Unemployment dips second time in year

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment declined to 5.9 percent in August, the second time it has dipped below 6 percent this year, as more women and teen-agers found jobs, the Labor Department reported today.

The drop from the July unemployment level of 6.2 percent gave the Carter administration and the public their first favorable economic news of the week following several days of generally dismal developments. These included a report pointing to a possible slowdown in economic growth.

The Labor Department said total employment increased in August by 160,000 jobs to a total of 94.6 million, while unemployment dropped by 225,000 to just under 6 million.

The August unemployment rate was the second lowest of the year, bettered only by June's 5.7 percent, a figure that was said to be artificially low because of statistical problems.

Except for the two drops below 6 percent, the unemployment rate has fluctuated between 6 percent and 6.2 percent this year.

The August report was sure to cheer administration economists, who have been trying to slow the economy to dampen inflation, but without significantly increasing unemployment.

The Labor Department said most of the employment gains in August occurred among adult women and teen-agers, with some gains for black workers as well.

It gave the following breakdown on unemployment in August for various population groups, compared with the July level.

— Adult men 4.1 percent, unchanged

— Adult women 6.1 percent, down from 6.5 percent

— Teen-agers 15.6 percent, down from 16.3.

— Whites 5.2 percent, down from 5.3.

— Blacks and other minorities 11.7 percent, down from 12.5.

— Full-time workers 5.5 percent, down from 5.7.

— White-collar workers 3.5 percent, down from 3.8.

— Blue-collar workers 7 percent, up from 6.9.

Most of the new jobs were in service industries, especially wholesale and retail trade, where employment increased by 80,000.

The department said employment in manufacturing declined by 50,000, with job losses in the food processing, paper products and rubber and plastics industries.

"Following relatively large gains in the first three months of the year, overall employment growth in manu-

Cullen Davis denied bond; awaits murder trial in jail

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — For the second time in two years, millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis has been told he must stay in jail without bond while awaiting a felony trial — this time because prosecutors allege he solicited the assassination of the judge hearing his divorce case.

State District Judge Arthur Tipps denied bond today immediately after both sides in the case presented final arguments.

The defense rested its case late Thursday after seven days of sensational testimony.

It was two years ago this week — Aug. 27, 1976 — that Davis, facing two charges of capital murder and two more for attempted murder, found himself in a courtroom not 50 feet away from where Tipps is presiding, listening to another judge order him held without bond.

That ruling began a 15-month-long bid for freedom that ended less than 10 months ago with an acquittal on a charge of capital murder in the shooting death of his 12-year-old stepdaughter.

Then and now, a cool mask of inscrutability hides the tempest some witnesses have said simmers inside the unassuming industrialist.

Davis, 44, was arrested again Aug. 20 by state and federal authorities. This time the charges are solicitation of capital murder and carrying an illegal weapon — a .22-caliber pistol with a silencer.

Prosecutors claim he hired a "hit man" to kill District Judge Joe Eldson, who has presided over the bitter, 4-year-old divorce suit filed by Davis' estranged wife, Priscilla. Eldson announced Tuesday he had withdrawn from the case, scheduled for trial Sept. 18.

Taped conversations, allegedly between Davis and police informant David McCrory, photos, a brief videotape, the pistol and silencer, and $25,000 in $100 bills are part of the evidence the state offered during the hearing in an attempt to keep Davis in jail.

FBI agent Ron Jannings said it was McCrory, a self-professed friend and employee of Davis, who was wired for sound during two meetings with the oilman at a restaurant parking lot last month.

Texas Marine training exercises show real fireball enthusiasm

During peacetime one of the Marine Corps' most formidable problems is find some place to play war and to fire off some rounds.

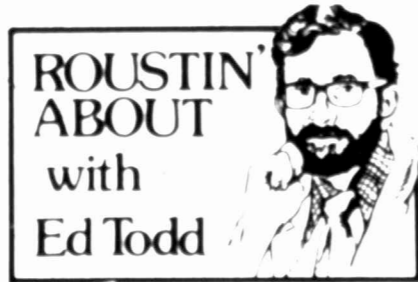

Of course, it's no problem if the Marines are on regular military camp grounds set aside for shooting off and blasting.

But in civilian territory, the Marine reservists in particular have to scrounge around for a fairly isolated land to turn into a firing range and into a peacetime battlefield where the enemy doesn't fire back. Hostile force are imaginary.

Earlier this year, Marine regular Capt. Bill Woodard did some scouting and came up with a nearly ideal firing range on the John Stradley ranch south of Alpine.

So, it was about six months ago when the Marine reservists out of Midland trucked on down to the Big Bend country and set up a firing position for their 50-caliber machine gun. It's tantamount to a small cannon.

The grass land was dry, dry, dry. The country down there was in the middle of what seemed to be a drought. So, Woodard, realizing any clump of dry grass or bush was potential kindling material for a range fire.

Suspect held in shooting

A Midland man was in custody in City Jail today in connection with the shooting death of Ronald Keith Lentner of 3502 Seaboard Ave. earlier today, said a spokesman for the Midland Police Department.

Officers said Lentner died about 3:07 a.m. as a result of a chest wound from a 12-gauge shotgun blast. The shooting took place at a residence in the 4600 block of Cherokee Drive.

Authorities were told Lentner was involved in an argument with a Girl dies from crash

A 7-year-old Midland girl died at 4:30 a.m. today as a result of injuries she received Thursday afternoon in a two-vehicle accident on Texas 349 south of the city, according to a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety's offices in Midland.

Fatally injured was T-Nee Allen, daughter of Sam Allen of Route 4. Officers said three other Midland girls were injured in the accident.

Carla Nicholson, 8, of Route 1 was listed in critical condition today at was careful to set up a line of fire that would avoid the dry grass. The Marines even removed tracers from the ammunition bands. A stray tracer round could really set off a fire.

The Marines fired off about three test rounds into a rock bank. But one of the fiery-hot rounds ricocheted and spun out into the dry field.

It started a range fire that burned off 50,000 acres. Fire-fighters from Alpine and students-turned-fire-fighters from Sul Ross State University there joined the Marines in the futile fight against the fire.

The fire made that widely publicized spring fire in the Fort Davis mountains look like a camp fire.

Though Woodard may have been embarrassed, Stradley wasn't. Nor was he "put out" or miffed by the

Scott enters guilty plea

A gag order on one of Midland's most sensational murder cases ended Thursday when Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin disclosed that Anthony Dewayne Scott had pleaded guilty to the knife slaying of a woman liquor store clerk in return for life imprisonment.

The trial of the 19-year-old man was scheduled to be heard later this month. But Scott decided to plead guilty Wednesday to the capital murder charge during a one-hour private session with Martin and District Judge Van Culp.

Jackie Goodrum Burleigh, 45, of 500 North Colorado St. died of stab wounds she received Aug. 4 while working at the B & B Liquor Store at 612 N. Big Spring. She was stabbed several times in the chest and once on the chin.

Basically, the candidates for the state attorney general's office agree on major issues, but they just can't come to terms on who should be in that post.

Democrat Mark White Jr. of Austin and Republican James A. Baker III of Houston discussed the major issues of their campaign, including their qualifications and disagreed on some points during a forum Thursday evening. Held at a local restaurant, the event was sponsored by the Midland League of Women Voters.

Both candidates are into the final stretch of a long campaign which will end with the November general election. White had to battle Price Daniel Jr. for the Democratic nomination. While Baker had no opponent in the May primary, he began campaigning last February, he said.

As a result, the attorney general's race appears to be turning into one of the more notable statewide races with a Republican candidate finally giving the Democrat a good chase.

Both men stressed their legal background as basic qualifications for the post. But, Baker added that he has been a lawyer for 18 years with "one of the major law firms in the state—Andrews, Kurth, Campbell and Jones—a firm with more than 100 attorneys."

The Houstonian also has been Undersecretary of Commerce, "this being the No. 2 job in that department," and ran former President Gerald Ford's national campaign for re-election. "I have the legal and administrative experience to be a

Midland On The Move

Midland's booming economy is changing the face of the city so rapidly many Midlanders, especially newcomers, may not be aware of exactly what is happening.

What is happening, of course, is that Midland is on the grow once again, this time in a BIG, BIG way.

In this Sunday's Reporter-Telegram, staff writer Linda Hill and photographer Bruce Partain will take a look at what is happening in the way of economic development in Midland and some of the reasons for it.

The "Midland Story" is a comprehensive one and should provide insight to not only what is happening but to what Midlanders can expect.

Be watching for these special stories and pictures that tell something about Midland's latest success story coming this Sunday in

More showers 'dubious'

Light showers fell over the Permian Basin Thursday night and early today, and the weatherman said it's an indication of what to expect through the Labor Day weekend.

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy weather through Saturday with continued warm afternoons. There is a slight chance of thunderstorms today and tonight, said the weatherman.

The extended forecast lists partly cloudy skies with a chance of thunderstorms through early next week.

Most of the cities in the area reported scattered showers and sprinkling Thursday night and early today.

Today's high should be in the low 80s with a low somewhere in the middle 60s tonight.

Thursday was another cool day, following this week's trend. The National Weather Service recorded a high of 83 degrees.

The overnight low was 66 degrees. The record low for today is 56 degrees set in 1955.

Airlines plan merger move

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two West Coast airlines — ranked ninth and tenth in air carrier service — have agreed to merge in a move aimed at taking on "the giants of the industry."

The as-yet unnamed airline formed by the merger of Western Airlines and Continental Airlines would become the nation's seventh largest. The merger must be approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board and stockholders of each airline.

Gilford R. Marrow of Midland also was driving a pickup south on the highway when the two vehicles collided, according to authorities.

DEATHS

Ann Corrigan

Services for Mrs. Hugh (Ann) Corrigan III, 50, formerly of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home with the Rev. Howard Hollowell of Abilene officiating.

She died Tuesday in a Denver, Colo. hospital following a heart attack Monday.

She had been vacationing in Tin Cup, Colo.

Mrs. Corrigan was born June 1, 1928, in Midland and grew up here.

She was an honors graduate of Hockaday Junior College in Dallas and attended The University of Texas. She married Hugh Corrigan III on March 27, 1948, in Midland.

Survivors include her husband of Vero Beach, two sons, Hugh Corrigan IV of Dallas and Edward Corrigan of Midland; her mother, Mrs. M.C. (Helen) Ulmer of Midland; a sister, Mrs. Ulmer Van Atta of Dallas; and two grandchildren.

Pallbearers include W.B. Preston, Joe Midkiff and James G. Harper, all of Midland, Emory T. Corbett of Dallas, David Ommanney of Nairobi, Kenya, H. Clay Hamilton of Dalton, Ga., and Arthur McKeeseemon and William K. McDaniel, both of Vero Beach, Fla.

The man may make difference

White took Baker's federal experience and turned it into a negative point for Baker by saying, "I got all my experience in Austin. We need less Washington-style government in Texas and more Texas-style government in Washington."

To explain his statement, White said the Texas Aeronautics Commission has promoted intrastate reduced fares for the airlines. The federal approach had been more subsidizing of the airlines. After adopting the reduced fare approach "everyone is using the airlines," White said.

Both men are in favor of reforming the criminal justice system, but each has a different approach. Baker proposes fixed-length sentencing for criminals while White prefers a crime prevention plan.

Baker explained that he feels the current system of sentencing in Texas "is too lax. There is no certainty of punishment in Texas and no uniformity of punishment. Plea bargaining, to some extent, and the whims of the judges keep it that way."

White said he sees the need to "stop the revolving door of prosecution where the criminal is out of jail. We must realize we can't merely look at punishment to stop the crimes."

A crime prevention program he proposes would start with the elementary students and would show them both ways of life—that of the lawful and the criminal.

That program also would include taking the students to the prisoners, White added.

Continuing on the criminal justice thought, White added that school violence is a problem and more discipline is needed in the schools. He proposed a discipline program be established with input from administrators, teachers, parents and students.

White has taken as a major issue the 30 percent tax on coal levied by the state of Montana, and said he will sue the state the first day he is in office. The city of Austin and the Lower Colorado River Authority already have filed suits, he said.

"We don't tax our gas at that rate and they (Montana) shouldn't tax us. They get our clean gas and we get their dirty coal."

Both men said they favor enforcing the consumer protection law and will fight Environmental Protection Agency rulings against Texas.

White said he could understand making the electric plants switch to lignite coal to conserve the natural gas, but he will fight the EPA to make sure their rules are fair to Texas.

Baker added that the EPA levels were set when Texas was using "clean" natural gas. "We're mandated by law now to use coal. Those EPA levels were set back when Texas was burning natural gas and there is no way we can get new industries to come in," he said.

The proposed energy bill in Congress does not appeal to either lawyer. White said the bill "is so complicated and impossible for any investor to know what price he'll get for discovery of oil. That uncertainty will diminish capital dollars for development of revenues. More government regulation is not what we need. The sooner we get deregulation, the sooner we'll solve the problem."

Baker said that while the bill is complicated, he has found one area for which the federal government can be sued, and that is the part "providing allocation of natural gas in cases of national emergency," he said.

The Larry Lozano case in Ector County in which the Mexican-American's death in the Ector County jail was ruled to be "accidental" was the basis for several questions from the audience dealing with civil rights of Texas residents. Both candidates said they prefer leaving prosecution of local cases on the local level but the men disagreed on points of sentencing and prosecution.

"On the Lozano case, I do not favor bringing prosecution to the state level, except in a few instances. The cases should remain on the local level," Baker said. "However, in instances where there are allegations of denial of equal justice, it's my view that we (the AG's office) should investigate the matter. If there has been a denial of equal justice, the matter can be referred to federal authorities for a followup. But, statewide grand juries and prosecution can offer a chance for political misuse."

But, White said he felt the state of Texas should take care of the matter and not send it to the federal government and "be held up to ridicule by our sister states." The former Secretary of State agreed with a proposal by Baker to change the charge for physical abuse to prisoners from a misdemeanor to a felony. But, he added he would like a system "to make sure the officer is not psychologically disposed toward abusing prisoners."

A nuclear waste disposal site proposed near Carlsbad, N.M., was opposed by both men. White said he thought it was time the northeastern states kept their nuclear wastes and let them "be concerned about it."

The long boundary with Mexico is giving Texas two problems, both men said, and that is the increasing number of illegal aliens and organized crime. The only solution they can see to the alien problem is for Mexico to provide better economic opportunities for their residents and "that is a long time coming," White said.

The large amount of drugs flowing across the Mexican border into Texas is giving growth to organized crime in the state, they said.

The state attorney general's office has a division working on organized crime. Both men said closer cooperation with the division and the local, state and federal agencies is needed to help curb some of the activities.

White and Baker also listed their reasons for wanting the post of attorney general. White said he is proud of his record as Secretary of State and thinks the voters will feel he "shows responsibility for the government. I will be a working attorney general. These are issues I can do something about. I'm fighting for the people of Texas."

Baker lists three reasons for his campaign. His family has a long record of legal service to Texas, "beginning with my great-grandfather who was a district judge in Grimes County in the 1850s. I want to continue this."

A Republican in the office would give state government a checks and balances system. Because the system of government has been good to him, Baker said he wanted to run. "This is another hill to climb, another challenge for me," he added.

Unemployment dips second time in year

(Continued from Page 1A) facturing has been rather sluggish," it said. The industrial employment report is tabulated from different statistics than the survey on overall employment in the economy. The Labor Department said the nation's labor force totaled 100.5 million in August, virtually unchanged from the levels of the previous two months but up 2.7 million from August 1977. Most other economic developments this week have pointed to a weakening of the economy across the board.

including —A drop of 0.7 percent in the government's index of leading economic indicators, designed to foreshadow economic trends. The July decline was the first since January. —A 3.8 percent drop in new orders for factory goods in July, the second straight decline and the largest in this key indicator of future economic performance in nearly four years. —A trade deficit of nearly $3 billion in July, the fourth largest on record, which sent the dollar into a new tailspin on world money markets.

Marines show fireball spirit

They say a good fire every now and then is good for making grass land more fertile and productive. And maybe Stradley just accepted that which he couldn't change or alter. As you might surmise, the Marines didn't get their practice firing in back then. But, finally they did get some battlefield practice in over on Buster Cole's 100-section ranch around Nottrees in Ector County. This time, the tracers stayed, and there was no fire. Like Stradley, Cole is a friend of the Marines. Woodard said. "He's a fine gentleman, too, allowing us to go out there and use his property," the captain said. It rained the day they fired at Nottrees.

THE LINE FORMS to the rear, but that didn't seem to bother the 250-plus persons attending a dinner Thursday night at Midland College. The occasion was to honor newly-arriving area educators from Midland College, The University of Texas of the Permian Basin, the Midland Independent School District and private schools. (Staff Photo)

James N. Allison

Services for James N. Allison Jr., 46, president and publisher of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, will be at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity. Officiating will be the Rev. Sam B. Husley, rector of the church.

Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

The Reporter-Telegram will be closed from 8 a.m. to 12 noon Saturday.

Allison died early Thursday in a Houston hospital. He had been hospitalized there for the last month.

In addition to the Midland newspaper, Allison was publisher of the Plainview Daily Herald and the Alpine Avalanche.

Allison, a fourth generation newspaperman, owned the Borger Herald for a brief period and at one time was president of the Stanton Reporter.

He was president-elect of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association, a past president of the West Texas Press Association, and a former director of the Texas Press Association.

Allison, who was recognized as one of the community's leading civic leaders, had other business interests in Midland.

He was born Dec. 4, 1931, in Lincoln, Neb., and moved to Midland with his parents in 1940, when his father purchased The Reporter-Telegram.

He was graduated in 1953 from Southern Methodist University, where he was a member of the Blue Key honor society and was in the Air Force ROTC.

He served two years overseas as a commissioned officer in the Air Force.

Afterward, he returned to Midland to join The Reporter-Telegram as vice president.

He resigned his position with the paper in February 1964, worked for The Associated Press in Dallas for a brief period and then moved to Houston to become a business consultant.

Allison directed George H. W. Bush's successful campaign for the U.S. Congress and later joined Bush's staff in Washington, D.C.

Allison was deputy chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1969 and 1970.

He resigned that post to organize a political consulting firm in the nation's capital.

After dissolving the firm, Allison returned to Midland in the summer of 1974 to rejoin The Reporter-Telegram as executive vice president.

He became president of the newspaper in January 1975 following the death of his father, James N. Allison Sr.

Survivors include his widow, Linda; his mother, Mrs. Helon Y. Allison of Midland; a daughter, Alyson Ann Allison of Midland; a son, James N. "Jay" Allison III of Midland; two stepdaughters, Catherine Holloway and Marcia Holloway, both of Dallas; and a stepson, Patrick Holloway of Midland.

Pallbearers will be Spencer Blocker, C.H. Brockett, Bob Dean, Wilbur Yeager Jr., Martin Allday, Charles Priddy and George W. Bush, all of Midland, and George H. W. Bush of Houston.

The family has requested that memorials be directed to the Midland Community Theatre, Inc., at 2000 W. Wadley Avenue, Midland, 79701, to the Midland Memorial Hospital at 2200 W. Illinois Ave., Midland, 79701, or to a favorite charity.

James N. Allison Jr.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has lost another great and esteemed publisher, and Midland has lost one of its most dedicated civic leaders.

Yes, James N. "Jim" Allison Jr. has gone on to his eternal reward, cut down at age 46 with a brilliant future ahead of him, but with a bright, well-merited star in his crown for his past spirit of brotherly love and his concern for his fellowman, particularly in making things better and more enjoyable for one and all.

Young Jim died Thursday in a Houston hospital after having fought valiantly against a dread disease. The Reporter-Telegram never again will be quite the same without his guiding hand, his friendly spirit and his progressive attitude. He loved The Reporter-Telegram and was interested always in the personal welfare of its personnel, at all levels. And the employees of the newspaper, realizing this, had a deep-seated feeling of respect and admiration for their publisher.

It was just about three and a half years ago that Jimmy had assumed the role of publisher, succeeding his father, the late James N. Allison Sr., who had purchased the newspaper in 1940.

The senior Allison, through the years, had done a great job in developing, expanding and improving the then much smaller newspaper, and his son, a fourth generation newspaperman, continued in his father's footsteps, going beyond even in improving and expanding the newspaper plant and in installing the latest composition and printing equipment. Nothing was too good for his beloved Tall City of Midland. But he went yet further in instituting new employee programs and in expanding existing benefits.

This was the kind of person he was and it is not difficult to see why he was held in such high esteem by his associates.

Jim Allison Jr. was one of the kindest, friendliest, most sincere, most cooperative and most thoughtful persons that one could imagine. And his friendly smile, his words of encouragement and his always cordial greeting stood out in a crowd.

He loved people and he loved being around them, serving them in one way or another.

This led to his unwavering devotion and dedication to Midland and West Texas — and their residents. Jimmy Allison grew up in Midland, with Midland, and he had had a hand in much of its fantastic growth, development and betterment.

He was a real community leader and worker, untiring in his civic work and unsurpassed in his interest and efforts for a better Midland. Starting in his Jaycee days and continuing right on through the rest of his life, young Jim never looked back when it came to progressive moves and projects for Midland and Midlanders. It is doubtful if he ever said no when asked to accept an assignment or perform a civic task. A review of the civic activities in which he had been engaged and the organizations with which he had been associated actively will confirm the above statement. And the good part about it was that he always performed his civic duties willingly and generously — with a smile on his face.

He also had performed just as graciously and as magnificently in affairs of his chosen profession and in political circles, regional state and national.

As Paul Miller of Rochester N.Y., chairman of Gannett Newspapers and former chairman of The Associated Press, said in a telegram of sympathy to The Reporter-Telegram: "Jimmy Allison was looked upon far beyond his home city and state as one of America's most admired and respected publishers. He was more; he was a public figure, having had wide experience in Washington and across the land. He is mourned by all who knew him and will be missed far more widely than modest Jimmy would have imagined."

There may never be another Jim Allison Jr., which is not a pleasant possibility to ponder, but the memory of his many good deeds and achievements in multiple fields will endure for a long, long time to come.

"DON'T WORRY - I'M RIGHT BEHIND YOU"

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rep. Cunningham vs. Redskins

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — An unlikely Indian fighter has been rallying the bay-window brigade on Capitol Hill to defend the inalienable right of white exploiters to swindle the Indians with impunity.

Like the ghost of Gen. George Armstrong Custer, Rep. Jack Cunningham, R-Wash., has been blasting away at the Indians with his legislative six-guns. Through all the gunsmoke, however, he has neglected to mention that he's defending his own spread in Arizona.

Cunningham arrived on Capitol Hill 15 months ago after spending over $400,000 to win the House seat that Transportation Secretary Brock Adams gave up. The newcomer is a stolid, if crusty, conservative who looks like the successful businessman he is and the father of nine children he is.

Yet he immediately opened fire, Wild-West style, on bills that would redress some of the ancient treaty wrongs committed by the U.S. government against Indians. His obsession with Indian affairs puzzles many of his colleagues, since he represents a suburban Seattle constituency where tom-toms are never heard.

The land records in Arizona, however, may explain why he's still out there winning the West. It turns out that his family owns more than 1,000 acres in Yuma County, Ariz., where the Indians are seeking a share of water now irrigating Cunningham's farm parcels.

The Cunningham crop land, leased out to farming companies, would be nearly worthless if benefit of water. The records in the county assessor's office show that, as of last January, the Cunninghams owned 984.5 acres valued at $215,138, plus half of an 80-acre farm worth $27,669.

The land is listed mainly in the names of his wife, Margaret, and their children. But the congressman has a stake in the property under three different entries: J. E. Cunningham, John E. Cunningham III and John Cunningham III.

At immediate issue is a claim by the Ak-Chin Indian tribe to water rights, probably to be drawn from the Colorado River, which supplies Cunningham's land.

Legislation was sponsored in Congress to settle the Ak-Chin water fight. The settlement also would have opened the way to ending disputes with five other tribes in Arizona. But Cunningham did his best to tomahawk the measure on the House floor.

William Strickland, attorney for the Ak-Chin band, told us Cunningham had devised a series of bizarre amendments to kill the bill. He told us he met with the congressman in an effort to convince him that his amendments "were not even logical."

Nonetheless, the absentee landlord persisted in pressing for two of his amendments. One of minor import was adopted but another was rejected by voice vote. This would have

Vietnamese Communists are up to old tricks

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla.—The communists government in Vietnam is lading out a few bodies of "Missing in Action" servicemen as a come-on to dupe us into bailing out their incompetent government.

They know and we know that they can put their hands on several hundred, but we continue this charade of pretending that they are dealing honestly with this MIA issue.

As some of the MIA families learned when they forced the information out of the Defense Department, our government knows that in several hundred cases, MIA's were with certainty in the custody of the communists.

Yet, the Vietnamese claim they don't know anything about them. At first, of course, they were trying to hold us up for war reparations. Now that they are in a war with Cambodia, have had a falling out with Red China, lost two rice crops, and have shown, as communists always do, that they can't run a country, they are changing their song.

Now they aren't asking for war reparations—just aid and trade. You can bet there are plenty of greedy American businessmen and bankers who are itching to give them both.

The World Bank, to which we contribute 25 percent of the capital, has already given them development loans. Now that's the limit.

Just think—widows and parents of 50,000 dead American boys are now contributing a portion of their federal tax dollars to help out the gangsters who killed their husbands and sons.

And guess who's head of the World Bank: Robert Strange McNamara, the secretary of Defense for Kennedy and Johnson, who sent the boys over their in search of light at the end of tunnels.

McNamara is lucky he was born when he was. A hundred years ago, he would have been wearing tar and feathers instead of $500 suits.

Personally, I hope all their rice crops fail and that the Red Chinese invade them. I'd love to see those suckers fight for another three decades. The Vietnamese communists are rotten to the core.

If the Red Chinese do jump them, perhaps we can form a volunteer brigade of their American buddies to go fight the Chinese. They were willing enough to "fight" their fellow Americans. We could call it the Sam Brown-Jane Fonda Volunteers or, perhaps, the Flying Rats.

I would be willing even to lend them Sen. George McGovern and President Carter to act as negotiators with the Red Chinese. With those two turkeys talking for them, the Vietnamese Reds would be down the tube in a whisk.

You see, there is no point at all in pretending that you can deal with a communist government. Communists are by their own definition liars and killers.

Just once, I would like to see our government act in a moral manner and tell the North Vietnamese that we don't like you, aren't going to do business with you, and wouldn't give you the effluent from a defective sewer plant if you begged for it.

We used to have statesmen capable of making such judgments but they have gone the way of the passenger pigeon. I predict with disgust that the Carter Administration will lift the trade ban, grant them diplomatic recognition, and press Congress to include them in the foreign aid grab bag.

Figure that out as you mourn your dead, look at the cripples, struggle with inflation, and pay your high taxes. Figure out what 50,000 dead Americans accomplished. Figure out just what your government is up to.

And then tell me, because I sure as heck don't know.

Mark Russell says

Here's what the cut in funds for the third Senate office building in Washington will mean: No jai alai.

Also, the senators will be cramped under 15-foot-high ceilings instead of the originally planned 16 feet.

In the Royal Gymnasium the sweatsuits will not have the senators' names, states and parties embroidered on the back.

The rooftop restaurant will have paper napkins, no finger bowls and only three violins.

Cost of living getting you down? Weary of inflation and high prices? Make your senator take you to dinner. But bring your own finger bowls.

INSIDE REPORT:

Zbigniew Brzezinski's new, expanded role is noted

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The new get-tough policy in Jimmy Carter's White House surfaced in a confidential Aug. 7 memorandum to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown demanding "complete and unequivocal support" by the joint chiefs of staff for the treaty establishing a nuclear-free zone around Latin America.

The memorandum, signed by Zbigniew Brzezinski, was the first move in a clampdown on end what one Carter aide called "guerrilla warfare" against the president's foreign and military policies — particularly from the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) and the Commerce Department.

The Pentagon is not exempt. Public opinion to the Latin treaty by the chiefs would have brought a Brzezinski recommendation to the president to request their resignations. The hard line with the military is viewed within the Oval Office as essential for Mr. Carter to lay down the law everywhere else. As one adviser said: "To get tough with ACDA, we have to apply the same rule to the Pentagon."

The Aug. 7 memo to Brown shows how far the president means to go in exerting muscle on administration officials who sabotage his foreign-military policies.

Linking the treaty to Mr. Carter's political welfare, the president's national security adviser admonished Brown that "unless DOD (Department of Defense) and JCS (joint chiefs of staff) are aggressively supportive of ratification, the Senate may decide to put off consideration until next year ... I don't have to tell you it would be a significant accomplishment of the president's non-proliferation and Latin American policy" if the treaty is ratified this year.

In fact the JCS had privately assented to the treaty last December. Knowing this, and perhaps to avoid affronting them with a bare-knuckle political document, Brown did not show them the memorandum. But the directive remains on Brown's desk for possible use in the upcoming battle over a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT).

The memo to Brown was followed by a second Brzezinski directive — ordered by Mr. Carter — to all cabinet members and their top officials. Its warning: there will be complete compliance with the president's foreign policy in all public speeches, statements and testimony to Congress.

The clear implication: shape up or ship out. "When Carter decides and someone can't go along," one presidential aide told us, "he expects that individual to change his mind or resign. He can take his views to the country as a private citizen."

The attempt to impose iron-fisted conformity is a natural culmination of Mr. Carter's steady retreat from an "open administration." Although it smacks of Richard Nixon's effort after his 1972 reelection to centralize control of the bureaucracy in his own office, the voluminous record of anti-Carter guerrilla war waged within the administration makes it inevitable.

The most recent presidential ire was aroused by the way final approval — now security rescinded — was given by the Commerce Department to the sale of a drill-bit factory to the Soviet Union. This included an export license for the electronic beam welder.

When word was leaked by Commerce that the deal had its final approval, Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger complained that his department was still studying strategic implications of the sale.

Without public announcement, Mr. Carter intervened and submitted strategic questions about the electronic beam welder to the Defense Department's science advisory board for more study. White House anger was intense. "If Commerce tries to force this thing again or any other export of strategic material before we're ready, somebody is going to be fired," one Carter aide said privately.

Criticism of Paul Warnke's ACDA has been smoldering for months. It started in January when Warnke wrote a confidential letter — soon leaked — to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance opposing advanced fighter planes for Saudi Arabia and Israel. Although Warnke's letter said he could support the sale for "political" reasons, White House aides smelled sabotage of Mr. Carter's most important Mideast initiative at the time.

Today ACDA is losing one of the hottest battles in Washington: the comprehensive test ban treaty. Mr. Carter is switching from early support of Warnke's proposed five-year, zero-yield test ban to a treaty giving the U.S. protection against Soviet cheating.

In the old days, before the new era of conformity, Warnke's ACDA would be plotting a battle of political subversion with speeches, leaks and Capitol Hill plants to soften up the president. It was easy then. Today it might be suicidal.

Nicaraguans blame U.S. for Somoza dictatorship

EDITOR'S NOTE — Associated Press writer Tom Fenton was in Matagalpa Thursday when the Nicaraguan national guard moved in to try to dislodge young rebels holding much of the city. Here is his eyewitness report.

By TOM FENTON

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — "Where is President Carter and his human rights policy now?" asked the young Nicaraguan fighting President Anastasio Somoza's army in Matagalpa. "Americans are to blame for all this."

He and the young men fighting alongside him asked if foreign troops or diplomatic negotiators were on the way to help the street fighters in Matagalpa, battling to bring down the Somoza family dictatorship that the U.S. Marines installed in 1977.

I talked to the rebels outside a hospital after entering Nicaragua's third largest city in a makeshift ambulance, accompanied by other foreign journalists and Sister Martha French, a petite, 34-year-old nun in a long white habit.

"We're going into town to pick up wounded and deliver medicine. Come if you want," said Sister Martha.

I crouched down in the back of the white van. The back of the vehicle was smeared with blood, and flies buzzed angrily. The nun got in front, and with Red Cross flags held high we drove across a bridge and into town.

The buildings in the picturesque mountain community of 40,000 persons appeared mostly deserted. Some of the doors hung from one hinge, dislodged by gunfire.

The first sign of life came after three blocks, when a youth ran up and spoke rapidly in a low voice to Sister Martha.

"He says our safety cannot be guaranteed, that at 10 a.m. they are going to shoot at anything in sight," she said. "We can get out and try to go to the clinic on foot."

It was 9:50 by AP photographer Bob Hannah's watch.

We got out and started up a hilly street littered with rocks. Other streets were blocked by barricades, some formed by overturned automobiles.

A man with a rifle stepped into the street, his face covered by a bandana, and waved us off.

"We've come to pick up wounded," said Sister Martha, holding a large Red Cross flag higher and marching ahead.

The youth lowered his rifle, cautioned about sniper fire, and let us pass.

At the next intersection youths lounged on sandbags, toying with an assortment of handguns and occasionally chanting Sandinista guerrilla slogans.

"You see what we are doing here. We are trying to fight tanks with these," said a young woman, poking the barrel of a snub-nose .38 in my face.

Several young women were in the group, wearing bandanas and holsters. A youth in a red beret scanned the hillside with a detached rifle scope.

He said the national guard, Nicaragua's army, was a few hundred yards away.

There was sporadic firing, sending some of the youths diving behind sandbags. Two national guard helicopters circled the edge of the town. Two of the youths were wounded.

They remained seated with pistols in hand as Sister Martha tightened their bandages.

"Don't throw your life away in vain," she told them. "The army has brought more than 300 soldiers and eight tanks in here, and they are going to clean out the town."

I followed the nun to the Montserrat Hospital, several blocks away, receiving friendly waves from dozens of armed young people.

At the hospital a 4-year-old boy sat up in bed and began to sob, his eyes wide with fright at the visitors.

The child had been shot in the chest, and the bullet had gone out his back. Dr. Jorge Ruiz Quesada said about a dozen persons, mostly young people, were in the hospital. He said 12 persons were confirmed dead at the hospital.

Hannah was taking pictures of guerrillas in front of the hospital. "Stay here with us," said one teasingly.

Others said they were almost out of ammunition.

One youth invited us to climb a nearby hill, to get a better idea of the strength of their forces and how much of the city was under their control.

There were more barricades and more young people with guns on the hilltop. Some said they were Sandinistas.

Brazilian state elections take place today

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Elections are taking place today for Brazil's 22 state governors and one federal senator from each state, and the federal military government's official party is going to win in all the states except Rio de Janeiro.

The officials are being picked by electoral colleges controlled in all but Rio by the government party, the National Renewal Alliance, or ARENA. The only legal opposition party, the Brazilian Democratic Movement, or MDB, did not put up candidates in most states.

Direct elections by the people had been promised, but President Ernesto Geisel, a former general, changed the rules last year. Apparently military leaders believed an embarrassing number of MDB candidates would be elected.

Although the MDB will win in Rio, many members of the party consider the governor-to-be, millionaire newspaper publisher Antonio Chagas Freitas, to be more of a government man than an MDB representative. Rio's MDB senator, Ernani do Amaral Peixoto, also is noted for his lack of criticism of the regime.

The military has been in control of the federal government since 1964. Another indirect election is scheduled Oct. 15 to select a new president, who will serve from 1979 to 1985. The ARENA candidate, chosen by Geisel, is Gen. Joao Baptista Figueredo, and his election is considered certain because the government party will have 130 more members in the electoral college than the MDB.

The opposition candidate is a retired general, Euler Bentes Monteiro, who formerly headed the government development agency in northeast Brazil. Direct elections are to be held Nov. 15 for the federal House of Representatives, another senator from each state and the 22 state legislatures.

Mexican murder endangers amnesty

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Police officials can't agree on who kidnapped the son of the Mexican ambassador to the United States, and observers think his death may cancel an amnesty for political prisoners expected today.

President Jose Lopez Portillo had been expected to announce the amnesty in his annual state of the union address in hopes it would help ward off defections from the long-ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

The party faces the newly-legalized left in the 1979 elections for the first time in 30 years, and there is speculation discontent over rising inflation and unemployment will hurt it badly at the polls. But the death of 35-year-old Hugo Mar-gain Charles may have soured Lopez Portillo's thinking on the freeing of political prisoners, estimated to number 350 by their relatives.

Margain, son of Ambassador Hugo B. Margain, was kidnapped Tuesday night. His body was found the next morning, and an autopsy determined that a gunshot wound severed the major artery in one leg and he bled to death. It was believed he was shot during the kidnapping, either by his abductors or by his own bodyguards firing at the fleeing kidnappers.

The kidnappers left behind a leaflet signed by the 23rd of September Communist League, Mexico's best-known urban guerrilla organization, but three other theories were advanced: 1. Police spokesman Victor Payan said there was evidence connecting the kidnapping to drug traffickers at the National University, where Margain taught. However, a senior narcotics officer said the killing had nothing to do with drugs.

2. Mexico City Police Chief Durazo Moreno said the kidnappers were professional thugs, not guerrillas.

3. Political leftists accused right-wingers, saying they were trying to torpedo the amnesty.

'PLF' strikes Billings

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The "puppy liberation front" struck the Billings Animal Shelter and succeeded in temporarily freeing more than one-third of the inmates.

A local newspaper coined the term "PLF" in its account of the raid, which left 50 dogs running loose, 20 lounging in a carpeted office and 10 more roaming the hallways.

Police officers patrolling near the shelter about 3 a.m. Thursday saw a large number of dogs at a construction site.

A quick check of the nearby shelter revealed an open back door. A further check showed 14 of 19 kennels unlocked and the occupants gone.

Police suspect a key was used to open the cages, because none of the locks was forced.

About 20 pups were found locked in the shelter's carpeted office, which reportedly was heavily soiled, and 10 more were recovered from the halls. Most of the remainder had been returned by Thursday night.

Man claims he's a pawn

MOSCOW (AP) — American businessman Francis J. Crawford, who contends he is "a pawn in a political chess game," said today he will be going on trial next Tuesday for alleged currency-law violations.

Crawford, 38, a Moscow representative of the International Harvester Co. of Chicago, was arrested on a Moscow street in June and held for two weeks in Lefortovo Prison here. After being conditionally released, he was summoned back to the prison repeatedly for interrogation.

Speaking to reporters at International Harvester's office here today, Crawford again insisted he is completely innocent of the allegations that he engaged in illegal currency speculation.

"The charges against me are false," he said. "I have broken no law in the Soviet Union."

Many Westerners here view Crawford's arrest as Kremlin retaliation for the arrest of two alleged Soviet spies in the United States.

The two, Valdik Enger, 39, and Rudolf Chernyayev, 43, both employees of the Soviet U.N. mission in New York, are to go on trial Sept. 12 in Newark, N.J., on charges of attempting to buy U.S. anti-submarine warfare secrets.

If convicted on the charge of currency manipulation, Crawford, a native of Mobile, Ala., could be sentenced to a maximum of eight years in prison, plus five years of exile within the Soviet Union.

Texas' private wealth totals $464.4 billion

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' privately owned wealth — real estate, personal property and intangibles — totals $464.4 billion, the School Tax Assessment Practices Board reported Friday.

Its data could mean huge drops in urban school districts' state aid in 1979-80 unless the 1979 Legislature changes the law.

Current law, however, prohibits annual increases of more than 25 percent in local districts' mandatory support of the Foundation School Program.

The board's figures were double the $232 billion estimate issued two years ago by the Governor's Office of Education Resources (GOER), mainly because intangibles such as bank deposits, stocks and bonds were counted.

Intangibles totaled $154 billion. The value of real estate was pegged $78 billion — or 34 percent — higher than the GOER figures.

Walt Parker, board director, said 82.8 percent of the intangibles were in the 52 counties making up Texas' 26 Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas.

Copies of property value figures for each of the 1,080 school districts were mailed to superintendents, and the board expects about a third of the districts will appeal.

Parker used his news conference to plug for the "Tax Relief Amendment" on the Nov. 7 general election ballot. One feature of the proposal would eliminate the rarely observed requirement that intangibles be taxed.

"From a practical standpoint, school districts do not have the ability to tax these items at the present time since they cannot determine individual ownership. Passage of the proposed Tax Relief Amendment would allow the Legislature to clarify the position of local tax administrators related to the taxation of intangibles," he said.

He said he was confident the 1979 Legislature would change the school finance law to avoid adding a crushing new burden to local districts.

"I have confidence the Legislature come up with a very workable number for the rural and urban areas," Parker said.

He said there was no way to compute the impact of the new property value figures on each district's Local Fund Assignment for the foundation program.

A district's state aid is based on how its wealth relates to that of all the other districts in Texas — the more the wealth, the less the aid.

Ken Graeber, an associate director of the board, said it would be a "very shaky assumption" that the Legislature would not change the school finance formula next session.

Intangibles never have been included in the measurement of school district wealth, but the 1977 Legislature ordered the board to provide the figures for its use and for use in the state aid formula — unless the law is changed later.

Getty Museum may use endowment for expansion

By YARDENA ARAR

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Oil magnate J. Paul Getty never got around to visiting the $16-million Roman villa he built to showcase his art collection, but on his death two years ago, he left it a large token of affection — the bulk of his multi-million-dollar fortune.

The museum perched above the Pacific Ocean has 38 galleries, including an antique French furniture collection considered one of the finest in the nation.

Its inheritance from the reclusive Getty — some four million shares of Getty Oil Co. stock worth between $650 million and $700 million at current market values — will make the J. Paul Getty Museum's endowment far and away the largest of any art institution in the country, if not the world.

The inheritance will probably be tied up in probate for a couple of years. But it has already set visions of a new world art center dancing in the heads of the Los Angeles art community, which has always taken a back seat to New York and Chicago.

Expansion of the museum's three major collections — Greek and Roman antiquities, 18th-century French furniture, and paintings mainly of the Renaissance and Baroque periods — would appear a likely project for some of the windfall.

For the time being, however, the man with the greatest say over the millions, museum director Stephen Garrett, has chosen to remain closed-mouthed about his plans for the museum and its fortune.

Garrett does emphasize his interest in seeing the art community as a whole benefit from the museum's riches.

It appears unlikely, for example, that the Getty will use its financial muscle to the detriment of other local museums.

In general, explained Kenneth Donahue, director of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, museums avoid competing for works in another local museum's area of specialization.

What excites Donahue is the possibility, which he has discussed with Garrett, of using some of the money to build a major art research center.

"That's certainly a proposal that we've applauded because there's

Man out on bond

A 43-year-old Midland man was freed on $10,000 bail Thursday after being charged with involuntary manslaughter in connection with a fatal traffic accident in which a minor allegedly was driving one of the cars.

Bobby Wayne Spirling of 106 South Jefferson was indicted on the charge by a Midland County Grand Jury Wednesday.

David Enrico Lujan, 19, of 1725 S. Atlanta St. died Aug. 21 from injuries he received in an accident near the 3100 block of West Front Street after his car collided with one reportedly driven by the minor.

Spirling was not involved in the accident.

Investigators have declined to identify the minor or the owner of the car.

Football fees $80

The Midland Men's Flag Football Association met this week and set 1978-79 season team entry fees at $80 per participating group, said Em Carnette, recreation superintendent for the city of Midland.

A maximum of 20 men per team will be allowed to take part in league play, she said.

The association will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Parks and Recreation Department Center, 300 Baldwin Street.

Anyone wishing to join as a member of an entered team should attend, Ms. Carnette said.

Man killed by auto

ODESSA — An Odessa man was killed when he was struck by an auto at 9:40 p.m. Thursday at the intersection of Grandview Street and Candy Lane, said a spokesman for the Odessa Police Department.

Officers said John Casey Jones, 46, was struck in the intersection by a car traveling south on Grandview Street. There is no signal at that location, said authorities.

Peace Justice Jimmy Harris pronounced Jones dead shortly after the accident, said officers.

Footprints relate story of Indians

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
The Los Angeles Times

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — The footprints of a group of Indians who wandered along the muddy banks of the Mojave River in San Bernardino County more than 4,300 years ago have been discovered by a team of University of California Riverside anthropologists.

The Indians — a male, female and two young children, judging from the relative size of the footprints — appear to have been walking alongside the river soon after rain had soaked the ground and left it mushy in an area more than 100 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

Then, perhaps within a week or so after their passage, a grass fire seems to have swept across the same field, baking the clay and preserving the marks of the Indians' bare feet for posterity.

The dynamic forces of wind, water, geological activity and vegetation obliterate such human signs, according to Carol Rector, a UC Riverside graduate student in anthropology and the director of this particular excavation project. Discoveries like this, therefore, are quite rare.

Science has the imprints of people who inhabited caves in southern France more than 30,000 years ago and of some individuals who strolled across a still-soft volcanic mudstone in present-day Nicaragua about 6,000 years ago. And earlier this year, Dr. Mary Leakey uncovered the footprint of a hominid creature who roamed in East Africa 3½ million years ago.

These Mojave River footprints are the only ones so far found in North America, said Rector and her colleague, archeologist Jim Swenson.

The footprints came to light this summer, during a series of exploratory excavations along the river. The Mojave was an important trade route for prehistoric Indians, said Dr. Gerald A. Smith, the director of San Bernardino County Museums, connecting as it did the Colorado River Basin to the Pacific Coast region.

Both professional archeologists and pot-hunters — the scientist's less-than-affectionate term for amateur collectors of ancient objects — have combed the banks of the river for more than 40 years, Smith said, and their efforts have been frequently rewarded with arrowheads, grinding stones and the like.

Indeed, Rector and her group of UC Riverside students found a number of such artifacts when they began their digging this summer. These included projectile points made of obsidian, chalcedony and rhyolite, as well as quartz drill bits, metates (grinding slabs), and manos (grinding stones).

The students also found a number of ornamental shells, at least one type of which is found only in the Sacramento Delta, Rector said. This indicates that the geographical extent of the commerce carried on along the banks of the Mojave River was quite wide.

As they dug down through the soft, sandy soil of the riverbank, the students suddenly encountered a crusty layer of clay and silt. They carefully unearthed the 30 inches of topsoil and found not only that the baked layer extended in all directions, but also that it bore the imprints of humans and animals.

The layer had a "baked" appearance and there was abundant quantities of charcoal scattered about, the typical residue of a burned field. When this charcoal was subjected to the radioactive dating technique known as carbon-14, it yielded an age of 4,330 years — plus or minus 100 years — before the present.

The footprints are considerably older than the artifacts found on or near the surface of the excavation pits. The points and milling stones have been dated as being no more than about 1,600 years old, which would place them no further back in time than the 4th Century AD. The footprints, being between 4,200 and 4,400 years old, belong to people who lived during the 21st to 24th Centuries before Christ.

"Just speculating," said Smith, "but it's conceivable that the people who made the footprints also caused the fire that preserved the footprints. They might have caught a rabbit and cooked it and the fire may have started a grass fire."

In two rectangular pits excavated thus far, the Riverside team found 54 human footprints and eight marks that are raccoon paw-prints and the hoof indents of either deer or antelope.

"There are four size categories of human footprints," Rector said as she pointed out the imprints in one of the excavations. "One large, one medium and two small."

Rector said that the large and the medium footprints could be seen to be following a consistent southerly course, while the two small sets of imprints roamed east, west, north and also south. "It looks just like a family walking along," said Smith of the San Bernardino County Museums, "with the mother and father walking along together and the kids running back and forth."

(The pattern prompted one observer to remark that the late humorist Robert Benchley's remark — "There are two ways to travel: First-class and with children" — was as applicable to conditions 4,300 years ago as it is today).

The Riverside team has made casts, photographs, drawings and maps of the imprints and is now trying to determine if there is some way that the fragile, baked clay layer can be treated and removed permanently to a museum or institution.

Home-built plane involved work of all family members

By DAVID NICHOLSON

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — The legend on Mike Melvill's belt buckle — "Happiness is Flying Home-built" — tells the story.

And Melvill's decision to build his own airplane was just fine with his wife, Sally, who said, "I'm not one of those wives who just sits back."

"It was a family affair," she said. "We were all involved in it, and it was built in the family room."

Both Melvill sons, 16-year-old Graham and 13-year-old Keith, helped, she said, adding that Keith "was very handy because he could reach into small places for the wiring."

Once Melvill, 37, and a pilot for eight years, decided to build, he sent away to California for a set of blueprints for the small VariViggen sportsplane.

"We decided that we really wanted to build something ourselves," Mrs. Melvill, 34, said, "and we really liked the design."

The Melvills, interviewed at the Experimental Aircraft Association's annual fly-in here, joined some 8,000 Americans who have built their own planes, EAA said. The organization estimated that 15,000 others are in the process.

EAA officials said about 1,100 of the more than 8,000 planes at the annual aircraft show and convention were homebuilt — from kits or plans sold by design houses, or designed from scratch by the builders themselves.

A machinist and shop foreman at Davey Manufacturing in Anderson, Ind., Melvill already had most of the skills needed to construct the plane of aircraft-certified spruce, plywood and steel, all guaranteed flawless and able to withstand tremendous stress.

"Your life's on the line when you go up in something you built," he said. "If you buy a piece of cheap steel, you may regret it."

The plane was finished this spring, "three years, one month and 22 days" after the family started work, he said. He said it cost about $12,500 — including $4,000 in sophisticated radio and electronic equipment to allow night flying — as compared to $30,000 or $40,000 for a similar factory-built plane.

Early this summer, Melvill and his wife — who is also a pilot — took it on a 3,000-mile trip from Anderson to Portland, Ore., with stops in Phoenix, Ariz., and Laramie, Wyo.

"The aircraft performs like a dream," Melvill said, adding that "people seem to think it flies backwards," because of the unusual rear propeller, nose-mounted "forward wing" design.

"The first thing that leads you to do it is that you think it's going to be cheaper," he said, explaining why he chose to build his own aircraft. "When you finally get it there, the feeling is something you can't describe. It's the biggest ego-booster in the world."

What's next for the Melvills?

"Oh, just flying and enjoying the plane for awhile," Mrs. Melvill said. "But I don't know, I think he wants to build another one."

Diabetes association sets September talk

Dr. Gregory W. Bartha of Midland will speak before an educational meeting of the Midland Area Chapter of the American Diabetes Association at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 12 in the cafeteria of Midland Memorial Hospital.

"Dealing with the Emotional Aspects of Diabetes" will be the topic of Dr. Bartha, according to a chapter spokesman. The public is invited to attend.

Russian cultural offensive ends in disaster

By DAVID F. BELNAP
The Los Angeles Times

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The Soviet Union's latest cultural offensive in South America ended in disappointment for ballet fans and a public relations disaster for the star, as well as for a Bolshoi Theater ensemble.

Prima ballerina Maya Plisetskaya, plagued by physical pain and logistical misfortune during two months of travel in Argentina and Brazil, said on her leaving for home this week:

"It has been the most complicated, the most difficult tour of my whole life."

Trouble started the day she arrived, June 25, when she began to experience leg and hip pains. The local press said she was suffering "sciatica." A doctor later diagnosed an "inflammation of a lower spinal nerve."

For a month, Plisetskaya, 52, the top Soviet classic ballerina, was forced to cancel successively scheduled Argentine performances, including those at Buenos Aires' famed Colon Theater.

In late July she traveled to Brazil where she was joined by a supporting cast of 60 Bolshoi dancers and technicians, later described by an Argentine critic as "a second-rate company."

Plisetskaya was able to fulfill some of her Brazilian commitments, but she missed the most important one, at Sao Paulo, where she and the ensemble were booked to close the Municipal Theater's International Dance and Music Festival.

The ensemble performed without her to nearly unanimous disparagement from critics and audiences, many of whom had paid scalpers up to $150 for ordinary seats.

"Thank God for Alvin Ailey," a Sao Paulo balletomane told a visiting American at intermission. "He showed us what creativity in dance is all about."

Ailey's modern dance group from the United States had opened the festival several weeks earlier, attracting critical superlatives and audiences described by one commentator as "delirious with pleasure."

One newspaper reviewer said the Russian ensemble "leaves the impression of a Bolshoi put together exclusively for export south of the Equator where they don't think we know any better."

Among other things, the Russians attempted some modern dances that a local choreographer called "laughable."

A Latin diplomat and ballet fan said: "This (Sao Paulo) flop must be especially embarrassing to the Soviets because two years ago, when they scheduled a live Bolshoi TV transmission by satellite from Europe, Brail's (conservative) official censors banned it, presumably ideological grounds."

Plisetskaya returned to Argentina with the ensemble in mid-August.

"I come because I have a debt to the public that I want to pay," she said. But her first scheduled program, in northwestern Argentina's ancient Spanish-colonial center of Tucuman, collapsed because her costumes were left behind in Brazil by the air line.

Wearing hastily adapted borrowed attire, she danced Saint Saens' "The Swan" twice in succession for a total of seven minutes on stage.

That wasn't enough for the Tucuman fans who had paid scalpers up to $200 for choice locations and waited more than four hours in their seats for the show to begin. They shouted at her and booed when she left the theater.

Next day, Plisetskaya struck a news photographer twice in the face with her purse and canceled performances scheduled in Corrientes, another northern Argentina city dating from the colonial era.

However, she relented when her costumes arrived and the Corrientes governor sent a special plane for her, and after one of the women on her sponsoring committee suffered what newspapers called "a nervous crisis."

Her two Corrientes programs on successive days were her only Argentine successes.

Back in Buenos Aires, Plisetskaya reported that her leg pains had returned, and the rest of her schedule, including three Colon Theater performances, was canceled.

The ensemble, slated to fill in for her at the Colon, made the first date but missed the second when a truck carrying its costumes broke down on the road between here and an interior city where it had danced in the interval.

The Colon's management, once again having to refund more than 3,000 tickets, canceled the final scheduled program and announced it may sue the local sponsoring impresario for repeated breach of contract.

The day before her departure for Moscow, the prima ballerina's brother attacked a TV news reporter attempting to interview Plisetskaya outside a local doctor's office. The reporter, Nicolas Mancera, decided not to press charges nor to broadcast film showing the attack.

Spinal Central becoming popular on Atlanta CB

By JOHN D. McCLAIN
WASHINGTON (AP)

Spinal Central, one of Atlanta's newest CB stations, is becoming one of its most popular, too.

Located in the Shepherd Spinal Center at West Paces Ferry Hospital, it was set up to help paralyzed patients overcome the feeling they have lost touch with the world because of their disabilities.

And through the help of the Georgia CB Broadcasters Association, truckers and other CBers are becoming aware of the new station on Channel 4 and are ratcheting up with its operators.

"They have been calling in to talk to the patients," Leslie Hudson, the center coordinator, said in a telephone interview.

Others calling Spinal Central are former patients, Miss Hudson added, who "check in with the hospital via CB to keep their medical treatments up to date."

The center's base station and antenna were donated through the CB Broadcasters Association, whose members installed the equipment. It is being operated under a temporary call sign, KSC30327, until it receives its permanent license from the Federal Communications Commission.

Dr. David Apple, the center medical director, said the CB program is designed to provide two basic services:

"One is the utilitarian and safety uses of CB radio after the patients are released.

"If you or I get a flat tire on the highway, we stop and fix it," Apple said. "But a paraplegic has no way to do this and through use of CB we give them a way to get help."

"The other is therapeutic, to help patients to overcome the emotional trauma of limited mobility by expanding their horizons.

"Patients are in the center for two or three months, often with no contact with the outside world," Apple explained. "CB radio is a way to turn them around, so to speak, and let them see more than our four walls."

Learning to operate the equipment is therapy in itself, Apple continued, "and the communications aspect could shorten the emotional recovery period considerably."

Apple said the program could have more uses.

"We don't know what the parameters may be," he said.

Meanwhile, the CBing public in the Atlanta area continues to monitor Spinal Central, the handle the patients themselves gave their station.

Miss Hudson said the patients, some of whom were CBers before being admitted to the hospital, appear to take readily to the air.

He tries to straighten out Holland's history

By ANGELA NEUSTATTER
The Guardian

AMSTERDAM — Henk Jan Gortzak does not share Henry Ford's view that all history is bunk, but he does consider a large chunk of Holland's colonial history, as related by traditional school books, a lot of pernicious rubbish.

He says: "They describe the way Holland marched into places like Surinam, colonized them and then exploited the people and the land, in the most euphemistic and distorted way. That or they simply gloss over it."

"People may say that because it's 200 years ago it doesn't matter, but it does. In Holland today there are a lot of kids descended from the colonies even if they or their parents have not lived there. It is degrading for them to hear the history that books teach and it is important that our own children should understand that Holland has a responsibility to the Third World, that the people over there are not strange creatures who have simply arrived for no apparent reason in Holland."

To learn the "real" history, Gortzak talked with people from Third World countries, discussed events with history professors and with those who have lived in the Dutch colonies, and read as much anthropological material as he could. The picture with which he emerged is a savage contrast to the history taught in the schools, but Gortzak is not attempting a course too revolutionary or subversive. He contacts schools in and around Amsterdam and asks if they are interested in participating in his project. When they say yes, he sends a written program for the children to study before they come to spend a day with him in the museum where he conducts his program.

Children are asked to act out the new material they have learned, as they understood it in their own way. Some play local inhabitants, others imported slaves, some the family folk, others the hunters, and a few take the role of the Dutch colonists.

Walk into the basement of the museum almost any morning of the week and you find a scene something like a junior "roots." Kids stripped down to underpants and lion cloths, their bodies decorated with ethnic symbols, squat around the carefully constructed sets of lean-to huts and plantations, encampments, and slums.

The performance lasts a couple of hours and is entirely spontaneous. At the end the children gather round Mother Truth, a woman in white robes, and discuss what they have acted out, and how it compares with what they learned in school. They then talk out their feelings about the project. The children are from all social classes, and the project based on Surinam is particularly relevant. Just before the country was made independent at the end of 1976, a great many Surinamese families moved to Holland, and the flood of immigrants, predictably, has caused a good many problems.

"If our kids have no understanding of the reason those Surinamese children are here, of Holland's involvement with the country, or of our responsibility for offering them some support after exploiting their land, then racialism and non-tolerance do develop. I am not optimistic, or unrealistic, enough to think that by spending a few hours studying a new perspective on history, all racialism is going to be wiped out, but I do think it helps children to take a reasonable, human view."

The scheme started three and a half years ago, with a play base on Morocco because there are a lot of Moroccan workers in Holland. The staff discussed with the participating children how it feels to live in a hut or a tent, to hunt for food rather than for sport, to feel hungry. "This was particularly hard — there is no way you can make well fed children understand hunger," Gortzak says. "But the idea was to break away from a scientific approach and see how children responded on a basic level."

The first project was based on three units: groups of children acted out the farmers living in Morocco, others were workers going to Europe, and some went as tourists. This way they were given a view of the country's different standards.

The Surinam program is the most complex so far. Gortzak explains the period of history covered, beginning with the arrival of the Dutch in the 1700s. The children play the roles of the native Indians, imported African slaves, and the laborers imported from India after the abolition of slavery, as well as the Dutch colonists. Then the group discusses their experience and the teacher who plays the Dutch master explains his viewpoint.

'Creeping occupation could lead to missiles

The Washington Post

JERUSALEM — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan told his senior staff Thursday that "creeping occupation" by the Syrian army in Lebanon could lead to the placement of Syrian missiles and Soviet advisers along Israel's border.

Dayan said the urgency of the situation in Lebanon, where Israeli-supported Christian militias have been under attack by the Syrians, will be conveyed to the "highest levels" of the U.S. government when the Israeli delegation to the Camp David summit arrives in the United States on Sunday.

The warning by Dayan to his top advisers in a closed meeting Thursday was related to reporters by a Foreign Ministry spokesman in what appeared to be an intensification of Israel's efforts to focus attention on Lebanon without appearing to threaten military intervention. The same warning, government officials said, was given to U.S. embassy Charge D'Affairs Samuel Hart in a meeting Wednesday with Dayan, Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Defense Minister Ezer Weizman.

There was no mention of military intervention in Dayan's remarks to his staff, nor in a speech to the United Jewish Appeal here.

In his speech, Dayan said "We are trying by political means to do everything we can and everything the big powers can to achieve a cease-fire in Lebanon and the status quo. Let's hope that will work out, and let's not discuss a military move."

Warning of creeping occupation in Lebanon, Dayan said to have warned his staff that the Syrians could first be expected to seize control of Beirut by cutting the capital off from Phalangist and national Liberal Party militias in the hills to the north.

When asked whether Dayan's warning was conjectural or whether it was based on intelligence forecasts, the Foreign Ministry spokesman said, "It was pointed out we are aware of the historical aim of Syria to take over Lebanon and establish a greater Syria. We know how Syria is slicing the Salomi."

In his speech to the United Jewish Appeal, Dayan said "Of course we are concerned with Camp David, but we cannot ignore other things happening."

Don't go straight to see this movie!

Because there's going to be nothing straight about a CHEECH & CHONG film. Every generation has had their own comedy duo: the 30's had Laurel and Hardy, Abbott & Costello broke up the 40's and Martin and Lewis really fractured the 50's. CHEECH & CHONG have helped make the 70's go "UP IN SMOKE."

CHEECH & CHONG are the comedy team that gave birth to rock comedy and in the process of turning on a whole generation, sold ten million albums, picked up numerous awards, including Cash Box and Billboard's best comedy duo, and a Grammy for their album, "Los Cochinos."

Now it's time for a CHEECH & CHONG movie. C & C's "UP IN SMOKE" will make you feel very funny.

2-hour documentary on Alaska airs Sunday

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — "John Denver's Alaska: The American Child" airs Sunday on ABC, and the popular singer says he hopes it will make people think about what's needed to preserve "the magic and mystery of America's last frontier." Denver also hopes the two-hour documentary will prompt people to tell congressmen their views on pending federal legislation to set aside 1 million acres of Alaskan land sought by developers, miners and timber interests. Denver, in an interview before a show at Harrah's-Stateline, said he makes no bones about being an ardent conservationist himself, but said he's not trying to sway other people's positions. He said he hopes the documentary, which took 2½ years to produce, will inspire viewers, "and then people in their experience of the show will feel something about it themselves." "I want to open a window for them, show them something about life around them," he said.

Denver, who has done similar documentaries before and wants to do more in the future, said he encountered some criticism when he went to Anchorage earlier this year for an advance showing of the film. But he said people with sharply differing views reacted positively to the film and "the thing I found is that those people really do have a concern for protecting their way of life." The format includes Denver singing some of his hit songs and also singing new material written for the special.

FORMER NEW YORK JETS and Los Angeles Rams quarterback Joe Namath, (Coach Casey) tries to persuade Kim Lankford, (Connie Raffin) that the team does not need another player, but she has other ideas on NBC-TV's new comedy series, "The Waverly Wonders," that will premiere this fall. (AP Laserphoto)

Actor has no desire for war films

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A few Vietnam War movies are at large these days. But Larry Wilcox, the young co-star of NBC's "CHiPs," has no great desire to see them. He saw 13 months of the real thing.

He was a Marine artilleryman, did part of his Vietnam tour as a forward observer in a rifle company in the war's class of '67-68. Home was Con Thien, a much-shelled outpost near the Demilitarized Zone.

"Yeah, got to hear the noise," he said with a shrug and a grin. Unlike some vets, he doesn't like to tell war stories. He did so only because a visitor who'd been in Vietnam asked him about it.

"We were always in the bush, probably the northernmost outfit in Vietnam except for some recon outfits across the DMZ," said Larry, who never was wounded in the war. Miraculous, some would say.

"No, I'd say I got in the hole faster," he says. "A lot of my buddies got hit, killed. Maybe I just lucked out."

Wilcox, the clean-cut kid in those Union 76 gas ads and co-star of a new NBC movie, "Raid on Coffeyville," was born in San Diego, raised in Rawlins, Wyo. He became a Marine for an odd reason.

He wanted to avoid the Army. He'd studied drama at Wyoming University and Pierce College here, then, after a death in the family, was back home working in Wyoming when he got a draft notice.

It prompted Wilcox, whose brother and uncle had been Marines, to immediately sign up for three years in the Marine Reserves.

He spoke some French, he said, and hoped he'd wind up after boot camp guarding a quiet U.S. Embassy. But papers assigning him to language school went astray, as often happens to papers in the service.

Test marketing: a competitive, 'not always very nice' business

By LARRY GREEN
The Los Angeles Times

FT. WAYNE, Ind. — There is intrigue in the aisles of grocery stores here. Spies lurk near the cake mixes and the shampoo. Secret agents keep tabs on laundry detergents. Snoops try to sniff out the newest sinus pain medicine.

Depending on who is paying them, operatives may attempt to detect — or conceal — important trade secrets like the success of disposable diapers or some new quickie dinner entree. Intelligence-gathering mercenaries are for hire. They have no friends or foes, except when they are being paid. They will say little to a stranger.

Unmarked trucks with mysterious cargoes are common sights at supermarket loading docks. Invoices detailing the merchandise the trucks deliver are sometimes classified. Occasionally there are no invoices, no trails of paper for a spy to follow.

THOUGH FT. WAYNE BEARS no resemblance to Istanbul, Tangiers or Beirut, this northeastern Indiana city is a center for a little known kind of cloak and dagger work. It is a place where some of the nation's biggest food, paper, drug and bathroom supply manufacturers spy on each other, looking out for new products, new concepts.

FT. Wayne is one of a relative handful of American communities where food and sundries manufacturers test market products before investing in large scale production and national distribution.

It is in this city of 189,000 that the first shots are often fired in the battles for the shopper's drug and grocery dollar.

"If it sells in Ft. Wayne, it will probably sell on the national market," said Hilary A. Sadler, advertising director for the city's two newspapers.

TEST MARKETING IS BIG business in Ft. Wayne and has been for at least 25 years. Industry insiders estimate that between $5 million and $10 million will be spent here this year to test new products — and to gather intelligence.

It can cost up to $200,000 for a test in a single city.

Currently there are more than 50 items being tested on grocery store shelves, according to David M. Rhoads, sales manager for the Rogers supermarket chain. Some are old products with new packaging. In some instances a new advertising campaign is being tested.

BUT MANY ARE NEW products never before seen on store shelves. They include a candy bar, a "lite" cake frosting mix and a "lite" grape spread, a chewing gum, a cereal snack, a window washing spray, a tampon, a combination liquid detergent and fabric softener and a bathroom tissue containing a "cleansing lotion."

Many nationally known brands made their debut in Ft. Wayne — from popular freeze-dried coffee to almost every make of disposable diapers.

"Everybody wanted to get into diapers," said Mrs. Eunice Treese, who is involved in both testing and buying.

MARKET RESEARCH COMPANIES use Ft. Wayne and more than 20 other cities across the country for testing because the local consumers are typical in terms of income, professions, racial mix and buying habits. Test cities also tend to be relatively isolated from other big cities. They have their own television stations and newspapers and minimal contact with media from other areas.

In addition to Ft. Wayne, other test markets include Fresno and Bakersfield in California; Spokane, Wash.; Erie, Pa.; Syracuse, N.Y.; Des Moines, Iowa; Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Wichita, Kan.

BEING A TEST CITY makes Ft. Wayne, and the other communities, ideal places for espionage, for manufacturers to gather intelligence on their competitors. It is in these cities that they get their first peeks at new products, and, perhaps even more important, their first indications of how consumers are reacting to those products.

"There are no trench coats, no fezzes, no long cigarette holders," said an executive of a national test firm. "But sure, there are spies."

"If a new product is sneaked to the shelves on a Monday, a competitor probably knows about it the Friday before," Sadler, the newspaper advertising director, said.

At stake are hundreds of millions of dollars in future sales.

For example, a major breakfast food producer was testing a new morning convenience product a few years ago. A competitor "monitored the test" — the euphemism for "spying" in the food industry — and discovered the product was a hit with consumers. Before company "A" had completed its test, Company "B" had gone into national distribution with an identical product and captured the market, according to test industry sources.

"MANUFACTURERS ARE almost paranoid about new products," explained Verne B. Churchill Jr., executive vice president of Market Facts, Inc., one of the nation's biggest product test marketing concerns.

Up to five years of costly secret research and development takes place before a product reaches the test shelf and even then producers "would like to keep new products secret and as isolate as they can," he said.

On the front lines, watching for this first exposure, are salesmen representing competing companies.

They are in supermarkets weekly checking the shelves for new products. When one appears, said Richard Van Horn, manager of Maloley's market here, "a salesman will purchase a whole case and send it back to his company's headquarters."

IN ADDITION TO SALESMEN, some manufacturers, including foreign producers, have agents in town who quickly buy and ship samples of many new product on the shelves.

Sadler is one of the agents for a paper company in Sweden. "I have standing orders to send back samples of new paper product," he said.

The research companies employ, on a part-time basis, armies of housewives available to distribute samples or to interview consumers to determine how a new product is being received.

Noting that she gets her assignments and instructions from an intermediary, never knowing who is really paying her, one such employee said: "Sometimes I've often wondered exactly what I'm doing."

MRS. JEAN HUMPHRIES, president of another Ft. Wayne research firm, was hesitant to discuss her work with a reporter. "It's very, very confidential and very competitive," she said, reluctantly admitting that it might be considered, in some instances, spying.

"I think that happens fairly often," she said.

In addition to spotting new products, distributing samples and interviewing consumers, these research firms are sometimes asked to keep track of how a product sells, to monitor the movement of packages off the shelves.

Rather than stationing spies in stores for hour upon hour, they make periodic checks, counting the number of packages in a test product display once or twice a day.

A VARIETY OF TACTICS are used to thwart spies or, in some instances, to put up test results.

Market research companies "play a lot of games," said Charlie J. Rouse, executive vice president of Burgoyne, Inc., another major test market firm. "If you don't throw (a competitor's spying) off, at least you can delay the hell out of it," he said.

Techniques include sending invoices only after a test is completed, or placing items in stores without charging the grocery chains for the product so there is no paper documentation of how sales progressed.

In other instances no inventories are left in supermarket storerooms. Instead the test market companies make frequent deliveries from their own private warehouses from their own unmarked trucks.

To blunt the impact of a new product test or to sabotage the outcome, a competitor might suddenly begin a coupon campaign in a city where a test item threatens an established product. Or the competitor might offer a "cents-off" bargain or erect a big display of his product in grocery stores.

IN STILL ANOTHER INSTANCE, a manufacturer might buy large quantities of a competitor's test product in an effort to make sales appear to be brisk while keeping the item away from consumers.

"It's not always a nice business," one test marketing executive said.

Many mopeds take to roads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of mopeds are taking to the roads across America, providing inexpensive transportation but also presenting some hazards to the inexperienced.

The Moped Association of America says there are five primary factors to consider in safe operation of these motorized bicycles: the machine, the road, the operator, the other person and the weather.

Operators should understand their mopeds, learn a few simple rules for its operation and give it a check before every trip.

Tires, wheels and brakes should be checked, the throttle tested to see if it operates smoothly, the fuel level checked, the drive chain inspected for tightness and freedom from dirt and the mirror adjusted, the association says.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Female athletes don't suffer more injuries

Dear Dr. Solomon: We certainly have entered the age of the super-active female athlete. But aren't a lot of these girls who are going out for sports apt to get hurt? I mean, aren't they a little more fragile than the boys who have been doing this kind of thing for thousands of years? I'm interested because we have two very "addicted" girls in our family—and we were discussing this just the other evening.—Helia L. Della Helia.

Actually, injury rates for girls don't seem to be any higher than those for boys. That is the conclusion of the last survey I have seen on this problem. It was done by Dr. James G. Garricks and Ralph K. Requa of the division of sports medicine of the University of Washington in Seattle. They covered four athletic programs for high school girls over a two-year period. Each school had girl's teams in badminton, basketball, cross-country, gymnastics, softball, swimming, tennis, track and field, and volleyball. They found that 22 percent of the girls were injured each season—slightly less than the figure for boys in the same sports, 24 percent. Most of the injuries were minor, injury being defined as a hurt that required withdrawal from a practice session or a game or the missing of one subsequent practice or game. Nearly two-thirds of the injuries were sprains or strains. Most of the injured girls had returned to full athletic activity within a week. About one-third required a doctor's services. There were only eight broken bones. And only three girls had to go to the hospital—two gymnasts and one basketball player. Interestingly enough, softball led the injury list with more than 40 percent of the players getting hurt at some point or other. Gymnastics was second, and cross-country, track and field third. Badminton, tennis and swimming were the safest sports. There is one point of special interest because of concern expressed when women's invasion of sports began: No injuries involving breasts or other sexual areas were reported, according to Dr. Garrick. Women's involvement in sports is certainly on the rise. In 1975, more than 1.3 million girls took part in 27 interscholastic sports at the high school level, a 59 percent increase from 1973. Injuries compared to benefits are not a problem. Dr. Garrick says. They occur at the rate of 1 for every 650 hours of individual participation. And he adds this is about as safe as any other activity you can think of.

By JIM SERVATIUS
R-T Managing Editor

The death of Midland's Jim Allison Jr., regarded affectionately as "Jimmy" by a large segment of this city, is a blow to many people, not least of which are the men and women who worked for him.

That is because Jim Allison, like his father before him, was not just JNA, although memos at The Reporter-Telegram had borne those initials for decades. He was a publisher who cared for his people and they knew it. Even newcomers to the staff who had not yet been introduced to him knew something of the man who headed The Reporter-Telegram.

This was because in newspaper circles, the Allison family has long been known as publishers who cared. Jimmy Allison's attitude and philosophy of management weren't new. But he expanded on what had come before him. He wanted the best from his employees, but, in return, he was willing and even eager to provide the best he could for them and that included benefits, salaries and working conditions. In recent years he has almost constantly moving ahead in all those directions...

...WE CAN SAY these things, even though a newcomer to Midland, because we are no newcomer to the Allison family, having served as managing editor and editor of the family's Plainview Daily Herald for the past 18 years, 13 of them in association, first, with Jim Allison Sr., and later with Jimmy Allison. His visits there were by necessity brief, so involved was he with Midland and The Reporter-Telegram, although he said it was because the paper was doing so well without him that he wasn't needed.

His goals, outlined in an October 1976 memo to Reporter-Telegram executives, were broad: "To help build Midland and West Texas by furnishing leadership, to be a strong editorial voice for both the free-enterprise system and the working men and women who are the backbone of this system, to present complete news coverage of Midland and the Permian Basin as well as state, national and international news," among others.

And he added: "My general philosophy is to achieve our goals through leadership and example, rather than coercion or pressure. I think our newspaper should be a happy place in which to work, a place where employees look forward to spending one-half of their waking hours each day..."

...WHILE WE hadn't read that particular memo (it was a lengthy one and directed to personnel of the Midland newspaper), we weren't surprised to find that it contained things we had known for years. Jimmy Allison was the kind of person who didn't have to send out memos for those around him to realize how he felt, what he expected and what he was willing to give.

To know him was to also know those things.

When he asked us about four weeks ago to come to Midland, leave our associates of almost 20 years, many friends, a beautiful new newspaper plant and a lovely home of only a year, he said he wanted to make it clear that we had a choice.

"Don't feel you have to come. I know I'm being selfish," he said.

...AT THE TIME we didn't, nor neither, we believe, did he, realize how serious his physical condition really was. Both that knowledge and Jimmy's worsening condition were things that developed in the weeks after our arrival and, as a result, we never saw him again after leaving Plainview, although we talked on the phone several times.

It was a measure of the man that during those talks he was not concerned with the state of his health, only his regret that he hadn't been here.

He was the real reason for our becoming a Midlander—we don't believe we would have left Plainview for anyone else—but we realize now that even had we known the outcome, we would have come anyway. He was that kind of guy...

Costumes give her greetings

DAVIS, Calif. (AP)—When you run into Dottie Francis, the standard greeting isn't how are you but what are you.

The 22-year-old University of California at Davis design major has been cheering up people the past few months by dressing up as something different each Monday.

She has been, among other things, a cave dweller, a Blue Dot flash cube and a cream puff. It's just a practice for her; she wants to be a costume designer.

She's attuned to weather

By CRAIG MACDONALD
Copley News Service

"If there's a ring around the moon or a once-broken bone aches it will probably rain."

Is this from a senseless folk tale? A meaningless superstition? Well, don't brush it off too quickly.

Veteran weather observer Dottie Haak believes these words of advice. And, when Haak speaks on weather, people listen!

She has received calls regarding weather conditions atop Southern California Mt. Laguna from the United States Air Force, San Diego County coroner, insurance company investigators, the U.S. Forestry Service, national as well as local media and the National Weather Service for whom she has been volunteering information 13 years.

"You can tell a lot about the weather by observing nature," she said. "When a flock of birds come to feed on our chicken scratch, it's usually an indication that a storm is coming."

"Birds and animals have a real instinct about the weather. Indians know this. They appreciate nature and can tell much from it."

"Usually when a wind comes up and is followed by fog, a storm is on its way to Mt. Laguna."

The weather hobbyist has spent more than 60 years studying nature. Haak's grandfather used to take her out into wilderness areas and teach her to appreciate trees, animals and weather conditions.

She grew up on a tomato-cabbage-peach farm in Swansea, Mass., observing nature firsthand and reading all she could on the topic.

Haak especially loves violent weather — lightning, thunder and storms — because "it shows mankind just how small we really are."

Although the homemaker has her own ideas as to determining when a storm is brewing, she is reluctant to

AT WIT'S END

Most men like to share domesticity

By ERMA BOMBECK

I have a clean piece of costume jewelry I wear from time to time. It's a little button that reads, "If man's home is his castle... let him clean it."

I didn't flaunt that little message back in the days when I was a full-time serf and mother. Face it, I had whole days to devote to dust and static electricity on socks, but as time went on things in the castle began to change.

I became a three-time-a-week court jester for a newspaper syndicate, took on a few more responsible things in the community, and the appearance of three children took a bite out of my long lunch hours.

Most men recognize the need to share some of the domesticity. Others refuse to believe that housework is an equal opportunity employer.

With the opening of school at hand when everything gets crazy, I've made out a manual for husbands who might like to pitch in.

HOW TO OPERATE CHILDREN: Push alarm button on the clock the night before to manual. Set three inches from child's ear. It will activate child at 7:00 who will rush around the house like an out-of-control garden hose.

To keep child in running order, fill with food six times a day and have regular checkups. (You... not the children.)

MATHEMATICAL FORMULA FOR GETTING FIVE PEOPLE AROUND THE TABLE AT THE SAME TIME FOR DINNER: As soon as one meal is finished, start to thaw for the next one. Gauge 1/2 pound meat per person, one potato and two vegetables, subtracting one potato for dieters, adding an extra portion of meat for football hopeful, and trying to anticipate who ate soft pretzels on the way home from school or who had a birthday at the office. Use six o'clock as fail-safe time for which there is no return, being careful to calculate interstate traffic on exit 16, overtime, ride home from friend's house and late practice.

KNOW YOUR LAUNDRY: Clothes in the dirty hamper are not dirty — only discarded. Clothes on the floor have not been discarded, but are only dirty. Clothes on the bed are not dirty and not discarded — only in limbo. Clothes that are being worn are definitely dirty.

JOIN SOMETHING: It may not help you with your frustrations, your anxieties, your loneliness, your boredom, nor will it clean your oven. But they give you little buttons to wear that make you laugh once in awhile.

NOBODY READS SMALL SPACE ADS... DO THEY???

make forecasts.

"When I go to the store, people come up and ask about what kind of weather we are going to have, I tell them I don't prognosticate," she explained. "Being a weather forecaster is a tough job because there are so many variables — a wind can come up and change the entire picture."

However, Haak has taken her hobby one step beyond just visual observation.

Long ago she purchased equipment to register the weather.

"It's a fun hobby and quite inexpensive. You don't need real sophisticated equipment to make accurate readings," she said, maintaining her New England accent.

For less than $4 she purchased an anemometer, which measures the wind up to 60 mph. ("Anything higher than that and I have to take a guess at the velocity.") She placed it away from obstructions to get the best reading.

Next, she spent less than $13 to get a thermometer that registers both the warmest and coldest readings in a 24-hour period. She put it on a tree away from her log cabin so it would not be influenced by residential heat.

Haak also got a $20 rain gauge and a yardstick, the latter to determine snow depths. Once purchased, the equipment lasts for years and there are few other expenses involved in the unusual hobby.

She checks the appropriate equipment in the morning and afternoon and passes the information on to the National Weather Service.

The main requirement for seriously pursuing a weather hobby is consistency.

"I haven't missed a report to the National Weather Service unless telephone lines were down."

"Reliability is a must! You have to get out in rain and snow because people are relying on you," Haak said.

"I don't mind it because by nature I'm a statistician. I love figures and comparisons and am always curious as to what the weather will bring or has brought."

From her cabin — 5,800 feet above sea level — Haak has even spotted wind spouts and forest fires.

"Insurance companies have called me to find out just how bad a fire or windstorm was on a particular day," she said. "And, the coroner once called to find out temperatures while attempting to discover if someone had frozen to death. You never know what a phone call will bring."

And, when Haak's husband, Elmer, gets an ache in his right ankle, she tells him a storm must be near. He broke his ankle while motorcycle racing.

"It's so easy to learn about the weather — just keep your eyes open," said the unpaid official weather observer. "If you see an extra-red sunset, it will probably be pretty hot tomorrow."

It was 'nothing short of brass band'

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—It was Karen Comb's 34th birthday and as her husband, J.C. left for work, she reminded him of it. He had forgotten.

"I laughed and I said jokingly 'Nothing but a brass band will make up for this,'" Mrs. Combs said.

In the afternoon, Mrs. Combs heard the blare of trumpets and stepped out of the house. There on the front lawn was her husband, conducting a 12-piece brass band.

J.C., a music professor at Wichita State University and timpanist and principal percussionist for the Wichita Symphony, rounded up a dozen friends, colleagues and students to surprise his wife. Their oldest son, Chris, 10, was also in the band, pounding a bass drum.

Ringing complaint: Junk calls jangle the nerves

By DIANE CLARK
Copley News Service

You are waiting for that important long-distance call. You anxiously answer the phone.
"Hello. I'm from the Rainy Day Roof Savers Co., and I'd like to let you know that you're eligible for our re-roofing special bargain of..."
"No thanks," you murmur through clenched teeth.
Sound familiar?
With junk mail, at least, you can get some satisfaction tossing it unopened into the wastebasket, gloating over the postage and printing costs the company wasted.

But with junk phone calls, one is a helpless victim.
When I think of all such calls I've received, I really do get angry.
"Don't you need your house painted?" "We'll give you such a deal on cleaning your draperies."
A raspy voice advises installation of a burglar alarm.
And a benevolent association wants you to buy tickets for a children's benefit. You're so relieved that they can't want you to do something else that you do.
The most surprising call I got was from the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., asking if I wanted to renew my membership. I wondered how in the world they could afford to be calling all over the nation. And I felt so bad about wasting their money that I renewed.

Junk calls can be infuriating. I know I'm going to be asked to buy something, to donate to some unknown cause, to take a "free" gift with a hundred strings attached or to give information on my working hours to Burglars Inc.

But no matter how I respond, I end up feeling guilty. There is no "right" response.
If you hang up or yell at the unknown caller, you're in a bad mood for at least the next hour.

I tried one technique that I thought would both treat the caller civilly (after all, I do pity the poor people whose job is to make these calls) and, at the same time, get myself out of this situation.

That technique was "the big lie."
"I'd be happy to talk with you," I told one survey-taker from my chair in front of the TV, "but I'm on my way out the door to a meeting and I simply can't spare the time."
"Oh, that's OK," the caller responded politely. "Just tell me any time when you'll be home and I'll be more than happy to set up an appointment to call you back." You can't win.

The question is: What can a person do to prevent this invasion of privacy?
"Nothing," said a deputy with the attorney general's office. "It's legal."
But there is a glimmer of hope.
The Federal Communications Commission is discussing the matter at a federal level.

DEAR ABBY

She asks for chastity belt

DEAR ABBY: I'm 28 and my husband is 33. We've been married for six years, and our life would be beautiful if it weren't for his jealousy, which is so intense it borders on insanity!
He has tried everything from psychiatry to prayer meetings, but nothing has helped.
I have never given him any cause to doubt me, but for some reason he doesn't trust me out of his sight. The only thing I can think of that would give him complete peace of mind is a chastity belt!
Will you please tell me where I can get one? I know they haven't been used since the Middle Ages, but there must be one around somewhere. Or perhaps someone who works in metals could make one for me. Whatever the price, it will be worth it.
Please rush your answer to me. This is no joke.—SYLVIA IN GREENWICH
DEAR SYLVIA: The only chastity belts I have ever seen are in museums. But if there are any around for sale, or if I hear of a metalsmith who is willing to fashion one for you, I'll let you know.
DEAR ABBY: I am 17 and overweight, but everyone tells me I have a pretty face. I've had only two dates in my life, and you just can't imagine how much I'd like to have a boyfriend.
One night at a school hop one of the most popular boys in school took an interest in me. I was in heaven. He offered to take me home and we parked on the way and he kissed me. It was wonderful. We kissed a lot, and finally I got scared and made him stop.
He said he wanted to see me again, but next time he didn't intend to stop at a kiss. He told me to get wise, that any fat girl can be popular if she will go all the way. I was shocked and asked him to take me right home.

He told me to think it over and call him when I changed my mind. That was two months ago, and I have been thinking it over. I don't want to be a bad girl, but I want a boyfriend. Should I pay the price?—FAT AND LONELY
DEAR FAT: The price might be more than you're prepared to pay. That boy wants to use you. "Fat girls can be popular," he says, "if they will go all the way."
Brilliant! So can THIN girls, with the kind of boys who use girls, and then go on to fresher game.
He is not for you. And neither is any boy who feeds you that kind of line.
(P.S. Please look into Overeaters Anonymous. They're terrific for girls with your problem.)
DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend went to a bridal shower that was held in the home of another girl she barely knew.
While she was there, someone stole $50 from her coat pocket. That was all the money she had. (I've lent her some money so she can buy groceries this week.)
When my friend told her hostess that she had been ripped off, all the hostess did was say she was very sorry.
Don't you think the hostess should have offered to replace the money?—A FRIEND
DEAR FRIEND: The hostess, in giving a shower for a friend, may not have known all the girls her friend invited. Therefore, the hostess could hardly be held liable for the loss. The moral: Take no chances; always keep your cash with you.

Rumored fortune in widow's home not there

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—City inspectors searched reclusive Mabel Sheehan's two-story brick rowhouse, but did not find a rumored fortune inside.
Since last weekend, reports had circulated that thousands, maybe even millions, of dollars were stashed in the house.

sparking a rash of burglaries and around-the-clock police surveillance.
Nineteen persons were arrested on burglary charges, and the 72-year-old widow left the house and moved into a convent for her own protection.
After inspectors got inside Wednesday, moldy files, debris and dust came flying out of the windows — but no money.

Licenses and Inspections Commissioner Dominic Sabatini said his men have to clear some 3,000 abandoned homes a year, and this was one of the worst he has seen.

"There was no walking space in there at all," he said. "You had to walk through the debris. At times I could touch the ceiling, the papers and trash were so high."
Sister Dorothy, one of two nuns who went to recover whatever valuables she could for Mrs. Sheehan, found some personal papers.

"I'm really surprised I managed to find these," said the sister. "I was walking on mounds of trash when I came across some envelopes that looked important."
They contained Mrs. Sheehan's Social Security papers and some of her husband's Army veteran's papers.
Mrs. Sheehan came under the nuns' care when she walked into St. Edward's Roman Catholic Church on Tuesday.
Sister Dorothy quoted Mrs. Sheehan as saying her $247 Social Security check had been stolen.

Damaged handle on striking tool a time bomb

By AL CARRELL

A loose or damaged handle on a hammer, hatchet or any striking tool is just about as dangerous as a time bomb. You know it's going to go off sooner or later. A broken handle on a shovel isn't quite as dangerous, but it renders the tool almost useless. A bad handle doesn't necessarily mean you should junk the tool. However, it does mean you should fix it. Your hardware dealer will have a replacement handle, and it isn't all that difficult to do. The biggest problem often is removing the old handle. The first step is to saw off the old handle close to the head. Then I'd probably drill out the rest of the wood in the eye. However, if it's a hoe or shovel with a handle that is set into the socket of the tool head and held by a rivet, there's a tricky way to remove it. After you drill out the rivet head you're ready for the trick. Insert a lag screw into the center of the wooden handle stub. When it's solidly into the wood, put the head of the lag screw securely in a vise. Then start tapping the metal tool head with a mallet, and the stub will come out.

Dear Al:

I know this will sound crazy, but before I replace a wooden tool handle, I put the new handle into a warm oven and leave it in for a while so the wood dries out as completely as possible. Then when the handle is properly in place, it will get moisture from the air, which causes the wood fibers to expand and thus fit tighter. — R.S.

Dear Al:

Often a wooden tool handle will become dried out, and thus will shrink and become loose. I remember that my grandfather used to soak his hammer head in a can of glycerin every so often. The wood would absorb the glycerin and would never dry out. He'd just wipe off the excess after removing it. — P.C.J.

Some people even soak the tool in water with the same, but not as long-lasting, results.

A SUPER HINT—A new wooden handle should be given a light sanding to remove any splinters and then rubbed with a solution of half linseed oil and half turpentine. Just brush the mix on, let it set for a while, and then wipe away the excess. Then you can use this same mix to soak the head in so the end of the handle will absorb the oily mix, and thus be less likely to ever dry out and shrink. Incidentally, the mix not only preserves the wood of the handle, it also will be a little kinder to your hands when you use the tool.

screw straight into the end of the wood. This will often expand the wood enough to make it tight in the tool. — J.H.

SHOP TALK — Besides a good handle, there are some other safety rules for hammers. You can get a FREE sheet to mail to the shop wall at a reminder by including a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request to The Super Handyman here at the paper.

Most recover quickly from snake bites

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — A young man steps into some high grass and immediately feels something writhe under his foot. He looks down just as the rattlesnake strikes a stinging blow to his leg.

What does he do now? The man's plight is repeated 2,400 times throughout the United States each year. Sometimes the snakes are poisonous; sometimes they're not.

The death rate from snakebite is very low — less than 1 percent of the 2,400 bitten will die. Most will recover quickly without side effects, says Charles Ramsey, a wildlife specialist at Texas A&M University.

"Above all, the thing to do if you are bitten by any type of snake is try not to panic," Ramsey said. "Bites of harmless snakes do not produce immediate swelling, discoloration, intense burning or any of the other symptoms usually associated with a poisonous bite."

But he said fear and panic can cause emotional disturbances which can induce any of those symptoms.

"Knowing what to do for snakebite will combat the fear of the unknown," he said. Rather than searching for a weapon with which to kill the snake, he said a person should simply back away carefully.

"An average person can outrun an aggressive snake," he said. Ramsey said the best advice he has is to learn to identify poisonous snakes and then leave them alone since snakes are rarely aggressive toward humans.

Poisonous snakes to avoid in Texas are rattlesnakes, copperheads, cottonmouths and coral snakes.

If bitten by a poisonous snake, a person should remain calm and avoid unnecessary movement, Ramsey said. The person should not drink any alcoholic beverages or use any home remedies.

"It is important to seek medical aid immediately," he said. "Identify the snake if possible since treatment is determined by the species of snake."

If it will take less than 60 minutes to reach medical aid, Ramsey said a constricting band should be applied two to four inches on each side of the bite.

Ramsey said the band should be loose enough to slip a finger through without difficulty. If ice is available, Ramsey said it can be placed in a cloth and applied to the bite. The ice cools the venom and slows its spread through the body.

HONEY CUSTARDS

3 large eggs
¼ cup honey
½ teaspoon vanilla
Pinch of salt
1½ cups milk, scalded
Beat the eggs slightly. Add the honey, salt and vanilla and beat gently just until blended. Gradually stir in the milk until blended. Pour into four 6-ounce custard cups. Set cups in 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan; pour enough cold water into the pan to have it come up about as high as the custard. Bake in a 325-degree oven until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean — about 1 hour. Place cups in a pan of cold water to cool. Chill. Makes 4 servings.

She learned to be colorblind

By LEIGH FENLY
Copley News Service

It has been 15 years since Medgar Evers, field secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, was slain in the driveway of his Jackson, Miss., home, ending his 10-year struggle to right the inequities that blacks suffered in the state he loved.

His death, however, brought change. After a decade of wishing, hoping and fighting, blacks stood with whites as school crosswalk guards. Hotels, motels, libraries and restaurants in Jackson opened their doors to blacks for the first time.

A year after his death, civil rights legislation forced the South to integrate. Civil rights activists stormed the state to be met by stalwart resistance. Armed federal troops were brought out to divert what threatened to be a brutal struggle.

When the violence finally ebbed, life for blacks had changed. No longer would they step off the sidewalks for a white to pass.

Never again would black performers be censored by television stations throughout the South. No longer would black success be measured on a different scale from white.

So much has changed since Evers' death that Mississippi today is in the midst of a U.S. senatorial campaign that might put a black in Congress. If that happens, it will be the first statewide election won by a black since Reconstruction.

Medgar's older brother Charles, mayor of Fayette, is running as an independent in a Mississippi peculiarity—a campaign in which race is not an issue. Moreover, political observers predict the outcome will be determined by the state's 300,000 black voters. As a result, politicians are kissing black babies and courting black votes from the piney woods to the delta.

Medgar would have been proud.

"He always said that Mississippi would be the best place to live once some of the racism was done away with," remembers his widow, Myrtle Evers. "He never wanted to leave."

A year after his death, however, his widow left, fleeing curiosity seekers and those who jumped on the martyr bandwagon.

"I held hostile feelings for people of our own group who would not support him when he was alive because of their fear. There were people who would change sides of the street when they saw us coming, who became his friends after his death."

Looking for a new life, she headed for California. But she was saddled with guilt for deserting Medgar's battleground and with it, his civil rights causes. "It was almost like being unfaithful to him," she explains. "I told myself I wouldn't stay more than three years, just until I finished school."

Evers, however, remained in California, settling in Claremont, where she became the third black in the neighborhood. Though she exchanged her own struggles for Medgar's, she stayed active in civil rights causes.

Now director of community affairs for Atlantic Richfield Co., Evers' priorities are much the same as her late husband's. She sets up career counseling and placement programs for those most discriminated against—blacks and women.

Time has changed Myrtle Evers. The shell of shyness that made Medgar plead with her to "say something," is gone, and Evers says she has learned, by determination and grit not to see color.

"It was so difficult for me to get over seeing black and white. Sure, I look at you and see white and female. But not first. Not anymore."

Now 45, she believes the time has come when her name is not invariably followed by the explanation, "widow of." She gained some fame in 1970 as a Democratic candidate in what was then the predominantly Republican 24th Congressional District, encompassing Claremont. She amassed 38 percent of the vote in what began as a token campaign—the largest a Democrat had received in 16 years.

The political bug bit. "I felt a home during that campaign, just like I feel in Mississippi," smiles Evers. There is nothing I enjoy more than being before a hostile audience. Knowing how to get your audience's goat in the nicest way, well, I just love it."

A strong-featured woman with an elegant presence, Evers admits to once facing an identity crisis. "I certainly didn't have to. I could have been Mrs. Medgar Evers, widow, for the rest of my life. I chose not to. I said to myself, 'You have strengths. Medgar always encouraged you to develop them. Please, go out and do it.'"

She was four months short of her 19th birthday, naive and shy, when she and Medgar, who was eight years her senior, married.

When they met two years before, Myrtle had been bowled over by this young man, who even in his college days was challenging inequities. Now she is continuously sad that some young people do not know his name. So much of what happened was an outgrowth of the kind of role he played, and in a large degree he is responsible for the things that happened.

"When he started the NAACP office in Jackson, we were at zero in terms of any justice or equality for black people. Over nine and one-half years it was a gradual chipping away at the wall. Medgar died just as that wall was finally crumbling away."

"In my nightmares I asked why he was not allowed to see these things come about. Through the years I have become more philosophical about it. Now I see Medgar as a fortunate man. He had clearly defined his goals. He set out to break racial barriers in Mississippi, and he went after it."

Evers is convinced that Medgar's initial efforts to register black voters in Mississippi is partially responsible for the potentially powerful bloc of black voters in the state now.

She says she misses Mississippi frankness and honesty. "When the South was forced to do away with segregationist policies, it went down screaming, fighting and killing. But once it was done—and it was learned that it had to be done for economic survival—well, they just did it."

"Now there is a genuine camaraderie in working together for survival in the state. Blacks and whites don't necessarily love each other, but they work together, and they have found that it's not so bad after all."

Declarer finds help in enemy's bid suit

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The jack of hearts doesn't look like a useful card in today's hand, but it made the contract for Toronto expert Eric Murray during the Bridge Olympics in New Orleans a few weeks ago.

West tried to sacrifice at four hearts, which would have been down only one or two tricks, but Murray successfully gambled on finding spade support in his partner's hand.

East took the ace of hearts and returned the jack of diamonds to dummy's king. Murray cashed dummy's king of spades and then finessed through East for the queen of spades, playing West for good distribution because of his bidding.

Declarer then took the ace of spades and led a low diamond. West put up the nine, but East had to overtake with the ten. Since a club return would help declarer, East returned a low heart.

DISCARDS CLUB

Instead of ruffing, Murray discarded a club. West won with the queen of hearts, but now dummy's jack of hearts was good for a second club discard, and the game was assured.

If the six missing diamonds had broken 3-3, East could have returned a diamond instead of a heart, but then South's last diamond would be good. He would use it to discard a club from dummy, losing only one heart, one diamond and one club.

DAILY QUESTION

After two passes you are next, holding: S Q 4 3; H A 9 8 7 5; D J 10; C K 9 2. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. You are willing to make a light opening bid in third position, but only if you have a strong suit and can thus suggest a favorable opening lead. Don't bid with a poor suit as well as a light hand.

Industry not charm disappears

By PAT LEISNER

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — From this old world fishing village huge fleets once set sail to comb the ocean floor for sponges as the unending whir of cutter's tools wafted across the river from bustling boat-building factories.

Today, the sponge boats which used to number nearly 200 have dwindled to about half a dozen, and the factories that are left turn out more pleasure craft than fishing vessels.

But this "Venice of the South" hasn't lost its Mediterranean charm — or its hope that one day there will be a return to the sea.

"I love the industry. I've been in it all my life. I want to keep it alive," says George Billiris, who's been running sponge boats for 30 years.

"Tarpon Springs is known all over for its sponges. It keeps together 50 tourist shops and all these restaurants. They succeed because of it. Here is a whole community that lives on the past laurels of the sponge industry," he says.

Tarpon Springs, a community of 15,000 on central Florida's Gulf Coast, was born at the turn of the century. Divers were brought from Greece to fish the Gulf for sponges.

It became a multimillion dollar business in the '30s, with 2,500 men at work. But it's had ups and downs since then.

The younger generation, discouraged by hard, dirty work, long weeks at sea, blight that depleted the harvest and synthetics that replace real sponges, turned to the land for a livelihood.

"We have found more life in the last three years out in the Gulf than in the past 25 years," says Billiris. "But we have today only about a half-dozen boats and no crews. The demand in this hemisphere is five times greater than the supply. And the supply is there."

Shrimpers have claimed the docks on the quiet Anclote River across from the sponge exchange and the curio shops. At one end, an old-time diver dresses in a heavy rubberized suit and bronze helmet for regular half-hour cruises on a genuine sponge boat for sight-seers.

Although American customs have changed their lives, Greek descendants have worked to preserve their heritage. Their culture still centers around St. Nicholas Greek Orthodox Cathedral, built to resemble St. Sophia's in Constantinople, and around tiny St. Michael's Shrine.

Two or three decades ago, half the population was of Greek background. Today, it's only about one-third, as newcomers and retirees move to the area at the rate of 3,000 a year. The children of Greek heritage still are taught to read, write and speak Greek.

Judging slated before opening of Dawson fair

LAMESA — Youngsters and older folks from a nine-county area will be bringing their livestock, poultry, rabbits, pigeons and other pets to the Dawson County Fair Barn Sept. 12 for judging in the four-day Dawson County fair that opens the following day, said Joe Ed Wise, county extension agent.

The fair's cattle division is limited to those those steers and heifers owned by 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America chapter members.

However, the barrow, sheep, lamb, poultry, rabbit and pigeon shows are open to the junior showers as well as adults.

Agriculture, education and commercial booths will set up on Sept. 12.

Mothers and fathers wanting to enter their offspring in the baby contest for tots 3 years old and under may call Mrs. Barry O'Brien at 872-7878.

And women interested in entering the slipper-kicking contest are to be at the fair barn by 8 p.m. Sept. 13.

Matt Drennan and Dan Harp are co-general superintendents of the fair. DeLacy Frampton is general superintendent of the livestock division. His assistants are brothers Billy and Bobby Shofner.

Fair entries are being taken from Andrews, Borden, Dawson, Gaines, Garza, Howard, Lynn, Martin and Terry counties.

Agricultural exhibits and agriculture and educational booths will be judged Sept. 13. Rex Drennan is superintendent of the agricultural exhibits. Kid Koger is superintendent of the educational booths, which will have classes including those for FFA, F-H, homemaking, Boys Club, Scouts, adults and school classes.

Steers and heifers in the cattle division will be judged Sept. 16. Quinton Airhart is superintendent of that division. Ronnie Stovall is his assistant.

Barrows will be judged Sept. 12. Donald Airhart is superintendent of the barrow division.

The lamb and sheep judging will be Sept. 16. Bennie Lybrand is superintendent of the sheep show. His assistant is Stanley Cox.

Paul Reber is superintendent of the poultry, rabbit and pigeon show. Bob Hale is his assistant. Judging will be Sept. 13.

Agricultural exhibits and agriculture and educational booths will be judged Sept. 13.

Superintendents of the baby contests are Mrs. Larry Hicks, Mrs. Jerry Harris and Mrs. Kid Koger.

President continues lobby for energy bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was extending to big farm groups and food processors today his intensive lobbying effort to gain support for a complex and controversial compromise on natural gas pricing.

As he did on Thursday, Carter was expected to link the legislation with the fate of the dollar and America's world prestige during his scheduled White House meeting with about 20 representatives of the dairy industry, wheat growers, bakers, farmer cooperative executives, poultry growers, food processors and related groups.

He made a similar pitch to 11 governors and about 100 businessmen in separate meetings Thursday. The day before, his aides made similar proposals to about 25 Wall Street executives and 30 representatives of paper, glass and textile firms.

Carter asked his audiences to lobby their senators and congressmen for passage of the compromise bill, which would phase out federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas by 1985.

He said failure to enact the bill would weaken the dollar, increase oil imports, worsen inflation and make America look weak-willed in the eyes of its allies.

"Put the interest of your country first," Carter told the businessmen, mostly representatives of small- and medium-sized utilities, retailers, manufacturers and others invited from lists supplied by senators.

Earlier Thursday, the president told the governors that "the entire world is looking to see if we have the national will" to adopt an energy program.

"I ask you today as president, and you as American citizens and leaders, to put aside any reservations you might have about the specific details of this legislation," Carter told the businessmen.

"Do not count upon preferable legislation to be passed in the future. It's highly unlikely that Congress will deal through a 16-month or 20-month ordeal any time in the near future to pass new legislation," he said.

Carter predicted to the corporate executives that "your own personal career" and "the prosperity of your own business" will be enhanced in the long run by passage of the gas price bill.

He said lifting price controls on natural gas would increase the fuel's domestic supply, thereby reducing the nation's need for imported oil and thus easing the balance of payments deficit which is putting downward pressure on the value of the dollar.

"I'm concerned about inflation. I'm concerned about our nation's influence and esteem around the world. I'm concerned about the value of the dollar. I'm concerned about the balance of trade. I'm concerned about the image of effectiveness of the federal government, including of course my own office."

Exxon stakes drillsite for deep Pecos wildcat

Six wildcats, headed by a rank 24-, 500-foot operation in Pecos County, have been scheduled in West Texas areas.

The deep Pecos operation is Exxon Corp. No. 1 Longfellow Corp., 27 miles northwest of Sanderson.

It is 3,393 feet from north and 1,221 feet from west lines of section 11, block 600, C. C. Bryant survey.

REEVES COUNTY

The Superior Oil Co. announced plans to re-enter a former dual Fushelman and Ellenburger well in the Mi Vida area of Reeves County and test for wildcat production above the Fushelman.

The project is No. 1 Camp Unit, 334 feet from north and 1,650 feet from west lines of section 3, block 4, H&GN survey and eight miles north of Pecos.

SCHLEICHER TEST

Discovery Operating, Inc., of Midland No. 1-A Bearce is to be drilled as a 6,900-foot wildcat in Schleicher County, 11 miles northwest of Eldorado.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 7, block LL, TCRR survey.
The site is 5/8 mile southeast of Discovery No. 1 Bearce, active wildcat, and 172 mile southwest of the depleted Case (Canyon gas) pool.
Ground elevation is 2,492 feet.

IRION EXPLORER

Alford Petroleum Corp., The Woodlands, has spotted its No. 1-A J. M. Winterbotham and others as a 7,500-foot wildcat in Irion County, 24 miles southwest of San Angelo.

The operation is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 33, block 21, H&TC survey and 1,760 feet southwest of Canyon D oil production in the Dove Creek multiphase field.

RUNNELS TEST

H. L. Neeb of Abilene No. 1 Jerome Ray will be drilled as a wildcat in Runnels County.
Slated for a 4,000-foot bottom, it is 12 miles northeast of Ballinger and 6,467 feet from northwest and 10 feet from northeast lines of Austin & Williams survey No. 262, abstract 2.

The site is 2,300 feet southwest of the one-well Clayton, South (Gray gas) pool.

RE-ENTRY TEST

Ronald R. Perkins of Dallas announced plans to re-enter the former Karl Hobbiltzelle No. 4 L. S. Evans, 4,332-foot failure in Runnels County and deepen as a wildcat to 4,650 feet.

Abandoned in 1965, it is 2,352.9 feet from north and 517.5 feet from east lines of Wallace Brandt survey No. 12.

COX PROJECTS

John L. Cox of Midland announced locations for three projects in the Spraberry Trend Area of Glasscock County, completed two Spraberry wells in Upton and spotted a project in Sterling County.

He will drill No. 1 Wraga in Glasscock County to 8,700 feet. The Spraberry test is 1,320 feet from north and east lines of section 45, block 36, T-3-S, T&P survey and 16 miles northwest of Garden City.

Cox 2 Wraga will be drilled in the same area 1,980 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 45, block 36, T-3-S, T&P survey. It also is scheduled for an 8,700-foot bottom.

Cox No. 3-B Wraga is another 8,700-foot operation in the Glasscock County Spraberry Trend Area, 1,320 feet from north and west lines of section 40, block 36, T-3-S, T&P survey. It is 17 miles northwest of Garden City.

One of the new Upton wells is Cox No. 1-K Owens, 15 miles northeast of Rankin.

Operator reported a daily pumping potential of 144 barrels of 40-gravity oil and 22 barrels of water, through perforations from 7,013 to 8,420 feet after 130,000 gallons of fracture solution.

Gas-oil ratio is 715-1.
The well is 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 12, block Y, GC&SF survey.

The other new Upton Spraberry Trend Area well is Cox No. 1-B Averitte, 15 miles northeast of Rankin.

It was completed for a 24-hour pumping potential of 159 barrels of oil and 20 barrels of water, through perforations from 7,011 to 8,445 feet. Ghe gravity of the oil is 40 degrees and the gas-oil ratio is 725-1. The pay section was fractured with 120,000 gallons.

Total depth is 8,500 feet and 4.5-inch casing is set on bottom.
Location is 990 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 1, block Y, GC&SF survey.
Cox will drill No. 2 Foster as a 5,340-foot outpost to his No. 1 Foster in the Conger (Pennsylvanian) pool of Sterling County.

The 8,200-foot test is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 28, block 22, H&TC survey and 15 miles west of Sterling City.

CROCKETT EXTENDER

Mesa Petroleum Co. of Midland No. 1-39 Moody has been completed one mile west of the Ozona (Canyon sand gas) pool of Crockett County, 26 miles southwest of Ozona.

Completed from the Canyon sand zone, it finalized for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,820,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations from 7,158 to 6,750 feet.

The pay section was acidized with 4,000 gallons and fractured with 76,000 gallons.
Location is 990 feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 39, block MM, T&SIL survey.

REAGAN OILER

Saxon Oil Co. of Midland No. 3-18 University has been completed in the Spraberry Trend Area field of Reagan County, eight miles northwest of Big Lake.

It finalized for a daily flow of 78 barrels of 40-gravity oil, no water, through a 6/64-inch choke and perforations from 6,091 to 7,627 feet after 3,000 gallons of acid and 126,000 gallons of fracture solution.

The well is 1,320 feet from south and west lines of section 18, block 9, University Lands survey.

FISHER PROJECT

Marshall R. Young Oil Co. of Fort Worth staked site for a one-location project in Fisher County, one location southwest of the only well in the Roby-Ray (Cisco) field.

The drillsite is three miles north of Roby and 467 feet from south and west lines of section 9, Bastrop County School Land survey No. 313.

The field was discovered by Young No. 1 Roland F. Ray. It completed through perforations from 3,803 to 3,808 feet for a daily pumping potential of 78 barrels of 40-gravity oil, plus 29 barrels of water.

Actions on energy bill bewilder customers

By STAN BENJAMIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — For the inflation-harried consumer, news of Congress' wrestling match with the Natural Gas Act must seem as bewildering as an expedition to catch the Loch Ness Monster.

The reports tell of dramatic action — last-minute votes that save the bill, sudden turnarounds that risk it again, the president rushing back from vacation to bring it home alive.

But what, one may ask, does the darn thing look like and what will it do if we catch it? And why should we care what happens to it?

Here, in question-and-answer form, is a look at the legislative Loch Ness Monster known as the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978:

Q: Why do you keep calling it a monster?
A: Because, like many legendary monsters, it is a compromise beast patched together from parts of two different animals. The griffin, for example, was supposedly half-eagle and half-lion; the Natural Gas Policy Act is half intended to remove federal price controls over natural gas and half intended to continue and enlarge them.

Q: Why does it look like that?
A: Heretofore, a 1954 Supreme Court decision imposed federal regulation on prices charged by producers for natural gas sold across state lines but not on gas sold within a state producing it. The president and Congress agree that this split policy is causing problems and should be wiped out.

Q: Then why don't they just apply one policy or the other to all of the natural gas?
A: They did; but Carter and the House picked the policy of extending gas regulation nationwide, while the Senate picked the other policy of eliminating gas regulation nationwide. A House-Senate conference committee had to work out a compromise to include both policies.

Q: How on earth could they compromise between gas regulation everywhere and gas regulation nowhere?

A: By extending gas regulation everywhere, but only until 1985; then, the bill would remove gas regulation everywhere. Unfortunately, it's not really that simple.

Q: I knew it sounded too easy. Why do they have to complicate it?
A: Because if they simply ended all gas price controls in 1985, you might quickly find yourself paying dollars per thousand cubic feet for natural gas whose development cost the company only pennies 20 or 30 years before. So the price regulations would be removed only for "new gas" and some special categories.

Q: Well, O.K. What I want to know, then, is what price they charge for gas between now and 1985?
A: That all depends. If you mean gas from a new offshore lease, or from a new onshore well at least 2.5 miles from or 1,000 feet deeper than a previous "marker" well, or from an onshore reservoir which was not in commercial production before April 20, 1977, or from an offshore lease but in a reservoir discovered on or after July 27, 1976, then producers could charge $1.75 per thousand cubic feet as of April, 1977, plus a monthly inflation adjustment, plus a growth factor that changes April 20, 1981, excluding "behind-the-pipe" and "withheld gas" and gas from Alaska's Prudhoe Bay area transported under the Alaska Natural Gas Transportation Act of 1976.

Q: Huh?
A: Then again, if you mean gas sold in "rollover" contracts after previous contracts expire, producers can claim either a ceiling price set by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or 54 cents for gas committed to the interstate market the day before the act is signed, or $1.00 for gas which Q: Hold it, HOLD IT! How many different kinds of natural gas are there in that law?

A: Who knows? I count about 26 different categories, but the Commission could create additional pricing categories to cover extra costs and special circumstances.

Q: So never mind the categories.

What would it do to my gas bill at home?

A: It would go up, gradually, but I can't tell you how much. That would depend on how much of your gas comes from each of the different price categories.

Q: Can't you give me some idea of the price increases we can expect?
A: The Energy Department estimates consumers may pay some $2.1 billion to $3.6 billion more for natural gas under this bill during the next seven years. The American Gas Association says the effect would be to increase household gas bills around 8.1 percent a year. That adds up to a 72.5 percent increase in seven years. It might have been worse, but the bill has another measure designed to ease the price impact on households a little.

Q: What's that?
A: It's called "incremental pricing," which means that the higher costs of new gas would be charged mainly to large industrial boilers that burn gas, rather than home owners.

Q: Well, that's a relief.
A: Yes, but you'll probably pay for it anyway, in the prices of products the industries manufacture using high-priced natural gas.

Q: Boy, that's some complicated bill.
A: Yes, and there's more. It would also give the federal government clear authority to allow emergency gas sales, and to order allocations of gas from one area to another if necessary in severe shortages. And it would set priorities for deliveries of gas during shortages, favoring agriculture and essential industries.

Q: You know, I feel our country ought to decide on an energy policy, but that bill sounds so complicated I wonder if it would really help.
A: A lot of congressmen and senators feel the same way. That's why, after 16 months of hassling, no one is sure if the "compromise" natural gas act will surface from the legislative mire. The lawmakers know they've got hold of a monster, but they can't seem to agree whether it's going to be friendly or not.

Three-way tie in Wild TL Western race

BY TED BATTLES

Midland's Cubs threw the frantic Texas League West Division into a three-way tie with only two games left by beating San Antonio, 4-1, at Cubs Stadium Thursday night while El Paso was pistol-whipping the Amarillo Gold Sox in the Panhandle, which means the simmering race will boil right down to the wire.

Drury hero for Cubs

Table with columns for player names and statistics (r, h, e, b, i, o) for San Antonio and Midland.

ON THE verge of all but mathematical elimination, the Cubs blended the pitching of George Riley, the offensive versatility of Kevin Drury and a string of defensive spectaculars to turn in one of their finest games of the season, just when it was needed most.

Drury knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly in the first and just when it looked as though San Antonio lefthander Gerald Hannahs, a 9-6 pitcher who had done time with the Montreal Expos, was going to shut the door on the Cubs for the rest of the night, doubled home a run in the sixth and then scored himself on a stolen base and Greg Keatley's single to make it 3-1.

RILEY, WHO reeled off four straight victories with his split-finger fastball and then hit a slump, ended a three-game losing streak for his fifth win and second route-going effort, only this time he threw the splitfinger only twice.

finger. "Last year I had a good curve and in Amarillo Barney (pitching coach Barney Schultz) worked with me and I got it back."

Although his previous outing was a no decision game at El Paso, it was a strong performance and "all I used was the curve and changeup."

Kurt Seibert opened the first for Midland with a walk, then an error on Joe Hernandez' grounder to third and a walk to Eric Grandy loaded the bases with one out and Drury's fly to center got the run home.

San Antonio tied it in the second when Myron White doubled and scored on a single by Jesse Baez. That was all the Dodgers' were to get, but Hannahs was more effective even than Riley in the early innings. He didn't allow a hit until Seibert blooped an outside pitch to right with two-out in the fifth.

THE FIRST crack came when Hernandez opened the sixth with a single, took second on a passed ball and scored on Drury's single to right as Midland took a 3-1 lead.

Although allowing 10 hits, Riley's only serious trouble came in the seventh when two infield hits and a walk loaded the bases with two out and clean up hitter Kelly Snider, a lefthander at the plate.

pitch over, plus the way the wind was blowing to left, I figured he'd have to hit my best pitch to beat me."

The game's first play typified the kind of defensive night it would be for the Cubs when shortstop Steve Macko went to his right for Jack Perconte's hit bid and first baseman Bill Evers' dug the throw out of the dirt. In the same inning, Seibert went behind second to rob Mike Scioscia. Then, in the third, Grandy legged it to the angle in left-center to one hand Snider's long fly.

In the sixth, Scioscia singled, but right fielder Brian Rosinski one-handed White's long fly after a long run. Then, when Jim Del Vecchio singled to right, Rosinski's bullseye peg to Drury at third got Scioscia trying to take the extra base.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—Saul plans to go with Herman Segelke, 8-7, tonight while Manager Ducky LeJohn will counter with Rick Sander 9-11. Sander is 2-1 against the Cubs this season while Segelke is 0-1 against the Dodgers.

When Hannahs hit Hernandez in the leg with a pitch in the seventh, Joe dropped his bat and started out to the mound to discuss the matter with the Dodger pitcher, prompting peace-makers to stream onto the field from both dugouts, all except Riley, who apparently made aspersions to Hannahs' curve and what he could do with it, which almost set off another main event...Hannahs whiffed eight Cubs while Riley got seven Dodgers on strikes in the duel of lefties...

Midland's Kevin Drury...paces attack

Macko may be next M-Cub to Majors

Out in El Paso last week, the Cubs were having their problems, but shortstop Steve Macko was doing it all, both with the glove and bat, prompting a veteran baseball observer to remark, "It's funny. Midland always had a lot of good looking players in this league, but outside of the pitchers, none of them ever get to the big leagues. How many do they have on the big club from the farm system? One...None?"

Cubs blow another one for Dennis Lamp on TV 10 days ago and listening to their fielding follies during the Astros series in Houston, one wonders what mysterious potion Herman Franks is using to keep the Windy City bobbles stay in contention in the National League East.

As the El Paso man remarked, Macko perhaps is one of the Cubs' best looking prospects, particularly considering that little over a year ago the Dallas native was playing for Baylor in the College World Series.

complaining, I'd rather be playing than sitting on the bench no matter how tired I am." The length of the season is reflected in Steve's waistline and at bats. He started the season at 165 and is down to 155. "I'd like to put on a little more weight as long as it didn't effect my quickness and mobility in the field."

except Jim Rice. How did Rice get 535 at bats? The Red Sox score a lot of runs, but they don't have that many 10-run innings, at least, not as many as we do.

Hall's team seeking title

Jim Hall's Chaparral-Lola racing team will discard horses for horse power Sunday as the Midland-based unit seeks to become the first team to win racing's Triple Crown when the Ontario 500 unfolds.

Dogs, Rebs scrimmage Brownfield, Andrews

Football season is just a week away with the Midland High Bulldogs and Robert E. Lee Rebels hitting the road today for preseason scrimmages with Brownfield and Andrews, respectively.

Rangers get Grubb in player trade

CLEVELAND (AP) — Outfielder Johnny Grubb has been traded by the Cleveland Indians to the Texas Rangers for a player to be named later, the Indians announced Thursday night.

Huskers, Tide on tube first

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — For almost a year now, Jeff Rutledge has had to live with the awful memory of Sept. 17, 1977. Come Saturday night, the Alabama quarterback will have a chance to do something about it.

Last year's disaster affects his performance Saturday night. And with backup quarterback Steadman Shealy sidelined with a bum knee, he may have to go all the way.

Schoolboy football season one week away

Jones is out Monday night

BALTIMORE (AP) — With two out of three quarterbacks sidelined, Coach Ted Marchbroda has decided to get the Baltimore Colts some insurance.

During the season, he completed 64 of 107 passes for 59.8 percent, tops in the Southeastern Conference, and rolled up 1,518 yards in total offense, second best in Alabama history.

HE WAS intercepted only five times in those 107 aerials, but it seems that's all anyone wants to talk about. Strangely, they all came in a 31-24 loss to Nebraska, the only game Alabama lost en route to an 11-1 season and a second-place finish behind Notre Dame in the final rankings.

"That game was my disaster as an individual, but it was a team disaster, too," Rutledge said as he prepared to lead the Crimson Tide, ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason poll, against 10th-rated Nebraska Saturday night before a sellout crowd of 76,000 and a national television audience (ABC, 8 p.m. CDT) at Birmingham's Legion Field.

"I guess that game cost us the national championship and I guess I was largely responsible for the loss," Rutledge said. "But when you win, you all win, and when you lose, you all lose. That game taught me something. I learned when to throw the ball and when not to throw it."

"I've seen the film over and over and I've seen it in my sleep more than on film. There are a couple of passes I can't believe I threw into a crowd. But I felt the pressure and I got a little nervous. I hope the next time I'll throw it up into the stands."

"But give Nebraska credit. They had a good pass rush and on all the interceptions I was pretty well pressured. On two of the interceptions I did have some time to throw, but I threw bad passes."

RUTLEDGE INSISTS he won't let

Battle Scene

(Continued from 1-D) handed hitter in this park," he confesses "In fact, I've even started going to left on inside pitches. Ordinarily, I hit the ball where it's pitched."

SINCE SOME of the defensive plays he has made this season hint of an acrobatic background, Macko's proneness to err is mystifying. When he boots one or throws it away, it's usually on a play that's so easy a scout wouldn't even grade it.

"I realize I need to be more consistent in the field," he readily admits, "but if you'll check , you'll find that most of my errors came in two two-week periods."

Former major league infielder Bobby Adams, now a roving coach for Chicago, has a theory on the errors. "He impresses me in every way," he says of Steve. "He has all the tools. If he has one weakness, it's his arm. It's too strong. He has a tendency to rely on it too much to cover a mistake or lost step."

PROSPECTS FOR moving up are good. Ahead of Steve in AAA ball is former Midland Cub Mike Sember, who has been in the organization long enough so that Chicago must decide soon whether he can make it at the major league level.

Still, while Chicago is a spotty club in need of defensive help at virtually every position, shortstop is the most solid position on the club with Ivan DeJesus providing a steady glove, speed on the base paths and a respectable bat.

MACKO HOPES to find out how far he has come and how far he has to go after a year and a half in pro baseball this winter.

"If everything works out, I'll either be playing in Venezuela or Puerto Rico. They say Puerto Rico is more like the U.S., but they pay better in Caracas. In either case it would be good experience because there will be a lot of major leaguers in both places."

Venezuela has one other advantage. In Caracas, Steve would be playing shortstop to a second baseman named Manny Trillo.

Jana Roberts

Midlander first female to become high school trainer

SAN ANTONIO — Jana Roberts, a 1973 graduate of Midland Lee High School is currently working for the San Antonio Independent School District Athletic Department as head trainer for Jefferson, Edison and Fox Tech High School.

Miss Roberts, a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin is the first female hired as a head trainer in public schools in the state of Texas. All other females have been hired as assistants, mainly working only with girls' sports.

Counting the three freshmen teams, three junior varsity and five middle schools, Jana will be responsible for 14 football games per week.

She will be working mainly out of the area training room at Jefferson High School, but also out of the cen-

Sneva is seeking national crown

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — The late Tony Bettenhausen won the national championship in 1958 on the Indianapolis car circuit without winning a single race that season. Tom Sneva is on the verge of becoming the first driver since then to repeat that dubious feat, but he vows it will never happen.

"I promise you," Sneva said, "you will never get a chance to write that line."

Sneva, who won the pole position for Sunday's $300,000 California 500 here with a qualifying speed of 199.933 mph

Thursday, said he feels like the favorite for the race.

"We have our problems behind us now," Sneva explained. "We had a fuel problem earlier, and even though the car would always run well in qualifying, we couldn't run with some of them in the races. We have that solved now."

"We were also very conservative early in the year — we had a motor problem, or thought we had a motor problem — and were probably too conservative."

"But I'd say now we've got the equipment and personnel to do better than second, where we've finished four times this year. We should be doing better and we will."

If Sneva is successful Sunday, he will break Al Unser's streak of three consecutive 500-mile race victories and ruin Unser's hope of sweeping the Triple Crown events of the Indianapolis 500, Pocono 500 and California 500 in the same season.

Sneva was runnerup to Unser at Indianapolis and third at Pocono.

"There have been times this season when we've had to say goodbye to the leaders and let them run off and leave us because of the fuel problem," Sneva said. "Our guys really went to work on the problem and I think any advantage anyone else had over us is gone now."

Sneva won the 1977 national championship and leads the standings with 3,278 points through 12 of 18 races in 1978. Unser is second with 2,644. The winner of the California 500 gets 1,000 points.

Unser earned only seventh starting position in the field of 33. But he didn't sound concerned.

"I started fifth at Indianapolis and 10th at Pocono. I'd say we're as competitive here as we were at Indy and Pocono. I really think we'll be all right," he said.

Sneva, the track record holder at Ontario Motor Speedway with a 202.384 mph clocking last March, was the only driver to exceed 200 mph in the first day of qualifying. He only did it on one lap, and his second lap, when averaged with his first, pulled his average for the five-mile run below 200 mph.

Johnny Rutherford was next quickest at 199.734 mph and Danny Ongais was third at 198.697 mph.

Qualifying concluded today. Twenty-three positions were filled Thursday. Among those waiting until the final day to qualify was former winner A.J. Foyt, who decided to jump into a car owned by Vel Miletich and Parnelli Jones for the race.

Houston will get stiff test

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oiler secondary coach Bob Gambold and his youthful band of defensive backs have their hands full this season trying to keep opposing receivers' hands empty of the football.

The departure of 12-year veteran cornerback Zeke Moore in the final cuts will leave the Oilers with a full-blown youth movement in the secondary when they open the regular season Sunday at Atlanta.

The old man in the secondary is eight-year vet Willie Alexander, who will start at one cornerback position. Fourth year pro Greg Sternick returns from an injury to fill the other corner.

"They'll be backed up by rookie J.C. Wilson of Pittsburgh, who beat out Moore for a spot on the team."

"Wilson is definitely a prospect," Gambold said. "Good cornerbacks are hard to find and we feel fortunate we got him in the eighth round. Zeke just started slow and when somebody like Wilson comes along you'd have to think long before giving up on him."

Alexander, who started every game last season, has escaped the youth movement for the present.

tral training room at Alamo Stadium where most of the games are played.

Miss Roberts worked three years as a student athletic trainer under Becky Bludau for Women's Intercollegiate Athletics at U-T Austin and is the first girl to graduate under the athletic training program at U-T.

Jana graduated from Robert E. Lee in May of 1973 where she was a sophomore cheerleader and bat girl for the baseball team three years and received her B.A. degree from UT in psychology in August of 1977.

She was a member of the National Athletic Trainer's Association for three years and licensed by the state of Texas.

Jana's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Phil Roberts of 1003 Shirley Lane.

BYU favored to win WAC title

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Brigham Young University is a near-unanimous choice to capture the Western Athletic Conference football title this fall in a preseason poll of writers and broadcasters on the WAC Skywriters Tour.

BYU received 20 of the 23 first-place votes cast by the media members at the conclusion of the tour here Thursday. San Diego State was a distant second and Colorado State third.

Marc Wilson, BYU's record-setting quarterback, and Mike Bell, CSU's All-America defensive tackle, were expected to be the outstanding offensive and defensive players, respectively, in 1978.

The Cougars, who tied for the WAC title the past two seasons, totaled 158 points in the voting, with 7 points awarded for a first-place vote, 6 points for a second-place vote, etc.

San Diego State, new to the WAC this fall, received two first-place votes and 121 points, while CSU had 111½ points.

nally thought Bill Walton could never find a better place to play basketball than Portland."

Scott added, "I give Bill the information; he makes his own decisions."

Scott's remarks were a marked contrast to some of the statements coming out of the Walton camp in recent weeks, as both Scott and Walton's other agent, attorney John Bassett, criticized the Blazers' medical policies.

Maurice Lucas, Walton's teammate on the Blazers' bruising front line, also criticized the team's use of painkillers and other drugs and said he might leave the team if some things weren't changed.

Scott and Walton were in San Francisco Thursday and were reportedly taking part in contract talks with the Warriors, although no trade agreement had been worked out with the Blazers management.

Scott would not predict the outcome of the Trail Blazer "summit."

"They are just going to have an exchange," he said. "Bill's not going to make any demands. He never will suggest that anyone should be removed (from the Blazers organization). Those are not his decisions."

Walton contemplating Blazer reconciliation

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bill Walton will meet with Portland Trail Blazers owner Larry Weinberg in the next few days to discuss a possible reconciliation with the National Basketball Association club.

Walton, voted the Most Valuable Player in the NBA last season, has asked to be traded to the Golden State Warriors, and Trail Blazers officials said they would try to accommodate him.

He cited the team's medical policies, specifically regarding the use of pain-killing injections to keep injured players in the lineup, as a reason for wanting to leave.

But the possibility of Walton's return to the team he led to the NBA championship in 1977 surfaced Thursday when the 6-foot-11 center's friend and agent, Jack Scott, revealed the planned meeting with Weinberg in interviews with the Portland Oregonian and television station KATU.

Trail Blazer publicist John White confirmed the report, saying Walton had asked Weinberg, through an intermediary, to meet with him.

Scott, who was in San Francisco when he revealed the planned meeting, said Walton and Weinberg would meet in Los Angeles "one-on-one, with no agents around."

NFL placekickers are well-traveled

By The Associated Press

Now you don't see them, now you do. Many players cut earlier this week are appearing again because each National Football League team is allowed to increase its roster from 43 to 45.

Tom Dempsey, whose 63-yard field goal in 1970 was the longest in NFL history, was reclaimed by the Buffalo Bills Thursday along with line-backer Mario Celotto.

Both had been placed on waivers earlier in the week as the team got down to the mandated 43 players.

The Bills also placed wide receiver Dan Fulton on the injured reserve list with a foot problem and acquired wide receiver Larry Walton from the Detroit Lions.

The Los Angeles Rams also reclaimed two players they had earlier placed on waivers: center Dan Ryczek and punter Glen Walker.

Veteran running back Ike Forte, a second-round pick from Arkansas in 1976, was waived by the New England Patriots, while the Cincinnati Bengals announced they had reclaimed running back Willie Shelby after he failed his examination with the Atlanta Falcons.

The Oakland Raiders, who don't have a placekicker, were expected to reclaim 11-year veteran Errol Mann, who earlier had been "traded" to Buffalo.

Mike Levenseller for "past considerations." Mann now returns to Oakland as one of the two players the club can add.

Fischesser gains win

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Doug Fischesser planned to play the course and not the man in the fourth round of the 78th U.S. Amateur Golf Championships today at the Plainfield Country Club.

Fischesser, runnerup last year to John Fought, now on the PGA tour, was opposed by Enrique Muller of Ialnapa, Mexico, along with the 30 other survivors from the original field of 201 on the par-72, 6,865-yard course.

"You have to play the course rather than the man in match play," offered the 27-year-old Connersville, Ind., resident, after eliminating Jefferson Morgan of Milledgeville, Ga., 3 and 2 in Thursday's third round.

El Paso bombs Gold Sox

By The Associated Press

MIDLAND, San Antonio and El Paso were tied for the lead in the Texas League West today and Jackson held a slim lead over Arkansas as second half play neared completion.

The last games of the second half are scheduled to be played Saturday night.

Midland and El Paso managed to move into first place with San Antonio as El Paso blasted Amarillo, 12-1, and Midland edged San Antonio, 4-1. San Antonio entered Thursday's games alone in first place.

In the Texas League East, Jackson swept a doubleheader from Tulsa to remain 1½ games ahead of Arkansas with two to play. Jackson won the opener, 4-0, and took the night cap, 2-1. Arkansas also swept a twin bill, beating Shreveport by scores of 7-6 and 5-2 to stay close.

Kevin Drury put on a virtual one-man show for the Midland Cubs in the 4-1 victory over San Antonio. Drury sacrificed home a run in the first, doubled home a run, stole third base and scored on a single in the sixth inning and singled and scored on a wild pitch in the eighth.

George Riley, now 5-3, was the winning Midland pitcher. Gerald Hannah, now 9-6, was the losing Dodgers pitcher.

El Paso stayed in the second half championship chase by unleashing a 19-hit attack against Amarillo in the 12-1 rout. The Diablos had four runs the second and four in the seventh. Chuck Porter limited the Gold Sox to only six hits to pick up the victory. He is 10-5. John Yandle, now 5-10, was the loser.

The Arkansas Travelers moved to within 1½ games of Jackson in the Texas League East by combining the three-hit pitching of Earl Bass in the nightcap and taking advantages of mistakes by the Shreveport Captains in the opener.

In the opener, Arkansas scored five runs in the third inning off Shreveport starter and losing pitcher Randy Tate. The Travelers scored on walks, wild pitches, two errors and a balk by Tate, now 2-8. Picking up the victory was relief pitcher John Littlefield, now 9-7.

Bass allowed only three hits in the nightcap as he went the full seven innings to boost his record to 9-3. Bob Mazur, now 4-8, was tagged for the loss.

McNally joins Hall

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dave McNally, who won 181 major league games, is the newest member of the Baltimore Orioles Baseball Hall of Fame.

The winningest left-hander in club history was formally inducted during ceremonies preceding Baltimore's game against the New York Yankees Thursday night.

McNally, who operates two automobile agencies in his native Billings, Mont., attended the ceremonies along with his wife, Jean, and three of their four children.

Lopez challenges Stacy today

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, top money-winner on the woman's golf tour so far this year, took on Hollis Stacy today in the Bail Charity Golf Classic, which Stacy won last year with a record 17-under-par 271.
Lopez, returning after a two-week absence from the tour, has been bothered by a shoulder strain, but showed up early this week to practice.
She has won more than $150,000 on the tour this year, and said she now feels fine.
Stacy last year defeated runnerup Betty Burfeindt by 9 strokes, and her 271 set a 72-hole record for the Ladies Professional Golf Association.
She indicated she didn't expect to match that performance, saying:

"The course is tougher, I don't think anybody is going to touch 17 under."
Eighty-five women entered the tournament, which was to wind up Monday. They will compete for $100,000 in prize money.
Burfeindt, who last weekend shared sixth place with Stacy and Pat Meyers at the Patty Berg Classic in St. Paul, Minn., is back to try again.
"I feel like I'm hitting the ball better now than I was at this time last year," she said. "I'm very pleased with my putting, and I'm starting to zero in on the pin with my approach shots."
Also entered in the classic are Shelley Hamlin, who took her first LPGA win at St. Paul, and JoAnne Carter, who needs to win less than $100 to push her tour earnings over the $100,000 mark for the third year in a row.

Ed Gowan, who set up the course for the LPGA, said the greens last year "were just about absolutely perfect."
"This year there's not more than 5 percent difference from the way they were last year," he said. "If the greens aren't smooth enough, we can improve them by lowering the mower and double-cutting them."

Jet coach gets new contract
HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Jets gave Coach Walt Michaels a new multi-year contract Thursday, tearing up the current contract which had two years to run.
The Jets were 3-11 last year, Michaels' first as head coach following his playing career as a linebacker with Green Bay and Cleveland and an assistant coach with Philadelphia, Oakland and the Jets.

SILVERSTONE, England (AP) — West German racing driver Jochen Mass was in a local hospital Thursday, recovering from a serious crash in practice.

Lions starting long road to national title?

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Penn State's Nittany Lions start along a road tonight that Coach Joe Paterno wouldn't be surprised leads to a national collegiate football championship.
State is a 24-point favorite to beat unheralded Temple in a season opener expected to draw a crowd of 45,000 at Veterans Stadium. But despite some opinion to the contrary, Temple hasn't conceded.
"Those dumb guys think they're going to win it," says Temple Coach Wayne Hardin, using the word "dumb" in jest.
"There is no question about it, our kids are looking forward to the game. None are running scared," Hardin noted.
"They (Penn State) have to win, and we don't," said Hardin, long recognized as a psychologist of sort in the football coaching fraternity.
Hardin, of course, referred to the fact that Penn State is ranked third in the preseason national poll, and is considered a bonafide contender for the top spot. Not too much is expected from Temple.
But Paterno can't get out of his mind his team's last two trips to Philadelphia to meet Temple, when State escaped with two hairy one-point wins.
Don't think the Penn State coach hasn't reminded his team of those two narrow escapes. He has great respect for Hardin as one of the best in the business at planning for one game.
Hardin, however, insists that he has trained his team for an 11 game season, not one. He says his Owls really hadn't concentrated on State until last week. He also feels that if he can get consistent passing from quarterback Brian Broome, Temple might be a little better than they were in those one-point games.
Paterno admits that his team is loaded with talent and that it runs deep. Chuck Fusina, one of the nation's best quarterbacks, leads an offense that last year had the pass-run balance coaches dream about but seldom get. Fusina threw for 2,221 yards last season for the fifth-ranked Lions, who went 11-1, including a Fiesta Bowl triumph.
But the Lions' average gain per game on the ground was just as good — 214.6 rushing and 207.8 passing. Paterno has four good running backs in Mike Guman, Matt Suhey, Bob Torrey, and Booker Moore.
Fusina has exceptional receivers in wide receiver Scott Fitzke, flanker Tom Donovan, tight end Irv Pankey and his backs. Fitzke handles the punting, and pro soccer star Matt Bahr the place kicking.
On defense, Paterno claims he has the best two down linemen in college football in Matt Millen and Bruce Clark. The linebacking is typical Penn State — excellent. The secondary could be a weak link, but Paterno doesn't think so.
Hardin would like to test that secondary if Broome can pass with the needed consistency. If not, Temple will have to attack Penn State's strength against the run with running backs in Anthony Anderson, Mark Bright and Zach Dixon.
