serious about the proposal. He said he discussed the issue with Dr. Dede Armentrout, a West Texas representative of the National Audubon Society.

By slowing down the flow the waste product through the filtering pits and increasing the retention time, more of the material will be separated out of the final discharge into the lake, he added.

Improvements in the disposal system are expected to cost Whalen Corp. about $20,000.

Darrow is confident the company can make enough improvements in the remaining time before the hearing, or at least come up with affirmative policies, to convince the Railroad Commission the discharge permit should be granted.

Darrow also said he is optimistic Whalen Corp. can negotiate some improvements at the lake to satisfy environmentalists.

New Congress, facing old bills, may focus efforts on 'weeding'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outgoing Congress undertook so much legislation it could not finish all of it, leaving several bills on major issues unresolved when it adjourned Sunday.

In contrast, the new Congress convening in January may shift the emphasis from legislating new government programs to weeding out existing ones found to be obsolete or too costly.

A number of members are suggesting such a course, including influential ones like House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

"Somewhere in there we have got to find time to spot the obsolescence that takes place in government," O'Neill said in an interview.

He has assigned staff and some interested members to devise changes in House rules and procedures so time can be officially set aside for oversight instead of legislation.

"Oversight is Congress' word for monitoring operation of the executive branch. It is a lesser known function and, O'Neill said, not a wholly successful one so far.

He said the answer might be to allocate specific time that would not be pre-empted by the constant press of new legislation.

"I know how hard it is to get rid of a thing once it's in existence... There's no question in my mind there's waste in government," O'Neill said.

If less effective programs can be pruned out, he said, the budget can be balanced within a few years.

California's Proposition 13 and other evidence of public dissatisfaction with enlarged government and increasing taxes have been felt by Congress and a growing sentiment for pruning is its response, O'Neill said.

That notwithstanding, Congress will continue spending much of its time on new legislative programs. What are the priorities?

"Hospital costs and health," replied O'Neill. "Absolutely, that's the big issue."

Cooler mornings still part of Permian Basin forecast

Permian Basin residents can plan on wearing a sweater in the morning and carrying it in the afternoon for a while longer, the weatherman says.

The forecast calls for fair skies with warm afternoons through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

After today's high of near 80, the temperature is predicted to dip to near 50 tonight. High Wednesday is expected to be in the middle 80s.

The gusty West Texas winds should show up again, decreasing to 5 to 10 mph tonight. Monday's high was a pleasant 76 degrees, while the overnight low dipped to 45.

Record high for Monday was 92 degrees set in 1964, while the record low for today was 36 degrees set in 1976.

Rain didn't rate a mention in today's forecast, leaving the month of October with no recorded rainfall. So far this year, 12.31 inches of rain have been recorded at the weather service office.

Disc jockey awed by numbers who heed call to march on City Hall

By FRED BAYLES

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Disc jockey "Cuzzin" Dave Williford says it was only an "off-handed comment" when he told listeners he was going to City Hall to complain about higher property taxes.

When he arrived at city offices Monday, 4,000 angry protesters were waiting.

"Needless to say, I was a little amazed. I was shaken," said Williford, who was substituting on a Saturday talk show when he suggested listeners take their gripes to city officials.

The crowd, angered by the city's first property re-evaluation in 50 years, mobbed downtown New Bedford for four hours, crawled up scaffolding around City Hall, and even climbed onto the mayor's black Cadillac to wave signs reading, "Don't Pay Taxes!"

"This is one of the first battles in the tax revolt," said Mayor John Markey.

One man was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. Another was picked up at the scene on motor vehicle violations.

"No one is more concerned about taxes than I am," he told the crowd from a second-story window.

If they want to cut services, there are no services to cut. You can't take off the police, you can't take off the firemen, you can't stop picking up the trash."

Property taxes have been an emotional issue in New Bedford, particularly to members of the old seaport's Portuguese community.

"I don't know how to stop the spending," he said. "I sort of welcome their becoming involved but not on such an emotional basis."

Markey ordered the building evacuated as a safety precaution three hours after sign-waving demonstrators appeared. But the crowd wouldn't leave until Markey spoke to them. When he appeared, they booed.

Markey said that while he was awed by the numbers, he was not awed by the message.

statement. "He went through the hell of war. This is why we greeted with particular attention his election and the fact that he has chosen the name of John Paul II, thus binding his pontificate to those of his great predecessors."

In dealing with Communists both in his native Poland and elsewhere, the new Pope has one strong attribute, solid working-class credentials.

Although now known as one of Poland's leading intellectuals and a cultured expert on art and poetry, before the war he worked in a chemical factory.

Despite his tough stand in dealing with the government, the new pope has the reputation of being a simple, smiling man, much like Pope John Paul I. And Protestant sources say he was among the most ecumenically minded of Poland's leading Catholics.

Cardinal Wojtyla planned to meet Billy Graham during the American evangelist's recent crusade in Poland. The death of Pope John Paul I and the conclave to elect his successor prevented the meeting.

have enough people signing these petitions to show a trend of development in the area to qualify for the paving," he added.

After Mrs. James Purvis, commission member, noted the area had a lot of light commercial and heavy commercial areas zoned around it, the commission voted not to change the zoning.

A final plat on Barkman Square, located on Denger Avenue east of A Street, received approval only after the commission, Hennessy and Bill Thompson disagreed on the numbering system.

Thompson said he had checked with the Postal Service and the city building department, and both agreed his numbering system would work.

Thompson said the development will be in a horseshoe shape. The numbering would start on one side, continue to the end, then turn and continue on the other side.

A zone change request by Herman L. Harris was rejected. He had asked the 1100 block of East Scharbarr Drive be changed from local retail district to a commercial district to accommodate an upholstery and cabinet shop.

The commission felt commercial zoning did not fit the area, but did request a zone change amendment from the City Council to allow such a business in a retail district.

The 800, 900 and 1,000 blocks of Illinois and Texas received the commission's recommendation to be changed from multiple family district to office district.

Final plats receiving recommendation to the City Council were Wydeewood Estates, Ma-Mar Terrace Addition, Midkiff Heights, Chandler Addition, Snively Block Addition and South 349 Acres.

Preliminary plats getting the Commission's OK were Wedgewood Park Addition, Midland Industrial Park and Porras Addition.

that file," Capelle said. Assistant District Attorney Margaret Morse, who executed the search warrant, said she expected to receive the subpoenaed documents Friday.

But they were not surrendered, apparently on the advice of Bullock's attorney, locally prominent defense lawyer Roy Minton.

Capelle was asked whether the use of Ms. Revier's secretarial services for a private business on state time could be a crime.

"The closest you would come is official misconduct," he said. The code provides penalties of two to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000 for official misconduct.

Bullock issued a statement Monday saying he would not comment further "on activities which may be within the realm of the district attorney's office."

In connection with events for Crime Prevention Week, Darrel Joy, former Odessa Police Department officer, will speak to the Twentieth Century Study Club at 1:30 p.m. Oct. 24 in The Midland National Bank.

This will be the second in a series of three seminars scheduled during the week. The first will be at noon Oct. 23 in the Midland Hilton for the Downtown Kiwanis Club. The third will be for the Senior Citizens Against Crime at 1:30 and 4:30 p.m. Oct. 25 in the Fine Arts Department of Midland College.

Joy, who is connected with the Texas Crime Prevention Center in San Marcos, will be joined at the Twentieth Century Study Club seminar by Mrs. Ernest Pierce, Hands Up director of the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs.

Hands Up is a volunteer effort to halt crime, sponsored by the 13,000 clubs with 600,000 members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which includes all 50 states.

Mrs. Pierce will discuss the progress of the Hands Up program in Texas.

All interested citizens are invited to attend the seminars...

...YOUTH GROUP of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity will have a rummage sale from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in the church's parking lot. The sale will be held in the Parish Hall, if weather does not permit an outdoor event.

The group will be collecting items for the sale through 6:30 p.m. Thursday. Persons with items they wish to donate may take them to the church...

...PERMIAN BASIN WELL LOGGING SOCIETY will not have its regular third Thursday of the month meeting, it has been announced.

Because of the Permian Basin Oil Show, the meeting will be held at 11:30 a.m. Oct. 26 in Midland Country Club...

Tailgate feed sets tone for big game

By TOM HOGE
AP Newfeatures Writer

With fall here and the football season in full swing, the time has come again for one of America's most enjoyable customs; the tailgate lunch. If planned right, that hour before kickoff time when you whet your appetite with a Bloody Mary or glass of white wine, then pitch into a hearty spread, can be the high point of the day.

The meal can start with that old standby, deviled eggs, and proceed to cold meat loaf and potato salad, if you want to keep things simple. Or you can serve a movable feast featuring a juicy steak or stew.

Picnicking was once a matter of packing a hamper with sandwiches or cold chicken and bringing along a jug of lemonade. Today most picnic grounds are equipped with grills, but since you may not find one near a football stadium, you can bring along a portable barbecue, if you want to cook your meal on the spot.

We've come a long way from the days when a vacuum bottle for hot coffee was about the only equipment for keeping anything at the right temperature.

Almost any dish, hot or cold, can be enjoyed at today's outdoor spread without danger of a salad spoiling or a ragout getting cold. We have all sorts of insulated bags, vacuum bottles and jugs.

If the day you have chosen turns out to be brisk, try this recipe for beef-eggplant casserole laced with bourbon that should sustain you through the game.

1 eggplant, medium size, peeled and sliced
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 pound ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
2 teaspoons rosemary
1 teaspoon oregano
1 ounce butter
2 ounces chopped ripe olives
½ pound mozzarella cheese, sliced
2 cups beefstock
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
½ cup bourbon whiskey

Saute eggplant in oil and set aside. Sauté meat, onion, garlic powder and herbs in butter. Place layers of eggplant, meat, cheese and chopped olives in greased casserole. In saucepan bring to boil stock, mustard, salt.

Pour half hot stock plus bourbon over casserole contents. Cover casserole and bake in 375-degree oven 45 minutes. Remove cover and bake another 15 minutes, using remaining stock to keep moist. Remove from oven and if you're ready to go, wrap casserole in aluminum foil and pack in insulated bag. Serves 4.

Surviving twin expires

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — David A. Bain, a 39-year-old state worker, says he had hope until the last minute that at least one of his Siamese twin daughters would survive.

"I had hope until the last minute, until the last minute I had hope," Bain said Sunday. "Never, never lose hope, as long as you have a breath in your body, you gotta hope."

Tonya Bain died at 9:10 a.m. Sunday — less than 24 hours after the death of her sister, Sonya.

"Her weakened heart was never able to supply fully the needs of her body tissues and she died from unremitting cardiac failure," Dr. Howard Filston said in a brief statement.

The twins, born Oct. 3, were separated Thursday by doctors at Duke Medical Center in a desperate attempt to save their lives. Doctors never offered much hope that either child would survive.

"A lot of people have been calling to tell me how sorry they are, that they'll keep praying for me," Geraldine Bain, 36, mother of the twins, said. "I'm just trying to hold on."

Mrs. Bain, who has seven other children, said she never saw the twins in person, only in pictures.

Bain, who lives in Fuquay-Varina, about 15 miles south of Raleigh, is a $123-a-week technician in a state agricultural laboratory.

The girls were born by Caesarean section at Wake Medical Center in Raleigh because they were positioned improperly for normal delivery. Doctors said they were not aware the infants were joined until the surgery was under way.

Doctors had wanted to delay the separation surgery for several months to allow the infants time to grow stronger but they went ahead because they said the babies' conditions were deteriorating.

A team of four senior surgeons and five staff physicians performed the five-hour operation. They said following the surgery that the twins faced "horrendous" odds. The twins were joined from the chest to the navel and their hearts and livers were connected.

'Widow's mandate' a good thing?

By RICHARD COHEN
The Washington Post

The way the stories read at the time, she had buckled. The administration had turned on the juice, leaned a bit heavy, sent in Mondale — My God, not Mondale! — and Muriel Humphrey had folded. She had voted the way her husband would not have wanted her to vote, she said, and she did it because she was either duped or pressured. They never considered for a moment that she might have a mind of her own. She was not supposed to. She is a widow.

Now, of course, she is retiring from the Senate, having refused to seek a full term on her own. Also retiring, but not voluntarily, is the widow of James Allen, Maryon, who was defeated in the Alabama Democratic primary. Without the two widows, the Senate probably will once again become an all-male body.

The reason I bring this up is that another widow is being sent to Congress. She is Beverly Byron, the widow of Rep. Goodloe Byron of Maryland who died last week of a heart attack at the age of 49. His widow was named the next day to succeed him as the Democratic candidate for Congress. Her sole opponent is Melvin Perkins, a certified pauper, assailant of a woman bus driver and denizen of a skid row hotel in Baltimore. Mrs. Byron, in effect, has been appointed to Congress, her primary qualification, it seems, being her tragic widowhood.

The time has probably come to pause and to say that this is not a column about Beverly Byron or Muriel Humphrey or any of the women who have been named to replace their late husbands in political office. It is, instead, a column about widowhood as a political phenomenon, how it has become accepted as a substitute for political experience or ambition — something that

Scholarship funds raised by chapter

The Tall City Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association conducted a Radio Day, an annual event to raise money to support scholarships awarded to young women of Midland.

Currently receiving scholarship assistance are Gayette Lott, Janie Honess and Kathleen Fisher.

Initiated into chapter membership at an October meeting was Dawna Henry.

An installation ceremony was held for the new officers, who are Shirley O'Neal, president; Gloria Lott, vice president; Mrs. Henry, recording secretary; Skipper Jordan, corresponding secretary; and Pauniece Oglesby, treasurer.

The monthly vocational talk was given by Lois Falls. Marion Fisher presented a slide program about her recent trip to Japan to attend the International Congress of Gerontology.

Membership in the chapter is open to Midland business women. For further information, contact Mrs. O'Neal, 694-8003.

Women take welding class

CARBONDALE, ILL. (AP) — A program at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale is training a group of 17 women for maintenance welding on heavy equipment used in strip mining.

While the 26-week course is aimed at the surface mining industry, the students will be prepared to fit into any kind of welding job, officials said.

calls for a suspension of all the political rules. In the case of Mrs. Byron, for instance, she neither appeared before the body of Democrats who named her to replace her husband, nor was asked any questions by them. Her widowhood seemed to say it all.

There is probably some good in all this. In the first place, without the so-called widow's mandate, there would have been precious few women in Congress over the years. Of the 95 who served in either house from 1919 to 1975, fully 40 percent were named to replace their late husbands.

Some of them have turned out to be eminently qualified. Margaret Chase Smith, for instance, went on to create a strong independent career for herself. Maureen Neuberger, who replaced her husband in the Senate, was generally thought to be his equal, and currently Lindy Boggs has proved herself a congresswoman in her own right.

You could argue that any way in which women enter the political system is a good way and you could

AT WIT'S END

It means he's goofing off

By ERMA BOMBECK

When my son entered the first grade, his teacher asked to see me. She said, "He verbalizes during class, periodically engages in excursions up and down the aisles and in general is immature."

"Are you trying to tell me he's 'goofing off'?" I asked.

"I wouldn't have put it in quite that way," she said.

When he was in the third grade, a teacher at Open House told me he "did not work to capacity and was definitely an underachiever."

In the fourth grade, he was still "goofing off" but he was described as "lacking in basic skills as he was not working at his level of competency."

In the sixth grade, I had a long talk with his teacher who said, "Your son has potential, but he is incapable of any viable feedback. You tell me. What are we going to do with a child who does not relate to social interaction?" (I don't know what she did, but I ran home and got out my dictionary.)

In the eighth grade, my husband answered the phone one night. When he hung up, he turned around and said numbly, "Bruce is not motivated by curriculum innovation. They don't want him to stagnate in a lockstep system and they're trying to stimulate his awareness. What does all that mean?"

"It means they're trying to stop him from 'goofing off.'"

Bruce was in his sophomore year when he was diagnosed as having problems modifying his behavior. They decided to put him in a modular-flexible schedule.

At the beginning of his senior year a few weeks ago, Bruce's adviser summoned me to her office and said, "Well, we're at that time where we have to consider the conundrum (she laughed nervously.) It's hard to say where the burden for the lack of motivation and apathy lies, but before Bruce's achievement levels polarize, I thought we ought to have a little talk."

"This year will hopefully open up options for Bruce so he can realize his potential and aim for some tangible goals."

I leaned over to the secretary on my way out. "Do you speak English? (She nodded.) What was she talking about?"

"Bruce is goofing off," she said flatly.

I don't know if education is helping Bruce or not, but it's certainly improving my vocabulary.
