced diet, with plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, combined with regular exercise is her secret for maintaining a slim figure.

"I like fowl; I think I do chicken more than anything else. I believe you go with nature — food in season. I feel sorry for people who buy things in packages. There's so much beautiful fresh food."

Like many women who work, Head cooks in quantity, in advance, freezing dishes for later.

For entertaining, she sticks to relatively small gatherings, simple fresh food, often a make-ahead casserole, and a "multiple" desert such as an ice cream mold with three or four sauces which guests can serve themselves.

For dinner parties, Head often serves this chicken casserole. With it she serves hot rice and cooks green peas molded together in a copper pot.

Strategic studies show Soviets ahead of West in nuclear arms

EDITOR'S NOTE — They come from all over the world — some even from the Soviet bloc — to study defense systems. Sometimes they come up with startling conclusions that make even the most cynical public officials take notice.

By LOUIS NEVIN

LONDON (AP) — In the heart of London, two dozen people from a dozen countries are running a military information service in the belief that taxpayers have the right to know how their money is spent on defense.

Most represent NATO countries but the Soviet bloc is also represented. And the project to assess the facts of global armaments and strategy is backed by an array of big figures.

The International Institute for Strategic Studies says it is "concerned with strategic questions — not just with the military aspects of security but with the solicitations, The Military Balance and Strategic Survey, are found in embassies and government offices around the world and are required reading for military men, diplomats and journalists.

Among the institute's recent findings: — In Sept. 1976, an analysis of the East-West balance of power showed that while the United States outranked the Soviet Union by more than two to one in the number of deliverable nuclear warheads, the Soviet Union lead by nearly the same margin in the destructive force of the warheads.

— In April 1977, it found that Soviet military modernization seemed to be ahead of western military updating in intensity and scope.

— This May, it reported on the Soviet Union's efforts, using Cuban troops, to expand its influence in Africa. It also reported "significant strains" in the western alliance over security relations, missile technology and concerns over the Soviet ability to launch nuclear strikes against western Europe.

The publications cover military hardware and manpower country by country, and the strategic implications of the deployment of the forces, military spending and efforts at disarmament.

Christopher Bertram, the Institute's West German director says preparation of the reports involves reporter-like digging by staff members, and a journalist's ability to present facts in a readable manner. He says it is no accident that the first two IISS directors, Alastair Buchan and Francois Duchene, were journalists.

Bertram's first essay amounted to a departure from long-standing practice in West Germany. In 1970, Helmut Schmidt, then Minister of Defense, called him in to write West Germany's first public policy document on defense aims and spending.

"You can't ask people to support the huge expenses involved in defense without telling them what it's for and how the money is spent," Bertram says.

Of medium height with tousled, longish brown hair and bright blue eyes, the 41-year-old Bertram is a dynamo of nervous energy. If a pipe puffer can be called a chain smoker, he fits the bill.

The 2,000 members come from 60 countries, including a handful from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Romania and Yugoslavia. There are none from the Soviet Union. Bertram says he does not know why.

Members have been invited to join because they "can make an expert or informed contribution" to the study of defense and security questions.

Among the American members is Henry A. Kissinger who frequently called on the Institute for studies while he was Secretary of State. Other western governments have also been said to have consulted IISS although staff members decline to confirm this.

In addition to its Military Balance, published in September, and the Strategic Survey published in the spring, IISS puts out eight to 10 are special studies commissioned by the Institute each year. IISS also publishes a bi-monthly magazine entitled Survival.

The Institute's 24 regular employees and another dozen temporary research associates are jammed into two floors of an early Victorian building belonging to the Royal Society of Arts at the Corner of Adam and John Adam Streets 100 yards from the River Thames.

Bertram says the rent is now more than IISS can pay and a campaign has been launched to raise $750,000 for new lodgings.

IISS says it is totally independent financially of any government.

Of its 1977 budget of $678,580, $356,220 was provided by grants from the Ford and Rockefeller, Nuffield, Krupp, Fiat and other foundations; the rest from membership dues and sales of publications.

In 1957, some 20 politicians, including the present Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, journalists and churchmen met in Brighton on England's south coast. They were dissatisfied with having to depend on American think tanks for assessments of world security questions. They founded the Institute the following year with Buchan, a Scot who left in 1969 to become Commandant of Britain's Imperial Defense College, as its first director.

Canada's former prime minister, Lester Pearson, became the Institute's first president, a post he held until his death in 1973. It has been vacant since then.

The Institute is governed by seven vice presidents from six countries, including Joseph E. Johnson of Princeton, N.J. a university professor, government adviser and for years president Emeritus of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. It also has a 29-member council, from 15 countries. The one woman member of the council is Mrs. Miriam Camps, daughter of a Connecticut University professor and the wife of the Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge University.

THIS STONE URN, in remarkable condition, is among artifacts unearthed in an archaeological excavation of ancient Aztec ruins in Mexico City. The face on the urn and surrounding symbols represent an unknown Aztec god. In one of the most dramatic and controversial archaeological events of recent history, the main ceremonial stone pyramid and temple of the Aztec empire are being uncovered slowly. (AP Laserphoto)

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Rash may indicate underlying disease.

By RUDY MAXA
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — For 28 years Texas Democrat Olin "Tiger" Teague has represented a congressional district south of Dallas, and he's snared his share of military and space projects for his home state as chairman of the House Committee on Science and Technology.

In the middle of next month he'll be toasted at a dinner at Texas A&M during a national scientific symposium. Along with the usual house leadership (Tip O'Neill, John Rhodes, Jim Wright and John Brademas), two other men have been invited: Richard Nixon and Leon Jaworski.

Rumor has it that Nixon planned to attend the affair until he heard Jaworski might speak. But Teague's office says as of this writing neither man has declined the invitation.

Should they both accept, it would be the first time the ex-president has socialized with any of his accusers.

Pity Fred Silverman. His television programming decisions earn him high ratings and fat contracts. Before he switched to NBC, he brought shows such as "Charlie's Angels" and "Love Boat" to ABC, lifting that network from the netherworld of Nielsen to a top spot.

But success earned him condemnation from some quarters, such as Esquire magazine, where Richard Reeves put the blame for TV's mediocrity on Silverman's shoulders.

After reading that article, Terri Cotton, daughter of Washington PR man Stan Cotton, formed a group called Citizens for No-More-of-the-Same-TV. As a first project, she and her father put Silverman's mug on a "WANTED" poster they intend to sell for $1.

"He can either ignore it, pay some attention or apologize for his past programming," says Stan Cotton. Sure.

According to the woman who has sold newspapers and periodicals to Capitol Hill employees for 28 years, Penthouse is the most popular over-the-counter magazine sold to congressional staffers.

Kenyan contenders reviewed

By ALFRED ARAUJO

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — At least a half dozen politicians are regarded the main contenders to succeed President Jomo Kenyatta, who died last Tuesday without ever designating his own choice of man to be Kenya's second national leader since independence from Britain in 1963.

The constitution provides that the election of a new president must be held within 90 days of a vacancy in the office.

Here are brief sketches of those who are considered key candidates:

DANIEL ARAP MOI: As Kenyatta's vice president, he automatically became acting president on Kenyatta's death. The 54-year-old former village school teacher is a member of the minority Kalenjin Tribe which inhabits the farming areas of the Rift Valley.

Kenyatta appointed him vice president in 1966 in a move widely interpreted as a step to win the support of Kenya's minority tribes.

As vice president, Moi's loyalty to Kenyatta remained beyond question. But some analysts say they do not rate his chances as high because he lacks a powerful political base. They contend it is doubtful he would attract the necessary cross-over votes from the nation's two largest tribes, Kenyatta's Kikuyu and the Luo, if Luo or Kikuyu politicians are in the race.

ODINGA OGINGA: Probably the most charismatic politician on the scene now, Odinga has yet to emerge from the political wilderness where he has been ever since his release from detention in early 1971.

Odinga has had a stormy political career and is widely regarded as the titular leader of the two-million-member Luo Tribe which is dominant in Nyanza Province on the shore of Lake Victoria.

Odinga, born in 1912, was educated at Uganda's Makerere University and was also a teacher before turning to politics. He was one of Kenyatta's right-hand men in the pre-independence struggle. Partly out of regard for Odinga's loyalty and also to woo Luo support, Kenyatta named him the republic's first vice president in 1964.

In 1966 Odinga quit as vice president and formed the opposition Kenya People's Union Party. The government banned the party and detained Odinga and several of his top supporters in October, 1969, accusing the party of indulging in antigovernment and subversive activities and of being funded by communist embassies in Nairobi.

After his release in 1971, Odinga attempted a political comeback and rejoined Kenyatta's Kenya African National Union (KANU). But he won no favor with the party hierarchy, which barred him from running on a party ticket in the 1974 general elections which would have given fresh impetus to his campaign to re-enter political life.

MWAI KIBAKI: Kenya's 49-year-old finance minister is widely regarded by foreign diplomats as probably the most able and respected candidate in the field. They maintain he has all the credentials: he is a member of the dominant Kikuyu Tribe, is highly educated and has served with distinction in the Finance Ministry for the past eight years.

Kibaki was educated at Uganda's Makerere University and at the London School of Economics (1956-59) and later lectured in economics at his alma mater in Uganda. Kibaki entered the political arena in the early 1960s, was elected to Parliament in the pre-independence general elections and served as assistant to Tom Mboya in the Economic Planning Ministry for several years.

After Mboya, the Luo politician who was widely tipped as Kenyatta's successor, was assassinated by a Kikuyu gunman in July, 1969, Kibaki was appointed minister for finance and economic planning.

Weighing against him now, analysts say is the fact that although a Kikuyu, he is regarded to be outside Kenyatta's inner circle that is today governing the nation through Moi.

CHARLES NJONJO: Son of an ex-son-in-law of the Kikuyu Tribe, Njonjo, 58, has long been one of the most controversial and powerful figures on the Kenyan political scene. He was believed to have derived this power from Kenyatta himself, with whom he is known to have had an open line.

The South African-educated Njonjo lacks a power base — he is an ex-officio and not an elected member of Parliament, is married to a white woman and is not liked by rank and file Kenyans because of his Western tastes, which extend to pinstripe suits and a self-confessed aversion to being flown by black pilots.

A lawyer, he was named by Kenyatta as attorney general in 1963. He is credited with the formulation of many of the nation's laws and the architect of many of its policies.

NJOROGE MUNGAI: If a grounds-well of support build for a Kikuyu candidate to oppose Acting President Moi, then Mungai, 52, a former foreign minister, could find the urge to run. He, too, was educated in Uganda and later at Fort Hare University in South Africa. He is also a physician, having studied at Columbia University in New York and Stanford University in California.

A nephew of Kenyatta, Mungai was close to the late president for many years and was his official physician.

As foreign minister he was instrumental in Kenya's becoming the headquarters for the United Nations Environmental Secretariat.

Mungai is considered to hold strong pro-Western views and frequently speaks out in favor of a strong armed force for Kenya to defend itself in any possible conflict with neighboring states — Somalia, Ethiopia, Uganda and Tanzania.

MBIYU KOINANGE: It is said that no politician was closer to Kenyatta than his minister of state, Mbiyu Koinange, now in his 70s.

Koinange, the son of an ex-senior chief of the Kikuyus, was Kenyatta's brother-in-law and troubleshooter.

Koinange was one of the first black Africans to study overseas — he went to the United States and Britain in the 1920s and was an early activist in the black nationalist movement that had taken root in England before World War II. He served as secretary-general of the Pan-African Freedom Movement of eastern, central and southern Africa and was a close ally even then of Kenyatta, who was then agitating in Britain for Kenya's independence.

TIP drawing attention in fight on inflation

NEW YORK (AP) — Among all the proposals advanced of late for fighting inflation, few have attracted as much interest as an idea called TIP.

The acronym stands for "tax-based incomes policy," an approach in which the government sets up tax incentives for companies to hold wage or price increases within a specified limit.

Advocates of TIP in one form or another have included such prominent economists as Arthur Okun of the Brookings Institution and Henry Wallich of the Federal Reserve.

The idea, being relatively fresh and untried, also seems to hold some attraction because it has no past record of failure. That sets it apart from such ideas as direct wage-price controls, which were imposed by the Nixon administration in 1971-74.

Some observers contend that controls still might work, if applied correctly. But few are willing to endorse them on the basis of the country's last experience with them, which was followed by two-digit inflation in 1974 and then the steepest recession since the 1930s.

Similarly, many economy-watchers see little real progress emerging from the Carter administration's jawboning efforts to get companies and unions to hold down wages and prices through voluntary restraint. Merely by default, then, TIP tends to draw some interest.

The Wall Street economic consulting firm of A. Gary Schilling & Co. argues, however, that the idea has several potential pitfalls.

The firm acknowledged in a recent report that TIP looks, at first glance, like an appealingly simple proposition.

Assume, for the purposes of example, that a wage-increase limit has been set at 7 percent a year. If employees of a given company receive an 8 percent pay increase, then the company's tax bracket for that year would automatically be raised, say, from 36 percent to 38 percent.

There are also proposed plans using rewards rather than penalties. Thus, the company that held to the 7 percent wage limit could have its tax owed reduced from 36 percent to 34 percent of its earnings.

This seemingly straightforward arrangement runs into its first obstacle when the question comes up of whether wages or prices should be the focus. From the company side comes the argument that it would work well only with wages; organized labor is likely to believe that prices are the only fair and proper target.

But even supposing that a wage guideline is agreed upon, Schilling analysts see several other problems.

Some companies, they pointed out, might decide to give wage increases above the limit anyway, viewing the resulting extra taxes as a relatively small price to pay for labor peace.

"If so," the analysts observed, "no slowing in inflation would result, and in fact inflation could even worsen if the firm tried to pass the penalty on in the form of higher prices."

Secondly, they said, TIP has no impact on companies which, because of losses or tax credits carried forward, have no tax liability for a given year.

In addition, the analysts asked, how do you maintain TIP limits when a shock from outside forces — like a crop failure or a sudden jump in oil prices — hits the economy?

Then too, they said, "it would seem that once TIP were enacted there would be no turning back. For TIP to have the chance of being effective, business and labor would have to be made aware that it would be a permanent feature of our economic system."

"All of these potential deficiencies could be resolved, but to do so would probably require the creation of a large watchdog agency. As this bureaucracy seeks to make TIP fair to all, its effectiveness would no doubt be seriously blunted, and for the first few years of its life TIP might have little or no impact on inflation."

"For an administration that promised to eliminate government red tape by cutting the size of the federal bureaucracy, this could be the ultimate irony."

Chattanooga group now cashing in on Choo Choo

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) —

Chattanooga? The Brillian gave his American friend a blank look, then brightened. "Oh, yes, the choo choo," he said.

Wherever you go, people have heard of the Chattanooga Choo Choo, immortalized in song by the late Glenn Miller and his swing band. For CB radio fans throughout the country, Chattanooga's handle is Choo Choo City.

A few years ago a group of Chattanooga businessmen invested $10 million to capitalize on the famous name.

B. Allen Casey, chairman of the Chattanooga Choo Choo Co., said he got the idea from a visiting Russian who said he wanted to see the Chattanooga Choo Choo.

Casey and his fellow investors purchased the Southern Railroad passenger terminal which had been closed in 1970 when passenger service ended.

They restored the station, put a 1,600-seat restaurant in the concourse, turned the track area into gardens with splashing fountains, sculptures and gas lights and bought an 1880 Baldwin locomotive — a replica of the original Chattanooga Choo Choo.

With the engine are 48 old Pullman cars whose plush interiors would make yesterday's railroad barons envious. Tourists spend the night in them for $48. There is also the Choo Choo Hilton Hotel.

According to Casey, a reporter in Cincinnati coined the name Chattanooga Choo Choo in 1880 when passenger service began between the two cities on the old Cincinnati Southern Railroad.

The name got its fame in 1941 when Tin Pan Alley composer Harry Warren and lyricist Mack Gordon wrote the song for Glenn Miller for use in the movie, "Sun Valley Serenade." Warren, now 83 and living in Beverly Hills, Calif., recalled in a telephone interview that Miller wanted a song about a train, not the city. He said Gordon came up with the words which seemed to fit the melody Warren composed.

Warren, though an honorary citizen of Chattanooga, has never been to the southeast Tennessee town.

The song was nominated for an Academy Award in 1941 but didn't win the Oscar. Other well known Warren melodies are "You'll Never Know," "Lullaby of Broadway," "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," "On the Acheson, Topeka and Santa Fe," "You Wonderful You," and "I Found a Million Dollar Baby in the 5 and 10 Cent Store."

Warren said he isn't writing much music anymore. "Things are different today," he said. "The kids don't want the same kind of music. Now it's rock."

And, indeed, it is. "Chattanooga Choo Choo" has returned to popularity in a disco version currently high on the charts by a group called Tuxedo Junction.

Store to renew stamps — who wants them?

By MARTIN ROSSMAN

The Los Angeles Times

Does A&P's renewed use of trading stamps portend a return to the days of a decade ago when EVERY supermarket was giving them?

Not quite. Even trading-stamp companies, while naturally enthusiastic about the supermarket chain's move, admit we will never again see the trading-stamp binge of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

What's more, surprisingly, they say they don't want to see those days return. After all, the reason, a gimmick ceases to be a gimmick when everyone offers it.

Cause of this sudden renewed interest in what many had regarded as a dead issue was the announcement in recent days by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. that it will introduce trading stamps to more than a fourth of its 1,800 outlets: Gold Bond stamps in 282 A&P stores in the East; S&H Green Stamps in 165 stores in Chicago and Milwaukee; Top Value stamps in 104 units in Indianapolis and Louisville, and Eagle stamps at 52 stores in Cleveland.

"We're kind of excited after a long lull," says Clint Wade, public-relations director for the Trading Stamp Institute of America. "We always thought that our real test would be whether a major chain put stamps back in. A&P's move signals our first return in 10 years."

To be sure, A&P, the No. 2 chain in the nation, has long been a struggling, money-losing operation and the return to stamps could well be a desperate bid to shore up its share of market.

Nevertheless, the A&P deal could well spell at least partial resurrection for an industry which took a skyrocket ride. A mere $10 million a-year industry in 1950, trading stamps soared in popularity until reaching a zenith in 1968-69. At that time, there were 425 trading stamp companies doing $900 million a year in business.

Those 425 companies have shrunk to just 25 doing about $300-$350 million a year. But the steep slide apparently is over. After bottoming out, trading-stamp sales have traced a slow rise in the last year or so, according to Wade.

Albert F. Kaiser, president of S&H and Promotional Services, a component of Sperry & Hutchinson Co., says that his firm, the largest in the stamp field, is following the industry trend and making a slow comeback.

S&H, he says, enjoyed a resurgence of 12 percent in revenues in the second half of 1977, adding 250 supermarkets, after a long period of flat or declining sales. The company's stamp sales are currently in the $250 million range annually and the 12 percent growth rate has held up in the first half of 1978.

"A&P's move represents the biggest single event in the trading stamp business in many years," he says, adding that he expects it to lend further impetus to the industry.

That impetus is not yet evident in California, the largest market in the country and considered the most fiercely contested by many in the supermarket industry.

Most eyes on the industry are focused on Oakland-based Safeway, the largest chain in the nation, which has made no move yet to imitate A&P's action.

Felicia Del Camp, Safeway public-relations manager, would say only that her company "will watch to see what the competition is doing — but we always do that."

So far, she says, A&P has not introduced stamps into any market that is directly competitive. Corporate policy on stamps leaves the matter up to each of its 21 divisions. One division, in Utah, is using stamps, but it is a comparatively short, 26-week program, not a long-range affair.

Al Marasca, senior vice president — marketing for Los Angeles-based Ralphs, doesn't view stamps as a big factor in Los Angeles at this time. "My feeling is that the L.A. marketplace is doing more things of a promotional nature than in the past but whether that will result in high stamp involvement is open to question," he says.

Donald A. Koepfel, president of Los Angeles-based Blue Chip Stamps, which was the overwhelming favorite here a decade ago, admits as much.

"Business is increasing slightly but not dramatically," he says. "The chains here are awfully busy with a strike at the moment, but you can be sure they're all run by smart businessmen and they'll take notice of what's going on with A&P."

"It seems A&P thought the time was right and I think one of these days a chain out here is going to do the same thing."

Blue Chip, which did $19.7 million in stamp business last year, has Boys Markets and Stater Bros. as stamp customers as well as a number of independents.

Kaiser of S&H says trading stamps cost a store or chain 2 percent of sales, requiring a 10-15 percent increase in sales to offset the added cost.

He denies that stamps of themselves raise prices. "They can't," he says. "All stores advertise their prices and the shopper is too smart to be taken in."

"All the stamps do is differentiate one store from another. If a store has the basics covered, stamps provide a little extra. And people are looking for that little extra today."

But Walter L. Schaffer, president of Retail Services Group, Cleveland-based marketer of food store promotions, points out that the average supermarket is working on a profit margin of only .06 percent, "and to talk of a long-range stamp program would be economic suicide. The business is so volatile that a chain taking on a two- or three-year program would lose its flexibility."

The stamp program at Safeway's 36-store Utah division is using RSG's Giftcheck plan for 26 weeks. Under it, a coupon is issued for each $5 purchase and it takes 60 Giftchecks to fill a book. Books are redeemable for a variety of small appliances found in the store, not a redemption center.

Gold Bond Stamp Co. of Minneapolis, which landed 282 A&P stores in the East, is using another wrinkle.

In addition to the traditional method of exchanging books for appliances, those stores offering Gold Bond stamps allow customers to exchange them for a half dozen sharply discounted store items: eggs for two cents a dozen, bacon for nine cents a pound.

Harry Greenough, president of Gold Bond, claims that "food stores all over the United States are having a hard time trying to make a profit" and blames it primarily on the trend to discounting.

"With discounting it's very difficult to make that bottom line black. The big reason is that people have been price-shopping three or four stores a week. Loyalty is gone and there are not enough big orders."

To recoup, he says, stores began offering "continuities" — dinnerware, cookware, flatware, usually collected a piece a week — and then games and contests.

"We're talking about something extra, a competitive edge, a point of difference," he says. "They're all trying to hold that customer and bring her back."

"But trading stamps are the one promotional device that is equitable if the customer responds with loyalty to the store. It's something for something."

Greenough said that "every chain in the country will be watching" to see what happens with A&P. I predict that some chains will test stamps in some market areas and when they see the results you're going to see the movement expand."

At the peak of the boom in 1968, he says, 32,000 supermarkets were offering trading stamps — 70 percent of the total.

"In three years that went to 30 percent. Stamps will never again get a 70 percent share of the market but I think we'll see 45 percent as opposed to the 30 percent today."

Guests must go

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) —

Nancy Thompson discovered recently that an uninvited guest had moved into her attic.

"It really scared me," she said, recalling how she opened the door to the attic and saw a large, dark form at the top of the stairs. The form, she said, turned out to be a "huge nest, about four feet tall and three feet wide at the base."

F.R. Scott of the Richmond Audubon Society said, "I'm 99 percent sure that it was a starling. Starlings like to fill in holes and it seems that this one went in and tried to fill up the whole attic."

Miss Thompson plans to move soon, so she must remove the nest.

"I'll put it out in the yard so the builder can re-occupy it, and I'll try not to damage it too much," she said.

Bob Huggins, Manager of the used car division of Nickel Chrysler-Dodge at 3705 W. Wall, is ready to help you find the special car you wish to buy.

Nickel has unique used car department

Never has the demand for used cars been greater than now. The prospective buyer is looking for a good car for dependable transportation, perhaps for his student son or daughter; maybe a young man is searching for a really good-looking, clean pickup; some collector might wish for a particular classic automobile he has a yen to own. The requirements are many and varied, but there is one common denominator: all wish for a "good deal"—decent value for their money. This is assured at Nickel's, where they are as interested in the performance of what they sell as is the customer.

Bob Huggins, manager of the used car department at Nickel's, assures you that he has at hand unlimited sources with which to find the very auto you seek, regardless of your needs. Even the rare, the unique can be found. The Rolls Royce, a particular edition of Cadillac, and many others are to be had if you know where to look.

Watch repairing different today

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Since Egyptians began playing with sundials 15 centuries ago, man has been fascinated by timepieces.

The fascination has manifested itself in the form of clocks, watches and other chronometers limited in variety only by man's imagination. They come in every shape and form, with and without jewels, powered by springs, water, electricity, faced with Mickey Mouse, Spiro Agnew—or some companies print your own face on the watchface.

The advent of the quartz-crystal and electronic movements added to the variety of timepieces.

Watchmaker Frank Hume, who has been making and repairing watches more than 30 years, considers himself part of a vanishing profession. The proliferation of electronic timepieces appears to have thrown the watch repair business into a spin.

"This electronic stuff comes out so fast that it is almost impossible to keep up with it," Hume lamented. "It is terribly expensive to maintain equipment for repairs and, in a lot of cases, the company that makes the watch goes out of business and leaves a lot of people holding the bag."

Keith Preston is the other side of the coin or, in this case, the other facet of the repair business. Electronics is a hobby with him and about a year ago he set up his own digital watch repair service, which offers an alternative to shipping a timepiece to a factory for a lengthy period when repairs are needed.

His electronic tinkering plays second fiddle to his profession as a manufacturing business counselor, but Preston

'Dream wives' scarce

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Norm Babb took out a $7,000, three-quarter page ad in a newspaper here several months ago to find himself a wife.

In the ad, he said he was "healthy, in his 40s, 6 feet tall, 175 pounds... not as good looking as Paul Newman but... affluent."

The "dream wife" with whom he sought to share his four-bedroom apartment in Vancouver, British Columbia, should be, the ad said, "Between 25-35, healthy, have good taste, be beautiful and have a college education."

Out of "hundreds" of women replying, he selected 12 for dinner dates. They included a nurse, a home economist, a woman with a master's degree in business administration, one with a Ph.D. in English literature, and, he said, "just working girls."

Babb, who is twice divorced and has three grown children, didn't like any of the applicants.

He said he chose Los Angeles for the ad because he decided "L.A. had the widest variety of available females on the continent."

Train robberies rising in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—An increasing number of daring robberies are plaguing one of the world's largest railway systems here. Indian train authorities have counted 45 robberies aboard trains during the first five months of this year, compared with 44 for all of 1977.

The spate of armed train robberies has heightened public displeasure with rail services, long criticized for crowded conditions. India's overburdened trains each day carry more than 8 million passengers, riding in the seats and aisles, clinging to handholds or perched on coach roofs.

"Now in addition to the discomfort," complained the Times of India, an independent newspaper, passengers "must also fear for their possessions and their lives."

Recently, a passenger was killed and four others injured when robbers attacked a train in Uttar Pradesh State, North India.

A maximum of four armed guards, but usually only three, are posted on every train. But officials admit their number is too few.

In addition, there is the Railway Protection Force. The problem is that the 64,000-strong force takes its name literally and protects only railway equipment, not passengers.

Railway minister Madhu Dandavate said there was no easy solution to the problem.

"Unless we raise the economic life of the people these incidents will continue," he said in an interview. The robberies are "part of a bigger socio-economic problem which needs tackling."

Officials say the most dangerous stretches of track are found in the sprawling northern and central states of Uttar Pradesh and Madhya Pradesh.

Gerald Reiger, right, one of three drilling foremen working offshore Indian Cove, Utah, talks with Roger Durant, rig supervisor on project being drilled in the Great Salt Lake. Unseen sign on rig proclaims, "I Worked Offshore in Utah."

Offshore rig drills for petroleum 800 miles from closest ocean

By GEORGE TIBBITS

INDIAN COVE, Utah (AP) — More than 800 miles from the nearest ocean, ringed by mountains, parched rangeland and desert salt flats stands an offshore drilling rig. The shore it is off belongs to the Great Salt Lake, where Amoco is looking for oil.

"You've never seen anything like this before and you'll never see it again," said Frank Shanafelt as he nodded his head toward the speck 10 miles away.

Shanafelt works for Amoco Production Co., directing shore operations for the $5.5 million venture — the first well to be drilled in the lake. The rig itself, on a 90-by-180-foot barge, is anchored west of the Promontory Mountain peninsula about 45 miles northwest of Salt Lake City.

Gerald Reiger, one of three Amoco drilling foremen, said the well is the only one of its kind — a land drilling rig mounted on an offshore barge. It is being drilled by Parker Drilling Co.

The novelty of an offshore rig in a land-locked state has inspired a certain amount of pride among the operation's 40 to 50 workers: plastered around the rig are stickers reading,

"I worked offshore in Utah."

Roger Durant, Parker's rig supervisor or "tool pusher," said, "I had a chance to go pushing on one of Parker's brand new rigs and that's something, but this looked a little more exciting."

Drilling in the state-owned lake has not been easy or cheap. It would cost a fraction as much, about $300,000, to drill on land, said Reiger.

Barge sections were brought from offshore drilling areas in the Gulf of Mexico, said Richard Murphy, Amoco public information officer. A base camp was set up at an abandoned harbor. Amoco established a small navy of three crew boats, a pollution-control boat and two barges large enough to hold cranes and supply trucks.

The drilling barge itself was assembled at the base camp, then towed out.

Special anti-pollution precautions have been taken, Murphy said, since the rig is "practically in a national monument." Besides blow-out preventers on the well shaft and a 600-foot oil containment boom around the barge, about $300,000 worth of standby cleanup gear is waiting on shore.

Reiger said all cuttings from the hole are taken ashore, "a tremendous nuisance and expense," but part of the guarantee to the state that the lake would not be harmed.

Other unique problems include swarms of brine flies and the high salt content of the lake, which makes falling in particularly uncomfortable, but never fatal. There have been no recorded drownings in the lake because its high salt content — up to four times that of the ocean — increases a person's ability to float.

With the drilling making between 100 and 250 feet a day, Amoco officials say they should know by mid-September whether it is all worth it.

Puerta Rica to explore for crude before 1980

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The Puerto Rican government plans to drill for oil itself rather than grant exploration rights to oil companies, according to a government official here.

Natural Resources Secretary Fred Soltero Harrington said the government expects to begin oil exploration near the town of Dorado before 1980.

An oil strike could prove a boon to this Caribbean island, which imports all its fossil fuels. Harrington said exploratory drilling could begin following completion in November of an environmental impact statement and seismic studies in the area.

"It's within the resources of the government to drill two holes" in Dorado, the secretary said Friday, at a cost of $1 million to $2 million. But Harrington cautioned that the exploration could not begin before a new $300,000 seismic study is completed.

Former Natural Resources Secretary Pedro Negron Ramos said that in 1976 the government "was very close" to signing an oil exploration agreement with Mobil but "we were interrupted by the elections" which brought a new government to power.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — A ranking Japanese diplomat says the growing U.S. trade deficit should be blamed on inflation, not on a "flooding" of imports from countries such as Japan.

"Since the beginning of this year, the physical volume of U.S. imports from Japan has remained constant, and in some categories, including automobiles, has started to shrink," Shotaro Takahashi, Japanese consul general in New York, said Friday.

Takahashi spoke at the Conference on Japanese-American Relations in the World Economy, sponsored by Skidmore College.

"In terms of depreciated dollars, the price of Japanese imports has increased," Takahashi said. "Continuing depreciation of the dollar tends to impair the effectiveness of our efforts to reduce the trade gap."

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. says it will raise prices an average of 4.6 percent on 1979 passenger cars and 6.5 percent on 1979 Jeep vehicles. The increases are larger than the boosts previously announced by General Motors.

The move will raise prices $235 on the average-equipped passenger car, AMC said. The company gave no dollar figure for price hikes on its Jeep vehicles.

AMC Chairman Gerald Meyers said Friday the price increases "are necessary to recover higher costs, but are insufficient to offset all of them."

The new AMC cars go on sale in September and Jeeps will be available in October.

AMC's bigger competitors, GM, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp., have pledged to post smaller introductory price increases than in past years in support of the Carter administration's fight against inflation.

That pledge has been interpreted to mean less than 6 percent over the full 1979 model year, with smaller price increases in October and occasional small increases over the next 12 months.

Imported crude prices show 18-month decline

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although most Americans may not have noticed, the real price of imported oil has declined significantly in the past 18 months, one of the few beneficial effects of inflation and the fall in the dollar.

The price of oil in dollars has remained the same, but the price in real terms, meaning after inflation is taken into account, has declined as much as 12 percent since the last oil price hike in early 1977.

The decline is the result of a decision by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to freeze oil prices during most of 1977 and all of 1978. The price of just about everything else Americans buy has increased because of inflation, making oil a better deal now than 18 months ago.

The Shah of Iran recently estimated that the $12.70 paid for a barrel of Iranian oil this year is equal in purchasing power to only about the $7 price that was being charged in 1974.

Of course, any gratitude Americans might feel should take into account the fact that the OPEC nations quadrupled oil prices in 1973 and 1974, draining substantial wealth from consumers' pocketbooks and contributing to a major economic recession in this country and abroad.

But oil analysts such as John Lichtblau, director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York, think it likely that OPEC will increase prices in 1979.

"How much is another question," he said in an interview. "It is not likely they will increase prices the entire amount of the loss of the dollar, plus the inflationary changes since the last increase at the beginning of 1977."

He said even an increase of 8 to 10 percent, which would raise the average world price to near $14 a barrel, "would not be a big increase" considering the magnitude of the recent price decline.

Another oil expert, who did not want to be identified, guessed an increase might be closer to 5 percent, although he said one, much higher cannot be ruled out.

The 13 OPEC nations will meet later this year to consider whether to hike prices in 1979. There have been suggestions by Saudi Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani that they may decide on a series of gradual increases, rather than one big jump in price.

The drop in the real price is a factor in the sharp decline in the OPEC nations' trade surplus to a projected $18 billion to $20 billion this year, down from more than $30 billion just two years ago.

Had oil import prices kept pace with the 12 percent increase in overall prices in the past 18 months, the price would already be about $14.50 a barrel.

Vietnamese interested

By BRUCE DUNFORD

HONOLULU (AP) — U.S. companies will have a chance to participate in the development of Vietnam's oil and natural gas resources if trade relations between the United States and that communist country are restored, a congressman says.

"It was brought out very forcefully that the Vietnamese are interested in the exploration of oil and gas both onshore and offshore," U.S. Rep. Sam Hall Jr., D-Texas, said Sunday as he and six other congressmen returned from Vietnam.

The special House committee went to Vietnam and Laos for a six-day visit and were given the remains of 15 American servicemen killed in the Indochina war. The remains, 11 from Vietnam and four from Laos, were flown to Hickam Air Force Base on Sunday and taken to a laboratory for positive identification.

Vietnamese officials said there had been some drilling for oil and natural gas in the Mekong River delta and they expected drilling in North Vietnam, Hall said.

"There has been some production, not in commercial quantities I don't believe, but enough to find out that

Potential reported

Dorchester Exploration, Inc., operating from Midland, filed petition with the Railroad Commission of Texas for its No. 1-5 Foster, new well in the Parochial Bude (Cisco) area of Sterling County.

It finalized for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 560,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 7,519 to 7,634 feet after 5,000 gallons of acid and 65,000 gallons of fracture solution.

The new well is 12 miles northwest of Sterling City and 1.5 miles northeast of other production.

Well site is 1,650 feet from south and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 5, block 22, H&TC survey.

rel, which would increase gasoline prices at the pump by two cents per gallon.

The average world price, which does not include transportation costs, is now about $12.70 per 42-gallon barrel. It varies slightly from country to country.

The chief beneficiaries from the fall in the dollar are countries whose currencies have increased in value, especially Germany and Japan. Japan may be paying 40 percent less for oil since the dollar has depreciated that much against the yen. Payments for oil in most cases is in dollars, and Japan can now buy those dollars much more cheaply than before.

There is the reverse problem for OPEC nations when they buy goods from Japan. They must pay 40 percent more in dollars to buy the yen to pay the Japanese.

Lichtblau said the OPEC nations probably will think twice before trying to increase prices to regain all of the ground lost since the last increase. One reason is a world surplus of oil and another is the impact it could have on the world economy.

"After the very dramatic increase in 1973 and 1974, and the further increases in 1975 and 1976, the economic recovery is so precarious, that if they again increase prices substantially, it could lead to a relapse into recession. They're afraid of that," he said.

Lichtblau and other analysts said the OPEC nations may also be concerned that another price hike could put further downward pressure on the dollar, thus diminishing the value of their substantial dollar holdings and investments in this country.

President Carter vetoes Rickover's pet project

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — If Jimmy Carter has a substitute father, it is Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, a man with whom the president shares many traits.

Now Carter has vetoed one of Rickover's pet projects, a fifth nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

Rickover has testified in favor of the ship, and his testimony is bound to come up again before a House vote — scheduled Sept. 7 — on whether to override the veto.

Yet the two men retain what Carter describes as a "close relationship," though little is known about what passes these days between the 78-year-old Navy legend and the 53-year-old president.

Carter says he sees Rickover "frequently," and their discussions are general in nature. They appear together in public only rarely.

Both men work hard, demand hard work of subordinates, and are not particularly noted for their humor, although Carter makes frequent attempts at it. Both are Annapolis-trained engineers.

Both men claim little concern for the opinions others have of them. Yet Carter has an advertising man to pump up his image, and Rickover, who shuns interviews, has been known to call reporters to tell them when a flattering statement about him is in the Congressional Record.

It was Rickover, then heading the Navy's nuclear propulsion program, who rebuked Carter in 1952 for saying in a job interview that he had not always strained himself to the limit while at the Naval Academy.

"Why not?" Rickover asked, and Carter never forgot. Twenty-three years later he titled his campaign biography "Why Not the Best?"

Carter, a Navy lieutenant when he met Rickover, worked for him for less than a year, most of the time in Schenectady, N.Y. Carter was in charge of training the crew of the USS Sea Wolf, then under construction as the Navy's second nuclear-powered submarine.

It is unclear from Carter's book how much personal contact the two men had, but it probably was not much with Carter based in upstate New York and Rickover in Washington.

Still, Rickover made a strong impression, possibly made stronger by the fact that Carter's real father, James Earl Carter, was dying of cancer of the colon at the time.

"He may not have cared or known it ... but Admiral Rickover had a profound effect on my life, — perhaps more than anyone except my own parents," Carter wrote in his autobiography.

"He was unbelievably hardworking and competent, and he demanded total dedication from his subordinates. We feared and respected him and strove to please him. I do not in that period ever remember him saying a complimentary word to me. The absence of a comment was his compliment ...

"He was never tactful or timid in his demands upon the Congress, the Navy, or the manufacturers ..."

Rickover's protege, years later, has been criticized for being undiplomatic in his demands on Congress. He also recently ordered his aides to support his policies whatever their personal feelings.

Though by Carter's account, Rickover did not know or care about his influence on Carter in the 1950s, he has kind words for the president now. "I look to him at once," Rickover said last year when the two were together on the nuclear-powered submarine USS Los Angeles.

Rickover said he and Carter share a belief that man shapes his destiny and is responsible for his acts. He said that for Americans that belief was replaced around the turn of the century — incidentally Rickover was born in 1900 — by the "Freudian ethic" which "sees man ruled by unconscious drives and external pressures, hence not really responsible for his acts ... American egalitarianism reinforces Freud's caricature of Freud's concepts. Mediocrity excuses itself as the normal and healthy state of mankind."

Carter seems to share his mentor's views. It was the White House that released Rickover's remarks, which were made to a Carter aide.

Rickover's manner has not softened much over the years. On June 7, speaking at the Naval Academy, Carter opened with this story:

"I invited my old boss, Admiral Hyman Rickover, to come and join us. He sent word back that he would, of course, comply with my orders as commander in chief, but he thought his work for the Navy in Washington was more important than listening to my speech.

"And I was not surprised."

The Annapolis men understood and laughed heartily.

Later, speaking at a ship commissioning, Rickover seemed to praise Carter, who has been faltering in public opinion polls.

"The public is more critical of those in high office than it has ever been," he said. "It is easier to point out the flaws and fallacies of a great man than to be one."

It was only 12 days after the two men appeared together at the commissioning that Carter vetoed the military weapons bill on grounds that another nuclear-powered ship would cost too much and the money would be better spent on less glamorous items.

Asked whether Rickover had objected to the veto, Carter said, "I did not discuss it with him." He said Rickover did not try to influence him on specific military items "because of our close personal relationship in the past, which still exists."

"He does meet with me quite frequently, and we have very frank discussions, but I think more in general terms. And he has not had any inclination to try to influence me on this particular matter," Carter said.

Champlin finals wells

HOUSTON — Champlin Petroleum Co. announced completion of two deep Vicksburg zone gas wells in the Stratton field area of Nueces County.

The No. 135 Wardner was completed for a flow of 2.9 million cubic feet of gas per day, through a 9/64-inch choke and perforations from 8,147 to 8,229 feet, and 2.3 million cubic feet of gas per day from the Vicksburg and at 8,980-9,077 feet. The calculated absolute open flow daily rates are 190 million and 21 million cubic feet respectively.

The operator completed No. 136 Wardner for a daily flow of 2.7 million cubic feet of gas, through an 8/64-inch choke and perforations from 9,108 to 9,216 feet.

These two wells, combined with six others completed in the Vicksburg section by Champlin, currently are producing gas at a gross rate of 17 million cubic feet per day.

Champlin holds a 100 percent working interest in the eight wells.

Cosmos nab second straight NASL title

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — A year ago, the Cosmos dedicated the North American Soccer League championship to Pele. This year Steve Hunt asked them to win it for him.

"I just told them to make this one for me. I didn't want to go on a losing note," Hunt said. "They said no way that was going to happen."

"My teammates still think I'm coming back," Hunt said. "But that will only happen if things don't work out for me."

Hunt went out and played a key role in the Cosmos victory. He set up the first goal by sending a pinpoint pass 40 yards to Dennis Tueart, who fired the ball past Tampa Bay keeper Winston DuBose to give the Cosmos a 1-0 lead.

"It was very emotional for me, being my last game," Hunt said. "I feel I'm playing the best soccer of my life. I'm looking forward to going

San Antonio lost to Amarillo Sunday, so the Cubs are still only one game out of first. The Cubs will face El Paso again here tonight before returning home to face San Antonio in a crucial five-game season ending homestand, which begins at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Cubs Stadium.

Midland took a 3-1 lead in the fifth with some wild action. Bill Evers and Brian Rosinski led off with back-to-back singles and Evers scored on a single by Kurt Seibert. Rosinski later scored on a double steal when El Paso threw the ball away and Seibert then came home on a balk.

Macoritti also added a single and converted after Paul Williams returned an interception for a touchdown to give him 23 of the Roughriders points. Saskatchewan scored its final two points on a safety.

The loss dropped Toronto to 4-3 while the Roughriders are 1-6.

Rayford's blast in the sixth tied the score at three, but Midland came back in the eighth to take a 4-3 lead when Steve Macko singled and scored on a long double by Jim Tracy. That lead, however, didn't last long as Rayford bounced his homer in the bottom of the frame.

Porter put Royals back in first

By The Associated Press
The hometown Texas crowd at Arlington Stadium was getting on Kansas City catcher Darrell Porter Sunday night, so Porter took it out on the hometown Rangers.

He hit a pair of solo homers and Amos Otis drove in two more runs with a homer and single as the Royals ended a four-game losing streak, as well as the Rangers' four-game winning streak, 4-2 and hopped over the California Angels back into first place in the American League West.

"The crowd was really getting me on tonight," Porter said. "They always do."

The reason being that Texas fans blame Porter for a brawl between the two clubs last year.

Elsewhere, the Boston Red Sox snipped California 4-3 in 12 innings, the New York Yankees beat the Oakland A's 6-2, the Detroit Tigers downed the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Seattle Mariners 4-3, the Chicago White Sox blanked the Cleveland Indians 6-0 and the Minnesota Twins shaded the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 in 11 innings.

"It's just great to be back in the driver's seat," Porter said as the Royals moved one-half game ahead of California after letting the Angels hold onto the lead for all of three days. "Of course, nobody has really taken command of the division this year. You can get four or five games down and still not be out of it, like Texas."

The third-place Rangers are five games out.

Texas starter Doc Medich had a three-hitter and a 1-0 lead until the threat when Porter led off with his 12th home run of the season. Two outs later, Otis hit his 16th. Porter homered again with one out in the ninth and the Royals added another run when Al Cowens singled, stole second and scored on a single by Otis.

"It was tough in the ninth inning," said winning pitcher Dennis Leonard, who needed last-out help from Al Hrabosky with two runners aboard. "That's the hardest thing. You need one out and you're watching from the dugout and you don't have any control over the outcome."

Red Sox 4, Angels 3
It appeared Boston didn't have any control over the outcome of its game until pinch runner Jerry Remy scored from second base on a two-out throwing error by California third baseman Carney Lansford in the 12th inning. That put the Red Sox in control and Butch Hobson followed with a game-winning single. The Angels, who tied the score 2-2 in the ninth on Danny Gooden's pinch double, had taken a 3-2 lead in the top of the 12th on a double by Rick Miller and a single by Don Baylor. A single by Carl Yastrzemski and a walk to Fred Lynz set up the decisive runs in the bottom of the 12th.

Yankees 6, A's 2
Chris Chambliss and Graig Nettles slammed two home runs apiece and Catfish Hunter won his sixth consecutive decision with help the last two innings from Rich Gossage. The game was enlivened by an argument in the fifth inning in which crew chief Russ Goetz had to shove Oakland's Joe Wallis away from second base umpire Nick Brezman.

Brezman called Oakland's Mike Edwards out on an attempted steal after hesitating to be sure that shortstop Bucky Dent had not dropped the throw. Edwards was ejected for flinging his helmet. As the teams changed sides, a towel was thrown from the Oakland dugout and Wallis, who was not in the game, charged onto the field. When Wallis began berating Brezman, Goetz shoved the player aside and stepped between the two. Wallis also was ejected.

"I don't generally get on umpires," said A's Manager Jack McKeon, "but these guys are looking for trouble. The first word out of the dugout and the home plate umpire has his head in there. This is the first time in my life I've ever seen a guy kicked out for waving a towel. They want three weeks vacation; that's a good idea. In fact, some of them ought to get a whole season off."

Tigers 4, Brewers 2
Lou Whitaker drove in three runs with a pair of singles and Jim Slaton won his 14th game, despite yielding the 29th home run of the season to Milwaukee's Gorman Thomas. Whitaker singled home a run in the third inning and singled two more runs across in the fifth.

Orioles 4, Mariners 3
Eddie Murray's two-run homer off

Enrique Romo in the bottom of the ninth inning following Ken Singleton's double lifted Baltimore to its sixth consecutive victory. It was the 25th homer for Murray, who also doubled home Baltimore's first run in the opening inning.

White Sox 6, Indians 0
Rookie left-hander Ross Baumgarten tossed a five-hitter for his first shutout and complete game in the majors. He walked one and struck out six and had batting support from Thad Bosley, who collected two singles, a double and a triple.

The 23-year-old Baumgarten said he's "made the majors in my mind so much that I feel like I've been here before. I've had so many dress rehearsals in my mind that I feel like I've been pitching here for five or six years." In reality, he's been in the majors only two weeks.

Twins 3, Blue Jays 2
Willie Norwood singled home pinch runner Rod Wilfong from second base in the 11th inning after Butch Wynegar led off with a double. That enabled the Twins to end a seven-game losing streak.

Cards finally playing up to expectations

By The Associated Press
For most of this season, the St. Louis Cardinals have suffered. Finally, however, the enigmatic National League team is playing the way it was expected to.

Hardly lacking for talent with players like Ted Simmons, Lou Brock, Keith Hernandez, Garry Templeton and Ken Reitz in the lineup, St. Louis was in last place in the NL East for almost four months. Now the Cardinals have hit a hot streak that has seen them victorious in 17 of their last 22 games, including a 14-3 bombing of Atlanta Sunday that was their fourth straight triumph.

"What has turned the Cards around?" "Our pitching has been basically good all along. We just weren't putting any runs on the board."

St. Louis put plenty of runs on the scoreboard in Atlanta this weekend. They scored 11 runs Friday, nine Saturday and 14 Sunday.

Reitz led the way with three hits, including his 10th homer and three RBI as the Cardinals handed the Braves their seventh straight loss.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Chicago Cubs defeated Cincinnati 7-1; Philadelphia bested Los Angeles 9-3; Montreal won the opener of a double-header with San Francisco 2-1 in 10 innings, then the Giants took the second game 11-2; Pittsburgh was an 8-5 victor over Houston, and San Diego beat the New York Mets 3-0.

Both Boyer and Reitz taking playing has helped the Cards.

"Since we got Wayne Garrett to play third," said Boyer, "we started playing right-handers against left-handed pitchers and left-handers against right-handers. It has worked out pretty well."

"Sometimes you learn from sitting on the bench," said Reitz, who shares third with Garrett. "Just recently I have gotten two doubles and one single and three RBI in three pinch hits. The platoon playing seems to be working."

The St. Louis pair also thinks the Cardinals will keep on winning.

Despite different label Yanks join Communists in quest for Olympic gold

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

"If you can't beat 'em, join 'em."
That's a frayed axiom that will dictate Uncle Sam's intensified effort in the 1980 Winter and Summer Olympic Games, but the U.S. Olympic Committee prefers to put it more discreetly.
"We'll do it our way," says the USOC.
Shaken by the USSR's continued domination of the medal cache and embarrassed by the surge of East Germany, we Yanks have decided to fight back by stealing the Communists' secret weapon and putting a different label on it.

WE'RE GOING TO WIN by re-orientation — but under the free enterprise system.

Like the Russians and East Germans, we are marshalling our dollars, our resources and our brains to present the best possible front in the International sports arena. In the past, torn by the AAU-NCAA power struggle and inhibited by the specters of government intervention and sham-amateurism, we have fallen considerably short of our potential.

The new look emerges from years of intensified probing by the President's Commission and a mandate that the Olympic Committee assume the dominant role in coordinating and planning the United States' amateur sports programs.

The immediate result has been the establishment of year-around training centers — one at the former Ent Air Force Base in Colorado Springs, Colo., and the other in Squaw Valley, Calif. — plus a special facility to deal primarily with sports medicine.

ALREADY 3,500 ATHLETES have gone through these assembly lines at a cost of $3.5 million. Where does the dough come from? Largely through the largesse of corporations, donating not only materials but also funds to the national project.

Simmons provides the mattresses. The Canteen Corp. of America puts in the kitchens, Universal the gyms and Jaeger Corp. the computers and gadgetry for medical tests. Coca Cola donates the food service. These and other corporations also contribute money, a minimum of $26 million needed over the current Olympic period.

This is the American way. Does it smack too much of the sports factories of Leipzig and Moscow, the subsidization of athletes for political aggrandizement which we have sharply criticized in the Communist countries?

NOT AT ALL, insists Arthur I. Kuman, Director of Corporate Participation for the USOC.

"There is a marked difference between ours and the Communist way," says Kuman. "We do what we want to do. They do what they have to do."

Doing what they had to do, the Russians copped 125 medals, 47 gold, against 94 medals, 34 gold, for the United States in the Montreal Games. East Germany, with a fraction of the U.S. population, won six more gold medals.

"The Olympic ideal of emphasizing participation is a valid one," Kuman added, "but we Americans are poor losers. We don't like to get our pants knocked off us. We want to be No. 1."

"I DISAGREE that this is a selfish philosophy. If you want to compete, you must want to win. You either run to win or simply jog for the exercise. Both have merits. But in the Olymppics, since you run to win, there is nothing wrong in maximizing the performance.

"That is all we are trying to do. We are supposed to be one of the richest and most sophisticated societies in the world. We have tremendous scientific know-how. Our aim is to capitalize on our knowledge and our vast store of talent to achieve the best results."

Is there danger of turning our young kids into robots and creating Communist-style sports factories, as author Robert Stephen Spitz warns in a current Penthouse magazine article?

"Not at all," argues Kuman. "Of course, there is always the mother who wanted to be a Sonja Henie and who may push her daughter too hard, but such examples are rare."

"These new training centers provide excellent facilities and coaching. The kids love them. They are bound to improve our Olympic showing."

An athlete is tested for strength and endurance at the new U.S. Olympic Training Center in Squaw Valley, Ca., recently. This center, and a similar one in Colorado Springs, represent a new look in

U.S. Olympic efforts, triggered by Soviet and East German domination of the games. (AP Laserphoto)

Mixed emotions result from strike

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Across America this week, 52 men in a wide variety of jobs will be mailed pay checks for $102.

Few, if any, of those checks will be cashed.

"I'm going to frame that check and hang it on my den wall," said Bob Roesner, a Baltimore driver's education teacher. "That's my proof that for one day I was an umpire in the major leagues."

The major league baseball umpires who called a strike Friday, then took a walk, returned to work Saturday.

AN ARBITER with more clout than any ump — a Philadelphia federal court judge — issued an injunction temporarily halting the one-day walk-out, pending a Wednesday hearing. The second umpires strike in big league history, both of which so far have lasted one day, left behind emotions ranging from delight to bitterness.

"We violently disagree with the court's decision," said Richard Phillips, umpires' union attorney, referring to the temporary restraining order against the strike issued Friday by Judge Joseph L. McGlynn Jr.

"However, I advised the umpires to return to work out of respect for the judicial system, not out of respect for the order."

Phillips has filed an unfair labor practices charge with the National Labor Relations Board and charged that the McGlynn injunction violates antitrust legislation.

"THE COMMISSIONER of baseball has questioned our integrity," said Bob Engel, president of the umpires' union.

"The presidents of the leagues have let us know that they think with our lack of education we're lucky to have the jobs we have and be making the money we're making."
"Umpires are considered the bottom of the heap, like a necessary evil," said the angry Engel. "Does a breakdown of integrity start at the bottom?"

The typical labor hassle name-calling should continue at least until the Wednesday hearing.

If the strike can't be settled in 10 days, both league presidents, who feel they have a binding contract through 1981 with the umpires, have agreed to meet with the association in arbitration.

PHILLIPS SAYS he does not believe the matter can be settled by arbitration.

At the base of the dispute is that symbolic check for $102 — one game's pay for a rookie umpire who earns $16,500 for 162-game season.

The umpires' current contract, which includes a no-strike clause, provides for a maximum salary of $42,000, with the average umpire's pay believed to be close to $30,000.

However, most big league umpires work an extremely long and insecure apprenticeship to reach that major league minimum. Only a handful have reached the majors before the age of 30, or with less than 10 years experience.

Baseball wants the best men possible for its hardest job — umpiring million-dollar athletes — then promises a starting salary of $16,500 to the lucky few who survive a youth spent in the bushes.

BASEBALL HAS LONG kept its umpires in line because of the certain knowledge that thousands of folks in the stands believe they could do the easy job of yelling "Ball" or "Strike," "Out" or "Safe."

Those 52 umpires-for-a-day are perfect examples of the thousands of amateur umpires ready on an hour's notice to leap into the majors and to a job that the average fan finds indistinguishable from that of a big league ump.

"I wouldn't have missed this for anything," said Jim O'Connor, who worked first base in Baltimore Friday night. "I got as far as four years of umpiring in AAA ball, then I gave up the dream."

"I was on a camping trip on Fox Island (in Virginia) Friday morning. The police had to track me down with their CB network and send a boat for me. I drove in three different cars to get to the park."

Few men have an utterly impossible job that requires no academic credentials, pays well, offers four months vacation and looks simple. That's the big league ump.

SO WHEN umpires ask for a fifth-crew member so one night in five can be spent at the soft job of official scorer, fans howl with laughter. When umpires ask for a week's vacation in midseason, plus a payraise, fans snap back, "Yer already off all winter, ya blind bum."

"Our umpires are very optimistic that no court will sustain the injunction," said attorney Phillips; "and we will be back out on strike by Wednesday night."

Across the land, 52 amateur umpires are hoping they will. "I'll put that first $102 check on the wall," said Roesner, "but I think I'd cash all the others."

Tom Kite's self-imposed penalty lets Watson escape with title

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Tom Watson is the year's leading money-winner again, holder of four 1978 tournament titles, in position to gain another Player of the Year title and closing in on some other ambitions such as the Vardon Trophy and Ryder Cup.

At least some of those good things can be attributed to the instant, iron-clad and unhesitating adherence to the rules of golf by Tom Kite, who called a self-imposed penalty for an infraction no one else saw, a penalty that eventually knocked him out of a playoff role and let Watson escape with the title in the Hall of Fame Classic.

"That cost me the tournament," a disconsolate Kite said Sunday, then responded to a question: "You're damn right it hurts."

The incident, which occurred well out of the range of the national television cameras and wasn't even observed by Kite's playing partners, Hale Irwin and Howard Twitty, took place on the fifth hole of the final round on the No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

Kite had missed a 15-foot birdie putt. He had a tap-in of less than a foot for a par. As he set the club down, the ball rolled, "about this much," he said and held thumb and forefinger less than one-quarter inch apart.

Under the rules, it was a one-shot penalty. Kite immediately stepped back from the ball and told Hale Irwin, one of his playing partners, "I'm calling a penalty. My ball moved."

Neither Irwin nor Howard Twitty, who were playing with Kite, saw it. Those three eventually tied for second behind Watson — by the margin of the one-stroke penalty Kite called on himself.

Watson, playing in front of Kite, Irwin and Twitty, was unaware of the incident until after he'd watched both Kite and Twitty fall on long, 18th hole birdie putts that would have sent it to a playoff. Twitty's putt hung on the lip. Kite's just slipped by, and he collapsed in an agonized heap.

"It has to be very disheartening," Watson said. "It's something you have no control over."

He won this one with a 277 total, 7 under par, after a closing 71. He had a commanding five-shot lead at the turn, then had to hang on against the trio who finished a single shot back. Irwin had a closing 73, including a birdie on the last hole, Kite a 71 and Twitty 67. Danny Edwards came out of the pack with a 65 and took fifth at 279.

The victory was worth $50,000 and pushed Watson's earnings to a leading $303,429. He also moved ahead of Lee Trevino in the Vardon Trophy standings for the leading stroke average on the tour, 70.18 to 70.31.

And, with his previous wins in Tuc-son, the Bing Crosby and Byron Nelson, he's won more American tournament titles than any other player this season, which makes him the leading candidate to repeat as Player of the Year.

But, Watson said, "I'm kind of golfed out right now. Being the leading money winner would be important, but I'm not going to go out of my way for it. It'll almost certainly be decided in the World Series of Golf anyway."

He'll play in that rich event and only one other American tournament the rest of this season.

Vilas may miss U.S. Open

SOMERS, N.Y. (AP) — Defending champion Guillermo Vilas of Argentina may miss the United States Open because of a recent bout with an intestinal virus, Ion Tiriac, Vilas' coach, said Sunday night.

Vilas withdrew from his scheduled match with Cliff Richey Sunday night in the $30,000 Lionel Tennis Week round robin tennis tournament because of the virus that hospitalized him for two days.

Tiriac said he and Vilas would decide Tuesday if the Argentine would defend his title or withdraw from the tournament.

Vilas and Tiriac practiced Sunday for 45 minutes to evaluate Vilas' condition.

"We had to stop because Guillermo said he was dizzy," Tiriac said. "It is not surprising because he has been in the hospital for 48 hours while the doctors took tests."

Tiriac said the doctors suspected Vilas was suffering from an intestinal virus.

"He is very weak. We will practice again tomorrow (Tuesday) and if he can't play very well, I will pull him out," Tiriac said. "Why should he be a pigeon?"

McAlister avoids cut by sparking Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The National Football League won't long remember the New England Patriots-Cleveland Browns final exhibition game of 1978, but James McAlister will.

The former UCLA running back, who spent last year with the Browns, but didn't play, was 30 football minutes from the likely end of his NFL career Sunday.

But he came out roaring in the second half as New England beat the Browns 21-10 before a national television audience and finished the pre-season with a 4-0 record, best in the NFL.

"The coach (Chuck Fairbanks) told me early this would be my chance," said McAlister, who piled up 61 yards in 14 second-half carries and had two key pass receptions.

"I thought about it all week and everything came out my way. I'm a religious man and I thank God."

Formerly with Oakland and Philadelphia in the NFL and a one-season player in the World Football League, the journeyman McAlister set up the winning fourth-quarter touchdown Sunday and probably avoided the Patriots' final cut this week.

Otherwise, it was a game neither team took too seriously.

"We're building for games that count," said Cleveland quarterback Brian Sipe.

"It was a good evaluation for us," said the rookie Browns coach, Sam Rutigliano.

"Being 4-0 helps our momentum and team attitude," said Fairbanks, who is worried that some key starters won't be ready for the opener here against the Washington Redskins next Sunday.

Fullback Sam Cunningham, halfback Andy Johnson and tight end Russ Francis didn't play because of earlier injuries.

The Browns, who open at home against the San Francisco 49ers, finished 2-2 in the exhibition season.

Cleveland led 3-0 in the first quarter Sunday on Don Cockroft's 36-yard field goal but the Patriots were ahead 7-3 at halftime when quarterback Steve Grogan bulled in from the 1 after a short second-period drive. Tackle Richard Bishop had recovered a Cleo Miller fumble at the Browns' 27-yard line.

Tax revolt spreads, affecting almost every state

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The taxpayer revolt, which captured public attention with its California victory this summer, is growing into a national phenomenon touching virtually every state, an Associated Press survey shows.

The nationwide canvass of governors and other state officials reveals that tax relief measures will be on at least 10 statewide ballots this fall. It shows that citizen activists or officials in 23 other states are introducing legislation, circulating petitions or rallying public opinion for tax relief.

Some of these states are among 17 that granted substantial tax relief in recent years trying to ease discontent. In several states, taxes have become an issue among candidates this year. And in some states, even where there is no active revolt, the survey drew expressions of concern about taxpayer unrest.

The canvass was conducted on the eve of the annual meeting of the National Governors' Association, which opened Sunday in Boston. In interviews, the governors and other state officials reported no taxpayer rumblings at all in only three states—Oklahoma, Wyoming and West Virginia.

Oklahoma has high revenue from oil and gas. Wyoming property taxes have dropped as mineral taxes have risen. West Virginia adopted a constitutional limit on property taxes 30 years ago. The limit can be exceeded only with the approval of 60 percent of the voters.

California voters put angry taxpayers in the spotlight by approving Proposition 13, an initiative slashing property taxes and limiting future property tax increases. Proposition 13 has forced a 57 percent reduction in California's local property taxes.

The tax revolt "is very serious and is going to continue until government is responsive to the will of the people to limit spending and taxation," said Gov. James B. Longley of Maine in response to the survey.

Gov. Richard Lamm of Colorado, whose voters will consider a constitutional limitation on government spending, said: "Citizens are clearly looking at ways to gain more control over government.

"If the constitutional amendment passes, it will not be because of a well-organized campaign supporting the amendment, but rather because of the mood of the public," Lamm said.

Most of the officials said the discontent in their states had not reached the stage of rebellion that brought passage of Proposition 13. But their survey responses reflected a general mood of discontent.

"Are they marching on the capitol? No. Are they carrying pitchforks and spindling government officials? No," said Gov. Robert F. Bennett of Kansas. "On the other hand there has always been a concern in Kansas and other states about the property tax burden."

"I would describe it as a concern, a desire that the local units of government that live on the property tax spend their money wisely — and, in some instances, a disenchantment by taxpayers on how some local units of government do spend their property tax."

But in many cases the dissent seems to run deeper.

In Maryland, where the Legislature recently passed a comprehensive property tax relief package, proposals will be on the ballot anyway in two suburban counties just outside Washington, D.C., to slap a firmer lid on local taxing and spending.

In some areas taxpayer resistance and government steps to allay it already were in progress before the highly-publicized California vote, but the overwhelming success of the Proposition 13 initiative has served to spark some of these and inspire many others.

An Oregon version of Proposition 13 was proposed last January and gathered dust until the California version passed. Within a month, petitioners had gained some 200,000 signatures, unprecedented in a state with only 2.3 million population.

Alabama has the lowest property tax rate in the nation and hasn't passed a consumer tax in eight years, but Gov. George C. Wallace says he has a tax revolt on his hands "in the sense that the people will not stand for any increase in taxes."

A ballot proposition in Arizona would limit total state outlays to 7 percent of the state's personal income. Arizona also has indexed its income tax brackets to compensate for inflation.

The Arkansas ballot has a proposal to remove the 3 percent sales tax from food and drugs. The issue had been considered and rejected by several recent legislatures. But this year, citizen groups got 70,000 signatures to force a referendum.

In the past two years, the Colorado legislature has placed statutory ceilings on expenditures, but this fall the voters will consider a constitutional lid on spending by state and local government.

At least two tax issues are expected to be on the Massachusetts ballot, although signature verification is incomplete. One supported by Gov. William Milliken would limit growth of property taxes to the rate of inflation and the state tax levels to personal income.

A Nebraska initiative would place a 5 percent limit on increases in local government budgets, but the lid could be exceeded on a vote of the people.

Nevada will vote on a California-type measure which would roll back property taxes 60 percent. However, it would have to be voted on again in 1980 before becoming final.

In North Dakota, voters will decide whether to approve an initiative which would save taxpayers an estimated 37 percent. Tax cuts, especially for the elderly, would result from an amendment on the Texas ballot.

Petitions are still circulating to force votes in other states. A version of Proposition 13 in Idaho and a cap on spending in Massachusetts are given the best chances of making it on the fall ballots.

Typical of concerned if not particularly pressed governors is George Busby of Georgia who said his state doesn't face a revolt but acknowledged "we have a lot of people... that are concerned with the operation of government at all levels and the taxes they have to pay to operate these governments."

Wilderness fight rages Guide gives armchair tourists flavor of New York's boroughs

By MICHAEL HOFFMAN

ELY, Minn (AP) — The moose, eagles, bears and canoeists seem to get along pretty well in northeastern Minnesota, but the natives are restless.

The problem is the Boundary Waters Canoe Area, an officially designated wilderness of 1 million northwoods acres along the U.S.-Canadian border in the Superior National Forest.

It's an area of wood and wildlife, good fishing, hunting, lakes and rivers, quiet, and always, the haunting call of the loon.

It's one of the few places left in this country where a person can still slake his thirst by dipping a cup into a lake or river.

Under the 1964 Wilderness Act, then Secretary of the Interior Orville Freeman broke the BWCA into two zones — a 600,000 acre Interior Zone and a 400,000 acre Portal Zone.

Logging was permitted in the Portal Zone, but in 1973 the Sierra Club, a national conservation organization, sought a ban on all timber cutting in the BWCA.

That's when the troubles started, and the dispute has since widened to include efforts to limit the region's use to all but canoeists and hikers.

Bumper stickers sprouted: "Sierra Club Kiss My Axe" was common.

"There is hostility and ugliness here now," said Lynn M. Laitala, 33, of nearby Winton. "It's a holy crusade by the environmentalists."

The matter is before Congress. The House has passed a bill that would shrink the area where boat motors could be used from the current 60 percent of the water surface of the BWCA to 17 percent. A second bill sponsored by Minnesota's Democratic Sens. Wendell Anderson and Muriel Humphrey is in the works. It would, in its present form, cut motor usage from the current 120 lakes to 94.

In fact, neither the Friends of the Boundary Waters Wilderness, a group seeking an end to motor use, nor the Boundary Waters Conservation Alliance, made up mostly of local people who want to use the area as they always have, is comfortable with either bill.

The Friends of the Boundary Waters, a coalition of conservation groups, says the BWCA is a wilderness and should be limited to use that doesn't subject it to the sounds and sights of today.

The Boundary Waters Conservation Alliance says it hasn't been a wilderness in 40,000 years.

"The area has never been pristine. It has been the site of known habitation since the glaciers," said Ms. Laitala.

"The basic self concept of the local residents is that of a woodsman," she said. "Their identity is in the woods. They put up with a lot just to stay here."

"Right now they can't even use snowmobiles" in the BWCA, she said. "They can still put a 10-horse (10 horsepower outboard motor) on the boat and go fishing, but that'll all be gone too," the sometime teacher at the University of Minnesota said.

"We want the BWCA to remain the way it is now," said Ed Zablnski, 23, a graduate student at the University of Minnesota's Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs.

"We realize the need to compromise and local people feel they have already given up a lot. If there had been a bill putting a freeze (on the BWCA) it would have been supported," Zablnski said.

"It's a nation's resource — a people's recreation area," he added.

Guide gives armchair tourists flavor of New York's boroughs

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Edith Wharton, William Dean Howells and Henry James had two things in common.

Well-known: All were writers. Not so well-known: At various times they all lived and worked in the same house in New York City's Greenwich Village.

The same — almost — for Thomas Wolfe, Dylan Thomas and Brendan Behan. At one time or another, they all sheltered in the city's near 100-year-old Chelsea Hotel and presumably did some of their writing in its rooms. Aside: Edgar Lee Masters wrote a poem about the Chelsea.

These and any number of other off-beat bits regularly enliven the pages of a book with the not very lively title of "AIA (American Institute of Architects) Guide to New York City."

The guide, written by architects Norval White and Elliot Willensky, tells of the architectural treasures — and non-treasures — that dot New York's five boroughs. Provided are easy-to-follow maps of walking tours through the areas described.

But for those who prefer to let their eyes rather than their feet do the walking, the guide is also thick with snippets of interesting information for the armchair tourist to read.

Those interested in writers might like to store up some cocktail party chit-chat by learning that poet Edna St. Vincent Millay was given her middle name after St. Vincent's Hospital in Greenwich Village. "It seems the hospital had saved the life of a relative." Or that Edgar Allan Poe was treated at the Northern Dispensary "for a head cold in 1837 — without charge, as are all who can't afford the fee." Or that Herman Melville worked "on what was then the Gansevoort Dock as an outdoor customs inspector for 19 years. It was sometime during these years that he completed 'Moby Dick.'"

Off the literary trail: — The Statue of Liberty, a world famous symbol, is "Perhaps three times the height of the Colossus of Rhodes, which was one of the 'Seven Wonders of the World.'"

— Wall Street, another ubiquitous symbol. How did it get its name? According to the guide: "The Dutch wall of 1653 (a palisade of wood pilings) was built as protection against attack from English colonies to the north. The English took it down, but the name remains."

— Railroad flat? It comes from the Lower East Side tenements that housed residents in "rooms strung end to end like railroad cars."

— Cleopatra's Needle. This obelisk, located behind the Metropolitan Museum, was "a gift of the Khedive of Egypt in 1880. It was rolled over tortuous topography from the Hudson River on cannonballs to the 'worst place within the city for getting an obelisk to.'"

Notes about presidents: George Washington: For 10 days in 1783, Fraunce's Tavern "was the last residence of Washington as a general... He returned six years later and five blocks away to take office as president at old City Hall..."

Chester A. Arthur: Presidential inaugurations normally take place in Washington. find that of Franz Sigel, a Union Army officer during the Civil War, of interest since "in the iconography of equestrian sculpture the steed's four legs touching terra firma mean the hero died a peaceful death."

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

"GIRL FRIENDS" applies the sharp edge of truth to the experience of a young woman trying for a career in New York City. The film by Claudia Weill exhibits the shoe-string nature of the production; early scenes are jump, the film grainy (it was shot in 16mm). But Weill's vision remains steadfast, and the script by Vicki Polon is insightful and human. The material is brought to life by an absolutely sensational performance by Melanie Mayron, who seems to be living the role of the photographer beset by rejection and frustration. It is an unforgettable portrait. Anita Skinner is equally convincing as a former roommate, now an unhappy housewife and failed author. Rated PG, with a modicum of semi-nudity and a few cuss words.

Judge rules for 'family rights'

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Saying that a family has "the right to do what they can live with," a state judge has given preliminary approval to surgery in which a 7-year-old boy would donate one of his kidneys to his twin brother.

New pope shows devotion to predecessor's policies

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul I demonstrated his dedication to the policies of Pope Paul VI today by continuing in office the chief officials of the Roman Catholic Church's central administration appointed by his predecessor.

The new pontiff reappointed French Cardinal Jean Villot as Secretary of State, the equivalent of the Vatican's prime minister, and the heads of the nine Sacred Congregations, the main departments of the Vatican Curia.

Among the latter is Cardinal John Wright of Boston, who heads the Congregation for the Clergy and did not participate in the election of Pope John Paul Saturday because he was hospitalized for eye surgery. He was released from the hospital Saturday and is recuperating.

In another affirmation of Pope Paul's policy, the new pope reconfirmed Archbishop Agostino Casaroli as Secretary of the Council for Public Affairs, the Vatican's foreign minister.

The Vatican announcement said all the heads of congregations would serve the remainder of the five-year terms to which they were appointed by Pope Paul. However, this five-year period does not apply to Villot, Casaroli, or Archbishop Giuseppe Caprio, the substitute secretary of state, who are the pope's personal choices.

In addition to Cardinal Wright, the congregation heads are Cardinal Franjo Seper of Yugoslavia, the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the former Holy Office; Cardinal Sebastiano Baggio, Congregation of Bishops; Cardinal James P. Knox, Australia, Sacraments and Divine Worship; Cardinal Eduardo Pironio, Argentina, Congregation for the Religious; Cardinal Agnelo Rossi, Evangelization of the Peoples; Cardinal Corrado Bafle, Italy, Causes of the Saints; Cardinal Gabriel Marie Garrone, France, Catholic Education; Cardinal Pierre Paul Philippe, France, Oriental Churches.

Vatican sources said the pope may call a consistory this year to appoint new cardinals. Several cities which traditionally have cardinals presently are headed by bishops. They include Tokyo, Dublin and Turin. Also, the pope is said to have promised a cardinal's red hat to Bishop Ernesto Civaroli, secretary of the conclave which elected him.

The new pope dug into the business of church administration after pledging to overcome "internal tension" within the church and to continue the work of his two predecessors whose names he took.

All executive appointments in the Curia, the church's central bureaucracy, expired automatically with the death of Pope Paul on Aug. 6. But John Paul had been expected to reappoint most or all of them both because of his commitment to carry on Pope Paul's policies and because of his own lack of Curia experience.

The new pope's only experience at the Vatican was as a member of the executive board of the Congregation for Sacraments and Divine Cult. He has spent nearly all his life in the Venice area, as a priest in his native diocese in the Alps, as bishop of Vittorio Veneto and for the past nine years as Cardinal Albino Luciani, patriarch of Venice.

Elected Saturday on the first day of voting by 111 cardinals locked in the Borgia Apartments of the Apostolic Palace, the new pope will be crowned Sunday. But the Vatican has not announced whether the coronation Mass will be in St. Peter's Basilica or in the square in front of it, where Pope Paul VI held his coronation in 1963.

A surprise choice who doesn't have an international reputation, John Paul is considered by some a conservative but was termed a "moderate" by Cardinal John Dearden of Detroit. And moderation was the keynote of his speech Sunday to the cardinals in which he pledged to carry on the reforms launched by the 1962-65 Vatican Council and the programs of Pope Paul.

He said the church's first duty is evangelization. He also pledged to go ahead with the movement for Christian reunification, "without doctrinal ceding but also without hesitation," to carry forward "with patience and firmness" the dialogue with non-Christians, and to help peace initiatives in "the turbulent world."

He made clear he gives high priority to obedience to the hierarchy. "We wish to preserve the integrity of the great discipline of the church in the life of priests and of the faithful," he said, and he called for "a strict response to our will."

This and his insistence on doctrinal continuity was interpreted as a clear indication that he would continue Pope Paul's controversial bans on artificial contraception, married priests and the ordination of women.

But he made no direct reference to these issues dividing the church.

"He's taught theology, and he wants to keep the church true to solid theology," said Cardinal John Carberry of St. Louis.

"I don't see much change, but he will be very effective at continuity of program," said Cardinal John Cody of Chicago.

"I do not have the wisdom or the heart of Pope John. Nor do I have the preparation and culture of Pope Paul," John Paul told a crowd of 200,000 in St. Peter's Square at noon Sunday. "However, I stand in their place. I must try to serve the church. I hope you will help me with your prayers."

He also received his first official invitation for a trip abroad. Archbishop Rosendo Huesca of Puebla, Mexico, sent a telegram asking him to attend a conference of Latin American bishops opening Oct. 12. Cardinal Pablo Munoz Vega of Quito, Ecuador, said it was too early to say whether the pope would go abroad so soon after taking over.

Vietnamese seek oil development

HONOLULU (AP) — U.S. companies will have a chance to participate in the development of Vietnam's oil and natural gas resources if trade relations between the United States and that communist country are restored, a congressman says.

"It was brought out very forcefully that the Vietnamese are interested in the exploration of oil and gas both onshore and offshore," U.S. Rep. Sam Hall Jr., D-Texas, said Sunday as he and six other congressmen returned from Vietnam.

The special House committee went to Vietnam and Laos for a six-day visit and were given the remains of 15 American servicemen killed in the Indochina war. The remains, 11 from Vietnam and four from Laos, were flown to Hickam Air Force Base on Sunday and taken to a laboratory for positive identification.

Vietnamese officials said there had been some drilling for oil and natural gas in the Mekong River delta and they expected drilling in North Vietnam, Hall said.

Striking firefighters join theater rescue

ANDERSON, Ind. (AP) — About 25 striking firefighters joined volunteers and supervisory personnel in rescuing patrons from a busy movie theater whose roof collapsed under heavy rains, authorities said.

Three people were injured when the roof of the Riviera Theater caved in Sunday night, police said. More than 100 other patrons, given only moments warning when water began pouring into the building, rushed for the exits to safety.

Fire Chief Ed Ballinger said most of the firemen "arrived on the scene like I knew they would and did assist all through the operation. I'm sure they'd be there again if we had another emergency, but still it is not a good situation."

Fireman Don Taylor broke off a negotiating session with Mayor Robert L. Rock to join rescue workers at the theater.

"I decided that the disaster was more important than they (city officials) were," said Taylor. "I got there and there were other firemen already there who had it under control."

The two sides remained at an impasse today.

Taylor said the 144 members of Firefighters Local 1262, who began their walkout Saturday, would remain off the job today. Deputy City Attorney James Freeman said the city would not rejoin the talks before Tuesday.

The City Council was scheduled to vote today on a proposed salary package that would fall short of what the union is seeking.

Meanwhile, just 10 men were on duty to protect this city of 71,000 residents, about 25 miles northeast of Indianapolis. Normally, 80 men work each shift.

Between 100 and 150 people were inside the theater, built shortly after World War I, when water began pouring through the ceiling as a summer storm with torrential rains passed through the city, Ballinger said. Moments later, the middle section of the roof collapsed in three stages, he said.

"The warning from the water saved a lot of people," he said. "One of the first witnesses we talked to was a man whose wife went to get a drink, and before she got back he almost lost touch with her because the water was pouring in through the roof between them."

Tower to speak here on gas bill

Republican U.S. Sen. John Tower is scheduled to report on legislative efforts to curb inflation and taxation when he speaks to the Midland Downtown Lions Club at noon Wednesday in the Midland Hilton.

Tower, who is seeking re-election to his Senate seat, also is expected to give a personal forecast on the congressional natural gas compromise.

The Lions Club appearance is part of a 12-day trip through 25 communities. He is to arrive in Odessa late Tuesday night and hold news conferences in Odessa and Midland Wednesday.

After speaking to the Lions, Tower is scheduled to leave for Snyder and Sweetwater, before returning to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Tower has announced his opposition to the Senate-House conference committee compromise on natural gas pricing. The senator, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, also has been critical of the administration's veto of the 1979 Defense Department weapons bill.

Midlanders who are not members of the Lions Club may make reservations for the luncheon by delivering a check for $4 per person to Duke Jirmeron's office at 607 W. Missouri Ave. no later than Tuesday noon.

"There's only one reason I ever smoked. Good taste. "So when I switched to low tar, I wasn't about to give that up. If you don't smoke for taste what else is there? "But there was all that talk about tar. "Unfortunately, most low tar cigarettes tasted like nothing. Then I tried Vantage. "Vantage gives me the taste I enjoy.
