Small town, small museum have big role

R-T Staff Writer

STANTON — Big cities are "centers of turmoil," but small communities such as Stanton embody "the American character" and are the principal source of the country's heritage, Joe Sullivan said here Saturday following the opening of the Martin County Historical Museum. Sullivan is director of educational programs for the Texas Bureau for Economic Understanding in Arlington. He was in Stanton, 20 miles east of Midland, for the ribbon-cutting of the $90,000 museum operated by the Martin County Historical Commis-

Sullivan not only spoke of "urban decay" but of "small-town decay" associated with people leaving the smaller communities and moving to

"America's small towns are the source of her strength," Sullivan said. "The national character has been developed (by small towns)."

America's heritage is embedded in "trust in God, the importance of the individual, the importance of freedom, the profit motive..., the dignity of work, competition (in the free enterprise system)...and government as a protector and not a provider," Sullivan told more than 100 folks who turned out for the barbecue luncheon following the museum's opening.

However, the decay of small towns is witnessed in movement of people from the communities to cities, which Sullivan characterized as "centers of turmoil.

He said the privately-run bureau he represents strives to "preserve the American heritage, to perpetuate the free-enterprise system and the traditional American values.

Earlier, after the ribbon-cutting and a "Martin County Historical Commission Day" proclamation read by Mayor Danny Fryar, Sullivan said the people of Martin County were more of an inspiration to him than he was to them.

"These people in Martin County don't need our (the bureau's) inspiration at all," he said. "They did a better job (on the museum project)

More than a 100 people toured the museum following the ceremony. Via artifacts, photographs, displays and words, the museum traces the county's history from the prehistoric days, to the Indian era, to the coming of the Texas & Pacific Railroad early in the 1880s, to settlement of the town by a colony of German Catholic monks and priests in 1881, and

City may face school bond vote

By SUSAN TOTH R-T Staff Writer

Midland voters could be asked to approve a major school bond election as early as next spring to remedy problems created by expanding growth in the northwest part of the city and aging of existing school faci-

Although school board members have not discussed the proposals in depth, school officials are taking steps to begin acquiring land around the Midland High School campus to expand that facility. They also have asked school principals to begin checking their buildings with an eye toward making an initial "wish list" in the event of a bond vote

Continued growth in the northwest part of the city is being watched closely to judge if new elementary school might be necessary — another item that would require approval of bond sales

School officials already have begun to implement parts of a proposed three-year master plan for expanding and updating the Midland High School campus.

The proposal calls for the Midland campus to expand to North F Street

The district already owns the former Cowden house on the corner of North C. Street and Illinois Avenue and has begun a condemnation proceeding against the Hill estate for the property on the corner of North F Street and Illinois Avenue.

Acquiring the rest of the mostly residential property in the four-block area may take some time, according to Midland Schools Superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey.

Mailey said he expects to start negotiations for some of the land soon, contingent on passage of the bond

If the district acquires the roughly four-block area next to the school - excluding where First Presbyterian Church now sits - the proposed plan calls for using the additional land as a site for a new gym and for athletic practice fields and parking

Under a master plan drawn up by architects Neuhardt and Babb, the present gym would be remodeled into a learning resource center to take the

Higher prices expected from OPEC vote

By MARK POTTS

NEW YORK (AP) - Americans will pay more to fuel their cars and furnaces next year if the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries votes as expected later this month to raise the price of crude oil. But the increase will probably be spread out over the next year, observers say, to soften the effect of a price rise on the struggling U.S. dollar the currency the cartel does business

"If their rise affects the dollar negatively, they may lose whatever gain they had from the price increase," said John Lichtblau, executive director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, an industry group. "If the dollar declines they can buy less with their dollars in other

An OPEC increase would mean a further rise in the prices of gasoline and heating oil in the United States. Prices of these products are already rising as a result of supply shortages caused by high gasoline demand this

The 13 OPEC nations are scheduled to meet Dec. 16 in Abu Dhabi to discuss the price increase, which, if approved, would be the first since a 5 percent boost in 1976. A proposal to raise the price a year ago fell through unexpectedly when Saudi Arabia and Iran, OPEC's two largest members, raised opposition.

But those two nations are now believed willing to go along with an increase to make up what OPEC nations have lost in the past 18 months as a result of the dollar's tumble in foreign exchange markets. A usually well-informed Kuwaiti newspaper reported last week that the price increase would come in four increments of 2 percent each, one in each quarter of 1979. That ties in with a statement by Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani earlier this year, who said a series of small increases now would be necessary to avoid huge increases in the next dec-

Yamani last week reiterated that statement and hinted he might favor a freeze in prices, which most experts doubt will be approved.

The report in the Kuwaiti newspaper, Al Watan, also generally agreed with a prediction Nov. 22 by U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal that the increase would total no more than 8 percent.

Oil-supply experts estimate the price of gasoline and heating oil in the United States rises about a penny for each 5 percent increase in the price of crude oil. If the OPEC increases are spread out, Americans will probably also see gradual increases at the gas pump and in home heating bills.

The current rise in prices has the cost of premium leaded gasoline up to 76.5 cents a gallon in Los Angeles, for example, and 70.9 cents a gallon in Boston. Local prices are affected by individual supply problems and other factors. The national average is about 72.6 cents a gallon. And heating-oil prices are as high as 55 cents a gallon in some parts of the Northeast.

President Carter begins work on proposed budget

By BROOKS JACKSON

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter began work on the proposed 1980 defense budget Saturday with tentative decisions to seek big increases for NATO tank forces and ammunition.

However, Carter avoided any new commitment to a 3 percent "real growth" in overall military spending, a promise he made last month.

A White House official said Carter was seeking areas where he could save money and had tentatively approved some new, stricter rules for buying military hardware.

Four propositions face Ector voters

ODESSA — Voters in Ector County Tuesday will vote on four propositions calling for $21.6 million in improvements in the public school sys-

The bond proposals call for upgrading classrooms, building of two new elementary schools and a new junior high school, the construction of a new sports stadium and track, and location of the stadium.

The propositions will be listed separately on the ballots.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) - A boat packed with Vietnamese refugees sank in rough seas Saturday after being denied permission to land in Malaysia, drowning as many as 143 people, police said. The disaster pushed the number of similar refugee deaths in recent weeks past 330.

Several anti-Shah protestors killed in Iran

By ED BLANCHE

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Dressed like the dead and chanting "Allah is Great!", anti-shah protesters poured through the streets of downtown Tehran Saturday but were scattered by heavily armed soldiers in a bloody start to Moharram, the Moslem holy month chosen by the opposition as the time of reckoning in Iran.

The government said seven people were killed Friday night and two others Saturday, mostly in the city's bazaar area. But diplomatic sources said 20 people died Friday night when soldiers machine-gunned Moslem zealots as they poured from a mosque after curfew. And opposition sources put the total number of dead at 70.

Many more were injured in the street battles.

Tanker trucks were washing blood from downtown streets Saturday

The rioting, which erupted after dusk Friday, resumed shortly after dawn Saturday. Troops with bayonets clashed with thousands of young protesters who waved clenched fists and black Islamic banners and shouted, 'Murderers! Murderers!'

Some wore "kafan," the white sheets in which the dead are buried in Moslem Iran, to show they were not afraid to die.

There were no reports of clashes in provincial cities Saturday, but the official Pars news agency said one person was killed and 12 were wounded by army gunfire in the Persian Gulf port of Bushehr Friday night. In the southern industrial city of Isfahan, reliable sources said protesters clashed with troops Friday night.

Widespread violence has been predicted for Moharram, a month of mourning. The orthodox Moslem opposition to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's rule has called for strikes and giant street demonstrations.

Improvements to Midland High School have been needed since the 1950s, according to Mailey. The oftenexpanded building has been remodeled five times since its original construction in 1928.

Taped news to be prepared by White House

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House Monday will begin providing some 600 U.S. radio stations with taped news reports prepared by the administration staff.

Stations subscribing to the White House service will obtain the reports by dialing a toll-free number and recording the message.

Press secretary Jody Powell said the service is similar to that provided by many other branches of govern-land High School now, Mailey said, and athletes now have to travel a mile to Memorial Stadium for practice. Since there are no girls' dressing areas at the stadium, female athletes have to dress at the school and then make the trip for practice, he noted.

Mailey stressed the plans for Midland High are merely proposals which reflect the current thinking of school officials and that no definite plans for a bond proposal have been set.

"Any time you draw up a big set of plans, you worry about how they will be paid," board vice president David Grimes said.

"Midland is growing educationally. The schools are growing older and need to be updated. When we study the situation, it becomes obvious that we're going to have to ask the people for capital improvements," he said. The board, however, is "not even to the talking stage yet," Grimes said. In addition to renovation of some aging schools and expansion of the Midland High School campus, the district is considering buying land for future schools in the growing northwest area of town, Mailey said.

Basin losing wildlife crusader

By MARK VOGLER R-T Staff Writer

Richard Endress would seem to be an able government agent with an unpopular task - he defends wildlife in a region where enforcement of federal laws sometimes get in the way of powerful economic interests. Most government officials might be content to sit back in Endress' posi-tion as field agent in charge of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Region II office in San Angelo and not make

But the easy-going 41-year-old Indiana native has bumped heads with ranchers, greyhound racing management and oil companies in three recent and controversial wildlife issues in the West Texas area:

• His extensive work on illegal killings of Golden Eagle's throughout West Texas drew the wrath of ranchers and others, who claim the protected bird hampers sheep-ranching by killing large numbers of lambs.

• Endress stepped on a number of toes when he called attention to several violations of federal and state law during a probe of the West Texas jackrabbit exportation business, which allegedly sends hundreds of thousands of the animals into as many as 40 state for use in greyhound training exercises.

• And his unrelenting contention that oil field waste discharges into playa lakes violate federal law by endangering migratory waterfowl won him few friends among oilmen.

"Whenever you're in government service and get into something controversial, they want you to back off. But I can't do that ... it would bother my conscience," the agent said Saturday.

The U.S. Department of Interior has cited Endress for outstanding service during his five years covering West Texas and has promoted him to senior agent in charge of Fish and Wildlife Service activities in the Miami, Fla., office.

But to the chagrin of Endress and wildlife protectionists, West Texas will not have an agent to carry on his work after Thursday. The San Angelo office, which had responsibilities throughout West Texas, will be moved to Del Rio, where the Interior Department "can concentrate more on border-related cases.

"To me, personally, it is disappointing to be leaving at this time. We should be in 'the oily duck case' right now with agents working full time. If the (Texas) Railroad Commission can't handle the problem, we can," the agent said.

Endress two years ago kicked off an investigation of alleged pollution of playa lakes when he discovered several hundred dead, oil-soaked birds on the-shores of Whalen Lake in Andrews County.

He brought a complaint before a federal grand jury in Midland early last year. The grand jury referred the matter to the Railroad Commission, which in October suspended brine disposal operations at the lake. The commission still is reviewing whether it' should permanently terminate brine operations at the lake.

"There's a chance of presenting this to the U.S. Attorney's office again. If we had agents working on it right now, I'm reasonably sure it would be. And I have the impression that if went to the grand jury, some indictments would be returned," he Largely because of Endress' investigation, other state and federal agencies are examining different aspects of the case. And what was once simply a local "bird kill" problem has developed into a widespread re-examination of possible pollution of ground water caused by supposedly improper brine disposal methods.

"Maybe the salvation of the migratory bird rests on the ground water contamination angle. If you can't get the people's support on birds, you certainly can on ground water," Endress said.

On the jackrabbit investigation, which he initiated back in June, Endress said he could have devoted more time to it, but is optimistic that the practice of exporting rabbits for

"coursing" purposes eventually will be stopped because of public out-

"I received a registered letter from a lady in California who was protesting the coursing and wanted to see it stopped. I think most people think it is inhumane and shouldn't go on. I received mail from a few other states," Endress said.

"I have already received correspondence from about 10 states which have technical violations, making it illegal to either transport or receive rabbits without permits.

Endress said he knows where the rabbits are coming from and where they're going, based on an audit of air freight records at Midland Regional Airport and follow-up interviews with 'jackrabbit contractors" in the Midland-Odessa area. The Permian Basin, said Endress, appears to be the major supplying point of the rab-bits to greyhound trainers.

Endress was not the agent in charge of the eagle investigation, but did contribute to the probe - which led to a federal court case in Real County. The agent has investigated Golden Eagle kills throughout the region. Of all his investigations, he said he is most pessimistic about this

"The Golden Eagle situation will continue on until the bird is extinct, unless there's a drastic attitude change among the people in West Texas," he said.

"The people in West Texas are pretty apathetic when it comes to preserving wildlife unless it has a dollar sign attached to it."

Endress' strictly by-the-rules ap-proach has made him a respected, if not necessarily well-liked, government agent. He said he can "name about 200 people who are glad to see me go:

An entirely different set of wildlife problems await Endress in Miami, he said. He'll contend with the alligator poaching problem in the Florida Everglades, the illegal netting of sea turtles by commercial fishermen and

Cool weather forecast for Permian Basin

The weather Saturday may not have looked like Christmas, but the warm temperatures gave shoppers a chance to get out and get their work done. Today's weather should be more of the opposite with cool temperatures, the type that keeps people indoors.

A cold front moving down from the north should finally make its way into the Midland area today, keeping the mercury only into the low 50s. Low tonight should be around the freezing mark in the low 30s.

But as the front moves out the temperatures will rise again as Monday's high should be in the upper 50s, according to the weatherman.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said winds should be northwesterly at 15 to 20 mph today, decreasing to 10 to 15 mph tonight.

High Saturday was 76 degrees, almost even with the record high for that date of 80 degrees set in 1942. The expected low in the 30s tonight will still be above the record low of 20 degrees set in 1934.

Grover Springer, one of the 30 members of the commission's board of directors, made a brief keynote talk at the ceremony.

"I think all of us are elated today, because we have come to the point where we have come to see our museum a reality... I thank God for making this a reality," he said. Ruby Haggard, chairman of the Martin County Historical Commission, said the community should be "proud" to have such of an educational facility as the museum.

"We remain ignorant until we know something of the past," she said. Martin County Commissioner Mason Coggin said June Reid, the museum's curator, and others backing the project "have done a most wonderful job This is just the beginning.

Mrs. Brown applauded Mrs. Reid's perseverance in making the museum a reality. 'Behind every great woman there is a good husband," Mrs. Brown said of the curator's husband, Stanley Reid. Mrs. Reid touched on the obstacles the commission and museum supporters surmounted to raise funds for building the museum. 'We had to go through a lot of rigamarole...," she said. "It did take a bit of dedication. We just didn't reach out and get it.

Sullivan, in winding up the after-luncheon talk, said the museum is a tool for "self-discovery" via researching the past and heritage. He said the building of the museum here should "inspire people (elsewhere) to do projects like this." "It's one of the nicest I've seen," Sullivan said.

Mayor Fryar seemed pleased with the museum, which Jendo Turner said was a project of the Bicentennial Commission here. She headed up that 1976 commission. "Things like this make Stanton grow," Fryar said.

A tour of the Old Jail Museum, which features law-and-order artifacts, followed the luncheon.

The new museum will be open from 2 to 5 p.m. daily this week.

Prosecutors to rest case; Davis' defense hopes to prove frame-up

HOUSTON (AP) - After four stormy weeks, prosecutors are poised to rest a murder conspiracy case they insist should send a rich and powerful Texan to prison for life.

The target: Cullen Davis, 45, the millionaire czar of a world-wide business empire who fully intends to spend Christmas on Colorado ski

The charge: that Davis plotted the murder of the judge presiding over his divorce case.

The evidence: tape recordings of two summertime meetings between Davis and an FBI informant with suspicious memory lapeses.

The defense: a conspiratorial frame-up orchestrated from within a $6 million mansion by a vindictive

Mostly what the jury has seen and heard was testimony supporting audio and video tapes of the Aug. 20 parking lot rendezvous between Davis and a one-time pool-shooting crony named David McCrory.

But first ...

On that hot, muggy Sunday morning, the state contends, Davis drove from the home of his girlfriend to his Fort Worth office, opened the safe and removed an envelope containing Unaware of an FBI surveillance plane circling overhead, he drove a zig-zig route to the meeting with McCrory, who was wired for sound and armed with a .38 caliber pistol.

Beneath the McCrory car seat, wrapped in a white towel was a .22 Ruger pistol with a silencer attached. The mere possession of such a soundmuffling device is punishable in Texas by two-to-20 years in prison. As Davis arrived at the parking lot, he spotted an unmarked van parked beside a building adjacent to the restaurant rendezvous point with

He drove up and climbed from his Cadillac. He circled the suspicious vehicle, rapping on it once and attempting to look through the win-

Blackout curtains concealed four

FBI agents huddled inside the van. Their surveillance equipment included a videotape camera.

As he sat waiting to betray his one-time friend, McCrory watched with alarm while Davis inspected the undercover van. The burly informant pulled his pistol from his waistband and cocked it.

"He was scared to death," prosecutor Tolly Wilson disclosed late last week. "McCrory really thought he was going to have to kill Davis when Davis looked in the van.

"He thought Davis had caught

McCrory was mistaken. Davis peeled away from the van, drove alongside McCrory and signalled for him to join him in the Cadillac. "Just paranoid," Davis said at the start of a tape-recorded conversation, that included background music from In the van, FBI agent Joe Grav repositioned his videocamera, poked the lens through an opening in the blackout curtain and pointed it at

It was that videotape and the McCrory recording that prosecutors played over and over for jurors, using the FBI agents and other officers as testimonial support.

"The star witness in the state's case is not David McCrory," Strickland said. "It is the tapes. They stand on their own merit.

A defense team headed by Houston attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes conceded that the voice on the tape is that of Davis, but the concessions end there.

"The cornerstone of the state's case, David McCrory, will be discredited," vowed Dallas lawyer Steve Sumner. "I'm certain we'll be able to explain the reason for Cullen being with McCrorve

"We will provide further explanation for what was said in the tapes."

The tapes contain several incriminating segments. Among the most devastating are comments about the alleged death target, Joe Eidson, who was not killed.

McCrory: "I got Judge Eidson dead

Davis: "Good."

MCCrory "I'll get the rest of them dead for you. You want a bunch of people dead. Right?" Davis: "All right."

Those comments came shortly after the alleged exchange of the money and the silencer-equipped pistol and are followed by McCrorys's concluding statement:

"I have got the money. He has got the gun.'

When Davis left the parking lot, the surveillance aircraft reported to ground units: "The car is moving." Peering through high-powered binoculars, a flight observer tracked

Davis' Cadillac and directed mobile units to a restaurant several miles west of the McCrory rendezvous site. As Davis emerged from a phone booth, his face shielded by one hand, a car containing three officers arrived at the scene. Two jumped out with their guns unholstered and a third shouted:

"Cullen, you're under arrest. Put your hands on the car."

He offered no resistance. Later, investigators recovered the pistol and silencer from the car trunk and McCrory handed over the $25,000 in $100 bills.

Dispatcher plans on making a million

By GUY SULLIVAN R-T Staff Writer

Richard Kolas of Kolas Enterprises works as a dispatcher for the Midland Fire Department but only until he makes his first million dollars.

The 22-year-old is the son of an El Paso car salesman. In partnership with his father and brothers, he plans an Alpine movie theater and a tourist gift shop on land they own. "I want to become a millionaire," said Kolas. A former student of Sul Ross University, Kolas said he's been a dispatcher since May 1978. "I was a dispatcher in Alpine at Sul Ross University and I just applied here and they hired me."

He and his "partners" formed Kolas Enterprises in January 1978. His "partners" include Mr. and Mrs. Justin Kolas of El Paso and his brothers.

"We're going to start a theater in Alpine and offer strictly family entertainment-type movies on some land my family owns," he said.

Kolas said his father once owned a real estate business. Partially because of his father's business career, Kolas insisted, "I really do want to become a millionaire."

Asked how he plans to go about it, he replied, "Work." Kolas said, "I don't plan for it (a million dollars) to come to

Instead, he said he believes his "modest" goal can be achieved by a variety of enterprises, such as his disco business now operating in Midland. He and his partners charge $25 per event to provide music and lights and atmosphere.

The disco business, originally started in El Paso by his brother, has "transferred" down here with future goals being the Alpine store and theater.

His brother, Robert Kolas, actually stated what eventually became a thriving disco firm in El Paso, he said. When the competition bottomed out, Robert and a few friends started taking up the slack. It's been going pretty good in El Paso. We played in Midland a recent Friday. If business gets estalished here real well, we will have the best equipped outfit of its kind in area," he boasted.

Four 100-watt speakers, plus a sound mixer, stereo set, amplifiers, strobes and mirrored ball all lend the "atmosphere" Kolas and his associates take with them to each engagement.

"We are the best," he declared. "We had 30 competitors in in El Paso, but we have always been told we were the best. We charge $25 per hour. We play disco records, Spanish, country and western tunes and others. If people give us their requests, we will play other rec-

Kolas contends disco entertainment is "cheaper" than hiring a band for a dance or other social event. And he's optimistic about his business goals, too.

"Our most immediate plans are to get the disco business in Midland going on its way and then turn to the tourist novelty shop in Alpine and develop a family-type movie theater.

Like the song says, Richard Kolas is just "staying alive" until the goals of he and his partners bear fruit.

He seems patient.

"I don't expect it to come to me," he said. "But I really do want to become a millionaire!"

Judicial Council sets guidelines for membership in court of appeal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Judicial Council has proposed that any person appointed or elected to a court of appeal in Texas must have four years experience as a judge or have the endorsement of 50 to 100

The recommendation for a constitution change was made in the council's report Friday to the 1979 Legislature on needed changes in the state court system. The council, which conducts a continuing study of the judicial in Texas, also recommended a second constitution change that would change the name of the courts of civil appeals to "courts of appeal." This change would not automatically confer criminal jurisdiction on the present courts of civil appeals but would open the way for such action if the legislature

Welcome to STANTON HOME OF 3000 FRIENDLY PEOPLE AND A FEW OLD SOREHEADS

The people of Stanton won't deny that and cantankerous sorts. Most, though, are just down-home types. they've got a few old (and not so old) codgers

Life in a small town: It's great in Stanton

STANTON - Now and then the blessing ought to be: May small towns such as Stanton never become extinct.

The loss of their quaintness would do an injustice to much civiliza-

"Most people just like small towns," said City Manager Mike Rhea. "If somebody sneezes too loudly in public, you know about it.' Neighborly curiosity is a quality not restricted to small towns, but those hamlets are credited with the lion's share. "...People tend to look after each other around here," Rhea ob-

Stanton, though only about 2,500-people strong, is the largest of maybe a dozen communities in Martin County. Stanton "sits" about 20 miles east of Midland. The other communities go by names_such as Courtney, Lenorah, Badgett, Walcott, Grady, Flower Grove, Loyola, Merrick, Valley View, Independence, Three Leagues, Brown, Pleasant Valley, and Tarzan. Their mainstay is cotton and ranching. Oil supplements the economy. Most of the oil revenue leaves the county.

Stanton, the county seat, is a town founded in the name of Catholicism and in an extension of the Carmelite order of monks - friars - in 1881. It was to be a German colony.

Originally, this spot was tabbed Grelton by the Texas & Pacific Railroad. It was another spot on the tracks in West Texas for a section house, water tank and telegraph office. The priests, led by P.A. Peters, came here in 1881 from Kansas, pitched tents for worship and shelter, and called the spot Marienfeld (Field of Mary). Then, the building began, and families moved in But the name, perhaps due to Protestant influence, was changed to

Stanton in 1890. The drought and subsequent blizzard of 1886 drove many of the Catholic settlers off to more promising country. The running of present-day Stanton is not all that complicated. It's the market place for area farmers, who nowadays prefer to be called 'cotton producers" or "farm operators."

"It's kind of a hit or miss proposition," said Rhea. "We all pitch in when we're needed," he said of the city of Stanton's 15 paid employees - from dog catcher Eddie Crow, who said Stanton is "ah, it's all right," to Rhea himself. Mayor-farmer Danny Fryar is the town's "main

Just outside of Stanton and alongside Interstate 20 is a black-on-yellow billboard about which 81-year-old Peace Justice Martin L. Gibson says: 'We think we originated that (slogan).'

Welcome to Stanton Home of 3,000 Friendly People And a Few Old Soreheads

Though he's likely no candidate for the citizen-of-the-year award. Elvin 'Preacher" Ward works for a living and likes where he lives Stanton

"This little old town, to my notion, is hard to beat," said Ward while working on the yard of the new Martin County Historical Museum. A heavy-equipment operator, Ward's doing light yardwork while recovering from a traffic mishap at Eastland some time back. He was born here 49 years ago, remembers when the tornado (some say cyclone) struck the town and convent and academy 40 years ago, and shuns big cities. "I was down at Dallas (working for awhile), and that place was way too here since 1953.

Sheriff Dan Saunders, alias "Mr. Martin County," has been sheriff

"Martin County's a fine county," he said. So, too, are most of the people who live here, he added.

Police Chief Jerry Register will tell you that, too. "I know a lot of people. I see a lot of people," said Saunders, who probably is the most amiable, easy-going but sure-and-firm fellow within a hundred miles. "I spend half of my life on the telephone." Every town has it's hang-outs --- places where people feel comfort-

Stanton has a few One is the old-fashioned drug store - Stanton Walgreen Drug Store operated by Glenn L. Brown and his spouse, Mary Prudie Brown. It's been at the same spot, in the old sandstone bank building, for 27 years. The bank re-built across the way and is also on St. Peter Street.

'Anytime you want to know about something, all you have to do is come in the drug store and sit down and...have coffee," said John Stiles, a high school English teacher who prefers The Bard - William Shakespeare - over other poets and playwrights.

He lives in Stanton by choice; he teaches at Big Spring, and his wife works for an oil company in Midland. Stanton lies between the two bigger

The store, packed like a drummer's wagon readied for a long-selling season, features an old-fashioned soda fountain and the works. The system that makes the carbonated water is busted, though.

'This is a good place to eat. Probably the best," said J.C. Tunnell, a cotton farmer, who dropped by at lunchtime for a hamburger and a

Tunnell hadn't much to say about anything besides the weather and the cotton crop. Both have been downright poor this-year, he did say. First, there was the spring and summer drought - a carryover from last year - and the rains didn't come when they should have during the growing season. Then, about the time the farmers were readying to harvest an already.

scrawny crop, untimely autumn rains came and kept the cotton from properly maturing and kept the cotton strippers out of the fields. On top of that came a hail storm last weekend. It wiped out a swath of cotton crop about 20-miles long north of Stanton and cut down production by an estimated 5,000 bales. That figure amounts to about a third of the anticipated production this year and is less than 5 percent of last year's yield. Before the hail, the 1978 yield was estimated at 20,000 bales. "You've just got to get used to it," Tunnell said of the fickle weather. Last year, 110,000 bales of cotton were produced on 150,087 acres of cotton land in the county. This year, agriculturalists project that 15,000 bales will be produced off of 157,871 acres.

It's a slow year all around, but spirits are not dampened here. The Courtney Gin turned out its first bale Thursday afternoon. It belonged to Homer Henson, who farms southeast of Stanton. Last year at this time, the gin, which is one of six in the county, had ginned almost 11,000 bales: "This is a sorry year," said Henry Hadderton, gin superintendent. He said the gin would be lucky to turn out 4,000 bales this year. Some reckoned that gin operators had second thoughts about cranking up due to the crop shortage and to the cost of ginning.

"We didn't have any rain (during the growing season), and when we did, we had too much," he said. "It'll be good for next year."

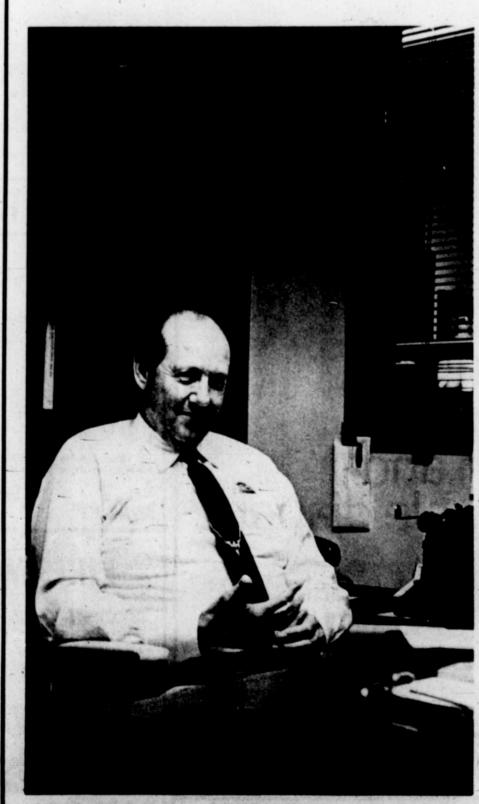

The folks in Stanton, like most tillers of the soil, hope to have a bountiful harvest next year.

Accu-Weather is a State College, Pa., company that uses sophisticated meteorological know-how to make weather pre-

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat responding to a proposed U.S. compromise for resolving the continuing dispute over the Palestinians.

It was unclear whether the Sadat message amounted to acceptance of the U.S. proposal to bridge the differences on the Palestinian dispute and whether an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty should clear the way for Palestinian autonomy on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip

Talking with reporters after the White House meeting, Vance said Carter expressed the "strong view" to the Egyptian that "further negotiations are essential." Vance said Egypt concurred.

U.S. and Egyptian sources who asked not to be identified by name said Sadat had accepted the concept of setting the end of 1979 as a target date for moving toward Palestinian autonomy in the two Israeli-held areas.

Israel has rejected that proposed timetable although it has agreed to have the commitment to future negotiations over the Palestinians expressed in a preamble to whatever treaty it might work out

The Egyptians, meanwhile, were understood to be continuing their insistence on a timetable toward Palestinian self-rule in the "treaty package."

Standing at Vance's side while the two talked with reporters in the White House driveway, Khalil said a separate Sadat message to Begin "carries very constructive ideas and is opening the way for resumption of negotiations." Stanton, the county seat, is a town founded in the name of Catholicism and in an extension of the Carmelite order of monks - friars - in 1881. It was to be a German colony. Originally, this spot was tabbed Grelton by the Texas & Pacific Railroad. It was another spot on the tracks in West Texas for a section house, water tank and telegraph office. The priests, led by P.A. Peters, came here in 1881 from Kansas, pitched tents for worship and shelter, and called the spot Marienfeld (Field of Mary). Then, the building began, and families moved in

But the name, perhaps due to Protestant influence, was changed to Stanton in 1890. The drought and subsequent blizzard of 1886 drove many of the Catholic settlers off to more promising country. The running of present-day Stanton is not all that complicated. It's the market place for area farmers, who nowadays prefer to be called "cotton producers" or "farm operators."

"It's kind of a hit or miss proposition," said Rhea. "We all pitch in when we're needed," he said of the city of Stanton's 15 paid employees - from dog catcher Eddie Crow, who said Stanton is "ah, it's all right," to Rhea himself. Mayor-farmer Danny Fryar is the town's "main

Though he's likely no candidate for the citizen-of-the-year award, Elvin "Preacher" Ward works for a living and likes where he lives

"This little old town, to my notion, is hard to beat," said Ward while working on the yard of the new Martin County Historical Museum. A heavy-equipment operator, Ward's doing light yardwork while recovering from a traffic mishap at Eastland some time back.

He was born here 49 years ago, remembers when the tornado (some say cyclone) struck the town and convent and academy 40 years ago, and shuns big cities. "I was down at Dallas (working for awhile), and that place was way too big," Crow said. Sheriff Dan Saunders, alias "Mr. Martin County," has been sheriff

"Martin County's a fine county," he said. So, too, are most of the people who live here, he added. Police Chief Jerry Register will tell you that, too.

"I know a lot of people. I see a lot of people," said Saunders, who probably is the most amiable, easy-going but sure-and-firm fellow within a hundred miles. "I spend half of my life on the telephone." Every town has it's hang-outs --- places where people feel comfortably and welcomed. Stanton has a few. One is the old-fashioned drug store - Stanton Walgreen Drug Store operated by Glenn L. Brown and his spouse, Mary Prudie Brown.

It's been at the same spot, in the old sandstone bank building, for 27 years. The bank re-built across the way and is also on St. Peter Street. "Anytime you want to know about something, all you have to do is come in the drug store and sit down and...have coffee," said John Stiles, a high school English teacher who prefers The Bard — William Shakespeare - over other poets and playwrights. He lives in Stanton by choice; he teaches at Big Spring, and his wife works for an oil company in Midland. Stanton lies between the two bigger The store, packed like a drummer's wagon readied for a long-selling

Tunnell hadn't much to say about anything besides the weather and the cotton crop. Both have been downright poor this year, he did say.

First, there was the spring and summer drought - a carryover from last year - and the rains didn't come when they should have during the growing season.

Then, about the time the farmers were readying to harvest an already scrawny crop, untimely autumn rains came and kept the cotton from properly maturing and kept the cotton strippers out of the fields.

On top of that came a hail storm last weekend. It wiped out a swath of cotton crop about 20-miles long north of Stanton and cut down production by an estimated 5,000 bales.

That figure amounts to about a third of the anticipated production this year and is less than 5 percent of last year's yield. Before the hail, the 1978 yield was estimated at 20,000 bales.

'You've just got to get used to it," Tunnell said of the fickle weather. Last year, 110,000 bales of cotton were produced on 150,087 acres of cotton land in the county. This year, agriculturalists project that 15,000 bales will be produced off of 157,871 acres.

It's a slow year all around, but spirits are not dampened here. The Courtney Gin turned out its first bale Thursday afternoon. It belonged to Homer Henson, who farms southeast of Stanton. Last year at this time, the gin, which is one of six in the county, had ginned

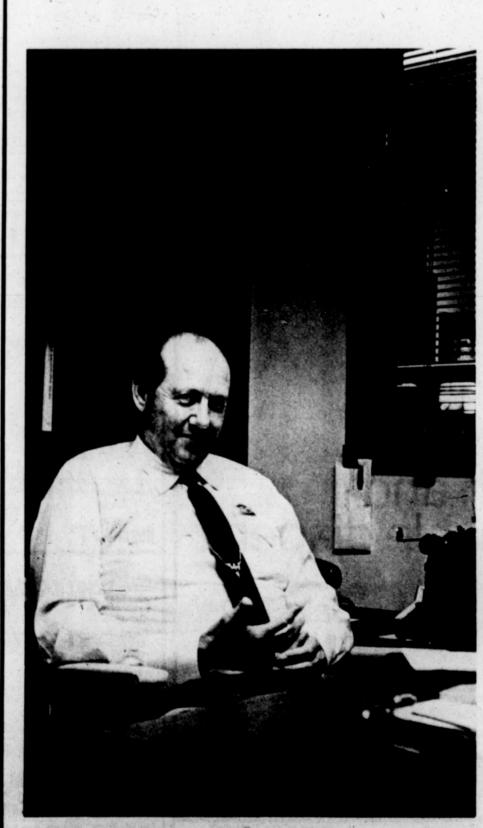

"This is a sorry year," said Henry Hadderton, gin superintendent. He said the gin would be lucky to turn out 4,000 bales this year. Some reckoned that gin operators had second thoughts about cranking up due to the crop shortage and to the cost of ginning.

"We didn't have any rain (during the growing season), and when we did, we had too much," he said. "It'll be good for next year."

The folks in Stanton, like most tillers of the soil, hope to have a bountiful

harvest next year.

The folks in Martin County get along fine with Sheriff Dan Saunders. "We're real fortunate," he says of the relatively low crime rate. "And I'm most grateful."

City Manager Mike Rhea describes Stanton as a "pretty nice little town."

Recipients of food stamps no longer will have to pay

R-T Staff Writer

Midland County, boasting one of the highest incomes per capita in the nation, has approximately 565 families, or 1,600 people, now receiving food

The stamps are channeled through a federally funded program designed to help meet the basic needs of the poor, according to a local program

Under a change which took effect Friday in this program, food stamp recipients no longer will have to pay for some stamps in order to receive benefits, according to a spokesman for the Texas Department of Human Resources.

This means that the average of about $49,683 in "bonus" stamps distributed monthly in Midland County will now be given to qualified applicants free, without the applicant having to pay for part of the stamps received, said an official.

But the person will not receive fewer stamps, so the overall benefit will be the same, he added.

Previously, "a family of four persons in a Midland County household, where the monthly net income was $90, during November 1978 paid $22 for $182 worth of food stamps," said Terry White, supervisor of Aid to Families with Dependent Children here.

month, said White.

The change is intended to help poor people who cannot accumulate enough cash to buy all the food stamps they need for a month's worth of food, said M.J. Raymond, chief of financial services for the Texas Department of Human Resources.

The previous system required food stamp users to buy their month's allotment of stamps all at once, or at most, twice per month.

"Accumulating enough cash to pay their rent and utilities, and still have enough left over to buy food

This means that in order to have the same amount of food and the same level of nutrition, the food stamp user will have to spend some of his own money at the grocery store, said officials.

Additional food stamp changes designed to make the program more accessible to people are to be implemented by the Texas Department of Human Resources in March 1979, Raymond said.

Students who plan to attend Midland College during the spring semester can get an early jump starting Monday. That's when preregistration and early counseling officially opens for the spring term.

The most important result of being early is obtaining a time permit that assigns a specific time to complete registration during the official registration dates in mid-January.

There will be two weeks in December for preregistration before Midland College closes for the Christmas holidays at 5 p.m. Dec. 15. Preregistration will resume Tuesday, Jan. 2, and continue weekdays through Jan.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

DEAR MRS. I.T.: The most imporant single factor in the treatment of labetes is diet. Conversely, most ailures to achieve satisfactory conrol of the disease result from lack of dherence to proper diet.

There are two main forms of abetes-the juvenile-onset type and he maturity-onset type. Almost all uvenile patients require insulin, but nany maturity-onset patients can achieve control with diet alone. Additionally, even when medication is required, proper diet is essential if the nsulin or oral agents are to have op-

Years ago, the typical diabetic diet prescribed by physicians was distincly unappealing. Today, it can be quite varied. In fact, adherence to an appropriate diet is best assured when includes foods ordinarily used by other family members. The diet should be limited in total calories, although, in most instances, extreme restriction of carbohydrates-starches and sugar-is not required.

As with any form of treatment, the appropriate diet for each patient must be individualized. Ordinarily, the physician will spell it out in precise terms-so many ounces of meat, so many slices of bread.

When diet alone is insufficient, insulin generally is indicated. However, oral agents often are prescribed because of pressure from patients who object to the daily insulin injec-

The reason diet is so important in the treatment of diabetes relates to the nature of the disease. Diabetic patients because of a metabolic defect are unable to convert certain foods into the heat and energy needed for normal activity. Ordinarily, the body converts sugar and starches into glucose, a form of sugar that circulates in the blood. The use of glucose as a fuel is regulated by insulin, which is produced by the pancreas. When normal amounts of insulin are manufactured, the correct amount of glucose is released for use

by the body In the diabetic patient, either the pancreas produces insufficient insulin or, because of other substances within the body, and increased amount of insulin is produced but is unable to do its job. As a result, the glucose is not used properly, and an excess accumulates in the blood and tissues, eventually spilling over into the urine. Although the exact cause of the insulin problem in diabetic patients is not known, obesity clearly aggravates the condition and may even precipitate it.

Closely related to diet is exercise, since physical activity, whether at work or play, increases the ability to the body to use sugar. Here, too, treatment must be individualized to the needs of each patient.

Although diabetes is a chronic condition with no known cause or cure, proper treatment—including strict adherence to diet—can enable patients to live virtually normal lives, with only few restrictions. But remember: The key to successful treatment is diet.

The Black Experience—Another World Championship? Leon Spinks will reclaim the world's heavyweight championship he lost to Muhammad Ali, will straighten out his personal life and be a model champion, Mitt Barnes of St. Louis, his manager, told a group of black correspondents, in-cluding this one, in Oklahoma City recently. He said Spinks was not ready to be champion when he defeated Ali for the title in Las Vegas last Feb. 15.

"When you're the champion, everybody wants you to be the public's champion. I think any champion should just hibernate, go off where no one can get to him. He's got to watch himself," Barnes added.

"Let me tell you this. Anytime you get the people down on you, I don't care if you're the president or the world champion, anytime you get the people down on you, you're done. And that's what happened to Leon. His public image tore him up," Barnes

Spinks didn't exactly help things himself. He was picked up time after time for reckless driving or driving without a license, after winning the ti-tle. He was arrested once and charged with possession of cocaine, but the charge later was dropped. Barnes says Spinks was framed on the drug

Spinks had just turned 15 when he asked Barnes to train him to be a box-Barnes said it took a lot of training and that they would fight as an amateur in Wichita and Kansas City, then it got to where nobody would fight us. Leon decided he wanted to join the Marines and work on making

Press reports that Spinks was drunk in New Orleans the night before the fight with Ali are wrong, stated Barnes. We're ready to start negotiating for Spink's next fight with Duane Bobick or Rany Stephens. Spinks presently is building a $200,000 training facility at the Lake of the Ozarks. "He'll be champion again, when he gets all this other stuff off his neck," Manager Barnes contends.

Blacks, Mexicans and other minority ethnics who are most in need of political representation are steadily falling behind. According to a Census Bureau survey of persons of voting age in 1976, fully 51.3 percent of the black respondents and 68.2 percent of the Hispanic-Americans reported that they did not vote in 1976. The percen-tage not voting will no doubt be greater in 1978 returns.

Black Colleges in Trouble? An editorial from The Daily Oklahoman recently: "There is too much overlap in Oklahoma's 17 educational institutions today, yet residents of some communities are pushing to have the Legislature create more colleges to serve their areas....Langston is a typical example. Because it is a black school in an age when black demands recognition, one hardly dares suggest that Langston be closed and its students transferred to nearby Oklahoma State University or Central State. But Langston offers nothing that cannot be obtained in other state educational institutions—and in some instances, at a lower per student cost." And the beat goes on. Unlike Bishop, Texas College, Wiley, etc. Langston is state-supported.

It was where Soviet agents Kim Philby and George Blake mixed with British, American, Commonwealth and Japanese diplomats and businessmen, studied Arabic and Mideastern politics and got acquainted with future local policymakers.

Philby, a Beirut-based journalist who ultimately fled to Moscow when his real role was established, never was an enrolled MECAS student. But he showed up at countless MECAS seminars, parties and receptions. Blake, another British diplomatturned-spy, was at the center as a trainee.

Two years later it was relocated on the hillside village of Chemlane, near Beirut, in a setting of terraced olive

Ordinary human error

The Midland County grand jury, after conducting an "exhaustive inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the Precinct 2 Commissioner's race," has issued a report which perhaps pretty well clears up the matter for most per-

The investigation, according to the report, "revealed that an ordinary human error was made in the tabulations and report of the absentee paper ballots on the night of the election...."

The jury found no evidence of any discrepancy with regard to the machine votes; all paper ballots were accounted for, and there were no missing ballots: There was no evidence, according to the report, of any tampering with the ballots, ballot boxes or any interference with anyone's voting right's. There was no evidence of any fraud, or that the ballots were not secure at all times, or any willful violations of any state election laws.

"The Grand Jury has found that the recount tally is correct," the report concluded

So, that's that.

In the Precinct 2 commissioner race, Sam Snoddy was announced the winner by 21 votes on election night. But after a recount made several days later, the 10-year incumbent, Charlie Welch, who requested the recount, was declared the winner by a 21-vote margin.

That set off a round of conversation and controversy, which, unhot-to-handle at times.

Many persons became confused about the whole business. A grand jury investigation was sought by County Clerk Rosenelle Cherry as a means of clearing the air. It is hoped that the jury's report has done just that.

Sheriff Dallas Smith has said that he plans to continue his investigation of alleged irregularities in absentee ballots mailed to certain elderly persons. Those allegations, he said. do not relate especially to the Precinct 2 race. This is fine.If Sheriff Smith has any indication that irregularities have occurred in this regard, then it is his responsibility to investigate the matter.

Mr. Snoddy, meanwhile, has said he plans to continue his own investigation and may possibly take some court action. This is his privilege and he has every right to follow through on same, in line with state election law procedures.

But as it now stands, and for all practical purposes, it would seem that the official recount and the grand jury report have just about closed the case.

Hopefully, some good will come from the unfortunate experience by seeing to it that election laws,procedures and tabulations are followed more carefully in future elections. It is easy to become somewhat careless when things go along smoothly over a

White-collar crime

It is commendable that federal authorities are pursuing whitecollar crime with determination, ferreting out flim-flam deals to cheat the taxpayer and wage earner.

In recent months there have been some tough investigations and indictments in such high government institutions as the General Services Administration.

These are trying times for those who are attempting to save a part of their income. Inflation makes a mockery out of most interest rates available to those with modest salaries, and it's often a great temptation to become involved in a fancy scheme to make a quick dollar.

The wage earner, despite his money frustrations, must always be wary of any get-rich-quick suggestions.

some of the government controls on banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions and allow them to compete more aggressively for those with limited savings, offering interest rates more in line with those available to large investors.

CHARLEY REESE

Peace treaty possibility as viewed from Cairo

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

CAIRO - I came here thinking a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel was a sure thing simply because it is obviously in the best interests of both to end the state of war. Now, I am not as sure.

First, how is the treaty process viewed from here by the average Egyptian? It is viewed optimistically. Unlike the official government, the man in the street appears to feel little sympathy for the Palestinians and is ready to dump them, if necessary, to get peace.

Egypt, of course, is not a democracy so it really doesn't matter what the man in the street or the woman in the home thinks. It helps to keep that in

The official government version, which is all you get in the newspapers, on television and radio, and from any official you talk to, is optimistic. I can give you the flavor by guoting a summary of an editorial in Al Ahram, the major newspaper, which appears on the anniversary of President Sadat's visit to Jerusa-

"Al Ahram described the peace overture as an earthquake that rocked the world and a move unprecedented in the history of diplomacy. And now a year after Sadat's trip to Jerusalem the move is no longer an adventure made by one individual. It has become a policy adopted by the world community and it will inevitably, sooner or later, lead to peace in the Middle East." That is the government summary of the editorial.

The Egyptian government does seem optimistic. I talked to El-Sayed Yassin, director of the Center for Political and Strategic Studies, Egypt's only think tank. He was, naturally, reflecting official versions of Yassin said, in effect, that President Sadat had maneuvered the Israelis into a position where the pressure of world opinion would force them to eventually sign a treaty. He seemed very sure of that. When I asked him what would be the effect in Egypt if the treaty were not signed, he said such an event was most un-

Now for the Palestinian view: The Palestinians I have talked with in Cairo would have to be labeled moderate, though keep in mind that moderate and radical have different meanings in the Middle East than in the United States:

The Palestinian view is pessimistic on two counts. On the one hand, they do not trust Egypt, or the other Arab leaders for the matter. On the other hand, they do not think Israel will give up either Gaza or the West Bank voluntarity, and so if Sadat is sincere about insisting on a definite timetable they are certain there will be no

An American who has been in the country several months believes that what Sadat wants is a weak Palestinian state and that this is absolutely necessary to win the support of the Arab leaders. This American feels Sadat cannot sign a treaty without that support.

What bothers me now is this: If Sadat is, as some say, just jockeying for position, there should be no problem, but if he has overestimated the effects of world opinion on Israel so that he believes he can up the ante, then there will be trouble.

There is no question that Sadat has maneuvered the Israelis into a position where world opinion presently supports Egypt. The Israelis, however, are much more experienced in both dealing with and in manipulating world opinion than are the Arabs. So much so, I suspect, they are confident they could weather a brief period of world condemnation and then recover their support where it counts - in the United States.

The Arab world simply has no experience with either democarcy or a free press. Israel is a Western democracy. It does have a free press. Consequently, the Israelis understand perfectly how the American political process works.

The peace process is a poker game. If Sadat raises too much, the Israelis may well call his bluff and the game will have to be recessed for who knows how long.

'Flawed human condition' is subject of discussion

WASHINGTON - Oh, the anguish that San Franciso must feel these days. At once, to be the focus of the Rev. Jim Jones horror and also the killings of its Mayor and Top Gay in government - well, it's almost too much for a fine, elegant, and proud old lady like San Francisco to take.

San Francisco attracts more than its share of losers, people who turn to the Occult in desperation, but it is wrong to lay all blame for carnage on San Francisco, just as it was to stigmatize Dallas for John F. Kennedy's assassination. Cain stalks the world, not just certain American cities.

Far better to muse over how the vines growing from the roots of romantic liberlism in America bore bitter fruit in this most beautiful city. America, being a new country, encouraged the idyllic imagination expressed in the NIneteenth Century, particularly as it flowed from the pen of Jean Jacques Rousseau a century

The notion that man was born perfect but is corrupted by his surroudings has always been strong and popular in our once optimistic land. The illusions of the Rev. Jim Jones could easily be traced to Rousseau, and supporters of these two are alike in that they were possessed of a

The events of San Francisco will only strengthen the current movement in America toward a more clear-eyed look at what's what, and away from that misty-eyed benevo-lence for people which is false and exploitative. Salt lakes

To The Editor:

Lot's wife turned to a pillar of salt when she looked back upon the biblical destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. The same thing would happen today to any cotton plant or corn stalk irrigated by water out of some lakes on the High Plains.

Mark Vogler, in his excellent series on water, fails to differentiate between salt lakes and playa lakes.

It's true that both conform to the dictionary description of a flatfloored bottom of an undrained desert basin, but Whalen Lake and Shafter Lake in Andrews County and Cedar Lake in Gaines County were salt lakes long before the first white man moved to this area.

Col. Rufus Shafter and his exploration party out of Fort Concho in 1875 found that the water in the lake named for him was much too salty for human consumption.

A water sample taken from Whalen Lake in 1939 proved to be six times saltier than ocean water - 18 years before any oil produced brine was dumped into the lake. And in the early thirties, before any oil companies arrived on the scene, water from Cedar

Sunday, November 26, KMID took the halftime of the pro football game to review the Permian-Lewisville football game - even KOSA was showing the entire game for the benefit of those interested.

I called Mr. Herndon, general manager, to lodge a protest and was told I was definitely in the minority. I truly wanted to see the pro halftime to check on other games plus hear comments. I again was told, they monitored the halftime and we didn't miss a thing. I may be in the minority but I truly cannot think of a reason I would be interested in a high school game compared with the pros.

I do not object to the showing of high school highlights but wish the station would pick another hour. The station announced they were going to do the same thing this next week. Thank goodness the Cowboys are on another station.

Mr. Herndon challenged me as to the interest in this said high school. I am going to ask those who agree with me to either write or call the TV station where Mr. Herndon will keep an accurate count and call me with the results.

A fine example

To The Editor:

She wasn't wealthy, she wasn't famous, and she wasn't among the "socially elite" of Midland, but she was truly one of the most - if the THE most - remarkable ladies I ever had the pleasure of knowing even if it was but for a short time.

Joyce Krusekoph was laid to rest this (Thursday) morning - a most courageous woman who passed on with a grace and dignity that would put most of us to shame in our normal healthy lives.

Her passing ended a 5-year battle with cancer; but she won, for she imparted to all who knew her an example of life, bravery, and faith that will follow us all through the days of our lives.

I met Joyce about 18 months ago at a PTA meeting shortly after the school I represented won an award that her organization was also in contention to receive. A tall slender lady approached me with a congratulations message so obviously sincere and understanding that I immediately found someone who could tell me who she was. She was a stranger to me and I was impressed that she would take the time to wait to congratulate us especially in such a disarmingly honest manner. It was Joyce Krusekoph.

Our paths crossed again six weeks later when I learned of her illness and agreed to take over an assignment she was to have had in another organization. After the summer was over, Joyce was back into her activities and attending the same meetings I did. I did not know Joyce as long as many, but the quality of our contacts were such that I soon joined many others in regarding her with admiration and high esteem. Having experienced the loss of my mother to cancer a few years earlier, I was well aware of the situation she and her family faced. I couldn't help but be moved by the faith, strength and conviction with which she faced the problem. It is so true that actions speak louder than words; because, though she so seldom her concern for those she may leave behind, her continued involvement in personal and community activities spoke much louder of her courage and unselfishness.

Joyce was never shallow, but honest and sincere in all her activities. She didn't want sympathy, though she surely suffered physically and emotionally knowing she would have to leave her beloved family and young

The example she portrayed in both sickness and in health should serve as an inspiration for all of us as we journey through life.

Bilingual tool

To The Editor:

This is in response to Mr. J.M. Horton, addressing himself to remarks I made on the bilingual education pro-

Bilingual education is a teaching tool, to be used only until the student is able to function in English, Few of us could learn a new language without someone speaking to us in our own native language. It's been proven that children who participate in the bilingual program perform better than those who needed the program and did not participate. We should have bilingual education not because the state tells us, or because the government tells us, but because it's beneficial to our students. We should do what is right without being forced. The state and federal government would not interfere in local matters if we'd take care of our own, on our own. Why was it that we didn't have equal housing and equal employment opportunities before being "forced?"

Mr. Horton, the remark: "everyone has the same learning potential" to which you disagreed, was taken out of context. Here is what I said: "Minority children are capable and have the intellect to learn just as anyone else. Everyone has the same learning potential." I hope that with this additional information you can now

Parents of Mexican-American children do realize the need to commu-

enicate in English. Some can teach their children, and these children are fluent in English. But did you know that many older generation Mexican-

Americans were deprived of an education? Can we expect a child from such a household to get help from his parents? You also say that learning English doesn't mean that a child should forget Spanish. You'll find Spanish surname children who don't speak Spanish. I wonder what or who caused the loss of being bilingual. Roger Robles 4820 Storey St.

Halt the treaty

To The Editor: It isn't too late to save the Panama Canal. As you know the giveaway of the canal was approved by the Senate. However, the authority to gather funds necessary for the implementation of the treaty and to dispose of territory of the United States is given to the Senate and the House by the

For President Carter to get approval will not be easy. Because on May 9, 1978, Rep. George Hansen introduced an amendment to the U.S. Government Budget for 1979. That amendment prohibits unauthorized funding of the canal treaties. It was adopted.

On May 10, 1978, an amendment to deny the use of any Department of Defense funds to implement the treaties was adopted. On May 31, another amendment which prohibits the use of any State Department funds to implement the canal treaties without specific authorization by Congress was adopted.

Without any doubt the senators ratified the treaties without concern for the people they represent and the people were overwhelmingly against the treaties. So this doesn't happen

Military ills

To The Editor:

A recent television news story stated that 90 percent of all GI's in Europe take drugs while on duty. This shocking fact will, I hope, drive the final nail in the coffin of the farce called the all-volunteer army. It is an abject failure and presents a greater danger to the survival of this country than the energy shortage and runaway inflation combined. Russia, no doubt, is well aware and very pleased with the disintegration of our armed forces.

One excellent solution, in my opinion, to this and several other serious problems, would be a universal military training program. All young men would be requied to enter a branch of the armed forces for not less than two years. The pay should be low and the discipline strict. After two years they would be ready to become productive citizens. In gratitude they should receive a full GI bill similar to those given following World War II and the Korean War.

This program should also sharply reduce unemployment and the crimes that idleness and unemployment frequently lead young men into.

Everyone who reads this letter and is at all concered with whether or not their children and grandchildren grow up as free man and women or as communist slaves should shower our congressmen and senators with demands for immediate and drastic action to revitalize our armed forces.

A cheap shot

To The Editor:

Mr. T.H. Mitchell seems to have a problem; an addictive habit of writing poison pen letters demeaning 'his" local Republican Party.

After reading his letter last Sunday, I could not decide what in the world he was talking about and I wonder if he knows, either. His reference to a Republican Watergate and cover-up in the Republicans' reports of the votes cast by absentee paper ballots in the commissioner's race indicates that he believes only Republicans are involved in the election process; the counting and the reporting of election returns. Of course, when one is bent on delivering a cheap shot, he seldom uses any basis of fact or intelligence. Kathy Taylor

A coincidence?

To The Editor:

Whether it was a coincidence or history repeating itself or whatever, the following appearing in last Sunday's Midland Reporter-Telegram under "The Bible - Can You Quote It," and at the same time events taking place in Guyana, seemed to tell me something.

Turning to the Bible, King James Version, Acts 5:35-36 - "And said unto them, Ye men of Israel take heed to yourselves what ye intend to do as touching these men.

"For before these days rose up Theudas boasting himself to be somebody: to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves: who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered, and brought to nought."

Altruistic trap

To The Editor:

The concern you expressed on behalf of the Vietnamese refugee, in last Monday's staff-written editorial titled "The Flight Quickens," reminds me of a similar product by Texas Monthly's Bill Broyles werein he proposes that we allow all the Mexican aliens to enter America. Anyone who wants to; come one, Apparently, you believe that America's resources are infinite, and that we not only can love the world. but everyone in it? Most of us are familiar with this theme by now. The lyrics have been played daily, since that time when we transferred our love, and compassion, and caring to one or another agency, charity, committee or government. It's convenient as hell, relieves our consciences, and is tax deductible.

Even though the minority populations already in America will be the first to suffer from such a policy, they support it nonetheless, realizing that eventually they will have majorities here and there which will enable them to vote themselves a nice green treasury check.

Since America's resources aren't infinite, your ritual pity will result in the impossibility of ever helping our own minorities, who are already citizens, into a full participation of the American dream, won by their own efforts and abilities.

The intent of most altruism is good, while it's result continues to trap the very ones which it pretends to be concerned about.

Another result of your "open door" policy will be to drain away from the oppressed nations that very nuclear of freedom-lovers necessary to the eventual overthrow of their oppres-

Loving the world is certainly a fine ambition, and let's by all means "save the children." A good place to start would be right here, in River City (Midland). There would seem to be no lack of downtrodden immediately available, of all colors incidentally, who would appreciate your love and concern and understanding. After you yourself have helped them to become the best thing they can be, you might consider branching out in your efforts to Stanton, or even Big Spring. Loving just those which you can reach out and touch, if you really wanted to; just those whom you could love in person, if you really wanted to...might make your love believable.

Choosing books

To The Editor:

Mr. Mel Gabler, Educational Research Analyst, P.O. Box 7518, Longview, 75602, has given me permission by telephone to quote his 1978 Report on "Texas Adoptions Until Now."

."Adding stature to our side was a teacher with a PH.D. in American History from Ricé University.

We submitted 659 pages in our Bills of Particulars against 28 textbooks, including Supplemental Readers, Literatures, and American Histories. All of the Readers and Literature books were either oriented toward violence, cruelty, death and despair, or they were trivial. The history texts were distorted and biased against traditional American values. God saw fit to direct the state Textbook Committee to remove 18 of these objectionable texts in the first stage. Many others should have been eliminated. The State Board of Education did require the removal of three stories from Literature books: "The Lottery" from three texts, and "Mateo Falcone" and "A Summer Tragedy" from one text. The most damaging effect from the adopted books will be the change in students' values through the use of values clarification techniques that deal with feelings, emotions and value judgments of class members. (Example: New Voices in Lit., grades 9-12, published by Ginn.)

To clearly depict the type of content in the history texts, we prepared two charts (grade 8 and high school) showing how each text handled events, personalities, issues and episodes of American history. These charts are available upon request (also 20 sheets of documentation with page and paragraph references).

The board voted to reduce the adoption period for the American History texts from six years to three years. Thus, only half the number of students will receive indoctrination with distorted history."

The recipient's lifestyle and activities should be considered. "If they are going out of town every weekend, consider if the dog will be able to go with them. Match the dog to their (owners') outside interests, Hawthorne advised.

Also included in this line of thought is the care and grooming of the dog. A short-haired animal would be best for someone who does not have much time to put into grooming the animal.

Other animals need to be groomed daily and the recipient should be able to have time to groom it or be able to pay for having it done, according to Hawthorne also sug-

To check for accurate registration materials Hill suggested: - Always check the

FREE BLOOD PRESSURE THEARING TESTS OFFERED

Free blood pressure and hearing screening tests will be offered at Beltone Hearing Aid Center, 184 N. "O" St., Midland, From 9 a.m. To 5 p.m. Thursday & Friday, Dec. 7 & 8, according to Wes McKinzey, the local independ authorized Belton dealer.

The blood pressure tests will be performed by a registered nurse and the hearing tests will be conducted by a factorytrained Belton hearing aid specialist.

"It is estimated that 23 million American have high blood pressure and that 14.5 million have hearing impairments," McKinzey said. "However, persons with both afflictions often are unaware of their condition. High blood pressure although it can lead to stroke, heart disease and kidney disease - has no symtoms.

"While hearing loss does not lead to the crippling or fatal consequences that can result from untreated high blood pressure, it also is a serious problem. Because most hearing losses appear gradually, many persons are unaware of their hearing impairments until the problem has become serious and even handicapping," McKinzey pointed out.

"Fortunately, high blood pressure is medically treatable and the vast majority of hearing impairments can be alleviated. In both cases a major problem is indentifying the persons who need help. That is why we are offering this twe-stage, quick, convenient and painless screening program," he ad-

The supposed $50,000 bounty conspiracy in King's assassination rests on the testimony of one man, Russell George Byers, who describes himself as a St. Louis antiques dealer. Byers testified that in late 1966 or

Sutherland wore a Confederate-style hat and made the offer in a house decorated with Confederate flags, Byers swore, and said the money would be raised "by a secret Southern organization." Byers said he rejected the offer and heard no

Consolidation of programs recommended by committee

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN-A special committee of lawmakers and citizens has recommended the consolidation of the programs for the elderly now handled through the Governor's Committee on Aging and Department of Human Resources.

The programs likely would be placed entirely under the Human Resources agency, although it was indicated there may be an effort at some point later to divide services for the aged and those for children and youth into separate state agencies.

The proposal was approved without objection by the Special Committee on the Delivery of Human Services in Texas, chaired by Helen Farabee. Wichita Falls.

Staff member Tom Scott told the panel that currently, money for different classes of older Texans is moving through the Governor's Office and the Human Resources agency, and that this situation often is confusing and sometimes results in individuals being shuffled back and forth between of-

Dr. June Hyer, committee member who participated in drafting the recommendation, said the only problem she could foresee is that of resistance by the Governor's Committee on Aging against total absorption by the Human Resources agency.

"It's a problem of removing turfdom," she said, adding that the bureaucrats involved likely would resist the most.

Hazel Baker, Human Resources Associate Commissioner, told the panel that Human Resources is willing to accept the additional functions. She also stressed that the agency would likely administer the programs in such a way that they would not compete against each other.

At present, DHR dispenses federal Medicaid monies to nursing homes and handles the federal foodstamp program in Texas.

The Governor's Office administers those federal programs and monies dealing with delivery of services to the elderly at home such as visiting nurses and meals on wheels programs.

Ann Richards, Austin committee member, said she did not want the committee's support of the agency consolidation to lead to the creation of an agency strictly for the aged.

PBPM adds to economy

At least $150,000 a year is being added to the Midland-Odessa economy by the Pemian Basin Petroleum Museum, and the real figure may reach $300,000 or more.

A museum study indicates that about 11,000 out-of-state visitors per year are stopping at the museum plus an estimated 11,000 to 13,000 Texans from other areas.

About 10 to 15 percent of these out-of-towners are believed to be overnighting. Allowing for those in recreational vehicles, the museum estimates that a minimum of $130,000 is being spent by them for accommodations, food, and other items. Admissions fees add another $22,000.

An indirect economic effect is being felt through use of the museum by convention bureaus in both Odessa and Midland to help lure meetings to the area. While the museum is only part of the "sales talk," the number of such groups visiting the museum during the year is evidence it carries weight, the museum study says.

One generally-used figure for spending by convention-goers is $75

The museum's estimate says it can reasonably be assumed that the total economic impact of its presence is 'perhaps $300,000 a year' though exact numbers are not available.

and cultural factors that made the area what it is. Though the natural balance had been protected, the Amoco site contained the evidence of the passing of human societies. Therefore, Amoco consulted with archeologists and historians from South Carolina before completing plans for the precise location of the facility. Examinations revdealed an extensive range of human influence on the area dating from 2500 B.C. through the colonial period to the present day.

and artifacts dating from the Stone Age and earlier were found and catalogued, along with sharks' teeth and mastodon bones. The historical relics were carefully preserved, and sent to the South Carolina Museum where theywill provide materal for years of

Amoco personnel worked closelywith experts in the Charleston area, state officials, and independent consultants to ensure the completeness of the study of the area.

Numerous hunting relics were discovered which document that wild came thrived in the area in the past as it does now. Nearly 50 species of mammals have been observed on the plant grounds, and special precautions are being taken to avoid disturbing the habitat of endangered species that many inhabit the area.

Based on Arnoco Chemicals' intense examination of air, ground, water, wildlife conditions and historical relics, the plant was laid out in a manner which would preserve the unique and valuable aspects of the area's heritage.

Even the plant's 21,000-square-foot administration building conforms architecturally to the classic buildings in the area.

County, state, and federal wildlife managers helped with the conservation program undertaken by Amoco Chemicals. One of the programs, the feed planting project, has been so successful that there are more deer and wild turkeys in and around the plant site today than when building was started.

The native pine and oak forest is in better shape, too. Much of the underbrush has been cleared, while the plant site-with its carefully planned belts of trees--provides natural landscaping in addition to weather moderating properties.

Environmental goals at Amoco Chemicals' Cooper River plant have proven to be compatible with econom-

The environmental contribution of the Cooper River plant was singled out by the national Industrial Development Research Council which on Nov. 1 awarded the Cooper River plant a "Distinguished Service Citation in Environmental Planning" for achieving en vironmental harmony.

WASHINGTON OIL

Woodpeckers, Jackson figure in fuel scheme

By CLYDE LA MOTTE Midland Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON-It is well known that many environmentalists oppose nuclear power plants, or power plants fired by oil or coal. Now some environmentalists and others are concerned about a proposal in Michigan to burn wood.

It isn't that the forests would be denuded to supply such a plant; be-cause the plan being considered by Consumers Power Co. of Jackson, Mich., would only utilitize dead or decaying trees, leaving the healthy ones untouched.

But some invironmentalists, led by the Audobon Society, say the cutting and hauling away of dead trees would make life tough for woodpeckers and other birds that make their living out of pecking away at dead trees.

Others in the region that would be affected are opposing the plan for a different reason. They fear it would reduce the supply and increase the price of conventional firewood for fireplaces and wood-burning stoves.

The wood-burning plan is for a small-scale plant that would have a 30 megawatt capacity. The site has not been chosen but Consumers Power Co. has three sites under considera-

If the test plant sould prove economically feasible, the company would proceed to build as many as 20 more at locations scattered across northern Michigan.

The wood would be utilized in the form of chips, utilizing a machine that can produce up to 50 tons of chips per year, with each ton containing about 4,500 Btu. It is estimated that about 37,500 acres of forested land would provide a continuing supply of wood chips over the years for a 10 megawatt plant.

Backers of the proposal say this approach would help reduce demand

TIPRO alerts independents

DALLAS - Many of the 250 independent gas producers attending the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association seminar in Dallas last week were alerted for the first time to obligations of the producer under brand new federal and state regulations implementing the Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978. Regulations went into effect on Dec.

Discussion of the new regulatory requirements was led by supervisory personnel from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Texas Railroad Commission and TIPRO. Highlighting the discussion was a sense of urgency on the part of the producer to initiate filing requirements on gas wells defined as new by the regulations beginning Dec. 1 to establish eligibility for price ceilings under the new gas Act.

While FERC and RRC regulations did not require filings on Dec. 1 to establish eligibility beginning on that date, ambiguities in the regulations relating to retroactive collection and interim collection procedures are such that producers are encouraged to file oath statements required under Section 273.201 (c) of the FERC regulations as soon as possible. Producers needing further understanding of the requirements under this particular section or other sections can call FERC's toll free "hot line," 1-800-424-5200. Legan analysis is also available through the Department's General Counsel office (202) 275-5200.

1979 industry outlook has bad, good news

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Ed McGhee says the outlook for 1979 domestic oil and gas drilling operations offers both good and bad news. McGhee, executive vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors, said a five percent increase is indicated for the number of active rotary drilling rigs the industry will require next year.

But the bad news, he adds, is the rig supply promises to outgrow demand. "If so, the statistical employment. rate would fall 7 percent below this year," he said.

completions and total footage drilled are expected to rise in 1979 the gains will not match the rig activity increase on a percentage point basis. The reason, he explained, is the

McGhee added that while both well average 1979 well will be slightly deeper than the 1978 average and each job will therefore require correspondingly more time. Most phases of 1978 domestic oil and gas drilling operations will set 21-year From January through October, the industry had a weekly average of 2.247 rotary drilling rigs at work, the highest level since a 2,429 average was recorded in 1957. The final 1978 average should be even higher. The November weekly averages ran as high as 2,374 and dropped no lower than 2,325. Well completions for January-October averaged 3,894 a month, the highest since a 1961 average of 3,914. Total footage drilled in each of the first 10 months of the year averaged 18,496,000 feet, the highest monthly rate since a 1957 average of 18,590,000

McGhee said possible trouble looms for 1979 despite the indicated increased activity.

"The year may get off to a poor start," he said. "Some observers predict, more U.S. rigs will be idled during the first quarter than at any time since 1976. The level of activity, while not sinking nearly so low as three years ago, will be hard put to maintain the hectic pace of 1978's fourth quarter." McGhee said few drilling contractors express suprise at such a prospect, contending that first quarter slumps have been historic for the "The past two years, they say, have proved exceptions in that no first quarter slump developed," he said. An accumulated backlog of undrilled wells sustained rig employment near 100 percent throughout all of 1977 and 1978.'

McGhee said part of today's uncertainty stems from the lack of a means to measure a year-end backlog.

"Even the individual contractor must wait until the first week in January to total the pre-payments he has received in order to assess his individual strength going into 1979," he

"All agree, however, a healthy backlog does confer strength. First of all, winter weather makes many locations inaccessible to a rig in the first quarter. A good backlog gives the flexibility to move onto alternative locations.

More important, he added, a large backlog helps smooth the ebbs and flows of operator money.

"Many operators begin each year with what in effect is an empty purse," he said.

"As the months go by, tax liabilities become clearer and more funds are committed. For the contractor, the pattern frequently becomes a matter of too few opportunities to bid for work in the first half and too many in the second."

McGhee said contractors are hardened to the seasonal fluctuations in demand for their services but say they are worried about rig supply.

"Most feel too many new units are appearing on the market," he said. A 1978 survey of available rigs totaled 2,851. This was 369 higher than the count in 1977, when a 278 increase was reported.

"Even those who expect a slackening in new rig building say additions should top 300 in 1979," McGhee "That, most observers feel, is enough to put a big dent in whatever backlog may exist.'

Somoza defies critics

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza says his opponents "can go to hell" if they don't ap-prove of the way he wants a plebiscite conducted on his continued leadership.

Somoza says if he loses the vote he will turn over power to a provisional president appointed by a constituent assembly that would be chosen in another election. The opposition has demanded that Somoza resign immediately if not supported in the plebiscite.

"I have given the most," Somoza said in an interview with The Associated Press on Friday. "If they don't like it they can go to hell."

Sandinista guerrilla leader Eden Pastora said the Broad Opposition Front should "withdraw immediately from negotiations" with the president and denounce the plebiscite as "maneuver of the imperialist policieslof the North American government."

In a communique distributed to the press from training camps in Costa Rica, Pastora called for armed civil uprising as the "only solution" to the Nicaraguan social and political con-

The Front, a coalition of opposition political groups and unions, has demanded the president leave Nicaragua during the plebiscite, proposed by a team of mediators from the United States, the Dominican Republic and Guatemala.

More than 2,000 persons died in a revolt against Somoza led by the Sandinista National Liberation Front last September. Many of the Sandinistas fled to Costa Rica afterwards and have been waging their struggle from there.

Costa Rica announced Friday it is mobilizing its entire 6,000-man civil guard and giving rifle training to 2,000 volunteers because of the situation in Nicaragua. Costa Rica broke diplomatic relations with its neighbor last month after a border clash in which two Costa Ricans were killed.

The four major geologic time periods interpreted are the Precambrian, 4.5 billion to 600 million years ago; the Paleozoic, 600 to 230 million years ago; the Mesozic, 230 to 65 million years ago; and the Cenozic, 65 million years ago to the present.

Discovery completes

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. - Apache Corp. has reported the successful completion of a gas discovery in Cameron Parish, La., approximately 50 miles southwest of Lafayette.

The well, No. 1 Walker Properties, flowed 5.8 million cubic feet of gas and 59 barrels of oil per day on a production test through a 12/64-inch choke. Flowing tubing pressure was 7,304 pounds per square inch. Drilled to a depth of 17,300 feet, the well completed through perforations in the Heterostegina sand between 12,221 and 12,229 feet.

Tax ruling reported

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A proposed refinery tax would not be double-taxation under the state constitution, the attorney general said Friday. Sen. Peyton McKnight, head of the Senate study committee to replace ad valorem tax, asked if a tax on the market value of refinery products, prior to their sale or use, would be considered a motor fuels tax under the constitution

The constitution says the motor fuel taxes, on the first sale or use of motor and special fuels, shall be in lieu of any other excise or occupation tax imposed.

"The proposed tax on refinery production would be before any sale, use, transfer or other disposition of the motor fuels and therefore would not be a tranaction which is taxable" under the constitutional provision, the attorney general said.

The opinion said that revenue from a tax on crude oil received by a refinery for processing would not be subject to the constitutional provision because "crude oil does not meet the definition of motor or special fuel and therefore is not taxed.'

All nations to be invited

TULSA, OKLA. — The United States government will officially invite all nations of the world to attend and participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., Sept. 10-13, 1979.

A resolution passed by Congress and signed by the President authorizes the President and State Department to issue invitations to participate in and attend the Tulsa Oil Show, according to John M. Houchin,

The Tulsa event founded in 1923, has had United States Government recognition nearly every show since 1928, when President Calvin Coolidge pressed a button in Washington to start a simulated gusher to open the exposition in Tulsa.

"The IPE, now billed as an onshore exposition, will be an international event, with attendance of oil men from every state in the Union and over 60 nations of the world, if past history repeats itself," said Houchin. Sixty-five percent of drilling/production budgets are onshore; 90 percent of drilling rigs running in the United States are onshore; the majority of production is onshore, including enhanced production; most of the pipelines and refineries are onshore.

Hearing scheduled

DALLAS-A public hearing to receive comments on a poposal to include the non-refining use of domestic crude oil in the entitlements program of the U.S. Department of Energy will be held at 9: 30 a.m., Dec. 14, in Room 105 of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals Building, 600 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

If adopted, the proposed rule would apply to both lower tier (old) and upper tier (new) crude oil, with the exception of crude oil used for production purposes.

The purpose of the entitlements program is to roughly equalize refiners' crude oil acquisition costs through a system of monthly cash transfers. Under the new aproposal, crude oil sold as a boiler fuel, bunker fuel, or for other non-refining uses would incur an entitlements obligation on the same basis as crude oil that is refined.

DOE's Economic Administration (ERA) also is requesting comments on whether it sould exempt from the rule crude oil burned by electric utilities as boiler fuel when it would stimulate the production of heavy sulphurcrude oil. ERA said its objective in proposing to spread the entitlements obligation was to assure that firms using price-controlled crude oil for non-refining purposes did not receive a disproportionate share of the benefits of price control.

Nine seminars concerning Implementation of the Natural Gas Policy Act (NGPA) will be held across the nation in early December by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission

(FREC) Four of the seminars will be held in the Southwest Region beginning in Houston Dec. 7 at Krost Hall, University of Houston, 4800 Calhoun. All sessions begin at 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Each seminar program will include a panel discussion and question-and-answer session.

Among the speakers at each seminar will be a member of the FERC, one representative each from the FERC legal and technical staffs, state officials having jursidiction to make NGPA determinations, representatives of the sponsoring law schools, and practicing attorneys. Line will aid areas

SPOKANE, WASH. - The Pacific Northwest states and Alaska have much to gain from the construction of the proposed Northern Tier pipeline, an engineer on the project told the Northwest Mining Association last

Addressing the energy problems of the area was James R. Beasley, project manager for Butler Associates, Inc., Tulsa, Okla., a consulting engineering firm that is one of the founders of the Northern Tier Pipe-

The Pacific Northwest and neighboring states face a projected crude oil shortfall caused primarily by Canadian curtailments. Domestic production declines that will average three percent per year between 1980 and 1990 in a large part of the region will add to the crude shortfall, he

Adding to overall shortage, is a transportation crisis that exists because of the lack of a major west-toeast crude oil pipeline to serve landlocked refineries from Washington State through the northern tier, into the upper Midwest and beyond. All of this, Beasley observed, troubles the area in spite of the fact that a substantial surplus of Alaskan North Slope oil exists on the West Coast, caused by the inability of western refineries to handle it. The Northern Tier pipeline, now in the permitting stages, will not only relieve that surplus and provide a needed source of supply to oil-short areas in the northern tier and upper Midwest, it will also benefit the State of Alaska whence the oil comes.

Another benefit to the Pacific Northwest and other states along the pipeline route will be the employment of approximately 4,400 workers as construction progresses.

Sales and use taxes paid to the states during construction are estimated at more than $30 million. Property taxes are estimated at an additional $19 million.

The speaker said Alaska will realize tax benefits as a result of the Northern Tier carrier wihich will provide producers of Alaskan crude access to a ready market for their oil in the agriculturally and industrially intense northern and inland states. Because of Alask'a fax system, any transportation savings will directly benefit the state, Beasley said. North Slope oil at present is reaching destinations other than the West coast via the costly route through the Panama Canal, he added. The Northern Tier Pipeline Co. is a consortium of eight companies which was formed in 1975 to meet the needs of the affected states as projected problems arose and demands increased. Upon completion in 1981, the Northern Tier pipeline will extend from the deepwater port at Port Angeles, Wash., to Clearbrook, Minn., where it will join other lines serving the inland area as far east as New York State. Other pipelines along the aroute will also be served by Northern Tier.

The proposed pipeline will consist of 42- and 40-inch pipe and extend 1,557 miles. Ultimately it will deliver nearly one million barrels of Alaskan and foreign crude oil to the heart of America each day.

NBC willing to stick by 'Weekend'—for a while

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) - "It's like riding a roller coaster, lurching, pulling to the top," says Linda Ellerbee of the several weeks before the premiere of NBC's weekly "Weekend" newsmagazine. "You know in a few moments you'll be rushing through an exciting new experience.

"None of use knows what to expect, and I really can't wait."

That mad rush begins Saturday night at 10 EST as "Weekend," started in 1974 as a once-a-month alternative to NBC's "Saturday Night Live," goes weekly. The first program includes stories on artificial insemination, "A Growing Need for Single Women," and on Idi Amin, the selfstyled "King of Africa."

The show is a "premiere" only in the sense that NBC is committed to a weekly format. A special edition of "Weekend" the evening of Oct. 12 - a Thursday - fell flat in the ratings, but NBC has indicated a willingness to endure unsteady footing - for a while.

The inevitable comparison is with CBS' "60 Minutes," which suffered in the ratings for years before settling into a Sunday evening time slot to watch the ratings soar.

Miss Ellerbee and others on the "Weekend" team are uncomfortable with the parallel with "60 Minutes." Indeed, the similarity is in the maga-

NBC describes "Weekend" this way: "Diverse subject matter, offbeat, investigative or simply picturesque." "60 Minutes," in contrast, tends more toward the hard news, investigative story. And unlike the staff of four correspondents at "60 Minutes," Miss Ellerbee and co-anchor Lloyd Dobyns are it for "Weekend" - and they write their own material and the script for the show. There are only a certain number of things I can do personally," Miss Ellerbee says of the certainly difficult period ahead. "The thing I have to do is write better material than anyone else in television, and do it consistent-

"Nobody asked me what night to put on the program, nor did they consult me about the time. The network has to do its share," she says, "and leave us on long enough to find out how much of an audience we can

For NBC, it's more than just a numbers game. There is a certain amount of prestige involved - a critically acclaimed news program should survive in spite of low ratings program's executive producer, Reu-duction with James ven Frank, have been there from the Woods and Franklyn

'We are working with no net," Miss Ellerbee says, "no backlog of stories in the can. I don't know how it will be, but I came into it with the idea it would be a killer."

The 34-year-old native of Bryan, Alaska.

Texas, was an NBC News correspondent in Washington before taking the 'Weekend' assignment. Her career began in 1964 at radio station WVON in Chicago, and includes work with stations in San Francisco and Juneau.

Gardening gifts may bring pleasure at Christmas time

By CHARLES W. GREEN Midland County Extension Agent-Agriculture

The first killing frost and a few days of sunshine have encouraged cotton producers anxious to get at the harvesting of the 1978 cotton crop. As fields dry, cotton harvest will begin in earnest as farmers attempt to get the crop in before sustaining further weather related losses to their crops.

B. B. MANLY, in charge of the USDA Cotton Classing Office in Abilene, has announced that his office will provide cotton market information by recorded telephone tapes this season. The tapes will replace the written weekly reports previously issued and will provide more current market information, as they will be revised each workday at 4:00 p.m.

Content will include supply, demand, local cotton prices and trends, cottonseed prices, futures closing prices and quality statistics of Abilene classed cotton. The reports were scheduled to be started Nov. 21. Anyone interested in the cotton market may hear the daily report by calling 676-4211, AC 915 Abilene.

Many reports that the quality of cotton classed so far this season has been average to low grade, longer than usual staple length, and mostly 3.5 to 4.9 micronaire. Local cotton prices have ranged from 55 to 58 cents per pound for mixed lots. Cottonseed prices paid producers currently range from 100 to 125 dollars per ton.

ROME (AP) - A prosecutor Saturday demanded fines of almost $20 million against acfilm-producer husband, Carlo Ponti, for alleged illegal transfer of money abroad.

A&M meeting slated

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) New approaches to problems that plague a troubled U.S. farm economy will be sought during the three-day National Farm Summit that opens Monday at Texas A&M.

University officials estimate 500 leaders from every segment of American agriculture will attend the confab sponsored by the Agriculture Council of America and Texas A&M, which has the nation's largest college of agriculture.

'The purpose is to take a fresh look at the total picture. To find - where possible - creative answers and new solutions, and to frame these findings in specific, practical and useful terms," said Dr. Jarvis Miller, president of Texas A&M.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally and U.S. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., are among the featured speakers for the meet, which culminates more than a year of planning, research and study.

A university spokesman said five special task forces, which have explored major issues, will present and discuss comprehensive reports on the problem areas they examined.

Task force chairmen and their topics include Dr. Luther Tweeten, Oklahoma State University, farm

Roy E. Campbell, president of Elcor Corp. announced that its board of directors has authorized capital expenditures of approximately $8 million for construction of a new asphalt roofing products manufacturing facility to be located at Ennis.

The new plant will be designed to produce premium fiberglass based asphalt shingle and roll products and premium asphalt laminated shingles. The laminated shingles have an attractive, heavy textured appearance and offer advantages of longer life and improved fire protection.

The new roofing facility is scheduled for completion in the first quarter of calendar year 1980 and will use fiberglass mat produced in the company's recently completed plant located at the same site. Ultimate capacity of the new roofing plant in terms of fiberglass based asphalt shingles will be in excess of 2 million squares per year.

Campbell said, "The approximately $8 million capital expenditure for the new roofing plant is in addition to previously approved capital expenditures of approximately $7 million for

The Ortloff Corp., a wholly-owned Elcor subsidiary, will design and construct the new roofing manufacturing facility. Ortloff also designed and constructed the fiberglass mat manufacturing facility located at the same

Giant companies face citations for contempt

SUNDAY, DEC. 3, 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) - Some of the nation's largest corporations are facing contempt citations for failing to give the government inside information the firms claim could be leaked to competitors.

Among the companies ordered to a Dec. 13 hearing to show why they should not be held in contempt are such giants as Exxon Corp., Bethlehem Steel and the Coca-Cola Co. U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell issued the order Friday to 66 companies for failing to file the reports with the Federal Trade Commission. However, the FTC staff says contempt citations will not be sought against companies that file the reports before the hearing date. The issue involves two types of reports — one called "line-of-business" and the other "corporate patterns." The most important of the two, "line-of-business," requires the companies to show profit, sales and asset

These courses will apply toward the master's program in Geology. Applications for admission are now being accepted at the PBGC where classes will meet.

The deadline for accepting and handling graduate admissions is Dec. 13. Registration deadline is Jan. 9.

Students who have not taken the GRE must do so as soon as possible. Registration for the GRE is Dec. 12 for Jan. 13 testing at UTPB.

The Spring courses are: Geol. 5312 - Depostional Systems; Terrigenous Clastics (3 hrs.). Professor Robert G. Reeves will conduct the Most of the companies now have either filed reports or sought extensions of time from the commission. However, Gesell said the 66 he named have done neither.

The first big step was taken in 1975, when fixed fee schedules for brokers were scrapped and commissions on purchases and sales of stock were opened to full price competition. A year later, a composite ticker tape reporting trades from various mar-

One, called the Intermarket Trading System (ITS) and spearheaded by the NYSE, connects the trading floors of the Big Board, the American Stock Exchange and four regional exchanges with a computerized communications linkup.

It would preserve the present role of specialists — brokers on trading floors who have the important and sometimes highly profitable job of acting as meeting points for buy and sell orders.

Usury ceiling may be in for tough sledding

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - With interest rates rising nationwide, the Texas usury ceiling may be in for (as one financial official puts it) some "rough sledding" when the Legislature con-

Savings and loan associations and consumer credit companies are indicating they plan to ask lawmakers for authority increase rates on some loans, although exact plans haven't been firmed up yet.

Because of the high prime rate charged by banks, savings and loan associations are having trouble-and anticipate more trouble-in securing funds for home loans under the 10 percent usury limit imposed by the Texas Constitution.

Texas Savings and Loan League officials are talking about asking the Legislature to exempt home loans from that limit-as has been dome for other categories of loans, including those by consumer credit companiesand the Texas Savings and Loan Department is looking at the matter

However, the department and the Savings and Loan Section of the State Finance Commission (which oversees the department) haven't taken any official stand on the matter, although it was discussed at a recent meeting.

Consumer credit company representatives have failed in the last two sessions to obtain increases in rates which they contend are needed with opposition by Sen. Bill Patman, Ganado, the principal cause of that fail-

This time, it appears they will seek a new lending category for loans of $100 to $300, an intermediate step between the existing lending categories, with intermediate rates.

patman indicates he's not changed his position on interest rate increases-so any rate change faces a tough selling job.

Another battle shaping up for January involves savings and loans and builders, over savings and loans engaging in development projects.

That proposal is expected to be pushed by builders, although some savings and loan officials contend a number of homebuilders wouldn't be in business without that sort of participation by savings and loan associa-

Banking trade association officials report they're in the process of completing legislative programs, but it's not certain what will be offered.

Department of Banking officials are looking at possibly tightening requirements governing sales of money orders, travelers checks and similar instruments-and perhaps some matters involving acquistion and control of State-chartered Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff says his agency may seek some additional review power of changes in control of State-chartered associations, similar to those granted the Department of Banking in 1977.

Another area which may see legis-lation is the use of share drafts by credit unions, although the House Financial Institutions Committee, in its recommendations to the new Legislature, steered away from that bankcredit union dispute.

Diverting to another area for legislative consideration, it appears there will be a considerable struggle between insurers and business interests (led by the Texas Association of Business) over self-insurance for worker's compensation.

TAB head Bill Gray reports TAB members have been pushing for that authority for some 10 years, but says opposition by insurance companies and organized labor helped to kill the legilsation. Texas is one of four states which doesn't permit such self-insurance, Gray says, arguing the result is that companies are forced to pay out mil-tions of dallors annually in insurance costs that they could otherwise save.

This time, he says, it appears insurers are willing to accept the proposal to some extent-although the two groups are still apart on just how to implement the concept.

ANGELS KNOW

Do you want to be in love? And see the whole world from above? Do you want to be set free? To see the things that children see? Well this is how to earn your wings Just hear the songs your conscience sings Then trust someone with all you see And care with your heart completely But heed the serpent's warning though Before you set your heart aglow For without wisdom hearts turn blue But without love they break in two I'll save you much pain if I may For you who'd fall in love and stay All my life I've studied soul To be in love-my highest goal I've studied lessons we all knew Before we reached the age of two I've studied hello's and good-bye's 've studied truth and looked at lies I've been in love and then fell out

I've been quite certain-then know doubt

That conscience bids you love foremost

There's one thing sure that I have learned

Once death you've dealt your parents ghost

Through dreams I've built and bridges burned

Ben Cowins (28), University of Arkansas running back, set two records Saturday during the Razorbacks' 49-7 victory over Texas Tech in Fayetteville. He became the first Razorback in history to rush for 1,000 yards for three years and broke Dickey Morton's record of 100-yard games with his 16th effort Saturday. (AP Laserphoto).

Arkansas, Cowins race past Red Raiders, 49-7

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas running back Ben Cowins scored two touchdowns and topped 1,000 yards rushing for the third straight year as the Razorbacks crushed Texas Tech 49-7 Saturday.

The eighth-ranked Razorbacks scored on six of their first seven possessions and led 42-0 at the half, while winning their fifth straight and stopping the Raiders' winning streak

After two quarters, Arkansas had 379 yards total offense, 19 first downs and had put together scoring drives of 80, 15, 76, 76, 80 and 56 yards. Tech, on the other hand, had four first downs including two by penalty — and a total offense of 76 yards.

Arkansas, bound for a Dec. 25 Fiesta Bowl meeting with UCLA, finished the regular season at 9-2 and is 6-2 in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas would tie Texas and Houston for the league title should Rice upset Houston Saturday night. If Houston wins, Arkansas and Texas would tie for second.

Houston overcomes Hertel for 42-25 win

HOUSTON (AP) - Eleventhranked Houston, flirting with disaster with five first-half fumbles, got a second-half transfusion from backup quarterback Delrick Brown Saturday as the Cougars beat Rice 49-25 and advanced to the Cotton Bowl on a winning note.

The Covigars, 9-2, clinched the host bert in the New Year's Day classic against 10th-ranked Notre Dame earlier Saturday when Arkansas defeated Texas Tech 49-7.

Rice, which finished with a 2-9 record, nonetheless ignited behind the passing of sophomore quarterback Randy Hertel and trailed by only 14-13 early in the third quarter on Wes

Hansen's 31-yard field goal.
HOUSTON'S STARTING quarterback Danny Davis, who lost two of Houston's first half fumbles, then directed the Cougars to the Rice 5yard lime and slipped to the sideline as Brown came into the game and ran for a touchdown on his first play.

Brown stayed in the game on Houston's next series and climaxed a 48-

12-0, while OCE fell to 8-2. The NAIA playoffs move into the semifinal round next week with Angelo State hosting Western Colorado, which defeated Central State of Arkansas 21-17 Saturday. Angelo State, champions of the Lone Star Conference, ground out 407 yards in total offense, including 109 yards on four pass receptions by flanker Alvin Garrett and 116 yards rushing on 22 carries by tailback Quarterback Mark Embry hit 8 of 14 passes for 146 yards and a touch-

Leading ground gainer for Oregon College of Education was quarterback Doug Lulay who rushed for 91 yards and threw for 40 yards, 35 of which went to wide receiver Mark Smith.

Both of Turner's interceptions came in the fourth quarter as the visiting Wolves went to the air in an effort to get onto the scoreboard. Embry scored on a 15-yard keeper in the first quarter and threw a 54-yard pass to Garrett in the second quarter for a 12-0 halftime lead. Embry scored on a one-yard keeper and fullback Arthur Guttierez went 21 yards on a draw play for two more touchdowns in the third quarter.

Most of OCE's yardage came in the second half as Angelo State limited the Wolves to 50 yards rushing and eight yards passing in the first half. OCE finished the day with 202 yards rushing and 52 yards passing.

Alabama in easy 34-16 finale win

Rutledge broke Joe Namath's school record for career touchdown passes, throwing two to Bruce Bolton and one to Rick Neal, as second-ranked Alabama defeated Auburn 34-16 Saturday. The victory set up a Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl showdown with top-rated Penn State for college football's national Rutledge also tied the Alabama single-game touchdown pass mark as well as the one-season record of 13 shared by Namath and Harry Gilmer in leading the Crimson Tide to its seventh Southeastern Conference title in eight years.

The 6-foot-2 senior, playing before a record Legion Field crowd of 79,218 in his home town, connected with Bolton on scoring passes of 33 yards in the opening period and 17 yards with 32 seconds left in the first half. That toss erased a 13-10 Auburn lead and put Alabama on top for good 17-13. Rutledge added the 30th of his four-year career - Namath threw 28 in three seasons - with an 11-yarder to Neal early in the third quarter.

Back-up quarterback Steadman Shealy scored Alabama's final touchdown on a 20-yard, fourth-down run in the final period while Alan McElroy booted field goals of 34 and 39 yards.

Plano in 15-14 win over Temple

IRVING, Texas (AP) - Quarterback Steve Ulmer broke a tackle, twisted and fell backwards into the end zone for a two-point conversion that lifted defending state champion Plano to a 15-14 class 4A regional playoff win over top-ranked Temple Friday at Texas Stadium.

Carl Smith capped a 65-yard desperation drive to set up the go-ahead conversion when he fought his way for a touchdown with 1:02 remaining on a fourth-and-four play from the Temple

Tied in penetrations and trailing in first down statistics, Plano was forced to go for the game-winning two-point play.

Kenneth Davis' 51-yard field goal try — and Temple's last shot at a miracle finish - fell hopelessly short as the game ended. Temple had marched to the Plano 34 before starting the last play with four seconds left on the clock.

Ulmer crashed over from the one to give Plano a 7-0 lead on the first play of the second quarter. Mark McQueen scored both of Temple's touchdowns, scrambling for eight yards in the second quarter and plunging over from four yards out midway through the fourth period.

Temple failed to cash in on a golden scoring opportunity late in the first half. With the score deadlocked at 7-7, the Central Texas team had a first and goal from the Plano four with 27 seconds left. But on third down from the three, time ran out before Temple could get off a field goal try or stop the clock.

Cowboys, Pats in Super Bowl preview?

DALLAS-Despite three straight resounding victories since that Miami defeat, the Dallas Cowboys approach today's game with the New England Patriots with quiet confi-dence, realizing the full portent of the inter-conference clash, billed by some as a possible Super Bowl preview.

Although the Cowboys dazzled the opposition with their best performances of the season, the victories still came at the expense of Green Bay, New Orleans and Washington rivals who are 0-11-1 for the last four

"We still haven't beaten a contender," grouses Cowboys' defensive back Charlie Waters.. "So, if you ask are we at Super Bowl form, the answer is: No way.'

Roger Staubach feels the midseason adversity, those losses to Minnesota and Miami that prompted the doubts among fans and soul-searching among the Cowboys themselves, may not have been without benefit. "Everybody's going to start telling us we're the greatest again, but I think we learned a few things this year. The way to deal with that is just to work

Staubach points out the Cow-boys still have three tough games left and two are on the road, "But that's good. You want to go into the playoffs having to fight to get in there."

THERE'S NO argument that the Cowboys still have a fight to get there. Today's game, for example, is no idle inter-conference exhibition. Both the Cowboys and Patriots need victories to assure sole possession of their divisional leads in the face of tough divisional contests

Should the Pats lose, Miami could creep to within a game of the lead by beating Washington. Dallas' position is even more precarious. Although Washing-ton and Philadelphia are tied for second behind the Cowboys, the Eagles are the team to be reckoned with. The Redskins have won only two of their last seven. The Eagles have won their last four and could move into a tie for first by beating Minnesota today, should Dallas lose.

That would set up next Sunday's game in Philadelphia as the showdown for first place, and remembering their midseason joust with the Eagles in Texas Stadium, that's a bridge the Cowboys would prefer not to have to cross.

PERHAPS YOU'LL recall, Dallas grabbed a 14-0 lead and wound up winning by what appears to be a routine 14-7 margin, staving off the Eagles in the final quarter.

However, it was a physically punishing game, one in which the Eagles won new respect from the Cowboys, and one flesh from both teams. As Cliff Harris put it in the locker room, "I hope it took as much out of them as it did us." Philadelphia was to lose the next week to St. Louis. Dallas was to lose its next two to Minnesota and Miami. There's no question about the which extracted its pound of Patriots being psyched up for the Dallas game. Out in spring training at Scottsdale, Ariz., a couple of years ago, former Midland Cubs pitcher Mike Krukow was earning a spot on the Chicago Cubs pitching staff. He was still awed by it all, here he was pitching against his boyhood idols. When I stand out on the mound and face a Willie McCovey, I don't want to pitch to him. I want to go up and ask for his autograph."

It's the same way for many of the Patriots. "Most of us started hearing about the Cowboys when we were little kids. They were building the great winning tradition they have now, with all those good players they've had. You know, they've got the kind of reputation now that you feel a little bit intimidated before you even get on the field with them. No, the quote doesn't belong to a rookie like linebacker Mike Hawkins out of Texas A&I or exactly an unknown around the NFL himself. COACH TOM Landry labels the Minnesota game as the turnaround point for the Cowboys, that time when Dallas came to the crossroads where the players asked themselves "Are we going someplace or not?"

guard Terry Falcon from Montana, but fourth-year quarterback Steve Grogan, who isn't

"I think since the Minnesota game...we've played tougher and been together stronger. Our attitude is so much better than earlier. I like our position. We have jelled and it could carry us into the playoffs."

And just for the records, no one can accuse Dallas of playing a team in a slump today. The Patriots have won nine of their last 10 and that one defeat was against Houston, a team they had down and outT23-0 at half.

Seattle posts NBA triumph

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Jack Sikma scored a season-high 29 points, including a free throw that put Seattle ahead with 32 seconds to play, as the SuperSonics downed the Philadelphia 76ers 100-97 in the National Basketball Association Saturday night.

The 76ers committed four fouls in the last 47 seconds as the SuperSonics rebounded from a 97-95 deficit. Seattle, in first place in the Pacific Division of the NBA, tied the game for the 19th time at 97-97 on two free throws by Fred Brown, who was fouled by Henry Bibby.

Sikma then sank two free throws after he was fouled by Caldwell Jones, who returned to the 76ers lineup after missing four games because of an irritation of the ulnar nerve in the right elbow.

Lonnie Shelton then scored his 21st point of the game after he was fouled by Bobby Jones with 19 seconds left, making it 99-97 for the Sonics.

GLENDALE HEIGHTS, III. (AP) - Wayne Webb, whose first shot in the $125,000 World Open Bowling Tournament six days ago was a gutter ball, came all the way back Saturday to capture his first pro bowling

His victory in the title game, which earned him $21,000, came at the expense of 10-year veteran Roy Buckley, Columbus, Ohio, who was swept aside 245-177. Webb, who led the field into the five-man televised finale by averaging 222 for the first 56 games of this eighth annual event, rolled a nearflawless final game

He started with a spare, then struck four straight times to hold a lead of 36 pins midway in the game. He kept increasing his lead as Buckley, 'a five-time tour champion, could not muster a string of strikes. Webb closed out with five strikes in a row.

The four-match title round began with Larry Laub, San Francisco, eliminating defending champion, Marshall Holman, Medford, Ore., 193-

Laub then lost to Buckley 209-192. The third match of the afternoon saw Buckley oust Cliff McNealy, San Lorenzo, Calif., 255-168, and set the stage for the championship round.

Broncos try Raiders in night game

A year ago the Denver Broncos and Oakland Raiders lost five games between them. This year they've each lost five - and one of them faces the prospect of elimination from the National Football League playoffs before the playoffs even begin.

They meet tonight in Oakland with the American Conference West lead at stake. And with the way things are going in the AFC, the loser probably won't have much of a chance at a conference wild-card berth.

Midshipmen blank Cadets by 28-0 with Leszczynski

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Senior quarterback Bob Leszczynski rushed for two first-half touchdowns and set a Navy record with a third-quarter scoring pass to Steve Callahan Saturday, powering Navy to a 28-0 rout of Army in the 79th meeting of the armed forces academies.

The triumph gave the bowl-bound Midshipmen their fifth victory in the last six renewals of one of college football's greatest rivalries, and cut Army's lead in the series to 37-36. The other six games ended in ties.

With a chilled crowd of 79,026 looking on at John F. Kennedy Stadium, Navy converted three of its first five possessions into touchdowns with Leszczynski sandwiching scoring runs of 3 and 1 yards around a 1-yard touchdown charge by Callahan.

That gave Navy a 21-0 halftime lead. Then, in the third quarter, the Midshipmen attempted a 34-yard field goal. The bad snap eluded Leszczynski's grasp, but he picked it up and found Callahan for the 18-yard

The scoring pass was the 26th of Leszczynski's career, snapping the record John Cartwright had set from 1965-67

Army, meanwhile, could come no closer to scoring than two fourthdown passing attempts which went incomplete in the end zone. As a result, Navy recorded its first shutout in the series since 1974 and its third in the six games that have been coached by George Welsh.

Thanks to poower running by the sophomore backfield of Mike Sherlock, Kevin Tolbert and Callahan, Navy snapped a three-game losing streak and carried an 8-3 record into its Holiday Bowl encounter with Brigham Young in San Diego on

The loss ended a 4-6-1 season for Coach Homer Smith's Cadets. Sherlock rushed 23 times for a career high 105 yards, Callahan had 72 yards on 15 attempts to go with his touchdowns and Tolbert finished with 50 yards on 12 carries.

Navy supporters demolished the goalposts with 27 seconds remaining in the game and fans flooded into the end zone to celebrate the Midshipmen's triumph. The other goalposts also were destroyed nine seconds later, but order was restored and the game was concluded without up-

Leszczynski's rushing scores capped drives of 10 and 9 plays, respectively, and in each case the surge was mounted exclusively on the ground.

Leszczynski engineered the first drive after a 29-yard punt by Army's Ward Whyte gave Navy possession on the Cadets' 43. Sherlock ran four times and Tolbert twice as Navy consumed 5: 15 on the clock and took a 7-0 lead when Leszczynski rolled left on a keeper from the 3.

Callahan completed the next drive with 4:16 left in the first period by ramming over from the 1, more than supplying enough support for Navy's fourth shutout this season.

Navy had 39 offensive plays in the first half and ran on 35 of them.

The Midshipmen also tried a field goal from 35-yards out with 8:51 remaining. The attempt sailed wide to the left, but it hardly mattered.

Leszczynski passed just nine times in the final regular-season game of his collegiate career and completed four of them for 69 yards. Army's Earle Mulrane, harried most of the day by Navy's defensive rush, completed 16 of 36 passes for 190 yards. Three of his passes were intercepted but six went to senior tight end Clennie Brundidge - Army's all-time leader in receptions, receiving yards and touchdown catchés - for 92

Arkansas in cage victory

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Sidney Moncrief scored 30 points and pulled down 13 rebounds, both career bests, as Arkansas opened its basketball season with a 80-74 victory over Oklahoma Saturday night.

It was Moncrief and freshman Keith Peterson who made two baskets each at the start of the second half as Arkansas

Moncrief hit nine of 15 from the field and 12 of 13 from the free throw line. The Razorbacks expanded their margin to 14 points, 51-37, on a 16foot jump shot by Mon-crief with 10: 33 left in the Houston Stratford's playoff express continued its steady advance Friday with a 31-9 thrashing of Houston Kashmere in a Class AAAA regional playoff gamze at the Astrodome.

Johnson nabs TKO victory over Parlov

MARSALA, Sicily (AP) -Marvin Johnson of Indianapolis scored a 10th-round technical knockout over Mate Parlov of Yugoslavia and captured the World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship Saturday night.

The 24-year-old American challenger overpowered the 30year-old Yugoslav, who showed the fatigue of losing 12 pounds in a couple of weeks to make the division limit.

Both the referee and the two judges had the Austrian slightly ahead prior to the 10th round, chiefly for his hard-working, aggressive style.

But the Briton had enough concentration and composure to wait for his chance, and when it came he used it. For the 28-year-old Pachler, the knockout in his 37th pro fight was his third defeat, against one draw and 33 wins. For rhiney,27, it was the 50th bout and 32nd victory as against five draws and 13 defeats.

Lubbock Estacado, in the only other AAA game played Friday, easily defeated Snyder, 27-9. Sealy rolled to a 21-7 win over Ham-round game.

By The Associated Press

A basketball game can sometimes be a waiting game when it's played in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The ACC plays the stall as well as anybody in the country — but North Carolina State didn't play it well enough to beat Duke Friday night.

The Wolfpack deliberated too much, it seemed, and the result for Norm Sloan's sixth-ranked basketball team was a 65-63 loss to the nation's No. 1 club in the Big Four Tournament in Greensboro, N.C.

"I thought as long as we had the basketball we were not going to lose," said Sloan, who ordered his team to hold the ball with about six minutes left and the score tied at 63.

BUT SLOAN didn't count on Duke getting the ball on a turnover with about a minute and a half left. The Blue Devils then put on their own freeze for a while and won the game on a basket by Gene Banks with six seconds left.

"There was nothing wrong with the decision (to stall)," Sloan said. "We did not have them ready to take advantage of it."

"It's not easy playing here," Iona Coach Jim Valvano said about Syracuse's Manley Field House. "We have to keep Syracuse from spurting. They spurt, and then the crowd goes crazy and it's worth 10 more points to them.

About the victory over Utah State, Valvano noted:

"This was a big game for us. It has been the first time where we've come in and won an intersectional game like this.'

Iona, a small college in New Rochelle, N.Y., has been regarded as a challenger this season to the traditional eastern basketball powers like Syracuse, St. John's and Rutgers. But Valvano shrugged off the significance of tonight's game with the Orangemen.

"I don't think our program is prepared right now to play a game on Dec. 2 for Eastern basketball supremacy," he said. "I really don't think our team is as strong as Syracuse. They've been in the NCAAs the past six years. Six years ago we were the second best team in New Rochelle."

Ali in denial about retiring from the ring

NEW YORK (AP) - Muhammad Ali denied Saturday that he will formally announce his retirement from boxing at a news conference here

A story in Saturday's editions of the New York Daily News stated Ali will formally announce his retirement at news conference he is scheduled to attend and quoted him as saying, "I want nothing to do with boxing any more. I am going on to a new life.'

But the heavyweight champion said by phone from Natchez, Miss., where he is filming the movie "Freedom Road," he meant that he didn't want anything to do with boxing once he retires. "I might fight again. You never know what I might do," said Ali.

Ali, who has announced his retirement in the past only to retire again, has indicated on several occasions since regaining World Boxing Association title recognition by beating Leon Spinks Sept. 15 that he will not fight again. And many boxing observers feel Ali, who will be 37 Jan. 17,

Bob Arum, who has promoted several Ali fights and who was trying to match Ali with light heavyweight champion Mike Rossman, said earlier in the week that Ali "has let me know he doesn't want to fight Rossman and that he might not fight again."

Saturday, Ali said, "You never know, someone might offer me $10

The Thursday news conference has been called by Butch Lewis to publicize a boxing show he is promoting in nearby White Plains Dec. 15. Joe Frazier is also is scheduled to attend, as is amateur standout Greg

"I'm not coming there for Butch Lewis," Ali said. "I have nothing to do with Butch Lewis or with any promotion. I'm coming for Greg Page. He's a Louisville boy (Ali is from Louisville, Ky.). Greg Page is going to turn pro, and I want to give him a sendoff.'

Greg Campbell, a business representative for Ali, said, "It would be a mistake for him to announce his retirement. The heavyweight championship means money. Campbell, of Madison, Wis., noted that Ali has until June to make a retirment decision. At that time he would be required by the WBA to sign for a title defense. 'I'm leaving there Thursday as the heavyweight champion," said Ali, who considers himself champion of all the world even though the World Boxing Council recognizes Larry Holmes.

Sparky wants to manage to whimper and cry.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sparky Anderson, stating he "definitely" plans to be managing again by 1980, says he never planned to leave the Cincinnati Reds' organization.

"I thought I could beat Walter Al-ston's record. It may sound goofy, but I thought I would be an institution in Cincinnati," said Anderson, who was fired by the Reds this week.

"Cincinnati, to me, was my home. I'm only sad about one thing — I feel like I left a part of my family that will never return again.'

"I'm not down. I'm not unhappy. I'm not sorry for anything I did.

"Sure I made some mistakes boxcars full of them - but show me a guy who doesn't make any mistakes and I'll show you a guy who doesn't make any decisions. I'm not sorry, I'm a little sad."

Anderson's nine years as manager of the Reds tied him for longest tenure in the club's history with Bill McKechnie, but falls short of Alston's 23 years as manager of the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers.

Interviewed at his home in Thousand Oaks, Calif., by The Cincinnati Enquirer, Anderson defended his managing methods. He said he doesn't necessarily agree with the assessment by club President Dick Wagner that Anderson had grown soft and couldn't inspire the team.

'He said that he didn't feel our ballclub was aggressive enough and that he didn't feel I was aggressive enough. He thought our ballclub had too much material to finish second," said Anderson

Anderson feels several factors forced him to change the Reds' game this past season. Catcher Johnny Bench missed a third of the year with a back ailment, Joe Morgan was hampered with injuries and pitcher

Bill Bonham missed 14 starts. "I'd like to see anybody take three people off any club of their capabilities and win 92 games," said Anderson, who averaged 96 victories over his nine years.

He said the 1978 club will hold a special place in his heart.

"I was proud of the club for its character. They had to battle so many obstacles to keep their head above water. These are men. You can kick 'em in the rear and they're not going

He leaves glad that he won't have to see the Reds in bad times.

"The old pendulum will always swing back the other way, though. At least I won't have to watch it (the team) decline. I will never have to see those lean years. I don't want to see that.' He defended his star system, which brought criticism from several play-"I always told the team in the spring that there are people who will someday go into the Hall of Fame. "There are players on this club who will get certain favors when they ask.

Rose continues shopping with three ball clubs

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Pete Rose continued shopping for a major league basball team Saturday, meeting a second time with Pittsburgh Pirates owner John Galbreath at Galbreath's Darby Dan Farm.

Rose's attorney, Reuven J. Katz, said Rose might decide on a team Monday or Tuesday.

The All-Star third baseman, who has all but severed relations with the Cincinnati Reds, indicated his choices have been narrowed to the Pirates, the Atlanta Braves and the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League and the Kansas City Royals of the American League.

If Rose signs with the Pirates, the announcement will be made in Pittsburgh, not Lexington, Rose and Gal-

Galbreath reportedly has offered Rose some portion of his thoroughbred broodmare stock but no details have been revealed.

Rose was openly disenchanted with Cincinnati's contract offer, but Katz said the Reds' management, not Rose, ended their negotiations.

Galbreath said thoroughbreds entered the contract picture because "I knew Pete loved racing. There's nothing particularly strange about that. We thought that we could find something that would give Pete something for the future.'

Rose has made no contract demands to any team other than the Reds, Katz said.

St. Stephen's crown: Is it real?

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) - A million people have seen St. Stephen's crown since it was returned from the : United States but no one knows yet if it is wholly the real thing.

We hope to start work at the end of the year or in January," Hungarian National Museum expert Dr. Zsuzsa Solt-Lovag says of her plans to make a detailed study of the centuries-old Hungarians have never agreed on how much, if any, of the gold, jeweled and enameled crown really goes back to the year 1001 and King Stephen, the country's first Christian monarch.

"It's unlikely that any of it really goes back that far," says Dr. Solt-Lovag, an expert in the medieval

The crown fell into the hands of the U.S. Army at the end of World War II, after being taken from Budapest by its special guards. It and other treasures were taken out of Hungary to keep them from the invading Soviet army.

Postwar Hungary became a Communist country and the Americans kept the crown and other captured royal regalia locked up for more than three decades in Fort Knox, the U.S. gold depository.

After slow improvement in relations between the two countries, and over the objections of anti-Communist Hungarian exiles in the United States, the Americans returned the crown last Jan. 6.

With it came a 12th century sceptre, a royal sword dating from the 16th been made almost 600 years ago. The oldest royal relic was a coronation cape which some say King Stephen himself donated to a cathedral in 1031. All are now nearing the end of the longest public viewing they have ever had in Hungary. They have been displayed since late January in an opulent marble room of the National Museum, closely guarded around the clock. Topped by its mysteriously bent golden cross, the crown has been a symbol of governmental legitimacy in Hungary for at least six centuries, one reason its return to a Communist government was opposed.

The crown used to have its own honor guards and was only rarely displayed to the public. Its last brief public appearance in Budapest was in

"It is absolutely essential to say," says Dr. Solt-Lovag, "that they were all returned to us in very, very good condition. We were very happy about

The last major Hungarian study of the crown was in 1880 by members of the Hungarian Academy of Science. There is some feeling, Dr. Solt-Lovag adds, that they may not have done a very good job of putting the bent cross back on the headpiece exactly as they found it.

Experts have long accepted that the op and the bottom of the crown are of different ages. The two parts are joined in a a way that obscures two enamelled panels on the headband, and X-rays will be used to see if that part of the crown can be safely disas-

The new study is expected to take the crown out of public view for a maximum of about two months, Dr. Solt-Lovag says. And it is not expected to solve the mystery of how the cross was bent. "It was hit by something or dropped," she says. "It shows the

She estimates that about a fourth of those who viewed the crown this year might have been foreigners. The United States insisted that the crown be available to non-residents, an assurance for overseas Hungarians. In warm summer months, museum officials say, the crown was drawing 4.000 to 5.000 visitors a day. Even in the chilly damp of central European winter, about 300 people often wait outside the doors on a weekend morn-

At their peak, the crowds stood in lines stetching about 200 yards from the display room, down the museum's stone staircase and back through its entrance hall to the front door.

U.S. Embassy officials agree with the museum's accounts of the crown's drawing power. "And they were mostly young peo-ple," says Cultural Officer Michael Eisenstadt. "We were surprised. We'd expected a lot of the older peo-

Heading the list for restoration work is the cape, which was damaged by alterations made for the 1867 coronation of Austro-Hungarian monarch Francis Joseph.

'The miracle is that the cape survives," says Dr. Solt-Lovag, noting that not long before the alterations, it had spent nine years buried in one of the political upsets that periodically sent the regalia into hiding. "It was soaked completely through when it was dug up again," she says. "It had been buried in land that was flooded every spring."

Welfare Cadillac slowed

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) - A 33year-old woman who drove to her trial in her silver-toned Cadillac has been convicted of welfare fraud and perjury in what is believed to be the biggest such case ever.

Barbara Jean Williams was found guilty Thursday of 10 counts of welfare fraud and 12 counts of perjury. Another perjury count was dismissed on a technicality. She faces up to eight years in prison.

What's next for homosexuals—after Harvey Milk?

By TONY LEDWELL

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - This city's large and outspoken homosexual community, guided to political clout by the slain Harvey Milk, now struggles for leadership only weeks after its greatest triumph.

Milk, the first avowed homosexual elected to the city's Board of Supervisors, was shot dead this week along with Mayor George Moscone, a strong supporter of gay rights.

Dan White, a former supervisor who was one of the most vocal opponents of the homosexual community, was charged with the murders.

Just before the slayings, White apparently was pleading with the mayor to get back the supervisor's job he had resigned, and police said the City Hall slayings were not connected to

Nevertheless, the death of Milk left bewilderment among his supporters and an air of despair on Castro Street - the heart of San Francisco's homosexual community - where Milk once owned a camera store and was a familiar figure for years. An estimated one-sixth of San Francisco's 660,000 residents are homosexual and they have grown increasingly active in politics, staging massive voter registration drives and drawing the support of many major politicians in the city and state. White was the only supervisor to vote against a homosexual rights ordinance introduced by Milk this year and the only supervisor to vote against closing Market Street for the Gay Freedom Day parade in June, which drew 240,000 people.

Milk was the undisputed leader of the gay community. He was the first open homosexual elected to office in California and the most visible proponent of gay rights.

When state Sen. John Briggs got a measure on the state's ballot against homosexual school teachers, Milk led the opposition, debating Briggs throughout the state. The measure was defeated Nov. 7 in the first statewide victory for gay rights in the nation. Castro Street was exuberant over the triumph, and that night hundreds of joyous people gathered to celebrate, Milk and Moscone among

Now, the street is literally draped in mourning. Above one gay bar is a huge American flag with a broad black cloth down the middle.

The two-mile path Milk had walked last January from Castro Street to take his oath of office at City Hall was retraced Monday night by 25,000 mourners, most of them carrying lighted candles.

There is talk the new mayor should appoint a homosexual to serve the remainder of Milk's term, which expires in January 1980. But who?

"There is nobody who has the political leadership Harvey did," said Jim Thies of the Pride Foundation, one of the city's oldest homosexual rights organizations. "There are other leaders functioning in various capacities but nobody had the general grassroots support that Harvey had from his years of campaigning.

Milk, fearing he would be a target of violence, left a taped recording made shortly after his election listing the names of several people he would like to succeed him should he die.

That part of the tape has hot been made public but published reports speculated that Anne Kronenberg, his City Hall aide, and Harry Britt, president of the San Francisco Gay Democratic Club, were named.

Milk considered himself only one of many leaders of the homosexual rights movement but often rued the divisiveness in the community.

In a recent interview with a San Francisco newspaper, he spoke of trying to lead such a divergent

"You name me the black leader who controls the black community in this city," he said. "There isn't one. There are 40 or 50 black leaders. The same is true of the Chicano community. There's not one group that's ever had it all together, and gays are even more divided because we cover all economic strata and racial and ethnic

The divisions among homosexuals are sometimes subtle and sometimes fierce. Of the more than 100 gay bars in the city, only four or five are lesbian oriented and not even gay men are welcome in these.

There also is conflict between those who have made public their homosexuality and those still "in the closet."

Milk had worked for years to gain elective office, losing two races for supervisor and one for the State Legislature before his election last year. He described his inauguration as "a day of great joy.'

Even his foes in the homosexual community began backing him. David Goodstein, publisher of the biweekly Advocate, the country's largest and most influential homosexual newspaper, often feuded with Milk and supported another candidate in the election. On inauguration night, however, Goodstein tossed a party for Milk. After the murder, Goodstein said Milk "had grown tremendously in office. His voice will be sorely missed.

At a memorial service Wednesday. Acting Mayor Dianne Feinstein said of Milk: "His homosexuality gave him an insight into the scars which all oppressed peoples wear; it was undoubtedly the genesis of his admirable commitment to the cause of individual rights.'

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN

CHICAGO (AP) - It's been 20 years, but the picture remains seared in Gordon Nash's mind: of the cold, gray afternoon, of choking smoke creeping into the sixth-grade classroom, of flames biting at glass, of children screaming and crying - and dying.

On Dec. 1, 1958, a blaze started in a wooden stairwell at Our Lady of the Angels Catholic School

"We started to smell something burning," recalled Nash, now a 31-year-old lawyer. Smoke poured through a transom, and after a nun shut it, "the glass was glowing red.'

The back door to the cloakroom and a fire escape was locked. The nun had no key. Pupils huddled together as smoke billowed in. "It was pitch black in the room. You couldn't see. We started yelling and screaming, and started saying prayers," Nash said.

A boy jumped from a window onto the fire escape and ran for help. Two men ran back up, broke the fire door with a hatchet and led the students in that classroom to safety.

The Rev. John Kobus, then a 7-year-old secondgrader, remembered: "I was in a classroom on the first floor, but we could see the second-floor windows, and there were children hanging outside. They were yelling 'Fire!' We were quickly evacuated. It was all very chaotic."

Others weren't as lucky. "Three children who I knew were killed in the fire ..." he said. "I remember the intense sorrow that really overcame the neighborhood - the intense grief. I was very impressed by how so many people from all over the country were very concerned.

Robert Medza, another sixth-grader, also was on the second floor and was "trapped up there for I don't know how long.

He had a brother in the second grade and became frantic over his fate. His brother survived. A cousin Medza, also a priest now, said he doesn't often see other survivors but feels they share a bond, a "strange experience of togetherness" in living through the tragedy.

Kobus and Medza say the fire had no bearing on their becoming priests, but they and others believe it enhanced their understanding.

Worm dealers sticking Americans

By MICHAEL DOAN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Slippery worm dealers may be sticking hundreds of Americans with boxes of the creepy creatures for which there is no market, the government says.

A booming demand for worms in the last four years has made worm farming increasingly popular - but it also has led to schemes that may be fooling the public, investigators said Monday.

The Securities and Exchange Commission expressed concern about promoters who "convince the public that the road to riches is through worm

In advertising, seminars, films and slides, "emphasis is placed on the fact that the more money the investor invests, the more he will earn at a later date," the SEC said.

Investors often buy two-foot-square boxes of 10,000 worms and pay from $375 to $800 for worms that in many cases are worth $25 to $50, the SEC said.

The big problem, the SEC said, is the seller's promise to buy all the worms back later. The dealers could not possibly have enough money to buy all the worms back at the inflated prices, the agency said. And "marketing of the worms by the investors themselves is a difficult, if not impossible, task in many cases," the SEC said.

Worms have become popular among farmers to loosen soil, among fishermen and for use in eliminating solid waste pollution.

Alaska's bold pilots makeflyingdangerous

EDITOR'S NOTE - "There are many bold pilots, tundra. A pilot may have to pump his own gas. He but no old, bold pilots," is the saying in Alaska, where flying is commonplace and the skies often become crowded. Some officials believe pilots better use take that to heart to stop a soaring fatality rate.

By MARY LENZ

ELMENDORF AIR FORCE BASE, Alaska (AP) - To Alaskans, getting into the cockpit of a light plane doesn't differ much from getting behind the wheel of a pickup truck. But the difference can be

During the late summer and fall, Alaska averaged almost a death a day in aviation accidents, and more than a dozen persons were missing in the wilder-

A map of Alaska at the Elmendorf Air Force Base Rescue Center is littered with red pins marking the location of wreckage of 1,370 planes yet to be sal-

Rescue officials and officials of the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board say they are unable to explain the state's high crash rate. Flying here, they say, is not much more hazardous than flying in other mountainous or snowy states

What is different is that flying is a major means of transportation. "You either go in a dogsled or a little airplane or you just don't go," says Eugene C. Morris, FAA accident coordinator.

One in 40 Alaskans has a pilot's license compared with one in 300 in the rest of the United States. According to the FAA, 104 people died in Alaska plane crashes in the period from Oct. 30, 1977 to Oct. 30, 1978, a 19 percent increase over the previous year. And while investigators say they can make no immediate comparison betwen Alaska and the lower 48 states, they say the rate here is higher.

On sunny days, light planes fill the skies over Anchorage like a mosquito swarm. There are 15 airports in a ten-mile radius. Three military bases, Anchorage International Airport, and a small airport at Lake Hood together conduct a million flight operations a year.

"You develop a lazy attitude because flying is so commonplace," says Paul Davis, a weekend pilot who broke his back in a plane crash two years ago. It gets to be like getting into your airplane is like getting into the family car and you start treating

You can drive a car after it's been sitting in the garage for several months, but a plane needs careful maintenance. Officials say sloppy maintenance has been the cause of more than one Alaskan crash.

Davis says pilots also forget they should be totally confident of all conditions before taking off. He demolished his Stinson when he ignored his doubts about taking off from a field too muddy to allow him sufficient air speed. The plane crashed from 70

Alaska's vastness, treacherous weather and sometimes primitive airport facilities make it a dangerous place for overconfidence. It stretches across an area equal to the distance from Seattle to Miami. It may be hundreds of miles between airports. Runways may be gravel, sod or a thin scratch in the may also find he can't buy gas at any price because local residents make it strictly for their own

The distance between weather stations makes flying even more perilous. Morris says a pilot can take off in sunshine with no inkling that a major storm lies in his path.

Bob Reeve, founder of an airline in the Aleutian Islands, says he's lived to be 78 because "I adhere to that well known maneuver, the 180 degree turn. Young punks these days don't want passengers to think they're yellow. They don't have the guts to turn

Gutsy passengers can be a problem. "A hunter from out of state has one week of vacation and he wants to go out and get his sheep," one official says. "The pilot says it's not safe to fly but the guy says 'You fly me or I'll find somebody who will."

Five men from Wisconsin were killed in mid-September. Bob Mills of Mio, Mich. disappeared after leaving Anchorage Sept. 10 in a Cessna 185. The body of his hunting partner, Edwin Gascho of Fairview Mich. was found in the frigid waters of Cook

Bob Hunt of Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, was luckier. He crashed while carrying equipment and moose meat to Anchorage from a hunting camp. He and a companion-hiked 35 miles, subsisting for two days on handfuls of pancake batter and were found 60

"Time and time again we see the same mistakes being made," says Maj. Rod.Duschene of the rescue center here. "Weather isn't taken into consideration. The pilot doesn't file a flight plan or he deviates from it and you don't even know where to start looking.'

Searches are dicey even when searchers know where to look. House Majority Leader Hale Boggs and Rep. Nick Begich of Alaska disappeared on a routine flight from Anchorage to Juneau in 1972. A 39-day search over 325,000 miles failed to turn up a Duschene says Alaskans have an independent streak and would rebel at extra courses some suggest for Alaskan pilots.

The FAA has a voluntary program. But Morris notes that many crashes are caused by bad weather, not pilot error. "We have certain inalienable rights and those rights include going out and breaking your neck if you choose," he says.

The Alaska Travel Air Carriers Association, which represents more than 70 carriers including charter and air taxi services, says the FAA has failed its air safety responsibilities. Executive Director Jim Dodson says the FAA, not the Alaska Transportation Commission, ought to suspend licenses of local carriers for violations.

IRA and KEOGH Retirement Plans at First Savings are the sure way to build for a secure retirement, and get a tax break at the same time.

With an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) at First Savings you can save for the future at the impressive rate of 8% (effective annual yield 8.33%). Deduct whatever you save - up to $1500 - from your gross income. And defer every penny in taxes on your IRA until you withdraw it, normally after retiring. Then, you'll probably have less income and possibly be in a lower tax bracket. (NOTE: There are severe penalties for early withdrawals.)

Here's an example of what an IRA can do for you. If you start an IRA at age 30, and deposit the maximum of $1500 per year until age 65, at the current interest rate, your IRA will be worth over $300,000. That's a dy s sum to start retirement, if you want to retire that young. By the way, your IRA is in addition to standard social security benefits. But remember, the deadline is the date your tax return is due in order to get your full tax deduction.

A Keogh Plan works much the same as an IRA except that it is designed for the self-employed individual, whereas the IRA is designed for the individual not covered by a pension or retirement plan. A Keogh Plan permits an annual deposit of up to $7500. With a Keogh Plan, you get the same tax advantages and interest rate as an IRA. However, the deadline for starting a Keogh is December the 31st, and you can make your final deposit on the day you file your taxes.

So stop by the First Savings offices downtown or San Miguel Square and let the "FISCAL FITNESS PEOPLE" show you the sure way to save for your retirement. It's getting later than you think . . .

The heart flutters at invitation from president

By DAN SULLIVAN
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Americans are above all that nonsense about kings and courts. Americans truckle to no man. But somehow when an engraved invitation from the White House turns up in the mail, the heart gives a maidenly flutter, like Cinderella's on hearing that she was going to get to the ball. Yes, we're free that night.

This invitation was for a buffet supper "In recognition of the 1978 National Bible Week. Special Guest: Alex McCowen." McCowen's oneman reading of the Gospel of St. Mark had got glowing notices in London and New York. Yes, we were certainly free.

However, we had to get busy. A suitably stilted reply had to be composed to the invitation — Amy Vanderbilt, where are you? One's friends had to be (casually) notified. And there was the question of costume. Black tie for the White House, right?

And something drop-dead in champagne silk. I mean, how often do we get to do this?

The hotel window framed the White House across Lafayette Park as perfectly as in a Washington movie, and surprisingly the airline had not lost our luggage. At 6:30 a cab deposited us at the southwest gate and I showed a marine guard my driver's license. In a whisk, we were inside.

What is the White House like? It's nice. It does not suggest the Duke's palace, a place where the likes of you couldn't possibly be at home. The corridors do not go on forever and there are no marble statues. Neither, of course, is tract housing. You're in a mansion. But it's a Virginia mansion, where the elegance wants to be plain, and the scale is based on the human figure. It's a house for Jefferson's farmer-aristocrat, who knows how to put his visitors at their ease.

However, I notice, uneasily, that almost nobody else filing into the East Room is in black tie. Oh, well. I find courage in John Lindsay's remark on a similar occasion — "Look at all these underderessed people." Actually, it being National Bible Week, half of the men are in elerical collars. The champagne silk looks fine.

"Ladies and gentlemen, the President and Mrs. Carter." The gilt chairs bump on the parquet floor, and 300 people stand up. No trumpets. The president looks just like the president. He says a few words about the joy of the New Testament and his anticipation to hear "Alec" read St. Mark's Gospe! all the way to the end, instead of in the usual small homiletic doses. "There is a place for that, of course," he says and you recall that this is the first president in a long time who can talk mater-of-factly about the Bible.

The absence of smarminess is welcome. McCowen's performance is in the same key — human, firsthand, simple. He opens with a few words about feeling safe with so many qualified prompters in the room, and plunges in. His St. Mark does not suggest stained glass and pulpits. He is an ordinary man in an open shirt and sports jacket who might be running a PTA meeting. At times he speaks with passion, because some of the things he has to report astound even him; but he's not trying to impress, simply to get his story out.

It is, of course, as meticulous a characterization as McCowen has ever put together, a subtle, at times satiric, portrait of a bluff innocent full of goodwill and energy. The audience in the East Room is captured, the clergy especially. McCowen, they know, is using the King James translation of the Bible, supposedly obsolete. Yet he makes every word sound not only clear but new.

A deep silence falls on the room when Christ drives the swine into the sea; McCowen's Mark is speechless, baffled, and we share his awe. We laugh, too. Christ's exasperation each time his apostles miss the point (which seems to be most of the time is wonderfully human. His trial and death get an almost summary reading, too painful for Mark to dwell on and, anyway, not the point of his story — the point is the resurrection, the good news that changed him, and will change us, if we listen.

McCowen bows off, is thanked by the president. "Rosalynn and I would like to meet you all," he says, and we go through a receiving line in the corridor, the Carters feigning to recognize everybody and be pleased that you could come. McCowen isn't the only good actor in the house.

"He made it sound a though he'd just come from where it was happening," the president observes, as we pass through. "Yes, Ruth is here ... somewhere," says Mrs. Carter referring to her evangelist sister-in-law. We move away and begin discussing the color of Mrs. Carter's dress. My companion says "melon," while I hold out for "Autumn red."

Autumn red doesn't mean anything," she says. "Melon," I say, "sounds like melon balls." We load roast beef onto our plates at the buffet, notice that, alas, they have no wine, and find our places at table No. 14 in the Blue Room. It is a round room and not particularly blue. It is also, we notice, fairly cold.

There is no one else sitting at table No. 14, and for a while we feel banished, as if we had said something gauche in the receiving line. Rescue comes from a handsome couple who identify themselves as Sen. and Mrs. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore. Hatfield admits to knowing something about the Bible, having considered studying for the ministry as a young man, and says that McCowen's reading makes him want to go home and really look at Mark, line by line. Up to now, despite his first name, he has been a Luke man.

I ask Hatfield if the tone of the evening was charateristic of the Carters at home. Yes, he says. The Johnsons went for dancing, but the Carter are a little more restrained—"comfortably formal."

At this moment your reporter felt someone leaning on his chair. He turned around and was startled to be staring into the celebrated face of Miss Lillian, the president's mother. "Just came in to kiss a few people!" she said gaily. "We're off to the wilderness." Having known Miss Lillian since the inauguration, I said that she could kiss me and she did, and flew away. "Well," said Mrs. Hatfield, "If you lived in Washington that would get you though a whole winter of dinner parties."

There remained nothing to do but to see the Carters off to Camp David for Thanksgiving — what Miss Lillian had meant by "the wilderness." As the helicopter lifted off the lawn, sending autumn leaves blowing over the portico, someone watching from the window in the Red Room said "You might almost envy him."

"You might almost envy him."
It's certainly a pleasant house.

MOSCOW — The hero is a handsome young foreign trade expert some say is patterned after the son of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

"Kluger," is sent by General Oil Co.
— and, it is suggested, by the CIA as well — to sabotage a $150 million deal the Soviet government is about to seal with an Armand Hammer-type American businessman who started trading with the Russians before it became the fashion.

The femme fatale is a pretty Business Week reporter who becomes an unwitting tool of the villains through her romantic involvement with Kluger, but who later mends her ways and contributes to the happy, toast-filled ending.

The plot is from a new Soviet film, "The Right of the First Signature," which underlines what one Soviet reviewer called the "ideological, political, and moral strength and deep knowledge of the capitalist economy" required of the Kremlin's trade specialists.

Since the content of Soviet films, like that of the Soviet press, is carefully screened for its ideological content, "The Right of the First Signature" provides insights into the view of expanded trade with the West which the leadership wants to impress on its citizens.

The film comes at a time when Moscow is in the midst of a major campaign against what it sees as discriminatory restrictions in the West that block further expansion of trade with the developed capitalist countries.

The theme is expected to be pushed hard at the annual meeting of the U.S.-USSR trade and economic council scheduled here in early December.

More than 300 top U.S. corporate leaders are scheduled to come to Moscow for the session along with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and assorted other administration officials.

"The Right of the First Signature," however, suggests that the Kremlin leadership sees the need to sell the idea of increased trade with the West internally, as well.

The typical Soviet citizen, has reason to be confused. The government controlled press regularly condemns the "capitalist exploiters" on the one hand while extolling some of the same corporations for their support of increased East-West trade on the

Meanwhile, Soviet trade with its ideological rivals is running at a rate of almost $28 billion a year, four times the level at the beginning of the decade and nearly 20 percent higher than it was in 1975.

The new film comes down squarely on the side of increased trade, praising, as the Soviet reviewer put it, the specialists who "try to find a way to broaden and deepen cooperation between-our country and the Western

School has all races

NEW YORK (AP) — A senior Israeli official at the United Nations and a colleague from a hardlined Arab country do not speak to one another, but both men's children share the same writing desk at school and, what's more, claim to have lots of fun together

This is only one of the many peculiar friendships that blossom at the United Nations International School, on an East River pier, where 1,421 students from 110 countries are going through elementary and high school. They're participating in what the institution's catalog describes as "an example of international living."

"We offer the international baccalaureate curriculum," says Robert Belle Isle, a Canadian recently elected director of the school. "That means that our students take their classes in English, French and their native languages, and upon graduation are academically fit to pursue their education in any country of the world."

According to the school's official figures, more than 400 of the students are American, 63 French, 37 Taiwanese, 20 Argentine, eight Pole, four Hungarian, three Russian and the rest from countries as diverse as Cuba, South Africa, Papua New Guinea, and Jordan.

Sixty-three percent of the students are children of United Nations personnel, while the rest are either American or belong to American-based foreign businessmen.

The professors at the school admit that it's not easy to teach Middle Eastern history to a class that includes Arabs and Israelis, or to analyze the border dispute between Uganda and Tanzania with children of both nationalities.

Not long ago, Wendy Aldous, who teaches of humanities, drew a map of India that included the state of Kashmir, which also is claimed by Pakistan. "At 9 o'clock sharp the next morning I got an a m b as s a dor on the phone, asking me to put a dotted line between India and Kashmir in the future." she recalls.

Asked on whether such touchy issues don't spark arguments among the students, Ms. Aldous said, "Of course they do, but that's perfectly alright with us. Why shouldn't there be any disagreements?"

However, the teachers say that children from diplomatic families tend to think on international terms, and that they are much more likely to settle disputes than their parents. Others claim that most students aren't interested in politics at all.

Says Vittorio Gallo, an Italian junior, "There is not enough interest in political issues. Maybe it's because most of my classmates are fed up with talking politics at home. ..."

To keep everyone happy, the school does not observe religious holidays. Explains Allan Wilcox, an Australian who heads the secondary school, "If we close for Christmas, we have to close for Ramadan, Yom Kippur and many other celebrations. We would be in recess more often than not."

Regarding discipline, Wilcox concedes it's hard to satisfy the expectations of all parents. "In many parts of Africa and Asia, teachers are expected to physically punish the children when they don't behave as they should," he says. "When we are asked to do so, we have to explain that we would go to jail for that, since in the United States it's forbidden to even touch a student."

Likewise, the parents were asked a few weeks ago whether they wanted a dress code for elementary school students. The American students' parents opposed vigorously, while Latin Americans and Asians were very much for it, Wilcox says. The issue is undecided.

Midland water: hard to swallow

By SUSAN RUTHERFORD R-T Lifestyle Writer

Living with Midland water... One has the feeling that a few long-time Midlanders know some vital facts that those new to the area would trade at least their scaley hot water heaters

Basic questions on water are common among newcomers, especially those who have invested in Midland homes.

They ask: Why does Midland water taste

Will the water here turn my children's teeth brown?

What is this water doing to my washing machine, dishwasher, hot water heater and the water pipes in my house?

City water experts agree that the water situation in Midland is far from ideal. Says John B. Lowe, city utilities director, "We do the best we can with what we have to work with-and right now what we have to work with is not very good. While it's not the ideal situation, we're

Lowe's hopes are shared by others aware of the water situation here, and they're all focused in the direction of rain. But not the slow, gentle rains that we've been getting this fall, which indeed are good for ranchers with pasture land. These rains just don't put any water in our reservoir lakes because they cause so little run-off. Instead. what Midland needs, says Lowe, are the high intensity rains which usually come in the Water from our primary water source, the Colorado River Municipal Water District, has been declining in quality for the last 4 or 5 years, according to Victor Brown, chemist at the city's Water Purificaiton Plant. "They're sympathetic to the problem," he says, "but there's not a lot they can do. The lakes just haven't caught much

Brown says the water coming from the district consists of raw (lake) water from either the near-dry Lake J.B. Thomas north west of Big Spring (which has relatively high quality water) or from Lake Spence at Robert Lee (consisting of low quality water and currently our most regular water source).

Because of the natural mineral content of the earth around Lake Spence, and, according to Lowe, the brine-dumping practices of the oil companies in that area during the late 20's, '30s and '40s, our water contains three minerals in undesirably large quanities. They are calcium, magnesium and sodium.

The calcium and magnesium give the water its hardness, usually noticed first by bathers who are used to getting more lather from their soap. "When I began work here in 1972 the hardness of the water was 200 or 300 parts per millions hardness," says Brown. "Now it's 600 and 700 parts per million." Any water with over 100 parts per million hardness is considered hard water, he adds.

It's the deposits of calcium and magnesium which build up as a whitescale in pipes across the city, particularly when hot water heaters raise the water's temperature. At cooler temperatures these minerals are held pretty well in balance and don't "precipitate" out of the water (i.e. they don't fall out of the water in hard mineral form when kept at cool temperatures).

Plants, therefore, should be watered in the summertime at night rather than during the day since the heat from the sun can cause water to evaporate and leave a concentration of harmful chemicals on the plants.

Lowe suggests keeping water heaters turned down to at least a medium setting to help keep the minerals in balance in home appliances and pipes which operate on hot water. "The higher the temperature, the more likely you are to cause precipitants," he says, adding "how hot is hot anyway? Why turn your hot water heater up an extra 100 degrees when you can't stand to put your hand in it at the 'normal' setting?"

Besides causing the scalyness on water fixtures and in water pipes, high temperatures cause a white soup to form inside hot water heaters. And hot water causes the spotting on glassware in the dishwasher. Normally a good grade of soap and a little bit of vinegar will take care of the spotting in the dishwasher, according to Lowe.

Home owners can't count on appliances operating at high temperatures lasting very long, according to Lowe.

Water softeners do help prolong the lives of hot water appliances, but not forever, says Lowe. And the sodium content in the water is elevated with a water softener to the point where it is not safe for children or for adults with high blood pressure or water retention problems to drink. Most water

Some Midlanders say they're accustomed to the taste of Midland water, but most have to get used to it after being away for a time.

Many newcomers swear they'll never get used plants and hot water heater are bound to have to the taste and buy distilled water from the an aversion to it. (Staff photo by Mike Karstart. Whatever your taste in water, your dos.)

softeners work on an exchange basis where one ion of calcium magnesium is traded for one ion of sodium, therefore decreasing the calcium and magnesium levels in the water and increasing the sodium level. (Water is considered soft when the calcium and magnesium levels are

Midland water has a high sodium level even without a water softener. It is the sodium in the water, along with the presence of cloride, which gives the water a salty taste. Together in dry form they become table salt. "People begin to taste sodium in water at 200 parts per million. Right now our salt content is running between 700 and 800 parts per million," says Brown.

Sodium in high quantities will corrode metal, and the sodium and other minerals in our water are capable of doing this under the right conditions. However, the biggest danger presented by the high sodium content is for people on a low sodium diet. Lowe explains it this way: "If a person is on a low sodium diet of 2,000 mg per day and if he drinks what they say is the normal amount of water consumed in a day, which is two quarts, then those two quarts of Midland water would contain 800 mg of sodium. And the person has already used up 40 percent of his allowable. Fruits and vegetables normally have quantities of sodium so the person would have to watch this carefully. Doctors usually prescribe distilled water for people on this type diet,"

Lowe adds that if a person were to drink water treated by a water softener, he would be getting 50 percent more sodium out of the water than by drinking tap water. This would really be prohibitive for a person who must limit his sodium intake. Another mineral, fluoride, also presents at least a potential problem in our water. Fluoride at low levels works as a tooth decay preventative. But fluoride at high levels causes mottling or staining fo the teeth, which may be permanent in children with developing teeth, ages five to 10.

Lake water is normally low in fluoride while well water is often very high in fluoride. Some foods have an especially high fluoride level, the highest among them is tea. If a child were to drink primarily well water containing high levels of fluoride and have a couple of glasses of tea per day over an extended period of time, chances are his teeth would become permanently stained.

While the surface water coming from the Colorado River district is low in fluoride, the ground (or well) water which must supplement water from the lakes is high in fluoride. The treatment capacity of our water treatment plant is 18 million gallons per day. During the hot summer days our water usage went as high as 32 gallons per day this past summer. This extra water came directly from the Paul Davis well field near Lamesa into the city's water pipes (well water does not need to be treated for bacteria as does lake or river water). Some dentists in town are concerned about the two month period each summer when our water contains a high fluoride level. However, according to Lowe, this does not present a problem to children in our area because of the relatively short time per year our water is high in fluoride. Our yearly average is good, he says. And the city tries to keep a 70 percent lake water to 30 percent well water ratio from day to day.

"Fifteen to twenty years ago
Midland had a bad problem with this (fluoride), but it was alleviated when we went to lake water," said Lowe.

Under present circumstances, a child's teeth are not affected drinking Midland water unless he drinks a great amount of tea per day and/or eats an abundance of foods high in fluoride.

Lowe, Brown and others working at the purification plant do not have ideal circumstances with which to work. One tremendous burden is with disinfecting and clarifying the raw lake water coming into Midland's water system, doing this with chemicals which are not toxic or harmful to life in any way, while keeping the water at a temperature which will not cause a chemical build-up in the city's pipes as it flows, and meanwhile keeping the pH balanced in relation to the other factors.

Some calcium and magnesium are taken out of the water by the filtering process, but, according to Brown, the sodium cannot be removed by conventional treatment methods. The cost of taking more of the chemicals out of the water would be between $10 and $15 million for a new system and monthly water rates would of up considerably. Another factor is that very little water that flows through our system if consumed by humans, and, according to Lowe, only 40 percent of the water that flows through the system returns to the system for treatment. That is, 60 percent of the water flowing to our homes and offices is used on lawns, swimming pools, washing our cars, washing our dogs, etc. Only 40 percent is consumed by humans, washed with or flushed down commodes. "So we could spend a lot of money and treat water to a high degree without really needing to," says

Actually it is not something new. "It is something I have wanted to do since childhood. I admired pilots," said the petite, attractive business woman. Her interest was rejuvenated when she left college to work for the theaters in Brownfield.

'Money, time and the closing of private airports during World War II kept me from learning to fly before then," she explained.

During the war years, she took flying lessons, but due to many other pressures did not complete enough hours for her pilot's license.

She began lessons again in September 1977 and now has her student license. She soloed in January of this Mary Alice's first cross country was 73 miles to Ms. Tidwell owns a Cessna 172. She has logged 55 hours actual flying time, "more than most people have when they sit for a license. A minimum of 40 hours is required.

Mary Alice has had only one really close call. Shortly after her solo and she was coming back in for a landing, she "got confused in reading the altimeter and had trouble getting down."

She wasn't upset. She told herself, "Let's do this right," and she finally landed safely.

Mary Alice built model airplanes as a child, something else usally done by the male species. "One was Wiley Post's "Winnie Mae" the place the famous pilot crashed in," said Ms. Tidwell.

She had flown in small planes before, but never handled the controls until she took her first lesson. Mary Alice is a member of the American Institute of

NEW YORK (AP) - Sister Elizabeth joined the convent when she was 17, just out of high school. She'd never had a social drink in her life.

That was 34 years ago. Today, she's a recovering alcoholic, whose last drink was Nov. 11, 1974, a precise marker that only an alcoholic would Sister Elizabeth was left some money by her father. It was intended for vacations. It was used for daily vacations into oblivion.

An uncle also mailed her bottles. "My aunt didn't approve so when I would write back I would say the statues had arrived safely.'

keept out cancer, heart trouble or diabetes. Society has trouble recognizing alcoholism as a disease, and recognition becomes even more difficult when alcoholism is accompanied by a religious habit, good works and a Mother Superior who believes prayer will make it go away.

Her case isn't unusual. Experts say the alcoholism rate among nuns is about the same as in the public at large. The National Council on Alcoholism estimates one of nine people who drink are alcoholics.

Sister Elizabeth (not her real name) began drinking in 1959. She was in her mid-thirties at the time and had been transferred to a convent where liquor was readily accessible - in many convents, liquor is available for social occasions.

It was a time when Sister Elizabeth had a lot of pressures: family illnesses, an alcoholic brother and, eventually, her parents' deaths.

"I began to use all the incidents around me. Strangely, I could recognize my brother's alcoholism but not mine," she says. She couldn't even stand the taste of alcohol. She mixed Scotch with milk and ice cubes to get it down - even at the end of her drinking period when she would drink as much as two quarts a day if she

"I would sometimes get sick while I was drinking and I would throw up. but I wouldn't stop drinking. I'd just wait and then start again and get sick again."

Most of this time, she was a productive member of her order, teaching every day. "I was a good teacher, too," she says. "I had tremendous rapport with the children. I never struck a child.'

She would usually start drinking at 3 p.m. At dinner she would remain withdrawn. If someone suggested she had alcohol on her breath, she would nastily deny it. Other sisters pointed out that dinner was supposed to be a social occasion.

"The Irish have a wit and I could use it to cut them down and I did. I was a nasty person."

She went back to drinking. Nobody wants to know that a nun is an alcoholic. People wonder how much they are damning their Church, their way of life, if they bring it into the open. Sister Elizabeth talked about her troubles for one reason. "I wanted to tell my story so that maybe some other nun would sneak the newspaper up to her room and read it. And then get help."

"I had reservations about talking about this. There are people who will say 'of course she drank, she was a nun.' That's not true. I have been very happy with my life.

"I found the alcoholism a blessing from God. Alcoholics Anonymous gave me a spirituality and a depth I never had before. I had given up the God of love and the God of life for the God of booze. Now I don't have to limit God in any way. My responsibility now is that I carry the message to other alcoholics.' The problem is recognized more widely now. Sister Maurice Doody, a Dominican and a recovering alcohollc, runs the Office of New Directions in New York. She's trying to tell others among the 130,000 nuns in the United States that they can and must

"This is a very democratic illness," says Sister Doody. "The vow of pover-ty doesn't stand in the way of any other illness. Why should it stand in the way of alcoholism?"

She's heard that alcoholism in the convent has risen significantly since Vatican II, the council in which many rigid rules of the church were relaxed and orders began allowing nuns to wear street clothes.

"We had this problem long before Vatican II. We simply buried the nuns who had this problem," says Sister Doody, who does use her real name and travels throughout the country to persuade community leaders that nuns with alcohol or drug dependence must be treated.

Legend tells of poinsettia as symbol of Christmas

NEW YORK (AP) — The tradition of the poinsettia as a plant symbolic of the Christmas season in the United States stems from a Mexican legend which tells of the custom in a certain village- of placing gifts before the church's creche on Christmas Eve.

According to the legend, a small boy, with nothing to give, knelt to pray in the snow outside. In the spot where he knelt, a beautiful plant with scarlet leaves grew immediately, and he presented it as his gift to the infant

The Mexicans called the plant Flor de la Noche Buena (Flower of the Holy Night). It was introduced to the United States in 1828 by Dr. Joel Roberts Poinsett, first U.S. minister to Mexico.

The story of how the poinsettia got its name, along with the history of the Christmas tree, the Yule log and the holly bush, is one of the seven holiday aspects covered by the "Story of Christmas" exhibit at the Kodak Gallery in mid-Manhattan through Jan.

Women have lower self-esteem

By CLARA HEMPHILL Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) Women at six of the country's most prestigious colleges have lower selfesteem and lower aspirations than men, even though their grades are about the same, according to a study released today.

"Women still seem to be underestimating themselves," Lois Monteiro, project coordinator for the study at Brown University, said in an interview before a regional conference at Brown on coeducation and sex roles.

The study questioned 3,347 under-graduates at Brown, State University of New York at Stony Brook, Welles-ley College, Barnard College, Dartmouth College and Princeton Univer-

Women are much less likely to think they're well prepared for graduate or professional school. Even women who take that tough physical science major in college are much less likely to say they will go on to medical school," Mrs. Monteiro

"... These are women-who should have grown up with a feminine awareness. They were 10 years old when 'The Feminine Mystique' (by Betty Friedan) was published," said Mrs. Monteiro, an associate professor in community health at Brown.

A total of 2,076 women and 1,271 men from all grade-levels answered the 20-page questionnaire last Forty-six percent of the women and 54 percent of the men said they thought they would hold a doctorate; 49 percent of the women and 61 percent of the men said they were confident they were well-prepared for graduate or professional school.

Ten percent of the women and 16 percent of the men said they wanted to become doctors; 12 percent of the women and 15 percent of the men wanted to become lawyers; and 13 percent of the women and 16 percent of the men wanted to enter business

About a quarter of the students at the women's colleges - Barnard and Wellesley - chose their school for feminist reasons. "They tended to feel that women's colleges would offer a more supportive environment and better role models," Mrs. Monteiro

The study showed, however, that women at coed and single-sex colleges received equal encouragement and respect from their professors.

While methods for handling sound are changing, one fact has remained firm throughout the years. It is easier to control the noise inside a house or within a room than it is to keep it out. That's partly because there are many outside noises about which you can do nothing and which, fortunately, are not always persistent. Mostly, though, it's be-

Rainbow girls contribute to children's Yule joy

"This is a fine example of the true spirit of Christmas," Administrator Wayne Ulrich said. "These young ladies have devoted numerous hours making these lovely decorations, which will be enjoyed by our young patients, their families and our staff," he added.

Stephani Young, Charity chairman, arranged for the presentation. She explained that each year the members have one or more charity projects and this year, they chose Midland Memorial Hospital.

The decorations, handmade birds, were made with a dual purpose in mind. First, they will be used to decorate the Christmas tree on the Pedi Unit and, secondly, they are of the type materials that make them safe for children to play with after Christ-

The mystique of gemstones can be traced to ancient civilizations in Europe and Asia. Fantastic legends have developed around them. They have even been attributed magical and medicinal properties. The belief in their influence on a person's life has translated itself into several gemstone lists. These lists add interest to gemstones but are not meant to interfere with your personal preference. Notice that the magic number in each case is 12. This is probably linked to an old superstition.

Mutts All-American to the core

By MARGERY CRAIG Copley News Service

The dog days of the much-maligned mutt may be on their way out. Loyable Lhasa apsos, adorable Airedales, cuddly cocker spaniels the purebreds have long commanded favor (not to mention big bucks) because of their prestigious bloodlines.

But what of that canine of suspicious paternity, the one whose ancestry is often dismissed with the shrug of the explanation, "Your guess is as good as mine?"

Mutts, mongrels, curs - even the names are disagreeable - are certainly one of Mother Nature's most common offspring but, according to Nancy Dolensek, one of the best.

In a country where anything labeled All-American is accorded a special status, Dolensek believes it's high time to give the mutt - the All-American of the canine population its due.

"Too many people select a dog solely for status, based on what's currently 'stylish," Dolensek says.

She reasons that if blue jeans can reach the height of fashion, mutts can at least become "chic." Dolensek has set out this dog doctrine in "Mutt," an A-to-Z guide on the animal she and co-author Barbara Burn affectionately refer to as "the quintessence of dog.

In an interview, Dolensek talked about her contention that the mutt combines the best of everything in a Dolensek says what the unobservant, and uncaring, eye views as just another shaggy street dog may actually be a four-legged package offering the friendliness of a beagle, the loyalty of a shepherd and the playfulness of a poodle.

'What's special about mutts is that they haven't been special," Dolensek said. "They are truly the underdogs."

This second-class status among canine citizens is surprising,

Dolensek said, considering mutts are spinal weakness. by far the most populous type of dog in the country — with estimates putting registered purebreds at only 15 or 20 percent of the nearly 50 million dogs in the United States. Why bother raising the mutt's lot in

"People have got to realize the critical situation that exists in terms of animal overpopulation," Dolensek

"Too many dogs, any kind of dog, end up in the animal shelter, and given the low opinion of the mutt, he doesn't stand a very good chance of adoption. "If you adopt a mutt, you really are saving a life."

Dolensek says she is not suggesting that all purebred breeding be stopped, > but she is a firm bellever that pet dogs — mutts and pedigrees — be neutered.

Lest the hazard heritage of the mutt still bring little better than a snicker to the skeptical, Dolensek reminds us that people, too, are mutts, hardly the product of a carefully planned

Careful to state that she doesn't believe all or any purebreds are bad or that each and every mutt is just terrific, Dolensek does maintain that mutts have "a natural superiority" over other canine critters.

When a breed becomes popular, everybody starts breeding them, including a lot of people who don't know anything about it.

Puppy mills spring up, dogs are bred indiscriminately and weaknesses in the breeds are compounded, all just to meet supply and demand."

The unfortunate upshot, Dolensek said, is often a disintegration of the bloodline, producing a higher incidence of genetic defects.

This may result, for example, in German shepherds more prone to hip dysplasia and low and long dogs, like dachshunds, more apt to inherit

The plucky non-pedigree, on the other hand, is likely to possess what Dolensek calls "hybrid vigor," less prone to deficiences in the purebred simply because the deficiencies have been diluted in the mutt.

"With mutts, you generally can count on not getting a concentration of physiological and emotional programs," Dolensek said.

You can't, of course, count on what the mixed offspring is going to look like, but for Dolensek, this is another one of the pleasant surprises of owning a mutt.

Christmas rose a holiday symbol of celebration

CHICAGO (AP) - Combining red roses and green plants offers a different way to decorate the house in traditional holiday colors, the Rose Information Bureau suggests.

The legend of the "Christmas Rose," which attributes its origin to the day Christ was born, makes this symbol of celebration and love especially appropriate to the season, the bureau points out.

seasonal decorations with fresh red roses, the bureau suggests.

flower arrangement, display the red roses in a favorite vase with an assortment of evergreen boughs. You might want to spray the boughs with a light touch of artificial snow before adding them to the roses

Or make a creative coffee-table arrangement by floating red roses in brandy snifters or wine glasses of assorted sizes. Place sprigs of deep green holly and a few tree ornaments around the stems of the goblets and warmth of your arrangement by placing it on glass-mirrored squares from your local hardware store.

You can also "spruce" up a plain greenery wreath by placing tiny red rosebuds around the circle. To keep the roses fresh, put them in waterfilled florist tubes before inserting them into the wreath. The inexpensive tubes, which can be bought at most florist shops, should be refilled

There's almost no limit to the beautiful Christmas decorations you can create with red roses, the bureau notes. Add them to your tree orna-ments. Make a garland with holly and roses for the fireplace or a doorway. Or insert roses in the bows of pretty, gift-wrapped packages.

If you live in an apartment and space is too limited for a tree, you can gently into the soft dirt.

Another apartment trick that is space-saving as well as pretty is placing red roses in bud vases or small vials in among your favorite yearround green plants. It's sure to lend a festive air of Yuletide cheer to your surroundings. Just remember to water the roses regularly.

Roses are a perfect touch for holi-day entertaining, too. If you're serving buffet-style, use holly and red centerpiece of red roses and ever-green sprays in a silver bowl. Add white candles in silver candlesticks and tuck a single red rose within or atop' the napkins at each place setting. Your guests will have a take-home present of holiday cheer.

U.S. government plans to protect victims of age discrimination

By MICHAEL PUTZEL Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - The gov ernment is planning to extend civil rights protection to victims of age discrimination, but officials say they hope to avoid the pitfalls of deciding in Washington "whether 12-year-olds can play Little League football in Des The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, under a proposal published in today's Federal Register, would give recipients of federal financial aid up to 21/2 years to justify or weed out all age distinctions or face loss of the money. Victims of age discrimination, whether young or old, thus will become the fourth major group of Americans to win federal protection following blacks, women and the handicapped. The new regulation, designed to implement the Age Discrimination Act of 1975, won't eliminate all age criteria from federal programs. But officials predict it will end many unfair practices, such as refusing literacy training to those over age 40, restricting home health care to people over 60 in some states, 65 in others, and setting arbitrary limits on the age of children who may attend day-care

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Calpfano Jr. promised "a rigorous and skeptical analysis" of recipients' claims that their age criteria are justifiably

"We're going to encourage people to be flexible and try to settle complaints in the community," said one author of the proposal, who asked not to be named. "The last thing we want to do is have the federal government deciding whether children under 6 can go to a museum without their parents if it's the museum guard's day off."

A key test, the official said, is whether age "is a reasonable measure of what you are trying to mea-

Asked how the government can prevent getting bogged down in trivial issues such as who can play in Little League or how old one has to be to participate in a handicraft class for the elderly, the official said every effort will be made to mediate such disputes at the local level.

DRT president general visits local chapter

Mrs. Eugene M. Addison of Huntsville, president general of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas, was the special guest of the Aaron Estes chapter of Midland at its regular meeting Tuesday in the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

REPORTER-TELEGRAM

Mrs. Addison spoke to the members concerning the projects and business affairs of the association. Also attending the meeting was another guest, Mrs. G.F. Hollis of Coldsprings, a member of the Alamo Committee.

year's "Christmas Under Six Flags" open house will be held at the French Legation in Austin. The Legation has been visited this year by many distinguished French guests and has received a number of rare gifts, according to Mrs. Addison. She also told the members that the Texas Highways magazine will soon feature the Legation in its publication.

The Daughters of the Republic of Texas are custodians of this stateowned building which was built by Count Alphonse Dubois de Saligny in 1840 during the days of the Republic. The State of Texas purchased the builing in 1945 and it has been restored and maintained by the DRT organization.

Mrs. Addison discussed the visit by Prince Charles of Wales who was received by her at the Alamo, another state-owned property under the custodianship of the DRT group. The president general listed a large number of acquisitions received this year and reported on the physical conditions of the Alamo.

Mrs. Addison also reported on the President General's special project this year which is the Cradle, a small building in Galveston. It was originally the Library of Col. W.P. Ballinger, is the birthplace of the Daughters of the Republic of Texas and is the only property owned by the association. She reported the inside of the building is in excellent condition, that the furniture had been repaired and that further work is to be done on the front and back galleries and shutters.

Other topic of discussion by Mrs. Addison was the DRT Museum which is housed in the old General Land Office in Austin and is now a self-sustaining unit of the association due largely to the sale of Texas History Book reprints and of "Texas Wild Flowers" by Eliza Griffin Johnson.

Mrs. Warren Faller, president of the Aaron Estes chapter, presided during the business meeting. The chapter endorsed Nancy R. McKinley as Historian General to be presented at the election of officers during the convention at Waco in May, 1979.

Program was presented by Mrs. Edward Brannon who discussed "How the Flag was Born". She said that Joanna Troutman, at age 16, made a flag of white silk on which she placed a blue star and wrote the words "Liberty or Death." The flag was made from two of her own silk gowns and delivered to Lt. William Ward, according to Mrs. Brannon. The next morning, Joanna saw the men of war ride toward the West with her flag out in front. On Dec. 20, 1835, the flag was unfurled in front of the American Hotel in Valasco. It flew over the Alamo and, at the first convention of the Texas Congress, it was adopted the flag of the Lone Star as the emblem of the New Republic, concluded Mrs Brannon.

REPORTER-TELEGRAM,

Maybe your flugelhorn is flat, your moosehead looks emaciated or your 1949 encyclopedia is missing all the volumes starting with consonants.

Before commending such an item to the attic or the trash heap, keep in mind the rallying cry of garage sale devotees everywhere: "One person's junk is another person's 'junque."' There's an excellent chance somebody else wants your junk no matter what it is - particularly if he thinks it's a bargain, according to consumer specialist Ginger Johnson.

It is, in fact, a good way for the person staging the sale to make a little money and for shoppers to buy items at a fraction of the original cost as well. But, Johnson said, anyone who holds a garage sale should consider it a great way to clear the attic, first. and a possible way to turn a profit, second. Confusing the two, she said, can not only chase away customers but ruin all the fun. too. "Don't get into staging a garage sale as a way to make a big profit, said Johnson. "If you mark everything up high to try to make a lot of money, you'll find nobody will buy anything and it'll just be a waste of your time.' She offered other pointers on how to stage a successful garage sale:

- For starters, price items at one-fourth or one-half of their original value, depending upon the condition of the merchandise. Be prepared to lower the price if the item just sits or someone who is interested wants to

- Before holding a sale, scout other garage sales in your area to determine price ranges and the kinds of merchandise that seem to be most popular. Try to key your sale to the general income level of the area in which you live.

- If You have extremely valuable items, such as antiques, a garage sale isn't the way to go. For one thing, those who buy at garage sales usually aren't willing to spend a bundle on a single item - although they often will spend nearly as much on a collection of smaller, less expensive merchandise.

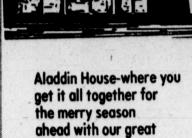

Then, too, according to Johnson, the Internal Revenue Service doesn't require you to pay taxes on proceeds from your garage sale - unless you are paid more for an item than it originally cost you. Otherwise the IRS doesn't consider the money you're paid as profit.

- The best times to hold a garage sale are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

It's smartest to hold a garage sale with a close friend or relative. You'll have a greater variety of items, and one of you can stay with the cash box while the other person can circulate and help customers...

NEW YORK - In a sense transplants have been with us since Adamt donated a rib to the creation of Eve, but the first historical record of transplants of human tissue dates to 800 years before the birth of Christ when Hindu surgeons reconstructed the human taken from the arm.

This method of skin grafting was introduced into western medicine in the 16th Century by the Italian surgeon Gaspare Tagliacozzo, and the foundation for transplantation medicine as we know it today was laid.

One way of supplying suitable organs for transplantation is the distribution of what is called the uniform donor card. Made possible by legislation, called the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act, that was passed in all 50 states, this card nose from skin flaps allows any person to make arrangements in advance to have organs donated after death.

The donor card, when signed by a person 18 or older in the presence of witnesses, is a legal document that will inform your family and medical pesonnel of your wish to be an organ donor. With the card you may specify which organs you wish to donate, leave such decisions to the discretion and needs of a hospital or leave your entire body, medical research. The uniform donor card is an instant will, but it is not permanent. Any time you want to change your mind, all you have to do is destroy the card that you've been carrying in your wallet. During the last year the supply of donor organs has dropped significantly, according to Dr. Khalid Butt, associate professor of surgery at Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn. Part of this, he said, has been due to the success of the movie "Coma," whose subject was illegal traffic in donor organs.

However, Butt said, there is no conflict between the need for donor organs and the life-saving process because very strict criteria for determining death have been set forth. Under these criteria, total lack of response to tests such as ervation laboratories of response to standard stimuli must be present before death can be pronounced. Then, he explained, the medical examiner may ask to reconfirm the physician's decision before removal

tems may occur.

Once death has been pronounced, a special network of experts in the field of transplantation comes into play. When a donor organ becomes available, a special emergency phone num-ber is called to let a transplant team know that the organ is available. Then special surgical teams are mobilized. tissue typing laboratories are notified to begin crossmatching and a computer search is

For instance, he said, young children always get first preference for donor kidneys because they do less well psychologically in dialysis. These are difficult decisions to have to make.' Butt said. "But someone has to make them. And there have been instances when we have received donor organs for which we could find no suitable recipient. ST. LOUIS (AP) — Caesar 7's life on the St. Louis force began with a burglary case. And his life ended while apparently chasing a burglar from his retirement home.

Rosene took the dog to an animal hospital and called the dog's former partner, Officer Edward Meyer. The dog died in Meyer's arms.

Rosene, a local businessman, later found a screwdriver and marks on a door, indicating someone had tried to break in. He also found a piece of torn blue denim material, blood stains, motorcycle tire tracks and dents in a car that had been in the driveway.

More hairdressers snipping to demands of disco music

By DOLORES BARCLAY

MERRICK, N.Y. (AP) - Maximus. The name almost goes unnoticed at the end of a row of shops on busy Merrick Road. But once inside, it's hard not to notice.

Stylists snip to the demands of thundering disco music. Some step in time to the beat as they circle barber's chairs. They're the disco darlings of the shampoo set, blow-drying their way to beauty with a capital B.

And doing so not at a trendy salon on Manhattan's East Side, but at a neighborhood hair parlor in a quiet middle-class suburb.

It's difficult, sometimes, being upbeat, says Richard Calcasola, who opened Maximus eight years ago.

"When they hear you're from Long Island, they think you're some kind of farmer," he says. "But I think I bring more inspiration to hair than some of the other 'in' places. I don't like to show hair styles. I like to show hair

There are many moods at Maximus. Like the King Tut look with a multitude of tiny, precise braids, beads, feathers and jewels. Or the unstyled style. What inspired Calcasola here was a children's Christmas book about a bunch of ragamuffins.

"They had cowlicks and their hair stuck up in all the wrong places."

Voila! A new hair style Old movies also gave the 34-yearold hairdresser ideas. It was "the kind of beauty my mother had in the '30s and '40s," he says. "We went through piles and piles of photos to see how they wore their hair then. There was a certain sex appeal to these women. They weren't liberated. They were always in the kitchen waiting for the men.

Maximus has about 6,000 names on its mailing list and an additional 3,000 customers not on the list. The salon draws clients - men and women from as far away as New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania. Once a husband and wife even flew up from Florida to have their hair done, then flew back the same day. But being a minor celebrity on Merrick Road is not enough for Calcasola. "I would like to have something that's not just a flash in the pan," he says. "I would like to be something that's more permanent."

He talks between snips. His words flow in a steady stream - a fast one at that. He seems to be the only person in the salon who is oblivious to the constant pounding of the Top 40.

More permanent, he says. Like a beauty columnist. Or the personal hair stylist for a very important person. Or a salon in a major department store. Or the hairdresser called for designer shows and full-length movies.

"Five years from now I would like to have earned the respect of the rest of the beauty industry and I'd like to tie in with a company that has national and international clout," he says. "I'll be more effective than ever five years from now and I'd like to be comfortable about myself and enjoy the respect of my peers and people in the industry and not have to promote and sell myself.

"That takes away from things that are more important. After training at a beauty school in Hicksville, N.Y., he sold his car, dove into his savings account and borrowed money from his mother to come up with $10,000 to start Maximus. And with a few additionl loans.

he ultimately spent $200,000 to renovate the store. Richard and his wife, Gerri, painted and built desks.

He has about 3,000 square feet and employs about 42 people, including three cosmeticians, a hostess, a receptionist and senior stylists and cut"We're getting much closer to 57th Street," he said, referring to a part of New York City with glamourous salons. "But sometimes I have to bite the bullet and say that I am on Merrick Road in Merrick, Long Island." Where the beat goes on at a fast and fashionable clin.

Divorce results in several parent-child problems

By the Staff of Family Services of Midland

Q. My son and I have not gotten along since my husband and I separated two years ago. The divorce was just finalized and things are much worse. I am upset that this fifteen year old is not doing well in school, smokes pot and won't talk about it.

A. It is a very common experience to see family relationships continue with difficulty on the heels of a divorce. This could be for a variety of reasons depending on each family. And of course, it is disappointing to a spouse who hoped that with the marital problems over, things would be all right in their lives. Because of this, we generally suggest divorce counseling to our clients as a way of preventing problems like yours. In the process of handling a divorce, it is important to establish comfortable relationships between children and each parent as well as tolerable between former spouses.

Typically, the stress grows between a parent and child left together simply because more occurs between the two, including more opportunities for conflict. Contributing to this stress is the likelihood that all involved didn't "work out" their feelings about one another during the separation. For example, in the relationship between your son and his father, perhaps there needs to be further thinking about the quality and amount of time they see one another, Hopefully, they can get along and you and your son can get along without either of your encouraging your son to resent the other spouse for marital problems. All too often children become caught in the middle of parents' problems and misused in this way to their own detriment.

You also may have continued in a turmoil, ambivalent about your divorce or angry at your spouse. reaching a climax to your feelings as comfortable to talk about dad with you or his feelings for raising a sensitive subject and upsetting you would upset him by arousing guilty feelings. Or, seeing you with leftover anger, if that is present in your case, he could easily assume that he's the person you're angry with and begin to behave as a nemesis to you. A mother will tell a son "You're just like your father, you never listen to me," actually encouraging him to behave that way. Actually, this can be the one spouse's releasing their penned-up anger at the child, rather than at the ex-spouse no longer around. It is easy to think of a husband when looking at a son but this own feelings during the past couple of years, it is possible you were not aware of your child's need during this period. In such a situation, a child may not be receiving the support and understanding he needs and grows angry and expresses his anger by fighting with you over school, friends, drugs, etc. This, too, is a mishandling

At other times a child may, aware of his parent being angry or depressed, act out that parent's feelings. For example, if you as a parent have a hard time permitting youself to express anger and overtly control those feelings, it is not infrequent that the children express a lot of anger and the parent vicariously experiences the

Given that all of this is occurring, then the struggles normal to adolescents would be exaggerated in your son. Your efforst to be needed and helpful to him are being rejected, feeding your own hurt as well as your concern for him. During adolescence, children "need to not need" a parent.

There just aren't that many 6-foot-5 women in this world. And there just aren't that many black volleyball players.

'She is absolutely the finest black athlete in the history of the game,' said Jeep McDonald, a former Olympian who is now a vice president of the United States Volleyball Association.

There may be a time when somebody simply states, "She's absolutely the finest female athlete in the history of the game." Period. You can omit the "black" tag.

Hyman, a 23-year-old Morningside High graduate, understands and has answers for the attention she receives. As for why there aren't more blacks playing the game, she says, "It's a non-paying sport." The answer was short, simple and realistic. She's realistic about a lot of things, including her height. "It doesn't bother me, but it sure seems to bother a whole lot of other people," said myself. It's OK." She does not need to convince the volleyball world of that. "Many experts con-sider her to be the finest spiker - the best on the attack = in the world," said McDonald. Of course, there's a point to all of this. Hyman is one of several women working for the 1980 Olympics at Moscow. "The progress of the women has been absolutely out of sight," said McDonald. "We have gone from prac-tically no position in the world to being ranked No.

Hyman. A tinge of bitterness almost appeared, before an understanding set in.

In a precedent-setting tour, the United States leads in matches.

"We're very happy with the results, but it's difficult to evaluate what we're doing because you saw this big 6-5 lady nobody has ever done you didn't know walking anything like this down the street," she before," said Hyman.

Dream of adventure comes true for teacher

By DENIS D. GRAY

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) -When bosses berate them, their children raise tantrums and the chill seeps through the grimy window panes, many people dream about a blue-green cove in the South Seas with a vacht at anchor, throbbing ports of call, a life of no neckties, bill collectors and "yes, sirs."

Many people dream about it. But Harold Stephens does it.

"I had a house, a wife, children, cars, the whole catastrophe," the handsome, 50-year-old American recalls. Twenty years later Stephens has fulfilled a triad of childhood fantasies: owning a seagoing boat, being a writer and following the trails of such author-adventurers as Joseph Conrad, Somerset Maugham and Jack London.

Stephens has stalked the rare rhinoceros-and met with aborigines in the jungles of Malaysia, escaped from pirates in the Sulu Sea, driven across the Soviet Union in a jeep and dived in the Solomon Islands to find the patrol boat that sank under President Kennedy in World War II.

He has written 10 books and countless articles. And for much of his material he roams Asian waters aboard his 70-foot schooner, "Third Sea," parking it in the shadows of skyscrapers mushrooming in Asian cities or off islands where one can still hunt wild pigs and goats and roast them over fires on deserted beaches.

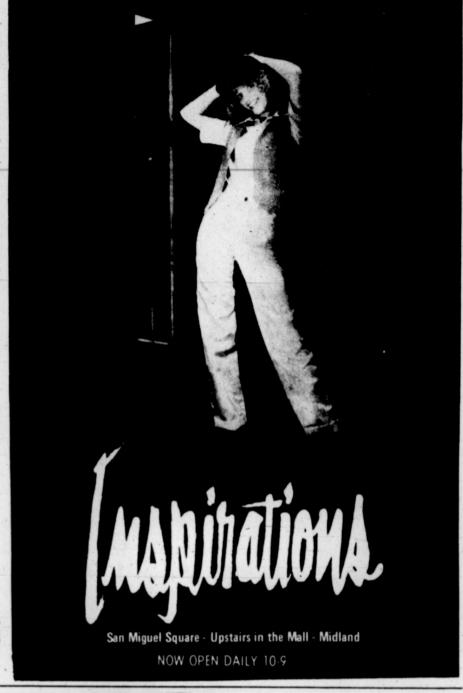

"Adventure isn't really dead," Stephens said in an interview. "Changes come and the old-timers always say: 'You should have been here 10 years ago.' They're right, but when I see a place for the first time it's always exciting.'

Stephens also says the great Asian characters in the mold of Conrad and Maugham - tough, jungle-bound planters and administrators, island traders, rebel souls with a mysterious past - haven't disappeared either although they may be hardef to spot these days. His latest book, "Asian Portraits," describes 15 such people.

"In other times, things moved more slowly so these people stood out," he says. "On a six-week sea voyage you got to know everyone on board. Today, you may be sitting next to the most amazing character on a jet plane but barely have a chance to exchange a few words.'

Stephens' own claim to "characterdom" began in 1959 when, after a divorce from a Philadelphia socialite. he left his job as a private school English teacher in Washington, D.C., soldWmost of his possessions and said goodbye to his two children. He journeyed through South America and later found himself, with $24 in his pocket, in that ultimate of escapist havens — Tahiti.

He became a tour guide, a hand on island trading boats in the South Pacific and a bit actor in several Tahitilocale movies, including "Mutiny on the Bounty" with Marlon Brando.
