RECENTLY ENACTED state and federal regulations helped produce this mountain of paperwork which engulfs Tenneco Oil Co. secretary Myra Burch. The paperwork, which was shipped off to the U.S. Geological Survey last week, is only part of a multitude of application documents required by agencies before Tenneco and other companies are allowed to begin exploratory drilling in the Baltimore Canyon off the Atlantic coast.

Summit underway no word on progress

CAMP DAVID, Md. (AP) — The Middle East summit is under way, but without word on when President Carter will bring Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin into the same room for the peace-seeking business they came to conduct

Although there was no announcement of a triangular Carter-Begin-Sadat conference, it seemed likely one would be arranged sometime during the day.

The three leaders are in mountaintop isolation with the Egyptian president and the Israeli prime minister at odds over summit goals and the role to be played by Carter.

"This is no time for maneuvers and worn-out ideas," said Sadat. He repeated his objection to Begin's limited goal of concluding the summit with an agreement to continue negotiations at a lower level — negotiations that Begin said might continue for months.

For his part, Begin said at an official arrival ceremony that he will pursue "all endeavors possible to reach an agreement so that the peace process can continue and ultimately be crowned with peace treaties."

Besides advocating a go-slow approach to the search for a Mideast settlement, Begin foresees Carter playing a limited role as a summit mediator.

But on his arrival, Sadat emphasized anew that he sees the U.S. president as "a full partner in the peace process."

On that point, Carter has seemed inclined to accept Sadat's position.

Begin did say that "the unique political conclave here" — his fifth meeting with Carter and third with Sadat — "is the most important, the most momentous of them all."

Sadat termed it "the crucial crossroads" and said: "The challenge is tremendous, but we have no choice but to accept the challenge. We cannot afford to fail"

White House press secretary Jody Powell announced that Carter and Begin met privately Tuesday night, in advance of a similar Carter-Sadat session scheduled for this morning.

Powell had been expected to announce plans for all three leaders to meet for lunch today. But instead he

Perjury charges false, 'work of desperate men'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., under indictment on charges he lied in denying he had received payoffs, says the charges against him are false and are the work of "desperate men under

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Flood Tuesday on three counts of giving false testimony at the trial of a former aide and before a grand jury.

In a statement, Flood said: "I completely deny all of these assertions and implications as well. For 30 years I have served the people who elected me in the best manner I knew how, and time after time they have demonstrated their confidence by returning me to office for 14 additional terms.

"I have never done anything to destroy that confidence, and, ever mindful of that fact, I am certain that these charges will be proven false, charges made by desperate men

The Justice Department said no date had been set for Flood's arraign-

Flood, 74, has been accused of lying when he testified on Oct. 11, 1977, at the trial of his former aide, Stephen B. Elko, that he did not know that William F. Peters, a former trade school operator, gave $5,000 to Elko.

Elko was convicted of taking $25,000 in bribes to influence Flood in connection with federal funds for a now-defunct chain of trade schools in California. Serving a three-year prison term, Elko is cooperating with federal authorities.

Flood's indictment said the congressman knew of the $5,000 payoff from Peters within a few days after Elko took the money in the spring of 1972.

Flood also was accused of lying when he denied to a federal grand jury on June 2, 1977, that he received $1,000 in the Congressional Hotel in Washington from former lobbyist Deryl Fleming.

The indictment also charged that Flood testified falsely when he told the grand jury he did not receive $5,000 from Peters at the congressman's command post for disaster relief in the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., area.

If convicted, Flood faces up to five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Summer may be over regardless of calendar

The summer may be over — or at least that's the indication given by the weather so far this week.

Autumn-like temperatures again prevailed throughout the region Tuesday while scattered afternoon thunder showers soaked parts of Midland.

The forecast for Midland and vicinity calls for partly cloudy weather through Thursday with a slight chance of thundershowers Thursday afternoon. There's a 30 percent chance of rain Thursday, according to the weatherman.

Winds are expected to blow from the southeast at 10 to 15 mph today, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight. The weather outlook in the Big Spring area is for fair weather through Thursday.

Rain pelted the western part of the city Tuesday afternoon. Westview Estates reported .4 inch of rainfall Tuesday and a heavy dew early today. The eastern part of Midland received a few sprinkles.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport reported .01 inch of rainfall over a 24-hour period, boosting the monthly accumuation to .7 inch.

Tuesday's high in Midland was 83 degrees. The record high for Sept. 5 is 104 degrees set in 1948. The overnight low was 62 degrees. The record low for today is 56 degrees set in 1973.

Cool temperatures are expected to continue at least through Thursday. The weatherman is calling for a high today and Thursday in the middle 80s. Tonight's low is expected to be in the low 60s.

Scattered showers and thundershowers were forecast for much of Texas today with North and far West Texas expected to miss the bulk of the thundershower activity.

Forecasts called for fair skies in northern portions of the state, partly cloudy skies in southern sections and mostly cloudy in the Lower Rio Grande Valley and along the lower Texas coast.

Highs were expected to be mostly in the 80s and 90s.

Some thunderstorm activity was reported Tuesday night in South and Central Texas, but rainfall was light. Some amounts included .15 of an inch at Cotulla, .01 at Midland and a trace at Del Rio.

In the front bedroom is a tidy bed covered with stuffed characters lifted from the pages of nursery rhymes and fairy tales:

"Here comes Peter Cottontail, hopping down the bunny trail...," Mrs. Allen said in a tuneful way. You could visualize her in a rocking chair

"... And his family's with him," she said of the cloth-covered bunny.

Joining Peter in the stuffed menagerie are the likes of Miss Muffet sitting on a tuffet, Goldilocks and the three bears, Little Bo-Peep who lost her sheep, the three blind mice, Little Boy Blue who fell fast asleep in the haystack, Little Red Riding Hood and the Big, Bad Wolf disguised as Grandma, the frog who went a courting, the three little pigs, the calico cat, the gingham dog, mother hen and others in colorful

The older house is full of newly pieced-together articles such as aprons for dishwater detergent and soap bottles; crocheted sewing kits; flowers made from various beans, seeds and grains; a set of three corncobs dangling from a bow and ready for the w.c.; crocheted bookworm book markers, and other novelties.

"This is the antique room," Mrs.

In the bed chamber, also, are a white ceramic night pot and a matching water pitcher, a kerosene lamp and other furnishings that would demand a good price at a flea market.

"Everything I've got is antiques," Mrs. Allen said, "because I don't have anything new."
And that's part of the charm of this place — especially on Tuesdays.

the income-tax increases caused by inflation and the higher Social Securi-passed by the House. But there are indications the Finance Committee will try to push it higher.

The House-passed bill includes $10.4 billion in individual income-tax cuts in 1979, $1.9 billion in capital-gains cuts in an effort to spur business investment, and $4 billion in business tax reductions, most of the latter amount coming from reductions in the corporate tax rate.

Miller said a corporate tax-rate cut "is likely to be relatively ineffective" as a spur to investment because there is no assurance that the tax savings would be reinvested in new plant and equipment.

He suggested a better method would be to increase the ability of factories and businesses to quickly write off, or depreciate, equipment and plant investments.

"Faster depreciation is directly linked to new capital formation, since the tax benefits only accrue to the firm after the plant and equipment have been put in place," he wrote.

"In addition, accelerated depreciation only defers taxes to some later date, and does not permanently reduce government revenues when firms make a one-time investment in new plant and equipment," Miller

Two women finish 1,151-mile rowing trip ahead of schedule

SKAGWAY, Alaska (AP) — Ginger Cox and Tish Davis first rowed together on the Dartmouth women's crew. Their teamwork should be perfect now, after a 1,151mile row up the Canadian coast from Seattle, their hometown.

Ms. Cox and Ms Davis, 21, left Puget Sound on June 22 and took 72 days to make the trip along the coast of British Columbia and southeastern Alaska.

They rowed 1,089 miles and sailed 62 in a 20-footlong, 5-foot-wide Norwe gian faering boat dubbed "Vandrafalken" - Norwegian for "wandering falcon." It was custommade at a cost of $4,000.

The pair were greeted in Skagway by seaplanes and small boats. They celebrated with a swim in 45-degree water before mooring the boat. "We figured we'd bet-

U.S. Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D.-Pa., reiterates his innocence at a Tuesday news conference outside his Wilkes-Barre, Pa., home. (AP Laserphoto)

Flood an 'old hand' at both kinds of combat

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) - The Dan Flood who emerged on his porch to tell reporters his perjury indictment was the work of "desperate men under pressure" is an old hand at both forensics and fighting.

A college boxer and debate team member, the Wilkes-Barre Democrat has continued both avocations through 15 terms in the U.S. House of Representatives, mixing tough talk with tough stances.

In 1972, when Hurricane Agnes caused the Susquehanna River to flood this city of 59,000, "Dapper Dan," as Flood is sometimes called, appeared in a purple Edwardian suit, his famous mustache waxed to twin points. He stood on a hill overlooking the murky flood waters and announced, "Today, I have ordered the Army Corps of Engineers not to allow the Susquehanna to rise one more

The rising waters stopped - not more than 100 yards from Flood's own modest frame house

But damage to Flood's beloved little coal capital was devastating. So, according to local legend, Flood got on the telephone to an old friend, Melvin Laird, then secretary of defense. He requested and got Laird's personal helicopter to set up a flood recovery command post.

The next morning he vowed to Navy officers at the outpost, "This is going to be one Flood against another." He then called generals, admirals - anybody important who would answer the

"Have you ever heard of the Defense Appropriations Committee?" he demanded. "Well, general, I am the Defense Appropriations Committee. And I need choppers." Flood got 40 of them, plus 1,500 servicemen.

Recent times have not been as easy for Flood. The Los Angeles indictment, announced Tuesday in Washington, accused Flood of testifying falsely at a Los Angeles trial on Oct. 11, 1977, when he denied knowing about a former trade school operator's $5,000 payoff to a former Flood

Flood also is being investigated in connection with his efforts to push through federal financing of a construction project at Philadelphia's Hahnemann Hospital, federal investigators say

But to the folks back home, it all has been a persecution of a native son who they don't want to see knocked from his pedestal.

His comfortable primary victory this spring over painting contractor Samuel Daley, 59, came four days after a New York City rabbi testified he paid Flood $5,000 in bribes.

Competency tests sought for client

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - A public defender representing a man police claim confessed to 17 murders says his client will not cooperate with authorities until his mental competency is determined.

When Kenneth Taylor, 37, of the Youngston area of Ohio was stopped early Monday for driving with a broken auto taillight, police say he confessed to the murder and $95 robbery of a Nashville man. Officers said Taylor led them to the body of David Willie, 36, then told of murdering 16 other people in Ohio, Pennsylvania and Tennessee.

'This man is in need of immediate hospitalization," Taylor's lawyer, Mike Engel, said Tuesday. "I think what we need to do first is address the question of this man's competency. I shall not permit this man to cooperate further, or cooperate at all with police, assuming he can cooperate, until we address that question first.'

Three Ohio policemen and two from Pennsylvania are in Nashville hoping to question Taylor.

That's when the vintage, circa 1890 or 1900, is really noticeable

In this case, the vintage is in women who, in their 70s and 80s, are about as aged - but not necessarily "old" as anything in the house.

On this Tuesday, there were eight in the house. And five of them were busily quilting in the name of SAM: Senior Adult Ministry of First Church of the Nazarene and of the Northside Church of the Nazarene.

They all are widows escaping boredom and loneliness. And while busily sewing, quilting, stuffing and otherwise toiling, they're making money to sponsor the Midland SAMs to the annual Nazarene conferenceworkshop for "golden agers" at Glorieta, N.M., next week. The Midland SAMs will be selling their handmade novelties and quilts Friday and Saturday at Dellwood Shopping Mall in Midland. Mrs. Allen is the Midland SAMs' leader-teacher.

Five of the eight women were quilting: Pearl Moore, 70, who used to help operate a grocery store; Eula Lea, 79, a retired beauty operator; Eula Collins, 81, a former missionarynurse; Lillie Barnhill, 77, who did alterations for a clothier, and Icie Davis, 74, a one-time cook.

"All you need is a needle and thimble; it's fascinating," said Mrs. Barnhill, who drives over here each Tuesday from her home town of Stanton. The others live in Midland. "I quilt year-in and year-out," she

On sidelines and not doing much of anything was Mrs. Cole, who claims to be "the boss," since she's the oldest. Back in her working-for-pay days, they called her "Saw Tooth," for she and her late husband were in the tool-filing business.

"I've been here so long, I don't think I've been any place else," said Mrs. Cole, who has lived in Midland since 1925. Mrs. Cooper was outside the rustic sewing room quietly leaning on her cane. At 86, she's not seeing too well and doesn't get around all that much. But she does help out in the toy

One major school system set to begin classes without incident today was Boston, where teachers have declared a strike moratorium until Sept.

The teachers voted to strike Sept. 14 if satisfactory progress is not made in negotiations with the city. Some 70,-000 students attend Boston schools.

The opening day of school today was postponed in Seattle, where teachers voted overwhelmingly to strike Tuesday. School officials said a decision would be made on a day-today basis on when to begin classes for the city's 55,000 students.

In Marion, Ind., striking teachers were being called into court in bunches of 40, told to return to work by Thursday morning or be fined $25 and serve a day in jail for each day they continue to strike. Eight Marion BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Syrian President Hafez Assad says the Camp David summit meeting might prod-uce an agreement to end the state of war between Egypt and Israel.

But Assad in a speech to Syrian troops on the Golan Heights warned that Syria, Israel's militant Arab neighbor, could "undermine any line of Middle Eastern policy it does not approve...although it might not be capable at this stage of imposing its own policy line.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko called President Carter's conference with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat a "collusion behind the backs of the Arab peoples to frustrate the attainment of a genuine Middle East settlement."

"Separate experiments at the expense of the lawful interests of Arabs, whatever labels are attached to these experiments, do not constitute the road to peace in the area," Gromyko said in a speech at a meeting in Moscow with Greek Foreign Minister George Rallis.

Yasser Arafat, the head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said he hoped the summit meeting would convince Sadat that Begin "will never give him anything.'

Arafat in a French television interview said Begin's plan of limited autonomy for Palestinians of the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip was tantamount to "creating a new Bantustan," a reference to the states South Africa's white government is creating for the country's black majority on out of the way, less desirable tracts of land. Arafat also rejected the idea of stationing U.S. troops in the West Bank and Gaza, saying it would mean "trading one occupation for an-

Skyrocketing prices result of slow white shrimp catch

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - The white shrimp catch is so far below average that prices are skyrocketing, an official of the Louisiana Fisheries Federation said today.

"We really expected a good season, but so far it hasn't turned out like that," said Harlon Pearce, one of the directors of the federation. A five-pound box of jumbo shrimp now costs restaurants $5.65," Pearce said. "It's jumped about $1 a pound since about a month ago.

But officials of the Louisiana Wildlife and Fisheries Department said predictions are hard to make this early in the white shrimp season.

"It's too early now for some good, hard statistics to hang your hat on, said Max Summers, assistant chief of the department's seafood section. "The whites have high and low cycles.

We just may be on a low cycle now. "But in the center part of the state, our biologists weren't catching as many (whites) in their samples as in previous years, which could indi-cate a down cycle."

Orville Allen, supervisor of the sta-tistics division of the National Marine and Fisheries Service, said the catch is always low at the beginning of the season, which started Aug. 21.

"There might be no small shrimp showing up in the catches now, and that may indicate to the shrimpers that no larger ones will show up in their catch when they mature towards October," Allen said.

Summers said the catch should pick up toward October.

Direct negotiations resumed in dispute on postal contract

WASHINGTON (AP) - Bargainers in the postal contract dispute are resuming direct negotiations after an initial effort to sidestep a threatened mail strike led nowhere.

"The status quo remains," one union source said Tuesday after officials from the Postal Service and three unions ended a two-hour meet-ing, their tirst together since July 21.

The two sides were returning to the bargaining table today as they moved toward a self-imposed Sept. 16 deadline for either forging a contract settlement or letting an arbitrator do it

Sources close to the talks said the unions spent Tuesday's session laying down their demand for a bigger wage increase than the 19.5 percent boost including cost-of-living allowances contained in the proposed three-year contract rejected by postal workers

The Postal Service, which had refused to renegotiate with the unions until the eve of a scheduled nationwide mail strike, reportedly made no response to the union demands, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The tentative contract's wage package, which provided for raising a typical worker's annual salary from about $16,000 now to $19,100 by 1521, was branded unsatisfactory by local union leaders and was a key factor in the pact's rejection.

The unions, representing 516,000 workers, want to remove the ceiling on the cost-of-living formula contained in the rejected agreement. They also want to rearrange the an-nual wage boosts to place the largest increase in the first year of the contract rather than in the third, as in the rejected contract.

Some local union leaders have revived calls for illegal wildcat walkouts after the settlement was rejected by members of all three unions - the 299,000-member American Postal Workers Union, the 181,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers and the 36,000-member mailhandlers division of the Laborers International Union.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Bread very good food for reducing

Dear Dr. Solomon: I'm making a big effort to watch what I eat this year. My one resolution was to get thin somehow. So should I give up bread? That is kind of a basic decision I'm trying to make. Is one kind worse than another?-Sheri A.

Dear Sheri: Bread is actually a very good food for reducing. It contains good nutrients. And it doesn't have too many calories-it's what you put on it that is liable to calorie up. Gluten bread is one good choice.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've noticed that there are more and more of those milk-type alcoholic drinks around. Do you think it would be a good idea to keep some on hand around the house so my children-I have two collegeage girls-and their friends at least have something nourishing to drink when they are all at our house?-Mrs.

Dear Mrs. G.L.: No, I don't think it is a good idea. These drinks are aimed at women and young people, and there is already too much drinking in these groups. As a matter of fact, the American Medical Association has gone on record against the new

Changing standards in concern for the environment, for animal and marine life and for the safety of mankind itself complicate the national effort to cope with the problems of energy and the

And the public pays, whether through taxes or increased costs of consumer goods and services.

The Seabrook nuclear power plant in New Hampshire and the Tellico Dam project in Tennessee are highly visible examples.

Public Service Co. of New Hampshire has faced repeated delays in construction of the $2.3 billion oceanfront facility. because of environmental challenges to its safety and to the potential impact on marine life. The plant has been caught in a tug-of-war between the Environmental Protection Agency and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission with permits being issued and suspended regularly in response to the lobbying efforts of pressure groups.

Last month the plant was given the green light by the NRC but the dedicated opponents of atomic power already have scheduled further court actions aimed at halting construction. Even should the plant be put in production customers will bear the burden of the increased costs attributable to delays.

In the meantime, over near Knoxville, the Tellico Dam sits 95 percent completed with no assurance that it ever will be used. Work was halted after the Supreme Court ruled that the three-inch-long snail darter was an endangered species of fish and its only habitat would be wiped out should the gates of the dam be put in operation.

It would have beem satisfactory with most Americans if the Supreme Court had said, "So what!" in response to the snail darter plea. What have the snail darters ever done, or what could they ever do, for the people or Tennessee, the United States of the world? Yet, the Tellico Dam sits 95 percent completed, faced with the possibility that it never will be finished, simply because the habitat of the little snail darter might be ruined. It really doesn't make sense. Now the Interior Department says the project, designed to lure recreational and industrial development as well as to provide electricity, falls short of meeting new federal safety standards. It has been suggested that one of the options left to the sponsoring Tennessee Valley Authority is to abandon the whole program. Yes, just abandon the project. Taxpayers, of course, would be stuck with the $109 million already put into the dam construction. But this doesn't seem to bother the bureaucrats or the environmental extremists in the

The effort in Washington should be to find ways to bring programs in which a heavy investment has been made to a productive conclusion. This most certainly would be the sensible step to take, but this seemingly is not the way Washington operates. It's time to demand a change in the bureaucratic mode of operation.

If legislation is necessary to coax cooperation and coordination among the agencies and to correct some of the more damaging aspects of the unrealistic environmental and safety regulations, it should receive congressional priority. In fact, such legislation is a must from energy and economic standpoints.

And please don't think for a moment that the very same handicaps mentioned above do not reach down into West Texas and other parts of the nation, affecting highway building. drilling and pipeline operations, industrial building and expansion and other things.

People are getting fed up completely, and rightly so, with many of the unwarranted, unjust, unrealistic environmental and safety edicts which come out of Washington. They are hampering the economy. Business simply can't cope with many of them. Hopefully, Americans will not sit by idly and watch their beloved nation go to pot because of these destructive rules and regulations. They very well could result in a public uprising, and the bureaucrats and the environmental extremists just might find themselves listed among the endangered species.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

New Orleans has 'rep' trouble

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Political ethics seem to be in short supply in Louisiana's first congressional district. Last year, incumbent Rep. Richard Tonry went off to jail for election fraud. The man he defeated, Robert Livingston, later helped bring charges that sent Tonry to prison.

Then Livingston, a former prosecutor and Reaganite Republican who carefully polished his "Mr. Clean" image, won a special election in a district that hadn't gone for the GOP in 102 years. But now the 35year-old freshman is facing conflictof-interest problems of his own in a case that has attracted the attention of the FBI and is hampering Livingston's bid for re-election.

The New Orleans congressman has admitted to us that one of his key staff members was serving two masters at the same time. Albion Ford was getting about $450 a month in taxpayers' money as Livingston's liaison to the black community in New Orleans. Ford was simultaneously drawing about $800 a month as a public relations man for the all-black International Longshoremen's Association.

When our reporter Michael Kranish first asked Livingston about Ford's moonlighting, the congressman claimed he had "no idea" that his assumed he was not on another payroll," Livingston said. He then issued a statement that he was "shocked" about Ford's outside employment and that he was letting Livingston said he had dismissed Ford because, "I felt he wasn't giving the job the time it required." Soon after Ford was dropped from the official payroll, however, he collected another $1,000 in consulting fees.

congressman could have been unaware of Ford's union job. And a former staff worker said: "For the amount of work Ford did for Bob, he shouldn't have been paid a cent.

Meanwhile, we have learned that the FBI is looking into a $4,700 check that was hand-carried by another Livingston aide to Ford in his union office last August. The money apparently was payment for Ford's campaign help. Our sources say the U.S. Attorney's office in New Orleans is focusing on "campaign improprieties.'

Ford told us only that he "naturally assumed" that Livingston was aware of his other job. He insisted he saw nothing wrong with the situation. But he failed to return our subsequent phone calls.

Other sources told us that Ford did

Livingston, who is white and represents a working-class district that is one-third black, is having problems in the upcoming election. One source in Livingston's office Two of his black staffers quit his told us there was "no way" the campaign in disgust to work for his Democratic opponent.

"He's lied and abandoned us," said Ernest Caulfield, who contributed to many of Livingston's speeches for black audiences. Former aide Arthur Bush charged that Livingston "has the worst voting record in Congress in relation to the black community and poor working whites."

Responded Livingston: "People are trying to smear me. It's really not fair in the last weeks of the campaign."

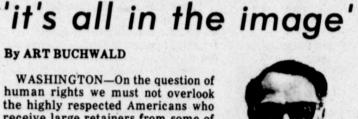

DAIRY DUEL: The National Dairy Council is devoted to spreading the gospel about the glories of milk and dairy products. It is financed by farmers and dairy processors, yet it claims to be a non-partisan group and is accorded tax-exempt treatment by the Internal Revenue Service. But the council moves to silence its critics faster than milk turns into butter.

Recently, for example, consumer activist Michael Jacobson told a House subcommittee that the dairy council offers "biased and selfserving information ... the National Dairy Council would have one believe that fat and cholesterol do not contribute to heart disease." Jacobson called the council "afront for the dairy industry" and said its tax-exempt status should be reviewed. Jacobson must have struck a nerve. for the Dairy Council responded with veiled threat to sue him. It charged him with making "many wholly false, scandalous and libelous references to the National Dairy Council ... malicious falsehoods (and) ... negligent verbal assaults."

Yet an internal council memo recently outlined an educational campaign "to provide the dairy industry with a means to answer criticism aimed at dairy foods, specifically milkfat, in relation to heart disease."

Footnote: A spokesman for the Dairy Council said its tax-exempt status was justified because "we don't do any lobbying. Our views on nutrition are supported by a large segment of the scientific community. We don't have to exaggerate.' Jacobson, he said, "was being very nasty that day."

real challenge for the American public relations firm. If we can change Gen. Barracuda's image in the United States, we might even set Idi Amin for a client.'

"I never thought of that," I admitted. "One more question. Why did you want to see me?'

'Well, one of the things I promised in our presentation was we'd bring American newspapermen down to Tuna, on the cuff, of course, and havethem write about what a great tourist spot it is."

NICK THIMMESCH Union chiefs think with their mouths on 'holy day'

WASHINGTON - The crusty old gents who run the giant AFL-CIO unions seemed to have gone berserk as Labor Day approached this year. The bombardment of rhetoric they let loose at a conference on "The Threat of the Radical Right Wing in America" seemed more appropriate for Halloween than their annual holy Egads, listen to William W Winspisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, describe the new conservative movement in America:

"Like its spiritual predecessors in Hitler's Germany, Mussolini's Italy and Franco's Spain, this army of the radical right has nothing but contempt for democracy and democratic institutions.'

The honorable Mr. Winspinger wasn't alone. "Jake" Clayman, a top AFL-CIO official, cut loose with reference to Nazi Germany, and warned the assembled brethren that the "radical right" must be stopped before it can have "lasting impact on our national institutions.

Other union chieftains waved the same bloody flag, as did guest speaker Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), not up for election this year. Metzenbaum essays on the "knownothing" anti-Catholic movement of the Nineteenth Century, eventually linking it to the same "radical"forces who opposed the common situs picketing bill, the Panama Canal Treaties, U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, the Labor Law Reform bill, Humphrey-Hawkins bill, the Consumer Protection Act, E.R.A. extension, tax-code reform and granting the District of Columbia two voting senators.

Metzenbaum and the others like to shout about "Joe McCarthy's witchhunts," without realizing they are one themselves. One would think that Joseph Goebbels, Herman Goering and Adolf himself are loose in the Republic the way they were shouting here in an air-conditioned room (they can't blame it on our foul August weather).

And yet in warning of these armies of the radical right they could only specify certain "right to work" groups, various conservative political action organizations (much like the ones unions themselves form and richly fund), several journalists, and Richard Viguerie, the direct-mail enterpreneur. Oh how they went after Viguerie, who is indeed a child of the right, but skillful enough in the art of setting people to send tens and twenties back in mass-mailed envelops that George McGovern once tried to make a deal with him. Viguerie is a zealot, but he does no more or less than what the union chieftains and other policized liberals do to raise money for pet ideological projects. And for Winspinger to call economist Pierre Rinfret and columnists William Buckley and Jack Kilpatrick "intellectual prostitutes of the radical rank" is as absurd as the conference itself. If these union skates keep crying "wolf" everytime they lose in the Democratic-dominated Congress-which is quite often lately-when an authentic fascist does threaten, maybe he will arrive un-

Expenses sobering fact of life for most farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sobering fact of life for farmers, many of them enjoying substantially higher prices than a year ago, is their list of ex-penses for producing the nation's food

Despite two successive months of decline in prices farmers get for commodities they produce, the Agriculture Department says those prices in August were still 20 percent above their year-ago mark. Further, USDA said last week in a monthly price report, costs of items farmers buy to produce leveled off in August. Compared with Aug. 1977, however, production items were up about 9.7 percent.

A closer look at the report shows that only two farm production items cost less last month than they did a year ago — fertilizer and agricultural chemicals such as pesticides and weedkillers.

The costs of other items listed in the production category were up from a year ago. Those included feed, feeder livestock, seed, fuels and energy, farm and motor supplies, cars and trucks, tractors and self-propelled machinery, building and fencing ma-terials and farm services and cash

Examination of some of the less-obvious items farmers buy illustrates why many of them who patch up old tractors, make do with battered pickup trucks and grain harvesters still complain of rising production costs.

Although steel fence posts still cost

$2.33 each, for example, a roll of barbed wire now costs an average of $28 a roll against $26.90 a year ago, the report said.

An aluminum scoop shovel that cost $14.50 a year ago now is $16.30.
One 10-inch adjustable end wrench is about $7.69 against $7.12 in August last year, and a heavy-duty soldering iron is $17.30, compared with $15.40. Farmers who raise produce and other commodities that require bagging and packaging also have felt the

A dozen one-bushel stave baskets now cost $12.70 against $11.60 a year ago, and burlap bags are $33.70 per 100, up from $31 last year.

Feeder livestock represent a mixed sort of expense for farmers since those animals also are produced by some who sell to others. Thus, higher prices are welcomed by the cow-calf producer but not so eagerly by farmers and feedlot operators who buy the

Feeder cattle and calves in August averaged $56 per 100 pounds against $37.50 a year earlier. Feeder pigs on the average brought about $109 per 100 pounds, compared with $85 a year

If you're really serious about dieting and keeping track of weight loss or gain, maybe a new electronic boot being used on cows is just the thing.

The Agriculture Department says that the special boots are being worn by cows in experiments in Oklahoma where researchers are checking on their weights and their respose to different diets.

Worn on all four feet, the boots contain a measuring device that can transmit at any moment the cow's weight with a margin of error of one pound in a thousand.

The boot experiments are described in the September issue of "Agricul-tural Research" published by the de-partment's Science and Education Administration.

Dr. Floyd Horn of the Southwestern Livestock and Forage Research Station, El Reno, Okla., said the boots enable scientists "to study, at a distance, forage intake, small weight changes, and other aspects of the animal's metabolism." How do the cows feel about the

"Like most new shoes, they seem awkward and uncomfortable at first, but they break in nicely in a few hours," the report said. "After that, this intricate scientific system is just old shoe to the cattle."

With militants marching to capitol, picking in full swing, growers say

MARION, Ohio (AP) - Migrant workers marching to Columbus to protest low wages for tomato pickers in northwestern Ohio had completed less than half of their 100-mile trek to the capital city by early today.

In the absence of the militant migrants, who last week slowed the tomato harvest by coaxing other workers to leave the fields, growers said picking was back in full swing.

The column of 140 men, women and children had traveled to just north of Marion by Tuesday night. They hope to reach Columbus by Friday for a Statehouse rally to bring their plight to the attention of the governor and other state officials, according to Baldemar Velasquez, president of the Farm Labor Organizing Committee. The workers are demanding a dime increase to 35 cents for picking a 30-pound hamper of tomatoes, a 60cent hike in the hourly minimum wage to $3.25 and representation in contract talks between growers and canneries. Just how successful the strike effort was depends on whether a striker or a farmer is asked. Velasquez said the tomato harvest was stunted in one tenth of Ohio's 20,500 acres of tomatoes, primarily in Henry and Putnam counties Some farmers agree the harvesting was hurt, but say most tomatoes will be picked because the peak harvest period just began this week. "Everybody is busy picking tomatoes," said Lewis Klass of Leipsic. "In fact, things are going so great that Libby is going to be on limitation, where each grower can bring in only so many tomatoes a day.

Klass referred to the Libby, McNeil & Libby Inc. cannery in Leipsic, which picketing strikers closed down on Aug. 26, the second day of their job action. Forty persons were charged with criminal trespassing and disorderly conduct and are free on $100 bond each pending a Sept. 12 trial.

Farmers say canneries normally place them on "limitation" during the tomato picking season, although the migrant strike delayed the call for limits this year.

Klass said numerous high school students are earning extra money this year by picking tomatoes. They are replacing the hundreds of migrant workers who Sheriff Bob Beutler says either left the area because of the strike or are participating in it.

Putnam County alone had an estimated 8,000 migrants before the strike began, but more than 2,000 had left a week ago, Beutler said.

Farmers may meet Thursday night to determine "who got hurt the worst and who is in biggest trouble right now," Klass said.

Growers were gathering information concerning the alleged use of federal funds to directly support the strike effort, Klass said The farmers have called for a conressional probe into the way La Raza Unida, a social action agency that receives U.S. Labor Department grants, helped migrants in the twocounty area hardest hit by the strike. They also asked for an audit of the

Businessman, judge clash in trial

MOSCOW (AP) - American businessman Francis J. Crawford clashed briefly with the judge over a piece of evidence today on the second day of his trial on charges of buying rubles on the black market.

Crawford's Soviet attorney, Leonid M. Popov, told reporters he expected the trial to end today. Although the American could get eight years in prison, there was speculation he would get a light sentence and would be exchanged for two Soviet employees of the United Nations who are charged by the U.S. government with Following completion of prosecution testimony which Crawford said was "like a fairy tale," Judge Lev Mironov cross-examined him for 45 minutes about how his employer transferred money in and out of the Soviet Union.

The cross-examination appeared to be an attempt to understand the financial procedures used by U.S. busi-

The judge produced a customs declaration he said showed Crawford once entered the country with $1,600 and left with $2,700, suggesting that he might have acquired the difference

"You've got it backwards," the American told the judge, insisting he entered with the larger sum and left with the smaller one.

As Mironov grew more and more testy, Crawford left his seat, went to the bench and pointed out the spaces on the form marked "entry" and 'exit" in Russian.

"Enough, sit down," said the judge, annoyed, and he broke off the line of questioning.

After the cross-examination, a parade of minor witnesses began, including Izabella Nalchan, an administrative assistant in Crawford's Moscow office, who said he was "a kind man who treated me well."

Crawford, 37-year-old representative of International Harvester, is accused of buying 20,000 rubles from a black-market operator named Vladimir Kiselev for $8,320, about a fourth of their legal value, and with buying six antique samovars from Kiselev and his seamstress wife, Ludmila.

The Kiselevs and a cashier named Alla Solovyov were put on trial with Crawford. All three pleaded guilty and testified against him. But he told Judge Mironov: "The testimony is complete fabrication. I have stated I have exchanged no dollars that were not officially through the Bank of Foreign Trade. I am innocent." He refuted the prosecution's claim that he bought no rubles legally in 1978 with a bank document dated Feb. 6 showing he bought 4,000 rubles on Judge Mironov said he would need time to study the document.

Crawford told the court Mrs. Kiselev did some sewing for him, and he paid her with such inexpensive Western goods as toiletries, a Stetson cowboy hat and the black slacks her husband was wearing in the court-

The American said those were the only business dealings he had with the couple.

Mrs. Kiselev looked at Crawford and asked him: "Why can't you admit your guilt? Why can't you plead guilty like the rest of us?" Returning her stare, Crawford replied: "If you commit no crime, you certainly do not say you do."

U.S. Embassy representatives and several of the four Western reporters admitted to the trial cheered. Crawford was arrested in June, apparently in retaliation for the U.S. arrest of the two Soviet U.N. employees, and was held in Ilefortovo Prison for 15 days. He was released to the custody of U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon in exchange for the release of the two accused Russians to the custody of the Soviet ambassador to the United States.

Moscow assignment means good pay, possible arrest

MOSCOW (AP) - An assignment to Moscow for an American businessman means good pay, a restricted social life that turns many into workaholics, limited business opportuni-ties and now, because of the Crawford case, the threat of arrest.

They live with other foreigners in segregated apartment houses. The only Russians most of their families come in contact with are the checkout girl at the supermarket, the cleaning woman and the militia guard who stands at attention outside the apartment house. Once in a while a Soviet bureaucrat comes to dinner. But most officials politely decline invitations and other contact.

The wives complain of loneliness and boredom. For lack of anything else to do, many of the men open their offices at 8 a.m., do not close them until 9 p.m. and work most weekends. Most say they never spent such long hours on the job in Peoria, New York City or Rome.

Despite such long hours, Moscow is not a major market where a businessman can make a name with the head

"If you compared our international sales with how much business we do with the Soviets, you'd see the latter is peanuts," said one representative of an American firm.

"The Russians are not going to turn around tomorrow and say, 'We need hundreds of millions of dollars worth of what you want to sell," " said another. "This is a planned, centralized economy, and these people know how many tractors they'll need this year, next year and five years from now."
Why, then, do American businessmen come to such an inhospitable business climate? Some cite the "challenging" nature of the work and the "future potential" of the Soviet market. Others say how "interesting" it is. Their companies hope for the day when the market will be wide open to them, and orders will soar. But several Americans report that since the arrest of Francis J. Crawford in June on charges of selling dollars on the black market, their companies are having difficulty re-

Crawford's trial began Monday, and he vigorously charged that all the allegations against him were fabricated. But his conviction was expected. Some American businessmen said if he were sent to prison, their companies would consider quitting Russia or at least reducing their staffs here.

International Harvester, Craw-ford's employer, has indicated that it may pull out of Moscow and stop supplying spare parts for its tractors bought by the Soviets.

"We are all just pawns to the ac-tions and reactions of two big governments," said the Moscow representative of one American firm.

In theory, capitalist American businessmen are the arch-enemies of the communist system, part of the U.S. military-industrial complex that Soviet propaganda says is working to thwart the Kremlin's drive for

But the Soviet leaders recognize that they need the advanced technology, heavy machinery and quality goods that the West offers. They reluctantly seek out such American giants as IBM, Xerox, Caterpillar, International Harvester and General Electric to help them fulfill another five-year plan. The migration of American businessmen to Moscow began in the heady days of 1972 and 1973, when detente was in flower and the Kremlin relaxed restrictions to allow big U.S. corporations to open offices. More than 25 U.S. firms are accredited to the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade Council. More than 40 businessmen are among the 800 Americans said to be here.

After taking the oath of office, Henrichson said he would not seek election nor accept permanent ap-pointment to the post. The Edinburg native said he plans to serve until McInnis is either reinstated or removed from office. Henrichson said he anticipated that would happen before the end of the year.

McInnis still draws his $36,000 a year salary but has been stripped of power. State district Judge J.R. Alamia said Henrichson would draw a stipend approximately equal to the budgeted salary for the McInnis will have an opportunity to defend against the prosecutors council's charges of misconduct. If the council can prove the charges, McInnis would be suspended from office without pay pending disposal of the federal indictments.

The very name of the church suggests two important aspects of the faith. They believe that both the Old and New Testaments point to the sacredness of Saturday — the seventh day. And they believe that the second coming of Christ - the advent - is near. The church has a very profound influence on the training of physicians here. Seventy-five percent of the students are Adventists. More than 90 percent of the faculty are. All medical students are required to take special courses in medical ethics and its relation to Christianity. They are required to make an intensive study of death and dying and the Christian attitude of treating terminal patients and their families. All medical students except those juniors and seniors on call in the hospital are required to attend the 50minute Wednesday morning chapel service. Three absences a quarter are permitted. The school believes it is turning out physicians with unusual concepts of their profession and their patients. "That is the goal," said one official. "If we aren't here to serve a unique purpose - providing Christian philosophy-oriented physicians — then we might as well shut down and the students just might as well go to any other secular school.

Loma Linda hopes to instill the love of Christ in physicians who in turn will try to do that with their patients. Dr. G. Gordon Hadley, a pathologist and dean of the school of medicine, is reluctant to compare the medical education his school offers with that

Foes of compromise confident of victory

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate opponents of a natural gas pricing compromise have signaled their confidence that it can be defeated by calling for a quick vote on a move to send the bill back to a conference committee for retooling.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, called Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd on Tuesday and urged a vote as early as Sept. 13 on the effort to recommit the measure, a critical part of President Carter's energy plan.

"We are ready to go," an aide to Metzenbaum said.

Metzenbaum is among a handful of liberal senators who have threatened to filibuster the natural gas bill, which they say would be too expensive for consumers. Although prices for homeowners and other users would rise, supporters say the in-creases would be comparable to those that would occur anyway under the present system of federal regulation.

The compromise, the product of eight months of delicate negotiations, also is opposed by conservative Republicans and oil state senators who say it provides insufficient incentives for new production.

With some support from other opponents, Metzenbaum told Byrd he was prepared to begin debate Thursday on the move to send the bill back to a House-Senate conference committee.

Under the plan, the bill would go back with instructions for the committee to return with a skeleton version giving the president authority to allocate natural gas if there were shortages in non-producing states.

If opponents of the compromise lose the effort to recommit the bill, they would still be free to filibuster the bill itself. But by pushing for a quick test vote. Metzenbaum is indicating he believes he has the votes to hand the administration a major political defeat without having to resort to a

The bill would lift federal price controls on newly discovered natural gas by 1985. But the sheer complexity of a pricing scheme to be used in the meantime has stirred the opposition of some senators who might otherwise have supported it.

Government, refiners don't agree on supply

NEW YORK (AP)-The government, concerned about a shortage of gasoline this fall, is asking oil companies to step up production. But the industry says there is nothing to worry about.

"Encourage them to increase their output," the head of the Department of Energay said.

This is the time of year when refineries are usually about to switch their emphasis from gasoline to heating oil for the winter.

James Schlesinger, DOE boss, is concerned because oil companies

Two men join staff

Florida Gas Exploration Co. has announced the addition to its Midland staff of Harold L. Culpepper as divi-sion geophysicist and Keith N. Phillps as geologists.

Before joining Florida Gas, Culpepper spent 21 years with Exxon Co., U.S.A. in Midland where he most recently held the position of senior exploration geophysicist. He holds a B.A. degree in geology from Louisiana Technological University.

Phillips was formerly a geologist with Regal Petrioleum Co. in Dallas. have less gasoline on hand this year than last, because consumers are using more of the fuel. "The secretary is concerned that supplies be such that they will cover demand for the rest of the year," a refinery spokesman said. But industry officials said Friday they're having no trouble meeting demand. They add that the lower level of gasoline stockpiles this year is a reflection of unusually high production last year.

"Exxon's motor gasoline supplies currently are adequate," said a spokesman for the nation's largest oil company. The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the company beganYthe Labor Day weekend witha 10- to 15-day supply of gasoline.

Demand has been higher than expected, but we feelLthe industry has been in a comfortable position inventorywise," said Norman Alstedter, a spokesman for Shell Oil Co.

'We have been making as much gas as we can," he added.

Gasoline demand has been going up 5 percent a year, according to Dan Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg letter, a gasoline research newsletter. But Lundberg said gasoline consumption soon will be tapering

There are several reasons for the rise in demand. One is that gas prices have not risen substantially for several years. Another is that more persons are driving trucks and vans, which are not as fuel-efficient as automobiles.

A third factor is that the nation's population is swinging to the South and West. Because of better weather and greater distances, persons in these areas drive more than the rest of the nation.

"Consumption of gasoline continues to climb, with truly alarming connotations for the future," said Lund-"But that future isn't here yeat." According to the American Petroleum Institute, an industry association, there were 211.2 million barrels of gasoline on reserve last week-enough to keep U.S. motorists supplied for about a month. That figure was a sizable drop from the 248 million barrels on hand a year ago, but industry officials said last year's figures were high because of heavier-than-normal demand for heating oil during the severe winter of 1976-77. In meeting that demand, refineries also produced more gasoline, which is produced along with heating fuel when crude oil is refined.

Gasoline refineries are operating at 93 percent capacity, and industry sources say that is enough to cover present needs, even with demand rising rapidly.

Crude tax centerpiece gives way to gas plan

By TOM RAUM
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's April 1977 energy program has undergone some major surgery of late at the hands of its framers: it has been given a new centerpiece.

The centerpiece that came with the plan - long identified by administration officials as a tax on crude oil has apparently given way to a complex natural gas pricing scheme unlike anything contained in Carter's original bill.

You do not hear much talk from the

ENERGY OIL & GAS

White House these days about the oil tax - apparently a silent acknowledgement of the obituary several prominent senators pronounced over months ago. Instead, the gas deregulation "compromise," which will be taken up in the Senate in the next few days, is now recieving the star billing. To Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, it is no less than "the axis on which our image turns abroad." Jody Powell, the president's press secretary, calls the legislation "the culmination of two years of work." It's true that Carter did make a campaign pledge in 1976 to work for gas deregulation. But since then, his administration has spent far more time arguing against decontrol than

Just a year ago Carter was hinting that he might veto deregulation legislation then before the Senate - if it ever reached his desk.

About the same time, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, a staunch supporter of Carter's energy proposals, issued a statement denouncing deregulation. Part of it read:

that deregulation will produce more supplies: what it will produce is economic devastation. It was not until early 1978 - after failure of repeated attempts by House-Senate negotiators to produce

"There is absolutely no guarantee a compromise leaving price controls on natural gas - that the administration signaled its willingness to support gradual price deregulation. The gas compromise that Carter has now adopted as his own would lift federal price controls from newfound gas by 1985 and allow a steady increase in the regulated price between now and then. Although the bill contains features against sudden price increases, it still bears little resemblance to Carter's original proposal to place federal price controls on all natural gas flowing in this country.

That plan would have continued existing price controls on gas in interstate pipelines - although at higherthan-present levels - while extending the lids for the first time to the 40 percent of U.S. gas now being produced and used in the same state.

the time that such a plan would give gas producers large-enough profits to finance exploration for new supplies of gas — without the runaway price increases they said deregulation would bring.
Well, a lot of natural gas has flowed through the pipeline since then.

Carter's plan, which was backed by consumer groups, passed the House. But the Senate rejected it in favor of a producer-backed bill to lift federal price controls over the next two to five

The current compromise is the product of more than eight months of touch-and-go negotiations between the House and Senate to reconcile those wide differences. And even though the president likes it, the compromise is being actively opposed by both consumer and producer groups.

So while the administration still wants a crude oil tax, it is clear the natural gas compromise has — at least for the time being — become the adopted centerpiece of the president's energy plan.

And Carter, who cut short his western vacation last week to mobilize support for the politically shaky plan, claims its failure would "have a devastating effect on our national image, on the value of the dollar, on our trade balance.'

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of of the Senate Finance Committee and main opponent of the plan, is more skeptical.

"You can't take a blank piece of paper and write, 'energy policy' on it and fool those international bankers. Why, they're even more sophisticated than we are," he said.

Natural gas surplus looms around world

TULSA-A global surplus of natural gas liquids looms for the gas-processing industry as plant construction races ahead and demand falters in major industrial markets.

In its Sept. 4 issue, the Oil & Gas Journal cites major gas-processing plants planned or under construction around the world as the reason industry sources predict liquid gas products supplies will soar in the next few

But the countries expected to be the biggest importers of natural gas liquids-Japan and the U.S.-probably won't need as much as will be avail-

Existing gas-processing plants can produce an estimated 2.5 million barrels a day of natural-gas liquids. And an estimated 1.04 million barrels a day of production is planned, under study or under construction around the world.

There is no way to determine how much of that capacity actually will come on stream and how much production will enter the international market. An Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries analyst earlier this year predicted shipments in international trade of LP-gas alone will total 1.1 million barrels a day in Several producing nations have announced plans to export natural gas liquids. The big question is whether industrial nation consumers will demand as much product as the producers attempt to sell. In Japan, the world's No. importer of LP-gas, continued demand growth is likely following a slowdown during several years of economic recession. One forecast sets Japanese import demand in 1981 at 368,657 barrels a Western Europe, which has increasing natural gas production from

So the key growth market is the U.S., which last year imported only about 164,164 barrels a day of LP-

Declining reserves of natural gas in the U.S. led analysts as late as last year to predict the country would quickly become a major LP-gas importer. Forecasts ranged as high as 5625,000 barrels a day in 1985. In the last six months, however, analysts in the industry have cut their earlier predictions in half because demand hasn't taken off as rapidly as had been expected.

Consumption of propane and butane by the petrochemical industry is dropping. Ethane consumption is rising, but new gas-processing technology has boosted ethane production in gas-processing plants, so inventories are soaring.

Residential and commercial consumption of propane and butane, which makes up about one-half of total demand, is expected to continue to increase. But the growth rate is expected to be only about one-third its historic rate.

WAC's Cougars have air attack

By The Associated Press

Brigham Young, co-titlist in the Western Athletic Conference the past two football seasons, is the odds-on choice to claim the crown this fall, primarily because of its devastating passing attack.

The Cougars ranked as the nation's top passing team a year ago, averaging 342 passing yards per game. The triggerman for most of the season, lanky quarterback Marc Wilson, returns, as do first-rate receivers Mike Chronister and Tod Thompson.

In addition, there's the tough Cougar defense, often overshadowed by the passing attack but always a fac-tor. Coach LaVell Edwards has seven starters back on defense and says that unit "is one of the real strengths of our team."

Still, nobody is conceding the title to BYU. Most of the WAC coaches, in fact, while giving BYU the edge, ex-pect a balanced conference and a close race.

Utah Coach Wayne Howard predicts that "six teams will be in the race somewhere along the way," and says even Texas-El Paso "will beat somebody.

Bill Michael, whose UTEP team was picked last by WAC Skywriters who toured the seven campuses a week ago, also predicts a tight race.

"I'd have to pick BYU first because they have an established program," said Michael. "But Colorado State and San Diego State are pretty close. The real darkhorse, I think, is New Mexico. If anybody stubs their toe, Bill Mondt's team will breeze right past them. Then I think it comes down to whoever gets the breaks between Wyoming and Utah."

WAC Skywriters tabbed new WAC entry San Diego State for second place. The Aztecs are 45-8-2 the past five years under Coach Claude Gilbert, including 10-1 marks the last two seasons. Once an uninhibited passing team, San Diego has gone for more balance in recent years. Promising but untested sophomore Mark Halda assumes command of the offense.

The Aztecs own a respectable 7-5 record against WAC teams, and there are some who expect them to quickly assert themselves and earn a berth in the hometown Holiday Bowl - which will feature the WAC champion and a major intersectional opponent.

CSU narrowly missed going to the Fiesta Bowl last year. The Rams' 9-2-1 record was their best in the last 28 years. Sark Arslanian must decide on a No. 1 quarterback from a pair of junior-college standouts, Keith Lee and Steve Fairchild, but top rusher

Larry Jones returns. Mike Bell, a 6-foot-5, 260-pound defensive tackle, was an AP second-team All-American as a junior. Arslanian won't let Bell take part in scrimmages. "He ruins the offense, explains Arslanian. CSU has good size and also is the WAC's quickest team. New Mexico's Mondt, popular with his players but under pressure to produce a winner, has 42 lettermen back from last year's 5-7 team. The Lobos lack physical strength on de-fense, but fullback Mike Williams is a bruising runner, having topped 1,000 yards the past two seasons. The Lobos won't have last year's brutal schedule to contend with.

Wyoming, 4-6-1 under rookie Coach Bill Lewis last year, has strength up the middle on defense, led by line-backer Ken Fantetti, and some explosiveness on offense with Marc Cousins at quarterback and 1,165-yard rusher Myron Hardeman at halfback. But the offensive line is inexperienced, and the defensive secondary is sus-

Utah has had two fine recruiting years, helping upgrade a squad that was low on talent before Howard took over last year. But the Utes still are young and lack depth at several key positions. Howard believes his defense will be "the surprise of the WAC," and Randy Gomez is a capable quarterback. Punter Rick Partridge is exceptional.

UTEP, winner of only one game in each of the last three seasons, continues to rebuild. The Miners have some quality players at the skill positions, including quarterback Oscar Ra-mirez and split end Bubba Garcia, but it's an inexperienced team and the defense was abominable last year.

Ron Meyer owns very young team

DALLAS (AP) - Coach Ron Meyer says his Southern Methodist football team is going to be a youthful one again this year with seven sophomores expected to start on offense Saturday against in the season opener against Texas Christian.

Meyer said that on the second team defense, six of the seven front-liners are freshmen.

One sophomore that Meyer is especially optimistic about is quarterback Mike Ford, who started for SMU in last year's game against Texas

Bouton win stirs interest

ATLANTA (AP) - Former major eague pitcher Jim Bouton's convincing victory Tuesday night in a minor league playoff game has heightened speculation that the former New York Yankee ace will be brought up by the Atlanta Braves before the end of the

"No official decision has been made on that," said General Manager Bill Lucas when asked about reports that the 39-year-old Bouton is heading back to the majors after an eight-year

Lucas had said previously there was a 50-50 chance that Bouton, currently with the Savannah Braves of the Class AA Southern League, would join the parent team this season.

As a result of Bouton's two-hit effort Tuesday night in Savannah's 4-1 Eastern Division playoff win over the Or-lando Twins, Lucas said his chances of pitching for Atlanta this year have improved to 60-40.

Lucas said he planned to discuss Bouton's prospects with other team officials today.

Bouton, who won 20 games for the Yankees in 1963, was exultant after his victory Tuesday night. "It was the best game of the year," the knuckleball hurler said. "I've had a super summer in Savannah." Bouton reached the height of his major league career in 1964 when he won two games for the Yankees in the World Series against St. Louis. Unable to maintain his form in subsequent years, he left baseball to become a television sportscaster and write a best-selling book, "Ball Four," an irreverent look at the lives of major league ballplayers.

Mad Dog Rugby Club to open up competition

BY TED BATTLES

There's a new game in town, well, at least in West Texas, with the Mad Dog Rugby Club comprised of Midland and Odessa players scheduled to open competition in the New Mexico-Texas League this month.

Many folks may not be aware of it, but the Mad Dog Club is spearheading a rugby comeback in West Texas. A few years ago, the University of Texas-Permian Basin fielded a team, but it faded away after a coupletof

One of the instigators of the game's return to the Permian Basin is Morris Lassiter, a former Midland High football player, who was introduced to the game in El Paso and later played at

"I found the game exciting and have played it ever since," says Las-siter. "It's still football, but it's a different type. You still have to get out and run, tackle and make touchdowns."

Lassiter, since his UTPB days, has played for teams in Austin and Houston and was good enough to be named to the Texas League team as well as the county, state and regional

"But this year my size went against me," he said in reference to his bid to make the national team that will play in England. "They want the 6-4,230-pounder who is still mobile enough to play the game. Even though I have agility and mobility, I don't have the size to play No. 8 flanker, which is comparable to linebacker in football. No. 8 plays at the rear of the scrum and acts as clean up man on offense and defense."

WHEREAS RUGBY failed in its WT debut a few years ago, Lassiter feels some changes have been made and the sport has a good chance of surviving this time. "At UTPB, the oldest guy was 21. Really, they were pretty immature. In fact, they were rowdy. But that group is gone and good riddance. No one wanted to hear foul-mouthed hooligans on the field. It was the kind of thing that caused the game to go downhill."

The revival began with two young students on an exchange program from England. "They played in a few summer tournaments and helped our team tremendously. The big difference between the two countries is that we call on our physical ability, be-cause we don't have the finesse of the English."

The Mad Dog Rugby Club apparently won't lack for opposition. There are teams in Dallas, Austin, Albuquerque, Houston and Arizona.

"The players come from all walks of life," explains Lassiter, who serves as coach of the Mad Dogs, "The average age is 26 and some are ex-football players while others never played football in their life. We have one 38-year-old man who is vice-president of an Odessa Drilling Company." What they all have in common is that they are amateurs, which means all expenses come out of their own pockets. "And playing games 300 miles away can get expensive."

But for the dedicated athlete, even that's an obstacle that can be over-

Mutual funds fight to gain better image

By CHET CURRIER AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The cocktail party is going strong, and a group has gathered at the far side of the room talking investments.

A chic working mother just in from tennis describes the old building she and her husband are renovating into condominium apartments, while a bearded man sipping white wine and soda extols his collection of antique guns. The subject of miniwarehouses as tax shelters has looking at an interesting mutual fund," he says. A painful silence falls over the group. Two lawyers who have been debating the merits of out-of-themoney options suddenly look at their digital watches and leave, and the bearded gun collector says just been broached when a stranger breaks in. "I'm

'ahem'' and changes the subject to test-tube A decade ago the stranger's remark in this imaginary scene wouldn't have been such a gaffe. But then, a lot has changed for the mutual fund industry in the last 10 years.

In 1968, the industry was caught up in a "go-go" frenzy, with millions of dollars flooding into whatever funds could lead the pack in the stock-market performance race.

A handful of "hot" young money managers became the gurus of Wall Street, including one famed for his refusal to buy stocks of companies whose chief executives looked overweight. Their physiques betrayed a lack of self-discipline, he said.

But the go-go era collapsed when the stock market turned sour. The funds, battered by bear markets, began to lose more investors than they were gaining for the first time in their history. That net outflow of money, which began in 1972, has continued ever since for the funds that invest in stocks.

In its response to this setback, fund officials can claim that the industry has undergone a remarkable transformation. With stocks out of favor in 1973-74, it introduced money-market funds investing in short term interest-bearing securities. The money-market funds have been a particularly bright spot of late, more than doubling their assets in the past year to $7.3 billion as of mid-summer.

In the last few years fund organizations have continued to branch out, adding tax-exempt municipal bond funds, funds using the options market to increase the income on their investments, and other types of products.

By 1977 the business added by these funds had pushed industry sales up to their highest level since 1969. And David Silver, president of the Investment Company Institute, the industry trade group, asserted, "There is now a mutual fund to meet virtually every need." At the same time, more and more funds have dropped sales charges, or "loads," which can range up to 8.5 percent. The Wiesenberger Investment

Companies Service reports that no-load funds accounted for 43.7 percent of industry sales last year, against just 4.7 percent 15 years ago. Alfred P. Johnson, chief economist of the Investment Company Institute, observed recently that some progress was evident in the effort to change the public's impression of the industry from a "seller of equity funds" to a business offering a "diversified line of financial products.' But he also acknowledged, "Old images - even when obsolete - tend to fade slowly."

Pike's comments irk constituent

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., recently took the House floor to denounce a Republican proposal for a sharp cut in federal income tax

"This motion should not be voted down, it should be laughed down," said Pike. The congressman's rhetoric infuriated one of his constituents who wrote to Pike and vowed he would work hard for the congressman's Republican opponent this fall. "Come the elections you won't think this is a laughing matter when you are laughed out of office, wrote the constituent. That's a legitimate threat when directed at most elected officials. But in Pike's case, the constituent obviously hadn't heard that the congressman doesn't plan to run for re-election. "Let him get out there and campaign against me," said Pike. "If I could think of any way to help him, I

A lot of people make mistakes. There was the couple standing outside the Capitol late one afternoon who asked a passerby: "Do you know if Jody Powell is still in his office.

The passerby explained that President Carter and his press secretary work at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue.

President Carter rushed home from his western vacation to try to drum up votes at this end of Pennsylvania Avenue for the compromise bill that would phase out price controls on natural gas.

Like most White House lobbying, the effort involves a lot of telephone calls and letters to members of Congress.

One of the letters went to Sen. Clifford Hansen. R-Wyo., a leader of the opposition to the bill.

Carter spent part of his vacation in Hansen's state and at the end of the handwritten letter to the senator, the president added: "(Wyoming was

To casual observers, presiding over the United States Senate seems like an important job. Indeed, at times it can be.

But on most days it is a dull, routine job that rotates among Democratic senators, each drawing it an hour at a time.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., spent a recent hour in the presiding officer's chair autographing pictures of himself.
