The sun shone on St. Ann's Family Fair Saturday. And the folks turned out in droves, as if it were the first and last day of a bargain basement sale and fun day.

It was the fair, which got its start in 1948, attracted garage sale hunters, who could pick up a semi antique knick knack or a thousand other odds and ends at the "Ends and Odds" shop on the playground of St. Ann's school.

Outside the "Ends and Odds" sale barn was a curved row of grab bag, dime a dish, compitish, dart throw and similar booths common to a carnival.

When we opened up (at 10 a.m.), there must have been a 100 people lined up waiting to get in," said Jake Kemper. He and his wife, Euda Lee, were into their second year of organizing the catch-all shop at the fair which benefits St. Ann's Catholic Parish.

"We were trying for a smooth, straight year of organizing the sale of second hand, donated, miscellany. Usually, one year is enough," she said of the satisfying hassle of the gathering of sale items and the sale itself.

Members of the church donated wanted items, which instantly became wanted by bargain hunters. Like the Book Stall, the shop was filled with browsing people, generally toting brown bags of bargain purchases.

On the tables, floors and in the corners, were odds of junk, treasures and gifts, vases, lamps, smoke pipe holders, bottles, jars, bowls, purses, buttons, food mixers, golf clubs, an adding machine, typewriter, desks, pictures, mail boxes, shoe valets and much more.

Everything's so reasonably priced," Mrs. Eckert said. "You're doing something nice for somebody at the same time." Money raised at the fair goes to the church and school.

Her 6 and 4-year-old children came to the fair mainly to catch rides in the mud way, which was across the street and to the side of Parish Hall. Going round in round were were typical rides, from the ferris wheel to the carousel.

This is the only carnival they go to," Mrs. Eckert said. The other carnivals aren't operated like they ought to be. This one is nice and clean.

In the back of the Ends and Odds shop, Roy Tucker was doing some shopkeeping.

"Oh, Lord, you never saw such a mess," he said of the morning rush. There were so thick, you couldn't

Cardinals choose dates for funeral, conclave

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church, soon brought back for the somber ritual and challenging task of papal succession, on Saturday set the funeral of Pope John Paul I for Wednesday and the conclave to elect a new pontiff for Oct. 14.

As the cardinals met in the Apostolic Palace, a line of mourners in tears, prayers or reverent silence filed past the body of Pope John Paul I as it lay in state three floors below in the palace's Clementine Hall. Tens of thousands waiting to pay their last respects — school children, nuns, peasants, tourists — formed a half-mile line in vast St. Peter's Square outside.

At 6 p.m. the body was carried by 12 pallbearers from the palace to St. Peter's Basilica in a procession of 20 red-robed cardinals led by a priest carrying a cross and two others holding candles. The pallbearers were flanked by Swiss guards in yellow and violet striped outfits. The Sistine Chapel choir sang psalms. The crowd applauded.

Inside the basilica, the body was placed on a catafalque at the main altar. It will be open to public viewing again beginning Sunday at 7 a.m.

The funeral Mass Wednesday will be said outdoors on the basilica's broad steps, the site of the requiem for Pope Paul VI on Aug. 12 and of the 65-year-old John Paul's ceremonial installation as 263rd pontiff of the 700-million member church just four weeks ago.

In his last document, the text of which was released Saturday by the Vatican, Pope John Paul said he longed for "the most blessed life" in eternity after "the short and often arduous earthly pilgrimage." It was a letter in Latin sent Thursday to an East German bishop.

Twenty-nine of the 127 princes of the church took part in the first of the daily meetings of the Congregation of Cardinals to draw up funeral and conclave plans. Although almost 100 cardinals still had not arrived in Rome, those assembled acted quickly in setting the dates, in contrast to days of waiting after the death of Pope Paul on Aug. 6.

North Loop at mercy of inflated prices

By MARK VOGLER
RT Staff Writer

Inflated land prices could cause a flip flop in a multi-million dollar highway construction project connecting Midland and Odessa.

The city of Midland, Midland County, Odessa and Ector County are going to have to pay considerably more money than they initially anticipated for a project that seemed bought and paid for a year ago.

Although all four entities agreed last year to pay full right of way costs in return for the state's subsidizing the construction of a northern route between Midland and Odessa and a loop around the northern part of Midland, the $60 million plus project could be scuttled if one of the counties or cities decides it cannot afford to pay right of way costs which have escalated since last year.

"It's a very serious situation," said A. Henry Pearson, district engineer for the state Department of Highways and Transportation.

"We have an agreement from all four government agencies that they'll pay 100 percent of all the right of way costs. The problem is the estimated costs have gone up so much, the agencies don't know whether they'll be able to finance it all."

"And if one of the agencies decides it can't afford to pay the right of way costs, it could put an end to the entire project."

Midland city and county officials consistently have said they are much more interested in the loop project than the north route to Odessa, but Pearson emphasized the two are considered one project. If one goes by the wayside, the other would be scuttled, too, he said.

"Nobody has said anything about backing out of the project yet. However, officials in the two counties are concerned about whether they can pay the price."

Midland County waived before making a decision to endorse the project last year because commissioners were debating whether the county could afford the right of way costs, then estimated to be about $700,000.

The commissioners at that time primarily were concerned with the cost of the north route to Odessa, rather than that of the loop around Midland. By far the largest section of right of way to be acquired on the north route falls within the responsibility of the Midland county government.

County officials now concede that the right of way costs could be considerably more than their original estimates, possibly even enough to cause the county to back out of the project.

"Hopefully, we will get a few dedications (donations) from property owners. If not, it's going to put us in a real bind," said County Judge Blake Hansen.

"We were anticipating that it might cost $700,000, but there's no telling how much it might cost now. I won't be able to tell until we get all the maps. It may be that we cannot afford

Legal action possible in jackrabbit debate

By MARK VOGLER
RT Staff Writer

ODESSA — The Humane Society of the U.S. threatened to seek criminal action against those involved in the World Championship Jackrabbit Roping Contest if the unusual sporting event goes on as planned today at the Permian Basin Fair and Exposition.

Mari Paulhus, an investigator from the society's headquarters in Washington, D.C., told The Reporter-Telegram Saturday night he advised fair and county officials earlier in the day he regards the rabbit roping as "cruel and illegal treatment of captured animals."

"We view this event as a clear violation of article 42.11 of the Texas Penal Code and will definitely take action for any animal cruelty acts if the rabbits are tortured, abused, killed or injured in any way," Paulhus said in an interview.

"We will file charges if necessary against the sponsors of the event, the participants and the persons supplying the rabbits."

"We will attempt to have anyone arrested who violates the law. If we have no success with local authorities, we plan to take the matter to the state attorney general's office and ask for his opinion."

The object of the event is for the contestant to rope a rabbit with a lasso in the shortest time possible. Competition takes place inside a 40-by-40-foot fenced arena. Contestants are supposed to release the rope after looping it around the animal's neck. The world record time is five seconds set by Grace Henricks in 1932.

Paulhus said he informed the Ector County Sheriff's Department, the fair association and County Attorney Mike Atkins that the Humane Society objects to the event and would monitor it to ensure that none of the animals are subjected to cruel and inhumane treatment.

Cruelty to animals is considered a Class A misdemeanor in Texas, punishable by a fine of up to $2,000, a year in jail or both. The county attorney's office has the authority to prosecute for any such violations.

Atkins said he will consider action on the rabbit roping if his office receives complaints, and he will, if necessary, refer the case to the Ector County grand jury.

"I told him (Paulhus) that there might be some question as to whether this is animal cruelty or not. If it's cruelty to animals, then it's a Class A misdemeanor. What action my office takes depends upon what happens," Atkins said.

"If they're (Humane Society) not happy with what our office does, they can go to the grand jury."

"We've prosecuted some people in the past for animal anti-cruelty violations. We've put some people in jail for it. There was some controversy over the jackrabbit roping last year, but nobody ever brought a complaint to our office on it."

A fair director said Saturday night fair officials had heard about the Humane Society's complaints, but added the event still was scheduled to go on as planned at 5 p.m. today.

"We've heard rumors about it (Humane Society action). As a member of the fair board of directors, I question what the heck is going on. We had the event last year, and the only complaint we got about it was from a Midland woman (Laruth Bomar)," said Bo Jones.

"It's a very humane activity. The rabbits were not mistreated. Someone let them out of the cage last year, but they were so well treated they all returned. The fair plans to go ahead with the event."

Local members of the Humane Society last year were unsuccessful in attempting to put a stop to the rabbit rodeo, which was a revival of a sport last held in 1932.

John Ben Shepperd, a former state attorney general and a prominent attorney who represents El Paso Products, was instrumental last year in getting fair officials to stage the event as part of a promotional gimmick for the fair.

A woman from the local group let the hares out of the cage following the first day of the contest. However, a local game warden and county fair officials helped provide more rabbits so the contest could continue the next day.

David Priester, a state attorney general investigator in Austin, said he was aware of the jackrabbit roping event and would be interested in whatever action the Humane Society takes in the matter.

Priester already is researching a legal opinion as to whether the use of jackrabbits in greyhound training exercises constitutes a violation of state anti-cruelty statutes.

He said he believes the rabbit roping may come under the state law.

Ector County Judge Gary L. Watkins, who was attorney for the Humane Society of the Permian Basin before he became county judge, said he personally opposes the idea of roping jackrabbits as a sporting event and thinks it detracts from the image of the fair.

But, in spite of his non-official opposition to this year's and last year's events, he added, he is not in a position of authority to stop the contest.

Colorado animal protectionists succeeded in urging then-Ector County Sheriff Reeder Webb to issue an injunction to stop the rabbit roping back in 1932.

However, County Judge Henry E. Webb at the time enabled the show to go on when he decreed that "a jackrabbit is not an animal, but a rodent or a pest." He issued a restraining order against the sheriff.

The controversy over jackrabbit roping spurred a media field day last year just as it did back in 1932, when the country's two major wire services carried light features on the event nationwide.

Radio stations in Chicago, Los Angeles and New York all took an interest in the unusual sport once the Humane Society expressed its outrage.

National publicity about the West Texas jackrabbit this year on another matter has resulted in apparent low keying of the event this year.

Several federal agencies are investigating possible federal and state law violations connected with the shipment of jackrabbits from the Midland-Odessa area to at least 40 states where the animal reportedly is used as live bait in training greyhounds for racing contests.

Paulhus and Humane Society investigator Rick McCracken of the Corpus Christi office plan to monitor what they believe will be the last roping contest in Odessa.

"It's barbaric and totally unnecessary, and we intend to put a stop to this sort of display," said Paulhus.

Sanctions sought against South Africa for rejection

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — African nations asked the Security Council on Saturday for sanctions against South Africa and threatened continuing guerrilla warfare if the country rejects U.N. supervision of pre-independence elections in Namibia.

A $300 million supervision plan, approved by the council Friday, established a U.N. group to supervise South African conducted elections in Namibia and asked Secretary General Kurt Waldheim to issue a progress report by Oct. 23.

South Africa has rejected U.N. plans to use 7,500 troops and 1,200 civilians to supervise a year-long transition before elections. The South West Africa People's Organization, a guerrilla group, has agreed to the plan. SWAPO has been conducting a hit and run war in Namibia against South African troops for 12 years.

Ambassador Thomas Tlou of Botswana, speaking for the 19-nation U.N. African group, told the council Saturday. "The battle lines are now drawn. The Security Council must defend its decision by all the means provided for in the charter."

Zambian Foreign Minister Sitoke G. Mwale indicated that black African states in southern Africa would allow guerrillas to use their countries for strikes against Namibia. Speakers from Benin and Guinea also demanded sanctions.

Precedent pegs rates to plant efficiency

By LARRY SPRINGER

AUSTIN — A precedent-setting order approved by the Texas Public Utility Commission is a Southwestern Public Service Co. rate case has tied electric utility company fuel cost pass-throughs to power plant efficiency and further has held that power company fuel subsidiaries are subject to regulation.

The so-called "fixed heat" rate concept adopted by the PUC for the Northwest Texas utility will tie the amount of fuel costs that can be passed through to the consumer is the efficient operation of power plants.

According to PUC member Alan Erwin, if during a billing month it is determined the power generating facilities were not operated at optimum efficiency—as determined by PUC engineers—then the utility would have to absorb the cost of the excess fuel burned due to the inefficient operation.

Conversely, Erwin points out that a utility which operates at a rate more efficient than that determined by the commission would be able to pass on those savings to investors.

This concept allows the utility to pass on to consumer only those extra fuel costs which are actually experienced during the billing period and would prohibit the automatic pass-through of such charges as increasing in the rate of return for a fuel subsidiary, labor increases, etc.

Erwin observed that this concept is the first of its kind in the nation and that the PUC is first regulatory panel in the U.S. to attack the sticky problem of automatic fuel cost pass-throughs without prohibiting such pass-throughs outright.

"It rewards good management and punishes bad management," Erwin said.

Noting that SPS was not opposed to the fixed heat concept being included in the rate order, Erwin said this "comments on their management."

Erwin added that the concept likely will encourage utilities to seek out the cheapest available fuel, since economizing in that area would provide a means of making up any losses that might have to be absorbed due to incidents of inefficient power plant operation.

The efficiency provision may also have significant implications for electric utilities considering investment in nuclear power plants since the efficiency of nuclear power facilities is a major area of disagreement between the utilities and anti-nuclear forces.

Carter places ceiling on sugar

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he's opposed to bills that would raise sugar prices paid to farmers above 15 cents a pound, an allowance he said would amount to a guaranteed profit for growers.

He also said he can't accept a Senate-passed bill that would remove his authority to expand beef imports.

And he said he believes the farm strike movement of last year "did a great service to agriculture and to the country."

The president made the comments in an interview with out-of-town broadcasters Friday. The White House released the transcript Saturday.

On the sugar bill, Carter said he "would like to see a bill passed," but said a House Ways and Means Committee measure "would be the maximum that I would accept on sugar prices."

The committee bill would raise sugar prices to 15 cents a pound and provides for no yearly increases. Two more generous measures, however, are coming up for consideration in the Senate and House.

A House bill approved by the agriculture committee would set prices initially at 16 cents a pound and provides for yearly increases above that. A Senate bill calls for a 17-cent price.

Carter said if the Senate bill prevails, "this would really be the only agricultural product where you set the prevailing nationwide price to accommodate the highest cost of production anywhere in the nation."

"I never promised any farm group, even when I was eagerly seeking their support during the campaign, that I would guarantee them a profit," the president said.

The Consumer Federation of America estimates that each penny increase in sugar prices costs consumers $500 million a year.

On beef imports, Carter said he won't accept a bill by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to set quotas by formula, with no discretion left to the president.

The bill was passed after some cattlemen complained about Carter's decision to expand beef imports this year in an attempt to moderate a sharp increase in retail meat prices.

"I wouldn't approve the Bentsen bill as drafted," Carter said. "I think the president needs flexibility in controlling beef imports."

Carter said he didn't approve of blocking traffic or other illegal tactics used by some in the American Agriculture farm-strike movement.

But he said "I think the dramatization of the farmer's plight to the entire public, indeed the entire world, was a very constructive thing. It helped me to get from the Congress and maybe Congress members to vote for an excellent 1977 farm bill."

On other subjects, Carter said he isn't inclined to change a presidential order, dating back to the Nixon administration, restricting the use of poison to control coyotes that plague Western sheep herders.

Youth's return to life sparks controversy

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Roger Ragland's startling return to life after 12 hours of appearing clinically dead has renewed debate over what constitutes death in Texas.

The 19-year-old remained in critical condition Saturday in a hospital intensive care unit after suffering severe brain injuries Wednesday in a traffic accident.

"He had all the neurological signs of brain death," said Dr. James Lindley, who examined the youth in the Brackenridge Hospital emergency room.

Laboratory conception drawing surprising little public interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility of government research on laboratory conception of humans isn't engendering the kind of public interest initially forecast, according to an official who is reviewing the ethical and moral questions involved.

"I'm puzzled," said Leo McCarthy, staff director of a federal advisory board contemplating research on test tube conception.

In an interview, McCarthy said his Ethics Advisory Board to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has received only a few dozen letters from the public on controversial issue.

Despite widespread news media accounts of the board's consideration of the issue and its first discussions in mid-September, the panel has been getting only two to four letters a day, he said.

On Sept. 15, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. had instructed the board to "stimulate a national debate" about whether the department should fund research on laboratory fertilization of human eggs and embryo transplants.

A baby girl was born by this method in England on July 25 and remains healthy.

Califano said at the time that test tube baby research in this country "holds enormous promise." But he also said it raises questions "that reach to our most profound moral and ethical beliefs.

"Will this research lead to selective breeding to attempt to control the genetic makeup of offspring or to the use of surrogate parents where rich women might pay poor women to carry their children?" the Cabinet officer asked.

To spur debate, Califano ordered the advisory board to hold its meetings in 10 different sections of the country. Its next session will be held Oct. 13-14 in Boston. The other times and places have not yet been set, but the panel's chairman, James C. Gaither, has said he hopes it can reach a conclusion on the issues by February.

The board must then make a recommendation to Califano on whether the HEW should authorize the use of taxpayers funds for the research. The department ordered a cessation of this kind of research in 1975.

Dr. Pierre Soupart of Vanderbilt University in Nashville is seeking permission to carry out research on fertilizing eggs "in vitro" (Latin for in glass).

At the advisory panel's initial hearing last month, Soupart and others argued that the technique holds promise for hundreds of thousands of American women who cannot conceive a baby because of blocked fallopian tubes.

McCarthy, a political scientist, said the 14-member board of doctors, academics, lawyers, laymen and a professor priest will hear more testimony in Boston about what animal research has shown.

The youth seemed a good potential organ donor. Doctors received the family's permission to use Roger's kidneys in a transplant and then put him on a respirator to continue circulation through the body tissues.

The family had acknowledged his death and notified a funeral home.

Dr. Byron Neely, a neurosurgeon, noticed Ragland's legs moved about Thursday noon and then detected brain activity. He told the family that Roger needed an operation remove pressure on his brain.

The surgeon removed part of the youth's frontal brain lobes, an operation which could cause minor personality changes but would not affect intelligence or motor functions.

Neely told the family after the operation Thursday night that "the next 72 hours will tell." Infection and tissue swelling are his worst threats.

Ragland's case is unusual because of the long period before brain activity resumed — a crucial question in determining death. Unlike some states, Texas has no legal definition of death.

"This is a controversial area," said Lindley.

Doctors at Brackenridge Hospital continue to refine definitions and requirements of brain death, Neely said.

When a patient still has a heartbeat, Brackenridge policy has been to administer two consecutive electroencephalograms at least six hours apart.

Weatherization providing new jobs, warmer homes

Mrs. Ollie Ramson of 1207 E. Cuthbert Ave. lives alone. Neither her heater nor her stove work.

But, thanks to a federally funded program, Mrs. Ramson will spend a warmer winter this year.

The Midland County Community Action Agency has determined Mrs. Ramson is eligible for the organization's massive five-county weatherization program.

That's why she's having her home insulated free by a crew of people whose salaries and equipment are paid for by government funds.

Alexandra Morris, director of the Midland agency, said this is one part of an effort which has "weatherized" 45 homes in Midland County, 25 homes in Ward County and six in Reeves County to date.

The program has not been active in Winkler County because of a lack of manpower, nor in Loving County because of a lack of applications, she said.

Newly received funding will make it possible to complete the goals of the area program and train at least 27 jobless people in the process, she said.

Last week, she said, the agency received a total of $187,000 in U.S. Department of Labor funds through the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission to provide 27 job slots to train people for the building industry.

Learning to do weather stripping, caulking, replacing windows, installing new locks (if needed) and placing insulation in homes are involved, said Ms. Morris.

Job applicants must have been unemployed for 15 of the past 20 weeks and reside in the five-county area, she said.

Said Mrs. Ramson, "I feel like it's beautiful when people like me who are unable to do this on our own, can receive help from an organization to get the job done."

She also said she is hopeful the agency can replace her non-working wall heater with a space heater, something Ms. Morris said can be done under certain circumstances.

The agency received an $11,580 contract under the Weatherization Assistance for Low-Income Persons Program from the Texas Department of Community Affairs recently.

The 12-month contract, which began Sept. 1, is making funds available through the Economic Opportunity Division of the U.S. Department of Energy.

Ms. Morris said the funds can be used for storm windows, caulking, insulation and wall repairs for the homes of elderly or low-income persons to reduce both energy consumption and high energy costs.

When preliminary work is done, insulating crews blow several inches of insulation in the attic or above the ceiling.

Only salaries and equipment are paid for by federal funds. Materials for the program come from the Midland County Community Action Agency.

W.C. Wilson, Midland County manpower coordinator is aiding the agency in its efforts to provide jobs and weatherize homes, said Ms. Morris.

Some $2.5 million is being spent throughout Texas to fund the jobs and energy-conservation effort, according to Joe Carpenter, weatherization coordinator for Region 6 of the Federal Community Services Administration. The program is active in 95 percent of Texas counties.

"The philosophy behind this program is that since utility costs keep going up in Texas and other states, the elderly on fixed incomes and the handicapped people have been unable to keep up with such costs," said Carpenter.

"We held forums in all five states and, time after time, poor people told us how they could not afford to pay their utility bills."

He said he has heard people talk of paying a $150 per month utility bill and having hardly anything to live on for the month. "We have reduced the utility bills of some of these people from $150 per month to around $45 and $50 per month by our weatherization program efforts," said Carpenter.

Region 6 of the CSA reaches into Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Louisiana, he said.

"Our first priority is to stop all infiltration of air and water into a home. We weather strip it. The second priority is to insulate the house. Our third priority is to install storm windows or whatever is necessary for warmth in winter."

He said in some cases heaters are provided, if funds permit. "It's been a very successful program to some people who have been eligible, because now they have money for food, clothing and their weatherized homes; also save energy," Carpenter concluded.

He added, "It's helping poor people but also fighting the energy crisis. People don't believe it, but we are in the midst of an energy crisis."

Ms. Morris said the weatherization program eligibility guidelines include being at least age 60, on Social Security or Supplemental Security Income and meeting the following poverty guidelines:

Single-person families with a non-farm income of $3,140 or farm income of $2,690 are eligible. Others are eligible if there are two persons per family with a nonfarm income of $4,160 or farm income of $3,550; three people per family with a nonfarm income of $5,180 or farm income of $4,410; four persons per family with a nonfarm income of $6,200 or farm income of $5,270; five per family with a nonfarm income of $7,220 or farm income of $6,130; or six per family with a nonfarm income of $8,240 or farm income of 6,990.

No evidence found linking man to steakhouse murders

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — No solid evidence has emerged to link a man being questioned about nine murders to the killings, authorities said Saturday.

The Oklahoma City man, jailed Thursday on a charge of concealing stolen property, is considered one of several dozen suspects in the case, officials said, and will be investigated further.

The man has been questioned about the July killings of six employees of an Oklahoma City steakhouse and about the June murders near Purcell of three members of the Melvin Lorenz family, of San Antonio, Texas.

Oklahoma County Sheriff Gene Wells said he had "information from two different sources" linking the man to the nine murders.

However, the accuracy of the information has not been determined.

No charges have been filed against the man in connection with the murders.

Meanwhile, the Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation has declined comment on a New Mexico medical official's statement that OSBI officials have contacted him about procedures required to exhume the body of Melvin Lorenz' 12-year-old son, Richard.

In a telephone interview Friday, medical investigator Bob Inserra said he received a call from the OSBI Tuesday about procedures for exhuming the body of Richard Lorenz.

Inserra said an OSBI official "called and made some inquiries about procedures for exhuming the body (of Richard Lorenz).

They thought that was necessary. We explained you have to have family permission or a court order and also suggested alternatives — other places they might get fingerprints."

Richard Lorenz' mother lives in Albuquerque, N.M., and he was buried there.

Authorities said ballistics tests show that a gun stolen from Melvin Lorenz when he was killed was used in the steakhouse killings, and that the gun used to kill the Lorenz family was also used in the steakhouse murders.

Land prices could halt loop project it." Kerry R. Sweatt, Odessa city manager, told The Reporter-Telegram Odessa and Ector County officials are equally concerned about the fate of the highway project. Odessa's initial projection for right-of-way acquisition costs was about $300,000, he said. Ector County was expected to pay about $500,000. Land prices have since inflated in Ector County, and officials there now are expecting to pay considerably more. "We don't have to pay as much as the city of Midland and Midland County because there is considerably more right of way over there, but that federal law does affect us," Sweatt said.

Sweatt was referring to a federal law which requires government bodies to inform prospective land donors they are entitled to receive full market value for the land instead.

Midland officials, at least, had anticipated making land donations a requirement for receiving approval of subdivision plats along the loop route.

"There has been some discussion between the officials of the two counties and cities, and I expect there will be some considerable discussion next week. Since it's been a four-entity project from the beginning, the four entities want to do what's best for all of us," Sweatt said.

County and city officials from the two cities currently are reluctant to estimate what the right-of-way costs will be and whether they can afford them.

Delegates plan to attend an Oct. 23 meeting in Austin with the state Highway Commission for the purpose of asking that agency to authorize the state highway department to share in the costs of right-of-way.

The highway department can pay up to 90 percent of right-of-way costs on highway projects. Even so, the highway commission approved the project with the understanding that the counties and cities would absorb all right-of-way costs.

Pearson said even if the commission grants the request, such a decision might not provide relief, since the funds would come from $7 million budgeted to the Highway Department to finance various portions of the project over the next four years.

The project, conceived by the Highway Department in the 1960s with the anticipation that Midland and Odessa would eventually merge like Dallas and Fort Worth, is expected to be completed over a 20-year period.

"I think everyone concerned really agrees that this highway facility is of the utmost importance to the development of the area since Midland is growing to the west and Odessa is growing to the east," Pearson said.

"This is a growing area which in time could come together like Dallas and Fort Worth. It is felt that the area will continue to attract new industry. That is one of the major reasons for providing a transportation corridor at this time.

"If the land is not acquired by the cities and counties, the project will lose the funds. The money would probably then be re-allocated somewhere else in the Midland-Odessa area for road and highway improvements," Pearson said.

Business and civic leaders in the area eye the project as beneficial to the commercial growth of both cities.

The Midland loop calls a road from Interstate 20 north and then along FM 868 before going back south to I-20.

The north route would entail designating a State Highway 158 extending one mile southwest of FM 1369 to intersection of Spur 492 and Loop 338 in Odessa, a distance of about 12 miles.

Pearson said it may be several weeks before the Highway Department obtains an accurate reading on what the right-of-way costs will be to the counties and cities.

"We have given the city of Midland all the right-of-way maps for the project. And Midland County has received most of the right-of-way maps for the loop. But we haven't given any right-of-way maps to Odessa or Ector County yet," he said.

Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said earlier this week right-of-way costs for the city would greatly exceed the estimated $500,000 budget, and that if the state doesn't share in the costs the council might propose raising the necessary funds through a bond issue.

even stir 'em with a stick." The afternoon crowd, too, was thick enough.

"This is such a good, fun thing here," said Brooksie Salman. "If it weren't so crowded."

A slew of folks were picking up used books of most every description, from a nickel on up to far, far less than you could buy new hardbound and many paperback books today. Most were paperbacks.

Next door, home-made bread and pastries, home-canned pickles and some exotic dishes were on sale for higher prices than most anything in the book, jewelry or Ends and Odds shops.

But prices were more than fair, said Mary Frances McGregory.

"I bought some bread-and-butter pickles" for $1.50 a pint, she said. "They're worth every penny of it."

Deaths of popes set off debate on quality of Vatican health care

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The sudden deaths of two popes within two months has touched off a debate on medical care at the Vatican.

South African heart specialist Dr. Christian Barnard, in an interview with an Italian health magazine, said recently that Pope Paul VI's life might have been saved after he suffered a heart attack Aug. 6. The pope was 80 when he died.

"An acutely sick patient is given intensive therapy," the heart transplant pioneer told the magazine. "If this was not done for Pope Paul VI, I must say the doctors' behavior was unacceptable."

Dr. Mario Fontana, Pope Paul's physician and head of the Vatican Health Services, refused to comment on the type of care given the ailing pontiff.

Professor Luigi Alema, a leading Italian neurologist, has begun pushing for complete physical checkups for newly-elected popes and a change in Vatican policy to allow autopsies after a pontiff's death.

"I think something could have been done if he (Pope Paul) had undergone a complete examination of his state of health, like the Americans and the Russians perform on their chiefs of state," said Alema.

Fontana, who served throughout Pope Paul's 15-year reign, accompanied him on his travels and organized a prostate operation inside the Apostolic Palace in 1967. Fontana often stayed at the pope's summer residence to be close to the frail pontiff.

Fontana's deputy, Renato Buzzonetti, was the first doctor to be called to Pope Paul's deathbed. Their offices occupy a floor inside a Vatican building. They do not have the equipment of modern hospitals.

Neither doctor nor the 15 members of the Vatican's health service would comment on the desirability of using extreme methods such as heart surgery to keep a pope alive.

One of them, who asked not to be identified, pointed out that Article 17 of Pope Paul's apostolic constitution implicitly ruled out an autopsy. The article provides only for the papal chamberlain to officially ascertain the pontiff's death in the presence of witnesses and to draw up the official death certificate.

"Pope John Paul died the death of modern executives, a heart attack," said Dr. Pier Luigi Prati, a heart specialist at Rome's largest hospital, San Camillo. "But it also could have been a cerebral hemorrhage ... In order to ascertain this, an autopsy would be necessary."

Pope John Paul himself alluded to his health just a day before he died. Speaking to the sick who came to his Wednesday audience, he said, "I wish you to know that your pope understands and loves you very much. The pope has been eight times to the hospital and has undergone four operations."

The four operations the pope alluded to were for tonsils (which had an effect on his voice, giving it a higher pitch), a gall bladder condition, an eye inflammation, and a lung condition.

Railroad pickets obey court order

By The Associated Press

Union pickets who virtually shut down the nation's rail transportation system for four days honored their leader's call to go back to work Saturday under a court order. Spokesmen for railroad lines across the nation said trains were beginning to roll.

"We had trains rolling within a matter of hours," Union Pacific spokesman C.R. Rockwell said in Salt Lake City. "We've got everything running that there is to run."

In Huntington, W.Va., Chessie spokesman Willis Cook said normal operations were expected to resume "very shortly. Everything has to get rolling again ... the coal mines, the shippers ... all industry is involved in a thing like this."

The strike that began July 10 by the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks against the Virginia-based Norfolk & Western Railway grew to transcontinental proportions last week as the union threw up picket lines at 73 other carriers providing N&W with mutual aid pact financial assistance.

The clerks struck in a dispute over job eliminations due to automation and union representation of supervisory personnel.

The picket lines were honored and the movement of manufactured goods, raw materials, agricultural goods and Amtrak and commuter passengers on 200,000 miles of track came to a halt in most areas.

The picket lines started coming down Friday night following U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey Robinson's temporary injunction reinforcing President Carter's back-to-work order.

Railroad officials said perishable goods would get priority as shipping resumed.

"Reports coming in through the night and this morning to (clerks union) President Fred Kroll indicate that just about all pickets have been removed," Henry Fleisher, spokesman for the union, said in Washington Saturday. "The union is in virtually complete compliance with the court order. Reports from the field indicate great satisfaction with the anti-reprisal feature of Judge Robinson's order."

The union had asked Robinson to order railroads not to take reprisals against workers who struck or refused to cross picket lines, and until the judge agreed, Kroll would not order members back to work.

Carter, using the 1926 Railway Labor Act, ordered the 4,600 union clerks back to work and set up an emergency board to study the dispute. After 60 days, the workers could resume their strike if no settlement is reached.

Robinson set Oct. 10 for a hearing on whether the injunction should be made permanent for the duration of the 60-day cooling-off period.

Carter, Kissinger head economic summit meeting

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — A week-long international economic summit conference brings President Carter, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and 2,500 of the world's business leaders to Disney World beginning Sunday.

Carter will address the opening session of the 26th World Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce Sunday night in the Magic Kingdom after an afternoon tour of the Kennedy Space Center.

The president is to tour the Space Shuttle launch facilities and present the congressional Space Medal of Honor to six astronauts — Neil A. Armstrong, Frank Borman, Charles Conrad Jr., John H. Glenn Jr., Alan B. Shepard Jr. and Virgil I. Grissom.

Grissom's medal will be presented posthumously. He was one of three astronauts killed in a fire aboard an early Apollo space capsule being tested on the launch pad Jan. 27, 1967 at the space center.

U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim will open ceremonies at Disney World, and Gov. Reubin Askew will introduce the president.

Topics to be discussed by delegates of the Paris-based organization representing businessmen in 90 countries include economic growth, efficient production, international trade and investment and communications freedom.

Cease-fire silences guns in war-torn east Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A cease-fire silenced guns in east Beirut Saturday after tank-led Syrian troops pounded a heavily populated Christian suburb in the bloody climax of three days of intensified fighting between Syrians and right-wing Lebanese militiamen.

The Christian rightist "Voice of Lebanon" radio said preliminary counts indicated at least 220 Lebanese were killed or wounded in fighting in seven districts. In one, Ashrafieh, the Greek Orthodox hospital reported having 50 bodies in its morgue.

"These have been terrible hours," Lebanese Premier Salim el-Hoss said from the Presidential Palace in Baabda, a hilltop suburb that came under heavy shelling from undetermined sources. President Elias Sarkis, Hoss and Cabinet ministers who huddled at the palace in conference all day were reported unharmed.

Syrian President Hafez Assad told Sarkis by telephone from Damascus that his troops would stop firing at 3:30 p.m., Beirut state radio reported. Although shellfire continued for a few minutes before the deadline, the after three hours.

But observers were not optimistic that the cease-fire would hold.

The eight-month-old conflict between the two civil war allies reached a new peak Saturday when Syrian troops of the Arab League peacekeeping force launched renewed assaults on the Christian suburb of Hadath. Previous fighting had been limited to exchanges of shelling and sniper fire.

The port of Beirut, where street-to-street gun battles broke out, was among the other districts engulfed in new fighting Saturday.

Reports conflicted on whether the Syrians had taken Hadath, a town of 40,000, or had pulled out after raiding rightist positions. The rightist radio described the embattled town as a "new Stalingrad" and said the militiamen were continuing to resist Syrian assaults.

For the first time, the Syrians conceded "heavy losses," blaming them on new rightist artillery stationed in the hills east and north of the capital. In one unconfirmed report, the rightist radio said a militia force in east Beirut surrounded 20 Syrians who raided a pharmacy for drugs and "wiped out" all of them.

Jim Lacy for RR panel

Midland's Jim Lacy is the Republican nominee for a seat on the Texas Railroad Commission in the Nov. 7 general election — and, backed by 30 years experience in various phases of the oil and gas business, including management, there is no doubt he is well qualified to hold the elective position he seeks.

The Railroad Commission, of course, is the state's regulatory agency for the oil and gas industry, and having an experienced petroleum engineer serving as one of the three commission members certainly should be helpful in multiple ways.

Former Gov. John Connally, who was in Midland a few days ago in behalf of Jim Lacy's campaign, said the Railroad Commission definitely needs a member with experience in the oil business. Jim Lacy, a World War II combat veteran, would fill the bill in a most credible manner.

Lacy holds a bachelor of science degree in petroleum engineering. He was associated with petroleum firms, in different capacities, for a number of years before becoming an independent oil operator in more recent years.

The 53-year old GOP nominee has said that if elected he would put his oil and gas holdings in a blind trust and disqualify himself from considering anything but administrative questions regarding companies in which he holds substantial stock.

In other words, he is ready and willing to put his talents and his expertise to the best possible use in serving his native state of Texas as a member of the important Railroad Commission.

He is thoroughly familiar with the petroleum industry and knows what it means to Texas and Texans. He also is aware of the multiple problems facing the industry, due in large degree to the barriers constantly being tossed in its path by Congress, the White House, the Washington bureaucracy and others. He is pledged to stand up and fight for the best interests of the state and its residents when and wherever possible.

He believes it is imperative that Texas maintain a strong oil and gas industry, so that it may be assured of a continuing healthy economy.

He also is a good citizen of his hometown and long has been active in its civic, church, youth welfare and cultural affairs.

Considering his qualifications and capabilities, along with his willingness to serve in public office, The Reporter-Telegram endorses Jim Lacy and urges his election to the Texas Railroad Commission in the Nov. 7 general election.

Increased charges

The Midland City Council did not increase the tax rate for next year, which drew favorable response from the taxpaying public, but it now comes forth with an ordinance increasing residential garbage collection charges by a sizeable amount.

The ordinance, which was approved on its first reading, jumps the monthly charge for residential customers from $2.75 to $4. Apartment rates will go up $1 per month per unit. Commercial rates are due a 15 percent hike.

This represents a pretty stiff increase, which is expected to attract anything but a favorable response from residents.

And it hasn't been very long since a substantial charge was imposed on persons hauling trash and garbage to the city's "depository."

The why of the new and increased fees should be explained for the people who foot the bill. It could be they are absolutely necessary. It could mean improved service.

When one councilman commented that the increases represented a "big jump," the city's director of public utilities said that Abilene is going up to $4.25 for residential users. That's all right, but it doesn't necessarily mean that Midland has to follow suit.

Anyway, the ordinance must be approved on second reading at the next council meeting before the higher charges can be put into effect.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Plight of Cambodians related

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — Americans remain strong, it has been said, because "they have no memory." But last week, a memory — worse, a nightmare — turned up in Washington in the form of a half-paralyzed former prime minister.

He held a news conference outside a locked embassy building, a sad symbol of the serene little country of Cambodia which he once ruled. Lon Nol, now a frail 66, sat in a wicker chair borrowed from a nearby furniture store, with its price tag still on it. Haltingly, he tried to explain to reporters the tragedy which has befallen his countrymen under communist rule.

Now banished to a small fruit farm in Hawaii, Lon Nol is almost a forgotten footnote in the cataclysm of Cambodia. His haunted eyes reflected the sorrow and the tragedy of what has occurred to Cambodia in the rancorous aftermath of the Vietnam War.

The Cambodians are a gentle if emotional people. They wanted only to live in peace in their lush kingdom, with its rich alluvial soil, washed by the pelting rains. But with the collapse of U.S. power in Southeast Asia, Lon Nol gave way to a fanatic Red regime which has brutalized the populace. Hundreds of thousands have been murdered by their new rulers, and other thousands have fled in terror.

Enthroned in his lawn chair, Lon Nol was flanked by his entire entourage, which has been reduced to five aides. Our associate Tom Rosenstiel attended the news conference. Lon Nol had difficulty reading a prepared statement. His voice wavered amid long pauses. At one point, he just gasped helplessly into the microphone. Subsequently, Rosenstiel repaired to Lon Nol's quarters for a private interview. The former chief of state was not staying at an expensive suite in one of Washington's luxury hotels but in a modest room at the Silver Spring Holiday Inn in suburban Maryland. Throughout the interview, they were interrupted several times by rappings on the door from representatives of the hotel management trying to clear the room for incoming guests.

Lon Nol had come to power back in 1970 as head of the once placid Cambodia and had accepted multimillion-dollar aid from the United States in exchange for the surreptitious use of the country for American-based attacks on the Viet Cong.

Lon Nol was a protege of the Nixon administration. One of his first U.S. visitors in Cambodia was Gen. Alexander Haig who was later to cope with the emotional upheavals of the last days of Richard Nixon. At the meeting between Haig and Lon Nol, according to U.S. aides, the Cambodian ruler unexpectedly broke down and sobbed. He told Haig in an agonized voice that he lacked the understanding to confront his country's problems or to muster the support of the Cambodian people.

American intelligence cables in 1971 reflect the deteriorating situation. They quoted high-placed Cambodian sources as saying "the recent military reverses appeared to have caused Lon Nol to take leave of his senses." Other secret cables to Washington reported that the prime minister's top officials had urged him to "relinquish active direction" of the government.

State Department officials, however, informed us that, although they

CHARLEY REESE

Was there a secret deal between Carter, Sadat?

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

Charley Reese

ORLANDO, Fla. — In the midst of the euphoria over the Camp David summit, I am bothered by what President Carter has not told the American people and the Congress.

And what he has not told us is what kind of deal he has made secretly with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

If you examine the agreement signed by Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, you can see that Sadat made most of the concessions. Except for some minor modifications, Begin's agreements on the West Bank and the Sinai are basically what he offered Sadat months ago.

Months ago, Sadat rejected them, so what made him change his mind?

It's possible that events that have nothing to do with us influenced Sadat but I doubt if this is the case. If you wish to believe the story for public consumption that Sadat was influenced by Carter's eloquence and goodness, feel free. I don't.

Both Sadat and Begin are smarter than Carter. They are also tougher. They are both revolutionaries who have survived bad and dangerous times because they are very shrewd and very gutsy guys. The fact that they both want peace has nothing to do with the point I am making. They both want peace on the best possible terms for their respective countries.

Sadat is putting his life on the line. He is not the kind of man who would do this just to make Jimmy Carter's re-election a little easier. He is certainly not concerned about the welfare of the Israelis.

Begin is concerned about disengaging the Egyptians from the rest of the Arab bloc. Egypt is the only significant military power among the Arab nations. If Egypt can be persuaded to withdraw from the conflict, Israel can breathe relatively easier. No other Arab nation or bloc of Arab nations is a real threat.

To get down to the reality, though, you have to disregard the rhetoric. It is in the best interest of both sides for everyone to believe that to fail at the negotiations means war. American journalists especially love this line because it adds so much melodrama to the situation. It is actually horse feathers.

To fail at the negotiating table will neither add nor subtract to the military power of either side and that is what determines if there will be war or peace. The balance of military power will not change in the foreseeable future regardless of the outcome of the negotiations.

For that reason, it is Carter, not Begin and Sadat, who needs peace in a hurry. Carter has opted to use the Middle East as his principle ploy to prove that he is not incompetent. He has to do this before the 1980 election.

Both Begin and Sadat can survive a failed negotiation despite the pompous rhetoric of American commentators. If they fail, Begin still has all the territory and Sadat can re-embrace all his Arab allies. Each will blame the other for the failure.

But Carter will have egg on his face. There is no such thing as fair play in politics and Carter's critics will crucify him as a bungler. Both Sadat and Begin know this and that's why, at Camp David, the pressure was on Carter, not them, to produce an agreement.

And, friend, you can bet a whole month's pay that if those two shrewd old warriors gave Carter what he wanted, they both demanded and got their pound of flesh.

I don't especially object to Carter bribing them both to sign a peace treaty. After all, bribery has been the basic principle of American foreign policy since 1945, but I am curious to learn how many of our tax dollars Carter thinks his re-election is worth.

NICK THIMMESCH

Inspector Stein and mystery of declining dollar

WASHINGTON — For many months we have been hit with daily messages on the dire slump of the Almighty American Dollar. It's as if the Statue of Liberty were sinking in New York Harbor or the Grand Canyon filling with silt or the last bald eagle expiring.

Most souls cannot understand why a strong nation like ours suffers this daily monetary indignity. Now comes one of my favorite economists — those fellows who search for black cats in dark cellars — Herbert Stein, to assure us all that the case of the declining dollar is indeed a mystery.

There are many suspects, he admits, but the case against any one of them is not convincing, and he includes inflation, his prime suspect, in this company.

Writing in the current issue of the American Enterprise Institute's "Economist," Stein, once chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, says there is even a puzzle about what is meant by the decline of the dollar.

Headlines and newscasts all focus on how the exchange rate of the dollar against the Swiss franc has dropped 31 percent during the first nine months of 1978, against the Japanese yen by 30 percent and the German mark, by 14 percent. But the dollar has gained on the Brazilian cruzeiro by 21 percent; has kept even with the Mexican peso, and increased by 3.5 percent on the dollar of Canada — our biggest trading partner. Altogether, against 15 foreign currencies, the dollar has dropped about 9 percent.

Stein believes the seriousness of this affront is exaggerated by officials of several governments, whose frowns are quickly translated into news copy. He acknowledges the dip is a problem, however, one which signals apprehension over the U.S. inflation rate (now about 9 percent), and could become grave if hysteria develops and our foreign trade is hurt.

The leading explanation for our dollar trouble is the failure of the U.S. to develop an energy policy restraining imports. This rationale is popular with President Carter and Europeans, particularly the Germans, who find it difficult to compete against the cheapened dollar in foreign markets.

The argument goes that oil exporters accumulate more dollars than they can spend in the U.S. so they sell them for other currency, thus devaluing the buck. The trouble with this explanation, Stein says, is that it hinges on how many dollars the oil nations want to hold. In 1977, OPEC nations transferred 60 percent of the dollars they got from the U.S. enough to make a difference but not to explain all.

Nor is the balance-of-trade deficit the single culprit. Stein points out the amount of dollars going to foreigners because of our trade deficit is still relatively small.

Then there is the explanation that the U.S. has printed too much money, thus cheapening it, but the latest data available shows that the money supply rose less in the U.S. than in Switzerland, Japan, Germany and other nations, where the dollar fell.

So the mystery continues. There is the theory that as the world economy matures, some investors diversify their portfolios for safety's sake, and this depresses the dollar. But this might be a case of the dog chasing its tail. If the dollar starts to dip, investors then diversify to cut their losses.

As an economic sleuth, Stein is most suspicious of inflation and the expectation that the U.S. inflation rate will continue to rise. Price levels in the U.S. have risen sharper than in Switzerland, Germany and Japan, where the dollar's decline was greatest. Again, it's not the entire explanation because while U.S. inflation is 2 percent greater than Japan's, the dollar fell 20 percent against the yen in the 15-month period studied.

So, confronted with explanation and theories, Stein concludes: "Probably the simplest explanation is that the dollar has declined to its present level because people expect it to decline even further."

The rest of the world thinks that those crazy Americans are going to allow their inflation to get worse. "In the winter of 1977-78 there was not only a rise in the U.S. inflation rate," Stein wrote, "but also a growing belief that the U.S. was firmly committed to an inflationary policy for the future."

Another pessimistic expectation about the U.S. is that we may continue to run a large trade deficit, despite a decline in the real exchange rate of the dollar. In other words, even when the dollar is devaluated as it is now, we still go in the hole on foreign trade.

At that, Stein wonders if we don't fret too much about the decline of the dollar, which is really the devaluation of the dollar, an event the U.S. government caused in 1971 when the dollar was made inconvertible and therefore fell.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

The Texas Budget: everyone wants a second helping of this pie

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Just mention the word "budget," and everyone's head starts to droop a little.

But there are a few things more important and admittedly more tedious, than the state budget — since that's the way the fiscal pie, be it large or small, gets cut up.

As in many other things, the Legislature has the final word — since the 181 men and women of the House and Senate are the ones who ultimately approve the appropriations bill, which one member has called "the only thing we ever had to pass."

Determining how to cut up Texas' multi-billion fiscal pastry is a lengthy, involved and frequently acrimonious task, and the job (which won't be completed until next spring or early summer) is well underway.

One of the principal roles is that of the Legislative Budget Board, which is charged with drafting a budget for lawmakers to use as a basis for their efforts.

Next meeting of the LBB, which is composed of House and Senate members (and Speaker Bill Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby), is Friday (Oct. 6), when requests from various agencies will be presented by the LBB staff.

Three meetings already have been held — and three more are scheduled, with the proposed budget due to go to the printers after the Dec. 1 session.

While the final requests from state agencies haven't been completely totaled up as yet (at least at the time of writing), LBB Assistant Director Jim Oliver reports most of the requests have come in "about as expected" — although there have been some surprises.

Here's how the proposals, as preliminarily totaled, stack up compared to years past.

The "Article I" agencies, meaning the courts, are asking for $52,800,000 for the next biennium — compared to $38,000,000 requested two years ago. The courts estimate their current spending at $44,000,000 (one of the surprises Oliver noted).

For the "Article II" group, the welfare and rehabilitation agencies the total request for the 1980-81 period is $5.7 billion — compared to $4.5 billion two years ago (and estimated spending for the 1978-79 biennium of $3.9 billion).

Totals for "Article III" agencies, administrative and executive, don't reflect the governor's office and comptroller's office requests (the first still to be received but are approximately $4.9 billion, compared to $5.0 billion two years ago, and estimated expenditures of $3.9 billion for the current two years.

Last to come in are the higher education agencies (Article IV), but since those agencies requested $8.7 billion two years ago, there will be some substantial requests there.

Members of the governor's budget office are working on a proposed budget (under procedures adopted several years ago, GBO and LBB went to joint hearings on agency requests) — although the budget proposed by one governor generally gets scant courtesy from lawmakers.

This summer, following his defeat of Dolph Briscoe in the Democratic primary, Attorney General John Hill announced he would have a representative at the budget hearings in the person of Harry Ledbetter, who has been monitoring the operation. Ledbetter says some reports will be forthcoming — including one on better control on use of federal funds — since agencies in 1977 spent $153,000,000 more in federal funds than expected. Hill also called a meeting with 30 major agency chiefs to stress his call for a hold-the-line budget — and later expressed his unhappiness with the Department of Human Resources when that agency brought in a request for 68 percent more than before.

That sort of result, however, is typical of the process — and Human Resources undoubtedly will end up with less than it would like, and less than it has requested.

Governors, of course, may veto appropriations items (Briscoe vetoed nothing from the last spending bill) — but can't reduce items, although that power has been urged for them many times in the past.

That leaves it up to the House Appropriations Committee, Senate Finance Committee and the 10 House-Senate conferees to draft the spending measure.

In the past, there have been complaints that the conferees were the ones who really wrote the bill — but recently, they have been more restricted on adding and deleting items.

This year, budget writers are working under the shadow of "tax revolt," and despite the requests for increases, agencies appear much aware of the fact that they do need, at least for appearance's sake, to hold down spending where possible.

"The threat of Proposition 13 is perceived as very much a real threat," one agency official commented.

"Whether or not it is a real threat..." he added, "I don't know."

But no one seems really willing to push the issue — and it may be up to lawmakers to give the answer to that question when they come to put together the budget that will determine state spending for the coming two years.

Give Amtrak this contract

By ART BUCHWALD The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — In case you don't keep up with these things, the latest Pentagon toy being developed by the U.S. Air Force is the MX, which is a method of moving Minuteman missiles through miles of underground tunnels so that the Soviets won't know where they are. We're talking about $30 or $40 billion if the Air Force gets to build the system, which the general in charge describes as being like the "shell game where you have one pea and three walnuts."

Nobody wants to fool the Soviets more than I do when it comes to pinpointing our missiles. But the cost of the project seems so great that I think we should seek out alternate ways of accomplishing the same thing.

At the moment the contracts for developing the "MX shell game" have been awarded to the Boeing and the Martin Marietta companies. I believe the Air Force made a mistake in turning over the problem to them.

The company which should have gotten it is Amtrak, which runs most of the passenger railroads in the United States. The beauty of turning it over to the Amtrak people is that they already have the equipment and the know-how to fool anyone when it comes to figuring out where one of their trains is at any given time.

Let us say you put a missile on an Amtrak train in one of the underground tunnels. Then the Air Force puts out a schedule at which site the train will be, on what day, at what time. They would make sure that the Soviets got a copy of the schedule as part of the SALT agreement.

Obviously the train would never be where the schedule said it would be, and the Soviets would go nuts trying to figure out where the missile train was. It would accomplish the same goal as the MX program at half the cost.

If the Soviets protested that we were not living up to the SALT agreement, the Pentagon could invite them to send over their top generals and have them ride on an Amtrak train to prove the Air Force has no control over how the United States runs its railroads.

Once the Soviet command realizes that it could never depend on knowing where a missile train is going to be, it would be deterred from launching a first strike on our Minuteman sites.

The advantage of the plan is that the money Amtrak received for this defense contract could be spent on new equipment and rails for its civilian passenger service above ground and we would no longer have to subsidize this mode of transportation.

When I made this suggestion to an Air Force general, he had one major objection to it. "The trouble is that if we gave the contract to Amtrak, not only would the Soviets be fooled, but we ourselves would have no idea where the missiles were."

"I thought of that," I said. "What you could do is set up a hotline between Amtrak and Air Force missile headquarters. It could be attached to a loudspeaker and an Amtrak announcer would man it 24 hours a day. He could say, 'Missile launcher 104 scheduled to arrive in Cheyenne, Wyo. at 11 a.m. will now be arriving on track 9 at 4 p.m. this afternoon.' Or 'Due to a derailment outside of Philadelphia, 'The Minuteman Limited' scheduled to leave tonight for Amarillo, Texas, has been canceled until further notice.' Or 'Amtrak is sorry to announce that its 'Nuclear Comet' which was to stop in Baton Rouge has now been diverted to Denver because of inclement weather.' Amtrak would keep you up to date on every change in its schedule."

"It might work," the general said. "It certainly fits our one pea and three walnut strategy. The only thing that bothers me is that we've told Congress the MX system will cost $30 billion. If we now go back and say we only need $15 billion for it, the Air Force will lose all its credibility on the Hill."

Several solutions to air traffic problems 'obvious, not difficult'

(Gene York is a captain flying for a major U.S. commercial airline.)

By GENE YORK Special to The Los Angeles Times

The Federal Aviation Administration, like so many other bureaucracies, seems unwilling or unable to overcome its own inertia until confronted with a disaster.

How long will it take the FAA, for example, to learn that jetliners and small, general-aviation aircraft can be a lethal mixture of traffic? For a Cessna 150 in the same landing approach system as a Boeing 747 or DC-10 is much like a golf cart driving on the Hollywood Freeway. This mixture of fast and slow planes is obviously preposterous, yet the FAA continues to allow it.

The attempt to blend incompatible airplane traffic is far more hazardous than that comparison may suggest, however, for it occurs in three-dimensional air space.

Further, the pilot of a Boeing 747 cannot simply avoid collision by braking to a stop. His machine is incredibly heavy, frequently weighing in excess of 300 tons, and such a mass cannot be maneuvered adroitly at normal approach and departure speeds.

There are several obvious solutions to the continual threat of midair collisions between airline traffic and general-aviation aircraft. One is to ban light aircraft from the high-density airspace immediately surrounding airports served by airlines. Golf carts, after all, are legally barred from freeways or surface streets. The FAA should not find it difficult to do this.

Failing this, however, the government should at least improve the air-traffic control system that now exists.

Currently, aircraft are prevented — with terrible exceptions — from colliding with each other in two ways. The first method is known as the see-and-be-seen concept. Pilots simply avoid collision by watching out for one another and taking evasive action when necessary.

Unfortunately, this method is fraught with inherent weaknesses. Pilots cannot see in all directions about their aircraft. It is quite possible for the pilots of two airplanes to be staring through their windshields and never see one another until after the collision. And then all they will see is the earth rising to meet them.

Unfortunately, hundreds of passengers must helplessly take the same plunge to death.

See-and-be-seen? The concept is without merit for high-speed jets operating in high-density traffic areas. The supporters of the see-and-be-seen method doubtless have never tried to peer through the windshield of a jetliner into blinding haze or smog. When the sun is low on the horizon, forward visibility can be nonexistent. And yet the pilot is still expected to see and avoid all other traffic.

The current air-traffic control system does offer radar advisories, however. When a controller sees on his radar screen that two aircraft are on a collision course, he notifies the airline pilot that someone else may soon be intruding upon his airspace. Unhappily, this intruder may not be noticed in time for the airline pilot to avoid collision. And even if it is, air traffic is often so heavy around airports that a pilot is unable to interrupt the frenetic "chatter" on the radio to get more details about the potential collision.

Voice communication simply involves too much room for error, misjudgment and tragedy. The collision last year of two fully loaded 747s at Tenerife in the Canary Islands, occurred as a result of misinterpreted voice communications.

If light aircraft are not banned from major air terminals, the next best thing would be to equip all jetliners with independent collision-avoidance systems.

The Air Line Pilots Association has been pleading with the FAA to require this piece of electronics aboard every commercial air carrier. The basic technology is available now. What few bugs remain to be worked out would obviously be worked out faster were the FAA not so reluctant to take the initiative.

A collision-avoidance system is an electronic device installed on the instrument panel of an airplane that can sense the threat of nearby aircraft that may be on a collision course — and warn the airline pilot to take timely evasive action. The system's computerized brain can tell him which way to turn and whether to climb or descend to avoid the conflict. Most important, this occurs even though the pilots and air-traffic controllers have yet to detect (either by sight or by radar) the potential mid-air collision.

A collision-avoidance system, however, requires that all aircraft operating in the vicinity of a major airport be equipped with transponder — a device that enables the speed, altitude and path of an aircraft to be electronically measured by both air-traffic control on the ground and the collision-avoidance system that most airline pilots insist should be installed in all jetliners.

This is hardly an unreasonable demand. In fact, most light aircraft are already equipped with these transponders.

In other words, both the technology and the hardware is available to implement an airborne collision-avoidance system in this nation's airplanes.

Unless the FAA listens now to the industry that it was created to foster and protect, it must be considered at least an unintentional conspirator in every mid-air collision to come. And there will be more.

POSITIVE THINKING

'Clean mind' works peacefully, efficiently

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

There are many opportunities for crisis in a city as large as New York, and it is not surprising that this area is occasionally the victim of power failure. I remember a time in the 1950s when the lights of Manhattan suddenly went out; a section that usually blazes with electricity became as dark as pitch.

Engineers frantically searched for the cause of the power failure and soon found its source. Can you imagine why the lights went off? The engineers found that the power had failed because a little foreign body as small as the end of a man's finger had become wedged under a vital contact point in one of the power houses.

In other words, a little bit of dirt was able to block off electric power in a large section of the largest city in the world.

If a thing like that can happen, imagine the damage a little dirt in an important contact point in a human mind can do. Living in today's world, it's very easy for any of us to pick up a wide variety of "foreign bodies" in our minds. As a result, off goes our personal power. Here's a suggestion for avoiding such a situation.

The average man, before he goes to bed, usually empties his pockets onto his dresser, desk or night table. And most of us, in those few moments, try to get rid of all the miscellaneous junk — scraps of note paper, ticket stubs, cards — we pick up during the day. Personally, I always try to get rid of as much as I can; only women are lucky enough to have handbags with apparently unlimited capacities.

I occurred to me one night while doing this that it would be a good thing to empty my mind as I empty my pockets.

During the day we pick up many mental odds and ends: a little worry, a little resentment, a few annoyances, some irritations, perhaps even some guilt reactions. It is important that these should be drained off every night, for unless they are eliminated, they accumulate. Then they can interfere with the really efficient opera-

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A job well done

To the Editor:

Dear Midland:

When you do something, you always do it right. I had the pleasure of attending the Captain and Tenille concert at the new Chaparral Center. It could not have been any better.

Toni Tenille said the sound was so good that Midland could look forward to many more big names in the future. She emphasized that it was one of the few buildings in the country where the artist could hear himself perform.

A final note, for more than twenty years Midlanders have had to drive to Odessa for many events. Now, it will be a pleasure to return the favor in your fine, new facility.

Good 'coverage'

To the Editor:

The sky is the limit in Midland and The Midland Reporter-Telegram is on Top! As a representative from Lee, I would like to thank you not only for the excellent news coverage but also for the fine 'book coverage.'

Book covers are important! And if you don't think so, come to Lee sometime and see all of the doodling on your covers — this saves our taxpayers' money. Your design is refreshing. A look at the comics helps to break the monotony of the day.

Again, I would like you to know how thankful we are for your support of our great school. "Thanks to you, it's working."

Action needed

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter to inform you of an incident that happened to me at the Midland airport. Never being on a plane, I didn't know the standard procedures of the airports. After receiving my tickets, I went to the gate where I was to catch my plane. They informed me that I was to remove all the metal from my pockets. I went through this cage-like thing and picked up my packages. They rushed me so much that I completely forgot about the possessions that were in my pockets.

As soon as I reached Dallas, I immediately called Texas International at the Midland airport and reported the incident. Texas International was very cooperative at this time and assured me that my possessions would be returned to me on my return.

Upon my return two weeks later they informed me they knew nothing of this. I went to several different people and they informed me they have nothing to do with security. After talking to security, Texas International, the City Department, and the Better Business Bureau, they couldn't help me. Well, I would like to know who can.

True colors seen

To the Editor:

Once again, Bob Krueger showed his true colors by voting for a measure that could damage the political clout of Texas. By voting in favor of giving the District of Columbia voting representation in Congress, Krueger hopes to cancel out the votes cast by Texas representatives.

Two Washington, D.C., is entitled to two U.S. senators, then why not allow Houston, Dallas, and San Antonio two senators apiece? These cities are much larger than the District of Columbia.

I fear that the success of this constitutional amendment will merely perpetuate the drift toward socialism that our country is now experiencing. The northeast is thriving on federal handouts, and Washington, D.C., in particular, is now receiving more federal dollars than any other city, except New York City.

Giving Washington, D.C., two senators would really be giving the federal bureaucrats two senators. Senator Tower voted against D.C. representation, and I hope that Texans remember this important difference between the two senatorial candidates when they choose this November.

"vacuum cleaner" prayer: "Dear Lord, by the power of Thy spirit, draw now from the unseen crannies and crevices of my soul the dust of the world which has settled there."

Try using that "vacuum cleaner prayer" for yourself. The resulting sense of cleanness will add to your inner peace and to your effectiveness as well.

Another method of cleaning out your thoughts is to "reach" figuratively and imaginatively into your mind, as though you could put your fingers into your brain and pull out unhappy thoughts one by one. As you imagine yourself doing this, affirm: "I am now taking out and throwing out that fear, that prejudice, that resentment, that impure recollection."

Then, when the mind is thus emptied, continue to affirm, "I am putting into my mind creative and dynamic thoughts. I am filling my mind with God's goodness and power."

By cleaning out your mind in this manner, you will find peace and also new mental efficiency.

Grazing land aid approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation authorizing a 20-year, $360 million program to improve the condition of public grazing lands was approved by the Senate on Saturday. The bill also sets up a new grazing fee system.

The House passed a somewhat different measure on July 10 and a House-Senate conference committee will work out the differences between the two.

The Senate vote was 59-7. Backers of the new fee system, based on the economic value of land to the user, said it was designed to settle a debate over grazing fees that has been going on since they were first established in 1906.

But Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., speaking for opponents, said the proposed fees would not yield the fair market value of the land and amounted to "a subsidy the United States has no business indulging itself in."

The new fee system is established on a seven-year trial basis.

The Senate bill is less strict than the one approved by the House in that it requires environmental impact statements before improvements such as fences, cattle guards and stock ponds could be created on public lands.

The House called for completion of such a statement before any improvement causing an environmental impact could be carried out. Improvement having no environmental impact would not require a statement.

The Senate bill makes no distinction among projects as to whether they would have an environmental impact. It allows work to be done without an impact statement unless the secretary of the interior decides one is needed.

The Senate also rejected a House-approved provision permitting the Bureau of Land Management to kill excess wild horses and burros if there is not enough demand from people wanting to adopt them.

Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., expressed hope that the conference committee would adopt some provision to deal with the wild horses and burros, which he said are causing environmental damage.

"Sentiment has got caught up in this problem to focus on the wrong concern," Hansen told the Senate.

New spending year starts today

WASHINGTON (AP) — You've tooted no horns, worn no hats and heard no one playing "Auld Lang Syne," so you know the new year is still three months off. Right?

Wrong. The arrival of October marked the beginning of a new spending and taxing year for the federal government.

While your calendar shows three months remaining in 1978, the congressional calendar says otherwise. By order of the Congressional Budget Act, federal bookkeepers and bureaucrats are turning their calendar to a new year — known in government circles as fiscal 1979.

The fiscal year begins Sunday, Oct. 1, and runs through Sept. 30, 1979.

Only time will tell exactly how fruitful the new fiscal year will be, despite the increasing numbers of congressmen resolving — with the Carter administration — to turn over a new leaf by doing more to hold the line on federal spending.

From a budget standpoint, one measure of success at this time next year would be the size of the fiscal 1979 deficit — the extent to which the government spends more money than it takes in.

During fiscal 1979, Congress wants the government to spend $487.5 billion, collect $448.7 billion in taxes, and operate at a budget deficit of no more than $38.8 billion.

Edgar Bergen dies Saturday at age 75

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Edgar Bergen, who brought life to a wooden dummy named Charlie McCarthy, died in his sleep Saturday at the age of 75.

Less than two weeks ago, Bergen announced that he and McCarthy, a top-hatted, monocled dummy, were quitting show business after a 56-year partnership.

A spokesman for Caesar's Palace Hotel here said Bergen died at about noon Saturday. The cause of death was not determined.

"He was having his last show business engagement before retiring," said Harry Wald, a hotel spokesman. Bergen was to have played Caesar's until October 11.

On Sept. 21, Bergen and his irrepressible wooden partner met reporters in Los Angeles to announce the end of their careers. "How can you retire," the dummy asked Bergen, "when you haven't worked since you met me?"

When asked why he planned to retire, Bergen said: "Because I get tired of working and saving money and sharing it with those who didn't."

After the Las Vegas engagement, Bergen planned appearances in Cleveland and Cincinnati in December. After that, Charlie McCarthy would move into the Smithsonian Institution, he said.

Hawaiian campaign ends this week

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii's most expensive and bitterly fought political campaign ends this week when Democrats decide a gubernatorial primary contest between Gov. George Ariyoshi and Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi on Saturday.

The two sides have spent more than $2 million while debating such issues as overcrowding on the islands. Charges of racism, organized crime influence and bribery have also figured in the campaign.

It is a rematch of a battle four years ago between Ariyoshi, 52, who ascended to the governor's seat by way of the lieutenant governorship, and Fasi, 58, the political head of the county called home by 80 percent of the state's nearly 1 million residents.

In 1974, Ariyoshi edged Fasi by less than 10,000 votes and went on to rout a Republican challenger to become the nation's first Japanese-American governor.

Republicans are given little chance again this year. Hawaii has fewer than 39,000 registered Republicans compared to 242,000 Democrats. More than 80,000 voters list themselves as independents.

Ariyoshi is identified with long-entrenched Democratic powers of the state who are allied with big business and labor. He talks of his role as "bringing the people of the community together," and claims to have worked "quietly and effectively" behind the scenes.

He has never lost a political race. Fasi, on the other hand, has billed himself as a maverick populist and accuses Ariyoshi of being "indecisive and unimaginative."

Fasi tried three times for the mayoralty over 16 years before being elected in 1968.

The Japanese-American vote is seen as critical in the election, since although that ethnic group makes up only 28 percent of the population, it accounts for 42 percent of registered Democrats.

Ariyoshi says he has "never attempted to campaign on the issue of race," but says "the other side is very subtly raising the issue."

Fasi says polls indicate Ariyoshi will receive most of the Japanese-American vote, while he, in turn, expects to get most of the "haole" (Caucasian) vote.

"But I'm hoping people will disregard the color of skin and look at the color of records," Fasi says, "because there is no question I'd beat (Ariyoshi) hands down."

Ariyoshi has developed a policy of "preferred growth" for the islands. The plan's central focus is limiting population growth by discouraging new residents — but not tourists.

Six Nazis pelted by angry California crowd

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — An angry crowd of 800 persons pelted six self-styled Nazis with cans, fruit and pieces of wood Saturday, refusing to let them enter a park for a rally.

There were at least three major scuffles during the 20-minute melee as obscenity-shouting protesters charged into the small group of Nazis, only to be driven back by billyclub-swinging policemen.

At least twice, some of the Nazis, who were wearing swastikas, charged into the crowd swinging placards. Police pushed them back.

At least five of the demonstrators, mostly young people, were wrestled to the ground and taken away in police cars.

The brawl ended when police brought in a paddy wagon and hustled the small group of Nazis, which included one woman, into the vehicle.

The Nazis had obtained a permit to hold a rally in the downtown park.

But a second group, known as the Sonoma County People for Human Justice, had a permit for a counter-demonstration at a park across the street. About 30 persons in the second group were at the scene but did not participate in the violence.

IT PAYS TO CAULK

Caulking is one of many ways to save on heating and cooling costs. Drafts, water seepage, and dust infiltration can be effectively prevented with proper caulking. A check of the outside of the home will reveal where this type of job may be necessary.

When inspecting a home for possible caulking jobs, watch for places where air can leak out or in. These areas include seams between chimneys and siding; the place where wood meets the foundation; and around door and window frames. Other important places to check include dryer vents; the area where storm windows meet window frames; exterior electrical outlets; seams between porch and house; and where the siding meets corner trim. Any other cracks, holes, or openings should also get a caulking job.

It pays to use a good quality caulk. As in most other things, you get what you pay for. The cheaper caulks will shrink, crack, and dry out in a couple years. The better types — and they don't cost too much more — will do a better, more efficient job, and last longer. Many builders recommend urethane-caulk as being the best. Caulking is a relatively easy job and any one can do it.

Burglary: It happens to one in every 40 residents

By GUY SULLIVAN
R-T Staff Writer

A burglary is committed every 10 seconds across the nation.

In Texas during 1977, a burglary was committed every 2 1/2 minutes, according to the Department of Public Safety in Austin.

In fact, burglary presents a "serious enforcement problem made more difficult" by lack of sufficient manpower to fight the crime, according to a 1977 Department of Public Safety crime report.

The average value loss in each burglary in Texas during 1977 was $510, for a total loss that year of $103,828,116, according to the DPS report.

Your chances of becoming a burglary victim in Midland and Odessa are one out of 40 in a year's time, according to police in both cities.

Burglary, "the unlawful entry into a building to commit a felony," is a major problem in the Permian Basin.

However, citizens can take steps to protect their possessions and homes, according to authorities.

Despite an increasing dollar loss recorded for Midland burglaries and similar crimes in the last three years, police said there has been little or no increase in the number of burglaries reported locally.

Some authorities have described burglary as the most frequently committed crime in the United States.

A burglary expert, former New York City policeman Robert McDermott, described burglary as the nation's second-fastest growing trade within the "crime industry."

The veteran lawman said about 75 percent of the nation's burglaries are committed by force. "It's obvious that most locks are no match for the 'pickman,'" said McDermott.

In the 18-county region encompassing the Permian Basin, the DPS said the crime of burglary in 1977 increased by 8.1 percent over 1976. "I'm pretty sure burglaries went up there in 1975 and 1976, too," said Cal Killingsworth, manager of the DPS Unreported Crime Reporting Bureau in Austin.

However, "Burglary has decreased (in this area) during the first four months of this year, compared to last year," he said. "Instead of burglary, I'd say theft is the most frequently committed crime. Here in Texas (statewise), burglaries are increasing."

He pointed out, in 1975, Texas lawmen said citizens reported 203,821 burglaries. In 1976, the figure dropped to 193,280, but, in 1977, 205,761 burglaries statewide were recorded.

Last year, he said Texans had 1,603 chances out of 100,000 to become a burglary victim. In 1976, the chances were 1,547 out of 100,000.

An indication of the size of the problem can be seen comparing the cost to Midland burglary victims in 1975, 1976 and 1977 using police data.

In 1975, burglaries accounted for a total of $235,354 in stolen property. In 1976, the figure was $241,519, and in 1977 the figure was $261,123.

Midland police officers said they recovered $50,242 worth of property from burglaries in 1975; $72,562 in 1976, and $139,732 in 1977.

Odessa Police Department officers said 1,159 burglaries were reported there in 1976 and 1,154 in 1977. Of these, 52 percent were described as residential burglaries, and 48 percent were commercial or business types.

Sgt. Sidney Lyle of the department's crime prevention unit said,

"The biggest error people are making is not locking their doors and windows."

He said it's rare when a burglar must kick in a door or break out a window to gain entry because "In most cases they just have to turn the lock. It'll open. One out of four residential burglaries in Odessa result from an unlocked door."

Sgt. E.M. "Lalo" Camarillo of the Midland Police Department's crime prevention unit agreed the same figure could be true for the Tall City, too.

Lyle said apartments pose a special problem "as here in Odessa they seem to be vulnerable because many are left unlocked."

He said burglaries in Odessa — and across the nation — are often committed by persons under 21 years of age and who live within six blocks of where the offense occurs. "They often 'work' in their own neighborhoods."

Professional thieves prefer going after possessions of significant value, he said. However, heroin addicts often break into stores and merely seek petty cash, according to Lyle.

He said most burglaries in Odessa result in an average loss per victim of $400 in property. "Chances of becoming a burglary victim in Odessa are one in 40 during the course of a year," said Sgt. Lyle.

Camarillo said the same is roughly true of Midland.

Captain B.D. Ray of the Midland Police Department said the city experienced 1,245 burglaries in 1976, compared to 827 similar offenses in 1977.

"I think a lot of the earlier burglaries involved stolen CB radios. People should park their cars in lighted areas at night," he said.

He credited the Midland Police Department for a decrease in auto burglaries and others between 1976 and 1977.

"In 1977 we had 225 reported auto burglaries, but in 1976 we had 506. Only reason for the burglary decrease I can think of is good police work. We have more patrol officers on the streets, too."

However, he said Midland experienced 437 burglaries in the first six months of 1978, compared to 429 in 1977.

"Burglaries take place because people aren't taking the proper precautions," Camarillo said.

He recommended people lock the doors of their vehicles and their homes. Camarillo also said he wants to do more home burglary prevention surveys before a burglary has been committed.

"Here in the last four months I've been called in to evaluate homes, but only after the crime has already been committed. But our emphasis is to inspect homes before a burglary happens," he said.

He said thieves are hitting two homes to one commercial business in Midland. "A lot of people are forgetting to lock their doors and windows. People are leaving too many possessions outdoors. That's poor judgement," he said.

"Some people are going to have to learn the hard way," Camarillo said.

Agencies offer several home protection services

Midland and Odessa police officers said there are ways to protect homes and property from being burglarized.

Established programs such as Operation I.D., Neighborhood Watch and Safe and Sound Home Security approaches are three deterrents available through law enforcement agencies in both communities.

Each year there are thousands of illegal entries into homes across the nation. But such incidents can be prevented by taking precautions, according to authorities.

Lawmen said people should try to make forced entry difficult, keep valuables in a safety deposit box and permanently mark other possessions with driver's license number. The marking makes the merchandise easier to identify as stolen, and therefore, harder for the burglar to sell.

Officers also suggest citizens check their door locks, as some can be opened in seconds with a credit card. Windows and sliding doors should be securely locked at all times, too, according to authorities.

They also suggest not hiding keys outside a house. Garage doors should be locked at all times, too, they added.

Operation I.D. (Identification) is one area program to help prevent burglaries. People can come into the local police department and mark their valuables with their own driver's license number, so their property can be traced easily and identified as theirs.

They then can display a sticker which tells would-be burglars that their property has been marked.

Citizens also can borrow an engraving tool from local police agencies, and sometimes service clubs are active in such programs.

Another deterrent of burglary is to organize a Neighborhood Watch group, said officers.

Such groups organize to protect neighborhoods against potential burglars. Neighbors agree to keep an eye on each other's property and to report a suspicious activity to the police.

Citizens may call local law enforcement agencies for assistance in starting and maintaining such groups.

The Safe and Sound Home Security program involves nothing more than following up on common sense recommendations of law enforcement agen-

The Texas Crime Prevention Institute at Southwest Texas State University in San Marcos puts out several pamphlets with specific suggestions for preventing burglaries. The pamphlets are available at both the Midland and Odessa police departments' crime prevention unit offices.

Drop didn't please all

Despite a 20-cent drop in the tax rate, not all Odessa residents were happy with the $20.3 million budget adopted by the Odessa City Council Friday.

Councilmen set the tax rate at 89 cents per $100 assessed valuation for next year, a 20-cent decrease from the $1.09 rate in use this year.

Some residents, however, wanted the councilmen to throw out the controversial re-valuation of city property, which had sharply increased assessed valuations.

Councilmen strongly defended the new budget, noting it had been trimmed from more than $27 million, and expressed their belief in the need for an on-going re-valuation program for the city.

Statistical report shows impressive rig count

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — The statistical report on domestic oil and gas operations the first eight months of the year is impressive.

September figures have not been finalized but should bolster the eight-month totals in that a 2,349 Sept. 18 count for rotary drilling rigs in use was the highest weekly average since late 1958.

The weekly average of 2,224 for January-August, however, was the highest since a 2,429 average was posted in 1957.

The comparable 1977 count was 2,002. In 1976 it was 1,658.

Well completions the first eight months averaged 3,804, the highest level since the 1962 average of 3,848. Last year's completions averaged 3,668 a month, up from 3,323 a year earlier.

In boosting the well completions pace, operators drilled an average of 18.1 million feet of hole each month during the January-August period, the highest level since an 18.5 million foot average was recorded in 1957. The 1977 average was 16.9 million.

Domestic drilling activities peaked in the mid-1950s. The all-time high for rotary drilling rig activity was set in 1955 when the industry had a weekly average of 2,687 units in use. In 1956, the industry recorded a record 58,160 well completions.

A prolonged drilling slump then set in, however, and the weekly count for active rotary rigs dropped to a modern low of only 975 and well completions dropped to only 27,300 in 1971.

The Oil & Gas Journal now is projecting the industry will have 48,615 well completions this year. Last December, the publication had forecast 48,041 completions.

The January-August drilling statistics are to be published in the September-October edition of The Drilling Contractor, the official publication of the International Association of Drilling Contractors.

Weekly rig activity averages the first eight months this year ranged from a low of 2,115 to a high of 2,339. As the bottom of the long slump in drilling operations was reached in 1971 the range was from a low of 814 to a high of only 1,189.

The weekly rig activity range during the record well completions year of 1956 saw a low of 2,395 and a high of 2,894.

Compared with the January-August monthly average of 18.1 million feet of hole, the industry had an average of only 10.7 million feet in 1971. This year's 18.1 million foot level was built through monthly operations that ranged from a low of 15.8 million to a high of 22.2 million feet.

A recent survey indicates the domestic rotary drilling rig fleet has regained the 2,800 level the first time since 1961.

Reed Tool's annual census of available rigs places the August count at 2,848, compared with 2,482 a year earlier.

Ed McGhee, executive vice president of the drilling contractors trade group, said the annual census differs from the weekly active rig count in that it shows all units capable of drilling below 3,000 feet whether or not they are "making hole" at census time.

And McGhee says the Reed count is still well short of the level it gained in the mid-1950s.

"Reed has been making the tally since 1957 when it found 3,296 units available in the United States," he said.

"The low point came in 1975 when only 1,767 rigs were identified," McGhee said industry statisticians point out the Reed count does not reflect the total rig fleet.

"It doesn't include rigs incapable of drilling to at least 3,000 feet," he said.

"When such rigs are added, the grand total of the domestic rigs certainly exceeds the 3,000 level. In addition to this, it is estimated another 125 cable-tool rigs are still active in drilling for oil and gas in the United States."

Chester H. Lauck

Ladies night event slated

The Permian Basin Chapter of the American Petroleum Institute will hold its regular meeting Tuesday at Ranchland Hill Country Club.

The social hour will get underway at 6:30 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7 p.m. and the program will follow.

The meeting is the organization's annual "Ladies Night" event. The speaker will be Chester H. Lauck, who retired as executive assistant to the chairman of the board of Continental Oil Co. in 1967 and now makes his home on Lake Hamilton, Hot Springs, Ark.

Lauck, although known primarily as a radio and movie personality, was first successful as a banker and businessman. A graduate of the University of Arkansas, he majored in Journalism. Following graduation, he became associated with the Union Bank of Mena, Ark., and later served as manager of the Citizen's Finance Corp. in that city.

In 1951, together with Norris Goff, a boyhood friend, he formed the team of "Lum and Abner." They began their radio career in Hot Springs and in less than two months signed a network contract, broadcasting first from Chicago and later from Cleveland and New York. The two men also starred in motion pictures for RKO Studios.

Agreement announced

Midland Southwest Corp. announces that an agreement has been reached with CRA, Inc., whereby, through a wholly-owned subsidiary, Midland Southwest will construct a gathering system which will feed the North Enid Plant of CRA at Enid, Okla., and CRA's Eldorado Plant located near Eldorado.

The agreement calls for Midland Southwest to invest up to $2.5 million over a maximum two-year period in constructing the proposed gathering systems. Midland Southwest will receive a transportation fee per million cubic feet of gas through the system.

Midland Southwest Corp. is a Midland-based investment company having ownership in downtown real estate, apartment investments, and is the managing general partner of the Midland Hilton.

Study suggests media at fault in energy plan

BY CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram
Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Some day, in hindsight, someone will do a reflective study on the reason or reasons why the United States had so much difficulty in arriving at an energy policy after the dramatic Middle East embargo in the winter of 1973-74 had focused attention on the fact that the nation was no longer self-sufficient in energy supplies.

Such a study no doubt will point out that it was five years after the embargo before Congress finally passed an energy package and that even then, in the winter of 1978-79, no one was really satisfied with it nor thought it would make any big contribution toward resolving the problems.

Instead, in 1978 it was apparent that the public was either uninformed, apathetic or skeptical about the seriousness of the nation's energy problems.

Why? Because the media is one of the principal means of communication, the question has been raised as to whether the newspapers, the radio stations and the television people failed to tell the energy story properly.

Hill & Knowlton, a nationally-known public relations organization, recently did a study of the media coverage. It did so by digging through mountains of stories written about one aspect or another of the energy situation and followed that up by interviewing key people in news organizations across the country.

The study, recently made public, concluded that with the exception of the Washington and New York press and a few national publications, there has been "an abysmal dearth of articles about a national energy plan." (Many reporters would despise the implication that the New York and Washington press has done well and others have done poorly).

"To be sure," a Hill & Knowlton official said, "millions of words and thousands of charts and photos have been published and broadcast on energy topics. But rarely have they all been put together to make a point of why a cohesive national plan is needed now."

The result, this official concluded, was that what we have had are scores of stories on pieces of a national energy plan. A story on nuclear power, weatherization, coal conservation, drilling, geothermal energy and on and on.

In effect, the national energy picture has been chopped into many pieces, like a jigsaw, with few efforts made to fit these pieces into an overall pattern.

The Hill & Knowlton spokesman said some editors and broadcasters blame the Administration for the inaction on a national energy plan, claiming that newsmen have lost track of the story because of interminable delays and incredible complexity of the proposals.

A Washington reporter who has covered the energy beat for more than 25 years was one of those interviewed by Hill & Knowlton. His analysis was along the following lines:

Over the decades when this nation had plentiful supplies of cheap energy the public and the press-tended to take it all for granted. It was only when something went wrong that the public and the press became concerned and, quite naturally, started looking for what had brought this about. The inclination, therefore, was to concentrate on what had been done wrong than on what had been done right. That is, the search was for a villain.

Furthermore, the timing of the oil crisis was in a sense unfortunate. It occurred when the nation was uncertain about many of its institutions and policies. It was the Watergate era, which had followed on the heels of self-searching on such issues as Vietnam, the rioting of the Sixties and other unfavorable aspects of national life.

Opinion polls showed a lack of public confidence in Congress, in the executive department, in schools, churches and other institutions. The press didn't escape, either. In fact, it frequently was at or near the bottom of the opinion polls on the question of public confidence.

That was why credence was given to such rumors as oil tankers circling off the East Coast during the energy-short days of the embargo, awaiting an increase in oil prices so that they could profit.

There was widespread acceptance, also, to the reports two winters ago that companies were sitting on huge gas supplies in the Gulf of Mexico as a means of driving natural gas prices up and up.

In such a setting of skepticism, it was difficult to get the true story of the nation's energy situation across. (Some of the press capitalized on this suspicion rather than trying to present a fair and balanced picture.)

The industry itself wasn't very helpful. During the "normal" years of the past the industry for the most part had not done much to communicate with the public effectively. Thus, when the crisis developed it was not well prepared to educate the public.

In many instances it made itself appear awkward or evasive or wedded to the old ways of doing things.

It remains to be seen whether the passage of an energy package this year-and such passage seems highly likely at this point-will help clear the air of controversy and suspicion so that the nation can get on with the long and difficult business of coping with energy supply problems in the years ahead.

Anadarko establishes Midland Division office

Anadarko Production Co. of Houston has announced the creation of a new Midland Division office to facilitate expanding exploration and production activities in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

The new division office is at 215 W. Wall St. The office will be located in the Gibraltar Savings Center, when construction is completed.

James K. Hartman, division exploration manager, and Daniel G. Kernaghan, division production manager, will head a Midland staff of about 15 people.

Hartman recently joined Anadarko after 24 years with Gulf Oil, the last 19 of which have been spent in Midland. For the last year, he has served as assistant area production manager for Gulf in West Texas. Previous to that, he held positions of increasing responsibility as an exploration geologist and geophysicist, serving as regional geologist from 1971 to 1977.

Hartman holds a bachelors degree in Geology from Beloit College in Wisconsin.

Kernaghan has transferred to Midland from Anadarko's Southern Region office in Houston where he has been a division evaluation engineer since 1972. His experience includes nine years with Sinclair Oil & Refining Co. as an economic analyst evaluating drilling prospects and reservoir engineering reports, plus work as a senior engineer and chief evaluation engineer for two Houston-based oil and gas consulting firms. Kernaghan is a petroleum engineering graduate of the Colorado School of Mines.

Pecos County takes lead in rotary work

Drilling activity in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico as recorded by Reed Drilling Equipment found the two-state area with 263 rigs making hole, decreasing activity by seven rigs over the previous weeks count of 270.

A year ago at this time the Reed survey counted 291 rigs turning to the right.

Pecos County gained the lead on the survey and also gained four rigs reporting 24 operations going over last weeks count of 20.

Eddy County, N.M., took second place this week with 22 units going, dropping its activity from 30 rigs reported going last week.

Lea County, another Southeast New Mexico leader in drilling activity reported 17 rigs going, decreasing its activity by one unit over the previous weeks count of 18.

West Texas activity increased this week as Gaines County reported 16 rigs, gaining three operations over last weeks count of 13.

Ward County picked up one unit this week as 10 rigs were spotted turning to the right.

Appointment revealed

Samedan Oil Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Noble Affiliates, Inc., has announced the appointment of Larry R. Snyder as assistant division manager of its Midland office.

Snyder has been division landman in Samedan's Midland office and has held increasingly responsible jobs within the oil industry 11 years.

He is a 1960 graduate of Ohio University with a bachelor's degree in Commerce and currently is president of the Permian Basin Landmen's Association.

L. G. Simmons, locksmith, is surrounded by the symbols of his trade. He is the owner of Midland Lock and Safe, 611 North Big Spring, Phone, 682-4202.

Safe from fire and burglary Blaze claims seven

Now that we have your attention, we will admit that complete safety from fire and burglary is still an unattainable ideal. However, good protection from both is available, and Midland Lock and Safe can be of great help to the homeowner and businessman. Safes which are fireproof may be chosen from the major brands available. Smoke alarms, a fine choice for Christmas gifts, are specially priced now. Simmons has some do-it-yourself home burglar alarm kits which could offer a good bit of security to the home. Many padlocks are stocked here, including the Medico, which has never been picked. Simmons can adapt the Medico cylinder to other types of locks to make them pick-proof. Duplicate keys cannot be made to fit these locks any place except where they are purchased—and then only by the original purchaser whose name is on a signature card.

High security dead-bolt locks may be installed by the home handyman, or installation can be skillfully handled by Midland Lock and Safe. Come by 611 North Big Spring to browse and to discuss your security needs with Mr. Simmons. Phone 682-4202.

CLEVELAND (AP) — A fire swept through a two-story frame house on Cleveland's east side, killing seven children and critically injuring their mother, officials said.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Alhaande Hasain, ranging in age from 6 months to 13 years, apparently died of smoke inhalation in Friday night's fire, officials said.

Authorities said the father apparently was not home at the time. The blaze was reported about 11 p.m. by neighbors.

Dan Smith, 41, who lives one house away from the Hasains, said he and another neighbor tried to enter the home but were driven back by smoke and flames.

He said the mother, Minimah Hasain, 30, was heard screaming from the second floor that she was trapped. She was listed in critical condition at a Cleveland hospital Saturday.

The parts people in the Parts and Service department of Nickel-Williams Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge are ready and able to supply any needed parts from their well-stocked inventory. Bill Davis and Alfred McKown, manager, lends expertise to the operation. 3705 West Wall, phone 694-1606.

'The crew that cares' for car's ills

Where to turn when the family car is ailing? Next to selecting a family physician, perhaps one of the toughest decisions a family has to make from time to time is: Where do we go when trouble strikes our transportation?

Nickel-Williams Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge has a good answer to that question, for several reassuring reasons. Their mechanics work on a straight salary. This encourages each man to give his full, unhurried attention to the job at hand. The aim is to have all mechanics certified by the state, and they are working toward that goal. The company employs a visual aid program to keep the technicians abreast of all new developments. Parts and Services carry 30 day or 4,000 mile warranty. Wrecker service is available, and major credit cards are acceptable.

Fleet owners are faced with the same problems as the family is, with financial considerations being uppermost. Time lost from the job can cause a great deal of concern, and Nickel-

Williams has a service which will help to minimize this. They have a new fleet service lane, an "express lane" for their fleet accounts, comparable to the express checkout stands in grocery stores. Trucks and cars alike owned by fleet owning clients are attended to faster than ever before.

RV owners will be interested in the supplies stocked by the parts showroom. The Onan generator, 12v or 110v coffee makers, tissues and fluids for self-contained units are just several of many items found there.

Acquaint yourself with the people and facilities at Nickel-Williams Chrysler-Plymouth-Dodge before you need their services, and be content that when you must have auto repair work done, they will make it as painless as possible. Come by and meet Alfred McKown, manager of the Parts and Service division at 3705 West Wall, or call 563-2283.

The Coast Guard said it is unlawful to discharge oil or any hazardous pollutant into U.S. waters.

Will trio of animals prompt energy savings?

BALTIMORE (AP) — Can Petro Pig, Thermo Toad and Tuned-Out Turtle teach residents of Maryland to save energy?

Artist Eddie Gold thinks they can and so does the Maryland Energy Policy Office, which has adopted his trio of energy-guzzling beasts as the stars of its new poster campaign promoting energy saving.

Petro Pig — porkus petroleumanus — has feet and a tail made of electric plugs. Permanently connected to a gasoline pump, he boasts of an overworked thermostat on his back and is shown indulging in his favorite refreshment, a barrel of oil.

Petro Pig's cohorts are Thermo Toad — toadus fahrenheiticus — and Tuned-Out Turtle — tortissimus obliivata. The voracious pair are covered with electric wires and have plugs for feet.

Thermo Toad sits on a heater while cooling off with a fan and Tuned-Out Turtle has a lead foot for stomping the gas pedal.

Posters may be just the beginning for the trio, said Gold, who plans to star his creations in radio and television spots as well as billboards.

Second thoughts hit negotiators on credit

By TOM RAUM
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional negotiators are having second thoughts about that $400 home insulation tax credit both the House and Senate voted last year to give homeowners.

But a top House supporter of President Carter's energy program, Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, claims any attempt to ditch or trim the credit is "a terrible idea."

"I didn't favor the credit at first, but I think that once we went ahead and voted it, we're committed to stick by it," Ashley told reporters.

The proposed tax credit passed both houses in 1977 as part of Carter's energy program but never made it into law because of disputes on other parts of the package.

Now that Congress is trying to wrap up its work on the Carter energy plan by mid-October, the tax credit again has come under consideration.

Senate conferees voted Friday to dump the home-insulation credit entirely while agreeing to keep more than $300 million in proposed energy-related credits for businesses.

Senate members claimed taxpayers didn't need the credits since they were going ahead and insulating their homes anyway and could thus enjoy the economic benefits of lower fuel bills.

Rep. Anthony Moffett, D-Conn., countered that the home-insulation credit was "the one thing (in Carter's energy plan) on which homeowners and consumers relied."

But a number of other House negotiators said they agreed with their Senate counterparts that the credit should be trimmed, if not eliminated entirely—saying the credit would be a $827-million-a-year drain on the Treasury.

The Carter proposal would provide a direct tax credit of 20 percent on the cost of home insulation, storm windows and other energy-saving measures — up to a total credit of $400.

The administration would like the credit made retroactive to April 20, 1977, when Carter submitted his energy program to Congress.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the top House tax negotiator, first said he could go along with cutting the tax credit in half — to a 10 percent credit, with a maximum of $200 — to help balance the federal budget.

However, after meeting with Ashley, Ullman backed off and suggested a possible compromise under which the full 20 percent credit might be permitted through next September and then drop to 10 percent.

Ullman, chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, said he'll offer this proposal Tuesday and he thinks most House negotiators will go along.

"A lot of people made investments (in home insulation materials) anticipating they would get the credit," said Ullman.

Mack Chase

Mack Chase joins board

The company is headquartered in Houston and has branch offices in Midland, Corpus Christi and Arlington; Lafayette, La.; Casper, Wyo., and a safety office in Norman, Okla.

Application approved

AUSTIN—The State Securities Board has approved an application by Tipperary Corp. of Midland to issue $2 million in securities in Texas. Securities Commissioner Richard D. Latham reports.

The application was one of 11 totaling $25,374,770 granted by the board last week, Latham said.

Courses upcoming at center

Three courses will begin this week at the Permian Basin Graduate Center, 105 W. Illinois St., in Midland.

"Effective Supervision Workshop," will begin Tuesday and will be held from 7 to 10 p. m. The four-session workshop is designed for persons who are now or who expect to be in a supervisory position, and who are looking for ways to become more effective in getting results through others.

It will be oriented toward a practical approach. The following subjects will be covered: Job descriptions, performance standards, communications, management information, problem solving, decision making, selection and induction of new employees, training and developing subordinates.

The fee is $125. "Improving Communication & Persuasion Skills," will begin Wednesday.

This four-session course will be held from 7 to 10 p. m. It is designed for supervisors, engineers, geologists, and technical people whose effectiveness depends on their ability to convey their ideas in a persuasive manner.

The fee is $125. John L. Buster, consultant, will instruct both courses. He was graduated from the University of California at Berkeley with a B.S. degree in Engineering and presently is working with several companies and organizations in the training and development of managers, supervisors and sales personnel.

The center will offer "Oil and Gas Fundamentals-II" from 7 to 10 p. m. Wednesday for five weeks, beginning this week.

The course is for office managers, secretaries, production clerks and other personnel.

Topics will stress procedures necessary in an oil office.

Patricia M. Beck, with the PBGC, will cover production reports (beginning), and Rosellen Busby, State Oil Reports, will instruct the class on advanced production reports.

Jack Huff of Burleson and Huff will explain oil and gas and mineral leases, definition of basic terms, delay rentals, and division orders.

Office procedures in an oil office will be team-taught by Ms. Beck and Kim Kunkel. Oil and gas accounting will be instructed by Donald S. Johnson.

Fee for the complete course is $60; five sessions for $50 or $15 for individual sessions.

Association to honor two men

DALLAS—C. John Miller of Allegand, Mich., independent oil and gas operator, and John E. Swearingen, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, have been named recipients of the Texas oil and gas industry's highest honor—the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association's Distinguished Service Award.

Miller and Swearingen were chosen by a committee of previous honorees. They will receive the award at a luncheon Oct. 13 in the Galleria Plaza Hotel in Houston. The luncheon will close the association's 59th Annual Meeting.

This is the 43rd consecutive year that an independent oil man and a major energy company executive have been so honored for contributions to the industry.

Approximately 600 Texas petroleum industry leaders and guests are expected to attend the two-day meeting. It features appearances by Swearingen; Howard Jarvis, Los Angeles, Calif., chairman, American Tax Reduction Movement, and Alexander B. Trowbridge, Morristown, N. J., vice chairman of the board, Allied Chemical Corp.

Other speakers include Wayne Gibbins, Washington, D.C., president, Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association; James M. Patterson, Chicago, manager, public affairs operations, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, and H. B. Harkins, Alice, president of the Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

He is vice president of Miller Brothers Drilling Corp., a contract drilling company operating in Michigan. He formed a partnership with his brother, Gene, in 1954. The company has been active in the development of Michigan oil properties and has interests in other producing areas.

He is a past president of the National Stripper Well Association and the Michigan Oil & Gas Association. He is a member of the All-American Wildcatter's Association.

Work underway

GARYVILLE, La.—Construction of a 75,000-barrel-per-day Flexicracking unit is underway at Marathon Oil Co.'s Garyville refinery.

The Flexicracking unit and its associated equipment are part of a construction program totaling approximately $205 million. The program will increase the yield of unleaded gasoline from the current 45,000 barrels per day to more than 100,000 barrels, and reduce the yield of heavy fuel oil.

The unit, which is scheduled to be on-stream during the last quarter of 1979, will be one of the world's largest grassroots fluid catalytic cracking units ever constructed.

Marathon has licensed Exxon Research and Engineering Co.'s flue gas scrubbing and sour water stripping technologies for use at the refinery.

Exxon's flue gas scrubbing technology controls sulfur oxides and particulates from FCC regenerators, and in conjunction with the company's proprietary regeneration system for carbon monoxide control, can meet all existing federal, state or local emission standards. Sour water stripping removes hydrogen sulfide and ammonia from the process waste water generated prior to disposal.

The Garyville refinery, located on the Mississippi River, 35 miles above New Orleans, came on stream in 1976.

Firms seek gas access

HOUSTON—Access to a new gas supply for two major interstate natural gas pipeline systems is being sought in an application filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for authority to construct and operate a 265-mile pipeline.

The project would give Tennessee Gas Pipeline Co., a division of Tenneco, Inc., and Columbian Gas Transmission Corp. access, for the first time, to gas from the Arkoma Basin of Oklahoma and Arkansas. Some of the gas will be from wells completed by Tenneco Oil Co., a subsidiary of Tenneco, Inc., and Texas Oil & Gas Corp. Wells expected to be drilled by Tenneco Oil and Texas O&G by 1980 reflect prospective reserves of 212 billion cubic feet and potential reserves estimated at 323 billion.

The application will be filed by Ozark Gas Transmission System, a general partnership consisting of subsidiaries of Tenneco, Columbia Gas and Texas O&G, together with Oklahoma Natural Development Corp.

Ozark proposes to construct a 20-inch pipeline from Pittsburg County, Okla., to White County, Ark. There also will be about 180 miles of smaller lateral lines, metering stations, dehydrators, and compressors with a total of 2,925 horsepower.

The partnership estimates a total cost of $104 million for the project. The capacity of the line is estimated to be 170 million cubic feet per day and would be available to Columbia Gas and Tennessee Gas on a 50-50 basis.

The partnership agreement grants Oklahoma Natural an option, which may be exercised within two years from the date the new pipeline is placed in commercial operation, to use up to 25 percent of the capacity of the line not then used by Columbia Gas and Tennessee Gas.

Ozark expects FERC approval in time to begin construction during 1979.

Field trip set Saturday

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will sponsor a one-day field trip to Pinto Canyon in Presidio County Saturday.

Persons making the trip will meet in the Sul Ross State University Parking lot in Alpine at 9 a. m. Dr. James Wolleben, chairman of the Sul Ross Geology Department, will be the field trip leader.

The Pinto Canyon area covers the junction of the Sierra Vieja and Chinita Mountains in Southwest Presidio County.

Permian and Comanche strata are exposed in a faulted Laramide anticline, which is buried by three groups of Tertiary volcanic strata; all are cut by Tertiary intrusions. Block-faulting developed the Presidio basin, which was filled with Tertiary-Quaternary sediments.

The field trip will visit outcrops of the Wolfcampian Alta formation, the Leonardian and Guadalupian Pinto Canyon formation, the lower units of the Comanche Series, and several Tertiary igneous bodies.

The area is structurally complex and late Tertiary basin-and-range block faulting occurred throughout the region.

Participants are asked to bring their own lunch and water, and arrangements have been made for those who wish to camp out Friday and/or Saturday nights.

Questions concerning the field trip should be directed to Tommy Woodward of Midland, 682-0541.

Supplies approach balance with demand

TULSA—U. S. natural-gas supplies are approaching a balance with residential, commercial and high-priority industrial demand in some interstate markets, the Oil & Gas Journal reports.

Distributors and transmission companies are responding by re-entering the market place, some for the first time since the early 1970s. Others are preparing marketing strategies and asking state commissions to end gas hook-up moratoriums. Utilities once again have gas for sale.

In its Sept. 25 issue, the Journal cites these reasons for the restoration of health in the interstate gas system: High drilling and production rates and some supplemental supply projects are stabilizing gas flow. Meanwhile, demand has shrunk as a result of conservation, fuel-switching and other factors.

But industry sources disagree on how long the situation will continue. Some say the present supply-demand balance is only a two-to-three-year breather. They feel Alaskan and more Canadian production, once it enters the market during the 1980s, will be required along with increased production in the lower 48 states to meet increasing demand.

The demand increase, they say, will result from growing residential and commercial markets and a return to gas by some former industrial users who switched fuels during the last several years of tight gas supplies.

Clearer industry-wide indicator that the supply-demand gap is closing comes from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, in a report prepared by a Washington law firm.

Sources tell the Journal the data will show firm curtailments for April 1977 to April 1978 at 3.256 trillion cubic feet, compared with 3.379 trillion cubic feet during the same period in 1976-77.

Projected curtailments for 1978-79 will be about the same level as the preceding 12 months.

While curtailments are stabilizing, firm requirements reported are down almost 1 trillion cubic feet from the 1973-74 level.

It appears that the natural gas supply for interstate pipelines has stabilized," says a draft of the report to FERC.

Most gas transmission and distribution companies tell the Journal conservation has played a major role in restraining demand.

A study by one major transmission company cites Department of Energy statistics showing interstate transmission firms produced and purchased a record 14.2 trillion cubic feet in 1972. Preliminary reports for 1977 indicate the total has dropped to 10.9 trillion cubic feet.

Those totals don't include imports, which totaled slightly more than 1 trillion cubic feet both years.

Within the domestic supply framework, there has been a 6 percent increase in high-priority residential and commercial users' share of total consumption, accompanied by a roughly parallel decrease in market share for industrial and power generation users.

Between 1970 and 1977, industrial sector consumption declined 18.6 percent. The study attributes that decrease to first-phase conservation such as lowering of thermostats and modest rearrangement of process technology, virtual elimination of interruptible sales, and some permanent shifts to alternate fuels and capital investment in facilities for more efficient use of energy.

The study says conservation and efficiency efforts accounted for about two-thirds of the industrial sector's consumption decline.

During the next few years, conservation-related fuel-use reduction in the residential and commercial gas market is expected to be 20 to 25 percent, compared with 1972 levels.

Market struggles in stretch

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — Heading into the home stretch of 1978, the stock market is struggling to maintain the momentum of its strong showing earlier in the year.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks posted a 46.87-point advance for the third quarter, which ended on Friday.

And for the nine months since the start of the year, the average sports a 34.65-point rise.

But the average's gains, and those of the other leading market indicators, have been eroding in the past few weeks.

Even after a technical upswing that carried it up 3.38 points to 865.82 in the past week, the average stood some 41.42 points below its early-September closing peak of 907.74.

And contrary to the pattern for most of the past couple of years, other indicators have recently been moving in step with the Dow.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index, up 41 at 57.78 in the past week, is still off 2.60 from its early-September high.

And the American Stock Exchange market value index, which soared from 127.89 at the start of the year to 176.87 on Sept. 13, has since backed off to 168.81, even after a plus-1.53 showing in the past week.

New York Stock Exchange volume, which has already set a yearly record, has also dropped off lately. In the past week it averaged 24.72 million shares a day, down from 32.98 million the week before.

"To the various forces acting to slow the economy's forward momentum has been added a new factor: declining confidence," economists at New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust said. "This can be seen from the performance of the various financial markets both in the U.S. and overseas, as well as in the findings of various pollsters."

The Value Line Investment Survey observed: "The recent drop in the stock market is disquieting but does not in our view represent a reversal of the market's upward course.

"Investors are worried about the government's ability to deal with inflation. Also, there is the widespread belief of economists and businessmen that the nearly four-year-old business expansion will soon give way to a recession.

The star performers of the year to date have been the widely-publicized gambling issues and some other secondary issues, rather than the blue chips.

Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. analysts noted recently that in the rally from March 1 through Aug. 23 an index of low-priced stocks climbed 56.4 percent while Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index rose 20.3 percent.

"Given the types and prices of the stock leadership this year," they said, "we believe the private investor and aggressive portfolio managers (domestic and foreign) dominated the market place.

"With the possible exceptions of hotel-motel, aerospace and air transport, the typical large institution is not believed to have been a major buyer of this year's market leadership."

In fact, a number of market-watchers suggest that the strength of issues like the gambling stocks with a highly speculative image has turned some conservative money-managers off stocks in general.

As Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. put it, "There are some noses turned up, because institutions don't like the smell of the groups that are leading the market."

No major new gas finds seen in unknown fields

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The Rand Corp., in a study sponsored by the CIA, says people should not expect any major new discoveries of oil and gas.

In a report released Thursday, Rand said there is now about a 60-to-90-year supply of petroleum if the rate of consumption doesn't rise. That supply, however, would run out in between 30 to 45 years if world consumption continues to grow at past levels.

"We'll get more oil out of fields that we know are there than we will out of future discoveries," said Rand Corp. researcher Richard Nehring.

Nehring said the best chances for future discoveries are in the Mideast, Mexico, Alaska, Venezuela, the North Sea, Siberia and China.

Nehring said that 75 to 85 percent of the world's future oil supply will come from increased recovery from known fields. More than half that oil is contained in "super-giant" (5 billion barrels or more) and "giant" (500 million barrels or more) fields, he said.

Nehring said reliance on known reserves probably will create "a gradual upward pressure on prices."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle to stem the tide of imported shoes is being won, the Carter administration says.

Imports made up 44.8 percent of shoes bought in the United States from April to June this year, compared with 48.1 percent at the same period a year earlier, officials said Thursday.

"There is no question that the program (to lower shoe imports) is working," said Stuart Eizenstat, domestic adviser to President Carter.

The United States reached orderly marketing agreements in May 1977 with Korea and Taiwan to reduce shoe imports.

The United States will sign an agreement next month with Hong Kong that limits shoe exports to only those made entirely in Hong Kong, officials said, thereby ending the practice of exporting large numbers of shoes partly made in Korea or Taiwan but finished in Hong Kong.

Under Secretary of Commerce Sidney Harman said shoe prices have not risen as rapidly as other prices in this country but said it is too early to tell whether the program will push up shoe prices.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four producers of the metal titanium, which is used primarily in the aircraft and aerospace industries, have been indicted on price-fixing charges.

The indictments, by a federal grand jury in Pittsburgh, also named five past or current officials of the companies.

The defendants are Martin Marietta Aluminum Inc. of Bethesda, Md., and a former general manager of the company's specialty metals division, George Herman; Lawrence Aviation Industries of Port Jefferson Station, N.Y., and its vice president and general manager Gerald Cohen; Crucible Inc., of Robinson Township, Pa., and its product manager for titanium, Robert E. Thomas, and RMI Co., of Niles, Ohio, its former president J. William Price Jr. and former vice president for sales, Andrew N. Eshman.

Titanium Metals Corp. of America in Pittsburgh was named an unindicted co-conspirator.

The indictment charged the companies with conspiring to fix titanium prices throughout the country from at least 1970 to about 1976.

The government said the companies did $135 million in business in titanium mill products in 1974. If convicted, each firm could be fined up to $1 million and each individual could be fined $100,000 and sentenced to three years in prison.

NEW YORK (AP) — The honorary chairman of the board of Anheuser-Busch Inc., the nation's largest beer producer, is August A. "Gussie" Busch Jr.

But it isn't Anheuser-Busch which has applied for a trademark to sell "Gussie" Beer. It's Miller Brewing Co., the No. 2 company in the highly-competitive industry.

A spokesman for Anheuser-Busch, the maker of Budweiser and other beers, said Thursday the company is studying the situation but refused to say if it was considering any legal action.

"Problem Solving and Decision Making" will be offered by the Permian Basin Graduate Center from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Tuesday in the PBGC Building, 105 W. Illinois St. in Midland.

The seminar is recommended for administrators, personnel directors, managers and others who are involved in decision making and problem solving.

Bob Avary, with Bob Avary & Associates, management consultants, will be the instructor. He has 25 years of experience in various phases of sales and management.

The one-day seminar is geared toward helping participants recognize the difference between problems and decisions, defining problems, developing options or choices, and an examination of the decision-making process.

ly with Anheuser-Busch, refused to say how it came up with the name. "We never talk about our future marketing plans," said spokesman Guy Smith.

Anheuser-Busch and Miller have tangled recently on two legal fronts. A federal court ruled that Miller, producer of "Lite Beer," did not have the right to exclusive use of the name "light" in beer names.

The Federal Trade Commission is investigating a charge by Anheuser-Busch that Miller led consumers to believe its Lowenbrau Beer came from Germany when it actually is brewed in the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Hertz Corp. has been accused by the government of failing to give consumers adequate protection in the purchase of used cars from the car rental firm.

The Justice Department announced Thursday it filed a civil suit in federal court in Florida that seeks fines against Hertz and a court injunction to stop the company from continuing the allegedly unfair consumer practice.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Bergland appears to be stacking up fairly well with farmers and colleagues in the Carter administration as he nears the end of his second year as secretary of agriculture.

But there is sniping, some of it by Republican critics but also a few shots by Democrats and, more furiously, by a few Carter people in and around the White House.

No one has openly attacked Bergland's character, his honesty or his loyalty to Carter. And it is difficult to pin down just what critics do complain about.

For example, some hard-line farm groups, industry officials and barnyard-oriented members of Congress continue to flay Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman for her consumer advocacy and this, because he supports her, reflects on Bergland.

A month ago Rep. Thomas R. Harkin, D-Iowa, told the Des Moines Register it appeared to him that some administration officials were attempting to create an atmosphere in which it would be easy for Carter to fire Bergland.

"I think they are out to get him fired," Harkin was quoted. "There is little doubt in my mind about it."

White House spokesmen denied Harkin's allegation and said that there was no move to remove Bergland.

Sources who were subsequently asked about the rumor also denied that there is any serious rift between Carter and Bergland. The sources, who included associates in the Agriculture Department and friends outside the agency, did not rule out the possibility that some persons on Carter's team are not completely sold on Bergland.

The sources, who understood they were not to be identified, agreed that there is no anti-Bergland feeling of a nature serious enough to get him fired. Mostly, they indicated as one put it, "some people around Carter are picking nits and are overly protective of the president."

Hertz, in New York, said the complaint "is totally unwarranted and represents an outrageous and offensive abuse of the government's regulatory powers."

The suit charges Hertz with violating Federal Trade Commission regulations governing loans to purchase used cars.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The effort to change bank reserve requirements is dead for the year, but House Banking Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., says he hopes Congress will make the changes next year.

Reuss made public an exchange of letters with Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller in which they agreed to revive the legislation soon after the new Congress takes office in January.

Responding to Federal Reserve concerns that member banks were leaving the system because they considered reserve requirements burdensome, the committee developed and approved a bill that would exempt most small and medium size banks from reserve requirements. It would, however, require large banks to hold reserves whether or not they were Federal Reserve members.

Reserves are considered burdensome by some banks because they tie up funds without producing interest or other income.

Miller said points had been raised that required more study by the industry.

Marathon gets permit

Marathon Oil Co. will be constructing a new four-story office building at a cost of $3.7 million at 125 W. Missouri Avenue.

The firm took out a building permit this past week with H.B.F. Construction listed as the builder. The new office should include 80,000 square feet of space.

This permit brought the week's total to $4,172,253. The year's total of $72,708,363 is $10 million more than last year's $62,408,629.

Next in line of top permits issued last week was one for $442,253 to J.H.Y. Plaza which will be a doctor's office at 2000 W. Cuthbert Ave. The one-story building will have 9,348 square feet.

The only other new commercial permit was issued to the Junior League of Midland for a $30,000 workshop at 902 W. Dengar.

Troy Vines received a permit for $5,000 of alteration to his business at 2927 Rankin Highway.

New residential permits went to: Henry Culp, 3201 Sycamore, $33,000, and M.R. Larry, 3905 Bedford St., $48,200.

Permits for residential alterations were issued to:

Jack Bryce, 608 and 606 E. Florida, $6,000; Dan Kallas, 2218 Shell, $10,000; Joe Munoz, 1111 N. Colorado, $1,000; Bill Wilkerson, 2604 Cimarron St., $3,200; Joel K. Morris, 1211 W. Louisiana, $3,000; W.V. Gravitt, 2808 Auburn St., $300; Michael A. Thompson, 2814 Northtown Place, $7,000; Weldon R. Rodgers, 807 W. ## BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

One-Bank companies set up in Texas cities

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—One bank-holding companies, described as "one of the best things for independent banks that's come around in a long time," are being set up in communities throughout Texas—at an increasing rate.

Hagen McMahon, Jr., executive director of Independent Bankers Association of Texas, gave the quoted endorsement to the creation of such holding companies, noting IBAT has been holding seminars on setting up one-bank holding company operations.

Over 500 persons have attended the seminars, McMahon says, adding that IBAT plans two a year "until interest wanes or most of the banks have converted."

He reports "over 100" IBAT members ("the number changes daily") have applications pending with regulatory authorities to make the switch.

Securities Commissioner Richard Latham reports that since Jan. 1, the State Securities Board has approved seven applications, and has two pending (with three others expected to be in shortly).

Main reason for the move to one-bank holding companies is for tax advantages, McMahon comments, plus the additional flexibility of operation the holding company format offers.

Bankers can more easily service debt on bank stock via the holding company, McMahon says, plus there are advantages for estate planning, and for stock exchanges.

One major advantage cited by McMahon, and by Austin attorney Joseph M. Ford (writing for the Texas Association of Bank Counsel) is in avoiding having dividends taxed twice (once at the bank level and again at the individual shareholder level) before they can be applied to servicing "acquisition debt."

While the setting up of a one-bank holding company is a fairly detailed operation (involving considerable regulatory approval), the various advantages it provides are causing more and more banks to adopt it.

Another of the perennial battles in the area of insurance regulation is due to be joined again in 1979.

Rep. Gene Green, Houston, will be introducing a bill calling for proof of insurance by drivers to get vehicle registration plates or stickers, his office says.

Green has fought that battle—unsuccessfully—in prior sessions, and chose not to take it up in the Automobile Insurance Subcommittee study he has chaired during the interim. (His office notes that the matter was addressed in a prior interim report.)

At their Fort Worth convention, members of the state Democratic Party approved a resolution stating that the Legislature "be urged to pass legislation to require that a driver show proof that he/she has liability insurance in order to purchase automobile license plates or renewal stickers"—indicating the issue is still much alive.

Arguments made against the proposal in the past have been that it would raise the average rate, by forcing insurers to underwrite bad risks who don't have insurance because their rates are too high, and that it would be impossible to administer such a requirement—at least without a massive enforcement program, entailing many more State employees and much more bureaucracy.

Another aspect of the Democrats' platform also appears to have impacted on the 1979 legislative session.

Representatives of consumer finance companies indicate that in view of the referendum in May, in which voters went on record against the Legislature increasing rates on loans under $5,000, and because that opposition was restated in the party platform (at the urging of Sen. Bill Patman, Ganado), there won't be any request for a rate increase.

That doesn't mean, they note, that there will not be some other areas in which finance companies will be working—but that they feel it wouldn't be worth the effort, unless conditions change drastically, to buck the odds against them.

The State Board of Insurance is considering an application by San Antonio College traffic center for a 10 percent credit for graduates of its motorcycle safety courses, and may get additional requests for similar programs.

The SBI has approved a 10 percent credit under the motorcycle safety program offered by the National Safety Council in its defensive driving program.

Protesters hope to seize Black Fox nuclear plant

By GIL BROYLES

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — The battle between Public Service Co. and opponents of its proposed Black Fox nuclear plant will intensify Saturday, when several hundred nuclear protesters plan to occupy the plant site near Inola.

About 300 to 400 members of the Sunbelt Alliance have mapped plans to occupy the construction site to dramatize their protest of the nuclear plant and the limited work authorization that gives Public Service the right to begin preliminary site preparation.

Trespassers, the company has announced, will be arrested and work will continue. Jim Garrison, a leader of the Sunbelt Alliance, says the protesters will allow themselves to be arrested without resistance.

"We will place our bodies in front of anything that's moving," says Garrison, 27, a Harvard doctoral candidate working on a thesis on "the theological implications of nuclear power."

Public Service, acknowledging the planned protest, offered Garrison's group a knoll overlooking the site as an alternate demonstration area.

The offer was rejected. "Everyone taking part will receive six to eight hours of non-violence training," Garrison said of the occupation effort. "We have role-playing sessions in which part of the people subject the others to verbal and physical abuse and humiliation. We stress passive response to those situations."

Company officials say the protesters are driving up the cost of the plant and thus the cost of the electricity it will eventually produce.

Black Fox opponents claim the safety and welfare of northeast Oklahoma is in the balance.

Vaughn L. Conrad, who has ramrodded the proposed twin boiling water reactor plant for Public Service of Oklahoma, believes the project will reach fruition as soon as the company finishes dealing with the multitude of safety-related questions in the licensing process.

But Garrison is equally certain his forces can impede the progress of the plant until the project is abandoned.

"Black Fox will be built," says Conrad, characterizing opponents as fanatical out-of-towners, intent on "no growth" and embarked on a "children's crusade."

"Black Fox must be stopped," Garrison says, accusing Public Service of "wearing blinders," and concentrating on profits while playing fast and loose with the safety of northeast Oklahoma residents.

Meanwhile, bulldozers continue to prepare the site way for the $2 billion plant that Public Service says is the largest construction project in Oklahoma's history.

Co-owners of the project along with Public Service, a subsidiary of the Dallas-based Central and South West Co., are associated Electric Cooperative, Inc., of Springfield, Mo., and Western Farmers Electric Cooperative, Inc., Anadarko.

Oklahoma's first proposed nuclear generating plant is 23 miles east of here, near the Rogers County community of Inola. The fenced construction site is in the center of a 2,200-acre plot of rugged pastureland along the Verdigris River, a waterway navigable to the Mississippi.

Garrison said his group will sit down and wait to be arrested if members are allowed to reach the reactor core location.

"But if they don't let us reach the core area, then we will have to restructure our action and resort to guerrilla tactics," he said Friday. "By that I mean we will split up into several groups and stage repeated smaller occupations to keep the security forces busy. We will go in at different times, from different places, in groups of 30 or 40."

Conrad, 28, manager of licensing and compliance for Public Service, says the company has consulted with foremen in charge of the 200 construction workers at the site, advising them to allow security personnel and law enforcement officers to handle the situation.

"I don't need anybody coming in tanked up with a baseball bat under his shirt saying, 'I'm gonna get me one of those hippies,'" Conrad said. "I just don't need the pain."

The protest is scheduled to precede the next round of public hearings on the project. The hearings before the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board will begin in Tulsa Oct. 10 and conclude by Oct. 20.

The hearings will deal with a health and safety issues. Some 17 days of hearings this summer and last fall dealt with site suitability and environmental issues, resulting in a July 24 decision to allow site preparation work to begin.

Public Service first proposed the 2,300,000-kilowatt plant in 1973 and made formal application in 1975. The first reactor is scheduled for commercial operation in 1984 and the second in 1986.

The two sixth-generation General Electric boiling water reactors will be fueled by cylindrical uranium dioxide pellets, about one-half inch in diameter and in length. Each pellet will supply the same heat energy as 750 pounds of coal.

Public Service Co. officials say they turned to nuclear power because clean-burning natural gas, which fuels six other PSO plants in the state, is becoming scarce and more expensive.

Meanwhile, the company's customers in eastern and southwest Oklahoma have increased demand from five billion kilowatt hours in 1968 to 14 billion kilowatt hours in 1977.

The utility is also completing construction on a coal-fired generating plant near Oologah in northeast Oklahoma, scheduled to come on line beginning next year.

The Sunbelt Alliance, as its name indicates, is pressing for "soft" energy forms, including solar and wind power, on an individual level. The issue is at least partially one of centralized power as opposed to decentralized power, Garrison says.

Debates on Black Fox, such as one held at Tulsa University Thursday night, often become an exercise in reeling out "expert" opinions about the benefits and risks of nuclear power.

Opponents' experts say cattle, crops and people in the vicinity of Black Fox will be subject to dosages of low-level radiation that will cause cancer and other diseases in man for generations.

Public Service promises Black Fox will be "the cleanest source of energy Oklahomans have ever known... smokeless, quiet and self-contained."

Sunbelt Alliance organizer Jim Primdahl calls the nuclear plant a "random murder machine," that could kill thousands in the event of a core meltdown.

Dr. John Zinc, Public Service Co. official, cites the "perfect 20-year record" of nuclear plants and says the facilities are "safe by any reasonable standard."

Public Service has a "moral and legal obligation," to provide electricity to its customers, Conrad says.

Garrison counters that Sunbelt Alliance members "use as a referent generations unborn instead of profit." Citizens Action for Safe Energy, Inc., another group dedicated to halting construction on Black Fox, has under appeal granted Public Service. But Conrad says he believes the plant will be given a green light during the first quarter of 1979.

New nurses first intern graduates

Three new staff nurses at Midland Memorial Hospital started their jobs recently with a little more confidence than most new graduates.

The three are the first to graduate from Midland Memorial's nurses intern program.

The program is designed to bridge the gap between being a student nurse and a regular staff nurse, said Billie Ruppe, nurse recruiter for the hospital.

The first three graduates of the program, Carol James, Felecia Floyd and Betty McMillan, said the intern period gave them more confidence and a better understanding of the hospital as a whole.

The program allows the new graduate nurse to work in various areas of the hospital and on each of the three different shifts "to get an understanding of the different duties," Mrs. Ruppe said.

Each intern works under close supervision of a staff nurse in different areas of the hospital. Although the intern is paid full staff nurse salary, she is not counted in the staffing requirements of the hospital, Mrs. Ruppe noted.

"We feel the program pays for itself, though, because the interns should stay here on staff longer. That is one of our main purposes," Mrs. Ruppe said.

The average tenure for a graduate nurse on her first job is less than a year, Mrs. Ruppe noted, because there is no chance to expand and get a variety of experience. "Our goal here is to be flexible and make these people a permanent part of the staff."

Each intern has regular conferences with nursing supervisors to discuss problems or new ideas.

The program to bridge the gap between theory and practice is a success with the women who have completed it.

The internship gave them a chance to test their preconceived notions about hospital departments, they said.

That chance made a difference for at least one new nurse. She changed her area of specialty from obstetrics to intensive care after her tours in the two departments.

Each new graduate will be encouraged to participate in the program before coming on staff full time, Mary Truax, assistant director of nursing, said.

A new program will be beginning Jan. 8, and applications are being taken now. Interested persons can call Mrs. Ruppe at the hospital for more information.

St. Ann's sets Feast of St. Francis

"Harmony with Creation" will be the theme of the Feast of St. Francis at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday on the playground of St. Ann's School.

St. Francis of Assisi was a Middle Ages monk, who is remembered for his love of nature and for his affection for animals and all living things.

The feast will include the blessing of animals by the Rev. Ed Vrazel, assistant pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church.

"Everyone in Midland is invited to bring his or her own pet and to join in the celebration," said Joyce Taber, who is helping out on the feast.

A traveling Christian troupe, Covenant Players, will perform at the school, 2000 W. Texas Ave.

St. Francis, the patron saint of animals, was canonized in Italy in 1228.

Those wishing more information on the feast may telephone Sister Jean Amore at 684-4563.

Base abandoned in quiet ceremony

KENITRA, Morocco (AP) — The United States quietly abandoned its last military foothold in Africa on Saturday with a low-key ceremony that ended a 36-year military presence in Morocco dating back to "Operation Torch," one of the turning points of World War II.

The signature of Navy Capt. William Parrish — commander of the American-run communications bases centered on Kenitra, 25 miles north of the Moroccan capital of Rabat — formally handed over to the Moroccan government all that remained of the multi-million-dollar installation.

Parrish and four other officers were the last in a succession of tens of thousands of American troops who have served here since Gen. George Patton's GIs stormed ashore Nov. 8, 1942 and captured Kenitra — then named Port Lyautey — from the forces of Vichy France after a bloody three-day battle.

There is no monument here to the 567 Americans who died in crushing the bitter resistance of French troops under the Vichy regime's Gen. Charles Nogues.

Greatly expanded and modernized by the United States, the bases at Kenitra and neighboring Sidi Yahia and Bouknadel were placed under nominal Moroccan command in 1965 to counter Communist and third world criticism. But they remained firmly under American control.

At the height of their importance in the 1950's, the bases served as a major U.S. arms depot, intelligence listening post, staging point and communication center, with a garrison of more than 2,000 troops and dependents. The bases were downgraded in 1965 to a "communications facility," but the number of American troops was only slightly reduced.

Anxious to keep a low profile, the troops and their families lived almost entirely on the bases with their own hospital, club houses, tennis courts and Olympic-size swimming pool.

In a much-publicized exchange with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, Morocco's King Hassan II blandly asserted there was no such thing as an American military base in Morocco. But the leftist campaign against the U.S. presence continued until two years ago when the United States decided to "disestablish" the bases costing more than $7 million a year to operate, and replace them with satellite facilities.

Sidi Yahia, the radio receiver station, was turned over to the Moroccans with a flag-lowering ceremony in December.

In the nine months since American troops left Sidi Yahia, the unguarded base has been looted of all usable equipment left there by the Americans. Refrigerators, light fixtures, door handles, virtually everything that could be moved, have disappeared. A gap in the fence is wide enough for trucks to drive in an out undisturbed.

Moroccan officers have assured American colleagues that this will not be allowed to happen in Kenitra and Bouknadel.

Progress claimed after Saturday arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — American and Soviet arms negotiators claimed progress Saturday in White House negotiations for a new treaty to limit strategic bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

After four hours of talks under President Carter's direction and involving Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, the negotiating teams agreed to meet again on Sunday. This seemed to indicate the two superpowers were making a crash effort to achieve a breakthrough after six years of negotiations.

Carter, scheduled to travel to Cape Canaveral, Fla., at midday Sunday to decorate a half-dozen astronauts, was not expected to participate in the session.

Nonetheless, the effort will move ahead involving negotiating teams headed by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Gromyko.

In a brief exchange with reporters on the South Lawn, Vance said "there was movement which both of us agree is constructive."

Gromyko, standing at Vance's side, concurred.

"I must say some signs have appeared of a certain movement forward on some of the questions where we have previously either not reached agreement or not fully reached agreement," the foreign minister said.

Neither Vance nor Gromyko provided any details. Gromyko stressed, however, the complex nature of the continuing negotiations on a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT).

"The talks have now reached the stage where the solution of questions depends on the solution of the sum total of other of the issues and therefore they must be considered and resolved in one context," Gromyko said.

The session with Carter was considered decisive in determining whether agreement was possible on a SALT II pact, which would expand on and complement SALT I. That treaty was signed in 1972 and expired in October 1977. Since then, the two sides have agreed informally to live by the terms of the expired accord.

Agreement on a new treaty covering a separate set of strategic issues would represent a milestone in arms control and probably would be signed at a summit meeting between Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

But first the two sides must resolve their differences over a number of thorny issues. These include whether new land-based and submarine-launched missiles would be deployed while the treaty was in effect and whether Brezhnev would promise in writing to limit deployment and refueling capability of the Russian Backfire bomber.

Finnair hijacker releases 45 hostages, holds crew

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A hijacked Finnair jet with three crew members aboard landed here briefly early Sunday after leaving Helsinki, Finland, where the gunman had released 45 hostages and collected $206,000 ransom, authorities said.

The plane was refueled and immediately left for an unknown destination.

The jet landed at Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport at about 5 a.m. (11 p.m. EDT.) Airport sources said the Dutch government approved the refueling.

The Finnair Super-Caravelle jet had taken off from the Helsinki airport at 2:26 a.m. (8:26 p.m. EDT) shortly after the man released the last 11 hostages and received the final $38,000 ransom.

In Helsinki, a released passenger said the hijacker was aggressive and nervous and kept issuing threats. Police admitted their effort to "wear the man out" did not work.

The hijacker, who authorities said was armed with a pistol, took over the jet with 48 persons on board Saturday afternoon, ordered the plane Helsinki, then to Oulu, then back to Helsinki, Helsinki authorities said. The airliner was on a domestic flight from Oulu to Helsinki.

The hijacker freed 34 men and children on the first stop in Helsinki but kept 10 passengers, two pilots, a stewardess and a lawyer on board. He had demanded the lawyer be put on the plane in Helsinki.

After refueling in Helsinki, the hijacker, identified by police as Aarno Lamminporras, 37, a businessman who recently went bankrupt, told the pilot to return to Oulu, about 300 miles north of Helsinki.

After circling Oulu for several hours, he ordered the plane to land, and demanded more fuel. Another Finnair aircraft arrived in Oulu with the $168,000 in ransom the hijacker sought from the state-owned airline.

The ransom was paid, and the hijacker demanded an additional $38,000 from the country's largest newspaper, Helsingin Sanomat.

The hijacker demanded that part of the ransom be given to a hospital for crippled war veterans and to a home for orphans, and the rest to him family, authorities said.

The jet took off from Oulu and touched down again in Helsinki an hour later. He then released the last 11 passengers and was given the newspaper ransom.

Finnair negotiators, supervised by Finnish Transport Minister Veikko Saarto, kept in touch with the hijacker via the airport control at Helsinki.

'Ted in 1980' buttons appear

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Wearing "Ted in 1980" buttons, cheering Democrats on Saturday welcomed Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to New Hampshire, the state with the nation's earliest presidential primary.

"I suppose you're wondering why I am here," he teased the throngs of Democrats. He praised the Carter administration and did not once allude to whether he himself might want to be president.

Kennedy said he was "proud to join with so many fellow Democrats...for the cause of a Democratic victory in New Hampshire and throughout the country on Election Day in 1978."

"I may not be Elizabeth Taylor but it's nice to know the Kennedy name has a familiar ring in New Hampshire," the Massachusetts Democrat said as the delegates welcomed him with a standing ovation.

Miss Taylor, whose husband, John Warner, is the GOP candidate for a U.S. Senate seat from Virginia, recently was in New Hampshire to raise money for Republicans.

Four Out Of Five Families Do!... BUY WITH COUPONS SAVE CASH!

If You Think They "Don't Count," Think Of This...

$500 MILLION WORTH REDEEMED LAST YEAR!

U. S. consumers cashing in coupons to save cash

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Clip and cash. That's the motto for millions of Americans who are clipping, collecting and cashing in coupons in an effort to cut grocery bills. The U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that four out of five families — 80 percent — use coupons today. In 1970, a survey by the Nielsen Clearing House division of the A.C. Nielsen Corp. showed 65 percent of all households using coupons.

Manufacturers alone are expected to issue almost 70 billion coupons this year, according to the USDA, up from 62 billion in 1977 and 46 billion in 1976. Those figures do not include the millions of coupons issued by retailers, usually in newspaper advertisements. The more than 2 billion coupons redeemed last year had a face value of $500 million, the Agriculture Department says.

Command Performance
 ... "one of the hottest franchise deals going"
 Wall Street Journal 5.8.78

We are the fastest growing company in a nine billion dollar industry with operations across the United States and Canada. Our business is all cash with no receivables or perishables—and virtually no inventory—a proven hedge against inflation. Unusually high pre-tax return on investment, with immediate cash flow and long term capital gains potential. We provide a complete turn-key operation—from site selection to hiring and training staff—and then support our Licensees with essential services on a continuing basis. Since only 8 to 10 hours weekly supervision is necessary, many of our Licensees retain their present employment.

Our Licensees must submit impeccable references—both business and character. A total investment of about $80,000 per location is required. Some financing is available for qualified individuals.

Oklahoma storms past Missouri, 45-23

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Billy Sims wriggled through Missouri defenders for four touchdowns and had another called back on a penalty and Uwe von Schamann set an NCAA record for consecutive extra points Saturday as Oklahoma opened its Big Eight football season with a surprisingly easy 45-23 victory over Missouri.

Sims and quarterback Thomas Lott were the cogs that geared an impressive Sooner machine that ground out 484 yards on the ground and another 32 yards in the air during the game, virtually putting the game out of reach at 28-7 at the half.

Although Missouri was completely outmanned, Tiger quarterback Phil Bradley and backs James Wilder and Earl Gant never seemed intimidated. Bradley's squad kept the ball for nearly nine minutes on a final drive in the first half, getting 82 yards in 29 plays and leaving Oklahoma only 1:11 on the clock to gain back momentum before the players went into the clubhouse.

SIMS MADE several track meet-style runs, scoring the game's first touchdown just over two minutes after the opening whistle with a 42-yard sprint.

The junior speedster also scored on a 50-yard run in the first quarter and 1-yard plunges in the second and third periods.

He also romped for 78 yards into the end zone in the third quarter but the play was nullified by a holding penalty.

Sooner kicker von Schamann set the national record for consecutive point-after attempts with 93 and kicked a 54-yard field goal.

Missouri got a safety when von Schamann fumbled while trying to punt from the end zone. Bradley went over from the 1 and Wilder added 12 points with two 1-yard plunges.

The Sooners also scored on a 1-yard run by Jimmy Rogers and a 65-yard sprint by David Overstreet.

Turnovers drained strength from the Tiger effort in the last half as they lost a third-quarter drive when defensive headhunter George Cumby, a linebacker for the No. 1-ranked Sooners, knocked Gant loose from the football, which was picked up by Sooner Phil Tabor.

THE TIGERS also lost 72 yards to penalties but Oklahoma got its share of costly calls, losing 92 yards.

Missouri's sophomore quarterback kept the Sooner defense on their toes by completing 17 of 31 passes for a total of 200 yards. He also was instrumental in the Tiger's 263 yards on the ground with timely hand-offs as Gant picked up 149 yards and Wilder got 88.

Sooner defenders kept up a steady charge throughout the game with Cumby and fellow linebacker Daryl Hunt hurting the Tiger offensive effort. Cumby managed five unassisted tackles, recovered a fumble and intercepted a pass while Hunt stopped Mizzou runners 11 times with nine of the tackles unassisted.

The Sooner backfield was at full strength for the first time this season as halfback David Overstreet saw his first real action. Overstreet had missed the Sooner's first two winning efforts this year with a knee injury and saw only limited action in the 66-7 rout of Rice last week.

The sophomore came in in the third quarter and picked up 153 yards.

OKLAHOMA NOW is 4-0 for the season while Missouri slipped to 2-2.

Texas defense halts Tech

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Sixth-ranked Texas pinned Texas Tech down with its defensive muscle then unleashed Leroy King and Johnny "Ham" Jones on touchdown sorties to deal the Red Raiders a 24-7 loss Saturday night in a tense Southwest Conference football game.

The defending SWC champion Longhorns, boasting the No. 1 defense in the country, rattled Tech freshman quarterback Ron Reeves and made him pay for every mistake to the dismay of the standing room only crowd of 51,012.

Texas linebacker Bruce Scholtz intercepted Reeves' third pass of the game on the Tech 39 to set the tone for the one-sided match.

King followed Ham Jones' block to score on a 10-yard run to capitalize on the first Longhorn break.

TEXAS, NOW 3-0 for the year, struck in the second quarter to make it 14-0 when Steve McMichael forced Reeves to make a bad pitchout and then claimed the ball on the Red Raider 21. Eleven seconds later Ham Jones slashed 14 yards for the touchdown.

Ham Jones, who had over 100 yards rushing, bolted 16 yards for a third period touchdown after Reeves had fumbled and Rudy Izzard recovered on the Tech 34.

Russell Erxleben also kicked a 37-yard field goal as Texas held a comfortable 17-0 lead at intermission.

Shootout in Dallas awaits Steers

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech had been dispatched with typical Texas efficiency and now it was time to look ahead to the big one Saturday in Big D where the Longhorns will make their bid for No. 1 prominence.

The Steers established their role as a Southwest Conference contender with a 24-7 victory over Tech, capitalizing on Tech's youthful, if misguided enthusiasm.

Coach Fred Akers obviously was aware of the challenge, and with it, opportunity, Oklahoma offers, but he was hesitant to make any verbal commitments.

"I'm anxious to see how OU has been scoring all those points," he commented. One reason may be that last year's OU-Texas struggle was a tight-fisted defensive battle. Reminded of that, Akers retorted, "That was last year."

Still, while he wouldn't place Tech in Oklahoma's offensive class, he was pleased with the way it shutdown Tech, except when freshman Ron Reeves found end Godfrey Turner wandering around loose behind the Texas secondary for a 47-yard fourth period touchdown.

"We didn't get to him with our rush," Akers explained. "You can't let someone like that run around for five minutes and not expect to have somebody get open. Still, I have a sneaking suspicion that someone should have been closer to the receiver than they were."

It was about the only play Tech's

Dickey ignites Texas A&M past Memphis State

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Curtis Dickey's 65-yard scoring dash on Texas A&M's first offensive play put Memphis State "in a state of shock and we stayed that way the rest of the afternoon," Coach Richard Williamson said Saturday.

Williamson said Dickey, a 205-pound NCAA sprint champion, zoomed past him on the sideline "so fast I could hardly see him."

Dickey shredded Memphis State's defense for 167 yards on 11 carries — a 15.2 yard average — including another scoring run of 31 yards as eighth-ranked A&M routed Memphis State 58-0.

Williamson said A&M is as fine a group of athletes "as I have seen on any football team. They don't have one player who stands out. They have 11 players on each side of the ball who stand out on every play."

Coach Emory Bellard of A&M said with the exception of a missed extra point "I think we played as well as we could. Our defense couldn't look much better."

The A&M defense was so destructive that quarterback Lloyd Patterson, with a career offensive total of 4,026 yards — the most in Memphis State history — lost 47 yards trying to pass and completed only two of eight throws for 20 yards.

A&M quarterback Mike Mosley, who scored twice and executed a split-second pitch out to Dickey for A&M's second touchdown, said "Everyone was ready to play at home and show everyone what our offense could do."

The opening home game crowd of 56,818 was second only to the Texas-Texas A&M game here last year.

The only noteworthy performance by a Memphis State player was by 5-foot-7, 152-pound defensive back Tony Graves, who was credited with 15 tackles, the most by any player on either team.

(Related story on page 6-D)

freshman sensation of a week ago was free to roam around. Ron was nine for 23 for 151 yards, but had two interceptions.

"It was a physical game and a lot of boys will be bruised and sore tomorrow," Akers said. The two he was most worried about were defensive back Johnny Johnson, a pulled muscle, and Tim Campbell, who had his bell rung on a kickoff play and never got back in the game.

It was a game in which Akers got to use his freshman quarterback, Donnie Little from Dickinson, and one in which Johnny "Ham" Jones finally broke loose, gaining 128 yards in 21 carries for two touchdowns.

"Ham played well and ran hard. Little looked like a young quarterback that one day will be a good one, but I still will start Randy McEachern against Oklahoma."

Offensively, the Steers rolled up 327 yards rushing, making up for the sputtering attack of a week ago. Although Texas capitalized on Tech mistakes for its first two touchdowns, Akers was pleased with the way Texas moved the ball. "We moved the ball on several good drives. Fumbles and penalties stopped us, but we had more good drives than we've had at any time this year... I don't think I've ever seen that many holding penalties in a Southwest Conference game, at least not against a running team."

The perked up offense should make sleeping a bit easier for Akers this week, although you get the definite feeling he would prefer not to get into a running game with the Sooners.

Hayes wins 200th game against Baylor, 34-28

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Woody Hayes called his 200th victory at Ohio State, a 34-28 decision over Baylor Saturday, the most interesting in his 28-year football coaching career with the Buckeyes. "Usually, our defense bails out our offense. Today it was the reverse," a somber, nearly inaudible Hayes told newsmen after the triumph that elevated him into the company of the late Amos Alonzo Stagg.

The two are the only coaches in major college football history to post 200 triumphs at one school. Stagg achieved 243 victories in 41 University of Chicago seasons.

Baylor's Grant Teaff, despite three losses by a total of 12 points, lost none of his humor.

When he spotted a horde of newsmen in the Bears' dressing room,

Tallahassee, Fla. (AP) — Danny Davis used the triple option in awesome style as Houston scored on its first four possessions and held off a late Florida State comeback for a 27-21 victory over the 10th-ranked Seminoles Saturday night.

Emmett King rushed for 107 yards in the first half as Houston took a 27-0 lead. Davis completed seven of 10 passes for 79 yards and kept the FSU defense baffled with his sleight-of-hand ballhandling.

Reserve quarterback Wally Woodham came off the bench late in the second quarter and gave the Seminoles three touchdowns by the end of the third quarter.

But a Gerald Cook interception and an offensive holding penalty thwarted Woodham in the fourth quarter.

He hit an apparent touchdown pass to Jackie Flowers with 3:01 left, but the play was nullified when holding was called on an unidentified FSU lineman.

Houston is 2-1, while Florida State is 3-1.

Houston took a 14-0 lead six minutes into the game on Davis' 13-yard pass to tight end Garrett Jurgajtis and King's three-yard run, with Jimmy Jordan throwing an interception on the Seminoles' only play.

A four-yard run by Randy Love and a 56-yard gallop by John Newhouse gave Houston a 27-0 lead with 10:15 to go in the first half.

Woodham then replaced Jordan and moved FSU for a quick score on Mark Lyles' 19-yard run.

Woodham hit an 82-yard bomb to Flowers to make it 27-14 in the third quarter and Lyles scored on a statue of liberty play to cut the lead to 27-21.

The 14-yard play came with 1:10 to go in the third quarter.

King, a late-blooming senior for Houston, entered the game with 176 yards on 22 carries for an 8-yard average. He carried just 24 times in 1977, his first varsity season.

He and fellow senior Love immediately found gaping holes in the FSU line, which had problems against Oklahoma State veer offense two weeks ago.

King's 22-yard run keyed a seven-play opening touchdown drive for Houston. Two plays later, Davis hit Jurgajtis for the score.

For the second straight week, Jordan threw a costly interception. He passed on the Seminoles' first play and Elvis Bradley picked it off.

The Cougars, taking over on the FSU 41, needed six plays to take a 14-0 lead. Love gained 12 yards through the left side, Davis hit Willis Adams with a 12-yard pass and Love gained another nine yards.

King scored on a 3-yard run.

The Seminoles put together a slow-moving drive on their next possession. Jordan hit seven of 10 passes, but two went for losses and only a pair of 16 yards to Flowers sustained the drive. The Seminoles had to settle for a 45-yard field goal attempt by Dave Cappelen, whose kick was wide left.

Woodham came into the game and marched FSU 66 yards on seven plays, capped by Lyles' 19-yard run.

Yankees, Red Sox post AL East wins

Eckersley helps keep AL East race tight

BOSTON (AP) — Dennis Eckersley posted his 20th victory with a five-hitter Saturday as the Boston Red Sox sent the American League East race down to the wire with a 5-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

With their seventh consecutive victory and 11th in the last 13 games, the Red Sox remained one game behind the New York Yankees. The regular season ends today.

Eckersley, who has lost only eight games since being acquired from Cleveland just before the season began, boosted his Fenway Park record to 11-1 with the help of a four-run Boston first inning.

The 23-year old right-hander settled down after surrendering a two-out homer by Roy Howell in the first. He finished with nine strikeouts and one walk.

The Red Sox nailed down the decision quickly against Toronto's Jesse Jefferson, 7-16, with the help of Howell's error on a ground ball by leadoff hitter Rick Burleson in the first.

Jerry Remy doubled, sending Burleson to third and Jim Rice walked before Carl Yastrzemski grounded to first, scoring Burleson.

Carlton Fisk followed with a two-run single, the scored on a single by Fred Lynn and a sacrifice fly by Butch Hobson.

Howell's home run over the Toronto bullpen and into the bleachers in right was the first run off Boston pitching in 22 1-3 innings. Eckersley didn't give the Blue Jays another chance, permitting only one runner to advance as far as second.

Eckersley needed just 109 pitches in becoming a 20-game winner for the first time with his 16th complete game. He allowed just 89 earned runs in 268 innings this year.

Boston added insurance in the third inning as Fisk beat out a bunt, took third on the second of three singles by Lynn and scored as Hobson grounded into a double play.

After that, Jefferson was in command. But it was too late, with Eckersley on the mound for the Red Sox. The Red Sox finished with just seven hits, including three by Lynn and two by Fisk.

The Red Sox also had two double plays, giving them 13 in their last six games. They have not committed an error during their seven-game winning streak.

Figueroa takes 20th mound win over Tribe

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Figueroa pitched a five-hitter to become a 20-game winner for the first time and Chris Chambliss and Roy White drove in two runs apiece in a five-run first inning Saturday as the New York Yankees whipped the Cleveland Indians 7-0 and clinched a tie for the American League East Division pennant.

The Yankees can wrap up their third consecutive division crown by beating the Indians in Sunday's regular-season windup with Catfish Hunter, 12-5, opposing Rick Waits, 12-15. The Boston Red Sox remained one game behind the Yankees by defeating Toronto, 5-1.

The Yankees knocked out Mike Paxton, 12-11, before he could retire a batter. Singles by Mickey Rivers and Thurman Munson and a walk to Reggie Jackson loaded the bases. Graig Nettles singled off the glove of right fielder Dan Briggs for one run, Chambliss doubled for two more and Zite delivered the final two with a single.

That was more than enough to ensure the Yankees' sixth consecutive victory and 29th in the last 37 games, though they added a run in the second inning and Jackson homered in the fifth. The Indians have dropped six in a row, their longest losing streak of the season.

Figueroa, who has lost nine, walked two and struck out five in notching his eighth straight triumph since he was beaten on Aug. 23. In becoming baseball's first native-born Puerto Rican to win 20 games in a season, the 29-year-old right-hander erased the bitter memory of two unsuccessful tries at No. 20 two years ago, when he finished 19-10.

White's two-run single chased Paxton in favor of Rick Wise, who was touched for an infield hit by Jim Spencer. But then he got Brian Doyle to bunt into a force at third and Bucky Dent to ground into an inning-ending double play.

Wise was nicked for a run in the second on singles by Rivers and Munson and a sacrifice fly by Nettles.

Jackson opened the fifth with a tape-measure shot into the upper right field stands. It was his 26th of the season and 339th of his career, tying him with Joe Adcock for 32nd on the alltime list.

Meanwhile, the Indians got only three runners beyond first base against Figueroa, who hurled his second shutout of the season and continued a stretch of low-run pitching in which the Yankees have yielded only four runs during their six-game winning streak.

Rick Manning opened the game for Cleveland with a first-pitch double, but Jim Norris lined to center, Buddy Bell grounded out and Andre Thornton looked at a third strike.

Tom Verzer singled with one out in the Cleveland third and Norris drew a two-out walk but Bell struck out. Manning singled with one out in the eighth and took second as Norris grounded out, but was stranded when Bell lined to right.

The Fan Appreciation Day contest drew a crowd of 55,219, giving the Yankees a season total of 2,296,682 — their second highest in history and third-best ever in the American League.

Brewers nab win over A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Mike Caldwell needed seventh-inning relief help but collected his 22nd victory Saturday as the Milwaukee Brewers scored an 8-5 victory over the Oakland A's.

Caldwell, who leads the American League in complete games with 23, was knocked out during a three-run Oakland uprising which was capped by Rico Cart's two-run homer, his 31st of the year.

Milwaukee staked Caldwell to a 4-0 lead in the first on Don Money's solo home run and a three-run shot by Sixto Lezcano.

Oakland scored for the first time on Jeff Newman's solo homer in the second, his ninth of the season, and narrowed the gap to 8-2 in the sixth on consecutive singles by Carty, Newman, and Tim Hosley.

The A's threatened in the ninth, loading the bases with one out on Robin Yount's error and walks to Dell Alston and Carty. Bill Castro came on and, on a 3-2 pitch, Newman lined into a double play started by third baseman Sal Bando.

The victory clinched third place for Milwaukee in the American League East and marked their best finish ever.

Dodgers take easy win over Padres

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Steve Garvey hit a two-run homer and Dusty Baker added a double and a run-scoring triple and scored twice as the Los Angeles Dodgers snapped a four-game losing streak with a 7-0 triumph over the San Diego Padres Saturday night.

Tommy John, 17-10, worked the first five innings before giving way to Bob Welch. Rookie Steve Mura, 0-2, suffered the loss, allowing eight hits in the three innings he worked.

The victory clinched third place for Milwaukee in the American League East and marked their best finish ever.

Phillies capture Eastern Division

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies, powered by Greg Luzinski's three-run homer and a pair of solo homers by pitcher

Randy Lerch, clinched their third straight National League East title Saturday with a 10-8 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Phillies, who survived a four-run Pittsburgh ninth inning, will host the NL West champion Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night in the opener of the league's best-of-five playoff series.

The combined 13-hit pitching of Lerch, 11-8, Warren Brusstar, Tug McGraw and Ron Reed finished the Pirates, who needed a four-game sweep of the Phils to gain at least a tie for first and had their home winning streak stopped at 24 games.

The Phillies had 16 hits, then survived the Pittsburgh burst in the ninth to take their title. Dave Parker had a two-run single in the Pirates' last-gasp rally.

Richie Hebner's run-scoring double gave Philadelphia a 1-0 lead in the first off Pirates rookie Don Robinson.

Willie Stargell countered with a grand slam home run in the Pirate first after Lerch walked Omar Moreno and yielded singles to Parker and Bill Robinson.

In the second, Lerch clouted a solo homer to right-center. He drove another pitch from Robinson over the right field wall in the fourth inning to trim the Pittsburgh lead to 4-3.

Lerch had his only other big league homer earlier this season.

The Phillies took the lead to stay in the sixth inning when Luzinski rapped his three-run homer off reliever Grant Jackson, 7-5.

The Phils added four runs in the eighth on a bases-loaded double by Hebner and a sacrifice fly Mike Schmidt.

Luzinski's homer, his 35th, came after pair of infield singles by Bake McBride and Garry Maddox.

Hebner's three-run double, which came off Kent Tekulve, came after McBride and Larry Bowa singled and Luzinski was hit by a pitch.

Hebner took third on a throw to the plate and scored on Schmidt's sacrifice fly.

Philadelphia's four-run eighth began with singles by McBride and Bowa and chased reliever Ed Whitson.

After Maddox sacrificed, Luzinski was hit by a pitch to load the bases.

Then Hebner doubled into the right-field corner to clean the bases.

With McGraw pitching in the Pirates ninth, Pittsburgh loaded the bases with none out on singles by Ed Ott, Cito Gaston and Frank Taveras.

Omar Moreno force out drove in a run. Then Parker rapped a two-run single to center field.

Omar Moreno steals second base against Phillies Saturday.

Reds nab 4-0 victory over Braves

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ken Hendersen's home run supported the combined shutout pitching of Fred Norman and Doug Bair Saturday, carrying the Cincinnati Reds to a 4-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves in a game which started three hours, 38 minutes late because of rain.

Norman, 11-9, extended his career record at Riverfront Stadium to 47-20. He scattered five hits, struck out seven and retired the last 11 batters he faced before giving way to Bair in the eighth.

Phil Niekro, 19-18, failed to notch his third 20-victory season. The 39-year-old pitcher, who has 197 career victories, last accomplished the feat in 1974.

Pete Rose was held hitless in three official trips to the plate and will require three hits in the season's final game Sunday if he is to become the first player in baseball history to get 200 or more hits in 10 seasons.

The Reds scored twice in the first inning on a walk to Rose, who stole second and moved to third on Dan Driessen's fly and scored as Ken Griffey reached first on a fielder's choice.

Griffey scored from first on John Bench's double down the right-field line.

Astros take 7-4 victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Julio Gonzalez drove in a pair of runs with a squeeze bunt and a double to help the Houston Astros beat the San Francisco Giants 7-4 Saturday night.

Tom Dixon, 7-11, pitched the first six innings for Houston.

BOWLING BEAT

Gallagher gets A+ for 678, 746 series

By RANDY ISENBERG

Brent Gallagher had a smashing week on the lanes as he clobbered the pins in the Air Park Mixed League to the tune of 269 and 248 for a 678 series. Gallagher's other totals for the week included an A+ performance in the Midland College group with a set of 247-220-279 for a 746 series, 247-805 (4 games) in the Air Park Classic Scratch League, and a 227-623 total in the Friday Night Mixed League.

Meanwhile, Carol White was headlining the women as she totaled games of 214-217 and 207 for a 638 series while bowling in the Tuesday Twosome League. And Darrell Hopkins, a premier youth bowler in the area, rolled games of 222-200 and 202 for a 624 series in the Air Park J&S. Choya Young, whose 255 game and 847 four-game set was the pacesetter in the Air Park Classic Scratch League, and Guy Conley, whose 258 game preceded Young's 255 in heads up competition in the same loop, were among other scores that helped cap a good week of bowling in Midland during the past week.

All-spare games were rolled by Benita Gibson in the Sparette League and Melie Micevich, who rolled her spare game in the Exxon League. Their total scores were 181 and 180, respectively.

Sherry Franklin bowled 100 pins over her average with her first 200 while bowling in the Koffee Kup League. Jimmie Crouch, bowling in the High Sky League, just missed 600 as her evening was topped with a 237 game. Jo King just missed an 800 four-game set in the Ladies Scratch Trio on Sept. 18, as her evening was highlighted with a 230 game.

Naomi Malson, bowling in the Teachers League, rolled a fine 233 game, and Bonnie Saunders, who rolled a 235 game and 594 series, were runner-ups in the women's ranks. Bonnie rolled her fine set in the His & Hers League.

East Carolina tops Arlington

GREENVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Bill Lamm booted three field goals Saturday night to lift sluggish East Carolina to a 23-17 victory over error-prone Texas-Arlington in an intersectional football clash.

The Pirates, who got the ball seven times on turnovers, scored two touchdowns in the first quarter before quarterback Leander Green went to the sidelines with a hip pointer. Their offense was held in check by UTA for most of the rest of the evening.

UTAS's John Johnson fumbled the opening kickoff and East Carolina recovered at the 15-yard line. Anthony Collins slanted off tackle for a touchdown four plays later.

The Pirates then drove 58 yards for another score on their next possession, with Green going the final three yards on a keeper.

With Green watching from the sideline, the Pirates turned to Lamm for the rest of their scoring. He had a 33-yard field goal in the second period and field goals of 40 and 29 yards in the third quarter.

Tom Skokrupa had field goals of 35, 27 and 33 yards for UTA, which put together several drives but stalled deep in ECU territory.

UTA's only touchdown came on a 56-yard pass from quarterback Roy Dewalt to split end Scott Burt in the second quarter.

East Carolina intercepted two UTA passes and recovered five of the losers' eight fumbles.

This is the amazing shoe you've seen demonstrated on TV.

No. Texas takes win over OSU

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The running of Bernard Jackson and passing of Jordan Case carried North Texas State to two quick first-quarter touchdowns and a 12-7 victory Saturday over Oklahoma State.

Jackson, who gained 124 yards in 29 carries, accounted personally for 41 yards in an 80-yard drive getting the first NTSU touchdown on a one-yard punt.

Case hit four of five passes for 32 yards in the first drive, then hit four of four in a six-play, 51-yard scoring drive minutes later, including an eight-yard TD pass that Charlie Murray made a diving catch of in the end zone.

Scott Burks went eight yards on a quarterback keeper as Oklahoma State took a 7-0 lead in the first three minutes of the game. Sophomore wide receiver James Cowins, brother of Arkansas' Ben Cowins, went 48 yards on a pass reverse to set up the score.

Oklahoma State defensive tackle Jerry Winchester blocked the first conversion kick, forcing Case to go for two points after the second TD, but his pass was batted away.

North Texas' Milton Collins missed to the right on a 39-yard field goal early in the second quarter, and Collin Ankersen was short on a 46-yard try for Oklahoma State late in the third quarter.

North Texas State now is 4-1 for the season and Oklahoma State is 0-4.

Colorado in runaway Longhorns haze Tech in Jones Stadium

By TERRY WILLIAMSON R-T Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — The University of Texas Longhorns proved here Saturday night in Jones Stadium that hazing of college freshmen is still in vogue after thrashing Texas Tech 24-7 in a Southwest Conference football-style party raid.

Only the Goldfish is missing from the 'Horns' hazing technique. They use a stubborn rush instead of a paddle and a senior task master to stuff footballs down the throat of would-be cocky freshmen.

Freshman of note, of course, was Tech quarterback Ron Reeves, who came off the bench last week to lift the Red Raiders to a shocking victory over Arizona. But here Saturday, the Lubbock Monterey product found out that his lesson as a phenom is not complete. By the time Reeves solved Texas for a 47-yard TD bomb in the fourth period, Tech was already behind 24-0.

Two fumbles and an interception by Reeves led to 21 of Texas' 24 points. Reeves was still battling in the end, but he must have had a sore throat from all that Texas stuffing.

Reeves gave Texas three cheapies and that hurt the most. After his three big mistakes in his own territory, Texas had only to mount scoring drives of 39, 21 and 33 yards. That was really it.

And Texas' senior task master, Johnny "Ham" Jones, gave Reeves some more lessons with 128 yards rushing in 21 carries and two TDs. Reeves would probably like to have a senior to fall back on like that, but he didn't.

Reeves, however, did complete nine of 23 passes for 151 yards while rushing for 40 more against Texas' proud defenses.

"No, I'm not discouraged," Reeves said. "I made some bad mistakes out there. I would like to change some of the things that happened, but I can't. Texas has a tremendous pass rush and you have to give them a lot of credit for forcing mistakes. I threw a couple of times when I didn't really have my balance. But I learned a few things out there and I still have confidence that I can move the team."

Maybe it was a good lesson for Reeves, and maybe it won't be long until he becomes the teacher.

Stanford takes narrow victory

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Sophomore tailback Darrin Nelson rushed for 200 yards, including 22 on a touchdown play which opened Stanford's fourth-quarter comeback, as the 20th-ranked Cardinals beat Tulane 17-14 Saturday.

The Cardinals of the Pacific-10 trailed 14-3 after three periods and might have been even further behind had not linebacker Gordy Ceresino stopped two Tulane drives with goal-line tackles in the first quarter.

Nelson ran 22 yards up the middle for Stanford's first touchdown, concluding a 67-yard drive that began late in the third period. Next time Stanford got the ball, quarterback Steve Dils directed an 88-yard drive that ended with his 22-yard touchdown pass to Ken Margerum.

Arkansas stages rally to dump Hurricanes

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Tulsa coach John Cooper said Saturday that Arkansas is not overrated, but that his team is underrated.

That was how he explained the fact that Arkansas, ranked No. 2 in the country and a 30-point favorite, had to score three times in the second half to beat Tulsa, 21-13.

"I think they're the best team in the country," Cooper said. "We just got beat. We played about as good a game as we could."

Tulsa led 7-0 at the half, but Arkansas running back Ben Cowins scored twice in the third quarter as the Razorbacks took a 14-7 lead.

"Arkansas has everything a college football team could want—good players, good coaches, good facilities and good fans—super fans. Their fans helped them a lot at the start of the second half. The fans got them going."

"In the second half, we made up our minds to play better," said Cowins, who rushed for 118 yards on 21 carries. "We are up for the games, but we're just making a lot of mistakes. I was a little surprised to be down by seven at halftime. We understood what we had to do and came out and played well in the second half."

Arkansas coach Lou Holtz said the Razorbacks played well offensively for about a quarter and a half Saturday.

"It's difficult to move the football and gain consistency when you have five turnovers and seven penalties. But we came out and started the third quarter and really came back and played well. Our backs ran well, and our offensive line blocked well throughout the third quarter and the middle of the fourth.

"We had too many foolish penalties, and boy, did we have a bundle of them," Holtz said. "Seemed like they were all 15-yards. Any time you get 108 yards in penalties, it makes it really tough on you."

"All in all, it was a win, and I'm proud of the way the team came back. We're improving, and we did some things better than last week, but what hurt us was the number of turnovers and mistakes. When you make as many as we did today, you normally don't expect to win."

Cooper said that he was disappointed that Tulsa was unable to take advantage of two punts that Arkansas fumbled in the third quarter. On the first one, Tulsa took over at its own 38 and moved to the Arkansas 31 before cornerback Brad Shoup tackled Sherman Johnson for a 1-yard loss on fourth down.

From that point, Arkansas moved 68 yards to tie it, 7-7.

With Arkansas leading, 14-7, Shoup fumbled a punt, and Tulsa's Rickey Watts recovered at the Golden Hurricane 43. Tulsa, however, was unable to make a first down and had to punt.

Louisiana State rips hapless Rice, 37-7

HOUSTON (AP) — Louisiana State tailback Charles Alexander ran 19 and 12 yards for touchdowns and broke Bert Jones' career total offense record Saturday night to lead the 11th-ranked Tigers to a 37-7 rout of winless Rice.

Alexander, who finished the game with 144 yards rushing on 24 carries, ran 19 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter and already had 104 yards rushing early in the second period when he left the game after being shaken up.

The Tigers, who had not played up to their potential in two previous games, also scored in the first half on a 34-yard field goal by Mike Conway, a seven-yard run by Hokie Gajan and David Woodley's one-yard quarterback keeper for a 24-0 halftime lead.

After sitting out the final 10 minutes of the second quarter, Alexander returned in the third period and completed LSU's 82-yard drive with his 12-yard TD run.

Alexander now has 3,291 yards on 661 total plays to surpass the former record of 631-3,202 held by Jones.

Rice, which dropped to 0-4, missed scoring chances in the third quarter when quarterback Randy Hertel came off the bench to lead two drives deep into LSU territory.

Texas A&I rolls

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Quarterback Elvis Hartsfield ran for one touchdown and threw for another Saturday night as Texas A&I rolled over Texas Southern 28-0 in a nonconference college football game.

Fullback Ricky Smith scored on touchdown runs of one and 21 yards and runningback Jafus White rambled for 114 yards on 18 carries as the Javelinas gathered 329 yards on the ground.

Hartsfield added another 118 yards through the air, including a 7-yard scoring toss to Bryan Sweeney.

ship with a 2-0 ledger and Tech is 1-2 overall and 0-1 in conference play.

REEVES FINALLY GOT the frustrated Red Raiders on the board with a 47-yard touchdown pass to flanker Godfrey Turner who had streaked behind the Longhorn secondary.

The Longhorns recovered four fumbles and intercepted two passes by Reeves, who was the hero of Tech's upset victory last week over Arizona.

Texas only had to drive 39, 21 and 34 yards for its touchdowns.

Texas Coach Fred Akers inserted freshman quarterback Donnie Little into the game to give the Longhorns an outside threat. However, it was Little's interception that led to Texas Tech's fourth-quarter touchdown.

When Reeves hit Turner with a 47-yard touchdown pass midway through the fourth-quarter it was the first touchdown that Texas had allowed this year.

REEVES ALSO HIT Nelson with a 40-yard completion as Tech drove to the Longhorn one-yard-line early in the fourth quarter. Freshman running back Kenneth James fumbled and the Longhorns swarmed on the ball at the one.

Texas, which was already crippled defensively, lost All-SWC Johnnie Johnson with a pulled hamstring in the second quarter and the extent of the injury was not immediately announced.

Happy linebacker Bryan Horn of Wichita State jumps for joy after recovering a West Texas State fumble and returning it for a touchdown. Horn's score came only 15 seconds into the game. (AP Laserphoto).

Museum of the Southwest visitor Teresa Roberts, intrigued by the large panel photo of a basket headdress, "tries on" one of the small, finely woven baskets included in the museum's current show, "Indian Baskets of Western North America." ### Museum has noteworthy exhibit

One of the most important and noteworthy exhibitions of the new season is now on view at Midland's Museum of the Southwest.

The display, titled "Indian Baskets of Western North America," presents outstanding examples of fine Indian basketry from tribes through the Southwest, West Coast and Pacific Northwest. The exhibition presents items of varying shapes, sizes and uses.

Southwestern Indian tribes represented with fine examples of basket-making include the Hopi, Paiute, Chemahuevi, Pima, Papago, Navajo and Apache.

West Coast and Pacific Northwest tribal groups represented include the Nontha, Makah, Hupa, Eskimo, Karak, Yurok, Pomo, Nez Perce and Mission Indians.

The display is made up of fine basketry from the permanent collections of the Bowers Museum in Santa Ana, Calif.

The exhibition had its initial showing at that museum and now is being circulated to selected museums throughout the country by the Smithsonian Institution's traveling exhibition service.

The exhibition will remain on view in the Museum of the Southwest's Turner Memorial Galleries through Oct. 15. Selected school groups from Midland's public and private schools are being given guided tours of the exhibition by docents of the Museum of the Southwest.

The museum is open to the public free of charge weekdays and Sunday afternoons. Weekday hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., while Sunday hours are 2 to 5 p.m.

Abstract paintings featured in show

ODESSA — The geometric abstract paintings of Arizona artist Howard Conant are featured in a show opening Monday in the art gallery at the University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Conant, professor and head of the art department at the University of Arizona, Tucson, has shown his work throughout the U.S. and is recipient of the National Gallery of Art's 25 anniversary medal for outstanding service to art education.

A reception officially opening the Conant exhibition is scheduled for 7 p.m. Monday in the art gallery, located on the third floor of the UTPB main building. Conant will be at the reception and will present a gallery talk at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend the event and hear the artist free of charge.

Conant has written several books and numerous articles on art and art education. Before joining the University of Arizona faculty, he served as professor and chairman of art at New York University. He holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Wisconsin and took his doctoral degree from the University of Buffalo.

The artist's show will continue in the UTPB gallery through Nov. 3. Gallery hours at 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday each week. There is no fee for admission.

Comedian-TV actor Al Lewis, as Barney in "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," registers shock at the pronouncements of young actress Bobbie Michelle, portrayed by Patricia Bay. "Red Hot Lovers" is the current attraction at The Mansion dinner theater between Midland and Odessa, with performances to continue through Oct. 29.

Neil Simon farce a humorous delight

One guy and three gals currently are providing the entertainment at The Mansion.

The guy is Al Lewis, an ex-vaudevillian and professional funnyman who is starring as "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," the Neil Simon farce which has just opened at the dinner theater between Midland and Odessa. The gals are a talented and attractive trio sharing the show's three acts (one at a time) with Lewis who, incidentally, is probably best-remembered as Grandpa on TV's "The Munsters."

Together, the four provide some hilarious, light-hearted and very light-weight hanky-panky that should please audiences hereabouts.

"Red Hot Lovers" is certainly not one of playwright Simon's strongest shows, but it has many funny moments, and Old Comedy Pro Lewis (who has directed the show as well as acting in it) has exploited its comedy potential to the fullest. I personally think he may have exploited its zaniness a little too fully, but perhaps not.

At any rate, once Lewis gets his audience in the palm of his hand, which doesn't take long, he's off and running. However, that is not to suggest this comedy is particularly fast-paced, because it is not. The show is slowed down considerably by various stage-business and comedy routines and it tends to drag as a result — and it's a fairly long show to begin with. "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" is Simon's tale of a middle-aged businessman, Barney Cashman, who feels that life is passing him by and who longs for one, just one, extramarital fling.

In his eagerness to have that fling, he picks up, and attempts to make out with, an odd assortment of women: Elaine, a hard-faced, hardboiled, bored housewife; Bobbie, a flakey, spaced-out young actress, and Jeanette, a depressed, determinedly-unhappy family friend. The three are portrayed respectively by Patsy Allen and Patricia Bay, a pair of Odessa actresses, and Dee Rutledge, a newcomer to The Mansion from San Diego. They are all quite attractive actresses and all do very well in their assignments.

Miss Bay, especially, is quite good as the pot-smoking, fantasizing appears with Lewis is the slowest and least appealing act in the play but Miss Rutledge does much to make it at least reasonably palatable. She is capable and convincing.

As previously noted, "Last of the Red Hot Lovers" is rather slow moving but hopefully it will quicken in pace as the production continues. I hope so, because its really quite a funny show and has a lot of clever dialogue. It's a good dinner theater vehicle — light and lively.

Dee Rutledge, as the gloomy Jeanette, is also excellent in her rather demanding role. The play's third act in which she

ABC to show 'The Users' tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was as if an occult hand had taken "The Users," Joyce Haber's spicy novel of tawdry Hollywood, made it a dull TV movie of tawdry Hollywood and turned good trash to bad.

Be that as it may, ABC will air "Users" today. Producers Aaron Spelling and Douglas S. Cramer claim it's intended as "a glamour movie in the grand Hollywood tradition." You have been warned.

The main players are Jaclyn Smith and Tony Curtis. She plays Elena, a pretty movie extra and part-time prostitute in Arizona who uses her part-time proceeds to aid her crippled mother.

Tony plays Randy Brent, a fading star whose wife committed suicide. He is making a movie in Arizona. He needs a hit film badly. But his acting is going badly. The producer (George Hamilton) gets an idea.

He hires Elena on the sly for $300 to bolster the star's ego and save the film, adding: "If Randy doesn't make it this time, he'll be deadlier than his wife — in Hollywood, at least."

Well, not only does she cheer up Randy that night, she even returns the $300 the next morning. Seems they've fallen in love. Lo, Randy whisks her by private jet to California.

He takes her on a quick tour of Beverly Hills — "land of the free and home of the movie stars" — and thence to his Spanish-style mansion that Tyrone Power built and in which Howard Hughes once lived.

You may suspect a downhill trend when she says: "I want to see the most important room in the house — our bedroom."

As the plot thins, other players check in, like his superstar daughter, Marina (Michelle Phillips); a social arbiter-for-hire (Joan Fontaine) and a superagent (Red Buttons), who does movie business and lady business in his home's big Jacuzzi whirlpool bath.

Marina likes Elena, who is her age and soon becomes her stepmother-in-law. Marina warns her, in speaking of Dad: "If this picture (the just made) is a bomb, he could go right off the deep end." Well, upon learning the film is a bomb, Dad does get distraught. He vanishes into the night and takes up with a young male screenwriter. When Dad's new bride learns of the liaison, she gasps: "So this is the deep end Marina told me about."

Duo-pianists coming here

Duo-pianists Grant and Winn will come to the city this week to initiate Midland Community Concerts Association's 1978-79 season.

Their concert is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in the auditorium of Midland High School, open to MCCA members and their guests only, with no single tickets available.

Vitality, exceptional musical ability and impressive virtuosity — these are the notable facets which characterize the flourishing career of Cameron Grant and James Winn as one of the nation's most brilliant and gifted duo-piano teams.

Both men were born in Denver, Colo., where they first studied with composer and conductor Antonia Brico. The duo made an official American debut with the Denver Symphony when they were 14.

More recently, in 1977, the pair received raves for their European debut as a duo-piano team with the Frankfurt Radio Symphony Orchestra.

Grant and Winn also perform as soloists and in one-piano, four-hand keyboard literature. For their Wednesday night program here, the pair has programmed works by Frederic Chopin, Benjamin Britten, Camille Satint-Saens and Johannes Brahms.

Police and firemen join forces in contest

The Midland police and fire departments will join forces in a contest to out-do each other in the 1979 United Way of Midland campaign.

"It's a contest between the two departments to benefit the United Way by helping them to bring in their accounts," said Assistant Fire Marshal Jerry Petree.

Petree will head up the Fire Department's side of the drive, and Police Inspector Joe Miles will lead the police toward their goal.

Petree said officers and firemen from the two departments will be contacting about 360 businesses to solicit pledges to the United Way, which funds 19 service- and education-oriented agencies.

He said the firemen and policemen will not be asking for "employee-type donations."

The number of businesses to be contacted will be divided between the two departments.

"The winner will be based on who brings in the most money," Petree said.

The effort will be coordinated by Salvation Army Capt. Bob Vincent, who is a United Way campaign leader.

Both Petree and Miles said they would begin planning the contest-campaign this week.

The United Way goal for 1979 is $928,686.

Older persons stay independent

Marion Fisher, standing, explains to Mrs. W. L. Brown the directory of services compiled by Senior Services to put older residents in touch with Midland organizations and agencies offering programs and services of special interest to them. (Staff Photo)

By PATSY GORDON
R—T Lifestyle Editor

"I love my aging mother. But I resent her. And I feel so damn guilty about it."
Three universal feelings bottled up in the same troubled heart. Why?"

Love, resentment and guilt are words counselors hear a lot from adult "children" whose elderly parents are driving them up the wall because of the demands an aging parent can make because of the aging process or physical and mental problems.

They may live with an adult child, alone, or in board and care facilities, convalescent homes or retirement center.

Emotionally, the demands of an aging parent or parents can create a high degree of emotional stress on the adult.

But the answer does not always have to be to put the parent or parents in a nursing home, although sometimes it is necessary. But there are social services available in Midland to keep those growing older where they want to be...in their own homes.

In the case of Bill and Bob Brown, their parents were not driving them up the wall but they were worried about their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Brown of 2200 S. Lamesa Road, who live alone. The father has been diagnosed as terminally ill, so the mother has been left to do the paperwork and everything else her husband used to take care of.

The Browns were married July 30, 1923 in Abilene, Texas, came to Midland in 1926 and have been here ever since except for a seven-year stint from 1945-52 in Fort Worth. He went to work for Gulf Oil Corp. in 1925 at Big Lake and stayed with the corporation until 1960.

After retirement, the couple traveled until 1976 around the United States and to Mexico in their Airstream. "We would be gone for 4-5 months at a time," said Mrs. Brown. The Browns rented a duplex in Midland which they would come back to between trips.

After Brown became ill, the Airstream was traded for a mobile home, which is a very lovely and comfortable place for the couple to live. And they would like to keep it this way as long as possible.

This is where the sons stepped in. They contacted Marion Fisher at Midland Senior Services, Inc., a non-profit social service agency that provides a variety of services to the elderly and their families. The sons wanted to do everything they could to keep the parents independent and arrange things before an emergency arises.

W. L. "Bill" Brown Jr. lives in Pawhuska, Okla., and Bob lives in El Paso.

The sons also met with a counselor at Family Services of Midland to make sure what they were doing was right and that they were going in the right direction.

The parents are receiving the services of Meals-On-Wheels, Family Services and volunteers in Mrs. Fisher's office help with medicare, insurance and other forms as necessary.

Mrs. Brown does all of her housework and still drives the family car. At this point, Mr. Brown does not want any one to come into the home to help.

Directory of services

Here is a list of organizations and their telephones, along with categories of services available to older persons and their families.

Swap homes for super vacation

Mike and Cynthia Seeberg of La Jolla, Calif., recently returned from a month in England.

From the "headquarters" in the small village of Goring-on-Thames, they could go to London for the theater — about an hour away — off on trips to Scotland, the Cotswolds, Oxford.

In between, they just stayed home, shopping for groceries in a tiny neighborhood store and finding their evening's entertainment listening to the local gossip in a village pub.

In the meantime, the owners of the home in Goring-on-Thames, Michael and Maureen Marshall, and their two children were spending their vacation in La Jolla, where the Seeberg's house served as their base of operations.

The Marshalls and the Seebergs were among a growing number of families who are turning to house swapping for a vacation solution.

While in some instances house swappings come about through mutual friends, or because a private individual has advertised in a publication or journal, most contacts are made through organizations designed for this purpose.

Two which have been doing this for a number of years are Vacation Home Exchange Club in New York City and Holiday Home Exchange, Grants, N.M.

In both cases, those who subscribe to the service receive lists of people interested in home swapping in the United States and abroad. In some cases, the listing indicates where a vacation home is desired, in other cases the lists are open to suggestions.

Listings provide the names of the family, address and, generally, an indication of the house size and general area. They may be listed in the guide at their own option.

Within the past two years, Judith Rusk of San Diego, Calif., has begun a somewhat different service, in that she advertises for clients who want to swap houses and then handles the negotiations for them. In the case of the other two services, all negotiations are handled by the potential swappers.

It was Rusk who arranged the Seeberg-Marshall swap, when the Marshalls answered an ad she had placed in a London newspaper and the Seebergs saw a local ad for her services.

She met with the Seebergs, checked out their home, took photos, requesting the same kind of information from the Marshalls.

It turned out to be a perfect swap. The couples even took to each other when they met in London before the Marshalls' departure for La Jolla.

As with many other swaps, more than just the house was involved. They used each other's cars. (Mike Seeberg discovered that insurance policies on both house and cars would cover the Marshalls, since they were classified as houseguests rather than tenants, and the same held true for the Marshalls' policies.)

Since Seeberg belongs to a golf and tennis club here and the Marshalls belong to a golf club in England, reciprocal privileges were arranged.

The best part for both families, however, was to find themselves with contacts when they arrived at their temporary homes, for both families had alerted people about them.

For David Gee of Harpenden, England, house swapping has provided not only a vacation for his wife and three children, but a chance to visit with his parents who retired to Laguna Hills, Calif., from England about 20 years ago.

The Gees are staying in a redwood and glass house in Del Mar, Calif., "totally unlike any house you'd find in England," he said. He also said they have found the general atmosphere here far more fast-paced than in England.

House swapping can land vacationers in a section of the country they might not normally visit on a conventional tour. Several years ago, for example, Marian and Ruth Jenkins of La Jolla exchanged homes with an English family in Cornwall. The house, it turned out, was on a hill overlooking an estuary, across a bridge from Plymouth. From their windows the La Jollans could watch the tides, the river traffic and water fowl.

They arranged their swap by answering an ad in The English Speaking Union bulletin, and made the decision to go at the last moment, Marian Jenkins said.

Most swaps, however, follow a considerable amount of correspondence between families.

Mary De Valdo of the Vacation Home Exchange Club, which is at 350 Broadway in New York City, said that certain basic information should be exchanged at the outset of negotiations.

Information about the house itself should be exchanged, but people are more interested in knowing about transportation, auto exchange, (those who have exchanged here say that a car is an absolute necessity) and what the area has to offer.

"Right in the beginning, both parties should put down, in black and white, how expenses, such as utilities, should be handled," De Valdo said. "Each family should provide lists of doctors, dentists, baby sitters, house repairman, and the name of the shop where the car is normally serviced. Both families should alert neighbors of the arrival of the visitors, as well."

De Valdo said that about the biggest potential disaster is great differences in housekeeping.

Those who have done house swapping locally, however, have not run into any problems in terms of housekeeping.

House swapping is not new, particularly in Europe, according to De Valdo.

While most swaps are with United Kingdom countries, more are now being arranged with other countries, now that the exchange is affiliated with an old European exchange, she said.

"We're finally getting more people from New Zealand, now that the dollar has dropped and more have the chance to come," she said. "For some reason, it's harder to get French people to exchange."

"We've also had a difficult time making arrangements in Africa and India. We did have a request from Budapest, but we just about never have any Iron Curtain country exchanges." —Copley News Service.

Program's success brings gift

The Mother's Day Out program at First Christian Church keeps a waiting list for most of its pre-school age classes—a sure sign of success.

It was the successfulness of the Tuesday and Thursday program that prompted a donation, made by the grandfather of a two-year-old in the program, to provide the facility with new equipment.

Shanon Moffett, director of the program, believes its popularity is due in part to the need for this kind of facility in Midland. Another aspect, she says, is that the Mother's Day Out staff tries to provide more than a baby sitting service. "We try to teach in every classroom except for the infants—whether it's singing songs or tying shoes."

The facility, while donated by the First Christian Church, is open to all children in the city. Dr. C. G. Smith, who contributed to the program for his granddaughter, Skye, was one who did not belong to the church but had an interest in the facility.

According to the director, the day care facility at First Christian Church is like all others in one respect. Its materials, even the most durable, wear out. These toys, records and sports materials are not replenishable through the $3 a day fee parents pay to send their children.

Mrs. Moffett asks that Midlanders contribute used toys and other new or used recreational materials to the program.

For information on the Mother's Day Out Program or for donating materials to the program, contact Mrs. Moffett on Tuesdays or Thursdays at First Christian Church, 682-2546.

Levis that girdle bring back blue jeans

By NATALIE BEST
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Blue jeans are dead? Not on your life.

A "Sneak" preview of the Levi Strauss spring collection reveals a host of new s-t-r-e-t-c-h, bend-over, glove-fit, bright-colored pants for everybody, for all occasions — sizes zero to 42.

"They're made to 'girdle' the world," said Strauss' division manager, Jim McDermott, proudly. "No longer will the blue jeans wearer have to suffer through a bathtub shrinking and fading session to look molded. Levis will be offered in assorted shades and colors, including that sought-after faded blue denim look. And the size will 'grab' 'em, with a form-fit from waist to ankle."

The Bend Over Gardine, a trade name, is 100 percent dacron polyester.

Also, the five-pocket, rivet pants, popular for 128 years, will be available in glove-fit shorts and skirts as well as long pants.

So get in stride. Levi Strauss, the oldest and largest apparel manufacturing company in the world, has done it again.

The Levi's look that won the west also has won the east, the south and every point in between.

Levi Strauss will sell its one billionth pair of pants during 1978. That figure indicates that seven out of every 10 persons in the Western world have purchased a pair of blue jeans sometime or other. And that emphasizes their slogan: "Levi's cover the asses of the masses."

Never before have Levi's been so versatile.

"We've always felt that a pair of blue jeans belonged in everyone's life," said McDermott. "From toddler to dodderer, he and she should enjoy the comfort and service of a sturdy, flattering pair of Levi's, the trousers made famous by California's gold rush miners."

"Now we have new Levis, from plow pants to party pants, that will appeal to cowpokes and disco dancers alike."

Appealing to the Saturday Generation, a series of Party Pants, highly polished, red or black, cotton, molded pants — with the traditional trademark, the label at the back — were introduced by a group of tall, leggy models doing the boogie to a rock beat. It was all part of the "secret" show for reps-only given at a hideaway to the south called the Kona Kai Club on San Diego's Bay.

The gyrated hopping at 8:15 in the morning was an eye opener and also served to provide the desired image — a wrinkle-proof, slim-legged garment that was ready for anything, from a disco party to moments of "Grease" and "Fever" living. Glamorous blouses and jewelry plus "wonder" heels (spike heels in other years) added to the "party" flavor.

(Levi Strauss, the party bachelor who brought the original tent material to San Francisco in 1849, would have been delighted.)

A second version of the new look in denims was the Plowboy jeans, patterned after a Levi poster of the 1880s. The Wyatt skirt was narrowed and center slit to reveal the knees. The Plowboy line also was shown with strap sandals as well as boots and featured the longtime favorite riveted pockets, buttoned fly and leather patch logo.

Riveted pockets were invented to hold the pockets together when the miners loaded them with gold. The same copper rivets on 14-and-a-half ounce denim is still used.

The glove-fit jeans, a wrap-around, no outseams constructed pants, were a highlight of the preview. They offered the finest qualities of a blue jean girdle, made to mold and fit almost any figure, still offering "instant identity" with the Levi patch over the rear pocket.

Levis do it again. Five models display Levis from 1849 to spring '79 at the Kona Kai Club on San Diego Bay. High heels and stetsons highlight the "new" fashion look. (Copley News Service Photo)

Feline ungrateful

TOLEDO, Ohio. (AP)—A stray cat that had stuck its head into an abandoned jar to reach some honey in the bottom and couldn't get out again was brought to the Humane Society here recently.

Staffers managed to get some paper toweling into the jar to protect the cat's face against broken glass, and then broke the jar.

When it was all over, the cat walked away calmly without a scratch and without so much as a thank you.

Police lieutenant uses needlepoint to relax

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — Ned Day has something in common with Roosevelt Grier — when he picks up his needlepoint nobody laughs.

"Being the lieutenant of investigation, I don't get too much ribbing from the guys at work," says the Tuolumne County sheriff's officer. But he hasn't had any converts, either.

That doesn't bother the 37-year-old Day, who is still excited about his second-place ribbon for a needlepoint entry in the Mother Lode Fair here earlier this year.

His wife, Clare, talked him into entering a pillow with an outdoor scene featuring two mallard ducks taking flight from the water.

The former Los Angeles police officer said he took up needlepoint shortly before moving to this Central California mountain community four years ago to take his mind off work.

"I needed something to relax and unwind with after I got home. Needlepoint fills the bill perfectly because it is detailed work that requires your full attention to turn in a good job," Day says.

"I had several other hobbies at the time and most of those weren't relaxing, like archery and shooting, things I couldn't do inside the house," he says.

Day says he got the idea for needlepoint from Grier, the former Los Angeles Rams defensive tackle.

"I saw Rosey Grier on TV talking about needlepoint, and it looked like something I would enjoy," Day says.

So he bought supplies to make a belt for his wife and learned mostly by trial and error until he bought a book to learn different stitches.

Since then he has made "just about anything that strikes my fancy," and many of his friends have received his creations as gifts.

The lieutenant wasn't the only Day who won at the fair this year. His two daughters won two ribbons and three honorable mentions with drawings and ceramics in the children's crafts division.

The prize-winning pillow was completed in 150 hours in "bits and pieces of time — in between murders, robberies and burglaries," but Day laughs when asked if his work influences his subject matter for his creations.

Although Day spends considerable time on stakeouts with his men, he says needlepointing is out of the question while working because of the intense concentration needed for both the job and the hobby.

"Besides, most of our stakeout work is at night and there just isn't enough light to needlepoint by."

DEAR ABBY

Homosexual on suicide verge from losing friend

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 20-year-old male and I'm gay. My best friend (I'll call him Bob) and I recently got into some heavy discussions and ended up confessing our innermost secrets.

When I told Bob I was gay, he became very angry and said he never wanted me near him again. Then he left.

I am not sexually attracted to Bob. He's my best friend and I don't want to lose him. Other than my friendship with him, I'm pretty much a loner.

Last year I was on the verge of taking my life. So I went to a suicide prevention center. They talked me out of going through with it, but now I'm considering suicide again. I've analyzed my situation and seriously wonder if my life is worth the pain of living it.

I look to you as a last chance, Abby. If your advice doesn't help me, I will just go with what I think is the best solution.

Please answer soon. I can't wait much longer. —CONFIDENTIAL IN DETROIT

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: Your former friend Bob has a lot to learn about homosexuality if he feels threatened by your confession, and ended your friendship for that reason. You haven't lost much. Friends worth having accept you as you are.

Please go back to the suicide prevention center. They do more than just talk you out of committing suicide. They have competent counselors who will help you get your head together. Go now, and write to me soon and tell me how you're doing. I care.

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and my parents are divorced. My mother has remarried and so has my father. The problem is, my father has had TWO divorces, and is engaged to be married again. That doesn't really bother me. It's his life and he's entitled to happiness, but Abby, he is 53 and his girlfriend is 23! And that bothers me.

I've talked to him about it, but it did no good. He says he doesn't want to be alone. I can understand that, but I wish he'd find a woman nearer his age.

Don't get me wrong. I like his girlfriend, it's just that she is younger than my older sister.

I love my father very much. What can I do?—WORRIED ABOUT DAD

DEAR WORRIED: Cool it. If you really love your father and want him to be happy, the best thing you can do for him is to accept his young fiancée, and hope for the best.

DEAR ABBY: Being an avid reader of your column, I have noted many different kinds of problems, but the one that has always puzzled me is the problem of the single woman in love with a married man.

She thinks if only he would divorce his wife, they would get married and live happily ever after!

Why doesn't that foolish woman realize that if the man does ditch his wife and marry her, she has no assurance that he will not repeat his unfaithfulness and dump her for someone else?

I think if those "other women" who are drooling over another woman's husband would take this into consideration, quite a few would take up their lines and go fishing in a clearer stream.

What is your opinion?—BOGART, GA.

DEAR BOGART: Love is a "mental disease." It doesn't respond to logic. A woman in love reasons that the timing was unfortunate, and she can succeed in a marriage where her predecessor has failed. Occasionally she's right.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Forget everything you know about water conditioners.

This one is different.

It's more convenient, more efficient, more reliable. It does everything you expect a water conditioner to do — adds sparkle to your dishes... gives your laundry a fresher, cleaner look... makes food and drink taste better... saves on soap and detergents... improves the performance of steam irons, dishwashers, clothes washers — and does it all with a minimum of maintenance on your part.

This one is about as automatic as a water conditioner can get. It will give you so little trouble you'll wonder why all of them aren't made this way.

For one thing, there's nothing to plug in, nothing to short out. Kinetico operates hydraulically. Uses the water itself as the power source. You're assured of an uninterrupted flow of soft water, as much as you want, even in a blackout.

For another thing, there's no timer to fiddle with; the ingenious K-Valve does the controlling. Automatically. When we install a Kinetico Water Conditioner, we analyze your water, determine the kind and amount of impurities in it, and formulate a solution to your particular hard water problems. Then we set the K-Valve and that's it. No need for you to re-set anything. Ever.

Finally, there's never a break in the action. Most water conditioners are single-tank units. Which means that at certain times — when you guesstimate it has to be charged — the water coming through your outside line by-passes the conditioner. Result: no treated water during that period. Kinetico's twin-tank setup eliminates the by-pass. When one tank's ready for recharging, the K-Valve triggers the brining/backwash process and at the same time lets the fresh tank take over. You get soft water — hot or cold — 24 hours a day. Every day. What could be simpler?

Now all you have to do is call us. And we'll tell you more about why we think Kinetico is the best water conditioner that ever came down the pipe.

Speak out about TV advertising

COLLEGE STATION—It's time for concerned parents to speak out about television advertisements aimed at children, a consumer information specialist urges.

The Federal Trade Commission has recently proposed a regulation which would:

(1) Ban TV advertising directed at children too young to understand its selling purpose.

(2) Ban TV advertising of sugared food products most likely to cause tooth decay that is directed to, or seen by, audiences that include a significant proportion of older children, and

(3) require nutrition or health disclosures that will balance TV advertising of other sugared foods directed to, or seen by, a significant proportion of older children.

FTC will receive comments until Oct. 24, 1978. Send these comments to: The Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C. 20580.

These proposed regulations are the result of a report compiled by the FTC staff after they investigated television advertising directed at children. Claudia Kerbel with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, explains.

The report points out that the average 2- to 11-year-old watches over 1,300 hours of TV annually and sees about 20,000 commercials each year.

Based on its investigation, the FTC finds the following:

—Many young children don't understand the selling purpose of TV advertising and regard it as just another form of programming.

—TV advertising aimed at children too young to understand the intent of commercials is both unfair and deceptive.

—TV advertising for sugared products is deceptive under the FTC Act because it fails to reveal material facts regarding the health hazards of sugar consumption.

Also, it violates well-established legal policies that protect children against serious and lasting consequences of their own mistakes and against adult exploitation.

Our environment has become a 'chemical soup'

By JEANNETTE BRANIN
Copley News Service

An atmosphere of hysteria surrounds the topic of food additives and environmental pollutants today, says Dr. Bernard Weiss.

"On one hand we have angry consumers," said Weiss, professor of radiation biology and biophysics at the University of Rochester Medical Center.

"On the other hand we have industry, devoutly proclaiming its devotion to the public. But because of the political strength of industry, this might be viewed with suspicion."

Weiss talked about the immense array of substances added to foods during processing to preserve them, to make colors and flavors more attractive, and to enhance marketability.

"Such practices have stimulated strident debate about their nutritional value and potential toxicity, including possible adverse effects on human behavior and the nervous system," he said.

"We live in a chemical soup that contains elements—we are not equipped by evolution to confront. Some are natural, some are by-products of industrialization, some are deliberately added."

An early account of a toxic reaction occurred in the 19th century when the "Pink Disease" began to appear in babies, he said.

"Their skins turned pink, their faces and hands swelled, they became irritable and colicky. The problem eventually was traced to mercury in a teething powder, but it remained undiagnosed for 150 years. It took that long to crack the riddle. It is now a footnote to medical history."

Modern medical history contains many tragic episodes of raidity caused by pollutants, Weiss said. "The grossest of these might be the poisoning of fishermen and their families in the village of Minamata in Japan.

"They were poisoned when an industrial plant discharged methyl mercury into the bay, and the methyl mercury found its way into the food chain. Children were extremely susceptible; their nervous systems were vulnerable.

"Fetal toxicity of unborn babies occurred; neonates were poisoned by breast milk. Children were born with small heads, deformed bodies, behavioral disturbances and mental retardation."

The problems of mercury poisoning are with us today in this country, Weiss said. "Mercury is present in the earth's crust. There is a geological exchange. Some winds up in waterways, some finds its way into the biosphere when fossil fuels are burned, particularly coal:

"Many heavy metals are flung into the atmosphere (by industrial plants when fossil fuels such as oil and coal are burned) and fall to the earth in the form of rain."

Weiss said there are "little jewels of lakes" in the Adirondack Mountains in which fish no longer live, and others in which the fish are dying, poisoned by industrial wastes.

Another gross example of widespread poisoning, he said, occurred in Iraq when wheat, treated with an anti-germicide, was imported from this country and Mexico. "The peasants could not read the warning that it was unfit for consumption, or did not understand it, or chose to ignore it.

"The anti-fungicide, which would have been dispersed harmlessly in the soil when the grain was planted, was used for food. The government reported that 600 died, but the suspicion lingers that many more than that died."

Weiss said that laboratory experiments with mice treated with the anti-fungicide showed that the poison has a long latency.

Rose grower pays rose as rent

By EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

Paying rent is nothing unusual. But payment of a rental of "one red rose" as Star Roses of West Grove, Pa., does annually, is rather unusual.

There was a rent payment ceremony Sept. 9, with some of the world's leading rose hybridists participating. A red rose was handed to little Heidi Penn-Gaskell Hall Keilbaugh, a descendant of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, by young Sonia Meilland of Antibes, France. Sonia's father, hybridizer Allain Meilland, who also was present, is the son of the late Francis Meilland, originator of the famed Peace rose.

Star Roses (Conard-Pyle Co.) now occupies 500 rolling acres, including 80 acres of roses open to visitors, and is expanding. Its products now include a fine new, small holly, Blue Maid, and an attractive Piers japonica, Red Mill, a hardy evergreen bush.

Star President Richard Hutton related that while researching title to land purchased in 1927, it was determined that the farm was part of a large tract of land conveyed by the sons of William Penn to his grandson, and contained this provision:

"In 1731, John Thomas and Richard Penn, proprietaries, granted 5,000 acres to William Penn, grandson of the Founder of Pennsylvania, subject to the rental of 'one red rose on the 24th of June yearly if the same be demanded.' In 1748, William Allen sold 53 1/2 acres of this tract to Samuel Cross. Again the rental terms included payment of a red rose..."

Years later, Robert Pyle revived the old custom by paying "back rent" of 260 blooms and reinstating the annual rental of one red rose to a direct descendant of William Penn.

An early participant in the annual ceremony was the Grande Duchesse Charlotte of Luxembourg, who was in this country as a war refugee and for whom a rose originated by a fellow countryman was being introduced by Conard Pyle with the name "Grande Duchesse Charlotte."

Rain has not marred Red Rose Rent Day in the 30 or so years that Mrs. Hutton has been attending, she recalled.

The date has been changed to the Saturday following Labor Day when the young rose plants in Star's nursery are more mature and in full bloom.

The three 1979 All-America Selections roses were prominently displayed — 1979 is The Year of the Rose in America — and two of their hybridizers were present, Sam McGredy of New Zealand for Sundowner, and Robert V. Lindquist Sr., of Howard Roses, Hemet, Calif., for Friendship. Ollie Weeks of Ontario, Calif., the third winner with Paradise, was not present.

The bearded McGredy, whose family bred roses in Ireland for three generations before him, traced the history of modern roses, their grafting and color development. He forecast development of miniature roses 3-4 inches tall with root systems permitting their use as ground cover. He said the tiny thorns would "discourage dogs from running over it."

McGredy says hybridists will provide roses of brown hue; a trend to bronzy-yellow colors; and a "rose that is trouble-free — needing no spraying — just put it in the ground and go play golf."

Alex Zebchazy of Perry, Ohio, developer of the Red Mill Piers japonica, related his work to overcome winter damage to the ornamental evergreen. His 15- to 18-year effort has produced a hardier plant.

Prof. Griffith Buck, Iowa State University, developer of the pink everblooming shrub, Carefree Beauty, concentrates on developing plants for cold areas of the country. After 30 years, he reported, comes Carefree Beauty. Other hardy roses he has hybridized include Country Dancer and Prairie Princess.

Golden Pumpkin: An All-American taste treat

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The golden pumpkin evokes thoughts of a rural America going back to Indian days.

For many of us it conjures up memories of a childhood Halloween brightened by grinning jack-o'-lanterns, of family gatherings, especially at Thanksgiving with the meal topped off by a creamy, orange-hued pie.

Actually, this famous member of the squash family has a far older history than that. Pumpkins were grown in the highlands of Mexico at least 9,000 years ago. And long before the settlers arrived in North America, pumpkins adorned the fields each fall. Most Indian tribes, from the Zunis of the Southeast to the Wampanoags of New England, planted pumpkins in their fields and made them an integral part of their daily fare.

Later, when the English settlers came, pumpkins helped stave off famine for the colonists of Jamestown and Plymouth. The English noted that nothing growing in Europe in those days could equal them for taste and quality. True, some colonists, after a daily diet of pumpkins, began to complain, but as one of their colleagues, Edward Johnson, said, "Let no man make jest of pumpkin, a fruit which the Lord fed his people with till corn and cattle increased."

The monotony was eased somewhat when friendly Indians, who knew their pumpkins, taught the colonists how to bake, boil and fry them, and how to stew pumpkin chunks with beans, peas and corn. A palatable bread could be made with pumpkin and corn meal.

It is to the settlers themselves that the credit belongs for creating pumpkin pie, but in the early days without flour the crusts were pumpkin shells.

The housewives sliced off the top of the pumpkin, scooped out seeds and fibers, filled the cavity with milk, spices and honey. They baked the pumpkin over hot ashes in the days before brick ovens. Then the family sat around the pumpkin and ate from the shell with spoons.

This year for a change, why not celebrate Halloween with a fancy dessert made from pumpkin, like a souffle. Here's a recipe.

1 cup canned or thick, mashed cooked fresh - pumpkin

- 1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 3 egg whites

1/8 teaspoon salt
Combine pumpkin with nutmeg, lemon rind and sugar and mix well. Beat egg whites till stiff, add salt and fold into pumpkin mixture. Fill greased, 1-quart baking dish or individual molds two-thirds full and set in pan of hot water. Bake in preheated 350-degree oven about 40 minutes for large mold, 25 to 30 minutes for individual molds. Serves 4-6 people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to get your bills paid on time and cut down on interest costs. Avoid that tendency to nag at home; think more constructively, kindly. Check accounts and make sure they are correct.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to think more of yourself and less of others and you need not have to struggle so hard. You are your own worst enemy, so reconcile with yourself.

Fall can be happy time for backyard gardener

Copley News Service

Watching the growing season gradually drawing to a close is a happy time of the year for a backyard gardener. He has the pleasure of harvesting and storing the last of his crops. And he can look forward soon to a change of pace, a little more indoor puttering, reading and such.

But as the summer days grow shorter, every experienced backyard gardener knows that fall is not the end of the gardening season. Rather it is the beginning of next spring's growing season. With that in mind, here are a few tips that will promote a faster and healthier beginning to next year's gardening season.

Look to your lawns first. Don't fertilize late in the season, or the new, soft growth will be vulnerable to winter killing. But do keep the grass well cut and trimmed, and raked as well, so it will not run the danger of going into winter with long growth that will mat during the winter.

September is not too late to sow grass seed. It is usually easy to keep seed beds moist at this time of year. In cold weather areas, even if there is a sudden freeze-up, the seed will germinate in the spring and that big job will have been done.

Check your perennial beds for overcropping. In the spring when everything starts shooting up again, the plants never look too close together. So now, when the look of the garden fully grown is apparent, defects and all, now is the time to divide any perennials that are overgrown. Take new plants from the outer edges of the roots—these are the younger parts of the plant, and will do better.

In the same way, if you have any shrubs or perennials whose location has not pleased you during the past season, move them now rather than wait until spring when you will have forgotten the look of the garden.

If you did not take cuttings from your geraniums and wax-leaved begonias earlier, for setting in a cutting bed, take cuttings now, insert them in sandy soil in some container and place them in a sheltered corner, porch or greenhouse to be brought in once they checked out bug-free.

You can begin to clean up your hedges and roses for the winter. Make sure they are free of garden debris, that the ground around them is cleared, the hedge a final to whip about in the deciduous-will spring to life more vigorously after the winter if they are kept watered thoroughly in the fall.

Remember that especially in cold-weather areas, all trees—evergreen and deciduous—will spring to life more vigorously after the winter if they are kept watered thoroughly in the fall.

Rake up leaves as they fall. Scatter them in right away, so they will not blow away.

Apartments prime targets for burglaries

By BILL PARRY
Copley News Service

Years ago burglars concentrated their attention on business establishments for their loot, says a member of the National Crime Prevention Association. But now that these businesses are protected by elaborate sensors hooked up to central alarm systems, the pick-men are looting residences, according to William Wray, the association member.

"Apartment dwellings that offer multiple opportunities under one roof are prime candidates for rip-offs," said Wray, who is also vice president of a residential protection service in New York.

Wray cited the case of a young woman apartment dweller to underline the need for greater residential security. The woman returned from shopping and found the center panel of her apartment door had been kicked in.

"Frightened, she backed out the door, the man followed, ran down the stairs and disappeared down the street," Wray said.

Her experience was far from unusual. "Every day 8,219 break-ins occur — one every 10 seconds," said Wray.

The threat of burglary and other crime is an increasing concern for the 45 million apartment dwellers in the United States and "this is true both in big cities and suburbs."

"A nice neighbor is no protection," Wray said. In fact, the nice neighborhood attracts the

All the child psychology books I've ever read take you down the yellow brick road past puberty, serious petting, into mature relationships and leave you.

But parenting isn't like that. There are 30 million parents out there with children between the ages of 18-55 who drift in and out of their lives like a revolving door.

The empty nest syndrome is overrated. I have heard of some parents who moved during the night to another city (and left no forwarding address). Others have installed pay showers. Still another parent I know waited until her son got up one night to use the bathroom, then painted his room pink and rented it to a pocket computer salesman.

No parent likes to change locks, but the situation is definitely getting out of hand. Children simply aren't leaving the home after school anymore as they did in the '60s. When they do, they multiply and come back tenfold.

So how do you displace an aging teenager? It isn't easy. When our son's bedroom began to take on the appeal of roadside zoo (complete with sawdust on the floor), we took action.

First, we set the table for two. This made him aware that he was not expected for dinner.

Second, we intercepted his mail, wrote "No such person at this address" and had it returned to the post office for forwarding.

We posted signs in the hallway reading, "OCCUPANCY BY MORE THAN TWO IN THE HOUSE IS A FIRE HAZARD."

We were considering telling him he would have to share his room with the family pet (and buying a wolf) when we came up with a daring but cruel idea. We stopped stocking the refrigerator.

I'll never forget the look of fear in that child's eyes standing in front of the refrigerator door (the hairs in his nose becoming frosted) saying, "Is that all there is?" if I live to be a hundred.

We never saw him again. You hear a lot of dialogue on the death of the American family. Families aren't dying. They're merging into big conglomerates.

Daughters and sons who are between roommates (legal and lethal) drift in and approach the desk like they're in a hotel asking, "Is my old room still available?" Cribs and strollers appear with babies. Cars and special menus are requested.

I rechecked my child psychology book the other day for the wondered, "Is there life after the index?"

Opinions differ on retirement facilities

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

There are, it appears, certain things most persons hope to find in new locations if they decide to move after retirement. But it is equally clear, on the basis of replies to a survey about retirement housing, that what some retirees are seeking are the very things others are trying to avoid.

Quotes from two letters illustrate divergent views on just one of those subjects. They are not isolated opinions. Each represents the attitudes of a considerable number of readers in response to our questions:

"We like our retirement community, not because we are with people of our own age, but because we are with people who have the same problems. It is like one big family. Everyone is concerned about everyone else."

And the other side: "I made a mistake in going to a place where everyone is retired. After the first few months, you get bored hearing the same old conversation, which is mostly about ailments or past achievements. I miss the laughter of children and a lot of other things I used to think were noise. I have decided that I'd rather be annoyed occasionally than bored all the time."

A pertinent comment came from a 77-year old man who said that officially he was a "retired priest" of the Episcopal church, but who still runs retreat centers "which I established 22 years ago completely independent of the church."

His view was that retired persons should not be so much concerned about people of the same interests as "those with similar cultural backgrounds."

Of the 604 responders not yet retired, 560 included pleasant surroundings, friendly neighbors and a wide range of leisure-time activities as what they wanted in retirement, whether they intended to move to retirement areas, non-retirement communities or stay where they were.

Slightly more than half of these 560 also mentioned nearness to shopping and medical facilities as among other anticipated advantages.

Seventy-seven placed a better climate high on the list of reasons for moving after retirement. Thirty said they wanted to be near or not too far from their children or other relatives. Thirty-two hoped for quiet, privacy and a general sense of freedom from regimentation. Twenty-one mentioned a wish to be in a "safe" neighborhood. Seventeen wanted, among other things, lower property taxes.

Among the 1,242 retired responders, there was constant emphasis on the need to be active. But there were different definitions of activity. Some felt it to be such things as tending to small gardens, walking, visiting neighbors and occasional traveling. Others meant playing golf and dancing and other physical pursuits.

Some considered it to be some form of work on a part-time basis. And some said it was essential to be doing something to help others.

Excesses may cause 'allergies'

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service.

Thousands of people suffer from varying degrees of food-related symptoms. Tracking down and identifying the offending foods often is a long, frustrating experience.

The possibility of certain foods causing acute or disabling symptoms in some people, while they are well tolerated by others, is a widespread concern.

The term "allergic" may not be accurate when applied as an overall generalization of foods that are not well tolerated. Many people cannot tolerate milk, and suffer stomach and intestinal tract problems when it's taken. They may say they are "allergic" to milk, but in reality they're unable to properly digest lactose (a milk sugar) because of an enzyme deficiency, not an allergy.

Other so-called "allergic" symptoms may be caused rather than by excessive quantities of specific foods. Coffee and tea contain methylxanthine derivatives that can cause severe physiologic symptoms when taken in excessive amounts.

Recent British studies found that some people with long histories of mental and physical symptoms were not helped by conventional medical investigation and treatment, but were relieved immediately when certain foods were removed from the diet.

A woman, suffering from irregular heartbeat, anxiety and dyspea, felt immediate relief when she gave up coffee, tea and tomatoes. A young woman with vaginal ulcers was reacting sensitively to coffee, chocolate and potatoes. A man, completely incapacitated by migraine headaches, was free of symptoms when he gave up drinking 20 cups of coffee a day.

A man suffering severe leg pains was relieved when tea and alcohol were found to be associated with the problem.

A woman who had a childhood history of nausea and vomiting which continued into her adult life, was relieved when she excluded tea from her diet.

He enjoys living in woods

DOWLING PARK, Fla. (AP)—Six years ago, Art Williams was a production supervisor for an automotive company in Baltimore, Md. He made $20,000 a year, had a new home, a Cadillac, a camper and a cabin cruiser.

Today, Williams, 36, and his son, 12, live in the woods along the Suwannee River and they live off the land. They live in a cabin with no electricity, no phone and no running water.

The reason for his metamorphosis is a simple one, Williams said.

"Other people whom I worked with became drinkers and took nerve pills. I didn't want to be like that. When I left the company I was working 84 hours a week," he said. "I worked so much that I never saw my wife or kids. So my wife left me."

Williams survives on just a few dollars a month. He heats his cabin with a kerosene lamp and stove. He bathes and does wash in the Suwannee. He picks berries and grows an organic garden.

Diamonds an investment

By BETH MOUR
Copley News Service

Elizabeth Taylor's 69.42-carat diamond is now available through a broker for $3.5 million. About a month ago, it would have set you back an even $4 million.

That sounds like a rare bargain. Other diamond prices have done nothing except rise for over 40 years, with astonishing increases over the last few years.

"In 1972, the wholesale cost of a perfectly cut one-carat diamond of top color and clarity was $1,725," the broker, Michael Peterson said. "Today, the cost is $18,000."

Peterson is a partner and representative for Charles Anthony Diamond Investments, a diamond brokerage firm. It was founded by Anthony Charles Seymour of Salt Lake City, Utah, the firm's home base. Seymour negotiated the exclusive rights to sell Taylor's diamond with Andy Walquist, a business manager for Taylor's husband, John W. Warner, Peterson said.

"The diamond is in a bank vault in Paris," he said. "We will work out plans for a potential investor to see it when we are sure of his serious intentions."

Until the 1970s, diamonds were generally considered an adornment and most discussions of their investment value an excuse for splurging on a coveted piece of jewelry.

"Today, people are becoming aware of diamonds as a hedge against inflation and as a simple, uncomplicated way to invest," Peterson said.

Uncomplicated is the word. While stock portfolios must be skillfully juggled around the fluctuations of the market and gold is "subject to government manipulations," the diamond just stays cozily in the safe increasing in value, if Peterson's projections are accurate. It is a possession you can see, touch and understand, he points out.

He suggests that a bank vault is the best place for "investment quality" diamonds. They are, desirably, finer and larger than most diamonds mounted in jewelry.

"It is all right for a smaller investment diamond to be mounted and worn if it makes one happy," he said. "But, it isn't wise to walk around with a big display of them."

Elizabeth Taylor has taken her diamond out of the vault and worn it about a half-dozen times. She and (Richard) Burton (her ex-husband) had a copy made immediately and that is what she has worn most.

"I recommend the same thing for anyone with larger stones. Beautiful simulated diamonds are being made today. You don't wear your other investments, so why wear your investment diamonds?"

The firm buys most of its diamonds in the rough and has them cut in New York.

"We buy primarily from mines in South Africa, but are alert for good buys elsewhere," he said. "We may buy at cutting centers in New York, Antwerp, Amsterdam and Tel Aviv."

"We also may learn, through the industry grapevine, of a cutter who may be temporarily overextended financially and ready to make an interesting sale."

"DeBeers (DeBeers Consolidated Mines in South Africa) sets the whole climate of the market," Peterson said. "Its Central Selling Organization markets about 80 percent of the world's diamond production, allocating parcels of rough diamonds to a limited number of selected cutters at 10 sales a year in London."

"The diamonds are chosen in qualities and sizes the CSO believes can best be absorbed into the current market. By following that procedure, this little cartel has kept diamond prices rising steadily through the years."

DeBeers also has chosen to stockpile diamonds rather than chance price reductions by releasing them into a depressed economy. It has been reported that during the 1930s Depression, stockpiles were stored in 20-gallon milk cans.

Although the economy has influenced annual price increases through the years, Peterson foresees the day when nature will take control.

"Devaluation of the dollar, runaway inflation and the rise in gold have been reasons for recent escalations," he said. "Scarcity is going to be a major factor in the future. At the present rate of extraction of diamonds from the mines, reserves will be exhausted in another 30 or 40 years."

"It is interesting to note, though, that when diamonds were running low in Brazil, the discoveries were made in South Africa, now our main source of investment diamonds."

"I believe that diamonds are purchased by serious investors who are not looking to make a quick killing," Peterson said. "They invest money that they don't have to put to other use right away. The longer they are able to keep their diamonds, the more valuable I am sure they will become."

Only 1 percent of total diamond production meets the quality standards set for investment stones.

They will be in one of the top four clarity classifications: FL, flawless; IF, internally flawless; VVS, very, very slight inclusions (flaws); VS, very slight inclusions, Peterson explained.

"One of the big misconceptions about diamonds is that flawless means perfect," Peterson said. "It actually means that you can detect no inclusions under a 10-power loupe (magnified 10 times). If you magnify the diamond 50 times and find a slight flaw, not seen with the 10-power lens, it still is considered flawless — and such diamonds are extremely rare."

Elizabeth Taylor's diamond, for instance, is IF. That still is pretty good.

"An internally flawless diamond has a touch of skin (rough finish) left on the outside after polishing," Peterson said.

The color grading on an investment diamond will range from D, colorless, to J, near colorless.

"The scale starts at D because some jewelers give their diamonds A, B and C classifications," Peterson said. "Color grading starts at D to avoid confusion. Diamonds of lesser value are graded from K, faint yellow, to Z, fancy (deep) yellow."

One of the most beautiful diamonds in Peterson's present stock is a 1.84-carat pear shape.

It has an E color grade, a hair away from the perfect D and a breath above the IF given the Taylor diamond.

All full-cut diamonds have 58 facets and are cut to an ideal that not all reach. Therefore, cut also is a major value-setting factor.

"The cut is determined by the shape of the original crystal (rough) and the inclusions it contains," Peterson said. "The object is to get the best color, fewest inclusions and most carat weight possible. Generally, half of the weight is lost in the cutting."

The Taylor 69.42-carat pear shape was cut from a 240-carat rough diamond. It is far and away the largest diamond in the Anthony firm's collection. The size also makes it difficult to sell.

More Israelis take steps toward cashless living

By LARRY THORSON

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel is taking a step towards cashless living as more Israelis have credit cards to pay restaurant bills, charge supermarket purchases, and put off the reckoning of expensive trips abroad.

"It's something Israelis are looking for," said Haim Bergstein, deputy managing director of Bank Hapoalim. "We can tell from the number of our applicants."

With the consumer price index rising at a steady three percent a month, the shopper sees the credit card as a little hedge against inflation — buy something at today's price, pay for it next month, and if you're lucky the cost-of-living adjustment will have raised your salary by then.

Bank Hapoalim led the way by issuing the first general, nationally accepted card three years ago. Now Hapoalim's Isracard is heavily advertised as a convenient way to make purchases without cash in supermarkets, gas stations, shops and restaurants.

Hapoalim doesn't say how many card-holders it has. But two big competitors, Bank Leumi and Israel Discount Bank are also issuing credit cards, and each hopes to get 50,000 card-holders in a year or two, a good start in a population of just 3.5 million.

The cards don't come with time-payment schemes. Instead the banks take the amount due directly from the card-holder's checking account. Many Israelis have overdraft arrangements equal to a month's salary, and credit-card purchases can be covered by the overdraft just like checks, the banks say.

The interest charged on overdrafts is typically 28 percent, a hefty figure that is still attractive since the Israeli pound is being devalued at a higher rate. Inflation is expected to be 35-37 percent this year.

The big international credit cards are also descending on Israelis in a rush.

Israeli travelers can take up to $3,000 abroad, and the Finance Ministry decided there was no bar to Israelis making up to $3,000 of purchases with credit cards.

As 500,000 Israelis are expected to travel abroad this year there was clearly a big market for internationally accepted credit cards. Most advertisements for these cards stress the convenience of traveling without a great wad of cash or traveler's checks.

Deputy Finance Minister Yehezkel Floumin said there was some concern in the government that the international credit cards "may contribute a little to the spending of the Israeli tourist abroad and to the demand for foreign currency here for payment."

Floumin said, nonetheless, that the Finance Ministry wasn't planning to monitor either the international or domestic cards. "If there is a possible setback, it won't be large and we have to accept little problems with our liberal economic approach," he said.

The banks say they have learned from the American experience with credit cards. One thing they aren't doing is mailing cards to people who haven't applied.

An applicant must have an annual income of $4,400 to get a domestic card, a requirement only slightly above the average wage of $3,700. Since most Israeli families have two wage-earners, almost everybody would be eligible.

The banks say, however, they are more interested in an applicant's record as a bill-payer. "You don't have to be rich, just honest," said Yisahar Kaufman at Discount Bank.

Increasing need seen for elderly legal services

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The elderly have an increasing need for legal protection and service, according to a specialist in the field of law and the aging.

James Weeks of Syracuse University's College of Law says older Americans are an under-represented group, partly because they form a significant segment of the nation's poor. Professor Weeks also maintains that the elderly are having an increasingly difficult time coping with bureaucracy.

"They deal with an escalating amount of red-tape paper work and they find it increasingly difficult to handle," Weeks says. "And they find, at least within the private sector, a considerable lack of knowledge regarding the ins and outs of Social Security, SSI, Medicaid and Medicare. They're almost overwhelmed."

Weeks says the overabundance of red tape necessitates special centers to deal with problems of the elderly.

Weeks is director of Syracuse University's Legal Center on Aging, an organization involved in policy development and direct legal services for the aging.

Cold water could be a lifesaver

By LEWSCARR
Copley News Service

It is possible that some victims given up for dead from drowning can be saved.

And it is the water itself, ironically, that could be the lifesaver.

Dr. Martin J. Nemiroff, a pulmonary specialist, has concluded from studies that a phenomenon known as the diving reflex can enable many people, especially the very young, to survive submersion in cold water for much longer periods than they can in warm water.

Nemiroff said that when a person's face is immersed in water colder than 70 degrees Fahrenheit, a reflex is activated that immediately slows the heartbeat and constricts the peripheral arteries.

This shunts the oxygen-containing blood away from the extremities and the gut to the heart and brain. The activity is called the diving reflex.

Nemiroff, who is a physician in the Department of Internal Medicine at the University of Michigan, said the diving reflex extends the possible time of survival in cold water without external oxygen to as long as an hour.

It generally is agreed that the brain cannot function normally longer than four minutes without oxygen.

In an interview, Nemiroff was asked if he found in his studies that lifeguards and physicians tend to give up on drowning victims after four or five minutes.

"Yes," he said, "but I think it is potentially dangerous to quote me on that. I think every human physician and every lifeguard who has been in the business for any length of time can look back and say they wish they had continued longer on some victims after today's sophisticated resuscitation techniques. "I, myself, have had cases where I wish I had."

Many lifeguards are instructed to maintain resuscitation efforts despite all negative life signs except rigor mortis until a physician has taken charge of the patient.

Most hospital emergency rooms also exhibit aggressive attitudes in attempts to resuscitate drowning victims. In fact, a report by Dr. Bradley M. Peterson at Children's Hospital in San Diego, Calif., three years ago criticized this aggressiveness for turning what he said were near-drowning victims into but constant supply of blood to the brain.

But the diving reflex is most active in children, especially those under 3. "Basically," Nemiroff said, "the message of our work is not to accept (traditional signs) as clinical death, and try to resuscitate little children even up to an hour of submersion."

He emphasized the importance of beginning resuscitation efforts as soon as possible. "There was a case in Ohio," he said, "where a child was thrown into (cold) water in a homicide attempt and police were called and the Coast Guard steamed out, found the spot and sent a diver down and found the child in 17 feet of water."

"They started resuscitation as soon as they got to the surface and continued it on board the ship and in the hospital and they had a survivor, completely normal, after a 10-minute submersion in cold water."

Nemiroff said exciting area of research in the next year, "and I expect the Coast Guard to come out with some very interesting water resuscitation techniques."

Nemiroff based his conclusions on the effectiveness of the diving reflex on 50 near-drowning incidents in Michigan waters, 13 of which involved submersion in water colder than 70 degrees.

Of these 13, nine were successfully resuscitated without brain damage or other ill effects. Two died of lung infections contracted in the water and two suffered brain damage.

All had gone beyond the four-minute oxygen-deprivation limit after which, it has been thought up to now, irreversible brain damage must occur.

Myth of costly Europe a real 'cheap shot'

By GUS STEVENS
Copley News Service

Those horror stories about the high costs and hassles of travel in Europe are getting to be a bore. It's time to put a stop to them.

You've all heard the familiar flak for the past year or more, since the dollar started taking its international beating.

Your London hotel will cost you at least $75 a day, more if you want clean sheets and a bath that was installed after World War I.

Don't go near Paris if you can help it. If you must, then bring along $300 a day or you'll wind up sleeping under the bridges.

You'd better eat take-out cucumber sandwiches or you'll be making time payments on your restaurant meals for a year after you get home.

Forget about renting your own car, unless you're a millionaire and unless you don't mind driving a 15-year-old three-wheeler with a Cuisinart engine.

Scare stories all, and none of them true.

For a while this year I was afraid that the tales of high costs and limited accommodation indeed were fact.

A travel agent arranged for our round-trip air fare to Europe. Nothing wrong there. In fact, flying to Europe is more of a bargain than ever, with all the new carrier competitive rates coming on stream.

If you don't like or trust charters, you can try APEX, as we did. Under this plan, you schedule and pay for your tickets six weeks in advance and pay a penalty if you cancel, but you go by scheduled jet at a cost well below ordinary economic fare.

The travel agent also reserved a room for us in London, and there was the rub. The cost was about $46 a day, a little steep for us. The hotel was a disappointment. It was grand enough in the lobby, but, as in many European hotels, it went downhill fast after we got beyond the public rooms.

After a couple of days wondering if the horror stories were true, we got out and walked. We walked to Bedford Place, next door to the British Museum. We stumbled on a delightful block of Georgian buildings.

There were no fewer than six snug little hotels tucked into a single block. We went into the Hotel Crichton, where they were delighted to give us excellent personal service.

My wife, standing at the window and staring down on the grassy meadow, said, "Now THIS is the essence of London."

The city is rampant with such small 20- to 50-room hotels, each almost identical to the next, each offering comfortable accommodations at comfortable rates.

Few travel agents will put you into such hotels, unless you give them a name, because they're not big enough or important enough to be on their lists.

So you must find them yourself. The British Travel Association or the London Tourist Board can save you hiking and time.

They're also telling lies about prices in Paris, where within a stone's throw of the Place Vendome you can stay in any of several small hotels, with bath, for less than $30 a day.

Incidentally, insisting on your own bath really isn't necessary. A private bath may cost you $10 more a night, when it's almost as easy to take a few steps down the hall, lock yourself in the communal bath and enjoy cleanliness in bargain privacy.

You don't need to exist on cucumber sandwiches either, although they're delightful for a light park lunch in London.

My wife and I have worked out a satisfactory eating system. We almost always have a picnic lunch with good food bought at the meat market, the cheese store, the bakery, all topped off by a visit to a wine merchant.

If you haven't sampled the pastoral pleasures of a picnic in France, you've missed one of life's great pleasures. The real people are eating in the public parks or in the roadside rests, not in the city restaurants.

But consider. The small European cars seem to run on vapor. You can cross a country on a single tank. The cars are comfortable and sensible because on most European roads smaller is better.

We prefer unlisted mileage rentals so that we don't economize ourselves into passing up those castles and chateaux we should see just to save ourselves 15 cents a mile.

The freedom of your own car offers you a chance to shop for bargains and that is why your wheels offer you hidden economies.

Have you ever had the feeling that all you had to do was look at a piece of cake and you'd gain five pounds? In a sense, that's not too far from the truth.

Weight control experts did a simple study involving the ice cream freezer in a cafeteria. One day, the top was left open, with the ice cream in clear view. The next day, the freezer was shut.

"With the top open," they reported, "ice cream constituted 17 percent of the desserts selected by fat people and 16 percent of the desserts selected by others." On the "closed" day, figures dropped to 3 and 5 percent, respectively.

All you have to do is look

She uses language few know

By SETH MYDANS

MOSCOW (AP) — She writes in a language only a few thousand people know, with an alphabet that didn't exist half a century ago, and when she recites her poetry an ancient mountain language comes alive.

Fazu Aliyeva is the leading poetess of the Avar language of Dagestan, and although only 350,000 people can understand the words she writes, she is widely printed in Russian translation.

In her opinion it is the Soviet Union that has assured the survival of her language and given it a written literature, and has also made it possible for her as a woman to be a writer.

The Avar language is one of 30 squeezed into the small Dagestani region on the mountainous shores of the Caspian Sea in southern Russia. Dagestan was incorporated into the U.S.S.R. in 1921.

Like a number of other languages that had no written tradition, it is being preserved with a new alphabet created in the 1930s by Soviet scholars using Cyrillic letters as a basis.

An example of an even rarer language that has all but disappeared is Livonian, described recently in the Soviet press. Only about 100 pure Livonians survive on the coast of Latvia after a 17th-century epidemic that almost wiped out their race.

They have almost completely lost the ability to speak their native tongue, but it lives on in songs performed by a small choral group.

When Mrs. Aliyeva recites her poems, the Avar language rocks and skips like a mountain horseman, with an accompaniment of syncopated snaps and clicks at the back of her teeth.

Her poetry grows out of the oral tradition of Dagestan, passed down by itinerant storytellers.

Mrs. Aliyeva is a member of the Soviet Writers' Union, chairman of the Dagestan branch of the Soviet Peace Committee, and editor of the magazine, Dagestan Woman.

Born in 1933 in the mountain village of Ginchutli, Mrs. Aliyeva

Psychologists open bakery

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP)—Although most of their customers probably don't realize it, Ken and Judy Sarkozy, who have opened a bakery here, have doctorates in psychology.

Sarkozy, 35, his wife, 37, received their degrees from Wayne State University.

"To a certain extent," says Sarkozy, "academia and psychology more than many other pursuits are divorced from the real world. We reached a point where we had a change in values and didn't see the academic route as being all that attractive any more. We wanted to do something much more concrete and not deal in abstractions so much of the time."

He also concedes that the job situation for psychologists "was very bad and remains very bad."

They said they launched their bakery after a $14,000 investment and a lot of experimenting with recipes for bread and doughnuts.

Home of Red Cross's Barton as unorthodox as she

Copley News Service

She experimented with make-up at a time when ladies didn't wear a slip with special pockets for chest padding; dyed her hair using a recipe borrowed from Susan B. Anthony. And she was a friend of every U.S. president from Lincoln to Theodore Roosevelt. Her home is just now becoming a national monument.

She, of course, is none other than the Angel of the Battlefield and founder of the American Red Cross, Clara Barton.

If you think her life was startling, bold, unorthodox and at times unladylike, you'll find her home much the same.

The three-and-a-half or four-story dwelling, depending on which architect you ask, is at Glen Echo, Maryland, just north of Washington, D.C. Barton built the house with wood reclaimed from a Red Cross shelter which served the victims of the first Johnstown, Pa., flood. It was built at Glen Echo because businessmen promoting a Chataqua, or cultural camp, hoped the proximity of a famous person would lend dignity.

Like Barton, the house is unique. Since it first served as an American Red Cross warehouse and later as her home and headquarters for the organization, there are reminders. Along most walls are hidden closets which once held bandages, medical supplies, emergency rations, and whatever else the Red Cross might need.

Because the wood was salvaged from another building, some of the characteristics of the first structure dominate this one. The home is built around a central well with three tiers of hallways looking down on the ground floor. From the halls lead doors of offices, bedrooms, storage closets, giving the appearance of a Wild West hotel. Because of its unusual construction, many called it the Steamboat House, and it does resemble, on the inside, a paddle wheel boat.

Until recently the house was a private residence. Barton died here in 1912 at the age of 91, but by then she'd fallen out with the organization to which she'd given her life.

Perhaps the Red Cross had become too large to be ruled by an aging pioneer. Whatever the reason, the management of the Red Cross had fallen into other hands, hands that didn't fully appreciate Clara Barton.

"That's all past now," explained a National Park Service guide. "Many Red Cross people come here to see the early headquarters and to learn more about Clara Barton." The National Park Service has begun the slow and exacting task of restoring the house as close to its original state as possible. It isn't an easy job.

Some of the furniture is gone, as is much of the memorabilia that once graced the halls. Still, the piano, where Barton loved to hear visitors play and sing, remains. Her own rocking chair, one with dragons on the arm rests, is there. While investigating the house, Park Service workers found yet another treasure which helps them in their restoration.

Nobody knows who put them there or why, but between the inner and outer walls of the house were discovered many of Barton's personal diaries. The tiny books are filled with a flowing script. While Barton lived an exciting life, the diaries themselves are rather dull, mostly filled with administrative data. They do, however, tell about the construction and the details of the Glen Echo house.

A visitor to Clara Barton's home can see it is both lovely and functional, a quality lacking in many modern homes. The energy and uncertainty that marked the life of the crusader, reformer and feminist are evident.

Barton once said, "Others are writing my biography, and let it rest as they elect to make it. I have lived my life, well and ill; always less well than I wanted it to be, but it is, as it is, and as it has been."

There are several biographies of Clara Barton, and she hasn't always survived scrutiny as a peaceful soul. It must be said, though, that the house she built and lived in for over 20 years tells a biography, too. It tells a fascinating story of an unusual woman.

Mime wanted work without words

By GAYLE FISHER
Associated Press

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Mime artist Robert Shields says he can do without the building blocks of this very sentence — words.

"Everything is words," said Shields, 27, during performances in Reno. "Singers, comedians and actors all use words. I wanted to do something without them."

He and his wife, Lorene Yarnell, 29, form Shields and Yarnell, a successful "visual comedy" team which has risen to stardom from the streets of San Francisco about two years ago.

"I don't like the word 'mime.' I prefer to say 'visual comedy.'"

Shields said when describing their versatile act.

The couple had their own variety show on TV recently and more TV dancer Lorene Yarnell joined him in his act and in marriage.

Shields says he is making plans to start his own school. "The first thing I would have them do is study people," Shields said. "That is what Lorene and I do all the specials are planned, but he said nothing was definite. Also in the works is a movie, which would consist of eight short skits.

"A lot of people just know Lorene and me as the Clinkers on the TV show, but there's a lot more to us than that," he said.

Shields studied under Marcel Marceau, a famous mime artist in Paris, France. But he left after a short period because he said he wanted to develop his own act.

He performed in the Union Square in San Francisco.

"We'll sit in a hotel lobby and watch people go by. We get a lot of ideas that way."

He also said that it was just as important to learn techniques such as dance in order to perfect an act. "When I met Lorene she told me that if I didn't take care of myself, I was going to end up in a hospital because I was not treating my body right," Shields said. He was referring to his constant leaps over bushes and other obstacles in the streets, always landing on his knees. "She told me I needed to learn technique," he said. "And I taught her how to do mime. She said she could never do it, but I showed her that she could."

They live in a ranch-style house in California, which is filled with toys on the inside and animals on the outside. Lorene is the animal lover in the family. He said they get a lot of ideas from toys and children.

"Children are so natural. They can act out things using only their imagination. Then they get older and learn how to sit right, eat right, and so on. It's all broken down, which is a shame," Shields commented.

Insulation still needed

By ANDY LANG
AP Newfeatures

Q. — We are considering having solar collectors put into the roof of our house. However, we have a minimum amount of insulation in the house, which is 40 years old. We had thought that the use of solar energy did away with the necessity for a lot of insulation, but a contractor tells us we have to get the house insulated first before the solar collectors are installed. Is this true? Or is he just trying to make some extra money, because he says he also can handle the insulation jobs?

A. — Adding a solar collection system to your present house so that it will perform satisfactorily depends on many factors, not the least of which is high energy efficiency. Therefore, the contractor is correct. To get the most out of a solar energy system, the house should be well insulated.

It is hoped that the contractor gives you equally valuable information about the entire matter, including the importance of southern orientation.

Q. — The hot water pipes in my basement are exposed. As a result, the basement in the area of the pipes appears to be warmer than the rest of it. Is it possible that the pipes are throwing off enough heat to cause this? If so, what is the best things to do? Will painting help contain the heat?

A. — Hot water pipes that are left uncovered do cause some heat loss. Cover them with insulation sold at hardware stores, lumber yards and similar places. There are various kinds. As a general rule, those that are easiest to install cost a little more, but none is especially difficult. The big problem occasionally is reaching the not easily accessible lengths of pipe.

Mormon women allowed to pray

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormon church President Spencer W. Kimball announced Friday that women will be allowed to offer some prayers previously given only by male priesthood holders.

He told regional representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) that because there is no scriptural prohibition against women giving prayers in sacrament meetings, it will now be permissible for them to do so.

He said women can give prayers in "any meetings they attend" and, as visiting teachers for the Relief Society auxiliary, in the homes of members they visit.

The change will affect Mormon congregations throughout the world, where only male priesthood holders have been allowed to offer prayers in weekly sacrament meetings.

Kimball made the announcement to regional representatives meeting on the eve of the church's semi-annual General Conference in Salt Lake City.

There is no indication that the change is a step toward giving women the priesthood. Church officials have said it is an essential part of Mormon doctrine that only faithful males hold the priesthood and perform its numerous ordinances, including baptism, confirmation and marriage.

The church recently reiterated its opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment, following organization of groups of church members supporting the amendment.

In June, Kimball announced that black male church members would for the first time be allowed to hold priesthood offices.

Susan Anthony victor of battle?

By EDWARD NICHOLS
Copley News Service

One day soon, women's rights advocates will win a major skirmish when Congress approves a new nickel-copper coin bearing the likeness of Susan B. Anthony.

Then the real battle will begin—the effort to have American people use the coin in their daily transactions.

"Essentially, the debate in Congress came not over the need for the dollar coin, but whose face would be on it," said Rep. Mary Rose Oaker, D-Ohio, a leader in the fight to make the face that of Susan B. Anthony.

The Treasury Department was holding out for a coin with a volant eagle on one side and a stylized Miss Liberty on the other. The department yielded, Oaker said, when it became evident that it had to accept the Susan B. Anthony coin or none at all.

Throughout the half-year-long committee discussions, there was little disagreement among members of Congress about the need for a dollar coin.

The Treasury Department had testified that if a $1 coin is used by Americans, the government would not have to build a $100 million addition to its printing plant. Also, officials said, up to $18 million a year could be saved in printing costs. It will cost only three cents to produce the Anthony coin and it will last 20 years. A paper bill lasts only 18 months.

"That's all very well," said Edward Smith, assistant director of public relations for the American Bankers Association. The question is whether the government is going to save anything if it creates a new coin that is rejected by the people. It could spend a lot more money than if it had just gone ahead and built an addition to the printing plant.

Federal officials agree that American people don't accept new currency readily. The Kennedy half dollar, the Eisenhower dollar and the paper $2 bill are examples of good ideas and poor performance.

"The currency system in this country is a very simple one, a very stable one. Most of its users are comfortable and satisfied," Peter Daly, an official at the Bureau of Engraving, explained.

He says that the $2 bill still may be accepted, but qualifies his opinion quickly by adding: "There's a big chance that it won't be."

The government re-introduced the $2 bill in 1976, hoping that its bicentennial theme would find public favor. It hasn't. The Bureau of Printing and Engraving reports that it has issued 647 million of the bills. Most of them are in private hoards or bank vaults.

Nearly all the Eisenhower dollars and Kennedy halves also are in banks, private collections or gambling casinos.

Dr. Alan Goldman, assistant director of the U.S. Mint, says that more than 2 billion Kennedy half dollars have been issued since they were introduced in the mid-1960s. The coin is not in general circulation, he adds.

Neither are the 600 million Eisenhower dollars that have been added to the currency since 1971. The Treasury Department reports that it is not making any more Ike dollars. It still is issuing a limited number of the Kennedy coins because complete withdrawal would create political problems and "muddy the waters in Congress over the proposed Anthony coin," a Treasury official reported.

Studies by the department convince its officials that the visage on a coin doesn't make it any more or less popular once the national collectors' purge has been satisfied. Both President Kennedy and President Eisenhower are national heroes, but the coins bearing their faces are not popular.

Likewise, Susan B. Anthony, whose efforts led to voting rights for women, is a bona fide hero. But Treasury officials say that will have little to do with public acceptance of the $1 Anthony coin.

Convenience and America's changing financial habits are the keys, officials said. They believe that the Kennedy and Eisenhower coins were rejected because they did not fit vending machine needs and because they are too heavy.

Daly, the Bureau of Engraving official, said that the Eisenhower dollar weighs 23 grams. By contrast, the Anthony coin will weigh 8.1 grams. It will be larger than a quarter and smaller than a half dollar. Studies reveal that most coins that weigh more than 10 grams don't circulate well anywhere in the world.

'79 Senate may count at least 18 new faces

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the 96th Congress convenes in January, the Senate may be dubbed, "New Faces of 1979," but the big turnover isn't likely to alter the big Democratic edge in the party lineup.

Nine senators opted for voluntary retirement and two others lost in primary elections. At least seven more incumbents appear vulnerable.

And in a political year which already has seen a number of upsets a few of the incumbents who look safe may get a surprise from the voters in November.

Voters in Minnesota and Alabama will vote to fill two Senate seats because of the deaths of Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and James B. Allen, D-Ala.

Of the 35 Senate seats to be filled this year, 18 are held by Democrats and 17 by Republicans. An early look at the races indicates the current party lineup of 62 Democrats and 38 Republicans isn't likely to change much. In several states the seat may switch from one party to the other, but the changes are likely to balance out.

ONE SENATOR is home free. Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was assured of another term when he won the primary a week ago.

Democrats appear to have their best chance to pick up Republican-held seats in Kansas, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New Jersey, Oklahoma, Texas and Virginia.

Republicans are hopeful about their chances to take over Democratic seats in Colorado, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Mississippi, New Hampshire, South Dakota and West Virginia.

The likeliest pickups by the Democrats appear to be in Nebraska, New Jersey, Oklahoma and Virginia. The Republicans look like winners in Maine, South Dakota, West Virginia and in one of the seats in Minnesota.

Among senators who decided to retire were 79-year-old John Sparkman, D-Ala.; James O. Eastland, D-Miss., 73, the senior senator in terms of service, and Carl Curtis, R-Neb., 73. Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., 74, was beaten in a primary election.

OTHERS WHO AREN'T running in November are Sens. James Pearson, R-Kan., Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., James Abourezk, D-S.D., William Scott, R-Va., Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., Kaneaster Hodges, D-Ark., who was appointed to fill the remainder of the term of the late Sen. John McClellan, and Sen. Paul Hatfield, D-Mont., named to fill out the term of the late Sen. Lee Metcalf.

Hodges was barred by law from running for the seat and Hatfield was beaten in the Montana primary by Rep. Max T. Baucus.

Here's a state-by-state rundown of this year's races:

ALABAMA — Both seats should stay Democratic. Sen. Marvon Allen, appointed to succeed her late husband, is running for the remaining two years of his term. Howell Heflin, a former state judge, is heavily favored to defeat Jim Martin in the race to succeed Sparkman.

ALASKA — Sen. Ted Stevens, is expected to defeat his Democratic opponent, Don Hobbs.

ARKANSAS — Democratic Gov. David Pryor is the likely winner over Republican Tom Kelly.

COLORADO — Sen. Floyd Haskell is in a tough fight against Rep. William Armstrong, a conservative Republican. This one's rated a tossup.

DELAWARE — Sen. Joseph Biden Jr., a Democrat, is expected to win a second term over the opposition of James Baxter.

GEORGIA — Sen. Sam Nunn, a Democrat, is one of the best bets. His Republican opponent is John W. Stokes, a former U.S. attorney.

IDAHO — Sen. James McClure, a Republican, should defeat Democrat Dwight Jensen, a former television newsmen.

ILLINOIS — Democratic Party officials like to name Sen. Charles H. Percy, as a big-name Republican ripe for an upset in November. Percy's opponent is Alex Steith. IOWA — Republicans are targeting on Democratic Sen. Dick Clark. His opponent is former Lt. Gov. Roger Jepsen. Clark is running hard and seems to have a slight edge, so far.

KANSAS — Former Rep. Bill Roy, a Democrat, is in a tight race with Nancy Kassenbaum, Alf Landon's daughter, to succeed Pearson.

KENTUCKY — Sen. Walter D. Huddleston should be an easy winner over Republican Lewis Guenther.

LOUISIANA — Johnston is the winner for a second term.

MAINE — Rep. William S. Cohen is favored to defeat Sen. William Hathaway and return this seat to the Republicans.

MASSACHUSETTS — Sen. Edward W. Brooke may have survived his toughest challenge when he defeated Avi Nelson in the Republican primary. But Rep. Paul E. Tsongas, the Democratic challenger, is running hard in this normally Democratic state.

MICHIGAN — Sen. Robert Griffin is favored over Carl Levin, his Democratic challenger who has strong backing from organized labor.

MINNESOTA — By all accounts the Democratic Farm Labor Party is in a shambles and Republicans should pick up one if not both Senate seats. Sen. Wendell Anderson was a popular governor until he resigned in a deal that saw his successor name Anderson to succeed Vice President Walter F. Mondale in the Senate. The deal angered Minnesota voters and Rudy Boschwitz is favored to win the seat for the Republicans. Businessman Robert Short defeated Rep. Donald Fraser in a divisive Democratic primary battle for the other Senate seat. Republican David Durenberger, a 44-year-old attorney, is regarded as a possible upset winner in that race.

MISSISSIPPI — Republican Rep. Thad Cochran and Democrat Maurice Dantin are running dead-even in the race to succeed Eastland.

MONTANA — Democratic Rep. Max Baucus is a likely winner over Larry Williams.

NEBRASKA — Democratic Gov. James Exon is favored to win the seat held by Curtis. The GOP challenger is Donald Shasteen, an aide to the Republican incumbent.

NEW HAMPSHIRE — Sen. Thomas McIntyre is a special target of conservative Republican Gov. Meldrim Thomson and publisher William Loeb. A major issue is McIntyre's support of the Panama Canal treaties. The Democratic senator's opponent is Republican Gordon Humphrey.

NEW JERSEY — Former professional basketball star Bill Bradley is the Democratic nominee against conservative Republican Jeffrey Bell, who upset Case in the GOP primary.

NEW MEXICO — Republican Sen. Pete Domenici, running for a second term, is favored to defeat Democratic state Attorney General Toney Anaya.

NORTH CAROLINA — Sen. Jesse Helms, the Republican incumbent, is favored against John Ingram, the state insurance commissioner. President Carter stopped in North Carolina to give a boost to the Ingram campaign.

OKLAHOMA — Democratic Gov. David Boren is expected to pick up Bartlett's seat. His Republican opponent is Robert Kamm, former president of Oklahoma State University.

OREGON — Sen. Mark O. Hatfield looks like a safe bet to defeat Democrat Vern Cook.

RHODE ISLAND — Sen. Claiborne Pell should withstand the challenge of Republican James G. Reynolds.

SOUTH CAROLINA — President Carter also campaigned in South Carolina for Charles Ravenel, but Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond still looks like the probable winner.

SOUTH DAKOTA — Rep. Larry Pressler is favored over Don Barnett, Democratic former mayor of Rapid City.

TENNESSEE — Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. appears certain to survive his support of the Panama Canal treaties and defeat Democrat Jane Eskind.

TEXAS — Locked in a tight, free-spending race are Republican Sen. John Tower.

TEXAS Democratic Rep. Robert Krueger. Both campaigns are well-financed and the total spending will probably set a new record for any Senate campaign. Most observers regard the outcome as too close to call.

VIRGINIA — Democratic former state Attorney General Andrew Miller and former Navy Secretary John Warner are battling to succeed Sen. William Scott, R-Va. Miller is given a slight edge. Warner, who may be best known as the husband of actress Elizabeth Taylor, received the Republican nomination after Richard Obenshain, the original nominee, was killed in a plane crash.

WEST VIRGINIA — Republican former Gov. Arch Moore appears to be leading Sen. Jennings Randolph, who has served in Congress since 1933.

WYOMING — Republican Alan Simpson is expected to defeat Democrat Raymond Whitaker in the race for seat being vacated by Sen. Clifford Hansen, a Republican.

Ex-con hopes tune will bring pardon

MIAMI (AP) — "I Am An Ex-Convict From A Florida Chain Gang" probably won't make the top song charts, but Floyd "Cadillac Mac" McClellan hopes it'll persuade Gov. Reubin Askew to grant him a pardon and clear his prison record.

McClellan says he paid $12,000 to have his long-playing record produced and copied 1,000 times. He sent a copy and a letter to Askew.

Merrill Lynch plans real estate venture on national scale

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Merrill Lynch, the big bull of securities, is planning to become a real estate agent, and things in that fragmented industry of small, local firms might never be the same.

"We want to lead the industry in change," said Dakin B. Ferris, the Merrill Lynch & Co. executive vice president to whom the newly created operation, Merrill Lynch Realty Associates, will report.

"The state of development in the residential real estate is comparable to the securities industry in the 1940's," he said, referring to the many small firms that grew, merged, or sometimes disappeared.

"We believe we're headed toward that move in real estate."

Merrill Lynch's advantages are enormous in the real estate market which, though made up of local rather than national companies, is much larger than the securities industry.

It already operates an employee relocation firm, a mortgage insurance company, and an asset management concern, and announced a couple of weeks ago that is negotiating to buy a mortgage broker.

"This is the closing of the circle in real estate," said Ferris as he sat in his 47th floor office in lower Manhattan. "It fits very naturally into our concept of being in total financial services."

Merrill Lynch has been positioning itself for years, observing the rising prices, the 67 percent home ownership rate, the constant geographical relocation of families — and the profit potential of it.

Securities? Profitable, especially to Merrill Lynch, the biggest factor in the industry. But few people consider there might be even greater profit available in residential real estate.

"We did an in-depth study last year and estimated that $8.7 billion was paid in residential real estate brokerage commissions," said Ferris. "We think that's conservative."

That "conservative" figure, he continued, is several times larger than commissions in the total securities business, which last year amounted to about $2.7 billion.

Perhaps aware that it might be called a bull in the china shop, "the thundering herd," as Merrill Lynch is colloquially called, will enter the residential market with a "significant" but not "great" step.

"We will acquire several firms in the next six months on a geographical basis," meaning, Ferris said, that Merrill Lynch will spread its activities rather than concentrate in a single area.

In most cities, he explained, there are 2 to 5 relatively strong firms that account for a large proportion of the total brokerage. "These are the quality firms," he said. "We're looking for quality."

South Africa's policies may harden under Botha

By SERGE SCHEMANN

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The ruling National Party's choice of Pieter Willem Botha, 63-year-old long-time minister of defense, to succeed John Vorster as prime minister is expected to result in a hardening of South Africa's domestic and foreign policies at a time it most sorely needs imaginative and flexible leadership.

Emerging victorious from a rough-and-tumble party caucus here Thursday, Botha struck a conciliatory note in English when he pledged to "improve relations between various population groups" and to "build friendly relations with neighboring states."

But in Afrikaans, the language of the original Dutch-derived settlers who came to South Africa in the 17th century and now control the National Party, Botha took a more defiant tone.

"There is a total onslaught against the free world and it is also directed at our fatherland," he declared. "But to the power of Marxism and revolution we will never bend our knees."

This was the familiar rhetoric of the hawkish defense minister who sent troops into Angola's civil war in 1975, pledged never to hand South-West Africa over to "Marxism and chaos and forces of darkness," and vowed: "We will fight to the last drop of blood to maintain an orderly country."

At his first news conference as prime minister, Botha announced he would leave the cabinet intact for the present, would retain the defense portfolio and would initiate no policy changes without consulting his cabinet.

Pressed to elaborate his stands on race discrimination, the future of South-West Africa and on Rhodesia, Botha repeatedly intoned: "I intend carrying out the policy of my party."

The statement was not necessarily intended to evade the question. It reflected the unwavering loyalty of a man who has spent two-thirds of his life working in the National Party, who was instrumental in bringing it to power in 1948 and who is sole survivor of the original cabinet.

Botha's slow climb to the top was characterized by total dedication to the party's ideology of apartheid, or race separation, administrative efficiency and determination.

In foreign affairs, Botha's tendency has been to build up a strong and defiant defense force rather than to seek accommodation with South Africa's critics.

He was a major factor in the government's decision last week to reject the United Nations plan for an internationally recognized transition to independence in South-West Africa, despite the certainty that the move would trigger new international censure.

Despite his autocratic image and outpourings of public support from all corners of Afrikanerdom, Botha will not be able to change or implement policies with the power and authority of his predecessor.

The new prime minister will have to contend with the fact that he won through the most divisive political battle in the National Party in 20 years.

He will also have to contend with the considerable residual power of Vorster, who as state president will almost certainly continue to exert a powerful influence on the National Party.

Proxmire presses on with fight against waste

By JAY PERKINS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unlike most of his colleagues who prefer to make their views known by button-holding other senators, Sen. William Proxmire plays to the crowd. And he has no apologies about using the press to make his points.

A master of the quotable quote and sports-related metaphors, he has scored again. His enemy as usual is what he perceives as waste of the taxpayers' money.

His latest target, documented by his notorious Golden Fleece Award, is Ohio State University for the development of a "bionic bug," which is a six-legged robot.

"News is a very important part of the job of being a senator," the Wisconsin Democrat says. "It's a means of communicating with other members, of letting them know your viewpoint."

"Nobody reads the Congressional Record or transcripts of committee hearings. If you're going to have an effect on your colleagues, the newspaper can do it. I often find out what someone's position is on some issue by reading about it in the newspaper."

"Communication is of the greatest importance. The media reaches millions of people. You can have the most logical viewpoint, reasoned and well thought out, but if no one hears about it, you're not going to have much effect," he says.

But it takes more than desire to get media attention. And Proxmire has shown an uncanny ability to draw notice.

The strategy has some drawbacks. Proxmire often is accused by his opponents of being a grandstander. He presses on nevertheless.

Proxmire led the fight against subsidizing the development of an American supersonic transport, the SST. He fought and won, at least for now, the battle over development of the B-1 bomber. He helped push through the Truth in Lending Act and the Fair Credit Reporting bill, both designed to give consumers more information on their financial transactions.

Some of these victories likely would not have been possible had not Proxmire used the press to focus attention on the issues.

"Issue oriented senators want to change something," says Howard Shuman, Proxmire's administrative assistant. "The only way you can do that is to have public opinion actively on your side. You can't do it by going to a member of the Armed Services Committee and saying, 'I'll vote for your bomber if you'll vote for my drydock.'"

"We're trying to draw attention to waste in government. Waste never fed a hungry child, never clothed a child. We're trying to change the priorities...."

In awarding the Golden Fleece to Dr. Roland R. Hutchinson of Kalamazoo, Mich., for his receiving $500,000 in federal grants to study why rats, monkeys and humans bite and clench their jaws, Proxmire said:

"The studies should make the taxpayers, as well as his monkeys, grind their teeth. In fact, the good old doctor has made a fortune from his monkeys and, in the process, made a monkey out of the American taxpayer."

A former college football player and boxer and a current long distance runner, Proxmire has been described at various times as a loner, an antisocial and an eccentric.

"All those things are true," says the man who seldom ventures into Washington's cocktail circuit. But he quickly adds, "I don't like the term eccentric because it implies that you are off your rocker."

"I call myself a pragmatic eclectic.

I want to pursue the means that are the most appropriate for the time. I don't believe in being doctrinaire."

Proxmire's daily schedule is anything but eclectic. He runs five miles to work each morning, arriving shortly after 8 a.m. He eats breakfast, changes into his business suit and starts a day that is planned to each half hour. He has not missed a Senate roll call since 1966.

He does not smoke or drink. Work and running are his outlets. He is blunt in speech; his words are quick and concise.

He was the first senator in the known history of the Republic to have a hair transplant, an event that was greeted with great glee.

"I used to know Gaylord Nelson (Wisconsin's other senator) when he had hair and Proxmire when he didn't," Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., said at a campaign stop in Wisconsin during Udall's run for the presidential nomination two years ago.

Although Proxmire has made his reputation as a foe of government waste, he actually is a foe of big government.

"My philosophy is that we should do only those things which are absolutely essential," he says. "There is too much government by far. It is better if we do less rather than more and if we target assistance only to those who really need it."

He is a proponent of affirmative action programs, civil rights, and the Equal Rights Amendment. He also favors the Carter Administration's hospital cost containment measure. He is a strong opponent of abortion — "it is murder and should be prohibited by law" — and has voted consistently to bar the use of federal funds for abortions.

Proxmire spends vacations working at odd jobs such as a garbage collector, as a fireman, in banks — as chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, he oversees banking operations — and in dishing out food at Salvation Army lines at Christmas.

Although his critics point to these odd jobs as evidence of his desire for publicity, Shuman says Proxmire has found "that you learn a lot from this method."

Of a National Science Foundation study of how distractions can curb aggression in male drivers halted in traffic at busy intersections, Proxmire said:

"To reduce the tension and aggression of traffic jams in American cities, the foundation seems to tell us we should organize thousands of bikini-wearing young women, clowns and women with broken legs to strut, dance and stagger across the streets at every busy intersection."

The senator and his staff are sensitive to criticism that they sometimes overstate the case or that they attack only part of a study, ignoring the overall point of the research. They also are sensitive to criticism of grandstanding, with Shuman noting that Proxmire doesn't even have a press secretary.

As far as using specific examples in order to make an overall point, Shuman responds that, "The public is incapable of understanding a billion dollars of waste, but they can understand something that they can see, feel or touch. It's a way of getting the job done."

Often the Golden Fleece has an effect beyond the actual award. "I can't say how many times an agency will say when we call, 'Please don't give us the award,'" Shuman says.

"They think we know more about them than we really do. It makes them more cautious."

"We did a survey the first year and found that in about two-thirds of the cases (awarded a Golden Fleece), the practice had either been stopped or cut back."

New air pollution law takes effect

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Beginning Monday, any company planning to construct anything that could cause air pollution must give public notice of their intent.

The rule was adopted by the Texas Air Control Board last spring and is effective Oct. 2.

"The statement must run in two successive issues of a newspaper having general circulation in the area in which the source is to be located," the board said Friday. "Further, the statement must appear in both the public notice section of the paper and elsewhere in the same issue as a notice measuring at least 3 by 5 inches."

A public comment period of 30 days will be allowed to let interested citizens contact the Air Control Board concerning the permit application.

The board said it hoped the new rule would "broaden public participation in its permitting procedures and to help eliminate any element of surprise to citizens when a new facility is constructed in their area."

Renee Floyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy C. Floyd, has been selected as the Outstanding Girl for September by the American Association of University Women. The Midland High School senior is a member of the Society of Distinguished American High School Students, a squad leader of the Pack Backers and a senior Girl Scout. She plans to attend Texas A&M University next year.

Scotland Yard baffled by 'diabolical' pellet murder

LONDON — Georgi Markov, the Bulgarian defector and broadcaster, was murdered, probably by a platinum pellet smaller than a pinhead.

Scotland Yard made this startling disclosure Friday. Officials said they had never before seen anything like the exotic instrument that apparently caused Markov's death 18 days ago.

"It is diabolical that this sort of thing could happen in a London street," said Assistant Commissioner David Powis, operational chief of the yard's detectives.

Markov, a writer and dramatist, fled from Bulgaria in 1970. In recent years he has been broadcasting attacks on the regime to his homeland over the U.S. government's Radio Free Europe in Munich.

Just before he died, he told friends he had been jabbed by a man with an umbrella near Waterloo Bridge. Markov was convinced he had been poisoned.

The yard does not yet know who killed Markov. Assistant Commissioner Gilbert Kelland told reporters:

"The world is the field in this case. Your guess is as good as mine."

The intelligence community here is convinced that the killer was an agent from the Soviet bloc, perhaps from the Soviet KGB secret police.

At first, intelligence sources here were puzzled by the long gap in time between Markov's defection and his death. Emigres marked for assassination, it was said, are typically liquidated in six months.

But now the community knows Markov's fate was not an isolated incident. Last month, another Bulgarian defector and journalist, Vladimir Rostov, was hit in the back as he was mounting an escalator in the Paris Metro.

Unlike Markov, Rostov did not become ill at once. On Tuesday in Paris, while two Scotland Yard detectives watched, a French surgeon removed from Rostov's back a pellet identical to the one found in Markov's right thigh.

The putative fatal instrument is an ingenious device, almost traceless. The pellet is an alloy of rare metals, 90 percent platinum and 10 percent iridium. It is one-fiftieth of an inch in diameter. Two minute holes, each 16 thousandths of an inch had been drilled into this pinhead, at right angles to each other.

Detectives here have found an unknown substance in the holes of the pellet embedded in Markov's skin. This substance may turn out to be a poison, but the yard said that it could take months to complete the forensic tests.

Commissioner Powis said that the pellets are a remarkable piece of microengineering, possibly performed by a skilled watchmaker. Preparing an umbrella tip to fire such a device must also have required precision work of a high order. Why the pellet that worked in London failed in Paris is not known.

Markov, who was sentenced in his absence to six and a half years by the Bulgarian regime, fled to Britain and married an English woman. His principal occupation was broadcasting cultural news over the foreign service of the BBC, an essentially non-political task.

But when Sofia refused to permit him to return to see his dying father, Markov turned to the attack.

Over Radio Free Europe and the German Deutsche Welle, he broadcast extracts from his unpublished memoirs. Among other things, he accused Bulgaria's boss, Todor Zhivkov, and other high officials of corruption.

On Sept. 7, Markov suddenly fell ill with a mysterious high fever. He told his wife and others that he had been jabbed with an umbrella earlier that day by a man who said in a foreign accent, "I am sorry." The man with the umbrella then jumped into a cab and disappeared. Four days later, Markov died at 49.

Statistics show big market for waitresses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Waiters and waitresses continue to be the workers most in demand across the country, according to the Labor Department.

The department's Employment and Training Administration reports that there were 18,731 full-time jobs available for waiters and waitresses in September.

The pay for these jobs ranged from $2.65 to $2.97 per hour.

Next in demand were materials handlers, with the department listing 18,155 jobs nationwide at a pay range of $2.65 to $5.04 an hour.

Local jobs openings are listed at job banks where individuals seeking work can obtain referrals to available positions. State labor or employment offices can be contacted for further information.

Among the other jobs with openings listed at more than half of the nation's job banks were stores laborer, 14,619; fork lift operators, 13,782; secretaries, 13,201; construction laborer, 12,467 and clerks, 11,059.

DIRT, SQUIRT AND QUIRT

National 4-H Week starts today

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent

When is drought broken? After nine days and rainfall totals ranging from 4 1/2 to 7 1/2 inches, the feeling is that it is at least "dented," if not broken. Seriously, it is premature to say that one good rain reverses a drought cycle but this rainfall and the way it fell did go a long way toward replenishing depleted subsoil moisture reserves.

The moisture came too late to be of appreciable benefit to this year's production of crops and native forages, but it does offer encouragement for next year's prospects.

The 4-H members in Midland County will be among 5.5 million across the United States celebrating National 4-H Week Oct. 1-7. A number of special activities are planned in relation to this national observance, which has as its 1978 theme, "4-H—Freedom to Be."

Leading off the week will be the annual Midland County Achievement Program on Monday evening. During the week, local radio stations will carry spot announcements by 4-H members concerning the 4-H program.

This year's National 4-H Week is designed to reflect on the fact that 4-H offers youth of all backgrounds an opportunity for personal growth and development, and, at the same time, broaden their interests and concern for others. In Texas, the 4-H program is conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service of the Texas A&M University System.

4-H is a highly flexible program and continues to expand and adapt to the changing needs and interests of young people. Project areas continue to expand, providing youth with many "learning-by-doing" experiences that will help them grow into productive, contributing members of society.

4-H helps youth learn skills to cope with real-life situations today as well as to prepare them for years ahead. Membership is open to youngsters age 9 through 19 and is open to all irrespective of race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

Vernon Sikes, area extension horticulture specialist from Fort Stockton, will present a program on "Ground Covers for West Texas" Tuesday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Sponsored by Lancaster Garden Center and the Extension Landscape and Turf Committee the meeting is open to the public and will be at the Lancaster Garden Center, 1705 W. Indiana St. Sikes will cover such items as plants adapted to various situations of sun and shade, soil and water management and insects and diseases.

A neglected garden site this fall and winter can become an insect haven waiting to explode next spring with hundreds of hungry and unwanted insects. So, to reduce the number of insects in your garden next spring, destroy their critical food supply and shelter.

Garden insects, like most living creatures, need food and shelter to survive freezing temperatures and other adverse weather conditions.

Don't give them a place to spend the winter in your garden. Ideal places for insects to overwinter are trash, vegetable stubble, unharvested fruits and tubers, boards, mulch, tall grass and weeds.

Removing plant residues and disposing of debris, weeds and other volunteer plants eliminates food and shelter for many insect pests such as cutworms, webworms, aphids, wireworms, white grubs, squash bugs, sowbugs and spider mites. When a garden stops producing, spade plant material into the soil or take it to the compost pile. Don't allow it to remain in the garden.

Spading the soil deeply during the fall is also good as it will expose many insects to be eaten by birds and predators. Other insects will be tilled deep enough into the soil to prevent their emergence. By practicing good garden sanitation this fall, you'll be ridding yourself of many undesirable garden "friends" and saving time and money for insect and disease control next growing season.

Tour of Washington might boggle minds

By JAMES LARDNER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A sightseeing tour of Washington, conducted by Vinnard Parris, owner and founder of American Sightseeing Tours, is a stern test of the mind's capacity to absorb and retain data.

The narrowest house in Washington is 11 feet wide. The Washington Monument is 555 feet 5 5/8 inches tall (an elevator ride to the top takes 90 seconds). The buttons on Abe Lincoln's coat — as rendered for the Lincoln Memorial by Daniel Chester French — are four inches in diameter.

But the number weighing most heavily on Vinnard Parris' mind as he parks an empty tourbus outside the Museum of History and Technology, is $110,000. That's the asking price for a new bus he has just inspected. Not counting the smoked-glass skylights — an $8,000 option.

Parris decides it is an offer he can refuse, with or without skylights.

Vinnard Parris, who looks somehow like a minor vaudeville act with his red-white-and-blue bow tie, elongated smile and slicked-back hair, came to Washington from Colorado in 1929, just in time to complete his senior year of high school here. With his mother and sister, he lived in a cottage erected on stilts adjoining Fletcher's Boat House in Georgetown. They paid about $500 for the cottage, he says, plus $20 a year to rent the site from the government.

Later the family went into the rooming house business, buying a string of properties downtown.

Parris worked his way through George Washington University and GW Law School as, of all things, a butler in Japanese Embassy—a job that lasted until the ambassador died. Parris' last duty was to escort the ambassador's remains and the ambassador's widow to California, where an American battleship was waiting to forward them to Japan.

"I asked his wife, 'Aren't you going to ride the battleship?' Parris recalls. "Oh no," she said. "I wouldn't want to detract from his glory."

Armed with a law degree—a shaky asset in the 1930s—he became a tour guide for the Gray Line, which hired him in the fall of 1939, and put him through a four-week training program. But after a few months he quit to go into business for himself, buying a '32 Packard V-12 8-passenger limousine — "the same car," says Parris, "that Charles Evans Hughes had used when he was chief justice."

World War II soon put Parris in uniform and his fleet of three limousines in mothballs, but when he returned, he reopened the sightseeing business at the same address.

The bus is about two-thirds full as Parris slips into the westbound flow of early afternoon traffic on Constitution Avenue. "This wasn't always called Constitution Avenue," says Parris over the bus's thunderous PA system. "It used to be called B Street."

When you are driving a 40-foot, long-by-8-foot-wide vehicle through downtown Washington, and the landmarks are packed together like MacDonald's french fries, brevity is unequivocally the soul of wit. There is no point in telling some juicy story about Blair House, for instance, if it means letting the statues in Lafayette Park slip past unacknowledged.

Those statues in Lafayette Park are statues of the European luminaries who assisted the American colonies in their fight for independence, and Parris says Baron von Steuben is "the man who was probably more valuable to us than the rest" for his help in training the Continental Army.

And oh yes, not to forget the White House. Originally constructed of Virginia sandstone, which was, ironically, brown. Burned in the War of 1812, when Dolley Madison courageously rescued Gilbert Stuart's portrait of George Washington.

As we pass St. John's Episcopal Church and turn north onto 16th Street, Parris calls our attention to the ramp built to accommodate FDR's wheelchair. He points out the Soviet Embassy ("constructed by Mrs. Pullman of sleeping car fame"), the National Rifle Association ("probably one of the strongest lobbies in Washington"), the horse-borne statue of General Winfield Scott (whose proportions, compared to those of his horse, are said to have inspired the exclamation, "Great Scott" says Parris, the Brookings Institution (whose "brilliant men have aided the government with atomic energy and so forth"), and the statue of Gen. Philip Sheridan ("that's the work of Philip Sheridan—I mean it's the work of Gutzon Borglum").

After a brief turn through Georgetown — including a glimpse of the house briefly owned and still more briefly occupied by Jacqueline Kennedy in 1964 — the horizon is suddenly overwhelmed by the Watergate complex, and Parris aims an index finger at the stretch of toothy balustrade behind which once dwelled the legendary John and Martha Mitchell.

At the Lincoln Memorial, we disembark for a 15-minute on-site inspection, informed up front that the memorial's columns, which appear vertical, actually incline slightly inward, because if they were vertical (architect Francis Bacon is said to have feared) they would bulge at the top.

Parris, about to catch a plane to a tour guides' convention in Florida, stands outside the bus and bids farewell to his charges, the red-white-and-blue bow tie sparkling in the late afternoon sun.

To the tourists, however, he is only "Charley", a veteran employee of the firm. He introduces himself this way because he figures it will make them more comfortable than knowing that their escort is the company president.

As a result, according to his son John, after a group of demonstrating farmers took the tour last spring, one of them called up and said, "You've got to give Charley a raise."

Troubled Zambia runs short on both money, food

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Hours before Tony Afendoulis opens his Kabulonga Supermarket, crowds of shoppers are waiting under the violet jacaranda trees outside.

Tantalizing rumors sweep through the crowd, mostly urban blacks. A bread truck was reported in the vicinity just after dawn. Somebody says he thought he saw milk being unloaded out back.

When the supermarket, a modern red-brick structure in a Lusaka suburb, opened its doors on recent morning, the crowd was lucky: milk and sugar had arrived. But, there wasn't any cooking oil, bread, flour, soap, detergent or beer.

Before all the troubles, when Zambia's borders were open and when world prices of copper — this nation's principal product — were soaring, the supermarket was crammed with fresh food and imported goods.

Tony, who is also the honorary Greek consul here and has his consulate upstairs over the supermarket, has since converted his liquor department into a book shop and sporting goods emporium. There isn't any wine and there isn't any liquor. When available, a bottle of undistinguished Scotch whisky fetches 25 kwachas ($31).

"I've got to sell something," says Tony, who has been in Zambia for 20 years. "But the headaches, the headaches. That's why I like being honorary Greek consul. It takes my mind off my problems in the supermarket."

Slothfulness and inefficiency are often blamed for Zambia's descent into poverty from prosperity after independence from Britain in 1964.

"It pains me that after nearly 14 years after independence we cannot manufacture a box of matches," President Kenneth Kaunda told a group of white businessmen earlier this year.

Mainza Chona, secretary general of the governing United National Independence Party, complained at its annual meeting last June of some civil servants who are "inefficient, lazy, arrogant and who are not committed to the cause of improving the country's economic well-being."

But Zambian officials claim, and foreign diplomats here confirm, that this is just part of the picture. Kaunda himself has said that just 20 percent of the problem is of the country's making.

Zambia, like other landlocked nations, depends on neighbors for trade routes. Much of its imports and exports flowed through Rhodesia, on its southern border, until the frontier was closed in 1975.

Zambia is one of the so-called "frontline" states working for black majority rule in Rhodesia, the former British colony headed by white Prime Minister Ian Smith until he became part of a biracial transitional government earlier this year.

Zambia allows its territory to be used for bases by the Zimbabwe African People's Union, one of two guerrilla-backed Rhodesian nationalist groups fighting against the Rhodesian government.

The country has had to seek alternate routes — mostly through Tanzania on the east — and Zambian government officials claim that this rerouting has cost $1.5 billion in increased transport charges since the border was closed.

"It must be appreciated that Zambia has suffered more than any other country just because of the country's strict observance of the British-sponsored sanctions against the breakaway colony of Rhodesia," John Mwanakatwe, minister of finance, recently said.

Thus, the Zambian government is particularly upset over the announced results of an investigation that concluded the British government cheated on its oil ban against Rhodesia.

Still, foreign observers here say that it may be just as well that Zambia has had to develop alternate trade routes, because the turbulent Rhodesian situation offers no guarantee that the country can go back to its traditional routings in the near future.

More basic to Zambia's crisis is the price of copper, which plunged from all-time highs during the world recession in 1974. Zambia is the world's third largest copper producer after the United States and Canada, averaging 700,000 tons a year.

At the peak, copper was selling for around $3,000 a metric ton. The price is now half of that.

While the boom was on, there was much talk but little action to diversify the Zambian economy.

Copper revenues were used to import what the country didn't bother to produce. Zambia's soil is fertile and 50-60 percent of the land is arable. But only 10 percent is actually tilled.

The low copper prices, coupled with the strained transport system — it is estimated that 20,000 tons of copper are backed up on Tanzanian docks — has resulted in a critical shortage of foreign exchange.

Imports now have been cut to the absolute minimum, as a recent front-page story in a Lusaka newspaper underlined.

It announced that X-ray film had just arrived from the United States at the city hospital. No film had been available since March. There is still a shortage of medicine and even syringes at the hospital.

Zambian residents are allowed to take out only 300 kwacha (about $375) in any one year when they travel abroad.

Visitors coming here must declare all their foreign currency. When they leave, they must produce official exchange receipts to prove that they did not deal in the black market, where a dollar will obtain three to four kwachas. The official value of one kwacha is $1.25.

The Zambian Treasury has about enough foreign exchange for six weeks of imported goods at any time.

The government is making a dedicated effort to pay its bills — its credit rating is still respectable — but it just can't pay everything at once.

This has led to a Zambian institution called "the pipeline." This is the length of time it takes to pay the bills. Currently, the pipeline is almost a year-and-a-half long. This means goods supplied 14-16 months ago are just now being paid for. As with current exchange rates, banks here routinely display the length of the "pipeline."

Zambia's present plight has even caused the government to re-examine the economic aspects of President Kaunda's "humanist" philosophy of government, which says it seeks to eliminate "the exploitation man by another."

Economically, humanism means, according to Kaunda: "Not mass production, but production by the masses." Zambia is supposed to pass from capitalism through a stage of socialism, before finally arriving at the higher plane of humanism.

Zambian domestic production is dominated by a score of state-run industries called "parastatals" which are involved in varied products, from milk to cement.

The government is now moving to loosen bureaucratic controls and allow individual managers to run the industries in a more business-like manner, in other words, make a profit.

And Zambia is now working with the Washington-based International Monetary Fund in a two-year program to resuscitate the economy. The fund is to provide nearly $400 million in credit if Zambia agrees to go along with austerity measures, one of which is a 10 percent devaluation of the kwacha.

Other conditions include reductions in government spending and internal borrowing.

Finance Minister Mwanakatwe has given a stark description of the fund's rescue efforts, calling them "the last hope for the economic recovery of our country."

Weather modification described in new report

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Recent weather modification activities in Texas are described—but not evaluated—in a new report by the Department of Water Resources entitled "Weather Modification Activities in Texas, 1974-77."

The report (No. 219) notes that efforts to change or control the weather began in Texas as far as the 1890's on the High Plains, with "simulated heavy artillery bombardment of surrounding hills in an attempt to produce rain."

In 1967, Texas enacted in Weather Modification Act (since amended), and several more sophisticated efforts at weather modification have taken place.

Those efforts, by Colorado River Municipal Water District; Atmospheric, Inc.; Plains Weather Improvement Association, Inc.; Meteorology Research, Inc.; Irving P. Krick, Inc., of Texas, and the High Plains Cooperative Program (HIPLEX) are discussed and described.

However, as the report notes, "no attempt has been made...to analyze the degree of success or failure of these activities."

"The great variability of natural weather phenomena in Texas makes results extremely difficult to ascertain."

"A number of years is usually required before the results of a particular program can be determined," the report states.

Projects are described by calendar year, with information on type of seeding employed, material and amounts of material used, etc., with maps and charts.

Copies of the report are available without charge from DWR, P.O. Box 13087, Austin, Texas 78711.

RINGING THE BELL

Black leader takes look at education

With BOB TIEUEL

Looking at Education From a Black Perspective: This correspondent attended the annual meeting of the National Education Association in Dallas recently and the convention hall echoed with the cheers of teacher delegates, as they were brought to their feet by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, whose address was one of the highlights. The leader of People United to Save Humanity, a Chicago-based organization dedicated to improving black careers through educational achievement, outlined a nine-point challenge to American educators:

"Teachers must regain moral authority; (2) Educators must emphasize character education; (3) As educators we must reeducate ourselves to reducing and eliminating illiteracy; (4) Educators must use tests and testing to diagnose and detect, not to delete and destroy; (5) Education must prepare our children for living in the real world; (6) Liberal education and generalists have an important place, but so does vocational and career education; (7) We must have sex education in the home and in the school; (8) We must teach our children creative and non-violent approaches to resolving conflicts; and (9) We must teach the basis and fundamentals in citizenship education."

President Carter, in a telegram, hailed NEA for its 121 years of working toward "educational progress" for the nation. In a special message to NEA President Ryor, Carter also thanked the NEA for its support of administration goals, and again reaffirmed his support for a separate Cabinet-level Department of Education.

the urgent need for meaningful tax reform to better finance the nation's public schools was discussed and debated by almost every one of the 8,100 delegates meeting in Dallas.

How "Education Can Turn Things Around" will be the theme of American Education Week, 1978. Dates: Nov. 12-18. The week is sponsored by the National PTA, the NEA, the U.S. Office of Education and the American Legion.

Recent great quotes: "We must constantly encourage social and artistic, cultural, church and charity, eleemosynary and philanthropic activities...Demanding honesty, integrity and service from the political officeholders is expected of a newspaper. So is investigative reporting in cases of official abuse or neglect—even criminal activity. The newspaper can be a voice of reason, a fighting champion of good, and a sledgehammer against evil....Never have we tried to pose as a final authority on any matter. Hopefully we keep an open mind on every issue affecting the general public and the community's future."

At the ripe age of 76, my long-term friend and former boss, E.L. Goodwin Sr., is dead in Tulsa, Okla. Goodwin was a lawyer, churchman, civic worker, newspaper publisher and a friend. We recall that as a very young man, it was "Ed" Goodwin, who made us a traveling representative of the Oklahoma Eagle in the Boley area. He loved his people and fought hard for justice, equality and a decent break for all Americans.

Charles J. Jeffrey Jr. of the Black Eagle's staff quotes him as once saying: "Blacks should stop begging, get up off their knees and make use of what they have...To buy a Cadillac when you don't have a decent place to stay is folly. We need to own land. Land is the only thing we are not making more of." An era in black journalism has passed in Oklahoma. Good bye Ed. See you in the morning!

Gradual advance of doublespeak wrinkles brow of Soviet brass

By SETH MYDANS

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet academics are wagging their fingers over a language problem that has been irking their brothers in the West for some time — the spread of bureaucratic jargon known as doublespeak.

In complaints reminiscent of the flap over such phrases as "at this point in time" during the Watergate hearings in Washington, the Russian professors warn that their language is getting tangled in red tape.

And in a country where a clerk must fill out two separate forms, make a telephone call and use three rubber stamps, a pot of paste and a pair of scissors every time she sells an airplane ticket, the horrors of red tape are never far away.

"Sometimes the grammatically correct speech of an educated person is so filled with stilted, bureaucratic phrases that it sounds worse than the ungrammatical speech of an illiterate," philologist S. Vostokova complained in a recent letter to a newspaper.

Radio and television take much of the blame, and it's easy to understand in a country where newscasts are made up almost entirely of the reading of official announcements.

Some of the examples cited by Dr. Vostokova in her letter to the Literary Gazette have a quaintly Soviet ring: — "For six years we have achieved victory in socialist competition," instead of "for six years we have won...."

— "We are in possession of a library and a war heroes' nook," instead of "we have a library...."

Then there is the jargon of athletes, she noted: "We participated in the game," instead of "we played," or "we arrived at our victory," instead of "we won."

Sometimes it is the fault of television interviewers, she said.

"Try giving an intelligent answer to this question, put to a young woman combine operator," Dr. Vostokova wrote: "Is there a creative process present in your work?"

"The poor woman had no choice but to confirm, 'a creative process is present.'"

Dr. Vostokova said she has never forgotten the "absolute masterpiece" of bureaucratic jargon she heard some years ago between a retired bookkeeper and his wife:

"And so, how shall we resolve the problem of my old trousers?" the bookkeeper asked. "Shall we send them out to be refurbished or shall we allow them to function in the role of rags?"

His wife, a simple woman, gave a straight answer: "I'll just rip them up and put them on the doorstep. We can wipe our feet on them."

Food labeling hearings set

WASHINGTON (AP)—The fourth food labeling hearings is approaching.

The government is holding a series of hearings to get the views of individuals on what information should be included on food labels.

The fourth hearing in the series will be held Oct. 12 and 13 at the Fremont Building in San Francisco.

Individual consumers will be allowed to speak first and you can sign up at the hearing or contact Taylor Quinn, FDA Bureau of Foods, 200 C St. SW, Washington, D.C., 20240.

Market cooperation in Europe effective

By THOMAS KENT

BONN, West Germany (AP) — In the foreign ministries of nine West European nations stand special teletype machines — their messages protected by code. They symbolize one of the most significant developments this decade in Europe's foreign policy.

The machines are the communications link of "European political cooperation," an increasingly important system in which the nine nations of the European Economic Community, the Common Market, are coordinating, and sometimes merging, their foreign policies.

The goal is to combine the influence of some of Europe's wealthiest nations with a population of about 260 million, larger than that of the United States, and as big as the Soviet Union's and to act with a united voice in world affairs. Their concerns range from United Nations activity to East-West relations and even military issues.

"There's no doubt any more about the Europeans acting together," says a non-European diplomat who has studied the 8-year-old political cooperation process. "We find now at the United Nations, for instance, that they are voting together increasingly. When we have something to propose, we can just deal with one of the countries and its representatives will answer us later on behalf of all the others."

The nine countries are Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Ireland, Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg. While diplomats from the United States and other allied nations are usually informed of political cooperation decisions, they are barred from the Europeans' meetings and do not see their exchanges of messages.

The Europeans' last major political cooperation meeting took place earlier this month in Bonn and united the foreign ministers of all Common Market countries except France. Topics included the Camp David summit then under way, the disorders in Iran, progress toward black majority rule in southern Africa and two resolutions that the Europeans prepared jointly to propose at the United Nations, one on human rights and the other on strengthening U.N. peace keeping forces.

In addition to discussing world problems and offering U.N. resolutions, the Europeans coordinate international negotiations and even military action.

The nine nations worked as a bloc in negotiating the 1975 Helsinki agreements and at the follow-up conference in Belgrade Yugoslavia, last year; coordinated massive assistance to Portugal in recent years to encourage the survival of democracy there and discussed the Belgian-French military intervention last May in Zaire's Shaba Province.

The nine partners led Western nations in walking out of a U.N. conference in Geneva last Aug. 25 to protest two votes accusing Israel of racial discrimination and of collaborating with South Africa.

Some diplomats believe that the political cooperation process is the most likely tool for the Europeans to move toward becoming a major world political bloc of their own. While the European Common Market organization itself deals mainly with economic problems, the political cooperation system operates completely separately and no limits on its functions have ever been set.

In addition, its style is much different from the Common Market's generally. While no secret seems to stay confidential long in the Common Market's economic bureaucracy, the content of political cooperation talks is much more closely guarded. In addition to sessions of the foreign ministers, who meet six times a year, there are about 100 meetings every year of lower-level working groups that are usually not announced at all.

Some areas of particularly confidential talks have been nuclear energy and policy toward China.

Eight of the nations — all except Ireland — are members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, whose considerations clearly enter into the political consultation meetings.

On July 25, the foreign ministers urged the Carter administration to use its best efforts to end the U.S. arms embargo against NATO member Turkey. Ireland went along with the vote "for reasons of European unity," Irish diplomats said. Ireland considers itself a neutral.

European political cooperation has not always been successful however, particularly when the national interests of different Common Market members conflict.

"It's ready to come up with a joint statement or a joint strategy on southern Africa, which is long-way away," says one European diplomat. "But when it's the Middle East or the Mediterranean area, different interests get involved."

France broke ranks with several of its European partners in 1975, when it abstained on the U.N. resolution equating Zionism with racism. Most of the other Common Market countries voted against it. The Europeans have also been in disarray over Cyprus, Lebanon and recognition of Marxist Angola and failed in 1973 to deal as a united front with the Arab oil boycott.

Tasks immediately ahead for European political cooperation now include dealing with Third World demands for fairer economic treatment, backing Western initiatives in southern Africa, supporting human rights activities in a series of countries and coordinating work at the U.N. General Assembly session that began in mid-September.

The group's foreign ministers also are expected to put pressure in coming years on Spain, Portugal and Greece all prospective Common Market members, to pull their foreign policies more into line with existing members. Spain, for instance, does not yet have diplomatic relations with Israel, and some diplomats claim Greece's U.N. voting record diverges markedly from the Common Market's on a whole.

Recent public statements by the group have included praising Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's trip to Israel last November as a "courageous initiative," declaring the Western plan for South-West Africa (Namibia) "fair and reasonable" and condemning the conviction and sentencing last May of Soviet dissident Yuri Orlov.

Low-cal bread ruling planned

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Food and Drug Administration is proposing to allow bread to be labeled as "reduced calorie" if it has a 25 percent reduction in calories.

Other foods are required to have a one-third reduction in calories before they may bear the "reduced calorie" label.

Officials said they were petitioned to set the lower standard for bread because, although it could meet the one-third requirement, it would not be as palatable or acceptable to consumers.

The agency is inviting comment on the proposal, particularly from consumers, nutritionists and food technologists. The deadline for comment is Nov. 21 and letters should be sent to the Hearing Clerk (HFA-305), Food and Drug Administration, Room 4-65, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md., 20857.

House leader Wright praises four retiring Texans

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Four retiring Texas Congressmen whose terms total 150 years in the U.S. House received high praise from House Majority leader Jim Wright, who said they would be "sorely missed" in the nation's capital.

Reps. George Mahon, D-Lubbock, Bob Poage, D-Waco, and Omar Burleson, D-Anson, attended the event here Friday night.

Olin Teague, D-College Station, remained in Washington due to ill health, but Wright arranged for a video tape to be made of the festivities.

Wright, a Fort Worth Democrat who has served with the retiring veterans since 1954, set the tone of the evening by saying "tonight is a happy night. Oh, yes, we'll have our moments of nostalgia, but they won't be maudlin or sticky or overly sentimental."

Wright told the near-capacity crowd of 600 that his four colleagues had emerged from simpler times in the nation's history.

"Perhaps it is not really chauvinism but a bit of forgivable pride to suggest that the simple virtues and homespun homilies of small town Texas and the American Southwest, embedded early in the lives of these four, have come through to bless the nation richly and to permeate its institutions," he said.

"Who could have guessed that one of the four (Mahon) would come to preside with world-acknowledged prudence over annual outlays of $350 billion? "Or that one would be the author of more agricultural legislation (Poage) and make greater contributions to improving the life of rural America than any other American in the nation's history? "Or who could have guessed that a third would be among the most decorated soldiers in America's military annals (Teague) and the driving spark that launched and oversaw the nation's space program? "Or who would have thought that the boy from Anson (Burleson) would become a foremost expert on taxation and the author of legislative language which every year saves literally billions of dollars for America's taxpayers and preserves the heart of free competitive enterprise."

Convicted Newton lambastes judge

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Black Panther leader Huey Newton has been acquitted of a 1974 assault charge but convicted on two counts of handgun possession in court proceedings marred by outbursts from Newton who called the judge a "southern cracker."

Newton assailed Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh for denying him bail on the gun possession convictions and ordering him held in the Alameda County Jail pending sentencing on Oct. 27.

Newton faces a jail term of up to two years on each weapons count.

When the verdicts were announced Friday, Newton rose to his feet, blew kisses to the audience, which included his supporters, and thanked the jury. He shook hands with each juror as they left the jury box, describing it as a complex case requiring a "legal technician" to understand it.

accused of pistol whipping his tailor, Preston Callins, in August 1974.

Callins had refused to testify in the trial, but the prosecution said Newton had beaten Callins for calling Newton "baby."

While Karesh was in another room during a five-minute recess, Newton pulled a cigarette from a pack he was carrying, shouting that he wanted to smoke despite the courtroom rule against it.

"I want to smoke. Let me smoke in the courtroom. If I can't smoke we'll have a fight. This is a test," he said, lighting the cigarette. "How many armed officers are there in the courtroom?"

No one attempted to restrain Newton, however. A bailiff was standing nearby.

The 36-year-old Newton, who was free on $80,000 bail, faces a murder trial in November stemming from the fatal shooting of an Oakland prostitute in August 1974.

Jet crash dead mostly regulars

By PETER J. BOYER

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It wasn't a flight for giddy vacationers. Pacific Southwest Airlines' Flight 182 was for regulars, businessmen from the state capital and airline "deadheads," non-paying employees zipping down to PSA headquarters in San Diego to pick up mail and paychecks.

It was a commuter flight and these were seasoned air travelers, the kind who board with a newspaper folded under one arm, down some coffee, do a little paperwork — no window gawking on this flight.

The Sept. 25 version of Flight 182 was just that way. An hour from Sacramento. A 15-minute stop in Los Angeles. A half-hour to San Diego. Routine.

But there came a devastating chink in the routine — a sudden collision with a small plane. Then, six seconds of terror straight to the ground, and the deadliest air disaster in U.S. aviation history. One hundred and fifty persons dead, including more than a dozen on the ground.

How did it happen? Why? After five days of asking those questions, aviation experts still don't know.

At 8 a.m. Monday, just as Capt. James McFeron was guiding the Boeing 727 into Los Angeles International Airport, the midway stop on the daily flight, another pilot was preparing for a routine of a different sort. David Boswell, a Marine sergeant with a commercial pilot rating, was discussing flight plans with an instructor who was teaching Boswell how to fly by instrument.

They established their plan, climbed into their rented Cessna 172 and took off for a few practice landing approaches at San Diego's Lindbergh Field.

As was customary in such training flights, Boswell's vision outside the plane was partially obstructed by a head visor to simulate conditions under which he would have to rely on his instruments. His instructor, Martin Kazy, 32, had unobstructed vision and full access to the plane's controls in case of an emergency.

At 8:30, Capt. McFeron lifted the 727 off the runway in Los Angeles, and Flight 182 was into its last leg, a brief 30-minute jaunt down the coastline to Lindbergh Field. Twenty minutes later, he instructed the passengers to douse their cigarettes and buckle up for landing.

A few miles ahead, Boswell had just guided the four-seat Cessna through a practice approach at Lindbergh and was pulling away for another go at it. Air controllers at Lindbergh Field turned the small plane over to controllers at nearby Miramar Naval Air Station radar center as it entered Miramar's territory.

Just a mile from Lindbergh Field, Capt. McFeron received this word from the Lindbergh Tower: "Traffic 12 o'clock (straight ahead) one mile. Cessna."

McFeron, calm, replied: "Okay, we had him a minute ago. I think he passed off to our right."

The Federal Aviation Administration's radar approach control center at Miramar is a squat, windowless building, unlike the tall, airy tower at Lindbergh. Except for the glare from countless radar screens, it is dark inside, a maze of electronics.

Miramar monitors planes on radar until they are about five miles from Lindbergh.

At that point controllers at Lindbergh take over and guide the planes in for a landing. The procedure is reversed for outbound traffic. The controllers at Miramar had been tracking the Cessna, and had observed the PSA jet in its flight path.

One minute after Capt. McFeron told Lindbergh tower he had passed the Cessna, controllers at Miramar contacted the Cessna. "Traffic in your vicinity is a PSA jet," they told Boswell. "He has you in sight. He's descending for Lindbergh."

There was no sense of urgency in McFeron's message to the tower — he said he had spotted the Cessna.

So, when the advanced collision alert system at Miramar began beeping its warning and red lights flashed "CA" "CA" (for conflict alert), the controllers did nothing. "They didn't believe it was a collision situation," National Transportation Safety Board spokesman Brad Dunbar said Friday. "They didn't think there was danger."

Seventeen seconds later, the jetliner and the Cessna met and exploded. Then this last transmission from Capt. McFeron of Flight 182: "We're going down."

His voice was still calm. Just after 9 o'clock Monday morning, grocery clerk Dwane Gallegos was tooling down the freeway. He was, in spirit, a world away from the dangers in the sky just above him. The 20-year-old Gallegos was planning his wedding and was shopping for his fiancee's wedding ring.

A loud noise yanked him from his thoughts. He glanced up. A flaming jetliner was screaming toward him. "I was desperate and scared to death," he said.

He tried to steer his car out of the way. But, "I just couldn't seem to get out of the way. So, I pulled over, jammed on the brakes and threw myself down on the seat."

The plane hit nearby. Pieces of wreckage shot all around him. "The stuff zinged right through the car," he said.

Gallegos wasn't hurt. But around him, in the quiet North Park section of San Diego, was a cascade of hot pieces of metal and bits of human bodies. One airplane passenger was hurled through the windshield of a car, narrowly missing a mother and her baby. Half a block of houses was gutted in a flash of fire.

Thirteen persons on the ground were killed. All 135 persons on Flight 182 were killed, as were Boswell and his instructor.

It is clear from radio communications tapes that both the Cessna and the 727 were advised of the other's presence in plenty of time to avoid a collision. Capt. McFeron had been advised four times of the Cessna's presence; the Cessna was warned twice.

What is not clear is why Capt. McFeron apparently believed he had the Cessna in sight. Or why he told controllers the Cessna "passed off to our right."

One obvious answer quickly presented itself — there was another small plane in the vicinity and, once McFeron passed it, he assumed he was out of danger.

But investigators ruled out that possibility when they learned the closest small plane was a twin-engine Cessna eight miles away, too far for McFeron to have mistaken it for the craft in his flight path.

Why was McFeron so certain that Flight 182 was not in danger? "That," says Dunbar, "is certainly the central question."

The wreckage of Pacific Southwest Airways Boeing 727 jetliner Flight 182 is examined by aviation inspectors the day after the crash in the North Park section of San Diego, Calif. All 135 passengers aboard died in the crash. (AP Laserphoto)

Illness cancels visits for Princess Margaret

FUNAFUTI, Tuvalu (AP) — Britain's Princess Margaret is ill with a fever of 104, has canceled her visits to Tuvalu and Fiji and will be flown to Australia to recover, her private secretary said Saturday.

The 48-year-old princess was in Tuvalu representing her sister Queen Elizabeth II. The little coral atoll becomes independent of Britain at midnight.

"Princess Margaret is quite obviously incapable of carrying out the remainder of her engagements on Tuvalu and her visit to Fiji has been cancelled," her secretary, Lord Napier, said.

"I would hope she has recovered sufficiently to fly direct to Sydney on Monday to give her an opportunity to recover there."

Napier said it was still uncertain whether Margaret would be able to proceed from Sydney to the Philippines and Japan. Both nations were on her Pacific itinerary.

Napier said Margaret had an "acute febrile upper respiratory tract illness" and was being treated with antibiotics aboard the New Zealand frigate Otago.

Members of her official party said Margaret called for the ship's surgeon at 4 a.m. when she awoke and had difficulty breathing.

Members of her household attributed the princess' fever to a drenching she got boarding the Otago Friday.

The New Zealanders were 20 minutes late picking her up at the pier and she got drenched first in a sudden tropical downpour then again as she boarded the frigate.

"It's really very bad luck" said a despondent Prime Minister Toalipi Lauti, who sheltered under a tree waiting in vain for the princess to come ashore Saturday to open a new wing of Funafuti's hospital.

Funafuti is a one-mile coral atoll that is the capital of the nine-island nation of 6,500 persons. Launches from all ships ran aground in driving rain ferrying official guests ashore and had to be towed off the coral reefs that dot the lagoon.

Five Italians leading papal guessing game

By HILMI TOROS

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Five Italian cardinals with pastoral experience rather than a bureaucratic background in the Roman Catholic curia are regarded as top prospects in the guessing game of who will be the next pope.

The experience of all five, leaders of major Italian dioceses, is similar to that of 65-year-old John Paul I, the people's pope who died Thursday of a heart seizure after a reign of only 34 days.

The belief that Roman Catholicism should be headed by an Italian, but one with rich experience as a pastor rather than as a Vatican administrator, emerged during pre-conclave discussions to find a successor to Pope Paul VI in August.

"If the cardinal electors wanted a pastoral pope from Italy only five weeks ago, there should be no reason for them to change in such a short time," a Vatican expert commented. However, observers also cautioned that papal elections often are unpredictable, as was shown in the surprise and speedy election of Cardinal Albino Luciani, the patriarch of Venice, as Pope John Paul I on the first day of voting Aug. 26.

Luciani's name had been barely mentioned as a serious contender for the papacy. Frontrunners were believed to be experienced, Vatican-based curia cardinals such as Sergio Pignedoli, Sebastiano Baggio and Pericle Felici.

But, according to Dutch Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, the search was for "a good bishop, a pastor, who knows pastoral problems from his own experience."

Non-Italian cardinals, numbering 84 out of the 111 electors, saw no reason why Italians should not continue their four-century domination of the papacy so long as the pope was a pastoral type. The swing to Luciani reportedly was led by Third World cardinals as well as Frenchman Francois Marty, Austrian Franz Koenig and Italian Giovanni Benelli.

Two cardinals who were said to have been under serious consideration along with Luciani topped the list of "papabili," or possible popes, on Friday. They are Cardinal Corrado Ursi, the 70-year-old Archbishop of Naples, considered a middle-of-the-road moderate, and Cardinal Giuseppe Siri, 72, the archbishop of Genoa noted for his conservative views. Siri, a cardinal for 25 years, was a strong vote getter even in the conclave that elected Pope Paul VI 15 years ago.

The others are Milan's Cardinal Giovanni Colombo, 75, Salvatore Pappalardo, 60, of Palermo, Sicily, and Benelli, 57, archbishop of Florence.

Prominent non-Italians are Willebrands, a liberal, who is archbishop of Utrecht and head of the Vatican's Secretariat for Christian Unity; Argentina's Eduardo Pironio, now prefect for the Congregation for the Religious after having had diocesan experience in Argentina; and French Cardinal Jean Villot, the Vatican's secretary of state under two popes and currently the interim administrator for the second time in less than two months.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Sports injuries

DEAR DR. SOLOMON: My wife has a big thing about our kids not doing anything that might hurt them. In particular, she is very worried about our son, who is 15, going all out for football. My feeling is that he can't do any serious damage to himself at that age... when everything heals right up. Also I think it doesn't do any harm to get roughed up a little and learn what life is all about. — Jack D.

DEAR JACK: You certainly don't want to fuss about children so much that they get over-protected and start worrying about doing every little thing.

However, let me also say something about an extremely important matter—injuries at that age. If a joint, like the knee, is affected, this may mean very serious problems later on in life.

The best account of this that I have seen recently comes from some experts who spoke at a meeting organized by the Arthritis Foundation. They are Dr. Colon H. Wilson, Jr. of Emory University in Atlanta, and Joan D. Sutton, a nurse specialist in rheumatology at Johns Hopkins University.

Here's the gist of what they said. Tens of thousands of young people involved in football and other contact sports are liable to become victims later on in life to serious and painful joint problems because of "traumatic arthritis."

Traumatic arthritis is arthritis resulting from injury. It is one kind of osteoarthritis.

Dr. Wilson says that professional football players, for example, often develop traumatic arthritis as early as their 20s and 30s. But, he notes, they are adults, and they presumably know the risks they are taking.

Youngsters are different—and let me quote Dr. Wilson on this. "There are about one and a half million boys who play football in their communities, in high school, or in college. Sometimes in all three. Many of them don't have orthopedists as team doctors to watch over them and treat their injuries. Many don't have sophisticated equipment to protect them."

"Fifty to eighty percent will sustain some injuries," Dr. Wilson goes on. "Most of these will be minor. But a great many will require topnotch early care if osteoarthritis is to be prevented from developing later."

Dr. Wilson cites Joe Namath's knees as one example. "The way his knees have been banged around for years, going back to his high school days. I don't have to examine them to know that he's got a dandy case of traumatic arthritis right now."

Joan Sutton stresses the special danger of reinjury of a previously damaged joint—and urges anyone who has had an injury to take special precautions.

To sum up: Doctors, parents, and young athletes must become aware of how serious sports injuries can be, and be sure they are treated well to prevent long-term complications.

Kennedy probe leaves questions

By MARGARET GENTRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever they conclude about President John F. Kennedy's murder, House investigators are pondering the prospect of a future presidential assassination and what the government should do if it happens.

In a government which pays military thinkers to plan for every conceivable form of Armageddon, it may seem strange that there is no well-coordinated plan to investigate a presidential assassination.

Should the FBI lead such an investigation? Should there be a high-level panel such as the Warren Commission? How could the shortcomings of that process be forestalled? How could the full cooperation of the CIA be assured? What should be made public and what should be kept secret?

The House Assassinations Committee is grappling with those issues after wrapping up a month of public hearings on the conspiracy theories and unanswered questions surrounding Kennedy's murder in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Testimony from 59 witnesses and extensive documentary evidence has answered at least some questions, but the committee made little headway in solving other crucial mysteries.

The proceedings were alternately somber and comic, emotionally moving and clinically detailed, crackling with anger and deep with philosophical musings. When the end came, these highlights emerged:

—Virtually all of the evidence supported the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin and that he killed Kennedy with a rifle fired from the sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository.

—Scientists demonstrated convincingly that at least three shots were fired at Kennedy's limousine, the first missing entirely, the second striking Kennedy in the neck and then wounding John B. Connally in the torso, and the third slamming into Kennedy's skull.

—The theory of a second gunman located on a grassy knoll floundered for lack of support.

—Testimony showed that the American underworld had the means and motive to plot Kennedy's murder. But that's as far as it went. The committee so far has been unable to prove or disprove the theory of an organized crime conspiracy.

—The theory of a Cuban government conspiracy found no support in the testimony.

—At least one conspiracy theory was put to rest. A battered umbrella flipped inside out showed only its naked ribs, and the man who owned it turned out to be a mild-mannered fellow who intended nothing more than a solo protest against Kennedy's policies. So ended the tale of the "sinister umbrella man" who purportedly fired poison darts from his bumber-shoot.

Chairman Louis F. Stokes, D-Ohio, noted striking differences in the quality of the evidence. In establishing exactly what happened in Dallas — the number of shots, the direction of shots, the information hidden in the blur and shadows of photographs — the committee summoned the expertise of pathologists, physicists and engineers and the sophisticated precision of their instruments.

But science was no help in examining the key questions — did the underworld or the Cuban government somehow conspire to place an armed and murderous Oswald in that window? The only possible evidence was the word of fallible men and women, all suffering from memories faded after 15 years, some of them with reasons to tell less than the truth.

Though investigators are pursuing a few remaining leads, the committee seems likely to issue a final report in December admitting that it cannot prove to a certainty there was no conspiracy.

The committee probe of Kennedy's death and the assassination of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. in 1968 has consumed nearly two years and $5 million of the taxpayers' money. Was it money well-spent?

In one sense, probably yes. The committee has convinced some of its harshest critics that it has operated with thoroughness and professionalism. The public hearings never became the sensational circus some had feared.

But in a broader sense, whether one considers the money well-spent depends on the value one attaches to settling at least some aspects of a 15-year-old mystery. On one side is the argument that the nation suffers when a large segment of the population believes the assassination was the result of a conspiracy and the government was either too incompetent to discover it or too deceitful to acknowledge it and prosecute those responsible. On the other side is the argument that nothing can change the fact of Kennedy's death and no amount of investigation can end the conspiracy speculation.

Though defending its work, the committee readily acknowledges that it came 15 years too late and should not have been necessary.

Committee members believe the Warren Commission erred seriously by neglecting to pursue important leads when memories were still crisp. They also blame the commission to some extent for trusting the FBI and CIA too much.

The CIA never told the commission about agency assassination plots against Cuban President Fidel Castro, nor was it candid about Soviet defector Yuri Nosenko who claimed he had information about Oswald's life in Russia. The FBI at that time was more interested in protecting its own image and concealed some of its information about Oswald from the commission.

The mistakes of investigation began with the Dallas police department, where confusion was so rampant and security was so lax that night club operator Jack Ruby, was able to shoot Oswald to death in the police station in full view of a national television audience.

The committee is trying to pinpoint the errors of the past in an effort to plan for the future. They know it could happen again. The testimony of former President Gerald R. Ford, a Warren Commission member and a target of two assassination attempts during his presidency, was a reminder that potential assassins do indeed lurk in waiting.

The Redstone test stand was used to test the engines which powered the first manned flight into space with Alan B. Shepard's 15-minute suborbital flight in 1961. (AP Laserphoto)

'Poison umbrella' murder brings call for expulsions

LONDON (AP) — The "poison umbrella" murder of Bulgarian defector Georgio Markov on a London street brought a strong call from a British newspaper Saturday for the expulsion of all suspected secret agents in the embassies of the Soviet bloc.

"This is not a time for quibbling or splitting hairs. It is an admirable time to put every suspected KGB man in the Communist bloc embassies onto a plane home," the Daily Express said in an editorial.

The Times of London also said the attack indicated "operatives of a state security organization" were responsible, and that "if guilt becomes demonstrable, there will have to be the strongest possible reaction."

British scientists are testing two tiny platinum pellets found in Markov's body after his death, which Scotland Yard has officially branded as murder.

The pellets, barely the size of a pinhead, apparently were injected into Markov's body Sept. 7 by a man using the ferrule of an umbrella.

The pellets are officially presumed to have contained a highly toxic poison or some kind of virus or bacteria.

Nicaraguan President agrees to foreign mediation

By GORDON D. MOTT

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza has accepted foreign mediation of peace talks with his opponents, but rejected their demand for his immediate resignation, saying elections will be held in 1981 as scheduled.

The key point of the bid to mollify his critics was Somoza's acceptance of the "friendly cooperation" of the United States, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic as mediators in talks with the opposition to "help us find a peaceful solution to our problems."

The United States, which has been pressing Somoza to sit down with his opponents, has said it would take an active role in the peace effort. U.S. envoy William Jordan flew to Nicaragua Friday for the fourth time in a week and met with Somoza. There were no details of their talks.

It was not known if Guatemala and the Dominican Republic had accepted the mediation roles, or if the timing and ground rules for negotiations have been established.

Somoza's opponents, spearheaded by leftist guerrillas, have demanded his resignation as a prerequisite for ending the rebellion that began in January and erupted into bloody fighting earlier this month that was crushed by Somoza's national guard troops.

"Let me emphasize that only votes can elect my successor," Somoza said in a broadcast speech. "I will seek to promote the participation of any political group that considers it has the right to participate in the electoral area in 1981."

Somoza, whose current term expires in 1981, did not say whether he would seek to succeed himself.

"I believe we must continue down the path of civil order and give the Nicaraguan people the opportunity for free elections observed by the Organization of American States," he said.

A member of the Broad Opposition Front, an alliance of 16 political parties and labor unions, said Somoza's call for elections was "good for export."

Adolfo Calero Portocarrero, national coordinator of the Authentic Conservative Party and a member of the opposition alliance, said, "Somoza knows there have never been real elections here. He is inviting us to do something we have never had. It's ridiculous. He owns the elections, too."

However, Calero Portocarrero said another top-ranking member of the opposition front had called him and said "we are very happy with the mediation proposal."

"I think it is even better, even easier because there are three countries instead of five. It is definitely an advantage for us with the United States and the Dominican Republic," Calero Portocarrero said in a telephone interview.

The Broad Opposition Front accepted a proposal Thursday to set up a five-nation panel with El Salvador and Colombia filling out the lineup. Somoza reportedly was angered by Colombia's signature on a Venezuelan letter to the United Nations criticizing his regime and ruled out its participation. El Salvador was a country of Somoza's choice and he apparently dropped it to appease his critics.
