Hiker Says Long Trek Difficult

By BOB CAMPBELL Avalanche-Journal Staff

When you cross the United States on foot, you think about more than where to sleep next or how much your feet hurt.

Paul Glover, a native of Ithaca, N.Y., who began his project four months ago at Boston, Mass., is a peripatetic philosopher after his 1,-700 miles or so of walking.

Scuffed and dusty and smelling like a wild deer, he stopped by the Avalanche-Journal this week to talk about his experiences.

Why walk across the country? Glover, 31, is a mountain climber whose mountain happens to be horizontal and more tedious than dangerous to scale.

He plans to finish in San Diego in about two months.

Asked what he expects in return for his tremendous exertion, he said, "I'd rather exert myself than not just on principle

"It's speculative, certainly. ! can't know exactly what its value will be to me.

'Aside from the immediate satisfactions of being outdoors and meeting people. I suppose it will be an enduring foundation for whatever else I do. I'll have a deep and vivid sense of the continent."

Court Backs But the Criminal Appeals Court, acting on a felony drunken driving case against Linzy Wade of Austin, said the act applies to all cases pending on July 1, but the 120-day period in which cases must be Dickerson brought to trial could not begin before

AUSTIN - The Lubbock County burglary conviction of Harold Wayne Dickerson was overturned today by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which ordered the indictment against the man dis-

The court noted that Dickerson, 33, previously was convicted of burglarizing a house belonging to a Lubbock woman, and that judgment was set aside by the appeals court because of limitations apparent in the indictment.

In the case reversed today by the appeals court, Dickerson argued that the indictment again is void "because it shows on its face that the prosecution is barred by the statute of limitations."

The appeals court agreed with Dickerson's contentions, observing that although the burglary complaint was filed before a justice of the peace on June 26, 1974, Dickerson was not indicted by the Lubbock County grand jury until July 13.

"The filing of a complaint in justice court does not toll the running of the period of limitations in a felony case," the appeals court said, noting that it is the actual date of the crime which is the deciding factor which, in this case, was alleged to be Jan. 29, 1971.

Dickerson was convicted by a jury in August, 1977, of the 1971 burglary of the Naomi Miller Martin residence at 4511 42nd St. and District Judge Thomas L. Clinton later assessed an 11-year prison sentence. Defense attorney Phil Brown claimed the indictment in the case was invalid because it was returned subsequent to the five-year statute of limitations.

Clinton denied Brown's plea for relief and the case later was submitted to the appeals court.

Mrs. Martin was murdered two days after reporting the burglary of her residence to police. The body, found sprawled on a living room couch, bore about 25

Challenger Defeated By Karpov

BAGUIO CITY, Philippines (AP) — Soviet defector Viktor Korchnoi's comeback drive foundered in the 32nd game of the world chess championship, and young Anatoly Karpov of the Soviet Union retained the crown he won by default from Bobby Fischer three years ago. The 27-year-old champion, who will collect a record $350,000 for his 6-5 win, was asleep when his 47-year-old oppo-nent conceded about 11:30 a.m. today, his interpreter said. Ninety minutes later, aides spirited him away to a private villa, and Western reporters were not allowed to speak to him.

Victory went to the first player to win six games, and there were 21 draws in the three-month match.

Although Korchnoi gets $200,000 as runnerup, his chief aide, British grand-master Raymond Keene, said the defeated challenger would file a protest with the International Chess Federation against "the intolerable conditions which Viktor has been subjected during the match.

The match, longer in number of days than any of the 12 previous world cham-pionships, began on July 18 and was frequently enlivened by charges from Korchnoi that hostile Soviet thought waves, yogurt signals and favoritism were being used against him.

After the 27th game, Karpov was leading 5-2 and appeared certain of victory. Then Korchnoi won games 28, 29 and 31 to even the score. British expert Harry Golombek said the challenger's comeback was "probably unprecedented in world chess match history. In the 32nd game Tuesday, Karpov mounted an early attack with his queen and two knights and make a shambles of the seldom-used Pirc defense Korchnoi was employing.

At the 34th move, Korchnoi had a recurrence of the time trouble that has plagued him throughout the match and had to complete seven moves in less than five minutes. Experts said in his haste he made some poor moves.

When Korchnoi sealed his 41st move and adjourned the game for the night, Karpov had a one-pawn numerical advantage and an overwhelming positional advantage. Two of his pawns were unhampered on the queen side, and one had advanced to the sixth rank. Golombek said there was no hope for the challenger, and Keene told reporters this morning he would give up. A little later Keene telephoned the resignation to acting chief arbiter Miroslav Filip of Cze-choslavkia but said Korchnoi would refuse to sign the score sheet because of the intolerable conditions.

Carter has ordered the production of a new generation of tactical nuclear warheads that are designed to be quickly adaptable for use as neutron weapons, State Department officials said today.

Carter still has not decided whether to deploy the controversial weapon, said the Defense Secretary Harold Brown is informing the European allies directly involved in the neutron bomb controversy of the president's decision, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

The officials said Carter's "intermediate decision" follows naturally from his April decision to postpone production and deployment of the bomb but to keep the option open while watching for a reciprocal display of restraint by the Warsaw Pact forces.

American military experts designed the bomb as a counter to increasing conventional military strength, particularly in tanks, by the Warsaw Pact countries along the central European front.

The bomb, known formally as an "enhanced radiation warhead," is designed to kill enemy soldiers, including tank crews, without causing widespread destruction of buildings in populated areas. It has a smaller blast area than normal nuclear weapons, but it emits a barrage of deadly neutrons.

The officials said the new generation of warheads, designed as 8-inch shells for a Lance missile of the type deployed in Europe, will be fitted with regular nuclear explosives, but could be quickly changed to neutron weapons.

The Soviet Union has waged a worldwide propaganda campaign against the bomb ever since its development became publicly known.

Its argument is that the bomb is particularly abhorrent because its lack of destructive power against property, as opposed to people, would make it more tempting to use in time of conflict. They say its use could rapidly lead to all-out nuclear war. The U.S. counter-argument is that the bomb is a more effective deterrent against conventional attack, precisely because it could be used effectively to stop

The new bomb aroused great controversy in West Germany, where it would be principally deployed. For a time, the administrations in Washington and Bonn each wanted the other to take the responsibility for requesting its deployment.

But just as the issue appeared to be resolved in favor of deployment, Carter abruptly decided to postpone deployment. He said he would make a final decision early next year, taking into account whether the Soviets responded with any matching display of restraint.

Warning Given Of Dangers

WASHINGTON (AP) - Chemicals and consumer products that are banned in the United States are being exported with little or no government effort to warn foreign users of possible health hazards, says a House committee report released

The report, prepared by the Government Operations Committee, was especially critical of the Consumer Product Safety Commission's delay in stopping the export of children's sleepwear treated with Tris.

The flame-retarding chemical was banned in the United States last year after it was found to cause cancer in laboratory animals. But CPSC records indicate that "a total of approximately 2.4 million (Tris-treated) garments were reported as having been shipped abroad" before the CPSC blocked export last May, the committee report said

It also said that "large quantities of hazardous pesticides are being exported" and suggested that foreign agricultural products treated with the chemicals could end up as U.S. imports.

"The United States has no uniform consistent, effective policy affecting the export of products banned by U.S. regulatory agencies," Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., charged in a statement accompanying the report.

A subcommittee headed by Rosenthal conducted hearings on the issue earlier

The report said the federal agencies involved in controlling hazardous substances in the United States - including the CPSC, the Environmenal Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration - had "inadequate" authority to monitor foreign sales, notify foreign governments or "provide adequate protection to U.S citizens from re-importation of banned products."

The report indicated that the three agencies had removed more than 500 pesticides, drugs, consumer products and chemicals from U.S. sale or use. But "millions of dollars worth" were contained in U.S. exports.

As evidence that U.S. exports have created health problems abroad, the House report cites testimony from S. Jacob Scherr, an attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council.

"U.S. companies continued to sell 2,4, 5-T in South America even after its EPA registration for most domestic uses was canceled in 1970," Scherr was quoted as saying. "In Columbia, a rash of miscarriages and deformed babies during the early 1970s has been possibly linked to exposure to 2,4,5-T. a pesticide similar in makeup to Agent Orange.

Newspaper Criticizes Attitude Of Harris Couple

tion's newspapers were saying last week:

Chicago Tribune:

William and Emily Harris smiled broadly after they were sentenced to 10 years in prison for the kidnapping of Patricia Hearst. Harris then expressed his love for "all the folks out there," as if he were a guest on a talk show.

Maybe they had something to smile about: the sentence will probably be reduced to 10 years and eight months under a new California sentencing law, and with good behavior they could be released in 1983. But the Harrris' real problem does not lie in their future in prison; it lies in themselves. There is something chilling about two people who behave as though they were celebrities after being found guilty of what - at least in terms of notoriety - may rank as the crime of the cen-

Equally chilling were the words of their defense attorney, Susan Jordan, aft-er sentencing. She told reporters the pair are "gentle, serious, considerate, wellmotivated people. They are committed to social change and they chose a very spectacular means to communicate that."

The first step in the expiation of a crime is to recognize it. The Harrises do not recognize it and neither, it seems, does their lawyer. That maybe is their problem, but it's also society's problem. There is something wrong when kidnapping is a "means to communicate" one's commitment to social change, and when a terrorist bombing is something to claim "credit" for. We had thought we'd passed the worst of this period of contempt for law. Now we wonder.

The government's reasoning behind the plea bargain negotiated with William and Emily Harris proves there should be an immediate pardon for newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

The Harrises were sentenced to from 10 years to life in prison for kidnapping Miss Hearst. These two members of the Symbionese Liberation Army could be released from jail in five years.

Deputy District Attorney Alex Selvin, who prosecuted the case against the Harrises, said the charge of kidnapping with bodily harm was dropped in exchange for guilty pleas to kidnapping. He said:

There was emotional harm to Miss Hearst, but we're dealing with a law involving actual physical harm. There's no question there was very little of that."

Selvin said testifying against the Harrises would have been an ordeal for Miss

If the kidnapping caused "emotional harm" to Patricia Hearst, as Selvin contends, then she should not have been prosecuted for her actions during her captivity. Miss Hearst is now serving a sevenyear sentence for bank robbery.

The courts have been more lenient with far more dangerous criminals than Patricia Hearst. Whether because of her background, or her family's wealth, the decision was made to crack down on her and send her to prison.

The government itself now admits she suffered emotional harm during her captivity. It is time to free Miss Hearst.

Erie, Pa., Times:

Can the United States get out of what ems to be a no-win situation in Nicara

A major hope is that most of the other Latin states in Central and South America see the danger of continued fighting in Nicaragua and are as anxious as the U.S. to work out a peaceable solution. The U.S. has made some tentative progress toward establishing a "framework for mediation" of the Nicaraguan fighting. But full agreement may be some distance in the future.

One of the problems for the U.S. is that many Latin Americans remember - and still resent - past American efforts in Nicaragua, centering around active military intervention. Further, the U.S. is suspect in the eyes of many because of its past close ties with the Somoza family, which has ruled Nicaragua as a one-man fiefdom for 45 years, denying any form of open politics.

There is no hope for the U.S. in sticking with Somoza. Our only hope is to try to head off further violence...and work for a moderate government in the future, one not dominated by either the right or the left, where, of course, Castro's Cuba waits in the wings.

Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript Telegram: Already more than 1,500 people have died in Nicaragua during the August and September fighting and there are no signs that the killing will stop unless certain steps are taken. What apparently is the desire of many people in Nicaragua, both of the right and the left, is that the rule of the Somoza family end. They have ruled since 1936 and most Nicaraguans want Somoza out. But how is that to be achieved?

.. The danger, according to our view, is that left-wing groups have a tendency to step in where there is chaos and impose their own rule which isn't necessarily an improvement over right-wingers and worse, again does not represent the peo-

General Somoza's rule seems at an end. What must be carefully orchestrated is the transition so that what follows is not just another dictatorship which is exchanged for what exists.

Assuming that GSA employees are not the only ones in government service who have their price, such a prediction should not be surprising.

President Carter has a duty to make sure that every appropriate government resource is brought to bear so that public confidence in the GSA is restored. Putting Robert Griffin, th GSA's former No. 2 man on the White House payroll after he was fired last July, was not a step in that direction. In cases involving the public trust, prosecution should be swift and forceful. The fact that offenders may have friends in Congress, and the argument that they have been in government for many years, serve only to increase, not mitigate, the severity of the crime.

Rutland (Vt.) Daily Herald:

The scandal-wracked General Services Administration is only the tip of a very large government procurement iceberg.

Wherever the investigation may lead, Of the $85 billion the United States government spends in purchasing everything from paper clips to office buildings each year, GSA accounts for only $5 billion.

Everywhere we look for fraud, it's going to be there, says Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Federal Spending Practices Subcommittee.

Sen. Chiles is drafting legislation to make government purchasing more open, more flexible, simpler and easier to police. In addition, federal agencies are giving attention to curbing fraud, including establishing internal anti-corrup-tion investigators. But in the final analysis, it will not do to flail blindly at all government as a wrongdoer. It will not do to condone the wrongdoing as a necessary part of government operations. It will take some temperate but clear-eyed realistic watchfulness, based on the proposition that whenever ordinary people and large amounts of money are put together in close proximity, some of the money seems to stick to some of the people.

The taxpayers are the real victors in the vote by the U.S. House of Representatives to uphold President Carter's courageous veto of the politically sacrosance public-works spending bill. Not since Dwight D. Eisenhower has a president had the nerve to blackball a bill which funds those juicy construction projects so dear to every lawmaker's heart.

Capitol Hill picked this fight with Mr. Carter. The lawmakers loaded the measure with money or projects the presi-dent opposed, rigged the bill with misleading totals, then defied him to veto it. But the president played hardball, too, and a lot of lawmakers got the message. The vote strengthens the president's hand in future spending showdowns with

It is becoming increasingly clear that President Carter means what he says about holding down the steady increase in government spending. He perceives, if Congress does not, that voters trace inflation back to government borrowing and spending. When Congress gets that message, the taxpayers' victory will have

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: What a difference, as they say, a few weeks make. It was only a short time ago that people were saying — and only part-ly tongue in cheek — that for the sake of the Democratic Party the highest act

Jimmy Carter could perform would be to resign the presidency and let Vice President Mondale steer the ship until Teddy Kennedy could put things aright in 1981.

But that was before Camp David, the natural gas compromise, the civil service reform bill, the ERA extension, the public works veto, the wiretap bill: before Mr. Carter's stock rose in the Gallup poll by 17 points, the sharpest upward gain ever, and before Newsweek's cover pronounced him "Born Again!" All of which — both the before and the after — strikes us as pretty silly... us as pretty silly...

At Last, They've Quit!

AS CONGRESS adjourned this week, Americans could heave a sigh of relief and thank God-for legislation that was not pas-

Most of the major legislation which did pass will be bad for the country.

There was, for example, the energy bill that went to President Carter's desk on the last day of the session. It extends federal controls on natural gas prices through 1985 and, if it stands up constitutionally, clamps them for the first time on gas produced and consumed in the same state.

The best that can be said about the energy legislation is that it's not as bad as Carter had hoped it would be.

CONGRESS PASSED an election-year tax cut, too, but only after the Democratic-controlled body rejected a Republican-backed Kemp-Roth plan that would have let the people keep more of their own money in future years.

In its final hours, the 95th Congress punished the free enterprise system with a socialistic Humphrey-Hawkins full employment and planned economy bill. But the good news was that the measure had been defanged and also recognizes inflation as a Public Enemy

In the wrong hands, Humphrey-Hawkins still can be an oppressive curtain on the na- George do it.

tion's economy but, hopefully, it'll just fade away and be lost in the Library of Congress. Another piece of Good News is that national health insurance will have to wait for a worse day, as will the onerous separate Department of Education that Carter and his federal control enthusiasts so earnestly

Another glorious failure of the 95th was its rebuff to the labor barons by refusing to reform the labor law so that they could get an even better stranglehold on American industry and business.

Measures making it easier to organize workers and allowing secondary picketing at construction sites, thus punishing employers and adding fuel to inflation, will be back up in the next Congress, to be sure, but every temporary victory gives us hope.

A CIVIL SERVICE reform bill which, if properly implemented, will make it possible to clear the deadwood out of the federal bureaucracy was one of the few positive pieces of legislation passed this year.

Trying hard to end this assessment on a positive note, we see that Sen. James Abourezk, the other half of the George McGovern-Abourezk team that South Dakota sent to the Senate is retiring.

If we're lucky, maybe next year they'll let

Let's Rescind 'em A Message

THE BATTLE over the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, which had been scheduled to end in March of 1979, now has a new

The sovereign states are to have until June of 1982 to decide upon ratification. A few observations are in order.

Last week's bitter, bruising Senate debate resulted from one factor that is not likely to be repeated for years to come.

When Congress approved the ERA and sent the proposed resolution out to the states in 1972, ngress wrote a seven-year deadline not into the body of the amendment, but rather into the resolution of submission. If the seven-year clause had been in the body of the amendment, the deadline could not have been changed without a two-thirds vote in each house. This could not have been obtained, and the matter never would have come up.

OBSERVATION NO. One: Flounders will fly and swallows will swim before Congress makes Seven-year clauses will clutter up the Constitution, but that's the way it's going to be.

The principal fight last week had to do with efforts by Sens. Scott of Virginia and Garn of Utah to deal with the matter of rescission. The ERA went out to the states in 1972. Within one year, 30 states had tumbled over themselves to ratify.

Then a remarkable chill set in. People began asking themselves what constitutionally, legally was meant by "equality of rights under the law." Second thoughts arose. In the ensuing five years, only five more states ratified—and in this same period, four rescinded. The purpose of the Scott-Garn proposal was to say that during an extension period, any legislature that had ratified the ERA "may rescind such ratification at any time prior to the ratification of the amendment by three-fourths of the several states." Their proposal lost decisively.

The defeat caused some anguish among opponents of the ERA, but it transported ERA supporters into rapture.

OBSERVATION NO. TWO: The anguish and the ecstasy were understandable, but the sighs and shouts were meaningless. Nothing the Senate could have voted on this particular issue would have made any difference.

If the states have a right to rescind, this is a constitutional right; it could not be taken from them by killing the Scott-Garn resolution. On the other hand, if the states have no right to rescind. the Congress could not grant it to them.

Is there a right to rescind? Did the legislatures of Idaho, Nebraska, Kentucky and Tennessee, all of which ratified in 1972, act lawfully in subsequently rescinding their ratifications? The short answer is that no one knows, and the Supreme Court never has laid down a positive pronouncement on the issue. Top constitutional scholars are in diametric disagreement.

OBSERVATION NO. THREE: Common sense supports the proposition that of course the states have a right to change their mind on a proposed constitutional amendment at any time during the amendment's pendency.

This can be demonstrated by the case at hand. Thirty-five legislatures have voted to ratify, 15 have refused. Four of the 35 have rescinded.

Let us suppose that Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, South Dakota and West Virginia should vote next year to rescind; in the past couple of years, each of them has moved in that direction.

Are we to understand that notwithstanding their clear rejection of the ERA, Congress could count all nine states toward the necessary 38? It seems inconceivable.

OBSERVATION NO. FOUR: The quickest, easiest way to end the discrimination that results for almost a full credit. from state laws is to persuade state legislatures to repeal-or, that failing, to go to court under is computed on an annual basis. So you can get the 14th Amendment.

Sens. Bayh and Kennedy are powerful gentlemen. They are perfectly capable of setting in mo-tion the repeal of all federal laws that deny equality of rights on account of sex.

I think the ERA is uncertain, unneeded and, in terms of its transfer of legislative power from the states to Congress, dangerously unwise.

I hope a dozen states rescind. But, observation No. Five: One way or another, win or lose, the Republic will survive and the status of women will not be greatly changed.

Miracle On 34th St.

HAROLD CHAPMAN, a sort of unofficial 'mayor and chamber of commerce manager of 34th Street." gave me a personally guided tour of that thoroughfare the other day, complete with upbeat commentary.

May

I have been fascinated by 34th Street ever since its development began in the 1950s. It was the first major artery here to be deliberately misplanned and mis-zoned from bald farm land into signboard jungle.

The street still suffers from the effects of a hodgepodge narrow strip of commercial zoning along its entire length.

I drive portions of it almost daily, each time re-calling the bitter almost-monthly battles between commercial developers and nearby homeowners that continued over the better part of a decade.

Homeowners finally threw up their hands in defeat as the fortune-hunting pressures transformed the street, a lot and a block at the time, into a mishmash of commercial uses with a ragged building setback line, inadequate off-street parking and a confusing outcropping of over-sized, improperly placed and often badly designed signs.

DESPITE ITS lack of planning and the weedcovered lots that are still vacant a generation after development passed them by, 34th Street has been a commercial success for many of its landowners and store operators.

It has had more than its share of vacant buildings as 50th Street sucked business away from it and as 50th Street, in turn, suffered some of the same fate with the development of even newer and larger shopping centers.

But as Chapman and I drove up and down 34th Street the other day, he pointed to pockets of resurgence which could lead the way to making it more of an asset to itself and to the city than it ever was in its heyday.

BEYOND DOUBT, 34th Street could go either way: It could become a rotting, ugly embarrassment to itself and an insurmountable blight to the residential neighborhoods across which it stretches-or it could rebound into an attractive. healthy street of commerce.

It boils down basically to the attitudes-the pride or lack of it-that the landlords and businessmen along its length transform into action or

A tool which can help them immensely, if they want the street to attract customers, is the City's new ordinance governing the size and placement of signs and billboards

The ordinance already has had some scattered positive effect as third-party and auxiliary signs have come down, new businesses have complied with the revised regulations and some older ones have voluntarily taken down their old signs and

By the time the ordinance becomes fully effective in about four years, the change for the better

In the meantime, the businesses could help their own cause, too, by encouraging their neighbors to cut the curbside weeds and eliminate other trashy evesores. INDEED, A GROWING number of 34th Street businessmen and investors already are leading the way to make the artery not only a place where business thrives but one that will be aesthetically pleasing and safe to drive. The Chapmans themselves have one of the more attractive redevelopments along the thoroughfare.

Others which I call to mind-and I'll be missing some that are just as good-include the Highland Activities Center, Taco Bell, the Mayer Clinic, First Federal Savings and Loan, Brasher-Goyette-Rapier, Design Today, Western Title, Frank McGlaun, Frito-Lay, Western Air Products and Anderson-Bigham.

THOSE, AND OTHERS like them, should inspire others to upgrade their 34th Street appearances, thus welding a stronger bond with each other and with the adjacent neighborhoods so that business gets even better than it is today.

Within a short time, 34th Street could become a model of self-perpetuating urban resurgence and

If it does, thus not hitting the bottom that downtown Lubbock hit a few years ago, the businessmen won't be the only ones to benefit. We all

Who'll Inspect The Inspector?

WASHINGTON-We haven't had even a medioere crime-buster on Capitol Hill since the late Estes Kefauver went to his reward, but we could

Some say we need a new government super-bureaucrat, a five-star Inspector General, who would nip corruption before it started by oversight of every Government agency.

And furthermore, one who would bring to trial march, would be a better word for the regiment of crooks that are already known to exist -all those he could catch and handcuff.

The Inspector Generalissimo would far surpass Kefauver in catches, for the melancholy reason that Estes fished almost entirely in the civilian ponds, grabbing gamblers and shakedowners off

THE INSPECTOR Generalissimo, on the other hand, would be licensed only to catch bandits tmostly in white collars) who work for the ever-loving Welfare State, and those who do the contract work for them, like painting, supplying office equipment and the like.

But from what is coming out before a Senate

Government Affairs subcommittee, there are more outlaws in marble palaces of government agencies than in organized crime. The Marshall Dillons of the subcommittee, headed by Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and John Heinz, R-Pa., have already proved to me that we don't need another super G-man. What we need is for those already in the U.S. Justice Department to get off their duff and shut

Lawton and Heinz are responsible to their con-stituents, and should be earning their salaries by insisting that the law-enforcement arm of government do some enforcement.

Where's the Justice Department in all this? Thus far millions of dollars in fraud have been exposed to the subcommittee. High administrators like Jay Solomon of GSA have moaned threatened and predicted worse to come. "The fraud, the corruption, the thievery, the mismanagement and downright abuse of the public trust that has been exposed to this date," said

Solomon, "are only the beginning." But has anybody been punished? Is it okay to rob the taxpayer on the theory that everybody's

It won't do to leave the impression that there are no honest contractors, who give full value or money-back, but there is no credit to boasting of one's own honesty. The reliable vendors of goods and services keep a dignified silence.

We see again that the difficulties of self-government are manifold, that enemies within are harder to cope with than those who can be dealt with by shot and shell. Can democracy ever win? It's a tough question.

You Can Write Off Child Care Expense

(Eighth of 10 columns)

YOU MAY BE entitled to a tax credit-a dollar-for-dollar cut in your tax bill for at least part of the cost of household help-via the child-care tax credit.

Q. Who can take the child-care credit? A. It's mainly for you, a married couple, incurring expenses for the care of dependent children under age 15, so that both husband and wife can go out to work. You and your spouse must file a joint return, but you both need not work full-time. You can get the credit even if one of you works part-time or is a full-time student And the credit is not just for couples.

If you're a divorced or separated parent, you can take the credit if you have custody of a child under 15 (even if you're not entitled to dependency deduction for the child).

The parent claiming the credit must have custody for a longer period than the other parent, and the child must have been in the custody of one or both parents for more than half the year.

Q. HOW MUCH OF a credit can you take? A. If you have one child under 15, you can take a credit equal to 20 percent of the first $2,000 you spend on the child (a maximum of $400). If you have two or more children under 15, you can take a credit that is 20 percent of the first $4,000 you spend on them (a maximum of $800). There is an additional limitation on the size of the credit that might affect some of you. The credit cannot exceed 3 percent of the earned income of the spouse with smaller earned income. If your spouse works part-time and only earns

$1,500, your child-care credit is restricted to $300. This can deprive the couple of the credit if one spouse doesn't earn any income for the year. There are some special exceptions.

THE LAW GIVES the break to couples where one spouse has no earned income because he or she is a full-time student or incapable of self-from June on cannot go toward the credit.

The time to check into all these details is now! You still have time to make appropriate adjustments to get the maximum credit.

Q. WHAT EXPENSES qualify for the credit? A. Broadly, the expenses of taking care of your child that allow you and your spouse to go out to work. The two categories are:

(1) Household expenses covering the operation of your home that provide benefit to your child. The full cost for the services of a cook, housekeeper, etc., who looks after your child will quali--but not money spent for a chauffeur or a

(2) The direct expenses for your child's care. Prentice-Hall stresses that you can include money you pay to a relative for taking care of your child-but the relative can't be your dependent, and what you pay the relative is subject to Social Security tax.

You also can claim a credit for the expenses of caring for a spouse or dependent incapable of self-care or any other dependents under age 15. File an amended Form W-4 with your company and claim the credit to which you're entitled.

Since August 1969, the American library, in a pre-war mansion near the heart of the city, has developed into a cultural center offering lectures, exhibits, films and concerts in addition to U.S. newspapers, magazines and about 10,000 books.

It is the only library operated by the U.S. International Communications Agency in the Soviet bloc that is not in the American embassy complex. No guard is posted outside the door and Romanians can come and go without apparent restrictions.

In recent years, Romania has established warmer trade and diplomatic rela-tions with the United States. President Nicolae Ceausescu has been a visitor to

According to Crouch, about 3,500 Romanians come to the library each month to read or take part in cultural programs. About 7,000 are on the library's mailing list and receive invitations to lectures and other programs not open to the general public.

Jersey Race Providing Few Sparks

By PAMELA BROWNSTEIN TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) - Despite one candidate who says he is Proposition 13 in the flesh and another who had person-al help from both Jimmy Carter and Ted-dy Kennedy, New Jersey's Senate cam-

The contest pits Democrat Bill Brad-ley, the former New York Knicks basket-ball star, against Jeffrey Bell, a political unknown who upset 24-year Senate veter-an Clifford Case in the GOP primary.

The race isn't working up much voter interest, despite Bradley's notoriety and big league endorsements and Bell's pitch for a Proposition 13-type tax cut on the

Five weeks before the election, according to Rutgers University's Eagleton Institute of Politics poll, Bradley led Bell

The poll also indicated that tax limitation isn't what has voters in the country's most industrialized state excited this year. Instead, they are more worried about inflation, prices and energy, the poll showed

The lack of voter interest is remarkable because last year's gubernatorial race — in a year when no other major elections were held — attracted almost twice as much voter interest.

The campaign has turned up few sur-prises. Wherever the candidates are — in crowds, on the podium or in personal interviews — they repeat the same answers, often word-forword.

Bell himself described one of the recent debates as "the same old merry-go-

Bradley has been careful not to tie himself too directly with President Carter, even though Carter came to New Jersey to endorse him. But he is backing traditional Democratic stands.

Bell follows the conservative Republican pattern, including the need for the B-1 bomber and a tough defense policy.

The only things they share are lack of any experience in elective office, Ivy League educations and the opportunity to run for office. to run for office.

Bell opposes the Equal Rights Amend-ment; Bradley favors it. Bell favors deregulation of natural gas; Bradley says he could support such a plan only if it were phased and included a condition to allow osition of price controls.

Bell is proposing a 33 percent cut in federal taxes, along the lines of the Kemp-Roth bill. Bradley is calling for a $45 billion tax cut aimed at people making $40,000 a year and under.

Bradley and Bell also are making inroads with the groups their parties tradi-tionally attract: Bell with the self-employed, retired and conservative, Bradley with liberals, urbanites and those under

They differ in style. Bradley is most at ease in crowds, giving a warm, firm handshake here and a "Hi ya" there. He moves smoothly from one outstretched hand to another, like an experienced square dance partner.

Bell, on the hand, appears more forceful on the podium, during the 20 scheduled debates throughout the state. His voice often pleads with and urges his audiences, almost shouting at them.

Julius Caesar is reported to have boast-ed that 1.2 million Celts were killed by Roman soldiers in Gaul (now France).

A 33-year-old physicist said he comes to the library in search of scientific periodi-cals "and for abstracts in physics that I cannot find. It's very useful for me."

The Romanians said they felt no pressure from their government authorities to stay away from the library, although one said he had friends in sensitive jobs who claimed their bosses frowned on it.

Director Crouch said the library hopes through its lecture programs on subjects ranging from international economics to President Carter's foreign policy to attract intellectuals and technocrats who influence Romanian society. "We'd like the library to be thought of place where intellectual discussions of international affairs, political sciences, economics would be carried out," Crouch not just as a cultural institution, but a

ia in 1969, the first by an American chief executive to a Soviet bloc country. Under the agreement, the Romanians op an information library in New York.

According to Crouch, the library not only lends to individuals but to Romani-an schools and other institutions which have found it difficult to obtain Englishanguage books on technical, scientific nd literary subjects.

It also donates collections on American studies to Romanian schools, provides books and teaching materials to professors of English at Romanian universities and supports the 11 U.S. professors cur-rently lecturing in institutions here under an exchange program.
"Since these educational materials are American, it is in our interest to have these materials circulating in the Romanian community," Crouch said. "We think the Romanian intellectual ican library."

Crouch said most popular are the American movies shown a few times each month in a room seating about 300... Admission is free.

"It's a draw, a very good draw," he said. "Last month we showed "Marathon Man, for example. But the people come early, they go to the book sections or see what else we have plannned."

This month's program includes the movies "Front Page" and "Rooster Cogburn," an exhibit of drawings by American artists living in Rome and a jazz concert.

There also are readings in the original and in English translation of Romanian poetry and a discussion of U.S. foreign policy. November's schedule includes a week of U.S. films that "show concern for social justice," Crouch said.

Lecturers generally include university professors or authors in Europe for study or on other business.

Book Gives Suggestions On Family Budgeting

By ELAINE Q. BARROW
Associated Press Writer
A budget you can enjoy? One that fits your style of living? YES. Author Alice Priest has come up with some fresh ideas that advocate "happy saving and happy

Too often the word "budget" carries the connotation of a stringent, rigid, rule-ridden way of dealing with money.
Mrs. Priest points out, however, that there are no right or wrong attitudes toward money. Each person has a choice in the way to spend or save money — which she explains in a book she has written. "The book emphasizes strategies that you ought to — rather, might — adopt,"

'Fair-Itis' Strikes Family

ENNIS (UPI) - In a trailer kitchen that isn't big enough to cuss a cat, the queen of the Texas Sate Fair handles pots and pans with prize winning desterity, and when she isn't inviting people over to taste her steaming pear strudel, she's overseeing her dynasty of blue ribbon

Every fall for 18 years, Lillie Crowley has loaded her car with jars of homemade jellies, jams, preserves and other foods to make the 30-mile trek north to Dallas to compete in the nation's largest state fair. And after each fair for those same 18 years, she's loaded her car with the ribbons she's won for the return trip.

This year, Mrs. Crowley - dubbed "queen of the state fair" by a Texas magazine — bypassed the competition for the first time, instead sending six of her 14 children to town to follow in her foot-

The result was that 14-year-old George won five blue ribbons, 12-year-old Caro-lyn took three, 16-year-old Jimmy brought home two and married daughter Loretta Caldwell won one.

"I feel like Cinderella," Mrs. Crowley said, taking her hot pear strudel from the oven. "If I'm the queen of the state fair, my children are the princes and princess-

Although George's five blue ribbon are fairly impressive, he still has to go some to beat his mother's state fair record. In 1961, Mrs. Crowley won 11 blue ribbons and a year later came back to win 13. And in 1973, her cooking paid off in 43 blue, red and white ribbons — another record that still stands.

Mrs. Crowley, 52, said she first entered the fair with a variety of preserves she doesn't remember — but she does recall coming back with a red ribbon. That was enough, she said, to give her "fair-itis."

"I was having so much fun," she said.
"The family came to the fair and everyone ooh'ed and aah'ed. I was nice to do something well that you do in your home everyday. Then it started being a great

When the children could reach the top of the stove, Mrs. Crowley said she encouraged them to join her in the kitchen and the competition. All but one of them have entered, and even the one who didn't married a girl who has written an

In putting together her prizing winning foods, Mrs. Crowley prides herself on not resorting to the array of kitchen gadgets available to the modern chef.

"My kitchen isn't big enough to cuss a cat," she said. "I just have this one butane stove with four burners on top. Nothing special, no fancy ovens. Just the run-of-the-mill department store pots and pans."

Although she and her children spend the entire year cooking and canning their homegrown fruits to get ready for the state fair, she conceded they all spend a lot of time in the small kitchen of her trailer home in furious last minute prepa-

"We're all cooking in here at the same time," she said. "It's a real mess, and no one likes to do the dishes."

Mrs. Crowley said there is a secret to the success she and her children have enjoyed at the fair.

"The things you like to eat are the easiest to make, and they are the things you'll make best," she said. "What child doesn't like a peanut butterjelly sandwich? That's why my children are so good at making preserves.

"You have to like food and appreciate it. You must have a joy of eating food, not in a gluttonous way, but savor the food God has given us to nourish our bod-

Despite those comments, however, Mrs. Crowley said when she and her hus-band, Paul, take the children to the fair on weekends they all end up stuffing themselves with junk food.

"Well," she said, "that's the state fair. When the children get up there they just demolish my budget.

Mrs. Crowley said even though wasn't competing in the foods division this year, at the request of the fair offipies, casseroles and preserves. And sic hasn't dropped out of fair competition

Instead of foods, this year Mrs. Crow-ley entered three pictures of a recent trip in the fair's photography comp "I didn't win anything."

CONDOMINIUM DWELLERS WASHINGTON (AP) - Condominiums are most appealing to couples over age 55 and singles under 35, according to a summary of a poll released by the Na-tional Association of Home Builders. The association said its poll found that 34 percent of condominium buyers were age 55 or older and 38 percent were 35 or young-er. Almost 50 percent were bought by es with no children, while 23 perent were single persons.

she says. "It has no 'ought to's'."

Mrs. Priest urges the reader to "find out about yourself; are you a hoarder or a

A test of 30 questions is included in her book. Once answered, you'll find out if you are a careful spender (sometimes over-cautious); a middle-grounder who achieves a reasonable balance between saving, spending and credit, or a high scorer who tends to "hold money very lightle".

Each is given specific advice on how to save, buy insurance and housing, pay col-lege and transportation costs, and use of credit. There are also tips for combatting

Mrs. Priest, an editor of Business Week magazine who often writes the cover sto-ry, says tools for building a budget in-clude four elements — insight, input, involvement and income.

The insight can be gained from the quiz and the input by a family brainstorming session to set goals. As for involvement, Mrs. Priest suggests that both husband and wife take turns at handling the famiand wife take turns at handling the family expenses, and that even a teenager might take a stint at keeping the books.

The family budget, she says, should include the combined income of husband and wife for the combined expenses of the family. If only one spouse works, she says, equal credit should be given for the other's labor in keeping the home.

Handling money is emotional, she observes. Once you understand your emotional approach to money — and that of other family members — you can plan strategies.

Money is said to be the No. 2 problem (after sex) in marital strife. If both partners understand how they respond psychologically to money, they can adjust to each other's goals — or shared goals.

Although Mrs. Priest professes no bias toward hoarders or spenders, she indicates in conversation that compulsive savers miss out on a lot of living.

"There is a risk for those who save (compulsively)," she says, "There's the risk that they won't enjoy the fruits of their labor.

"They may get to the point where they will be too old to spend their money and be able to enjoy it, or will have to spend it for things they didn't expect to."

She adds, "We've all seen parents who left their kids well fixed and then the kids went out on a spending spree, which is the last thing their parents would have

But Mrs. Priest does not knock impulse

"If that's your want, you should have disposable income to spend," she said, bringing out a point of her book:

"A personal disposable income is the essential ingredient in every budget. It is the sum of money assigned each month to both partners to spend or save exactly as each sees fit ..."

She calls it "nag-free, happy" money and contends it is "the most important safety valve any marriage can have." With the approaching holiday season, she has some advice for those who stick to their budgets throughout the year only to go on a Christmas shopping spree.

"Whatever you plan to spend, you should add a cushion to it," she says. As for equating extravagant, mono-grammed, designer purchases with status, Mrs. Priest says, "I don't believe buyers are saying, 'This is for status.' I believe they are thinking 'This shows I

"But why haven't they gone to the next step to ask themselves, Why do I have to show I can afford it?"" Mrs. Priest and her husband, Richard, a financial executive, have a son and a

Asked if she handles her family finances, Mrs. Priest says, "To be perfectly honest, I must confess that for many, many years my husband handled the finances altogether.

"Then my mother became ill and I had to take over her finances." That event, she says, was her initiation into money handling.

The prize, which carries a $25,000 award, went to David H. Hubel, 52, and Torsten N. Wiesel, 54, both of Harvard University, and Vernon B. Mountcastle, 60, of Johns Hopkins University, Columbia announced Sunday.

Mountcastle's research, which began in the 1950s, entailed the development of techniques widely used today to study the brain's sensory systems.

Using a microelectrode he devised, Mountcastle, a native of Shelbyville, Ky., analyzed the brain's sensory system that relates to touch and pressure.

The study showed how incoming senso ry information is encoded and provided the first direct evidence that bundles of nerve cells in the cerebral cortex serve as the brain's elementary unit of information processing.

In separate research on the visual cor-tex, Hubel and Wiesel demonstrated that nerve cells were organized in columnar units and that the cortex was hierarchically arranged with sensory information, entering a primary area and progressing to more sophisticated levels of process-

Brussels Belgium, September 29, 1978: The first American ham to win an international gold medal for excellence.

The Gooch Golden Award Ham.

Now an American ham has earned worldwide acclaim.

European hams have been favored by chefs — until now.

For centuries, fine hams have been a tradition in the Old World. Connoisseurs, gourmets and great chefs have ranked European hams as the best in the world.

But now an American-made boneless ham challenges that ages-old reputation. Now the Gooch Golden Award Ham has won the coveted Monde Selection Gold Medal to earn international acclaim and start an American tradition.

Made the Old World Way for Old World Flavor.

Everything that is best in European hams goes into the Gooch Golden Award Ham to give you an Old World flavor that compares with the finest hams you can buy.

Only the choicest, leanest, most tender parts of select hams are chosen. The ham is carefully boned and excess fat and gristle removed.

Massaged for extra tenderness.

After the choicest portions of the ham have been delicately seasoned and cured, the meat is gently kneaded and massaged for 16 hours before it is cooked.

This tenderizes the ham even more and holds in the natural protein. The result is a delicious, protein-rich, supremely tender precooked boneless ham. It's very lean, with a sweet, hint-of-smoke taste everyone in your family will really enjoy.

And now the price. Prepare for a surprise.

The Gooch Golden Award Ham costs only pennies more than ordinary hams which are not as lean and tender. So why settle for less? Get the gold — the Gooch Golden Award Ham.

"We want you to try the Gooch Golden Award Ham. We're so sure it will be the best you've ever tasted, we guarantee your with no questions asked money back if you aren't satisfied." Robert Gooch, President Gooch Packing Company Your Gooch Golden Award Money-back Guarantee You must be satisfied that the Gooch Golden Award Ham is equal to or better than other fine hams costing as much or more, or your money back with no questions asked.

Cancer Patients Afraid

CHICAGO (UPI) - Many people who have been told they show cancer-like symptoms delay or refuse to see a physician because they distrust the medical profession or are afraid of confronting the disease, a group of researchers says

A team of University of Chicago reearchers, who interviewed people who disregarded cancer warning signs, reported Sunday distrust and fear were two of the most common factors affecting the decisions of cancer victims.

Other factors cited in the study by Howard P. Greenwald, Selwyn W. Becker and Michael Nevitt of the university's Graduate School of Business were the feeling by victims that they were invul-nerable to cancer because their families were free of cancer deaths, and the ina-bility to find a doctor to check the danger symptoms.

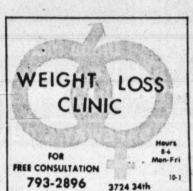

Nearly 10 percent of those interviewed said they delayed action for at least four months even though they had strong suspicions they had cancer, the team report-

ical of the medical profession, saying doctors did not care about their patients and tended to be careless in their exampinations. They often blamed doctors for the deaths of relatives and described the physicians as "robber barons" and "ripoff artists."

Others admitted they were afraid of the disease, reasoning, "If I have cancer, I don't want to know about it," the researchers said "Nationwide cancer screening may be

Oil Boom Causing Problems

LERWICK, Shetland Islands, Scotland (AP) - The hardy ladies of these remote islands north of Scotland are on the warpath against plans to fly in strippers to keep lonely oil workers happy.

The women, many of whom shun lipstick and other makeup, say they'll stop at nothing to prevent the arousal of "God-given instincts" by the big-city strippers from Edinburgh and Glasgow.

They've started a petition in Lerwick, the islands' main town and say they've already collected more than 500 signatures.

Jane Cook, a leader of the newly formed Shetland Women's Group, said: "With the ever-increasing number of crimes committed against women, the introduction of a regular striptease act can only degrade and threaten women even

The strippers are being hired to entertain thousands of workers building a huge oil terminal at Sullom Voe, 30 miles north of Lerwick. The men, most of them separated from their families on the mainland, live in construction camps far from town.

The women see their campaign, which they claim is backed by many islanders and clergymen, as a rearguard action against the turmoil caused by the oil boom that hit these islands five years ago when some of the richest fields in the North Sea were discovered offshore.

The boom shattered the Shetlands' traditional way of life, little changed for centuries, bringing unheard-of affluence.
Before the boom, the 20,000 islanders eked out a perilous living knitting sweaters, fishing a cruel sea and scraping a bare living from the peat-covered hills of their archipelago.

Although the oil boom has meant new schools, houses, social facilities and more money, it has inflated prices and caused ers, many of them descendants of Viking raiders who settled here in the eighth century

Youngsters quit school early, lured by fat paychecks for unskilled work at Sul-lom Voe. The traditional fishing and knitting industries have run down because they can't compete with the big money naid by the oil companies.

Hundreds of men quit their jobs to work at the oil terminal where they can earn $280 a week. Three years ago the average wage was $75.

The hospitable islanders never used to lock their doors because there was no crime to speak of. But they do now. Police said crime had risen 40 percent in the past three years. Last year the islands had their first murder this century and marijuana can now be bought in Lerwick's bars.

First, the stock market. While prices of food, real estate, art, collectibles, gold and most everything else have soared in the past decade, the Dow Jones industrial average remains stuck.

Eventually, it is said, this situation will correct itself as investors recognize that the industrial superstructure of America is available at bargain basement prices.

This viewpoint assumes the bargains will be recognized, not just by institu-tions, but by millions of liquid individual investors who for several years have been reluctant to have anything to do with Adding more thrust, according to this approach to the market, is a growing distrust of currencies, not just dollars, by wealthy foreigners who already have lost too much by holding paper.

Foreigners have been active in the U.S. real estate market over the past few years, buying not only commercial real

In the market, it is said, investors can of the dollar and by the recovery of the market itself.

To a degree, the assumptions made in theory No. 1 overlap those in No. 2.

Because of its annual 10 percent to 12 percent appreciation in the past five years or so, residential real estate is believed to have drawn considerable money that otherwise might have gone into Some stock market analysts now say the appreciation in housing is approach-ing a temporary peak, with buyers rebel-ing against asking prices that have dou-bled in six years or less.

In many instances, it is said, the buyer is in a position to resist because, already forced to buy to put a roof over his head. His interest in housing is as an investor.

If the anticipated return is not good, the analysts argue, the residential real estate prospector will not put up his money; he will search elsewhere for an investment and let the house rot on its lot.

There are those, however, who claim stock market people are poor real estate analysts, that while they might know what is going on in Wall Street, they have no understanding of what is happening

Among other things, these critics say that demographics, lifestyles, geographic mobility, and control and security of investment provide an unsinkable concrete base beneath the real estate market.

Maybe so, but perhaps it does not even matter that much. In order to be right, professional analysts need not produce the most penetrating and correct reasons for their assumptions.

Women Get Chance To Join Circus

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (EPI) — The sliver Ringlin Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus trais slipped out of Denver before dawn today packing the invisible baggage of fantas along with the tigers and trapezes.
The circus, using aerial gymnastics, and of clowns and a line of pretty is dies waving from atop elephants, weave a gypsy dream in the eternal child the lives in all audiences.
The spell is cast by the sparkle of co tumes and the parade of wild animals. Be the time the circus train rolls out of the sleeping city, hearts are firmly ensnare in the tangle of high wires above th in the tangle of high wires above the three rings.

For most, the dream of joining the circus stays a private fantasy. But for more than a dozen Denver women, the childhood yearning took form one afternoon in an audition for showgirls.

Ringling Bros. employs 40 showgirls to dance, smile and ride docile pachyderins. A newspaper ad drew 13 local aspirants, some polished dancers in black leotards. Others brought only hope and winced as they moved sneakered feet through the tryout routine.

"Kick, jump, pivot, kick and kick,"

"Kick, jump, pivot, kick and kick," chanted head showgirl Sue Sparkman, 24, as she demonstrated the steps. Circus choreographer Jerry Pries clapped the beat, viewing each of the dancers with a kindly but critical eye.

Later that night, wearing a peacock blue and vivid green outfit, Miss Sparkman led the current dance troop around three rings, nodding her feather-topped head to the audience and winking her glitter-trimmed eyes.

"It really is the greatest job in the world. It's good dancing experience anyou get to travel all over," she said be fore the auditions began. Miss Sparkman a Florida native, has been with the circu for a year and a half.

Showgirls get a room in the circus train, a salary of $200-plus per week, and an array of sequined costumes, one of which weighs a hefty 35-pounds. But it the 13 dancers to the auditions.

"I want to be a gypsy. I have always wanted to join a circus," said finalist Claudia Dyson, 25, who operates a local dance studio.

"It's the adventure. It would be won-derful," said finalist Lynda Hatfield, 26, who works in local theaters and choreographs the Denver Broncos cheerleade

As off-duty clowns, crew and aerialists watched, the women ran through the reu-tine, accompanied only by Miss Spark-man's commands and Fries' steady clapping. Eight were dismissed. None crie but most left quickly.

Fries, a veteran of Hollywood and Broadway, offered advice to several on getting dance lessons and losing weight He said showgirls generally stay with the circus from one to seven years.

"Sometimes it gets in your blood and sometimes it doesn't. I don't know how long I will stay, but I know I love it now," said Miss Sparkman, adjusting an inchlong eyelash. "And you either love it or you get off the train." you get off the train."

Institute Says Salt May Be Hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) - Among those substances that may be hazardous to your health is common table salt, says the Health Insurance Institute.

A growing number of medical authorities are advocating drastic curtailm the amount of salt consumed each day by the average American family.

They contend that practically all of us are eating more salt than we need - so much that it is a contributing factor in high blood pressure.

have been told they show cancer-like symptoms delay or refuse to see a physician because they distrust the medical profession or are afraid of confronting the disease, a group of researchers says

A team of University of Chicago researchers, who interviewed people who disregarded cancer warning signs, reported Sunday distrust and fear were two of the most common factors affecting the decisions of cancer victims.

Other factors cited in the study by Howard P. Greenwald, Selwyn W. Becker and Michael Nevitt of the university's Graduate School of Business were the feeling by victims that they were invul-nerable to cancer because their families were free of cancer deaths, and the inability to find a doctor to check the danger

Oil Boom Causing Problems

LERWICK, Shetland Islands, Scotland (AP) — The hardy ladies of these remote islands north of Scotland are on the warpath against plans to fly in strippers to keep lonely oil workers happy.

The women, many of whom shun lipstick and other makeup, say they'll stop at nothing to prevent the arousal of "God-given instincts" by the big-city strippers from Edinburgh and Glasgow.

They've started a petition in Lerwick, the islands' main town and say they've already collected more than 500 signatures.

Jane Cook, a leader of the newly formed Shetland Women's Group, said: "With the ever-increasing number of crimes committed against women, the introduction of a regular striptease act can only degrade and threaten women even

The strippers are being hired to entertain thousands of workers building a huge oil terminal at Sullom Voe, 30 miles north of Lerwick. The men, most of them separated from their families on the mainland, live in construction camps far from town.

The women see their campaign, which they claim is backed by many islanders and clergymen, as a rearguard action against the turmoil caused by the oil boom that hit these islands five years ago when some of the richest fields in the North Sea were discovered offshore.

Before the boom, the 20,000 islanders eked out a perilous living knitting sweaters, fishing a cruel sea and scraping a bare living from the peat-covered hills of their archipelago. Although the oil boom has meant new schools, houses, social facilities and more money, it has inflated prices and caused ers, many of them descendants of Viking raiders who settled here in the eighth

Hundreds of men quit their jobs to work at the oil terminal where they can earn $280 a week. Three years ago the average wage was $75.

The hospitable islanders never used to lock their doors because there was no crime to speak of. But they do now. Police said crime had risen 40 percent in the past three years. Last year the islands had their first murder this century and marijuana can now be bought in Lerwick's bars.

Women Get Chance To Join Circus

in the tangle of high wires above the three rings.

For most, the dream of joining the circus stays a private fantasy. But for more than a dozen Denver women, the childhood yearning took form one afternoon in an audition for showgirls.

Ringling Bros. employs 40 showgirls to dance, smile and ride docile pachyderms. A newspaper ad drew 13 local aspirants, some polished dancers in black leotards. Others brought only hope and winced as they moved sneakered feet through the tryout routine.

"Kick, jump, pivot, kick and kick," chanted head showgirl Sue Sparkman, 24, as she demonstrated the steps. Circus choreographer Jerry Fries clapped the beat, viewing each of the dancers with a kindly but critical eye.

Later that night, wearing a peacock blue and vivid green outfit, Miss Sparkman led the current dance troop around three rings, nodding her feather-topped head to the audience and winking her glitter-trimmed eyes.

"It really is the greatest job in the world. It's good dancing experience and you get to travel all over," she said be fore the auditions began. Miss Sparkman a Florida native, has been with the circus for a year and a half.

Showeirls set a room in the circus

Showgirls get a room in the circus train, a salary of $200-plus per week, and an array of sequined costumes, one of which weighs a hefty 35-pounds. But it the 13 dancers to the auditions.

"I want to be a gypsy. I have always wanted to join a circus," said finalis

Institute Says Salt May Be Hazardous

WASHINGTON (AP) - Among those substances that may be hazardous to your health is common table salt, says the Health Insurance Institute.

A growing number of medical authori ties are advocating drastic curtailment in the amount of salt consumed each day by the average American family.

They contend that practically all of us are eating more salt than we need - so much that it is a contributing factor in high blood pressure.

Corporate Debt In America Surpasses $1 Trillion

By JOHN CUNNIFF NEW YORK (AP) — Americans in 1947 had installment debts equal to 3.26 per-cent of personal income, or a little more than $30 for each $1,000 earned. Thirty years later the ratio was about $131 per up debt. In 1947, the federal government had $258 billion of unpaid bills. At the end of fiscal 1976, it had climbed to $860

billion and, of course, was still rising. Business joined in. Although America was built with equity — people saving money and investing — corporations have been borrowing to finance expansion, and of late at a sharply rising rate. Business Week magazine notes that in just the past three years corporate debt has grown 36 percent, and now totals more than $1 trillion. In 1947, the total was about $100 billion.

While the picture is one streaked with flaming red, it is true that much of the debt is backed by substantial assets, such as homes. And it is also true that inflation has magnified the size of some figures. Still, the picture painted by the numbers is unpleasant to view:

- A population either forced or anxious to do things now and pay later: The government to give benefits, business to expand or pay for environmental de-mands, and individuals to live well, or just survive.

- A cheapening of the dollar; or, in other words, inflation.

- Rising interest rates.

In 1947, the prime interest rate, the very lowest rate that big banks quote to their very best customers, was 1.5 percent. As recently as January 1972 it was only 4.75 percent. But now it is around

Home mortgage and other rates have also risen as the country borrows on its future. Those 4 percent mortgages of the late 1940s and 1950s aren't likely to return soon. Homebuyers today are paying near-

Rising interest rates are supposed to curtail such borrowing, and G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, is among those who believes this most strongly. But borrowing continues.

It continues because the governments - state and local as well as federal - overspend their budgets. Because business can't get money in the stock market these days. Because people need houses to live

And so they borrow, and as they do, officials say, the country approaches a day of reckoning. Eventually it's got to stop, they warn, and the only question is whether it stops gradually or with a col-

SCIENTISTS HONORED

WASHINGTON (AP) - Two scientists who mapped the geography of the ocean floor through millions of depth soundings have been awarded the Gardiner Green Hubbard-National Geographic Society Medal for outstanding achievement in exploration and science. The medal went to Marie Tharp and Bruce C. Heezen, both of the Lamont-Douherty Geographical Observatory at Columbia University. Heezen was presented the award posthumously; he died of a heart attack in a research submarine near Iceland last year.

If the roaring fires can be dampened, if the buy-now-pay-later attitude can be rested for a bit, those who claim to know say the country can contain inflation and build a base for healthy expansion.

In itself, say economists, borrowing isn't bad. Often it's synonymous with investing, and investment is what built the country - the factories and houses and jobs that have returned dividends many times over.

But borrowing as a way to meet current bills carries no dividends; there is no return on the money used. Rather than a dividend there's a bill, one that can only be paid, if at all, out of current income. If we face up to the painful challenge, those skilled in economics tell us, then we might emerge into an era of good times. If we continue to paint the picture red, however, it will fall from the wall.

Incumbents Attack Congress During Campaign

By WALTER R. MEARS WASHINGTON (AP) — One way to campaign for Congress is to tell the voters what a sorry outfit it is.

That draws the line between candidates and the relatively unpopular institution in which they want to serve - even if the candidate happens to be a congressman running for re-election.

The numbers behind that tactic are simple: Pollsters report that the public doesn't think much of Congress and the job it is doing. But when people are asked to judge their own congressmen. he approval rating soars.

There would seem to be a logical flaw in this, since Congress can be no better and no worse than the individuals who serve there. But logic doesn't necessarily rule in politics.

So congressmen campaign against Congress in order to get re-elected to Congress. Presumably there comes a day of reckoning in the use of Congress as a coneran member winds up criticizing his own handiwork.

"In an era of mass cynicism toward authority and institutions, candidates are increasingly taking pains to separate

A CBS News poll shows why. According to that survey, only 29 per-

But when the same people were asked about the job their own congressman is doing, 60 percent said they approved and

The same survey showed 46 percent thought their congrssman should be reelected, and only 19 percent wanted a change.

It also showed that two-thirds of the people interviewed couldn't name their member of Congress.

But the fact that they can't recall the name doesn't mean that they don't know it when they see it on the ballot.

GOP Wants Candidates

Republican leaders who have been pushing candidate recruitment this year got a reminder the other day of how far the GOP has to go in that effort. When Democratic Rep. Goodloe E. Byron of Maryland died Thursday night, they suddenly took a look at the Reput nominee for his House seat — a res of a skid row hotel in Baltimore.

Melvin Perkins got the Republicano nomination by default because GOP leaders didn't bother to put up their own candidate against the popular Byron.

Bill Brock, the party chairman, has been pressing an effort to find and train GOP challengers not only for Congress but for state legislatures and local off.

Carter, Leaders Blamed For Legislative Logjam

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Congress ended its 95th session in a manner that has veteran staffers still shaking their heads. One blamed a "new-found democracy" for creating backlogs that did not break until the closing hours, but many said it was inexperienced leadership.

The session's final days, which usually stretched into late nights, saw an unusually large number of major bills come up for consideration in both the House

The number of bills passed or killed in the final days may not have set a record, but their significance was highly unusual.

"I can't remember so much major legislation moving in the final hours of a closing session of Congress," said a House staff member who has been working with Congress for 36 years.

"So many of the big things were backed up at the end, where usually we have just one thing holding us in check," a veteran Senate staffer said:

The energy package, stalled by a filibuster in the Senate; the tax bill, slowly put into final form by a House-Senate conference committee; and the Humphrey-Hawkins jobs bill, revived after being all but given up for dead, got most

Congress finally quit Sunday night after a final, 34-hour marathon session unmatched in a century

The remaining work was too important to let many of the members sneak off for their own early adjournment.

"At 3:30 Sunday morning we had 75 people voting in the Senate," a Senate staffer noted. "Normally, many of them would have been heading back home. They would have been long gone.

There seems to be general agreement on the reasons behind the unusual finale. President Carter was a big factor, the veteran staffers say. 'We had a president who was a political novice in terms of learning to work with Congress and it took about one and a half sessions to turn that around,

Carter was not the only one new in his job. "This was a strange Congress in that we had a new president together with new leadership in both houses," a Senate staffer noted. House Republican leader John Rhodes was the only hol dover leader from the 94th Congress.

The leadership will probably be unchanged when the 96th Congress opens up for business in January and Carter will have two years of experience behind

"The next session will probably be a little more orderly, if Congress can ever be said to be orderly. This was not an orderly end of a session," said the Senate

A widespread feeling of independence among House members was cited as another factor in delaying major decisions until the end of the session. "There is a great deal of individuality in the House today that is not responsive to

South African Confab Ends

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) -South Africa summoned leaders of six South-West African political parties here today, raising speculation that South African and Western diplomats including Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance had cracked the key issue of independence and elections in the disputed territory.

The South-West Africans were being flown to Pretoria on a special government flight.

The three days of talks between the diplomats and South Africa ended, but the Westerners said they would not disclose details until South Africa gave its response to the Western proposals. Vance said a South African decision is expected Thursday

He said the envoys "put several proposals on the table."

Vance, the foreign ministers of West Germany, Canada, Britain and the deputy foreign minister of France met for four hours with South Africans here today in the longest session of the secret talks on the territory

Earlier Foreign Minister R. F. "Pik" Botha expressed doubt that the ministers and his government could agree on independence plans for South-West Africa despite reports that President Carter has invited Prime Minister Botha to a Washington summit conference on the disputed

"Yes, there will be further discussions," Foreign Minister Botha told reporters, "but the problems have now reached such serious proportions that there is doubt whether we will be able to overcome them.

Carter's invitation South Africa's prime minister was reported by the Afrikaanslanguage newspaper Beeld and French Deputy Foreign Minister Olivier Stirn.

"President Carter envisages a conference like the successful one he recently held with Israeli and Egyptian leaders at Camp David," the newspaper said.

But Stirn, who is representing France at the meeting on South-West Africa, said Carter invited Botha to Washington only if he agreed to keep the door open to serious negotiations.

Beeld said diplomatic sources reported the invitation was extended in a letter fresh hostilities with the Syrians. The truce ended 10 days of the most savage Syrian-Christian fighting in eight months. The syrians make up the bulk of the 30,000-strong ADF, which polices the 23-month-old civil war armistice between the Christians and an alliance of Moslems and Palestinian guerrillas.

The resolutions empower the president to disarm all Lebanese private armies and to close down rival clandestine radio stations in an effort to create a central authority in this nation of 3 million.

Although similar decisions had been taken in the past to no avail, independent observers believe the new blueprint basically offers a way out, provided the combatants want to end Lebanon's four years of multiple conflicts.

One conference resolution called for the cessation of Christian collaboration with Israel, threatening action against the militias.

A three-nation followup committee consisting of Syria, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait has been set up to help Sarkis enforce the peace program, which also proposes a Moslem-Christian dialogue on political reforms to bring about a national reconciliation.

Local church school officials and parents may send a representative to Washington to testify against proposed Internal Revenue Service (IRS) regulations affecting private education.

About 70 persons met Tuesday at Trinity Church to discuss the IRS proposals and how to stop them. "The basic issue is the separation of church and state," Ron Bailey, who helped organize the session, said after the "The threat in the IRS regulations is inantly white private schools automatically would lose their tax-exempt status unless they take "affirmative" efforts to recruit more minorities. Such efforts would involve scholarships and the use of a "minority-oriented" curriculum.

For the past week, private school administrators and parents in Lubbock have been writing letters and circulating petitions against the IRS proposals. Parents left Tuesday's organizational meeting "more resolved than ever before to continue our opposition," Bailey said.

"The immediate problem is the revoking of Christian schools' tax-exempt status. This would cause a tremendous cost increase on the schools. In the alternative, even if they do comply with the regulations the cost of the scholarships advertising and paperwork would be just as burdensome," he said.

One way or another, the cost is going to be prohibitive to private schools. The long-range threat, Bailey added, is that by controlling church-related schools, the federal government is infr-inging on the practice of religious freedom. Indeed, private school officials fear the same IRS rules eventually could be extended to churches. The 23-year-old Tech student said she was confronted by a Mexican-American man about 21-23 years old when she walked out of her apartment shortly after 9 p.m. Tuesday.

The woman said that when she re-entered the apartment, the suspect forced his way in, threw her on a bed and tried to rape her.

She said, however, that she kicked her attacker in the groin, causing him to scream and run out of the apartment.

A chase through city streets Tuesday morning ended when police shot out the tires of a speeding van and arrested the Reports show officers first spotted the man driving his vehicle in circles about 11 a.m. in the 2700-block of Texas Avenue. The suspect allegedly refused to stop for police and a pursuit began, reaching 85 miles per hour.

Police today were looking for three white men, between 18 and 19 years old, who were seen near the restroom soon after the woman left.

Garland R. Hollins of 3506 E. Bates St. said she returned home about noon Tuesday after being gone most of the morning, and found her house ransacked and $1,200 in property stolen, including rare coins, rings and a lamp.

Cobe Gilliam of 1321 45th St. said his color television set and stereo equipment, valued at $600, were stolen when his house was burglarized between 8:30 a.m. and noon Tuesday

Thomas Edwin Lowe Jr. of 1313 65th St. said his unrented apartment at 315 Vernon Avenue was broken into Monday or Tuesday and $510 in goods stolen, including a grass trimmer, tent, ice chest, Raymond Ward said the driver's door window in his 1967 Ford Mustang was broken and will cost $70 to replace. Ward, of 4712 43rd St., said the vehicle was parked in the street outside his home at the time the vandals struck.

Property crimes also continued to mount Tuesday, with Rob Wimmer reporting the loss of $7,500 worth of telephone equipment.

Wimmer, district security manager of Southwestern Bell Telephone, said someone took the electronic equipment from a room on the first floor of the company's 1405 Main St. office.

Wimmer said the items were taken Saturday or Sunday and neither he nor investigating officers were able to find any sign of forced entry to the building.

Christi B. Williams told officers that someone took a $400 diamond ring from her 1001 University Ave., Apt. C-536, residence sometime Monday.

Ivory Robinson said someone took advantage of an unlocked door on her car and took her purse from the vehicle early Tuesday. Miss Robinson said she left her handbag, which contained $30 cash in addition to personal identification, checks and credit cards, in her car for about 15 minutes Tuesday while the vehicle was parked at 2915 E. are on Thursday's agenda.

City sign regulations allow the business a 16-foot-tall sign containing 88 square feet. Fouts is requesting a 450 square-foot sign 45 feet tall.

The sign should be setback from the ide property line at least 55 feet and 22.88 feet from the front property line to comply with city regulations, but Fouts wants a side setback of 28.5 feet and a front sethack of two feet.

Representatives of Southeastern Plaza, Inc., for Audrey Rhodes Fiel, are expected to request a variance in sign require-ments for signs to be located at 3700 19th

Developers of the property would be permitted one sign, but they are requesting permission to place a sign on three corners of the lot. Freestanding signs are not permitted on streets which are not thoroughfares, and two of the signs requested by the developers would be located on 20th Street, which is not classified a thoroughfare.

Other requests to be considered by the ZBA Thursday are:

-Owen McWhorter Jr., representing C.E. Haymes, for a variance in the requirements for a screening fence east of Quirt Avenue and north of East 76th —Bennie L. Arend, representing Mrs. Montie Delozier, for a special exception to allow a mobile home to be used as a dwelling at 313 E. Quinn St.

—Chad Banks, representing Innovative Construction Interest, for a variance in the floor area ratio requirement for townhouses at 4614 55th Drive.

She was not being rude, but simply taking out a supernatural insurance policy on her son's future health - performing the age-old Russian equivalent of the Western knock-on-wood tradition.

Ever since the Russian Revolution of 1917, Soviet leaders have waged a war of propaganda against superstition, which doctrinaire Communists abhor almost as

Sen. Tower May Decide To Debate

HOUSTON (AP) - Republican Sen. John Tower says his Democratic opponent, Rep. Bob Krueger, is conducting a smear campaign but that he may reconsider television debates if only the issues are discussed.

Krueger says his opponent is scared to get into the political arena, and has dodged the scheduled television appearances because "he doesn't want to be available to the people or the press.'

The senatorial candidates met face-toface for the first time, and probably the last time in this campaign, during a Houston Press Club forum Tuesday

They sat the same oval head table with about six other persons, but refused to shake hands and never even nodded nor glanced at each other.

Tower pulled out of four television appearances with Krueger Monday, accusing his opponent of "gutter politics."

At the Press Club forum, Tower said he could reconsider a TV appearance with Krueger if the congressman stays with the legitimate issues of the campaign. He refused to elaborate.

Oaks Alters Vote Guess

By The Associated Press Only about a third of Texas' seven million registered voters are expected to vote in next month's general election, and Secretary of State Steven Oaks says it's "an absolute disgrace."

Texas will have the highest percentage of registered voters in our history and a higher percentage than any other state, but the registration figures are totally meaningless unless these people vote," Oaks said.

Oaks said his prediction of 2.3 million voters on Nov. 7 may prove too optimistic, and he said only about 1.6 million are likely to vote on the nine proposed constitutional amendments.

"I have never in my life seen greater apathy, people turned off by the system," said Oaks, who said voters might be getting discouraged by candidates not living up to their campaign promises.

The city will resume presenting its side of the rate case on Nov. 10 and PNG attorneys will cross-examine city witnesses on Nov. 17. City officials were hopeful, but not optimistic, the hearing could end on the 17th.

City rate analyst Ervin Looney testified he did not think the inclusion of $1.65 million of construction work in progress by PNG in the rate base is necessary for the utility "to raise capital or to prevent the impairment of Pioneer's service."

Looney said gas company representatives had not justified that the inclusion is necessary under Railroad Commission rules, but had offered only "general as-

The analyst also discounted the gas company request for $5.1 million in working capital above what is invested in the company's physical plant. Looney said the utility's cash is "adequate to meet its cash outflow" and said there is "no requirement for an additional amount to be included.

The money collected by the utility from consumers in anticipation of future taxes also should be reduced from the rate base, Looney said. "The three items would represent a significant amount of money would they not?" Ross asked. "It would," replied Looney, adding

"all (three) items should be eliminated from the rate base. Under Ross' questioning, Looney also began chipping away at the gas company's suggested rate of return. He objected to the company's stated cost of capital because those costs attributable to PNG are not accounted for separately from those for PNG's parent company, Pioneer Corporation.

Looney suggested the utility was using $95 million in the cost of capital which had nothing whatsoever to do with the utility division" of Pioneer Corporation.

Stockholders, not consumers, should bear the cost for a management decision to borrow numerous smaller amounts of money rather than to borrow a large amount at lower interest rates, he said .

The net effect, Looney said, is an "exceptionally expensive debt structure for the company" with an average overall interest rate of 8.74 percent - "very close to what it would be if all the debt were issued today," he added.

The Slim Gourmet

One of the greatest joys of low-calorie cooking is making your own sausage. Without fat ... and fat calories! Commercial sausage is 50 percent fat, which accounts for its heavy calorie count. Ordinary breakfast sausage is 2,259 calories a pound. Made our way, with lean pork and no fat added, the calorie count is cut to only 857 a pound, or about 110 for a twoounce breakfast patty.

Sausage-making isn't any more com-plex than meat loaf or seasoned hamburger, because sausage is really nothing more than seasoned, spiced meat. The meat can be pork, veal or beef...even ground turkey or chicken, if available, or if you have a meat-grinder to chop it yourself. Once seasoned the meat is simply shaped into patties or stuffed into sausage casings if you have sausage-making equipment. Store the patties in the freezer, and defrost only the amount needed. Homemade sausage is improved by freezer storage; the elapsed time between the making and the cooking permits the flavors to blend.

The following recipes are based on three pounds of chopped meat; you can halve or double the quantities if you

fat and ground 3 to 4 tsps. salt (or onion salt) 1/2 tsp. pepper, .coarse-ground

6 tbsps. water, white

1 tsp. dried savory 1 tsp. dried sage, or mixed poultry seasoning

wine or apple juice Toss ingredients lightly to mix well. Gently shape into small 2-ounce patties, without pressing. Arrange in single layers on foil-lined trays and double-wrap with foil. Label and freeze. Remove as needed and defrost before cooking. May be broiled or pan-fried in a non-stick skillet sprayed with cooking spray, no fat added.

Pork MUST be cooked through. Makes 24

breakfast patties, about 110 calories each.

SPICED VEAL-CHIANTI SAUSAGE PATTIES 3 lbs. yeal shoulder. lean, trimmed of fat and ground 1 tsp. pumpkin pie spice (or cinnamon, nutmeg, ginger, clove, 1/4 tsp. each)

3 to 4 tsps. garlic salt or other dry red wine Combine and shape into 2-ounce patties. Wrap, label and freeze. Defrost and broil or panfry in a non-stick skillet with no fat added. (Serve with tomato sauce, if desired.) Makes 24 patties, about 80 calories each. (Plain tomato sauce is about 4 calories per tablespoon.)

of fat and ground 1½ lbs. veal, lean, boneless, trimmed of fat and ground

3 to 4 tsps. onion salt 3 or 4 cloves garlic, minced fine (or 1/2 tsp. to 3/4 tsp. instant garlic) 11/2 tsp. coarse-ground black pepper 3 tbsps. sweet Hungarian paprika 11/2 tsps. dried marjoram

6 tbsps. cold water Combine ingredients. Lightly shape into 24 small patties or 12 "quarter-pounders." Wrap, label and freeze. Defrost, then broil, bake or panfry in a non-stick skillet (MUST be cooked through). Serve hot on rolls, if desired. Makes 24 patties at about 90 calories each, or 12 double patties at about 180 calories each. (A plain 11/2-ounce roll is about 115 calories.)

championships, held in Bar-bados in June. The Open Pair event was won by veteran Venezuelan internationalists David Berah and Freddy Ecker. Deceptive defense on this hand helped them on their way to the title.

Despite the fact that North's opening bid was slightly underweight, North-South reached a fair four heart game. Once North supported his suit, South had more than enough to contract for game, especially since he held only one potential loser in the unbid suits and a partial fit for opener's suit.

West, Ecker, led the king of diamonds, and when dummy appeared declarer was not overly sanguine about his prospects. If the defenders negotiated a diamond ruff, as seemed likely, the contract would surely go down. But if diamonds were 3-3, declarer only had to hold his trump losers to one to make game, and he was a strong favorite to accomplish that. Left to his own devices, declarer would have taken the percentage play of running the jack of hearts through West, intending to repeat the finesse if necessary.

Unfortunately, West came up with a devilish defense. At trick two, he shifted to a low trump. Suddenly, declarer had an additional factor to consider. It was quite possible that West had led a singleton diamond. If that were the case, declarer was running a grave risk if he took the trump finesse. If East had either trump honor, he would win, cash the ace of diamonds and give his part-ner a ruff to beat the hand.

Therefore, declarer opted to rise with the ace of hearts and continue with another heart—a perfectly reason-able alternative play which would have succeeded had East held either a singleton heart honor or had trumps broken 2-2. West gratefully took two trump tricks and the ace of diamonds to complete a onetrick set.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" ## Flying Fear Easy To Overcome

By PATRICK CONNOLLY SEATTLE (AP) - Do you shudder at the thought of flying, sealed in a jetliner miles from good, solid ground? Capt. T.W. Cummings has advice:

Chat. Read a dirty book.

"Do anything to distract yourself," says Cummings, 61, a retired Pan American World Airways pilot who teaches a course in overcoming the fear of flying.

"I tell people to take three deep breaths and it relaxes them. It's simple, but when done with high activation and knowledge that it works, it is powerful," Cummings says. "Three deep breaths whenever you get nervous."

Also, he says, "Find someone interesting to talk to. People on airplanes talk who hardly ever talked before. Or buy a pornographic magazine, if you have to.

"The little old lady from Dubuque, all she needs to do is get on the plane and she'll be all right because stewardesses will distract her and she'll meet new

Fear of flying is groundless, he says. Newspapers, television, movies and an occasional catastrophe evoke grim but false impressions of air travel.

Some people fear "losing control of themselves, embarrassing themselves all the way from having the shakes in public to becoming hysterical or trying to ump out of the aircraft at 35,000 feet.

"But it doesn't happen. People just FEAR it will and the fear consumes them. It becomes habit to push the panic

Others are afraid of giving up control of their lives to a stranger. For all they know, it could be King Kong in the cockpit. Cummings says.

People get a lot from films and wonder what's going on up front. They imagine great dissension, the captain drinking heavily, the co-pilot making out with the stewardesses. They wonder how someone can really be as stable and confident as an airline captain," he says.

His typical student is a 39-year-old college-educated man with a good job and the heebie-jeebies over flying. Most have flown before, but suffered such frazzled nerves that they can't go back up without professional help.

To turn a cringer into a jet-setter, all it takes is a positive outlook, Cummings says. Only about 5 percent of his students fail to attend graduation ceremonies conducted in a soaring jetliner complete with the congratulatory champagne

Orthopedics Just 'Nuts, Bolts'

By ANN LO LORDO
BALTIMORE (UPI) — Orthopedic surgeons at Johns Hopkins Hospital have taken a "nuts and bolts" approach to mending serious fractures, replacing sticky, wet plaster casts with six-inch, screw-like pins and steel skeleton frames. Dr. Andrew F. Brooker, a 36-year-old assistant professor of orthopedic surgery, said Johns Hopkins and the shock trauma unit of University Hospital in Baltimore are the only two medical centers in the East Coast using the new procedure Brooker said the "external fixator" device uses grooved steel pins, connected by a skeleton-like steel frame, to set serious fractures.

A similar device was used in World War II, but it was not well received because it 'wasn't as versatile, as stable, or as was well engineered," as the new device, he professor has said that improved surgical techniques make it possible for a woman who has undergone a mastectomy to be provided with a natural-looking breast -

not just "a mound that will fill a brass-

He said the pins resemble straight pins with grooves that are half the thickness of a pencil, but as long.

"It's like screwing somebody together," he said. "Orthopedics is basically nuts and bolts anymore and we use a lot of plates and screws to fix fractures." Brooker said the new device enables doctors to do many things to a break that cannot be done if the patient is wearing a

"You might have to cut a big hole in the cast which risks the stability of the fracture.

Joints above and below the fracture can freely move because the bone is held intact by the steel frame, Brooker said. "If you break the bone in the lower leg, the tibia, for example, then you can sta-blize that bone and leave both the ankle and knee free," he said.

He said the external fixator is "most useful in patients with open fractures or in people who have had difficulty healing or whose open fracture has become infected."

Casts are still used to set simple fractures, Brooker said. He said the pins push through the skin into the bone above and below the break and are connected on a steel frame. "The only thing that touches the pa-tient is the pins," he said.

By connecting the rigid frame together above and below the fracture, you can then not only rigidly hold the bones to-gether, but you can also compress them together, which we think aids in bone

"You can go back later and if things aren't right you can loosen things up or realign them," Brooker said.

He said the procedure has proven successful with burn patients because the fracture can be stabilized while dressings are being done or if they are under sur-

Hypoglycemia Defined

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D. DEAR DR. LAMB - I would like to know about hypoglycemia. What are the symptoms? I have been hearing so much about it lately. I wondered if this could be my problem. I asked my doctor if I might have it and he said some doctors don't even believe in it and that he is one of them. But yet, he says I have low blood sugar. I don't understands. Isn't hypoglycemia the same thing as low blood sugar?

DEAR READER - You probably have a communication problem with your doctor. Low blood sugar is the public's term for hypoglycemia. Technically speaking, hypoglycemia means low blood glucose, and low blood sugar could include some other sugars besides glucose.

Your doctor probably means your blood glucose level by a laboratory test is low, but that he doesn't think that low level has anything to do with any symptoms to do with any symptoms that you might have. We know that perfectly normal, healthy young people can have fairly low blood glucose levels and have no symptoms or impairment of body functions at all. You can see this in top-notch athletes. That's one reason why doctors don't always get excited just because a laboratory test shows a relatively low glucose level.

The other problem is that the symptoms of nervousness or anxiety, sweating, tremulousness and sometimes a fast heart rate are all just symptoms. They can be caused by several different things. The mechanism that causes many of these symptoms can be the release of adrenaline in your body. Adrenaline is the "fight or flight" hormone. Whenever your blood glucose level is too low, it will stimulate the formation of adrenaline. In a sensitive person this might produce symptoms. However, a person who has simple anxiety, with a perfectly normal blood glucose level, can have an excess production of adrenaline and have nervousness, sweaty palms, tremulousness and a fast heart. The diagnosis, in this instance, would be an anxiety reaction, not hypoglycemia. When you accept the fact that these are symptoms, not a diagnosis, and that many of these symptoms can be caused by anxiety and other problems, you then realize that you can't always attribute these symptoms to simply having a low blood glucose level. It is not that simple.

For the reason I have mentioned, the usual approach is to not make a diagnosis of hypoglycemia unless you can demonstrate that the blood glucose is low at the same time the person is having symptoms. The combination of the two, simultaneously, is the basis for the diagnosis.

There are a lot of people who are diagnosed as having hypoglycemia who really have anxiety and don't deserve the diagnosis at all. There are many other people who do have fluctuations in their blood glucose level in sufficient amounts to cause symptoms. Some of these people can change their lifestyle, particularly their diet habits, to improve the way they feel. Low blood glucose is also just a blood glucose is also just a finding and may be caused by several different disorders. To help you sort out all of this, and to give you some information on what you can do about diet, I am sending you The Health Letter number 3-9, Low Blood Sugar: Hypoglycemia. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Address your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. # NASA Panel Says Mars Very Cold

By AL ROSSITER JR. WASHINGTON (UPI) - Concluding there is little or no chance for Earth life to survive on Mars, a National Research Council committee says there is no need to sterilize future spacecraft landing between the planet's polar ice caps.

A NRC committee on planetary biology took a fresh look at the contamination risk posed to Mars by an unsterilized spacecraft from Earth and said the environment is too harsh for growth of terrestrial bugs on frigid Martian deserts.

And the panel said the likelihood that an Earth organism could survive at the poles, where less is known about the conditions, "is extremely low." But the committee said this does not rule out the possibility that indigenous life forms may exist on Mars, or may have lived there sometime in the past. "The limiting conditions terrestrial life are not the limits for conceivable life elsewhere." The study was made at the request of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration which has a present quarantine policy that calls for sterilization of any spacecraft designed to land on Mars. NASA's Viking spacecraft which landed on Mars in 1976 provided the first information on the surface environment.

"None of this new information suggests that the Martian surface is less harsh to terrestrial micro-organisms than was thought prior to Viking," the committee said in a report to the space agency.

On the other hand, the report said, two pieces of information supplied by the Vikings indicate the Martian environment is more severe than previously believed: a lack of detectable organic compounds in the soil and the presence of strong oxidizing compounds.

In addition, the Mars environment is very cold, very dry and subjected to deadly doses of solar radiation.

"Our conclusion is that no terrestrial organism could grow under the conditions found by Viking to prevail on subpolar surfaces at the landing sites and none could grow under the conditions that are highly likely to prevail throughout the entire sub-polar regions," the report said.

"Few, if any, terrestrial organisms could grow in contact with even one of the adverse conditions cited, much less grow when exposed to all of them simultaneously.

skirts and did a good job of hiding in the folds.

Rhonda had a poor self image, and, coupled with a stature taller than most, she withdrew into a shell stronger than any snail's. Through the staff at the Parkway Center, however, Rhonda has danced her way out of self consiousness and into a world of big hopes and dreams.

The Parkway Center, along with Guadalupe Neighborhood Center, United Way agent will re-ceive a total of $117,977 from the United Way's 1979 goal of $1,682,369.

Rhonda, now 12, began going to the Parkway Center two years after its opening in 1971. The center contacted parents in the community and offered their services which include neighborhood organizations, referral services, counseling, organized and unstructured programs for youth and a senior citizens program. Rhonda's parents saw the center's activities as a potentially good experience

Rhonda attended the center, participating in a myriad of programs, including girl scouting, arts and crafts classes, swimming, gynmanstics and her current

Rhonda began dancing in a program set up by the center about three years ago. Now she is helping to teach younger children at the center to dance, as well as attending a local dance academy through a scholarship provided by the center. And with further study, her mother said, she hopes to become the first successful black ballerina.

Without the help of the center, she would never have been involved with dance." explained her mother. "They've given her a lot of confidence. She used to be unsure of herself-she didn't think she could do things. They encouraged her to build up her self esteem."

Mrs. Wallace said the center has helped Rhonda in other ways besides building her interest in dance. She said Rhonda has been given the opportunity to see more of life through field trips sponsored by the center. "They're helping to prepare for the world," she explained, saying she was happy Rhonda sees new situations and is getting experience from them.

The center also provides assistance to parents, Mrs. Wallace said. "I don't have to worry what she's doing," Mrs. Wallace said, citing a need for more centers. She said she trusted the staf at the center like herself and is glad there is somewhere for children to go while their parents are working.

Also, said Mrs. Wallace, the center provides an opportunity for youths, like Rhonda, to develop their talents and potentials even when parents cannot afford to pay for special training.

Director of the Parkway and Guadalupe Neighborhood Centers, Barbara Sommerville, said the purpose of the centers is to help the community residents do a better job with their own lives and make the neighborhood a better place

Miss Sommerville explained that the centers are there for the neighborhood and they try to set up programs that neighborhood members request. These programs may range from food stamp and welfare applications, to dealing with neighborhood problems as a group, to a simple cooking class at the center.

However, their work with children is a major factor. Rachel Divers, program Director, said that in their work with children they hope to help them "discover who they are as individuals-to understand and know themselves. We want them to be proud of who they are, no matter their culture, and to learn something from other persons.

The Parkway and Guadalupe Centers currently serve more than 700 persons in the two neighborhoods. They have a total full-time and volunteer staff of 36. The Guadalupe and Parkway Neighborhood Centers are among 34 United

The House Government Operations Committee report released Tuesday said, "Updated IRS estimates show that between six million and seven million taxpayers calling in for answers to questions bout preparing their returns or the status of their tax return accounts may not be answered this year, and three million calls were not answered during the 1978 filing period."

Spot checks of the quality of information given over the telephone received accuracy ratings of 91.2 to 97.4 percent, the report said, but added that the rate may be overstated because it includes replies to simple questions.

A study of questions referred to IRS specialists indicated that the inquirers received correct answers only about 79 percent of the time, the report continued

What is particularly disturbing about this high error rate is that IRS is not bound by its mistakes, so that a later audit might result in the imposition of additional taxes," said Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., chairman of the commerce, consumer and monetary affairs subcommittee

Egon P.S. Zehnder, who has interviewed thousands of top-level managers during nearly two decades as an international executive recruiter, has some unconventional advice for young Americans aspiring to reach the top rungs of the cor-

Join a really good, well-managed com-pany, go right into its international division and look for an overseas assignment right away, he says nothing that executive with international experience are going to be increasingly in demand in the years ahead by both American companies and foreign firms interested in stepping up their operations over here.

Zehnder's recommended path to the top runs counter to the usual pattern in which young managers seek to make their mark at home in some specially such as marketing, finance on production - and consider accepting an overseas assignment only after they are well-established in the management ranks.

Zehnder, a 48-year-old Swiss national who was graduated from the Harvard Business School and was one of the first professional consultants in Europe to specialize in "head-hunting," ontends that international experience is an essential ingredient in the grooming of a modern top executive. "More than ever before," he told us, "it's an important requirement for top executives to have rather intensive exposure to international operations and even direct overseas expe-

"Just the other day," he added, "one of our clients in this country told us they would only put a man at the top who has been abroad

We met with Zehnder, who founded the management consulting firm of Egon Zehnder International in Zurich in 1964, at the company's New York offices in the posh Olympic Tower apartment-office complex overlooking St. Patrick's Cathedral. With him was George P. Craighead, a Harvard B-School classmate and veteran American executie recruiter, who heads the New York operation.

Craighead noted that the rising expense of maintaining an American executive overseas - it costs an average of $120,000 a year, not including social-welfare fringe benefits, to move and keep a $50,000-ayear American abroad, he told us - is leading many U.S. companies to fill their overseas posts with foreign nationals.

As a result, he pointed out, the pipeline of American executive with foreign experience will begin drying up, even though the need for them will increase.

At the same time, Zehnder added, the growing numbers of foreign companies coming to the U.S. are looking for top American who have had international experience, perferably in th home country of the foreign company. "There's a tre-mendous demand on all sides for internationally trained executives," he said.

"The squeeze is there."

Zehnder also feels that comments in Europe that American companies are losing their managerial leadership are

"European managers trained in the U.S., or at least trained in well-managed American companies overseas, are very much in demand in Europe," he said. 'And that's not only by multi-national companies, but also by those whose business is primarily domestic. They know that American companies give good training to their young managers."

Turning to his advice to aspiring young Americans, Zehnder noted that the high cost of sending and supporting older, higher-ranking executive abroad is likely to lead U.S. companies to post more lower-level managers overseas to build up a stockpile of foreign experience.

Therefore, he said, promising young people involved in international operations have a good chance for a foreign assignment early in their careers, "Accept it," he recommended, "but don't get stuck there, and when you come back, you'll find that people who have been abroad are in demand. And don't worry about others being promoted over your head while you're away because you'll make up for that before long."

We asked Zehnder if there were one special mistake that an American businessman serving abroad should avoid. "Failing to learn the language," he im-mediately shot back. "They have to try to learn the local language, no matter how complicated it is. Even if they can't be-come fluent, it's a big mistake not to try. So many American executives I meet don't even make the slightest effort."

Craighead seconded the point. "If I meet someone who's been in Latin America for four or five years and he sayshe didn't bother to learn Spanish, he falls

Q: We recently moved from our rented apartment to a home we purchased. We left the apartment before lease expired but we did notify the landlord that we were leaving and left the apartment in good condition. Now our landlord says he will not return our security deposit. Can he legally keep our money?

A: When you leave an apartment the landlord may be entitled to keep a portion or even all of your security deposit to cover damages such as lost rent and cleaning. However, the landlord must account to you for the money he keeps. You are required to give a written forwarding address when you move. The landlord then has 30 days in which to return your deposit to you or to account for deductions from your deposit. If the landlord fails to account for what happened to your deposit, you may be entitled to recover as much as three times your deposit, plus a penalty.

Q: While I was doing some grocery shopping someone backed into my car doing about $150 damage. The driver left the scence before I returned and didn't leave a note with his name, address or anything. My insurance is $200 deductible. I'm just sick. What can I do? Is there no law that protects an innocent

A: Unless you can locate the driver who is responsible for damaging your automobile, you have no practical remedy for your loss. There is no law protecting an innocent victim from a driver whose name and location is unknown.

Q: If I am denied credit, insurance, or employment based on erroneous information contained in a consumer report, what are my rights?

A: You may request and receive free of charge of the consumer reporting agency which prepared the report, and the nature and sources of the information used. You can then challenge the information, and if invstigation proves it to be incorrest, it must be removed from your file. Generally, no adverse information can be reported on you after seven years.

AMC Seeks Expansion Loan

DETROIT (AP) - American Motors Corp. President Gerald Meyers says the Ohio Controlling Board's approval of an $8 million loan for the automaker's Toledo Jeep Division plant is "an important step" toward expanding the facility.

The board voted 7-0 to approve a state development department's request that the loan be made to assist in a $27.5 million expansion project that will add 2,000 jobs at the Toledo plant.

In a statement released here Monday, Meyers said the plant has been operating at peak capacity, turning out 660 Jeeps a day, since early this year. The automaker hopes to increase the output to 1,000 units a day, Meyers said.

"We are pleased to report that a group of banks in the Toledo area has agreed to provide the major portion of the $19 million which must come from private lenders," Meyers added.

"They are currently working to com-plete that funding and we understand they intend to have a public statement when those negotiations are complete."

AMC acquired Jeep from Kaiser Industries in 1970. At that time, total production was 175 a day, Meyers said. Jeep production has been increased a total of 14 times since then to keep pace with record-breaking sales, he said

The plant has been working overtime every other Saturday since the start of

The expansion plans call for construction of a new paint facility to help handle the increased demand for Jeeps.

Lubbock's low this morning was 49 degrees after a Tuesday afternoon high of Cool temperatures and mostly fair skies dominated the Texas weather scene early today. Some high, thin clouds were reported over Northwest and South Texas. Highs were expected to be mostly in the 70s and 80s.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s with extremes ranging from 38 at Lufkin in East Texas to 66 at McAllen in the Lower Rio Grande Valley

Most of the nation was dry, and parts of the country were unseasonably cool to-

The only reported precipitation was light scattered showers in the northern Rockies and in eastern Wyoming and Col-

Clear skies were reported in the southern Great Plains, the southern half of the Mississippi Valley, along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts and the Pacific Northwest. Mild temperatures were recorded in the western third of the nation, near normal temperatures in the Great Plains region and unseasonably cool conditions in much of the rest of nation. Temperatures in the 20s stretched across northern New York into New England. Readings in the 30s were reported southward over the Appalachians and across the Virginias into North Carolina. Temperatures in the 40s dominated the Mississippi Valley and extended to the Gulf Coast in Louisiana.

Frost warnings were posted from the interior portions of eastern New York through western Maryland, the suburbs of Washington, D.C., and west of the Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia. Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 17 in Concord, N.H. to 80 in Blythe, Calif.

The forecast called for scattered showers over the central and lower Great Lakes. Temperatures were predicted to be warm over the southern California coast, with mild temperatures over the rest of the Pacific Coast. The mild weather was predicted to continue through the and east south Texas and Florida. Elsewhere, temperatures will be unseasonably cool.

City Council Selects Committee Members

The Lubbock City Council named the final members to the committee to study the future options for Lubbock Power and Light Tuesday.

Council member Carolyn Jordan named Bryce Campbell, Ken Thompson and Charlie Pope to the panel, while Council member Alan Henry named Arnold Maeker, Sidney Kothmann and Mrs. Patsy Edwards.

Owen Gilbreath, Leland Payne and the Rev. Eliseo Aldape were Council member Bud Aderton's selections and Council member Bill McAlister, who suggested the study committee, named John Bradford, Eddie Richardson and Bob

Inflation Keeps Taxes Up Despite New Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) - The higher Social Security withholding rates that go into effect Jan. 1 already may be the most publicized tax increase in history. Workers now have a chance to get upset all

Despite frequent assurances to the contrary, the tax cut passed by Congress this week will not offset the Social Security increase and the income tax boost caused by inflation

In general terms, only single persons making around $17,500 a year and families of four with one wage earner and incomes between $12,000 and $20,000 will find their net federal tax load cut slightly next year. Almost all couples without children will pay more than they are this

A typical four-member family with $20,000 income would be about $12 better off tax-wise under the income tax bill assuming the wage earner gets a pay raise big enough to offset general price increases. If the wage earner gets no raise, the family would get a slightly larger tax break because it would not be pushed into a higher tax bracket.

But for up to 75 percent of Americans, the bill awaiting President Carter's signature provides a tax cut only in the sense that it reduces their 1979 taxes below what they would be otherwise.

Everyone who pays Social Security taxes .- regardless of wages - will pay more starting next January. The increase will range from $2 a year for a $3,000 worker to a maximum increase of $333 for those earning $22,900 or more.

Practically every taxpayer also is affected by the impact of inflation on the tax system - or "taxflation" - which nudges a worker into a higher tax bracket when his or her pay goes up.

Here, for example, is how inflation of tax rates, the Social Security tax increase and the tax cut bill would affect a typical four-member family with one earner, in-

INFLATION: This family will pay income taxes of $2,180 in 1978. Assuming prices rise 7 percent and the wage earner gets a 7 percent cost-of-living pay in-crease next year, that pay would go up to $21,400. Without the tax cut bill, the family's taxes would be $2,524 - a $344 in-

That would represent a drop in real spendable income of $344 because the family's income had risen only enough to keep pace with inflation and because the higher wages had pushed the family into a higher tax bracket

SOCIAL SECURITY: In 1978, this family must pay Social Security taxes of 6.05 percent of the first $17,700 of wages. That comes to $1,071. The law for 1979 applies a 6.13 percent rate to the first $22,900 of wages. On the family's new 1979 wage of $21,400, that would mean a Social Security tax next year of $1,312, up $241.

The $344 higher income tax and the $241 increase in Social Security taxes would mean a total federal tax hike next year of $585 - if there were no tax-cut

TAX CUT: The bill would raise the $750 personal exemption to $1,000, repeal the existing tax credit (which would cost this family $180), widen the tax-rate brackets as a weapon against inflation, and cut some middle-income tax rates. K mari

For this year's $20,000 family, which next year would be earning $21,400, the bill would cut the 1979 tax liability to $2,-

155, or $25 below current law. But remember that "taxflation" and the Social Security tax increase will add $585 to the family's federal tax liability. Subtracting the $25 net tax cut in the bill from $585 leaves a tax increase in 1979 of

One final adjustment to that figure must be made. Because of 7 percent inflation, the 1978 dollar with which taxes are paid will be worth 7 percent less in 1979. To get a direct comparison between the 1978 and 1979 taxes requires that the 1978 tax liability be increased 7 percent.

Therefore, the 1978 taxes paid by the four-member $20,000 family would be $2,333 in terms of 1979 dollars; the Social Security tax of $1,071 would be $1,146; total federal liability of $3,479. Next year, liability would total $3,467.

The net result of Social Security, "taxflation" and the tax-cut bill: Today's four-member family earning $20,000 would be $12 better off in 1979.

500 Expected To Attend Dinner

Approximately 500 persons are expected to attend a dinner Thursday honoring U.S. Sen. John G. Tower and former Texas Governor John B. Connally starting at 7:45 p.m. in the South Park Inn of Lub-

Connally, also former U.S. Secretary of the Treasury, will keynote the dinner which is being hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Markham and Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Siewert.

Raymond Tapp, Lubbock County Chairman of Texans for Tower, said tickets are still available for the $30 per couple dinner. Tickets can be obtained by calling 763-5326, 763-5635 or 745-2507.

Preceding the dinner the two honorees will be guests at a $200 per couple fundraising reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Blake in Lubbock. Reservations for the reception, which will run from 5:30 p.m. to 7 p.m., are available at the same numbers for reserving dinner tickets.

Tower seeks re-election to the Senate against Democratic candidate Bob Krueger of New Braunfels.

Tower is the senior minority member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and is chairman of the Senate Republican Policy Committee. He has served in the Senate for the past 17 years.

Connally, who served three terms as the governor of Texas, is a senior partner in a Houston law firm and a popular spokesman in the Republican party.

Meyer said TWA's expansion plans at KCI stemmed from congestion at other major airports which is forcing the industry to look toward Kansas City.

Effective Oct. 20, he said, TWA will add five new flights at KCI, providing the city's first non-stop service to Pittsburgh, Dayton and Amarillo, a second non-stop flight to Cincinnati, and a new one-stop flight to Louisville.

Other improvements, Meyer said, will be introduced in December with the additon of a third non-stop flight to Phoenix and new one-stop service to Washington, D.C., and Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Inflation Fighters Gain Momentum

By LeROY POPE NEW YORK (UPI) - Committees to fight inflation and individual inflation fighters are springing up around the country much as proponents of Proposition 13 style tax-limiting measures. The leaders of these efforts so far are mainly economists or businessmen, but they are trying to create a groundswell of popular revolt against inflation resembling the taxpayer revolts that enacted

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts in the primary election. The most ambitious of these movements is that of the National Referendum Association, formed by New York mutual fund manager Milton Mound. Mound's movement has won the endorsement of the well-heeled American Conservative Union based in Washington. Mound's group has persuaded Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, to introduce in Congress a bill urging every state to put on the ballot the following alternative proposals as an advisory referendum:

-That a start be made at once to reduce federal spending and that a balanced budget be reached within the next two fiscal years.

-That the federal government should continue its present practice of deficit financing.

Mound is convinced the public would vote overwhelmingly for the first proposition and that this snowballing pressure would effectively put the brakes on government spending and curb inflation.

Another movement is the National Committee to Stop Inflation launched by Arthur Milton, New York insurance broker and author of a book, "Will Inflation Destroy America?" Milton wants to stir up a nationwide boycott or buyers strike. He wants people to do without goods and services that they regard as overpriced until the resulting sales drops really start hurting and force business, labor and government to cooperate to end infla-

In support of his referendum idea, Mound, the mutual fund man, quotes Thomas Jefferson: "When the people are well informed, they can be trusted with their own government, whenever things get so far wrong as to attract their notice they may be relied on to set them to rights ... Every government degenerates when trusted to the rulers alone. The people themselves are the only safe depositories ... I think we have more machinery of government than is necessary; too many parasites living off the labor of the industrious

When all government, domestic and foreign, in little as in great things, shall be drawn to Washington as the center of power, it will become as venal and and oppressive as the government from which we separated.

Harsh curbs on government spending also were urged by Chairman B.F. Blaggini of Southern Pacific Co. in a recent seminar in San Francisco sponsored by Stanford Research Institute. He said that's the only way to end the excessive regulation of business that creates stag-

Some money market observers have been calling for curbs on the power of the Federal Reserve System to expand the currency as the only sure way to halt inflation and save the dollar.

One, Julian Snyder, publisher of a newsletter called International Moneyline, said the ability of the Federal Reserve officials to expand the money supply without limit was like having "a cookjar that is never empty ... inevitably you'll eat more cookies.

It's been a year since he bought The Country Stop at this rural crossroads and he is determined to make a go of the oneman operation.

And they notice him. The ominous rumble of the horn on a tractor-trailer rig is likely to shatter the country stillness at

"That's their way of waking me up," Hennigan said. "Sometimes that goes on all night." It's a trucker's signal for Hennigan to man his CB radio, one means he uses to establish a clientele. "It takes a little bit of everything to keep the place going." Hennigan said. "I try to watch everything pennywise: I make every penny count." That may account for his CB radio nickname of "penny pincher."

Aside from the many gasoline and diesel pumps and ample parking lot outside, the merchandise offered inside ranges from potted plants to sandwiches and freshly cut meat.

"I open the store about 7 in the morning and close anywhere between 10 and

When Hennigan started he began work on a Western decor in the store, putting up murals of cowboys and Indians on the walls. This inspired one customer to give him a Jesse James poster that was putting the store of amid the decorations.

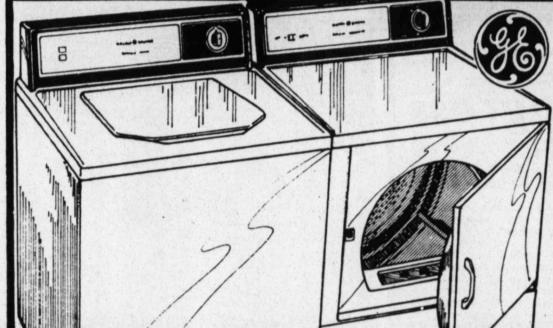

Then other customers started sending souvenirs. There's a branding iron, some metal wagon wheels, squirrel tails and a set of deer antiers.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Highs and lows thrash about in agony and frustration. And there were many simply curious moments.

> There was the April night in 1978 when Tongsun Park gave a party and nobody in Congress came. By then the South Korean businessman had lost much of his appeal on Capitol-Hill. He had returned to Washington for questioning by a grand jury investigating his generosity to memers of Congress.

There was the day during the Panama Canal treaty debate that Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., waited outside the Capitol for a White House car to take him to a meeting with President Carter. The car never showed up.

And who wants to remember Sept. 27, 1977, when Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, staged their all-night filibuster against the natural gas bill.

That was the night Hollings responded to a quorum call by entering the Senate chamber in a bright green and blue jogging suit. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., padded into the chamber in stocking feet and Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., wore slippers.

The sight of members of the House cheering as they watch totals flash on the screen of the electronic roll call system.

The time Abourezk objected to the Senate taking up the energy tax bill. Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd jumped to his feet and said, "I move we proceed to consideration of the bill." He called for a roll call on his motion. The first name called was Abourezk. He voted in favor of Byrd's motion. They looked at each other. Abourezk smiled. Byrd burst out laughing.

The vote that was lost for lack of the vice president. During the final days of the session, the Senate took up the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. To the surprise of the strongest supporters of the measure, one of their amendments lost on a 43-43 tie vote. Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who could have broken the tie, was out of town. "We didn't expect any ties," a labor lobbyist said later.

On the final day of the session, Abourezk named Dick Tuck, the political prankster, an intern on his staff. Tuck earned his place in political legend by harassing Richard Nixon's 1960 presidential campaign. At the start of the final day's session, Abourezk, who is retiring from the Senate, routinely obtained permission for an aide to be on the Senate floor. The next thirg anyone knew, Tuck was ensconced in a seat next to the senator.

It may have been Abourezk's way of waving farewell to the institution he often found too stuffy, to exit laughing.

Some investors seem to be doing just that by purchasing Imperial Russian issued in dollars when the Czars. ruled Russia and repudiated after the Bolshevik Revolution.

The bonds, like those from Cuba and what now is East Germany, are unlikely to play off anytime soon. But that was what they said about bonds from other Eastern European countries. Those nations since have repaid investors partially for their securities.

Before those settlements, "the bonds could be had for as little as 2 to 5 cents on the dollar," said Jack Golden, a vice president at Paine, Webber, Jackson &

"We're hopeful, but we're hopeful to the extent that hope springs eternal," said Daniel Collier, a vice president of Carl Marks and Co., a firm that has long had substantial holdings of many defaulted bonds, including the Russian ones.

Pressure by the American government appears to have played at least some role in persuading such Eastern European countries as Hungary, Poland, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria to settle on bonds issued by predecessor governments between the two world wars.

But there is little indication that, with all the issues pending between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, the United States has much concern about speculators in

Some people see hope in the Foreign Sovereignties Immunities Act of 1976. By some interpretations, that law would allow the holder of some Czarist bonds to sue the Russians in U.S. court and seize a Russian asset, say a cargo of grain, as security. But the law has never been tested.

The molds are then popped off the ce-ment, leaving a tough rock-like formation about three-quarters of an inch thick. The simulated rock is then sprayed

Income Tax Cut Bill Falls Short Of Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) - It began as a bow to the taxpayer revolt, but wound up as only a gesture. As a result, the congressional promise of big, future income tax cuts coupled with restraints on federal spending is only a declaration of good intentions in the tax bill now awaiting President Carter's

Despite the fact that both the Senate and the House had endorsed a four-year sequence of tax cuts beginning in 1980.

Analysis

congressional negotiators dropped the provision from the tax bill Congress passed in the final hours of its session.

The amendment had sailed through the Senate on Oct. 9, and the House later voted to instruct its tax negotiators to support the measure. But the instructions were not binding, and the administration pposed the amendment

The measure called for tax cuts totaling $164 billion between 1980 and 1983, coupled with a requirement that federal spending be held within prescribed lim-

In general terms, the budget restraint required that federal spending in any year be held to an increase of no more than one percent over the previous year. plus whatever it took to offset inflation. The amendment required that the federal budget be balanced by 1982, in order to trigger a tax cut in that year. It would have meant tax cuts totaling $576 during the four year period for a

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a sponsor of the amendment, said it would have given the taxpayers a direct and specific interest in federal spending restraints. "No spending restraint would mean no tax cut." he Republicans claimed the amendment borrowed heavily from their proposals to cut federal tax rates by about 33 percent over a three-year period.

They tried to salvage the Nunn amendment with a fallback proposal that would have retained the tax cut and spending restraints, but empowered the president to cancel any year's tax reduction by declaring on the previous Nov. 1 that econmic conditions were not right for it.

That didn't go anywhere, either. It didn't take much political savvy to see that the GOP proposal would have given a Democratic president the task of deciding just before election time whether to cancel an income tax cut. The administration had opposed the Nunn amendment, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal saying it would have clamped a straitjacket on administration efforts to adjust fiscal policy to deal with future economic conditions The final congressional product is only an expression of intent. It advocates tighter controls on federal spending, balanced budgets and, if economic conditions permit, future tax cuts.

What's left is a statement, with no binding provisions. The bill does not mandate future tax cuts, or anything else. It simply says Congress will consider future tax reductions if federal spending is kept within limits similar to those set by the original amendment.

MIDLAND — Republican Ronald Reagan lost his party's presidential nomination two years ago, but from the looks of the reception he received here Tuesday, you'd think the campaign never ended. The GOP leader was greeted at Midland Regional Airport with "Reagan for President" placards, carried by women sporting "Reagan for President" buttons. The local press asked the predictable question: "Will you run in 1980? "

Reagan smiled, saying, "quite a num-ber" of contenders have been mentioned for the Republican presidential ticket. But, he added, "I have not closed the

"The Republican party, I think, is more in step today with the thinking of the overwhelming majority of Americans. What we have always believed in our party the people are now demanding.

The only advantage of the energy legis-lation is that it is so "hopelessly compli-cated" that it probably will "fall on its face," he said.

Reagan said that under the energy plan, the government will have to set up and regulate as many as 23 categories of natural gas alone.

But Reagan said the tax cuts for individuals did not go far enough. "For the average working person, it's not even going to totally offset increases in Social Security" payroll deductions.

Reagan noted that Republican leaders had backed bigger tax cuts under the proposed Roth-Kemp legislation.

Bush, with almost every statement, suggested the need for fighting the nation's problems by counteracting liberal Democrats in Congress.

Their studied politeness and cordiality differed markedly from an exchange last week in which Hance accused Bush of trying to buy the election, riding on his father's coattails and being supported

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Wednesday Evening, October 18, 1978-B-15

The exchange marked the first time in this general election campaign that the candidates reduced their politics to personal issues. However, none of the accusations that Hance levelled at Bush were repeated during the Democrat's brief ad-chiefly by out-of-state political contribudress to the Plainview audience. And Bush, who angrily refuted the charges last week, made no reference to them Tuesday. In response to a question about party allegiance, Hance told the audience that his party membership would mean "I will be on the court where the action is made. He (Bush) won't be on the court.

"To have the input, you need to be where the action is," the Democrat said. 'And that's what we have to offer." Bush countered by saying, "We don't need more of the majority in Washington, D.C. In his opening address, Bush said the biggest problem his campaign faces is "a lot of people in West Texas are still afraid their grandmother or grandfather will turn over in their graves if they change parties. But, Bush continued, "People are changing in 1978, I'm convinced. One reason is people are looking to Washington, D.C., and understanding what causes in-flation," which is wasteful spending. The District must have "someone who's not going to be beholden to the people up there," Bush added.

In his opening remarks, Hance empha sized his state senatorial experience and his agricultural background, which he said is "the most important aspect you can consider in the campaign.

He also said he would, if elected, intro-duce sunset legislation and would sup-port a constitutional amendment to prohibit federal deficit spending.

When asked how they, as freshmen legislators, would make an impact on Congress, Bush and Hance again revealed philisophical party differences.

Hance answered by saying he would have to be "well prepared." And, he stressed, most delegates "have had prior experience before going to Washington.'

Bush replied by returning to the theme of balancing Congress. "If you want a philisophical change in the country, you need balance," he said. And, he added, his "sheer presence" will be a deciding

He also said that his party affiliation would mean that "when they (Congressional party majority members) are wrong. I can oppose them without fear of

In almost identical responses, the opponents agreed that they oppose the Equal Rights Amendment, publically funded national health insurance, abandoning funding for the B-1 bomber, federal bilingual programs for school students past the third grade, repeal of the Right to Work law, liberal federal funding for abortions, and the Humphrey-Hawkins

When asked whether they favor legislation to limit Congressional terms, Hance unequivocally said no, while Bush expressed tentative opposition.

Hance said the idea "sounds good on the surface" but that it would help urban areas to the detriment of rural areas, which often repeatedly elect legislators who gain valuable seniority.

While he is "not irrevocably opposed to it," Bush said he would "straddle the issue for now." If such legislation were passed, he said, the first step should be limiting the presidency to a one-time, six-

Journalist To Speak At Tech

Donald Woods, a South African journalist who escaped his country after the government declared him a "public nonperson" and placed him under the equivalent of house arrest, will speak on apartheid and the crisis in South Africa at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the Texas Tech University Center Theatre.

Almost a year ago, Woods, then editor of the "East London Daily Dispatch." was placed under strict censorship by the Nationalist Government of South Africa.

Woods was classified a "silent bystander" and forbidden to communicate with more than one person at a time unless speaking to family members.

He and his family were kept under police surveillance, his mail was intercepted, his car was bugged.

Woods was barred from journalism, forbidden to write anything (even a postcard) and was not allowed to be quoted.

But Woods did write, in secret, and he and his family escaped from South Africa to tell his version of the imprisonment and possible murder of his friend, Black Consciousness leader Steve Biko.

Bill May Weaken Spy Agencies

tration, celebrating the enactment of guidelines for foreign intelligence surveillance, apparently is ignoring the de-sire of some House opponents to try and make some "remedial changes" next

For the first time, American intellig ence agencies must go into a special court to get warrants for wiretapping and other foreign intelligence surveillance within this country.

President Carter called the bill "one of the most significant legislative initiatives involving our intelligence in the last three "All I can say is, I hope I am wrong on my position," said one opponent, Rep.

Allen E. Ertel, D-Pa. Ertel said in a telephone interview he fears the bill will "jeopardize the security of the United States counter-intelligence

To Urtel, everything will depend on

"If not I will probably go back to the Select Committee on Intelligence and ask them to introduce legislation which I will robably draft and give to them for remedial changes," he said.

Attorney General Griffin Bell said the bill "demonstrates that the executive branch and Congress can work together in a nonpartisan spirit to design well-balanced intelligence legislation. Bell's "nonpartisan" label disregarded the fact Republicans led the bitter fight against the bill in the House. Rep. Robert McCrory, R-Ill., who led the opposition, credited the Carter victory to "tremendous pressure" by the Democratic leadership in Congress.

The biggest problem the bill drafters faced was how to obtain warrants. A judge is expected to know what a warrant is about before he signs it, but these cases involve some of the nation's most sensitive interesting.

Rather than have ordinary federal judges keep such secrets in their files, the bill calls for setting up a special court of seven judges to be handpicked by the U.S. chief justice.

These judges would rotate in Washing-ton in pairs to handle the wiretap warrant applications, surrounded by the tightest security the administration can

Ertel, who led an initially successful fight against the special court, noted if an enemy country managed to penetrate this court "it would have complete knowledge of the entire counter-intellig-

New Pope Calls Election Act Of Faith, Courage

By EDWARD MAGRI

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II told the College of Cardinals today it demonstrated the "authentic universality" of the Roman Catholic Church by electing a non-Italian pope for the first time in 455 years.

"It has been an act of faith and at the same time one of great courage to make a non-Italian the Bishop of Rome," the 58year-old Polish pontiff said in an address to the cardinals who named him the 264th ruler of their church on Monday.

Speaking in Italian in the Consistory Hall of the Apostolic Palace, the pope reminded the princes of the church that 'some even now are not spared the experience of prisons, suffering and humiliation for Christ."

It was assumed that because of his long experience with communism in his native Poland, he was referring to prisoners of Communist regimes. But he could also have been speaking of prisoners in Latin America and other developing areas where the church takes a militant stand against rightist authoritarian regimes.

Following in the footsteps of the pope whose name he took. John Paul II ordered an inaugural Mass Sunday instead of a coronation and like John Paul I will not don the traditional beehive-shaped tiara for centuries symbolic of his office. Instead he will be vested with the white wool pallium or stole signifying his dual offices as Roman Catholic bishop of Rome and patriarch of the Western church. The Vatican said it would announce later whether the Mass would be held outdoors in St. Peter's Square, like the inaugural of Pope John Paul I on Sept. 3 and the coronation of Pope Paul VI in 1963, or inside St. Peter's Basilica where previous popes were crowned. The church's first Polish pope drove from the Vatican late Tuesday afternoon, less than 24 hours after his election, to see an ailing Polish bishop and other patients in a Rome hospital Thousands cheered the new pontiff and policemen stopped rush-hour traffic along the 21/2-mile route. As traffic backed up, motorists first honked in protest and then got out of their cars to wave when they realized the pope was on his first outing from the Vatican.

Riding in an open car, John Paul stood up repeatedly, waved and stretched out his hands and gestured to his driver to slow down when he saw the crowds hurrying to hail him.

Nurses, doctors and patients mobbed him in the entrance hall of the Gemelli Polyclinic Catholic Hospital in northwest Rome. He charmed them with his ready smile and visibly enjoyed the crowd. The pope bent and kissed his Polish compatriot, Bishop Andre-Marie Deskur of the Vatican Curia. But the 54-year-old prelate was unconscious after suffering a blood clot last Friday. "He is a colleague of mine but above all he is a very dear friend," the pope said.

Paul asked them to pray for him. "Humanly speaking you are weak, sick," he said. "But you are also powerful, very powerful in the same way as Jesus Christ crucified is powerful. In this resemblance is your power. Try to make use of this power. Archbishop Giuseppe Caprio, the Vatican's deputy secretary of state, reminded him he was supposed to give a blessing before leaving, and the pontiff spoke into the microphone again:

"The monsignor says I'm not finished. I must bless you. He tells me how the pope has to conduct himself. Good."

In Poland, officials of the Communist government announced they would cut the usual red tape to speed up visas for Poles wanting to go to Rome for the inaugural Sunday. Officials of the Polish church said they hoped John Paul would return to his homeland for the 900th anniversary next May 8 of the death of St. Stanislaw, Poland's patron saint, or for the 600th anniversary in 1982 of the installation of the picture of the Black Madonna at Czestochowa, central Europe's most famed

In Wadowice, the Polish town where the pope was born, the Rev. Edward Zacher made a new entry on page 549 in the parish register under the record in Latin of the baptism on May 18, 1920, of 'Karol Jozef Wojtyla, legitimate son, Emilia Kaczorowska mother, Karolus Woitvla father.

Zacher wrote in Latin: "On Oct. 16, 1978, he was elected Supreme Pontiff taking the name of John Paul II.'

One-Man Protest Halted

ARANYAPRATHET, Thailand (AP) -Thai authorities stopped a 29-year-old American near the Cambodian border today and said they would arrest him if he held up a white cloth placard saying. Stop The Killing In Cambodia.

Bill Smith, a native of Amboy, Ill., said he hoped to march as close as he could to the Thai-Cambodian frontier to stage a one-man protest against "murder and terrorization of the Cambodian people by the Khmer rouge."

But Thai officials said they didn't want to risk hurting already sensitive Thai-Cambodian relations. They said if Smith went ahead with his demonstration, he would be arrested under a martial-law provision against "creating a misunderstanding" between the two countries.

"My first reaction was that's part of the problem in this world," Smith said. Those who've got guns will be recognized as governments, but what about the people who are getting killed?"

Smith said he was used to great freedom in the United States but conceded he understood why the Thais might want to stop his protest.

Until recently, the Thai-Cambodian border has been the scene of bloody Cambodian attacks. The Thais, hoping to exchange ambassadors with Phnom Penh in the near future, are anxious to improve relations.

Smith flew to Thailand last week from the United States. He was about three miles from the border when a district officer and two policemen threatened him with arrest if he so much as lifted up his sign in Cambodian for photographers.

Smith said he would return to Bangkok, 150 miles west of Aranyaprathet, to seek permission from the Thai government to carry out his demonstration. Officials in Alanyaprathet said the orders to stop Smith came from the provincial gover-

The American, a social worker and former auditor, said he decided to stage a protest after reading about executions and brutality in Cambodia in American newspapers.

Booklet Makes Buying Easier

Are you finally ready to invest in a home of your own? The government may be able to help you with that purchase.

First, write for a free copy of the Department of Housing and Urban Development booklet, "Wise Home Buying." which can help you make what is probably the single largest purchase of your life. The booklet can be obtained from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo. 81009. Millions of Americans have purchased homes with loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA), which is now part of HUD. Many other Americans have renovated their existing homes with FHA loans.

Down payments on FHA home loans are low and repayment period can stretch to 30 years (or 35 years in special circumstances). The agency can now insure home loans of as much as $60,000; before October 1977, the maximum was The maximum interest rate allowed on such loans is 8.75 percent, plus 0.5 percent for mortgage insurance. Patience is essential in obtaining an FHA loan. Not only is there the usual government red tape, but an agency inspector must visit the home to see that its construction and location meet FHA standards. To set things in motion visit your bank and fill out the loan application. The bank, in turn, will coordinate the matter with the FHA.

FHA loans can also help finance mobile home purchases. HUD recently raised the ceiling on mobile home loans from $12,000 to $16,000. The maximum interest rate that can be charged on such loan is 12 percent. The same rules that apply to loans for single-family houses apply to condomimiums. If you're in the market for a condo, you might also wish to request the free HUD booklet,

"Questions About Condomimiums," from the Consumer Information Center. HUD will also back a loan of as much as $15,000 to improve your current home. These loans, which cover improvements to enhance the utility of livability of your home, can be repaid over as many as 15 years at a 12 percent interest rate. But you can't use one of these loans to buy a swimming pool. Are you low on cash but handy with home repairs? There may be a HUD program especially for you. If you are found eligible, you can buy a somewhat rundown house from HUD and spruce it up via low-interest rehabilitation loan that can be paid back over as many as 20

Does the blood of the pioneers run through your veins? Then you might wish to invistigate the new urban homesteading programs that HUD Has helped set into motion. If you qualify for this program, you can buy an older, inner-ci-ty house for as little as $1, provided you renovate it and move in within a specified period of time. For details on urban homesteading, contact your local government's housing

For more information on all the above loan programs, write the Federal Housing Commissioner, Department of Housing and Urban Development, 451 Seventh Street S.W., Washington D.C. 20410. Or you may contact local or regional HUD offices.

Actress Hopes Advertisements Will Help

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Drivers along the Sunset Strip are besieged on all sides by enormous billboards advertising booze, record albums, Las Vegas hotels and one enigmatic number of a beautiful Smiling down on the traffic is a huge blowup of a brunette in a tight sweater accompanied by the words "Maray Ayres. Superdivertismentive."

That's all, except for the name of a management firm in small letters.

It's an eye-catcher, all right, but the name and face are unknown to al! but a handful of friends and family.

Maray Ayres, as might be expected, is an actress who is convinced that advertising is the best way to bring attention to

She is the wife of Joel D. Nelson, president of AFM Inc., a show business con-glomerate. Fortunately for Maray, her husband is a very rich man who "knows how to spend his money."

Nelson has spent a fortune on two such billboards in the past five months. He also footed the bills for large ads in the Hollywood trade papers, Daily Variety and The Hollywood Reporter, which are read religiously by everybody in movies and television.

Each ad, 18 in all, is composed of a large portrait of Maray in a different pose and costume. The photographs alone cost a king's ransom.

"superdivertismentive" on the billboard is a made-up word, according to Maray, meaning multi-talented.

By way of proving her versatility, she posed in buckskins as an Indian princess, in a nun's habit, in seductive attire as a streetwalker, with a gun as a spy, in jodh-purs as an equestrienne, in a WAC outfit, on rollerskates and miniskirt as a carhop. In other ads she was done up as a gun moll, a three-piece suit executive, in crash helmet as a biker, in hoop skirt as a Southern belle, in mink coat as a jet-setter, as a fortorn immigrant and even in checked shirt and blue jeans as the farmer's daughter.

Maray is, in fact, a farm girl, reared in Boulder Creek, Calif., in Santa Cruz

"I collected eggs, fed the chickens and looked after the cows and pigs," said Maray, a stylish, talkative woman who looks to be thirtyish. "And I've always wanted to be an actress 'No matter how much studying you do, the competition is terrific and it's necessary to find some way to bring yourself to the attention of people who make make Maray landed in Hollywood 10 years ago after spending some time in San Francisco where she studied theater arts. She tried the stage first, working in little theater groups and repertoire companies. She made a living for four years singing in a Beverly Hills hotel nightclub. Her specialty was a drum solo. She says she is best playing snare drums as accompaniment to John Philip Sousa marches.

Maray also achieved modest success in a few TV shows and was cast in several bit parts in movies.

She co-starred with Giselle MacKenzie in a couple of Canadian movies which were never released in the United States. Maray was one of a bevy of beauties surrounding Frank Sinatra in "Dirty Dingus

In 1970 she had appeared with Bruce Dern in a bomb titled "The Cycle Sav-

After her marriage to Nelson seven years ago, Maray's career went into limbo. She gave up acting to concentrate on tennis, entering tournaments and win-ning 11 trophies. Earlier this year she decided to try acting once more.

"The billboards and trade ads were Joel's idea," Maray said. "I wasn't get-ting interviews and I didn't have the proper representation to get in to see producers and casting directors.

"Once I did get the attention of important people through the ads, I didn't have any decent film of myself to show them what I could do. I didn't want to be just a curiosity, a public relations gimmick

"So I made my own screen test. Joel had Bernard Wiesen direct me in a video tape presentation showing the various things I could do. Bernard directed 'First Monday in October' on Broadway

Thanks to the billboards and the trade ads, I began getting calls from casting directors and some of them were im-

TV Bricks Help Angry Viewers Release Frustrations On Sets

By JERRY BUCK HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Attention, all you TV critics out there! Now you can do something about all the things on television that annoy you.

It's called the TV Brick and it's made for you to throw at your set when you want to let off steam. Don't worry, it's only foam rubber and won't really hurt the set - unless you pick up your Pet Rock by mistake.

Jim Christ dreamed it up and is turning it out in a backyard factory near San Diego with the aid of Greg Schredder. So far

NEW YORK (UPI) - The 1980 Moscow Olympic Games get all the good press play, but ABC would like to point that there will be American Olympics that year, also.

ABC will be telecasting the winter games in 1980 to be held in Lake Placid. N.Y., but the Placid publicity so far has focused on cost overruns and corrup-

Jim Spence, vice president, ABC Sports, gave a television academy lunch meeting a fill-in on the 1980 winter games to take place at Lake Placid in two years, and along the way - under questioning - had a few remarks to make about the Moscow adventure.

To review - a couple of years ago the Soviets summoned the three American networks to Moscow to discuss television rights for the games and demanded $50 million up front. The Americans went home to find out if Washington would consider a pool broadcast of the games an anti-trust violation.

Back at Blackrock, as the CBS headquarters in New York City is called, the powers-that-be, which usually means William Paley, decided CBS should withdraw from the bidding.

"It was hard for the Russians to understand," Spence said. "I think the Russians semi-panicked."

Panic or whatever, a West German entrepreneur, who had been representing CBS and with whom ABC declined to do business, arranged the Olympic coup for NBC with a price tag of $85 million, with other expenses upping the cost to about $110-$115 million.

The Placid Olympics cost ABC $40 million, including $15.5 million for broadcast rights, which sounded small until Spence noted that 20 years earlier the winter Olympic at Squaw Valley, Calif., cost CBS $50,000 for broadcast rights.

The 1980 winter games will run Feb. 13-24, and will consist of 50 hours of programing, compared to 43 1/2 for the 1976 games at Innsbruck, Austria. Sponsorship of the games is sold out and Spence estimates the network has grossed more than $48 million in advertising revenue. And Spence suspects the network undersold

A final statistic - ABC, based on past Olympic performance, estimates that 85 percent of the U.S. population, or approximately 180 million people, will watch some portion of the games.

CBS has decided to keep Mary Tyler Moore off the air until she has her act together. The current "Mary" comedy-variety show, already preempted for several weeks, will stay off the air while new producer Perry Lafferty readies a new comedy-variety format, which is expected to air in December.

Mondale Praises Carter For Taste

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) - Walter Mondale had tongue-in-cheek praise for President Carter for what he said was his boss' greatest achievement so far: the selection of the vice president.

Mondale was in town over the weekend to stump for Rep. David Cornwell, a Democrat who is running for re-election. He attended a rally and a $100-a-plate fundraiser. Between quips, Mondale gave Congress a pat on the back, saying the 95th assembly was "one of the most productive sessions of Congress in American

Glad You Asked That!

Q: About Mark Hamill — did he ever appear on television be-fore making "Star Wars"? Also, was he really born in Japan? Is he an only child? Anything else you can tell us? — Ginny and Joan, Fans from San Jose, Calif.

A: Though "Star Wars" was Hamill's debut in movies, he made his first TV appearance on "The Bill Cosby Show" in 1970. He was a regular on ABC's daytime soap, "General Hospital," for almost a year, and a star on "The Texas Wheelers" situation comedy series. He also appeared on "The FBI,"
"Night Gallery, "Owen Marshall," "Room 222," "The Partridge Family," and many other TV shows, including several movies for TV. Hamill hammed it up doing voices for the cartoon series "Jeannie."

Born in Oakland, Calif., he is the middle son of seven children. His father was a U.S. Navy captain. He grew up in California, Virginia, New York City, and Yokohama and Yokusuka, Japan - where he finished his last two years of high school.

Two years as a theater arts major at Los Angeles City College completed Hamill's formal education. And as a result of his performance in a 1969 local production of "Anthems in E Flat Calliope," he acquired an agent.

Currently starring with Annie Potts in MGM's "Corvette Mark's favorite hobby is collecting antique toys and books, or anything that bridges the transition from pioneer days to current civilization.

'Flying High' Changes, Makes Gain In Ratings

By JERRY BUCK
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Any resemblance between the pilot movie for CBS's
"Flying High" and the series is purely unintentional

The characters are the same, they're still airline stewardesses. But the leering, snickering quality of the movie, along with most of the jiggle, has been jettisoned.

"We knew our audience wouldn't be the dirty old men, but young girls," said executive producer Mark Carliner.

"This is the ultimate teen-age fantasy. Who do you think watches 'Charlie's Angels'? Women are attracted to stories about women. Our primary consideration in the casting was to find three girls with beauty and charm who would be appealing to women. For the series, out went the romance at Carliner's strategy may be working. In the latest ratings week "Flying High," which airs on Friday, was CBS's third-ranked new show in the Nielsen ratings. It drew 30 percent of the audience, up from the week before.

The one-hour show stars Pat Klous, Ka-thy Witt and Connie Sellecca as rookie stewardesses for Sun West Airlines. Most often they're on a plane piloted by How-

The pilot movie went through the roof when it aired earlier this season. It was No. 1, but Carliner said it was a fluke. He did not think titillation would hold up in series. The show also drew the wrath of the flight attendants' unions. "It was originally conceived only as a and what's more exploitable than three stewardesses getting hit on by the same man. But halfway through I realized we had a series and tried to move it in a new direction. I couldn't do a romance of the week. Will she or won't she?" Carliner said he didn't know where his stories would come from. "Then one morning I woke up and said why not do what Michael Butler did with 'A Chorus Line," he said. "He sat down with a lot of chorus girls and got their stories." He set up his own encounter sessions with stewardesses and taped their stories. The episodes so far have been based on these stories. Such as the stewardesses locking themselves in their hotel room to keep out a group of conventioneers, stacking the dinner trays in the bathroom and burning a passenger's shirt in the

He said he is taking a sympathetic look at the stewardesses to attract women. He said, "Me will watch because the girls are pretty. Women will watch because it's a realizable fantasy. Girls can't become detectives like on 'Charlie's Angels,' but they can become stewardesses."

New York Yankees capped the most improbable of all baseball comebacks by winning the final game of the 75th World Series with a pitcher who was supposed to be washed up and a puny infielder who was written off as a major leaguer

Catfish Hunter found one more victory in his relic of a right arm, while second baseman Brian Doyle made major offensive and defensive contributions, leading the Yanks to a 7-2 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday night for their

By winning Game 6, the Yanks beat the Dodgers in the Fall Classic for the second year in a row. And the team that was 14 games behind Boston July 20, beat the Red Sox in a one-game playoff Oct. 2 and defeated Kansas City for the American League pennant won the World Series the hard way, of course.

The Yankees became the first team in World Series history to win four straight games after dropping the first two.

Nobody's ever done what this club did," said Yankee owner George Steinbrenner, who has won three AL pennants and two world titles since taking over the club in 1973. "This is as great a Yankee team as there ever was. I don't care about the '27 Yankees or any other of the great Yankee teams. This team overcame

The treatment, a stab in the dark at best, worked, allowing Hunter to fuel the Yanks' late-summer come back with a 9-3 record down the strech.

"All I had was control," said Hunter, who was relieved by Rich Gossage in the eighth after giving up six hits, including Davey Lopes' leadoff home run. (Catcher Thurman) Munson came out and told me I didn't have anything, that I should just t his target

Hunter zeroed in on the target and allowed his double play combination of shortstop Bucky Dent and Doyle to do the rest. Doyle's backhand stab began an inning-ending double play, with Dodgers on first and second and trailing only 3-2

"That was the biggest defensive play of the game," said Dent, the Series' Most Valuable Player, who batted .417 with seven runs batted in, including three in the finale. "I'm very happy for the little

At 5-11, 181 pounds, Dent is another one of baseball's little men.

It was Dent's three-run homer that was the big blow in the Yanks' 5-4 playoff win over Boston and, two weeks later, he's the star of the series.

He wasn't even listed in the New York Doyle. Yankees' press guide last winter and he didn't go to spring training with them. He probably would have been back in Cave City, Ky., if All-Star second baseman Willie Randolph hadn't missed the American League playoffs and the World Series with a pulled hamstring.

But there he was in the clubhouse of baseball's world champions Tuesday night, big as life, all 5-foot-10 and 165 pounds of him. And if you believe those numbers from the Yankees' publicity department, then you probably also believe the improbable Brian Doyle story.

Doyle's cubicle in the clubhouse was the one nearest the runway to the visitors' dugout at Dodger Stadium. And as the world champion Yankees clattered each and every one - hugged Brian

And then they poured champagne over the skinny little infielder with the innocent choir boy face, the big chaw of tobacco in his cheek and the guts of a burglar who batted a mere .438 in the World Series and fielded his position flawlessly.

The Yanks' great infield play, particularly that of third baseman Graig Nettles, helped expose the Dodgers's defensive weaknesses. And the Yanks' consistent and clutch hitting exposed the Dodgers' weaknesses there too

The Yanks set a record for most hits in a six-game Series, 68, while the Dodgers bats fell silent in their four losses, especially cleanup batter Steve Garvey, who had no RBI in the entire Series.

"They kept us down. They didn't allow us the big inning or the big home run," said Garvey. "There were times we didn't execute the basics."

Lopes, the Dodgers' most productive

"When you get in the playoffs and World Series, it obviously means more, so you concentrate more," he said. "They threw me a lot of breaking balls and that's what I got most of my hits on.

"I won the Southern League MVP award in the All-Star game, but that was a long time ago. I can't really say it in words how I feel. I suppose in a few more days it will sink in, but I think that everybody on this ballclub did a job and I think there could be nine most valuable players in this series."

Yanks Didn't Know Meaning Of Quit

LOS ANGELES (AP) -"The team that refused to die."

That was the tag put on the 1978 New York Yankees by one of the spear carriers, veteran outfielder Paul Blair, who shared in only a two-inning stint of the 7-2 World Series-clinching victory Tuesday night over the Los Angeles

But it echoed above the din of the yelling, cork-popping dressing room and it poured electronically throughout the land.

"These guys didn't know how to quit," said Jim (Catfish) Hunter, the winning pitcher who earlier this year was fearful he might never throw again. "This was my sixth World Series and by far the most satisfying - I've never

produces. They can beat you to death with singles." 'The little guys stood 10 feet tall," said Al Rosen, the club president.

Rosen's reference was to shortstop Bucky Dent and rookie second baseman Brian Doyle, a last-minute replacement for the injured Willie Randolph. Both batted better than .400 and, between them, lashed out a dozen hits in the final two games. Dent was voted MVP.

'Dent deserved it," said Reggie Jackson, who poled a prodigious home run — his ninth in World Series play — to settle a score with the schoolboy fire-baller, Bob Welch, who struck him out with all the world watching in the Series' second game.

"It's amazing what these fellows did in the face of all kinds of adversity," the Tampa, Fla., shipbuilder said. "We lost two of our top pitchers, Andy Messersmith and Don Gullett, at the start of the year. Dent was lost for two months. Mickey Rivers twice went on the disabled list. Willie Randolph suffered a groin injury just before the Series. Chris Chambliss was lost during the Series when he was hit on the wrist.

"At one time (July 20) we were 14 games behind the Boston Red Sox. Our pitching staff was shattered. We changed managers in midseason. Nobody thought we could make it, and even I began to doubt. "But they showed me something. This is a tribute to sheer guts."

Few men could relate the travails and triumphs of baseball's world champions more graphically than Blair, the stringy 34-year-old outfielder who came to the Yankees in January 1977 from the Baltimore Orioles.

"This team doesn't get the respect that it deserves," the fleet, sure-gloved outfielder said in modulated tones, unintentionally drawing on a favorite phrase of comedian Rodney Dangerfield.

'They say we bought the pennant. Rot. That is a holdover from 1977. When we made up 14 games on the Red Sox, they blamed it on Boston's collapse, not our good play. It went unnoticed that we won 60 of 84 games in that "They said we were lucky to beat the Red Sox in the one-game playoff. When we won the third game in New York 12-2, everybody talked about the breakup of the Dodger infield. Hardly anybody mentioned that we collected

Gomez graded out 96 percent and made eight tackles to garner the Avalanche-Journal's defensive player of the week

"Johnny made no defensive technique mistakes," said Talbot. "His performance was one if not the best we've had this season.

Gomez, who flip-flops from right to left defensive end, is responsible for stopping sweep and off tackle plays.

"Johnny probably has more trouble stopping off tackle plays because he's not that big," said Taibot.

Gomez, who tips the scales at 185-pounds, isn't exactly the largest defen-sive end to play high school football. "No, but he's quick," said Talbot. Others being cited includes Monterey's Brett Dixon, 14 tackles and one fumble recovery; Estacado's Kenneth Davis, 10 unassisted tackles; Coronado's Randy Lusk, 13 tackles; and Lubbock Christian's Del Condor and Greg Mullins.

The offensive lineman honor goes to Monterey's Larry Bradley. Bradley graded out 87 percent in the Plainsmen's loss to Pampa.

However, the competition was close enough for Bradley to hear footsteps.

Lubbock High's James Shelby, 86 percent; Lubbock Christian's Shawn Williams, 80 percent; while Coronado's Ben

Pollard graded 75 percent. Estacado had two nominees for the offensive lineman recognition camilla and Mike Esquivel.

However, Matador Coach Louis Kelley wasn't totally thrilled about the overall performance of his team against Lamesa Friday night and evaluating Escamilla and Esquivel said, "we didn't grade our players this week. A year ago, the Yankees also beat the Dodgers in six games.

"There's nothing to be sorry about," said third baseman Ron Cey who came up with two fielding gems in the finale. "It's disappointing to get this far and be outplayed the last four games, one way or another

"Just about everybody in their lineup hit the ball well ... Dent and Doyle, those two guys hurt us with the bat. We didn't anticipate that. Nettles hurt us with those plays in the third game. We were outpitched, out-hit, out-defensed. They didn't make any mistakes."

Cey defended the much-maligned Los Angeles infield, which did not have a good Series.

'You don't win three pennants in the last five years by having a bad ball club or being bad in one aspect of the game," Cey said.

The usually volatile Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda was speaking softly.

"We didn't get the breaks, and they played just great," said the skipper who succeeded Walt Alston last year and has hung up two National League pennants. "I just feel very bad for my ball club, the Dodger organization and the fans.'

Lasorda is sure to be criticized, rightly or wrongly, for his handling of the club in his second World Series. But it isn't his fault that the club's leading batter, Steve Garvey, failed to drive in a run in any of the six games.

"You go through periods where you don't swing the bat as well," said Garvey. "The first three games, I was four for 12. The last three games they pitched me

Islanders Defeat Montreal

Resch saw the difference as soon as he stepped on the ice but the Montreal Canadiens didn't take notice until Denis Potvin turned on the switch.

"The guys acted as if they were possessed and there wasn't anything we weren't going to do to win this game," said Resch after the Islanders snapped an 11game regular-season losing streak to the Canadiens with a 3-1 National Hockey League victory Tuesday night.

You could see the the steam coming off the ice the guys were so fired up, said Resch, who stopped 24 of 25 Mon-

Steve Shutt brought the Islanders back to earth momentarily as he gave Montreal a 1-0 lead at 1:53 of the first period on a slap shot from inside the left faceoff circle as the Canadiens appeared ready to give the Islanders loss No.12 in a row. That is until Potvin took charge.

The All-Star defenseman tied the score with 2:30 remaining in the opening session and it was all New York after that.

"It's funny, Denis and I were watching Montreal working out and things aren't coming naturally with our club as opposed to three years ago," Resch said. Rookie John Tonelli, a former World Hockey Association player, put New York ahead 2-1 with his first NHL goal at 5:08 of the second period with the aid of a lucky bounce.

"This is a great confidence builder," said Potvin, who has scored four goals and an assist in New York's three games

But scoring isn't the only thing on his mind this season

"I've set all the personal goals I want to set." Potvin added. "There is only one more goal I want and that's a Stanley Cup and I want to help everybody on this club get it.

New York Coach Al Arbour wasn't looking that far ahead but he did like what he saw last night.

"This win was a long time coming," said Arbour, referring to the losing streak to the Canadiens.

"This was a 400 per cent better effort than our first two games. We took the body and played agressive. This game proves what can happen when we're a working club instead of Fancy Dans."

Bengals Reinstate Tackle Ron Hunt

CINCINNATI (AP) - The Cincinnati Bengals have reinstated Ron Hunt, a reserve offensive tackle who walked out last week

Hunt was reportedly unhappy over speculation he would be dropped with the activation of former Toronto Argonaut Mike Wilson.

"He phoned us and said he was ready to come back and start work in the full spirit of things. Coach Homer Rice felt Ron was in the right frame of mind to return so we are ready to take him back," said Mike Brown, assistant general man-

The National Football League team waived defensive end Dave Pureifory to keep their roster at 45. Pureifory was obtained during the preseason on waivers from New England.

The Bengals said Hunt would not be

Who Needs Webster? Apparently Not Seattle

By The Associated Press
The Seattle SuperSonics don't seem to miss Marvin Webster at all.

"We're a better club now than we were last year," contends Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens, whose team raised its record to 3-0 with a 120-109 decision over the New York.Knicks Tuesday night.

The victory was especially sweet be-cause it was the Knicks who wooed Webster away from Seattle, the club he led to the National Basketball Association playoff finals last year. But the 7foot-I center, who became a free agent and signed a five-year, $3 million contract with New York, had just seven points and 10 rebounds in his first game against his former Seattle teammates.

"I played badly," Webster conceded. "I felt bad when we were losing by 20 points to my ex-teammates."

On the other hand, Lonnie Shelton, part of the compensation package that Commissioner Larry O'Brien awarded to Seattle after the Knicks signed Webster, had 20 points and 10 rebounds in just 22 minutes for the Sonics.

"I was nervous coming back to New York," said Shelton. "But it all turned out well, just like I had hoped. I really wanted to do well in this game, and to win. It's more fun being on a winner.'

In other NBA games, the Portland Trail Blazers topped the Kansas City Kings 115-112, the San Diego Clippers defeated the Chicago Bulls 99-94, the Washington Bullets edged the New Jersey Nets 113-109, the New Orleans Jazz de feated the Detroit Pistons 114-109, the Cleveland Cavaliers trimmed the Los Angeles Lakers 113-111 and the San Antonio Spurs edged the Phoenix Suns 110-107.

Shelton came in with four minutes to go in the opening period and helped Seattle outscore New York 28-11 over a span of 101/2 minutes. The Sonics methodically built the lead to 26 points in the fourth period and only a late burst by the Knicks made the final score respectable.

Sealy Back Heads HS Honor Roll

By The Associated Press

The Sealy High School football team's offense is built around the feints, bursts and dashes of 6-2, 205-pound Eric Dickerson and Coach Ralph Harris is proud of his offensive line's efforts.

But on those occasions when all else fails. Dickerson takes over.

"After he gets through the line and into the secondary he's his own blocker." Harris said. "Our offense is based on breaking him to a small crease inside and letting him go. Our players know if they. can get him a little hole, he can take it from there.

Dickerson turned in his fourth 150-yard plus performance in five games last week with 192 yards on 18 carries and three touchdowns in a 20-0 shutout of Brookshire Royal to earn mention in this week's Associated Press Schoolboy Hon-

Dickerson, due to be one of the mostly highly recruited schoolboy athletes after the season ends, has 875 yards on 90 carries through five games this season and the Tigers are unbeaten and ranked No. 6 in Class 2A of the AP's schoolboy poll

He can just outrun people but when you watch the film in slow motion it is inside where you can see that he really excells," Harris said. "He just has a knack for finding an opening. We try to teach him a few things about anticipation and seeing things in front of him but mostly he just runs to daylight.

Harris arrived at Sealy in the midst of an 18-game losing streak which extended to 22 losses before the Tigers went 2-8 in 1975. Sealy went 4-6 the next year and 7-2-I last year before breaking into the state rankings this season.

We feel like we've got things going now and Eric is a big part of it," Harris

In other Honor Roll performances last

Orangefield running backs Mark Netterville and Todd Goss led a scoring assault in a 99-0 victory over Kountze. Netterville rushed 15 times for 194 yards and scored five touchdowns while Goss got 200 yards on 10 carries and scored twice in the highest scoring game in the state

Houston Lineman Honored

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Coach Bill Yeoman understands the frustration of Texas AM quarterback Mike Mosley, a ember of the Aggie track team and one of the fastest football players in the Southwest Conference.

Yeoman's understanding begins with UH defensive tackle Leonard Mitchell. "It has to be an intense experience for Mosley when he takes off for the sideline and finds out he can't ourrun a big black mountain," Yeoman said.

The mammoth 6-5, 250-pound Mitchell pursued Mosley from sideline to sideline, met him in the middle and on four occasions, tackled him for losses, including three times on third down in UH's surprising 33-0 shutout of the then No. 6. ranked Aggies Saturday.

Yeoman also sympathizes with Mosley's attempts to deal with UH linebacker David Hodge and defensive tackle Hosea Taylor, who took turns treating Mosley

When the game was over, the UH defense had held Mosley to a minus 16 yards on 17 rushes and stopped Curtis Dickey, the No. 3 rusher in the nation, with 25 yards on 14 carries.

For their efforts against the Aggies, No. 3 nationally in total offense going into the game, Mitchell, Hodge and Taylor have been named National and Southwest Conference co-defensive players of the week by The Associated Press.

Hodge, a key figure in Houston's SWC championship in 1976, left school and gave up football last season, saying he was burned out. But he burned the Aggies with 12 total tackles and intercepted Mosley once to set up Houston's fourth

Taylor had five tackles, including three for losses totaling 23 yards. In the second quarter he decked Mosley for an eight yards loss on second down, then forced Houston's second touchdown.

"He's even better than before," Yeoman said, "because he's got his enthusiasm back."

This is by far our best defensive effort," said the soft-spoken Hodge, who received honorable mention on one publication's All-America team last year even though he didn't play. "It's all a matter of concentration and we are really

An indication of Hodge's concentration came in the third quarter when the Aggies pounced on UH's only fumble of the game. Hodge made four straight solo tackles and contributed to a fifth to stop the Aggie offensive.

Taylor, who shed 40 pounds and earned a starting berth during spring training, said "We knew this was a big game and could send us on the way to the top.

Butch VI was put to sleep. He was 15 years old and was suffering from arthritis and a number of other infirmities associated with old age.

WSU President Glenn Terrell announced earlier this month that the university would seek another big cat mascot to replace Butch VI, but he reversed

Apparently bowing to the wishes of some students, Terrell said plans to obtain another live cougar have been scrapped.

Terrell noted the results of a telephor survey conducted by a student group calling itself the environmental task force. Of the 403 students contacted last weekend, about two-thirds said they opposed getting another live cougar. Terrell said he was impressed by the manner in which the students responded to the issue and that he is convinced the survey accurately reflects the current majority opinion on campus.

U.S. District Judge To Hear New Poison Ban Arguments

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) - Federal attorneys have taken a new tack in their attempt to prevent a trial on the validity of a 1972 Environmental Protection Agency ban of a coyotekilling poison called 1080.

The latest issue is scheduled for argument before U.S. District Judge Ewing Kerr Thursday in Cheyenne. A trial is scheduled for Nov. 20 - unless Kerr accedes to the latest government argu-

Several western states, along with national wool producers and cattlemen's organizations, have sought to overturn the EPA order in a case that has gone from Kerr's court to the U.S. Supreme Court and back.

Ranch and wool interests insist that the powerful poison 1080 is needed to control coyotes and other predators. Different toxins, they say, are ineffective. When it was legal, 1080 was injected into horse carcasses, which cosotes would feed on. The EIA said, however, that method frequently led to the poisoning of birds, foxes and dogs.

The two sides have been talking about a possible out-of-court settlement, but Charles Graves, U.S. attorney for Wyoming, said nothing has yet been resolved. Graves and other principals in the negotiations have refused to reveal details of the talks.

In motions filed Tuesday, the government asked Kerr to dismiss the request for a lifting of the ban. The government argued that the other side was asking the trial court to rule on the merits of the EPA directive. An earlier 10th Circuit Court of Appeals decision in the case established itself as the only body legally entitled to rule on the merits of the EPA ban, the government contended.

On the other side, the state of Wyoming will file motions asking for a decision from Kerr on whether the ban should apply to the state, Wyoming Attorney General John J. Rooney said.

The Thursday hearing should cover motions made by both sides, Rooney said. In the event Kerr denies the federal contentions, lawyers for the government asked the judge to send to the 10th Circuit Court the question of whether the district court can rule on the merits of the ban - a move that could at least delay a trial. In 1971 — after the deaths of 20 eagles in Wyoming were attributed to the predator control drug thallium sulfate - the federal government initiated a study of predator poisons. The subsequent report criticized the use of such chemicals, and in 1972 President Nixon banned the use of three poisons, including 1080, on feder-

The EPA followed that up the same year with a complete ban on sodium monofluoroace (1080). The state of Wvoming then brought suit and Judge Kerr enjoined the EPA from implementing the ban because no environmental statement was ever issued. The 10th Circuit Court in denver overruled Kerr, and after an unsuccessful appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, the case returned to Kerr's

The parties bringing the suit include the states of Wyoming, Montana, Texas, Idaho, New Mexico, Utah, South Dakota and Texas; the National Wool Growers Association; the National Cattlemen's Association, the Wyoming Wool Growers Association; the Colorado Cattlemen's Association, the New Mexico Farm and Livestock Bureau; the Wyoming Farm Bureau Federation; and several county predator control districts in Wyoming.

JEFFERSON DAVIS Statue-Wise,

Confederacy Rises Again

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress gave Jefferson Davis back his citizenship, and it seems proper considering that statues of himself. Gen. Robert E. Lee and other Confederate leaders have adorned the Capitol for decades Signing the Davis bill into law Tuesday. President Carter noted that "our nation needs to clear away the guilts and enmities of recriminations of the past.

Statue-wise, that process has gone pretty far in the halls of Congress, which can be broadminded about art when precedent and protocol are involved.

The South has risen again, in a sense, in Statuary Hall off the rotunda near the House side. Besides Davis, president of the Confederacy, and Lee, his commanding general, are statues of Vice President Alexander Stephens, three full generals and one brigadier general.

Also memorialized, in the Senate wing, are three U.S. vice presidents who got into serious hot water after leaving the No. One bust is of Aaron Burr, tried for murder in the dueling death of Alexander Hamilton and treason in an alleged conspiracy to start a next-door republic in the early 1800s?

Tech Professor Tells Benefits Of Lovegrass

best supplemental grasses for ranchers with sand shinnery oak land, but only if intensive management methods are practiced

By seeding only one-tenth of available pasture land to lovegrass, with the remainder left in native grasses, a rancher can even double the number of livestock on the range, according to Dr. Billie E. Dahl, professor of range and wildlife management at Texas Tech University.

Dahl and his associates have been studying lovegrass and its ability to survive in sand shinnery oak country and have developed several management practices for optimum growth and palatability of the grass.

"Some ranchers have tried lovegrass as a supplemental range grass in the past, but did not use correct management practices and had bad results," Dahl said. "With porper management, lovegrass aan be more economical and productive on the loose soil of sand shinnery oak country than almost any other grass.

Good management practices for lovegrass include short rotation cycles with the native grasses, fertilizing with nitrogen and feeding supplemental phosphorus and crude protein.

The main concern, Dahl said, is to keep the lovegrass either grazed or mowed down.

"Lovegrass grows extremely fast, especially with good moisture," Dahl said. If is it not kept grazed off to keep new leaves coming in, it becomes like broomstraw in as short a time as six weeks. Though the animals may still eat the grass, if nothing else is available, they won't gain weight

Dahl has found the best rotation time for lovegrass, in combination with native grasses, to be 35 days. If the grass cannot be kept grazed down, Dahl said the rancher can mow it and bale it for hay.

"Lovegrass makes a very good hay when baled before it is more than 40 good horse hay."

days old," Dahl said. "It is particularly To prevent excessive haying, Dahl said, the lovegrass should be kept in good balance with the native grass. Usually no more than one-tenth of the available pasture land should be seeded to lovegrass, Dahl said. Lovegrass is a quick grass to establish, taking only one year after seeding, compared to three years for bluestem grass, another popular seeded grass.

Dahl recommended seeding lovegrass one year and fertilizing the next, just before grazing. He suggested at least 30 pounds of nitrogen per acre, applied in March and again in June of the second year. The nitrogen supplements the low nitrogen present in the grass. Livestock would also need to be fed supplemental feed containing phosphorus year-round and crude protein in the winter. Dahl said.

Seeding rates for the lovegrass are one to two pounds per acre, at approximately $1.65 per pound. Most other grasses required at least five to six pounds of seed per acre, Dahl said. Bluestern grass costs about $4.85 per pound, and Indiangrass about $2.70 per pound or more. Seed prices often fluctuate tremendously in a short period of time.

Dahl said that even with the extra management, fertilizing and supplemental feeding required with lovegrass, it is still a more economical and productive grass on loose, sandy soil than most other grasses.

Dahl will discuss weeping lovegrass management practices at the 16th annual Ranch Management Conference. Oct. 13. at Abilene Christian University.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) - Soybean and grain prices were mostly lower Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade as clear harvesting weather indicated there will be increased supplies.

Soybean prices were mostly lower, with nearby November and January contracts taking the steepest price cuts Forecasts of good harvesting weather led to local and commission house selling Additional selling came on the inability of November contracts to move above the psychologically important $7-a-bushel

NEW YORK (AP) - Cotton futures No. 2 closed $1.75 to $5.35 a bale higher

Some speculators at trade demand help prices rise to new life of contract highs, brokers said.

The average price for strict low middling 11-16 inch spot cotton declined 18 points to 63.73 cents a pound Monday for the ten leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.

The dance floor may be crowded with wheelchairs.

Mary Sadler, 94, who grew up waltzing to "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," now puts on her boogie shoes and her prettiest dress and moves to the beat of the "Saturday Night Fever" disco platter.

Jenkins said the company is calling the protest an illegal work stoppage since it has a new contract with the American Federation of Grain Millers. Crowds of up to 500 persons gathered outside the plant Tuesday, trying to persuade workers not to enter. A few did. No violence was reported.

The union's new master contract remains unsigned until 51 percent of the participants in the profit-sharing plan agree to dissolve it. Salaried workers are included in the plan.

The profit sharing system provides for distribution of 10 percent of Kellogg's profits before federal taxes. The company estimated this year's profit sharing would total about $18 million.

Kellogg also has plants in Memphis, Tenn.: Omaha, Neb.; Lancaster, Pa., and San Leandro, Calif., but there was no indication from Battle Creek headquarters if they were hit by similar protests.

them," she said. "They were bored and we were bored with it."

"It's new to me," said Ulli Hardman, whose family came west in a wagon train when she was eight. "When I was a girl, there were all kinds of dances — waltzes and two-steps and square dances. Papa hated dancing, but he used to take mama and me and just watch. I like disco, but I hope I got through without doing it wrong today.

Most of the nursing home residents dance in their wheelchairs, putting the parts of their bodies that work through the disco motions.

At the first disco get-together, "the few who could walk were hesitant to get up and dance. They didn't want to be on display in front of all their friends," Miss Darigol said.

Administrator John Fontana came up with the idea. He suggested something besides the waltzes and polkas and big band music the residents grew up with.

About 20 residents take part in the three 30-minute disco sessions each week. Miss Darigol, her assistant Barbara Orr, and therapy aide Randy Martin lead the dances.

The patients are delighted with the new therapy, even though few have seen a real disco dance.

There have been a few complaints from nurses who think the music is too loud.

'The whole idea is to play the music loud," Miss Darigol said. "Some of the patients are deaf, or nearly deaf, but they can still pick up on the vibrations

Texas Cities May Get Conventions In '80

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Houston and Detroit are the early favorites as the site of the 1980 Democratic National Convention, while Dallas, Los Angeles and Minneapolis lead the GOP list of nine possi-

Officials of both parties stress that no decisions have been made on any city. But political and logistical factors rule out certain cities even before party committees begin looking over sites.

Probably the biggest factor is the Equal Rights Amendment, which may not be ratified by the time of the 1980

Democrats have voted to support the National Organization for Women's boycott of states that have not ratified the amendment. Republicans backed ERA in their 1976 platform, and while they have not taken a stand on the boycott, it is unlikely they would take the political risk of going to an unratified state.

The Republicans' site selection committee will hold hearings in Washington next week on a convention site.

The boycott rules out traditional convention cities such as Miami Beach, Chicago, New Orleans, Kansas City and Las Vegas, since their states have not ratified

Because Georgia is unlikely ever to ratify it, President Carter will not be able to fulfill his wish to have the convention in

There is a good chance Florida may ratify ERA in time for the convention to be held in Miami Beach, and an outside chance Illinois will - bringing Chicago strongly into the convention picture.

"If we had to decide now, it would probably be between Houston and Detroit," said Susan Morrison of the Democratic committee staff, Miami, New Orleans and Los Angeles have also expressed interest in the Democrats.

When asked about Los Angeles, Ms. Morrison said "we'd like something a little more centralized" - a polite way of saying they don't want to go to California where Gov. Edmund G. Brown is a

Detroit is also high on the Democrats' list because it is the home of Mayor Cole-

Four of the nine have ERA problems, and Cleveland and Detroit are short on hotel rooms, leaving Dallas, Los Angeles and Minneapolis as the early leaders.

Tax Bill Aids Sale Of Home

NEW YORK (AP) — The tax bill passed by Congress appears to have in it a gift for homeowners, especially those over age 55, who would be able to avoid capital gains taxes on profits from the sale of their homes.

Under the bill, homeowners of at least that age, would be able to sell their home and avoid taxes on "profits" from the sale. While the exemption would apply only once, it could involve sizable dollars.

But a gift? Some will view it instead as the correction of an old abuse. They feel they've been sending gifts to Uncle Sam for years, and that ungrateful Sam has only asked for more.

They are inclined to give illustrations such as this:

The home was bought in 1950 for $11,-500. Now, 30 years later, it is sold for $48,000, or $36,500 more. Improvements worth $10,000 were made, however, so they are deducted from the effective purchase price.

That still leaves a $26,500 gain. Even after subtracting the broker's $2,880 commission from the selling price, the homeowner appears to have a profit of $23,620.

Not bad, he says.

For many years Uncle Sam said the same thing, and applied to that "profit," a capital gains tax. It meant that one-half the $23,620, or $11,810, was assessed at the collects ordinary income tax rate.

the seller's ordinary income tax rate.

Assuming a 25 percent tax bracket, the seller therefore owed Uncle Sam $2,952.50. But by more rational standards, the seller really owed Uncle Sam nothing. Not a dollar. Not a penny.

In those 28 years, the purchasing power of the dollar declined almost steadily, and in recent years, rapidly, so that today's dollar is really worth something like 35 percent of the 1950 dollar.

Relatively speaking, therefore, the seller didn't obtain $48,000 for his house but probably $17,500 in real — that is, comparable — dollars. Deduct $1,000 for the real estate commission, and we have $16,500.

Steady improvements over the years cost perhaps $5,000 in terms of the 1950 dollar, rather than the $10,000 worth of receipts the seller accumulated. Those improvements, remember, were in current dollars.

Still, deducting $5,000 brings the real price down to $11,500, the same as in 1950. It means no real profit for the seller. And if the new legislation is signed, it will mean no tax payment to Uncle Sam.

For years, however, capital gains have been taxed as real rather than imaginary. Sellers of homes who did not reinvest in another home of at least the same price within 18 months, paid taxes on "profits."

Assuming President Carter signs the legislation, it would seem these homeowners will be receiving what they should have received a long time ago: simple justice.

But, while the problem is perhaps the most serious for homeowners, the same illogic exists throughout the capital gains area. The value of various investments seem to have soared when they've moved very little.

It accounts in part for what is regarded as a fact by some stock brokers — that many people don't want to invest because, after paying commissions and taxes, they find "profits" wiped out.

They and homeowners pleaded the same case to Congress, but only the homeowners won, and then only partially. For the rest, inflation will continue to be taxed as if it were real, honest-to-goodness profit.

Frustrated investors say it is this confusion of myth and reality that explains the continued popularity of inflation in Washington.

Chrysler Corp. To Purchase Foreign Engine

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. said Tuesday it will buy about one million engines from its Japanese affiliate, Mitsubishi Motors Corp. in what one analyst called "a hell of a big deal."

The engines will be built in Japan, with some components supplied by Chrysler, said Chrysler spokesman Tom Houston. He said Chrysler would buy about 200,000 a year for five years starting with the 1981 model year.

Houston refused to say how much the engines would cost.

An analyst at the trade publication Automotive News, who asked not to be named, said, "This is a hell of a big deal. Even at $100 an engine, which is probably on the low side, that's $200 million a year."

The analyst cautioned that many unknowns, such as the value of Japanese currency in the future and the amount of components to be supplied by Chrysler, made his estimate "very rough."

Chrysler already, buys 300,000 engine

Chrysler already buys 300,000 engine blocks a year from Volkswagen to use in the Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon subcompacts. The deal with Mitsubishi "right now, is in addition" to the deal with Volkswagen, Houston said.

The Volkswagen agreement runs through the 1981 model year.

Houston would not say in what cars the Mitsubishi engines would be used. "That's new product information," he said.

But he did say they would be four-cylinder engines of "about the same size" as the VW engine, which has a displacement of 105 cubic inches (1.7 liters).

Purchase from Mitsubishi does not reduce any of Chrysler's own investment plans, Houston said. Chrysler has said it must spend $7.5 billion in coming years retooling its plants to make cars and trucks that meet new federal standards.

TIA Battles For Control Of National

MIAMI (AP) — Texas International Airlines, a small but aggressive Southwest regional carrier that is trying to outmaneuver Pan American World Airways and gain control of National Airlines, has made clear its intention to keep battling the two giant firms.

"This is a hostile acquisition and TIA (Texas International) does not have the cooperation of National's management," Frank Lorenzo, president of TIA, said Monday. It was something of an understatement

National has been fighting feverishly since July to avoid being controlled by TIA, a Houston-based firm one-fifth National's size.

Toward that end, National's board of directors voted to accept a merger offer subsequently made by Pan Am — an offer that would mean cash payments of $41 per share for National's outstanding

Pan Am, which wants domestic routes to augment its international system, has promised to allow National to maintain a large degree of autonomy.

Although TIA has yet to announce its specific takeover plans, Lorenzo's statement Monday offered a few hints. Unlike Pan Am's offer to buy all outstanding stock, TIA apparently plans to buy 51 percent — just enough to gain voting con-

Lorenzo estimated that cost at $156 million, $32 million less than the cost of the large jetliners he would need to service the longer routes he apparently is determined to win.

"The acquisition of National represents an excellent, low-cost opportunity for Texas International to accomplish its objective," he said.

Pan Arn and TIA each own between 20 and 25 percent of National's stock.

The Civil Aeronautics Board still must rule on the competing attempts to win National Airlines, and some analysts believe that — to maintain a competitive market — the CAB will not approve any merger.

National, meanwhile, released a financial analysis Monday which asserted that TXI appears "to reflect a policy of highrisk financial management" and appears financially unable to match the Pan Am counteroffer to buy all of National's outstanding stock.

And the report, conducted for National by Morgan Stanley Co. and submitted to the CAB, said TIA may not even be able to pay for new jetliners it already has ordered.

Charles O. Sethness, managing director of Morgan Stanley, also said there was some question whether TIA could "withstand unfavorable cyclical economic circumstances..."

The report said it was "extremely unlikely" that TIA could raise the $282 million needed to match Pan Am's $41-per-share offer for all outstanding shares.

In addition, the Morgan Stanley report said, "a serious question arises as to TIA's ability to finance" its purchase of eight DC-9 jetliners from McDonnell Douglas Corp. for delivery in 1979.

The analysis said that even if TIA raises the $65.4 million needed to pay the balance of a $77.8 million bill, the action will add still further to its already high debt burden and overall financial risk."

A TIA spokesman said in Houston that the firm was forbidden to discuss any financial matters involving the National merger attempt because of the pending case before the CAB.

Poor Education Of Recruits Causes Problems

FORT HOOD (UPI) - Some of the men who would have to lead American oldiers into combat in another war say the inability of many recruits to read and write adequately is reducing the sophistication of the modern army and tying up skilled manpower during training.

And these men, combat arms officers and sergeants interviewed at the Army's largest post, place the blame on the public school system, pointing to reports in recent years which have accused the system of failing to teach these basics plus basic mathematics properly.

In the increasingly technical military profession this means, they say, that the armed services must spend time and resources bringing many recruits up to trainable standards before they can impart combat skills.

"Recruits are products of society," said 1st Sgt. Franklin Lee, the senior sergeant n a company of riflemen, "and many high schools are not adequately training graduates for high-order thinking.

'Put yourself in the place of a mid-level NCO or junior NCO. Imagine teaching the trooper who recognizes the word in the manual but who may not know what it means. You can go really low on the verbal scale to get across to him, but meanwhile the brighter troop is going to go to sleep on you.'

The consensus among more than a dozen officers and NCOs interviewed is that military operations require more complicated equipment than ever before. Even the infantryman - who traditionally fought only with small arms - now must cope with a variety of complex and delieate missiles, radios and chemical weap-

In the armor, with its laser range finders, and the artillery, with computerized fire direction, the problem has become even more acute.

You can teach one of these people to put stage one here, and stage two on top of that, and so on," Lee explained. "But you can't teach him what the component

Since the draft was abolished, the Army has encouraged recruiters to draw manpower from among the highest scorers on the Army qualifying examinations, according to a study by Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., a member of the House Armed Services Committee.

The Aspin study suggests that the Army is taking fewer men from the lowest intellectual category than it could, and that with a preoccupation with high school diplomas, the Army is passing over many otentially valuable recruits.

"High school dropouts are more difficult to deal with," said Warren Nelson, the Aspin aide who compiled the study. "Of high school dropouts, about 40 percent don't work out. That means that if you (refuse to accept) 100 dropouts you're losing 60 good soldiers." The combat leaders at Fort Hood agreed that graduation from high school does not guarantee the recruit has the intellectual equipment to deal with military demands "The (1st Cavalry Division) has been testing all new people," said Capt. Ri-chard Ringler, commander of an artillery

AKRON, Ohio (AP) - Fred Schutte advertises himself as a dog trainer and a psychologist for "problem dogs."

But the 77-year-old Schutte says it's people who have problems, not their

"People try talking to a dog," Schutte said in a recent interview. "The dog doesn't understand. They beat him, and then when he is fully grown he'll turn and attack them. Then they think the dog is a problem.

Schutte, who is training dogs for the Summit County sheriff's bomb squad, doesn't have a degree in psychology or anything else - in fact, he says he doesn't have a high school diploma. But he says extensive reading has helped him understand something about what makes dogs tick.

For instance, when he gets a complaint concerning a dog who "does his business in the corner every night while the family is sleeping," he finds that the problem can probably be traced to feeding habits.

"I ask the people, 'What time do you feed the dog?' They reply they feed him about 6 p.m. Well, it takes about eight hours for his food to move through his system, so he has got to go at 2 a.m. But they don't get up until 7 a.m. So that's the problem.

Schutte recommends delaying feeding until shortly before bedtime. He advises taking a dog for a short morning walk before the morning feeding and then letting the pet outside again about 15 minutes later.

Schutte said he became interested in dog training about 40 years ago when he began having problems with a Boston terrier named Buggs.

"I tried to find the answers from the so-called experts, but nobody knew anything," he recalled.

So he started reading texts and wound up running a training school.

Schutte still reads every night before going to bed. He says his studies have nelped him to "tolerate both people and dogs better."

PRISON FIRE

McMINNVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A fire believed to have been started by prisoners spread smoke through the one-story Warren County Jail early Monday, but no one was injured and the prisoners were returned to their cells. Sheriff Tom Garmon said the fire started around 1:30 a.m. CDT in the jail's bullpen area and spread thick white smoke through the concrete block building.

found reading levels of between 9th and 10th grade. All those tested were high school graduates."

The need to upgrade education to a minimum acceptable level for some troops also means less resources are available for advancing the education of better qualified soldiers, Ringler said.

"If a man wants to go to school, chances are he's the one you need most with the unit," Ringler said. "You can't send him off to school because you'd be cutting your own throat when you go to the field."

Educational deficiencies involve more than training problems. In some cases, failures in training give rise to difficulties in discipline. Contrary to the commonly held belief that the less intelligent soldier responds more readily to orders, the combat leaders stressed that better educated soldiers make leadership easier.

"The more education the individual has, the easier he is to lead," said Chief Warrant Officer Jerry Higgins, a helicopter pilot in an air cavalry regiment. "As the soldier goes up in education, he asks fewer questions because he knows the reason for the order. He can figure it out for himself

Sgt. 1st Class Ralph Ludwig, a platoon sergeant in a tank company, said discip-line problems have eased somewhat the advent of the all-volunteer since

"1971-72 is when we bottomed out," he said. "Now we've tightened up. Now you have better control of your folks. There seems to be a better type of trooper.

Lee suggested the problem could be solved through broader based education both in the military and in civilian schools.

"If you can get an individual interested in things like liberal arts, history, psychology, he finds other outlets," Lee said. "You reduce your discipline and drug problems. If you keep upgrading both the civilian and military side, you get a better soldier-citizen."

Sen. Bartlett Praised By Numerous Friends

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — U.S. Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., drew comments of praise, admiration and respect from five U.S. senators and others as about 800 friends gathered for a testimonial dinner.

The Tulsa lawmaker is retiring at the end of this year to continue a a two-year

Master of ceremonies Edward L. Gaylord, president of the Oklahoma Publishing Company, traded barbs with Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., at one point in the Monday night program.

The Daily Oklahoman and Oklahoma City Times strongly criticized Bellmon after his vote in favor of the Panama Canal treaties. Editorials suggested he shouldn't seek re-election.

During his remarks about Bartlett, Bellmon said it was also worthwile coming to the event, "to see if Edward could say a few kind words about me."

After Bellmon's comments, Gaylord said, "Henry, that was a real good speech — for a senator from Panama."

Gaylord also advised Bellmon to "pick up your medals" on a forthcoming trip

"Dewey Bartlett hasn't done anything wrong in the U.S. Senate since he has been there," Gaylord said. The publisher said during a 1974 visit by former President Gerald R. Ford, he

'I apologize," Gaylord said Monday night. "Senator Bartlett is the first, an always has been."

At a reception preceeding the $125-dollar-a-plate event, Laxalt said he and Bartlett, who is a former Okiahoma governor, started together in 1966 as governors along with Ronald Reagan of California.

He characterized Bartlett's principle trait as genuineness.

Hansen, who is also retiring at the end of his current term, said, "Dewey has earned a special place in the heart of every American. I wish they knew one-half of what he has done."

Despite his illness, Hansen said Bartlett attended to his Senate duties throughout a marathon session that ended Sunday night.

Several speakers made oblique references to Bartlett's physical condition and assured him he would win his fight.

Local Man Charged With Rape

A second charge has been filed against a Lubbock man arrested Monday as a result of a reported early morning attack on two women in their apartment near the Texas Tech University campus.

A charge of aggravated rape was filed Tuesday against Larry Donell Perryman, 19. of 1812 E. 2nd St., in an unrelated Tuesday's charge accuses Perryman of the Sept. 7 rape of a 21-year-old Tech student at her apartment.

The victim of the reported Sept. 7 attack said she was awakened about 1 a.m. by the sound of someone tapping on her She said she opened the door and was confronted by a man who put a knife to her throat and threatened to cut her if she screamed. The woman said the rape occurred after the man asked for $400 and was told the woman had no money. Another man, Robert Louis Lowery.

17, of 509 Ave. S, Apt. 16, was subsequently charged in that case. First Asst. Dist. Atty. Tom Cannon said the charge against Lowery will be dismissed. The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $25,000 bond on the aggravated rape charge. Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy had earlier set a $25,000 bond on a burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape charge filed against Perryman as a result of the Monday incident. During that incident, an 18-year-old woman - one of two sisters living in the apartment - sustained stab wounds. She was listed in satisfactory condition today at West Texas Hospital.

That woman's older sister, 22, told officers a man entered the apartment at approximately 3:30 a.m. and held a knife to the younger woman's throat.

According to police reports, the older sister said the man demanded money. then approached her with the knife and attempted to rape her. A struggle then ensued, the woman said. The man fled after the 18-year-old fell back, the older sister said. The suspect was arrested a short time later near an apartment complex at Sixth Street and Avenue S.

Increase Noted In Incomes Of Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans' personal income rose $8.3 billion or 0.5 percent in September, with more than half the increase in wages and salaries, the Commerce Department said today.

In a good sign for the economy, the department reported that total manufacturing payrolls rose by $2 billion last month to a total of $303 billion, compared with a decline of $600 million in August. The gains in manufacturing are important because they show employment and production are strong in the backbone industrial sector of the economy. The September gains were strongest in transportation equipment, non-electrical machinery and fabricated metals indus-

The department said higher average hourly earnings accounted for most of the paryoll increases. When income is increasing, it means Americans have more money to spend. However, the over-all gains in income this year appear to be lagging behind the rate of inflation in most months, so that the buying power of many Americans is shrinking, even though dollar income is

The increase in personal income for September was only slightly less than the August gain of $8.5 billion, but was below the more substantial monthly increases in income earlier in the summer. The department said total personal income stood at an annual rate of $1,735.6 billion in September. Personal income is income from all sources, including wages, dividends, rents, farm income and goverment transfer payments. The department said wages and salaries gained $4.3 billion in September, more than double the August gain of $1.9 Farm income was unchanged in September, following a decline of $700 million in August.

Two Crash Victims Still Hospitalized

Two of three persons injured Tuesday afternoon in a head-on collision three miles west of Lubbock remained in Methodist Hospital today for treatment. Clifton Roden, 22, of Levelland was treated and released Tuesday for minor injuries. Elizabeth Moore, 22, of 5423 44th St. is in satisfactory condition undergoing treatment for fractures. Lester Fetters, 27, also of Levelland is in satisfactory condition receiving treatment for a broken leg. Both cars involved in the 4:47 p.m. accident, a 1972 Pontiac and a 1965 Chevrolet, were heavily damaged. Roden was driving the Chevrolet and Mrs. Moore was driving the Pontiac. Fetters was a passenger in the Chevrolet.

Computer Graphics Avert Costly Errors

NEW YORK (UPI) — If one of an architect's drawings of a valuable building shrinks a quarter of an inch or stretches that much, there could be a $480,000 error in a 20-year lease.

That could mean lost rent in the case of shrinkage or a big overcharge — and perhaps an expensive lawsuit — in the case of stretch.

Computer graphics can do much to eliminate the hazard and also save a lot of money and time in measuring expense over the years in the management of valuable properties, says Lawrence Lerner, president of SLS Environetics, Inc., of New York, an architectural firm that specializes in interior planning and design by means of computer graphics.

The quarter-inch shrinkage or stretch of the paper on which plans are drawn can produce an error of two feet in each 100 feet in each direction if the drawing's actual dimensions are taken as a basis for space planning and fixing the rent and costs, Lerner said. The possible $480,000 error in charges either way caused by the drawing distortion is based on a yearly rental cost of $15 a square foot.

But dimensions stored in a computer memory, once entered accurately, don't shrink or stretch. They can be retrieved at will and used to plot new drawings and new plans on the cathode screen that can be printed out automatically.

Lerner said one of the big problems in real estate management is that so often the original architectural drawings of big buildings get lost, and either costly new physical measurements must be made every time a long-term lease of substantial space or a sale of the building is negotiated or undependable piece-meal drawings and calculations must be relied on.

"It is amazing to discover to what a great degree even the more sophisticated real estate operators and companies renting space or buying buildings fail to employ foolproof methods of measurement and calculation," Lerner said. "Often the deal actually is based on an inexact compromise between two sets of measurements provided by buyer and seller or landlord and prospective tenant."

ror was impressed on Lerner when his company recently obtained a contract to prepare a prototype of a foolproof set of rental plans for a huge building at 2 Broadway in Manhattan for Olympia & York, the Toronto firm that bought the $100 million holdings of the Uris real estate empire.

"The structure is about as complicated as old fashioned fancy German wedding cake and was built under the pre-1960 Manhattan zoning code," Lerner said.

SLS Environetics first task is to use computer graphics and some physical measurements to get an absolutely exact computation of the total space, the rentable space and the space devoted to elevator shafts, stairways and other facilities which must be prorated to the tenants. A basic master plan for each floor must be plotted on the screen and stored in the computer.

SLS Environetics has developed software that will enable a draftsman using the cathode screen and these new basic drawings, made automatically, to pinpoint any spot on the floor to the thousandth of a foot. This means computer graphics can be used to plan re-assignments of space and remodeling of floors when new tenants come in at great savings compared with conventional methods, Lerner said.

'Kind-Hearted Soul' Donates Drew Books

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — Amateur sleuth Nancy Drew has finally made it into the Newton public library, thanks to "a kind-hearted soul" who donated 12 copies of the mystery series, librarian Virginia Tashjian says.

Miss Tashjian aroused a controversy in September, when she called the books "soap opera narratives" not worth the expenditure of town funds and said she wouldn't stock them in the library. Nancy Drew's fictional pals, the Hardy Boys, also criticized by the librarian, are still shut out since no one has donated any books from that series.

Alaska Supreme Court To Decide Procedures

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Primary election procedures in the nation's largest and wildest state, "where a citizen's vote must be transported by seal-skin boat," must go before the Alaska Supreme Court today.

The court was to hear oral arguments in the state's effort to block a lower court decision overturning Alaska's photo-finish August gubernatorial primary.

Republican Gov. Jay Hammond and Democratic state Sen. Chancy Croft won narrow primary victories, defeating former GOP governor and onetime U.S. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel and former Democratic state Sen. Ed Merdes, respectively. Hammond won by 98 votes, Croft by 250, according to a recount of ballots.

But Superior Court Judge Ralph Moody ordered a rerun election, saying unintentional malconduct by elections officials cast doubt on the primary outcome. He cited a batch of more than 200 ballots that were misplaced for about a month. They ballots were never tabulat-

In a brief filed with the high court, Attorney General Avrum Gross said the court must not allow simple mistakes to overturn an election in the far-flung "What has been put before this court is evidence of an election procedure carried out in the nation's largest state," Gross said. "A state which contains within its borders the northernmost, easternmost and westernmost points of the entire 50 states and which spans four time zones. A state where a citizen's vote must be transported by sealskin boat in order to be included in the final canvass."

But Hickel attorney Edgar Paul Boyko argued in his brief that violence could erupt if the Supreme Court reverses Moody's ruling. He said the high court stands in the "eye of the storm" between the public's confidence in the electoral process and anarchy.

The court is considering both the state's appeal of Moody's ruling and appeals by Hickel and Merdes seeking to overturn the recount of ballots.

Battle Lines Forming On SALT

By NICHOLAS DANILOF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As Secretary of State Cyrus Vance flies to Moscow, battle lines are forming in the Senate in anticipation of a bitter debate early next year over the projected treaty to limit U.S. and Soviet strategic arms.

Vance is expected to make the final breakthrough in Moscow Oct. 22-23 for a longterm treaty to codify "strategic parity" between the two superpowers — and limit them to an equal mix of 2,250 strategic bombers and missiles.

While not all details of the pact have become public, conservatives in both Senate and House have served notice

The treaty's main negotiator, Paul Warnke, chief of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, announced his resignation shortly before Vance embarked for Moscow.

That development spurred Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, to say. "The treaty is his baby, and we are going to want to know what he thinks about it. Warnke must be held personably accountable for SALT II, as bad as it probably will be, and he owes the Senate and the American people an explanation."

On the other side, Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., is urging the Senate to approve SALT and go on to further U.S. Soviet arms control negotiations.

"If the United States and Soviet Union can keep their relationship on an even keel for another decade while we learn more about each other, it is just barely possible that we will be on the path of survival, not of suicide, and that our children and theirs will live out their natural lives."

Behind these two pointmen, two serious, opposing blocs are forming.

The critics and opponents of SALT are expected to be led by Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who brought withering criticisms to the first strategic arms pact limiting U.S. and Soviet land-based and sea-based missiles.

The supporters of SALT are expected to be led by assistant democratic leader Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., with energetic support from Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.; Dick Clark, D-Iowa; Gary Hart, D-Colo.; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and McGovern.

The critics are expected to argue the treaty is defective because:

-It will allow the Soviet Union a free hand in producing swing-wing Backfire bombers capable of hitting the United States with nuclear bombs if they refuel in flight and recover in Mexico or Cuba.

-U.S. intelligence is incapable of checking up on all aspects of Soviet compliance with the accord's complicated provisions.

— SALT II will not limit all aspects of technological improvement, and both sides will continue a qualitative arms race.

Supporters will counter:

—For the first time in history, the two superpowers have agreed to a nuclear parity. This symbolism of equality is important to the Kremlin and will help stabilize the often unsteady U.S. Soviet relationship.

SALT will restrain the numerical arms race. Without it, the Soviet Union could have as many as 4.372 strategic bombers and missiles by 1985, while the United States would have only 2,000.

—If SALT is rejected, the United States would have to spend up to $20 billion to stay even with the Russians in 1985.

The SALT debate will be something of a replay of the Panama Canal treaties of

The administration was willing to negotiate with key senators some compromise amendments to make Senate ratification more palatable.
