Pakistan awaits ruling on Bhutto's appeal

By GENE KRAMER

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The Pakistani Supreme Court may rule this week whether former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto must die on the gallows, bringing another turning point in the Moslem nation's turbulent history.

Bhutto, the flamboyant, 51-year-old politician who ruled the country of 75 million for most of the 1970s, has been waiting for months in the Rawalpindi Central Jail while the Supreme Court decides on his appeal against a murder conviction and death sentence.

His supporters have threatened massive demonstrations if the death sentence is confirmed, and the military government has rounded up 400 to 500 workers for his People's Party. A thousand ranking members of the party have been in "preventive detention" since late last year.

Bhutto continues to enjoy much support among the masses. Most peasants and workers did not follow the long, complicated trial in which he was convicted of ordering a political opponent killed. Nor have they waded through a recent series of government white papers portraying the 1971-77 Bhutto regime as one of tyranny, corruption, crooked elections and waste.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the people are with Bhutto. Even if they shoot us, we will continue to struggle," said Agha Mohammed Akhtar, a Rawalpindi shopkeeper and minor worker in Bhutto's party who says the military government gave him 10 lashes for shouting anti-government, pro-Bhutto slogans last March 18, the day his hero was convicted.

"If he is given death," Akhtar continued, "Pakistan will be converted into another Iran. There will be so much agitation, Pakistan will have a revolution."

Government officials disagree. They claim that if Bhutto's forces still had the strength for large scale agitation, they would have used it during the months the Supreme Court was rehearing the murder case and writing its decision.

Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, the army chief of staff, ousted Bhutto in July 1977 after nationwide violence because of Bhutto's disputed re-election.

The Lahore High Court convicted the political leader and four others of conspiring in 1974 to murder Ahmed Raza Kasuri, a former aide who Bhutto accused of turning against him in a dispute over the loss of East Pakistan, now Bangladesh. Kasuri escaped an ambush by the federal security force but his father was killed.

The supreme court can uphold the conviction and death sentence, reduce the sentence, order a retrial or acquit any or all of the five.

If the death sentence is confirmed, Bhutto and the other defendants would have eight days to petition for clemency. But Gen. Zia, who now is president of the country, has said publicly he would not change the ruling of the Supreme Court.

Friendly governments in Washington, Peking, Europe and the Moslem world reportedly fear that if Bhutto is hanged, it will open another period of extreme instability in Pakistan. There is speculation that Saudi Arabia, the United States and some West European countries are using the leverage they possess because the government needs their help with its serious debt problem.

Signs of puppy love

"I found the dog, he was so hungry, it was like he hadn't eaten in years. He was stuck in a brick," David Lyle explained Sunday when asked about the unusual signs he and his friend had put up on two different corners along Kansas Avenue.

"I heard this sort of crying noise," said David. "And I got the brick off of him and took him to my house and fed him." 8-year-old David noted.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Lyle, he said he found the dog Saturday near his 606 W. Kansas Ave. home.

Then David and a friend, 12-year-old Richard Noel, a fifth grader at Fannin Elementary School, decided to make a sign "advertising" their find.

Said David, a third grader at Hillander Elementary School, Sunday, "I want to find the owner."

"Yeah, me too," echoed Richard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Noel of 604 W. Kansas Ave.

The youngsters weren't content Sunday to wait for their sign to work. They said they knocked on doors in the neighborhood in an effort to locate the owner of the dog, but to no avail.

Asked what they intend to do if they can't locate the owner, the boys said they are "gonna find a home for it."

Slightly warmer day due Tuesday

Sleet and snow drifting into the Midland area early today covered the area and caused the National Weather Service to issue travelers' advisory warnings.

Freezing temperatures, accompanied by freezing rain, sleet or snow, were forecast through tonight. Warnings of hazardous driving conditions were in effect.

Midland police officials said that by 10 a. m. today there had been about 30 traffic accidents as opposed to the usual two or three on an average Monday morning.

A weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport said skies are expected to remain partly cloudy, but temperatures should be a little warmer Tuesday.

Today's high temperature was expected to be in the upper 30s. The low tonight is forecast near 30 degrees. Tuesday's high temperature should be near 40 degrees.

Winds were expected to become light tonight, with winds from 15 to 20 mph and gusty today expected to add considerably to an already low chill factor reading.

Officials said early today that no precipitation is anticipated Tuesday.

An official at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum in far south Midland said early today heavy snow was blowing. Midland College on the opposite end of town reported it was snowing there early today and their rain

Khomeini designates 'transitional' minister

By OTTO C. DOELLING

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini today named 70-year-old oil engineer and veteran opposition politician Mehdi Bazargan as prime minister of a "transitional government" to pave the way for creation of an Islamic republic in Iran.

Khomeini called on the people of Iran to obey the new "revolutionary" government.

The announcement set the stage for a possible showdown with Prime Minister Shahpour Bakhtiar, who has threatened to arrest Khomeini if the religious leader tries to supplant Bakhtiar's sitting government.

"I am appointing Mehdi Bazargan, who is an honest and religious person, as head of a transitional government to appoint his ministers and introduce them to me," Khomeini said at a news conference.

Bazargan, a longtime human rights activist and a Moslem nationalist, was seated next to Khomeini during the meeting with reporters at a Moslem school.

There was a press report earlier today that the Iranian military, which has pledged support to the Bakhtiar government, was reinforcing troops stationed outside and inside some government ministries.

Bakhtiar has warned his foes he would "answer Molotov cocktail for Molotov cocktail" if they carry out Khomeini's threat to launch a holy war to oust him.

Bazargan is believed to have acted as a go-between in secret negotiations between Bakhtiar and the Khomeini camp.

Khomeini says the Bakhtiar government, appointed by the shah, is illegal and vows to abolish the monarchy and establish a religiously oriented republic.

Again Sunday the prime minister refused to step down. But he told the newspaper Ettelaat that Khomeini could create a "shadow cabinet" as British political parties out of power do.

"But if this prime minister-designate starts creating disorders and riots and wants to interfere with the legal order of the country, I will arrest him," Bakhtiar said.

Opposition sources described the negotiations between the two camps as a "tug of war" for the allegiance of the Iran's 430,000-man military, which holds the key to the current power struggle.

The military high command supports Bakhtiar and has hinted at an army takeover if Khomeini's forces attempt to depose the prime minister. But Khomeini's aides claim up to 60 percent of the troops side with them.

Odessa man dies in crash

ODESSA — A 78-year-old Odessa man died in a car-train collision which occurred about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, according to the Odessa Police Department.

James Monroe Turner was east-bound on U.S. Highway 80 when he apparently made a right turn onto Reed Street, crossing the railroad tracks, a police spokesman said. Turner apparently did not see a train coming.

The spokesman said there are no railroad signals at that intersection.

Teng leaves behind 'invitations'

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

SEATTLE (AP) — A weary Teng Hsiao-ping concluded his visit to the United States today, calling it "smooth and successful" and leaving behind an invitation for U.S. leaders to forsake detente with the Soviet Union and join China in an informal alliance against the Russians.

He left behind, as well, an invitation to the American people.

"We also hope that more American friends in all walks of life will come over and see our country. China opens its door wide to all friends alike," the vice premier said at an airport departure ceremony.

His plane left Seattle at 11:30 a. m. Teng once again noted that both the United States and China had stated their opposition to "hegemonism," the word the Chinese use to describe Soviet expansionism. "The Chinese people will do their bit toward opposing global and regional hegemonism," he said.

He said that President Carter, who has accepted an invitation to visit China at an unspecified date, "can be sure of a warm welcome and reception."

Suffering from a cold and fatigue, according to aides, Teng canceled a scheduled breakfast meeting today with Northwest editors and publishers. Fang I, vice premier for science, education and technology, was called on to take Teng's place at the question and answer session.

The Chinese vice premier drew friendly crowds in Atlanta, Houston and Seattle. But long after the smiling little man in the gray Mao suit has left, the Carter administration is likely to be wrestling with the choices Teng has presented.

Interviews with administration officials who traveled with Teng indicate that there is no consensus in the White House or State Department on how to handle some of the specific policy questions that will arise in the wake of Teng's journey.

He has invited the West and Japan to give China science and technology, allowing Peking to modernize. He is also asking the West to join the world's largest country in a common cause against the Soviets — at a time when many in American politics are questioning the wisdom of detente with the Soviets.

During his visit, Teng also invited former President Richard M. Nixon to visit China. Nixon, who has visited China twice before, accepted, although no date was set.

Full trade relations, which most of the administration's China experts want next, will require quick resolution of the problems of frozen assets and property claims.

The United States has certified $196 million in claims against the Chinese for American property seized in the 1949 revolution. It has frozen about $90 million in Chinese assets. And, officials say, the Chinese are linking that problem to the recovery of the valuable Chinese embassy property in Washington, which the Taipei government has "sold" to a pro-Taiwan foundation for $1.

But a solution to the claims question would only open the door to a trickier issue — whether to grant China most-favored nation status.

China has to get this status to be eligible for favorable tariff rates and credit and loan guarantees from the U.S. Export-Import Bank. Without credits, it is unlikely China can afford the American capital and equipment the Chinese want for modernization.

'We have much to learn'—China's Vice Premier Teng

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jim Servatius, executive managing editor of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, was among Texas newsmen attending a breakfast Saturday in Houston in connection with the visit of Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping of the People's Republic of China.

By JIM SERVATIUS
Executive Managing Editor

HOUSTON — "We live in a changing time."

If any statement made here or elsewhere during his U.S. visit by Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping could sum up what the trip means to the U.S., China or the rest of the world, it probably would be that one.

And the diminutive leader of the nation whose people number close to one-fourth of the world's population went all-out to show he not only was a partial instigator, but also a full participant in that change.

Riding during rodeo festivities in a stagecoach, alternately wearing and waving a Texas-size cowboy hat, Teng exuded the charm of a man who obviously feels the time has come for a change in policy that is decades old, and which has kept the most populous nation on earth at arm's length from the most industrially and technically advanced one.

Meeting with invited Southwestern newspaper executives in an exchange in which the vice premier's remarks could not be directly quoted, Teng answered questions with a combination of common candor, Chinese philosophy and diplomatic jargon.

On specific subjects, he said: "Within three to five years, importation of U.S. agricultural products by China will increase significantly, with food grains to be the principle item."

"The export of China's mostly untapped but believed-to-be rich oil reserves will increase year by year, although the amount of petroleum products involved cannot be estimated at this time."

"China's own grain and cash crops have increased in recent years, in a nation so vast each year brings one sort of natural calamity or another, but despite drought and floods, an old Chinese proverb usually holds true — "If darkness prevails in the East, there will be light in the West."

"The Pol Pot regime in Cambodia deserves and will get increased support from China in its battle against the Vietnamese."

"An agreement already has been reached to exchange resident news correspondents with the United States."

"In addition to the embassy in Washington, official Chinese consulates will be established in only two cities, Houston and San Francisco."

"Negotiations with American firms, including the petroleum industry, are progressing smoothly and rapidly, and resulting agreements will help provide the means for payment by China for American goods and technology."

"That no more questions could be asked was due to the time-consuming procedure. Newsmen stated their queries, which were translated into Chinese for the Vice Premier, who responded in Chinese with his answers then interpreted into English.

It was a hospitable session. No questions were asked about purges of past Chinese leaders and bureaucrats in which thousands reportedly were imprisoned or executed, or about the future of Taiwan and China's plans for solving the Taiwanese issue.

Perhaps most of those attending were familiar with Teng's earlier statement in that regard — "If it cannot be resolved in 10 years or in 100 years, then it can be resolved in 1,000 years." The patience of the Chinese is, after all, legendary.

At one point, Teng, whose name has caused some measure of confusion since his American trip began, sparked laughter when asked just how it was spelled and pronounced.

Invitations to the breakfast referred to "Deng Xiaoping" while the Associated Press and other wire services identify him as "Teng Hsiao-ping."

The vice premier explained that China had decided to adopt a standard for Chinese names, including phonetic spelling for use in the Romanized languages. The official spelling of his name in China is now Deng Xiaoping (pronounced Dung-Chou-ping) while most Western nations still refer to him as Teng Hsiao-ping.

And he acknowledged that he himself still feels uncomfortable about it all. Either way, it is a name with which Americans will no doubt become increasingly familiar.

The session, ending on that light note, left many questions both unasked and unanswered, but the reason for Teng's U.S. visit was not one of them. Earlier, he had spelled it out simply and clearly.

"We have much to learn," Teng said in his opening remarks. China has embarked on attaining "The Four Modernizations"—in agriculture, industry, scientific technology and national defense.

It is obvious those in power hope to reach that goal by learning as much as they can from the United States.

gauge was frozen. Snow also was reported early today by Midland weather watchers in far west and far east extremes of the city. Also, Midkiff, Greenwood, Greenview and Warfield area residents reported snow early today. Wilson Banks, aviation director for the city of Midland, said early today that Midland Regional Airport was operating and a few flights had come and gone. He said the airport has not closed down because of the weather. "The runways are in satisfactory shape, and the braking action is the same (satisfactory)," he said. Sunday's high was 49 degrees. The overnight low was 25 degrees. The record high for Sunday is 78 degrees set in 1962. The record low for today is 17 degrees set in 1936. Sunset today will be at 6:26 p.m. Sunrise Tuesday will be at 7:39 a.m. Total precipitation in both the last 24 hours and this month to date is .02 inch. Total precipitation this year to date is .18 inch. Area towns reported snow, slick roads and cold temperatures early today. In Andrews, the temperature dropped to 22 degrees and snow covered the ice-slick streets. In Lamesa, citizens reported light snow, extremely hazardous roads and snow sticking to the ground. Stanton citizens reported snow started coming down about 3 a.m., causing slick roads. Rankin residents reported misting, icy conditions and sleet, and slick roads. Big Lake residents early this morning reported a temperature of 28 degrees, sleet and roads "not quite iced up yet." Big Spring residents reported there were a lot of "fender benders" and snow coming down "like crazy." The sleet started about 2 a.m., said a Big Spring resident, adding, it hadn't let up early by 9 a.m. today. Odessa citizens reported cold temperatures and slick streets early today.

San Angelo, Abilene and Wichita Falls were reporting sleet, snow or freezing drizzle at dawn, and travelers advisories were issued for the northern half of the state. But North Texas did not have a monopoly on the bad weather. Fog was so thick in the Corpus Christi area that visibilities in parts of the Coastal Bend area were reduced to zero, and the National Weather Service issued a travelers advisory for motorists in that area too — as well as for ships at sea. The National Weather Service said even usually sunny El Paso was threatened with the possibility of snow later today.

January was unusually cold month

If most Midlanders thought January was unusually cold, they were right. Last month came close to being the coldest month on record with an average temperature of 35.9 degrees. The record January was in 1949 when the month averaged 35.5 degrees, according to a monthly summary by the National Weather Service. Even though the month as a whole missed making the record book, January 1979 will be remembered by many as a chilly 31 days. The average high for the month was 46.6 degrees — 11.2 degrees below normal. The average low temperature for the month was a nippy 25.1 degrees, 4.3 degrees below the normal. Although temperatures ranged from an almost balmy 72 on Jan. 12 to flat zero on the second day of the month, there were five days when the mercury never rose above freezing and 25 days when it dipped to 32 or lower sometime during the day. The three days with measurable rainfall only left .16 inch of moisture behind. .43 inch below a normal January. The wind helped add that touch of winter to the January temperatures. The average wind speed for the month was only 12.3 mph, but the National Weather Service measured a peak wind gust of 58 mph on Jan. 23. The sun shone in clear skies only five days during January, while the weatherman called it cloudy 19 days and partly cloudy seven.

More than one Midlander began with this view of oncoming traffic today prior to completely clearing their cars' windshields. Removing a thick coat of ice from vehicle windows was standard work for anyone who left a car outside overnight. The time-consuming chore — and instantly refreezing moisture — caused many to be late to work as a snow and ice storm swept across the Permian Basin and other parts of West Texas. (Staff Photo by Mike Kardos)

Two bodies found in abandoned well; Charges to be filed today

MCKINNEY, Texas (AP) — Authorities said charges would be filed today in connection with the deaths of two persons whose skeletal remains were hauled from an abandoned water well. Lt. John Thompson of the Collin County sheriff's department said officers recovered a body late Saturday thought to be that of a 75-year-old McKinney man missing since May 3, 1978. And he said early Sunday they recovered another body thought to be a 51-year-old McKinney woman missing since June, 1977. Officers have tentatively identified the dead man as Jess Leroy Lovelady.

Officers found the woman's remains several feet deeper than the man's and near the bottom of the well. She has been tentatively identified as Ruth McCarty. A purse with her identification was found in the bottom of the well, said Collin County Chief Deputy Royce Abbott. Officers said the well was about four miles east of McKinney. "Right now, we believe the motive (for the slayings) was robbery," said Thompson.

Officers found the body with help of a map supplied by Billy Battenfield, 25, of McKinney, now serving a 50-year prison term in New Mexico for murder. Thompson said. Battenfield told officers several weeks ago he had "reliable information" Lovelady's body — and others — could be found in an abandoned water well in Collin County.

Officers flew to New Mexico Thursday to try to pinpoint the location of the well more precisely and returned Saturday. "He drew us a map. There was supposed to be a house burned down close to the well. We flew back Saturday, got here at 2:30 in the afternoon and went immediately out to the location and found the area," Thompson said. Officers said the house was destroyed by fire about five days after Lovelady was last reported seen alive. It had been vacant at the time. Several feet of debris separated the two bodies. The top part of the well was dry, but officers hit water after finding the first body. They used buckets to lift out the water and debris in getting to the woman's remains. "All we found of her, really, was a skull and bones and clothing. However, we did find a purse that indicated who she was," Thompson added.

Doctor says youth not 'doomed to blindness'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — David Riojas got his chance to be ballboy for the Harlem Globetrotters after a friend said he was going blind. But a doctor says the 9-year-old is "not doomed to blindness."

The doctor said the boy's eye disease, uveitis, is not as serious as his family and friends first thought. "There are many things that could be done to maintain vision," said the doctor, who asked not to be identified. "There are many new surgical procedures. This is not a disease where someone is doomed to blindness, by any means."

David's best friend, with the permission of his pal's mother, wrote to the San Antonio News last week, urging that David, who is a star with a local YMCA basketball team, be made ballboy for the Globetrotters during exhibition appearances here Saturday.

"The boys on the other teams make fun of him a lot and sometimes he cries," 9-year-old William Lintinich Jr., scrawled in pencil on notebook paper. "He loves basketball. Please let him be a ballboy for the Globetrotters because he may never see them again."

Grace Riojas had said she understood her child eventually would go blind from the disease, which causes inflammation of the iris. David already has limited vision due to a cataract in his left eye. "She was mistaken," said the doctor, who helped perform surgery to correct a problem in the boy's right eye caused by uveitis. "It's not the hopeless situation she has painted it to be."

The doctor said there is only a slight chance that someone stricken by uveitis would go completely blind. The disease, he added, is puzzling and can recur without warning. David was told Thursday — the day he learned he would be ballboy for the Globetrotters — that doctors would not perform surgery to remove the cataract in David's left eye. However, the physician said surgery eventually would be possible. Meanwhile, David sported a big grin Saturday as he sat on the bench with his idols from the Globetrotters.

Prison controversy may reopen

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An old controversy over locating a new prison in the Lower Rio Grande Valley could come to life again in the Texas Senate this week. Sen. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, served notice he will try to bring up his bill (S.B. 245), enabling the prison system to sell its Blue Ridge farm and spend the money on land elsewhere in the state.

Sen. Raul Longoria, D-Edinburg, said he will attempt by amendment to limit the bill unless he receives assurances from prison officials they would not try again to put a prison close to Edinburg. Without such assurances, Longoria said Saturday, he will offer an amendment prohibiting construction of a prison in Hidalgo County west of U.S. 281.

Moore's bill would drop a legal requirement that any proceeds from selling the Blue Ridge farm in Harris

County be used to buy land within a 75-mile radius of Huntsville. It also would enable the prison system to swap the farm for other land. The bill would clear away the legal impediments cited by former Attorney General John Hill, an opinion that blocked the $8 million purchase of 6,740 acres near Edinburg last April. Edinburg city officials opposed purchase of the land, saying they do not want their city to become a prison town.

Longoria said prison board member Joe La Mantia of McAllen, who heads the site selection committee, had "told me they will not recognize any place where the local people don't want a prison."

He said he wants further assurances from W.J. Estelle, director of the Texas Department of Corrections. An assistant director, Jack Kyle, told the Senate Finance Committee last week the department still wants the Edinburg site.

"The Edinburg Independent School District is adamantly against it because it would take all that good farm land from the tax rolls. That would mean a lot of money taken from the school district," Longoria said. Citizens United For Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE), a prison lobby, opposes Moore's bill, saying it fears the proposed Valley site would be purchased if the bill passes. CURE opposes prison construction in general because, it says, the money could be better spent on community-based corrections.

Some also find objectionable the fact that the prison owners of the land bought it from Wallace Groves, reportedly an associate of organized crime figure Meyer Lansky.

Longoria said he does not oppose having a new prison elsewhere in his district, because it would provide jobs for the unemployed. He said sites are available in Willacy and Starr counties.

Lubbock trucker dies in Utah

GREEN RIVER, Utah (AP) — A Lubbock, Tex., truck driver was killed Sunday morning when the brakes on his Digby Freight Lines truck failed at the top of Spotted Wolf Pass, the Utah Highway Patrol reported. The victim was identified as 28-year-old Dennis Craig Trece. Authorities said his rig went off the road on Interstate 70 about 14 miles west of Green River.

Carter begins China campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will reject any congressional resolution on the security of Taiwan if it conflicts with the new policy toward mainland China, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said today. "It would be inappropriate for the president to approve any legislation inconsistent with the normalization of relations with the People's Republic of China," Christopher told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Opening a campaign to obtain congressional approval of the new China policy, Christopher was questioned harshly by committee members skeptical of assurances that Taiwan is safe from military and economic threats by Peking. Committee Chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the panel will approve some declaration of U.S. intent to come to Taiwan's defense if such treats occur. In announcing the new relationship with China in December, Carter said it rests on the assumption Peking would make a peaceful resolution of its historical differences with Taiwan. In exchange, Christopher said, Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping agreed not to contradict the U.S. statement.

The State Department official pledged that the United States will continue to have firm economic ties to sell defensive weapons to Nationalist government on Taiwan. "The picture I want to give you is one of relations continuing without interruption, but on an unofficial basis through non-governmental means," Christopher said.

U.S. relations with Taiwan are to be handled by a private American Institute, but Christopher said there is a chance that Taiwan may refuse to establish a similar organization to continue its ties with the United States. If that happens, he said, "then the picture I have painted becomes very clear indeed, and the prospect of a hiatus in our relations ... becomes real."

Church said White House proposals for insuring the security of Taiwan are "woefully inadequate to the task, ambiguous in language and uncertain in tone." He said Congress must assure the 17 million Taiwanese "that we are not abandoning them."

Christopher and Defense Secretary Harold Brown said emphatically that Peking has neither the intention nor the capability to launch an invasion of Taiwan. "Militarily," Brown said, "China is not now capable of mounting a successful combined air and sea invasion of Taiwan."

He said the principal military worries of the Peking government are forces of the Soviet Union arrayed across China's northern border plus the Soviet-backed Vietnamese government to the south.

The committee also summoned Leonard Woodcock, Carter's nominee as ambassador to Peking. The appearance of the former United Auto Workers union president is expected to give opponents of Carter's policy another forum for their views.

Rioters attack police in India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Police fired on rioters who attacked them with rocks and homemade explosives today in the second day of violent clashes in the northern Indian border town of Poonch, the United News of India reported.

The news agency said five people were wounded today and more than 71 were hurt Sunday, including 50 policemen.

Authorities clamped a curfew on the town, 360 miles northwest of New Delhi.

According to the UNI report, police opened fire today after teargas failed to disperse the mob, which was trying to torch government offices.

The rioting apparently was triggered by the arrests Saturday night of four student leaders. They were charged with attacking an official of the Kashmir state government and disrupting a public meeting in Poonch last month.

Judge strikes down results of elections

CRYSTAL CITY, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has struck down the results of five 1978 Zavala County elections in which La Raza Unida candidates won over Democrats. The judge said he found evidence of irregularities and fraud, and ordered new elections for April 7.

State District Judge Troy Williams also ruled Zavala County Judge Jose Angel Gutierrez, a founder of Raza Unida, was in contempt of court for allowing one of the contested winners to participate part in a Jan. 8 commissioner's court meeting in violation of a court order.

The judge found the new commissioner, Alejandro Perez, and his attorney in contempt of court in connection with the meeting.

The three will be sentenced Wednesday.

Texas farmers lead tractorcade assault on Washington's streets

By MILLER BONNER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid the crackling of CB radios beneath a clear, star-lit sky, Texas farmers led the American Agriculture Movement assault this morning on the nation's capital.

Cotton farmer Clifford Hamilton of Shallowater rolled his John Deere onto a bridge spanning the Potomac at 6:01 a.m. leading a 25-mile-long caravan of blinking amber lights. Hamilton, who left home on Jan. 12, completed his 2,100-mile trek covering the final 28 miles at a 12 mph pace.

"I tell ya, it feels good," cackled Hamilton over his CB and hundreds of farmers following him cheered lustily into their radio microphones.

Hamilton proceeded to the Agriculture Department and within 15 minutes, all six lanes were filled with tractors, trucks, recreational vehicles and cars.

Texas tractors led two of the five tractorcades that converged on Washington. The disgruntled farmers say they will congest until the Congress and the Carter Administration agree to fully implement the current farm bill. Such a move would raise loan limits and government-supported prices.

Gerald McCathern, the AAM national wagonmaster from Hereford, said the activity this morning "exceeded all our expectations and with tractors from Illinois, Mississippi, Texas — just all over the country — should show the American people that this is a national problem. Individual farmers aren't having problems. All farmers are having problems."

When asked how long the tractors will congest Washington streets, McCathern said: "It may take us two or three days just to get them unraveled. I know my tractor is sitting in the middle of the street, but I can't move it."

McCathern said the only accident that he knew of had occurred on a Virginia highway when an "impatient consumer who must not like to eat got in front of one of our tractors...I think we had a little fender-bender."

Farmers flew a red, white and blue AAM flag from atop the Agriculture Department and plastered windows and walls with posters of Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland — with a target superimposed across his face.

Scores of city police and federal security guards watched helplessly as the farmers rolled their diesel monsters to a stop. Officers offered no opposition and joked with farmers in the street.

Commuters had been warned to leave early for work and to use mass transit systems or carpools.

Many were caught in the line of more than 4,500 tractors and an equal number of support vehicles.

Although the parade permits specify Capitol Hill, AAM leaders sent tractors to the White House and Capitol Hill also.

"They may be able to haul off a tractor or two but they can't haul off a thousand of 'em," said Plainview farmer Marvin Meeke, the wagonmaster of the AAM tractorcade that left Abilene on Jan. 15.

McCathern, the AAM's national wagonmaster, urged the tractor drivers to mind their manners while en route to Washington this morning.

"We don't want to give the Virginia police any problems," he said. "We want to make sure we get across the bridges (into Washington)...That's where the people are that have made the bad decisions."

After arriving, the AAM will stage a rally on the steps of the Capitol and begin lobbying members.

"We don't want to see you in the coffee shops...get out and talk to the congressmen and tell them what we need," McCathern told a group of West Texans. "And don't spend a lot of time with the congressmen we know already back us. Go see the ones we have still have to convince."

The AAM wants Congress to pass a resolution urging the president to fully implement the current farm bill. Such a move would raise loan limits and government-supported prices.

Head of 'smuggling' ring shot to death

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Hans Ulrich Lenzlinger, admitted head of a professional ring that helped East Europeans flee to the West, was found fatally shot in his apartment-office in a Zurich suburb today, police said.

The 50-year-old Swiss businessman, who claimed to have aided hundreds of East Germans, Czechoslovaks and other East Europeans cross secretly into the West during his seven-year career, was repeatedly assailed in East European media as a "mastermind of slave trade."

Hance, Tower among the many who faced delays getting to work

WASHINGTON — The arrival of 35,000 farmers in Washington to demonstrate for increased loan rates caused the people they were there to see some problems getting to work today.

A thousand to 1,500 West Texas farmers are among the estimated 35,000 who tied up traffic in Washington today, Rep. Kent Hance told The Reporter-Telegram today.

Hance said he left his residence for the Capitol at 5:30 a.m. today and the normal 25-minute trip took about 45 minutes, as he made his way through the traffic jam caused by the demonstrating farmers.

Some of his Washington office workers who left later still weren't there at 10 a.m. Eastern time. "We may not see them for two or three days," Hance quipped. "It's going to be hours and hours."

Sen. John Tower was temporarily blocked by tractors on Constitution Avenue, an aide said today.

The senator noticed signs proclaiming the group to be from Texas. The aide said Tower got out of his car and asked, "Can you let me through so I can be at work to greet you when you get there?"

The farmers obliged by letting the senator through before closing ranks again, according to the assistant.

Actually, Tower isn't scheduled to meet with the Texas delegation until Tuesday.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen got to the Capitol without any trouble — on the subway. A spokesman for his office said he uses the subway occasionally, anyway.

Bentsen, too, is scheduled to meet with Texas farmers Tuesday.

Hance, who represents the 19th Congressional District, which includes Midland, already has met with Texas farmers who made the trip.

He said today he thinks the members of the American Agriculture Movement will be more effective in their lobbying efforts this year than they were last year.

"I think they understand more about what they're fighting and the political process," Hance said.

Lee team places 3rd in DECA meet

SAN ANGELO — Midland High School's Robert Holgin and Eddie Grady of Andrews were among seven first-place winners in the food marketing category.

Jane Cline of Big Spring was among first-place winners in the food services division.

In the petroleum division, Mary Bolger of Lee High School was among the first-place winners.

Also at the contest, area officers were chosen. Nita Giles of Lee High was elected president.

The congressman said the farmers are asking the president to administratively raise the farm loan level, as he is empowered to do under the 1977 farm bill.

From Congress, the farm group is seeking a joint resolution calling on the administration to raise the loan level, Hance said.

But it's too early to predict how successful they will be, he said, since the bulk of the group only arrived Friday.

"I've met with the ones from Texas. The ones from our area are acting in a very positive manner," Hance said.

South Africa's gold-for-fuel deal keeps oil flowing

By JOHN EDLIN

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South African promises of gold for oil are reportedly keeping open vital supplies cut this month by the country's traditional oil supplier, Iran.

South African salesmen-diplomats have been conferring secretly with oil producing nations and multinational marketing giants in a bid to replace 90 percent of the fuel imports previously supplied by Iran.

And, according to government and industry sources, South Africa has averted an immediate fuel crisis by securing guarantees of oil shipments from undisclosed sources — among them virulent critics of the white minority government's race segregationist policies.

Officially, the government refuses to say where its oil is flowing from. But Western diplomats here believe that gold-for-fuel deals were struck with Saudi Arabia and other conservative Middle East states "at a high premium."

South Africa produces more than two thirds of the world's gold.

The replacement oil supplies come at higher than world prices.

Still, a special government commission set up this month to recommend ways of saving fuel and seeking fresh supplies seems likely to fall short of recommending fuel rationing.

Instead, according to industry sources, the commission is expected to urge voluntary conservation through reduced gas station hours, speed limits and industrial switches to other energy sources.

"Rationing would be a blow to morale, already at a low ebb," a South African newspaper editor who would not be identified said. He was referring to United Nations threats to impose economic boycotts on Africa's richest and most industrialized nation.

Such boycotts would inevitably include oil.

The oil bill is expected to burgeon this year, fueled by the latest oil producers' price increase, the extra "blackmail" prices South Africa says it must now pay on spot markets, and the country's desire to stockpile for emergencies provoked by the U.N. threat.

Third World and Communist nations in the U.N. have stepped up their demands for economic sanctions against South Africa because of its apartheid policies, decreeing racial separation.

Iran earlier this month heeded the call, announcing a halt of all oil shipments to South Africa at the same time as it said shipments to Israel would end. But while South Africa had traditionally imported most of its crude oil from Iran, it had already become accustomed to curtailed Iranian supplies during three months of strikes and civil unrest in that country. Already, tankers were arriving in South African ports from other countries.

"As long as crude oil fetches such a high price you will always have international jobbers," the independent daily Johannesburg Star said recently, referring to producers and marketing multinationals that might sell to the highest bidder.

Meanwhile, South Africa has stepped up its so-far fruitless search for offshore oil, hiring a second rig from the North Sea fields.

Figures for imports, reserves and expenditures for fuel are kept secret, but authoritative estimates of imports range from 350,000 to 400,000 barrels per day, at a total annual cost of $1.5 to $2.2 billion a year. South Africa is also known to have at least 18 months' worth of reserves stored in played-out mines.

But the country produces only about 10 percent of its oil needs — fuel converted from coal at a state-owned plant near Johannesburg.

Now the government plans two more such plants, and experts say that such plants can produce a third of the country's needs by 1984.

South African leaders are not so much worried that they won't be able to maintain supplies from abroad, as they are concerned that the cost will prune balance of payments surpluses, braking the economy.

But many South Africans like to point out that any major oil crisis would bring suffering to more people than the 4.3 million whites who wield political power over the voteless 19 million blacks.

They say critical shortages would disrupt foreign-owned businesses and industries, toss hundreds of thousands of South African blacks and migrant black workers from poor neighboring countries out of jobs, and damage the economies of landlocked Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland, and Zambia, which rely on South Africa for fuel shipments.

"If we come under pressure," one oil company executive said, "we'd be fools not to pass those pressures onto client states."

Embattled Rhodesia, South Africa's northern neighbor, would also suffer. "Oil is the Achilles heel of Southern Africa," white Prime Minister Ian D. Smith said recently, following renewed U.N. demands for South Africa to stop sending fuel to that country. Rhodesia gets all of its oil from South Africa.

In addition to the oil, South Africa is losing large export sales to Iran — $115 million dollars worth last year. South African exporters, alarmed at the Tehran government's apparently hostile attitude, have lately halted shipments including 3,000 German-designed BMW cars worth $35 million, 1,500 tons of frozen chickens worth $1 million, and a shipload of flour and grain.

South Africa has one hold over Iran, whose traditional strong economic ties with South Africa date back to World War II, when the Iranian royal family stayed in exile here.

Iran has a 17.5 percent stake — worth millions of dollars — in a state-owned refinery for Iranian crude oil. And South Africa, which boasts it has never nationalized or seized shares in foreign-owned interests, has yet to decide the fate of the Iranian stake.

New Look supports theory that West Coast is different

By TOM REDBURN
The Los Angeles Times

If you've always suspected that the West Coast is a different country from the rest of the United States, then the new Look magazine won't surprise you.

Robert Gutwillig, editor of the revived photojournalism magazine, thinks the West is different, too.

This week Look hits the stands after seven years absence, but while the rest of the nation will see Nelson Rockefeller on the cover, readers west of the Rockies will get Patty Hearst instead.

It is the first time a magazine has offered two different covers for the same issue, and Gutwillig is candid about his reasons. "I'm doing it so people like you will write about it and give us some much needed publicity," he said in a telephone interview.

The editor arrived at his decision after what he jokingly calls a detailed scientific survey. "I talked to everyone and his mother-in-law," Gutwillig said, "and to my astonishment I learned that neither Rockefeller nor Patty Hearst was a truly national story."

Although the content of the magazine will not vary — the Hearst and Rockefeller articles will appear in all editions — the cover can be crucial in how well it sells, Gutwillig said. "This magazine is aimed at middle class, middle America. It's not the kind of thing my friends at Elaine's (a New York literary watering hole) will want to buy, but I hope it will be bought by women at their supermarket and then brought home to the family."

For the first issue, Look's publishers are distributing 1.2 million copies — 800,000 with the Rockefeller cover and 400,000 with the Hearst photo. Since the magazine is being printed at three plants — in Hartford, Conn., Detroit and Seattle — it turned out to be easy to offer different covers by having the West Coast printer do one cover and the other two do another.

The new Look won't be published by the same firm, Cowles Communications Inc., which brought out the old Look and finally folded it in 1971 after losing $5 million. In November 1977, Daniel Filippacchi, who publishes Paris Match, and three co-investors spent $250,000 to acquire the Look name. According to Gutwillig, they have raised nearly $25 million to see the magazine through the inevitable money-losing years. "This is a very, very high risk project," he said. "Our plan calls for losing money the first three years, breaking even the fourth, and finally moving into the black the fifth year."

Look, like its predecessor, will be a biweekly, large-format magazine, but Gutwillig sees it "as more like the publication that Life used to be."

Although Look will be heavily devoted to photos, it will aim at a more sophisticated audience than Time Inc.'s People magazine, whose content is disparaged by some as fodder to be consumed during the commercial breaks on Happy Days or Mork and Mindy. The Rockefeller story, for example, was written by Peter Collier, who co-authored a highly respected biography of the Rockefeller family, and it will fill 12 pages.

But Gutwillig, who displays a tinge of envy at People's success, admits he will rely on some of its techniques. "As much as possible, we're going to base our cover stories on strong, identifiable personalities which people can relate to in their own lives."

Will Look continue to treat the nation as if it were divided into two parts, separate and unequally interested in different "identifiable personalities"? "I don't plan a split cover very often," says Gutwillig, "but I sure won't rule it out when the news of the week calls for it."

Thousands of gold bars in the South African Reserve Bank in Pretoria are checked by Marlene van Nierk. With the Shah of Iran out of power, Iran has halted oil shipments to South Africa. But South Africa has a resource of its own — chiefly gold. South Africa reportedly has been using gold to keep the oil flowing from sources it will not name. (AP Laserphoto)

Could U.S. have altered situation in Vietnam?

By DENIS D. GRAY

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Could the United States, by taking a softer line toward Hanoi after the Indochina War, have helped Vietnam become the "Yugoslavia of Asia" and kept it from throwing in with the Soviet Union and invading Cambodia? The question draws two contrasting viewpoints from Asian and Western officials and analysts. The debate centers on the thinking of one of the world's most remarkably durable leadership groups: Hanoi's Politburo.

A recent article in the respected journal Far Eastern Economic Review, titled "Carter's Neglect, Moscow's Victory," argued that "Washington's prolonged refusal to respond to Vietnam's overtures led to a gradual weakening of the moderates within the Hanoi leadership and a strengthening of the hard-liners who are now in effect running the country."

Other informed observers also claim post-war Vietnam wanted to chart an independent course among the big powers and open itself up to Western aid, trade and influence in order to modernize its society.

Proponents of this viewpoint note Hanoi offered a liberal investment code for foreign businesses, dropped its heavy-handed propaganda attacks, backed down on earlier demands for post-war reparations from Washington and told Western visitors Vietnam had not gone through 30 years of fighting foreign invaders just to fall into the hands of the Soviet Union.

This liberal outlook, the argument goes, was the work of Hanoi's moderates, such as Premier Pham Van Dong, who wanted to build a strong but independent communist nation similar to Yugoslavia.

But Hanoi did not receive political or economic help from the United States or enough reconstruction aid from the West as a whole. When combined with the mounting border war with Cambodia and the new hostility with China, this forced Vietnam to align itself with the only country that could solve some of its problems, the Soviet Union.

The hard-liners in the Politburo — Defense Minister Vo Nguyen Giap, Chief of Staff Van Tien Dung and party First Secretary Le Duan — edged out the moderates. Confrontation with China and the invasion of Cambodia late last year followed.

The opposing theory argues that the Vietnamese communist leadership is highly unified, ideologically rigid and that — in the words of one Western diplomat — all an infusion of American aid would have done was "to save the Soviet taxpayer some money."

One veteran diplomat based in Hanoi said Vietnam now is simply playing out the policies set in motion by the late North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh, who vowed to unify North and South Vietnam, make it a successful socialist society and bring all of Indochina, which also includes Laos and Cambodia, under Hanoi's aegis.

"We've just seen his last policy come to fruition" with the invasion of Cambodia, said this diplomat, who like others interviewed asked not to be identified. "Uncle Ho taught his followers to put unity of leadership above all. There could be differences of opinion but once a decision was made all had to stick to it."

Some senior diplomats in Hanoi, as well as other knowledgeable diplomats in the region, believe Hanoi's leadership displays ideological zeal and a genuine respect for Soviet power, which it sees as on the rise worldwide.

But little is known about the inner workings of the 14-member Politburo, which runs the Communist Party and thus the country.

At its core are aging men who forged Vietnam's communist revolution, fighting the Japanese in World War II, defeating the French and unifying the country after defeating South Vietnam and the United States.

They have been together and at the top since the 1930s, a rare thing in the political history of a communist or any other country.

Authorities raid Travis County 'bingo parlor; Charges filed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)

— A law enforcement officer took a microphone away from a bingo number caller and announced to 1,800 players that authorities were raiding the alleged illegal gambling promotion. Sheriff Raymond Frank and more than 30 other officers swooped in on the operation at Adelante's Charity Hall in southeast Travis County and seized $20,000 in cash.

Thirty-one employees and two persons identified as managers of what authorities said was a $5 million operation were charged with felony gambling promotion. All the players were allowed to leave.

Officers said the players were required to buy a minimum of five bingo cards at $1 each in order to play.

Guadalupe Chapa, named in a warrant charging gambling promotion and keeping a gambling place, said later he was surprised by the raid.

He said the operation distributes $7,000 to $9,000 in prizes each night. The warrants for Chapa, Cypriano Chapa of Seguin and Justino Gutierrez also alleged operation of an organized crime activity, since the alleged operation involved more than five persons.

Players said the money received from bingo games had been distributed to food programs for the elderly, scholarships, a city police organization and Christmas toy distribution for children.

But Lolita Parvin, an assistant to Frank, said, "So far, intelligence has turned up no such evidence." Sponsors of the game are listed on a flyer as Adelante Enterprises, Inc., Texas Senior Citizens FEI, CARE Enterprises, Inc., Association of Citizens United, Inc. and Knights of Texas, Inc.

Catalogs offer new seed types

AP Newsfeatures The seed catalogs have been arriving, with fascinating new introductions and old faithful varieties bringing spring closer — at least in the winter imagination.

Don't forget you can plant some things, including peas, onions, spinach and lettuce, almost as soon as the soil may be worked. Others must wait until the soil becomes warm. Choose your varieties carefully and you can have a range of maturity from one planting, different forms or color for variety and, above all, good eating quality.

For a more successful garden, select disease-resistant, hardy, slow-bolting types.

Here are some 1979 introductions: From Park Seed, Greenwood, S.C.: Squash Gourmet Globe, hybrid, an original Guatemalan Indian squash with a nut-like flavor, altered from vining type to round-bush zucchini type, prolifically producing fruit 4 inches across; dark green with light green markings, ripening 50 days after sowing. Good for small gardens. Ideal for frying, stuffing, steaming and salads.

Pepper Sweet Banana Whopper, hybrid, 48 days to maturity, vigorous grower, compact, sturdy plants, thick wall, sweet red fruit.

Squash Greenwhopper hybrid, zucchini type, large plant with dark green waxy fruit, maturing in 48 days.

Portulaca Afternoon Daylight, dwarf, spreading habit (5 inches) with 1 1/2-inch double flowers in most colors but not blue.

Jolly Red Giant Geranium, large flowering, early developed from a Guatemalan strain; also Appleblossom Pink and Jolly Red Wink, with large flower heads.

Burpee, Warminster, Pa., Space-master Cucumber, lots of cukes in small space. A bush type suitable for tubs or other large containers on sunny patios, terraces and roof-tops.

Polynesian culture kept

LAIE, Hawaii (AP) — More than a million tourists visited the Polynesian Cultural Center last year and, though they went to be entertained, most came away with a new understanding of the island people.

Set on 42 acres in Laie on Oahu, about 40 miles from Honolulu, the center's seven villages re-create the cultures that once dominated the lives of islanders on Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand, Samoa, Tahiti, the Marquesas Islands and Tonga.

Coconut palms and flamboyant shrubs, the beating of drums, musical chants and the sound of conch shells add to the ambience. To simulate the isolation of an island, waterways fed by natural artesian wells cut around the villages, which are connected by bridges.

Tourists have a choice of three ways of touring the villages: a land trip in an open-sided tram, which stops at each "island," where a guide tells the story of the village; a guided half-hour canoe ride via canal; a land trip on foot, with or without a guide, which offers the closest involvement with the cultures the islands portray.

As visitors enter each village, they are greeted by islanders with traditional salutations from their respective homelands — "aloha," "bula vinaka," "talofa" and "male-e-lelei."

Tourists are encouraged to take part in demonstrations of food preparation, arts, crafts, games, music and dances given in the village homes. Many don grass skirts to learn the Tahitian otea; some get involved in stickball and others with the native Hawaiian checker game, konane.

Craftsmen from the islands represented, while teaching students who work at the center, show tourists how to weave mats, baskets, fans and toy birds from the leaves of the coconut palm; the Hawaiian way to make quilts; how the Fijians make pottery, and how to split a coconut for milk.

Cooking demonstrations show how islanders use native foods such as taro, breadfruit, bananas and coconuts, fresh-caught fish, chickens and pigs, and how to make poi. For serious sampling of Polynesian dishes, visitors go to one of the two restaurants at the center.

In addition to the music and dancing at various villages, the center presents three shows daily. A noon event combines rhythm and humor as it traces the evolution of island music and dancing, and describes the influence of the British and Americans on island history.

DEAR ABBY Applying for a job? Bring your lawyer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to K in Pontiac had to be your biggest blunder of 1978. K, a young married woman, was asked during a job interview, "Do you plan to start a family in the near future?" K was flabbergasted. She then asked you, Dear Abby, the great oracle, "Is that a proper question to ask a female applicant, or am I getting all shook up about a legitimate request for information?"

Your naive response: "When a new employee is hired, the employer makes an investment in time and training, and therefore has the right to know if the applicant plans to have a family or not—and, if so, when."

Abby, that question was not only improper, it was ILLEGAL. Please set the record straight.—J. IN SIOUX CITY, IOWA

DEAR J.: I did set the record straight in my column of Jan. 15, but I'm still being assaulted by a hail of mail! There's a lesson to be learned here: That which is logical is not always legal.

Read on: DEAR ABBY: Concerning the woman who was asked in a job interview if she planned to have a baby in the future: It is unlawful for a job interviewer to ask that question. The following are some do's and don'ts for questions during employment interviews. Bear in mind that some questions may not be asked prior to hiring because the law forbids them. Other questions, while not forbidden by law, might later be the basis for legal action.

Questions that should not be asked:

What is your age? What is your date of birth?

Do you have children? If so, how old are they? What is your race?

What church do you attend?

Are you married, divorced, separated, widowed or single?

Have you ever been arrested?

What kind of military discharge do you have?

What clubs or organizations do you belong to?

Do you rent or own your own home?

What does your wife (husband) do?

Who lives in your household?

Have your wages ever been attached or garnished?

What was your maiden name (in interviews with female applicants)?

Questions that may be asked:

How many years experience do you have?

(To a housewife) Why do you want to return to work?

What are your career goals?

Who have been your prior employers?

Why did you leave your previous job?

Are you a veteran? Did the military provide you with job related experience?

If you have no phone, where can we reach you?

What languages do you speak fluently?

Can you do extensive traveling?

Who recommended you to us?

What did you like, or dislike, about your previous jobs?

What is your educational background?

What schools did you attend?

What do you think are your strong points? Weaknesses?

Do you have any objection if we check with your former employer for references?

Abby, please print this. I am sure many of your readers will find it helpful.—JOAN T. IN PHOENIX

DEAR JOAN: Thanks for a letter that is helpful not only to my readers—but also to this writer.

Mrs. Earl Chriesman marks 80th birthday with party

Mrs. Earl Chriesman was honored Jan. 27 with an open house celebrating her 80th birthday.

Her sons-in-law and daughters were hosts for the party held in the hospitality rooms of Trinity Towers. They are Mr. and Mrs. Rod Balke of Arlington and Mr. and Mrs. L.L. Stokes of Big Lake. Five of her six grandchildren also were present.

Mrs. Chriesman is a resident of Reagan County for 50 years before she and her husband moved to Trinity Towers in 1976.

A three-tiered birthday cake decorated with yellow roses was served from a table laid with a white cutwork cloth and centered with an arrangement of yellow spring flowers in a silver basket. Yellow spring flowers were used throughout the party rooms.

Mrs. Prule Garrett of San Angelo and Lancel Balke of Arlington registered the guests. Mrs. Oscar Willemont of Littlefield and Lori Balke of Arlington served the cake, while Mrs. Paul Mauldin of Lubbock, Mrs. C. A. Fairbanks of San Angelo, Mrs. Ron Pellum of Mesa, Ariz., and Lynda Stokes poured punch and coffee.

Others in the house party were Mrs. D. N. McWilliams of Odessa, Mrs. Herb Lamb of Mesa, Mrs. Jim Ed Ba-sham of Barnhart, Jan Ellis of Barnhart, Sherry Simmons and Mrs. Leona Armentrout, both of Midland, Layne Balke of Arlington and Roy Childs and Tom Stokes of Big Lake.

More than 200 friends registered from Big Lake, Sanderson, Odessa, San Angelo, Midland, Hobbs, N.M., Lubbock, Arlington, Brownfield, Meadow, Kent, Littlefield, San Antonio, Mesa, Barnhart and Santa Anna.

Gifts were presented to initiate a college scholarship fund in honor of Mrs. Chriesman. The Chriesman Scholarship Fund has been established in the Reagan State Bank for the benefit of deserving graduates of Reagan County High School.

CULTURAL BRIEFS

Estes show scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The exhibition "Richard Estes: The Urban Landscape" is on display at the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden through April 1.

The show includes 30 paintings and five silkscreen prints by the American realist.

NEW YORK (AP) — The painting "Archbishop William Henry Elder" by American artist Thomas Eakins, was recently acquired by the Cincinnati Art Museum from the Coe Kerr Gallery here.

Warren Adelson, director of Coe Kerr, said the 1903 portrait "is indeed one of Eakins' masterpieces and a painting which the artist himself termed 'one of my best'."

ROLLING MEADOWS, Ill. (AP) — The Henry Moore Sculpture "Large Two Forms" has been acquired by Gould Inc. and installed in front of Gould's corporate headquarters building here.

To mark the occasion, Moore and the firm donated a maquette (a small preliminary model of the sculpture) in bronze of "Large Two Forms" to the Chicago Art Institute.

How to save money when buying meat

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

All meat costs plenty these days. "But," says my friend Elizabeth Alston, "you can use the cuts that cost the least in ingenious ways."

Roasts, chops and steaks are for special occasions.

Elizabeth is Food Editor of Redbook and she proves her point in the current (February, 1979) issue of the magazine, in a feature called "How to Cook Less Costly Cuts of Meat." Although Elizabeth gives the thriftiest cuts of beef and pork their due, her choice of lamb recipes is particularly interesting. Americans are traditionally less adept at cooking lamb than other meats, and that's why we single it out.

One of the Redbook recipes is for Lamb Riblets with Honey-Mustard Glaze, and when we tasted it we felt sure you would enjoy it, too. We hope our hunch is right!

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Mix remaining ingredients in a small bowl. Spoon half the honey mixture over the riblets and bake 30 minutes. Turn riblets and spoon on remaining sauce. Bake 30 minutes longer, until riblets are tender. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGNER

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Morning is especially good for getting in touch with other persons and for putting in motion whatever logical course of action appeals to you. The afternoon gradually becomes worse and considerable problems attend forcing any issues or taking chances.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is fine for working out problems with others, but the evening is not so good. Much care must be exercised in driving, walking, talking with others. Take it easy then.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put those ideas to work that will help you to add to abundance, but use caution later in the day. You get excellent advice in the morning but later could be given the wrong steer.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get into activities that bring you greater success and carry through all day. Combine good judgment with intuition for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Analyzing your present status will show you how to proceed in the days ahead. Do some studying that equips you better for work that has to be done.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after your most positive ambitions since the planets are favorable and you can start gaining them. Make appointments with persons you most admire for best results. Gain their cooperation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into those activities that will help you to have more respect in your community. The favor of bigwigs can help you to expand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get into new interests of real scope and gain headway now. Pay more attention to your hunches, which are good. Avoid one who could give you big trouble and have an eye on your assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You now know what higher-ups expect of you and can carry through intelligently and get good results. Get into some new work that will add to present abundance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new idea which a partner gives you can be just what you need to further your ambitions. Let your influence be felt more in the right circles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Show experts that you are handling work well and gain more. A member of the family gives you a good idea so that you can improve personal life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan social affairs early, then handle important business matters. Introducing kin to a bigwig can bring about something interesting.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Put those ideas to work that will improve the conditions at home and make your property more valuable also. Find extra work that will bring in an added income.

Draft system needs

Many Americans undoubtedly are delighted to know that President Carter is asking Congress for $5 million to beef up the standby draft system to meet the Pentagon's "worst case" requirement for enough men to fight a sudden, bloody war in Europe.

White House officials say this is only a first step and not Carter's final decision on new efforts to resurrect draft registration — if not the draft itself — which are expected to be taken up soon in the present session.

Recent studies have shown that the present system could not turn out enough soldiers quickly in the event of a European war in which thousands of GIs are killed. This undoubtedly is the main reason for the push for reworking the draft system.

Senate Armed Services Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss., is of the opinion that the only answer is to bring back the draft because the all-volunteer force cannot supply the technicians which the military needs.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is among Pentagon officials who favor renewal of draft registration to create a pool of people who could be drafted fast in a sudden war.

This is something which merits serious consideration by Congress. The nation never must be caught in such a situation as sudden war without adequate military manpower. The Soviet Union today outnumbered the U.S. 2 to 1 in men in arms.

Brig. Gen. Robinson Risner (USAF Ret.), who served seven years as a prisoner of war of the North Vietnamese, in commenting on the draft in an address delivered here recently, said he believes the nation should keep the draft ready. "We must have a draft ready to go," since approximately 18 months would be required "to crank up the draft," and the U.S. would not have the luxury of time if attacked, he said.

"I'm kind of a traditionalist about women," the general said when asked what he thought about women in the military. "If they feel they are equal to men, I would say 'yes' (to drafting them)...." "But I wouldn't draft women unless they wish to be drafted."

In Washington, Army Secretary Clifford Alexander said women also should be registered. He wouldn't, however, say whether he thinks women should be drafted for combat.

Another option proposed is to draft people into the military reserves and create a trained force to send into a sudden war. This wouldn't be a bad idea.

The betting, however, is said to be between improving the present standby system or bringing back only draft registration, not the draft itself.

Those calling for renewal of the peacetime draft are said to be few and far between in Congress. This is understandable since neither Carter nor most congressmen desire to antagonize young voters if they don't have to.

But the big problem is that right now the standby draft simply can't move fast enough to meet the Pentagon's requirements, based on a "worst case" sudden non-nuclear war in Europe, that the standby Selective Service System supply the first draftees in 30 days, 100,000 draftees in two months and 650,000 draftees in six months.

This would be an impossible chore for Selective Service which right now has a skeleton crew of 92 persons. It would have to move quickly from a standing start.

The Service's present plan is to set up draft offices in three days and within 15 days use state election machinery to conduct a mass one-day registration of more than 4 million young people. It would conduct a draft lottery in 20 days and mail out draft notices in 28 days.

Carter's federal reorganization experts say test runs last fall showed it would take Selective Service possibly 58 days to do that and at least eight to 10 months to furnish the 650,000 draftees. The experts also claim the system needs a computer 10 times larger than the present one to handle the load and simpler draft machinery which could be set up rapidly.

It is a big problem — and Congress must come up with the answer.

'BALANCED FEDERAL BUDGET? - THAT'S RIDICULOUS'

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Schlesinger's unpopularity told

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — As each president lays down the controls of government, he leaves behind a few appointees who don't want to go back to Pocatello. They're the perennial survivors, who always seem to find a roosting place in government. They bounce from one top policymaking position to another with apparent immunity to changes in political fortunes.

One of the most durable of these nine-lived cats is James Schlesinger, the gray-haired, pipe-smoking, professional-energy secretary. Schlesinger, who'll be 50 next week, has gravitated around the center of power since 1969, when Richard Nixon appointed him an assistant budget director.

Since his relatively modest entry into the Washington merry-go-round, Schlesinger has been riding high through three administrations. He served alternately as Atomic Energy chairman, Central Intelligence director, Secretary of Defense and, after a brief eclipse when Gerald Ford fired him from the Pentagon, as energy czar under Jimmy Carter.

Schlesinger is the kind of Ivy League egghead who seems to have an irresistible appeal for presidents — summa cum laude graduate of Harvard, university professor, alumnus of the RAND corporation and author of learned treatises on abstruse national issues. Perhaps for the same reasons, Schlesinger is also the kind of presidential appointee who has a highly resistible appeal to the

Opinions may change, but character stays the same

By CHARLEY REESE
Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. — Well, they're touting Teddy Kennedy for president again. I don't know who's worse, Kennedy, or the cynics who are trying to pawn him off on the American people.

Kennedy is short on both brain power and integrity and has demonstrated more clearly than any other politician in American history that he lacks the qualities of a decent president. You can start with his cheating in college and work on up to Chappaquiddick and right on to the present shameless demagoguery that he is always peddling.

The Kennedy family has suffered a great deal and I share everybody's sympathetic feelings toward them, but there is a limit beyond which sympathy becomes stupidity.

There is a new book out on Chappaquiddick. It's called "Death at Chappaquiddick" and it was written by Richard and Thomas Teadrow, a father-son team. The elder Teadrow is a retired attorney, former chief commissioner of the U.S. Military Appeals Court.

I recommend it. The Teadrows have refrained from wild speculation. They simply took all the statements of record, laid them end to end, and pointed out the obvious contradictions, evasions, and inconsistencies. The results destroy Kennedy's version of the events as well as any claim he might make to honesty and respect for the law.

Even if you choose to believe Kennedy's televised version of why he drove off a bridge, left Mary Jo Kopechne in the car, and waited nearly nine hours to inform the police — even if you are dumb enough to believe it, Kennedy admits that he is not the man to be president.

We live in a nuclear age and in fact what appears to be the most dangerous phase of that age. Do you want a man with his finger on the nuclear button who gave the following as his excuse for not calling the police: "I was overcome, I'm frank to say, by a jumble of emotions: grief, fear, doubt, exhaustion, panic, confusion and shock," he said in his own version of the famous Nixon Checkers speech.

You can pick up the newspaper on almost any day and read accounts of men, women, and even children who suffered equal or worse traumas and yet managed to keep their heads and to act swiftly, intelligently and heroically. Kennedy, as he said, was overcome by panic and hauled his handsome body out of there at top speed.

It is part of the indisputable record, however, that he was not so overcome that during the nine-hour period in which he did not notify the police he couldn't make 17 phone calls to lawyers and cronies, dress himself, and chat amiably about a yacht race with another couple at the hotel.

Well, you might say, that happened 10 years ago. Yes, that's true, but it's also true a person's basic character does not change. Liberals who would eagerly agree to that if the subject were Richard Nixon should have the intellectual honesty to accept it in Kennedy's case.

You know that it is true from your own personal experience. Look at people you've known for many years. Their opinions may change, their lifestyle may change, but their character stays the same.

The most distressing aspect of the current situation is Kennedy's popularity. I'm not concerned about the behind-the-scenes cynics who are using Kennedy as a vehicle to put themselves in power. Such people would run Adolph Hitler if it were necessary.

No, the fact that Kennedy is so popular with the general public speaks loudly of ignorance and/or total lack of concern for the concepts of ethical behavior and virtue. The thought of Kennedy in the White House is nauseating. The poor guy couldn't even lie about Chappaquiddick without rehearsing for a week.

After the banquet of Sub Gum Grits at the White House, Vice Premier Teng left for Atlanta and a pilgrimage to the Coca-Cola plant to lay a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Dr. Pepper.

Then, off for Houston Space Center to declare that China has no interest in putting men on the moon — only on Taiwan.

In Seattle at the Shrine of St. Boeing he denied rumors that he is thinking about buying a franchise in the NFL.

INSIDE REPORT: Miami had Super Bowl politics as well as football

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — On Super Bowl weekend in Miami, when thousands of other football fans there were intent on the pursuit of pleasure, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and his closest supporters engaged in sober discussions that could well transform Republican presidential politics.

As a result of the Miami meetings, Kemp was advised to run for president in 1980 and forgo the more modest, more realistic goal of the U.S. Senate. Kemp promptly left for a Western states speaking tour, followed by some skiing and intense contemplation. Within another week, he likely will decide whether to name an "exploratory" committee for president — or throw himself fully into the Senate race, forgetting about the presidency.

All this is unpleasant news for Republican presidential front-runner Ronald Reagan. His smoothly organized, highly effective visit to Washington was attempting to create an aura of inevitability for the Republican nomination. Reagan's goal is no less than withdrawal of all other hopefuls. What's more, Reagan has been counting on Kemp as a supporter, not a competitor.

But what was said in Miami behind closed doors Super Bowl weekend reflects lingering Republican unease about the inevitability of Reagan. Far less concerned about Reagan's ideology than his electability, some Republican politicians have been quietly seeking an alternative. Their doubts ing some California congressmen supposedly pledged to Reagan). A former star quarterback, Kemp provides his guests scarce game tickets (on a Dutch treat basis). The weekend has become a reunion, attended by about 140 persons, including wives, this year.

They did not just accidentally join political bull sessions at the bar or around the swimming pool. Rather, a series of meetings was carefully planned with a single-item agenda: Jack Kemp's 1980 plans. At a private home and two Miami hotels, meetings with and without Kemp present were held all weekend. It ended with a session between the congressman and about 15 insiders.

The advice to Kemp was virtually unanimous: it is possible to start now and catch Reagan, with substantial support inside the Republican party. We want you to run, but you should not unless you determine that a 44-year-old ex-professional athlete would feel confident in the Oval Office.

The advisers also stressed there is no more time for delay. Political operatives who want to work for Kemp are advising they will have to go elsewhere unless at least a Kemp exploratory committee is formed immediately. Kemp responded he wants to consult some political wise men outside his own entourage, but a decision is expected before long.

Indeed, there were signs in Miami of Kemp shifting gears. Addressing the Economic Society of South Florida, he asserted, "I'm not ruling it out," when asked about the presidency in 1980. That is a major surprise to most politicians who thought he had indeed ruled it out.

While Jimmy Carter starting from total obscurity in 1976 is cited by Kemp's friends, that same year also saw Birch Bayh, Sargent Shriver and Fred Harris starting low and ending lower. Should Kemp follow Bayh's instead of Carter's route, it would not only doom his Senate chances but likely abort his entire political career.

Rationally, therefore, Kemp would be better off pursuing a difficult but achievable Senate race than risking everything in what the conventional wisdom deems a quixotic adventure. "He will do it only if he has a fire in his belly for the presidency," one close supporter told us, "and I frankly don't know whether he has." On that self-determination may well hinge not merely one man's fate but the nature of presidential politics in 1980.

UNDER THE DOME: Most houses on Capitol Hill have basement apartments that can be rented out to help defray the mortgage payments. Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., has reversed the technique. He rents out the upstairs floors and lives in the unfinished basement. Aides say this suits Carr fine because he spends little time there anyway.

Rep. Larry McDonald, the Georgia Democrat who is so far right he caucuses with himself, is thought by critics to be one of the most impolitic members of Congress. He apparently agrees. Hanging in his office is this sign: "Politicians and drunks not permitted on premises."

Turning back history could save millions on Olympics

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

MEXICO CITY (AP) — If they would only get back to basics, the Russians could save a couple of million kopeks on the 1980 Olympics and the good burgers of Los Angeles would be at least a half billion bucks ahead by the time their Olympic date rolls around in 1984.

What they should do is stage the games exactly as they were held in ancient Greece, when none of the athletes wore non-skid sneakers or zippered warm-up suits or anything at all for that matter. These thoughts occur while passing the site of the Olympic village built for the 1968 sweat fest in Mexico City.

Back in 776 B.C. when a chief named Coroebus won the first Olympic sprint without benefit of sneakers or track suit, there was no Olympic village, no seats in the stadium except for government officials, no baths or hostels for the athletes, and no charge for admission, since most of the spectators watched from a terraced hillside and slept out in the open in tents and lean-tos. There were no gold, silver and bronze medals then. The winner was given an olive wreath cut with a golden scythe from the slopes of Mount Olympus, although later armor in time to the music of a flute, which would make great television if reintroduced in Moscow or L.A. But the afternoon program was what the crowds had been waiting for. It was devoted entirely to bodily contact sports: boxing, wrestling and something called "pankration" which was an ultraviolet combination of judo, karate, wrestling, boxing and mugging. There were no weight limits, no welch-ins and very few rules. Professionalism was no problem in those halcyon times. They were all professionals. Aristotle called any non-pros crazy enough to enter the Olympics "idiotal," which in ancient Greek meant amateurs. In their home towns, top athletes were idolized and given soft jobs on the municipal payroll. The Emperor often elevated them to the priesthood or appointed them "imperial measurer" or "keeper of the imperial bath" or made them time keepers and banquets. Opening day was marked by prayers and swearing in of the athletes, but things got off to a rousing start on the second morning with the chariot races.

As the two-wheeled chariots drawn by four horses entered the hippodrome, a trumpeter flourished a flourish and a herald called out the name of the driver, his father and his home city and the owner of the nags and rig. Even in those days, owning horses required a bunch of drachmas.

Tito turns Mideast agitator

KUWAIT (AP) — Yugoslavia's President Tito has cautioned Arab opponents of Egypt-Israeli peace moves not to let their criticism force Egyptian President Anwar Sadat into a separate agreement with Israel, sources here said Saturday.

Tito, a leader of Third World's non-aligned movement, is on a four-nation Mideast tour aimed at rebuilding Arab unity shattered by Sadat's solo peace overtures to Israel.

In talks with Kuwaiti ruler Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, Tito called for a unified Arab stand in any talks aimed at reaching a comprehensive Middle East settlement.

Most Arab state are opposed to Sadat's peace initiative, which has been deadlocked since mid-November over peace treaty terms.

The morning of the fourth day features senior track events: 200 and 400 meter races, the long distance 4800 meter (about 3 miles) run and a 400-meter race in full the third day, which always coincided with the full moon, featured a great procession to the god Zeus, whose shrine at Olympus was host town for the games every four years. About noon, 100 oxen were sacrificed in his honor, with the prime ribs set aside for the final night banquet at the Magistrate House. In the afternoon, junior Olympians below age 17 competed in boxing and wrestling and a 200-meter race. Females were never allowed on the Olympic turf, neither as athletes, spectators, sports writers nor vestal virgins.

ANSWER: Pass. Don't step into the auction when an opponent bids your best suit. If the opening bid were one heart you would double for a takeout.

GUESS IS UNLIKELY
If the jack wins, South can lead a trump to the ace and discard the other club on the king of diamonds. He can then afford to lose two hearts. If East steps up with the ace of clubs and leads a heart, South must guess; but this is an unlikely defense.

If East steps up and fails to lead hearts, South will discard three hearts on high clubs and the king of diamonds.

If West has the ace of clubs and captures the jack, East is sure to have the ace of hearts. West would not pass as dealer with three aces and the queen of diamonds.

MHS, Lee face tough week

The Midland High and Midland Lee girl cagers face a week of decision making time, starting today at 8 p.m.

Both local teams own 4-0 second half District 5-4A records, but the toughest part of the schedule still remains. Midland Lee, the defending 5-4A champion, hosts Odessa Permian in the Lee gym tonight while the Bulldogs travel to Odessa to face the Odessa High Bronchos.

Midland High shared the first half title with Abilene High, and at this stage, the Bulldogs are insured of gaining at least a district playoff. Lee, on the other hand, needs to win the second half title outright, and they can do that with victories in their last three games, which will be decided through next Monday when they play Midland High.

If Midland High wins their last three games, the Bulldogs will march to the playoffs. If the Rebels win the second half title, Midland High and Abilene High would have to have a playoff game to see which one would meet Lee for the 5-4A state playoff berth. There are still more ifs than answers.

It looks, however, that either Midland High or Lee will win the second half since all of the other loop teams have at least two losses in the second half of play while the local schools remain undefeated.

Midland High will win at least a district playoff berth with a victory tonight over Odessa High because Abilene High could not win the second half title.

Texas scrambled and Texas A&M stalled, but in the end they ended up right where they were — in a dead heat for the Southwest Conference basketball lead.

However, the 16th-ranked Aggies journey to Arkansas to play the 19th-ranked Razorbacks Tuesday in a pivotal SWC clash.

The 11th-ranked Longhorns encountered surprisingly stiff opposition Saturday night from conference cellar dwelling Texas Christian.

The Frogs, fresh from an upset win over Houston, narrowed a 14-point deficit to just five, but Texas regained its composure and walked away with a 73-60 win in Fort Worth.

TCU PLAYERS have been openly critical of the way Coach Tim Somerville runs the team. But Saturday night's performance renewed Somerville's confidence.

"My rules of discipline are paying off," said Somerville. "We played the best a TCU team has played in years with freshmen."

"If that is a team mad at its coach," said Texas Coach Abe Lemons, "I'd like to get mine mad at me."

The Aggies, whose 9-2 conference record is identical to Texas', found the going a little shaky in the first half against Houston. But A&M erupted for 10 straight points just before intermission and retained that fever pitch as it defeated the Cougars 66-58 in College Station.

HOUSTON, NOW 3-8 in league play, managed only five points in the entire second half in its first meeting with the Aggies. But even in losing, Saturday's performance was heartening for the Cougar coach.

"We played about as well as we can. I'll guarantee you," remarked Guy Lewis. "There wasn't any quitting out there. We haven't folded our tents and stealed off into the night just yet."

"We put a lot back in on the rebounds. That was probably the difference," said Aggie mentor Shelby Metcalf. "I thought our delay game worked real good."

Arkansas boosted its conference record to 7-3 in Houston Saturday night with a 68-50 win over Rice, now 3-8 in the league. The win also kept the Razorbacks nipping at the heels of the conference leading Longhorns and Aggies.

"We got beat by a great, great player in (Sidney) Moncrief," Rice Coach Mike Schuler said of the offensive wizard who shot for 33 points. "He's the best in the league. He might have hit 40 points if we had let him in... He had a terrific night."

Texas Tech appeared to set up at least a fourth place conference finish when, backed by a 64 percent shooting efficiency, it whipped Baylor 78-70 in Waco Saturday.

THE WIN gives Tech a 7-4 conference mark, while Baylor falls to 5-5.

"That's the best game any Southwest Conference opponent has had against us all season. Tech had a super, super game and ran its offense perfectly," said Baylor Coach Jim Haller.

"That's the best we've played since right after Christmas. I thought we played well in every area," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers.

Dallas drives for hoop as NBA eyes expansion

DALLAS (AP) — A group of Dallas promoters drove right to the hoop in their efforts to score a National Basketball Association franchise for Texas' second largest city.

The NBA Board of Governors voted Saturday to begin considering applications for two new teams the league hopes to add in the 1980-81 season.

And a group, led by Dallas businessman Donald Carter, has already filed an application for a professional basketball franchise.

Dallas' downtown Reunion Arena is expected to be completed by 1980. And promoters here hope the new sports center will lend muscle to the city's push for a franchise.

However, Dallas is just one of seven cities competing for the two teams and NBA commissioner Larry O'Brien said that list is not exclusive.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Borg caps comeback with Richmond win

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Three-time Wimbledon champion Bjorn Borg capped his comeback from a six-week layoff with a 6-3, 6-1 romp Sunday over Guillermo Vilas for the championship of the $175,000 Richmond Tennis Classic.

The 22-year-old Swede, top-seeded for this tournament, which was his first since the middle of last December, took 1 hour, 27 minutes for his triumph over Vilas, who held service only once in the eight times he served.

Borg earned $30,200 for his victory, while Vilas, the 26-year-old Argentine left-hander who was second-seeded in the tourney, picked up $15,100.

Martina defends Chicago title

CHICAGO (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova defended her championship Sunday with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over 16-year-old Tracy Austin in a $200,000 women's professional tennis tournament.

The victory reversed Austin's recent domination of Navratilova, who had lost the last three matches between them.

"Martina played very well," Austin told the crowd. "She had a pretty easy time the whole week. I don't think you were for me but I'd like to come back next year."

Navratilova had reached the finals with a 6-3, 6-2 victory Saturday over Greer Stevens of South Africa, who won last week's tour event in Florida.

Austin made it to the title match with a 1-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Kerry Reid in Saturday's semifinals.

Gerulaitis downs Walts

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Top-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis defeated Butch Walts 6-2, 6-2 in the finals of a $50,000 tennis tournament Sunday.

Gerulaitis also teamed up with Vladimir Zednik of Czechoslovakia for a 5-7, 6-3, 7-5 triumph over the Australian duo of Phil Dent and Colin Dibley in the doubles finals.

Gerulaitis won a total of $11,500 from the tourney.

Walts, a wild-card entry in the tourney, said fatigue prevented him from playing up to par.

Mahre scores World Cup win

JASNA, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Phil Mahre scored the season's first World Cup victory for the U.S. men's team Monday, beating Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden in a special slalom ski race despite losing his goggles halfway through the second heat.

The 21-year-old Mahre, of White Pass, Wash., clocked the fastest first heat and the second-fastest second heat for a combined time of 1 minute, 43.03 seconds.

It was the first victory in almost a year for the U.S. men's team, and boosted Mahre to third place in the overall Cup standings with 123 points.

Stenmark, the three-time world cup champion, caught a tip near the bottom of the second run and nearly fell. He finished third in 1:44.55, behind Mahre and runner-up Leonardo David of Italy, 1:43.81.

Phil's twin-brother Steve grabbed sixth place in 1:44.90 to complete the best day for the American men since the Mahres won back-to-back giant slalom and special slalom races last season at Stratton Mountain, Vt.

Starting 12th in a driving snow storm, Mahre covered the first 74-gate course in 53.74 seconds to whip the third-starting Stenmark, who clocked 54.51.

Steve Mahre, the sixth starter, posted the third-best clocking of 54.77.

Stenmark, who won the giant slalom race on the same slopes Sunday, made an all-out effort for victory in the second heat, posting the fastest intermediate time before losing his balance three or four gates from the finish and nearly falling.

Peter Luescher of Switzerland is first in the World Cup standings with 174 points and Stenmark second with 135.

Tickner makes it 3 in a row

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dorothy Hamill had a skating move and a hair-do named for her. Charlie Tickner has a special skating style and curly brown locks, but is probably more popular in Europe than he is in the United States.

That seems to be the lot of American male skaters, even if they happen to be world champions.

"I'm not really in this to be a household name or a household face," said the 25-year-old Tickner, who won his third straight senior men's title Saturday night at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships.

If the acrobatic Tickner wanted his face on a box of breakfast cereal, he could have picked another sport. He's a scratch golfer and an excellent tennis player. "But I love figure skating, and how many people love their jobs?"

Tickner, one of the least publicized athletes among the 10 finalists for the prestigious Sullivan Award, will defend his world title at the World Championships at Vienna March 13-18. He said winning the world crown has made a difference.

In a world of super sports egos, Tickner just doesn't fit in. He is kind, soft-spoken and compassionate. Last year, after winning the world title, he spent an hour signing autographs for hundreds of awe-struck young skaters.

Athletics may come easily for Tickner but performing all alone before large crowds wasn't. Before he won his first national title, in 1977 at Hartford, Conn., Charlie was considered a "choker."

Saturday night, in winning the gold medal, Tickner admitted his performance had not been as "magical" as his previous victories. He stumbled on two of his early triple jumps.

However, more important to Tickner was the fact that he maintained his poise and composure and hit two triple jumps late in his program, more difficult at that stage because of the fatigue factor.

"It was a good performance, but I had to go out and make it happen," Tickner said. "In 1976, I probably would have gone to pieces if I made some early mistakes."

Thanks to DiMaggio, Gomez was discovered as after-dinner speaker

When Midland Cubs General Manager Bill Rigney, Jr., lined up Vernon "Lefty" Gomez for Wednesday's Midland Sports Banquet, he grabbed off one of baseball's most entertaining after-dinner speakers.

He didn't come by his nickname "El Goofy" without just cause, although he'd just as soon forget that other nickname, "Gay Castilian". Back in the 1930's when Lefty was one of the best pitchers around, "Gay" didn't have the same connotation that it does today.

Lefty played with the proud, proper and haughty Bronx Bombers of the Joe McCarthy, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio eras, but some of his pranks make him seem more like vintage Gashouse Gang, the rabble rousers from over in the other league.

Gomez would stop while pitching to watch a circling airplane; stuff rubber snakes in baseball gloves and in the dugout and locker room was a constant hotfoot menace.

HE SEEMED a natural for after dinner speaking, that is, if he could translate his baseball humor to the speaker's rostrum, but if it hadn't been for his best friend Joe DiMaggio, he might never have been discovered.

Gomez was already an established fixture with the Yankees when the quiet, shy DiMaggio reported as a rookie in 1936. "Joe just seemed to get real popular with the fans in a hurry. I don't know why," Lefty relates in Maury Allen's book, "Where have you gone, Joe DiMaggio?"

"All the Italians in American adopted him. Just about every day in New York or on the road there would be an invitation from some Italian-American club for Joe to attend a banquet or dinner or something. Or the Swiss Club or Chinese club. Everybody wanted to be Italian if they could get Joe to come to their dinner. After a while, he couldn't turn them all down, so he would pick out one here and there to go to if I would go along.

"We would sit through all these dinners and finally the guy would get around to introducing all his cousins, uncles and friends in the audience. Joe would then get up and the crowd would give him a big hand, and he would say, 'Thank you for inviting me. Now you can hear Lefty tell some funny stories.' Then he would sit down and I would have to entertain them for some 20 minutes before we could go home. Then they would load him down with presents and that would be the evening."

WHILE HE'S known more now for his dinner tales, Gomez was one of the prime clutch pitchers of his day. He showed Whitey Ford how. He started five of the first six All-Star games and was 3-1 in the midsummer classic. In the World Series, he was 6-0.

It was a result of the first All-Star game that Lefty has nurtured a lifelong grudge against his catcher Bill Dickey. You'll remember that was the game that Carl Hubbell struck out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin consecutively before yielding a single to Dickey. Then he fanned Gomez and Lefty blames Dickey for robbing him of his rightful place in history among the great hitters of the game.

When Gomez came to the plate, National League catcher Gabby Hartnett asked, "What are you trying to do, insult Hubbell?" Gomez asked, "What do you mean?"

Hartnett answered, "I mean coming up here with a bat after he struck out all those guys."

GOMEZ ADMITS DiMaggio, regardless of what you may have heard, had a flaw as a fielder. Joe had always heard how shallow Tris Speaker had played and the way he could go back on a ball over his head. What Joe forgot was that Tris played in the day of the dead ball and when Joe came up the home run was the rage.

One day with Detroit slugger Rudy York up, Lefty looked around to find DiMaggio playing right behind second base. He waved Joe to play deeper, but without success.

"There's nothing I can do, so I finally pitch to York and he hits a ball like a shot off a golf tee. Joe gets a great jump, but it's over his head and rolls to the fence and we lose the game."

Later, DiMaggio came over to apologize, "Lefty, I'm sorry about that ball. I know I should have caught it. But I'm going to make them forget Speaker."

"Joe, I know you should have caught it too, and you keep playing shallow like that, you'll not only make them forget Speaker, you'll make them forget Gomez."

$250,000 for Cronin? No player is worth that...Griffith

By SHIRLEY POVICH
Special to The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In the winter of 1934 the late Clark Griffith was staggered by an offer of $250,000 for Joe Cronin from the Boston Red Sox. Cronin then was the Senator manager as well as their hard-hitting shortstop who also moonlighted as Griffith's son-in-law. Griffith weighed all the facts and then made the deal.

Griffith rationalized his decision in simple, direct terms. "No ballplayer is worth that much money," he said.

When the Red Sox announced the other day that they had just agreed to pay an outfielder $770,000 a year for seven years, there was instant temptation to paraphrase the late great Chilly Doyle, one of our favorite press-box malapropists. "If Clark Griffith were alive today, he would be revolving in his grave."

Altogether, the Red Sox were agreeing to a $5.4 million bundle to tie down the services of their man Jim Rice. Otherwise he would be a free agent in another year, able to float his considerable skills on the open market a la Pete Rose, now a $2.4 million man with the Phillies at $800,000 yearly for three years.

A breakdown says that Rice will receive $4,280 for each game the Red Sox play, whether he plays in it or not. That this could tax the credulity of Mr. Griffith is understandable. He was an American League pitcher in 1903 when Ed Delahanty, who had hit .376 for the Senators the previous year, was considered handsomely paid at $4,000 for the whole season. There are other records to show that the entire Washington payroll for an 18-player roster was $38,203.70.

Griffith would have other memories, including Walter Johnson's salary demands after winning 25 games in 1910. "I wanted $9,000 a year," Johnson said, "just as much as they're paying Ty Cobb." Four years later, when Johnson sought another increase, he was met by the stern refusal of the Washington owner who declared, "Johnson doesn't warrant the $12,000 we're now paying him. He had a bad season. He won only 28 games."

In the light of the previous season of 1913 that was true. Johnson had pitched five one-hitters, 12 shutouts and won 36 games, losing only seven.

To emphasize this new age in baseball wages, it can be mentioned that Jim Rice last season was only a $150,000-a-year ballplayer, or a mere $825 per game plodder. But his value rocketed at the end of 1978, when club owners took a look at some of the other numbers in his resume. Forty-six home runs, a .315 average, 213 hits, 121 runs scored and 139 batted in.

The most telling item was those 406 total bases by Rice, an incredible bulge of 113 more than anybody else in the league. Up there at the plate Jim Rice appeared to be looking down every pitcher's throat. Naturally, he was voted the league's Most Valuable Player. And, naturally, after Pete Rose shopped himself around and had to beat off the bidders before settling for his $800,000 a year, Rice's agent was alerted to all that big money out there.

Rice may lack some of Rose's traits, like the belly-down slides, and the ability to beat out infield hits and those masterful bunts. But he had other important virtues on his side. When you hit the ball out of the park there's no need for hustle on the bases, and as for bunts, there is some question if Joe DiMaggio ever bunted in his life. And it is a positive truth that Rice plays his position in the field better than Rose plays his, and he also happens to be 10 years younger.

There was a special urgency for the Red Sox to make certain Rice did not get away, what with madman George Steinbrenner eyeing him for the Yankees and other clubs drooling to bid for Rice. Up in Boston, the natives were becoming restless and muttering about the do-nothing attitude of the ownership in letting Louis Liant get away to the hated Yankees.

Also, the Red Sox had exiled Bernie Carbo and Bill Lee, two other local favorites. The owners now recognized the danger of letting Rice play out his last season as a lame-duck hero in Boston, a condition that would invite the hot anger of the populace.

As one of the teams best able to pay the new upper-upper scale for baseball athletes, the Red Sox are an anomaly. They play in the smallest and most ancient of parks, the only one with no upper deck, and with a mere 33,502 seats in an era of 60,000-plus stadiums. But so high is the baseball fever they generate as New England's regional team, they are the only AL club besides the Yankees to play to more than 2 million home attendance.

When Haywood Sullivan and Buddy LeRoux tried to buy the team from the Tom Yawkey estate a year ago, they were flatly rejected for approval as ownership material by the American League, which viewed them as not-credit-worthy enough to take on such responsibilities.

Enter Mrs. Tom Yawkey, widow of the Red Sox owner and heiress to his interests in the 32 Wall Street corporations of which he was a director. When she agreed to keep a presence in the team, presto, the pair with insufficient funds of a month before, was approved by the league as partners in the ownership picture.

One year later, they could underwrite the biggest player salary deal in baseball and keep Jim Rice happy, because Red Sox fans are more fanatical than any other breed.

Even during last August and September when the collapsing Red Sox were resolutely squandering a 12-game lead to give the Yankees the pennant, Fenway Park was a constant sell-out. The daily message from the front office to the fans in Boston and New England was "don't come near the park if you don't have a ticket."

The terms Boston Red Sox GM Haywood Sullivan, left, announced in signing Outfielder Jim Rice to a long term contract could have the late Clark Griffith spinning in his grave. (AP Laserphoto)

Chaps find little Enchantment in N. Mexico

ROSSELL, N.M.—Just a week ago, Midland College enjoyed the heady heights of first place in the Western Junior College Conference race, a pinnacle the Chaps shared with nationally-ranked Western Texas College. But high altitudes have been known to cause bloody noses, as the Chaps, to their dismay, have discovered.

Now, in their second invasion of the Land of Enchantment in less than a week, this time to play New Mexico Military Institute here tonight, Coach Jerry Stone's Chaparrals are locked in a three-way tie for second place, fighting for their playoff life and there are teams the MC coach would rather be facing at the moment than the Broncos, who whipped WTC, 80-69, last week and then dumped South Plains College, 89-79, on Thursday.

MC, meanwhile, was splitting, winning over South Plains, 76-71, and bowing to New Mexico Junior College, 83-76. The split wasn't exactly unexpected, NMJC has been hot and South Plains has a club with playoff potential, but the Chaps weren't impressive in either game.

They seemed to play in spurts and the dead spells in between were perplexing. Against SPC, Midland led by 11 points at times and seemed to have the situation well in hand, only a short spurt away from blowing the game open. But down the stretch, it was a struggle and only a hot streak by Cullen Mayfield kept MC on top.

At Hobbs Thursday, MC led 37-32 at half, and almost before realizing what happened were behind 60-43. A full-court press enabled Midland to rally and whittle that margin to seven, but it was a case of too little, too late.

Midland defeated NMMI, 100-77, at Western Junior College Conference

Midland earlier in the season, but this isn't the same Bronco team they faced then. NMMI is 7-3 in WJCC, which ties them for second place with MC and NMJC, and all three of the Chaps' conference losses have come on the road.

After tonight's game, MC returns home to face Amarillo College Thursday at Chaparral Center and then it's back on the road next Monday for Howard College at Big Spring.

While three teams are tied a game behind WTC, which hosts Odessa College tonight, the Wranglers are a half game back at 5-3 with a game against Frank Phillips, postponed earlier, to be made up March 1.

And South Plains, which hosts Howard tonight, is lurking at 5-5.

Victory is no shock to Ongais

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Danny Ongais doesn't seem to understand why his victory with Hurley Haywood and Ted Field in the 24 Hours of Daytona was any surprise.

The husky Ongais, an Indianapolis veteran, has a reputation for speed but hardly for durability. He's often put cars on the pole at Daytona International Speedway and elsewhere but rarely was around at the finish of a lengthy event until Sunday's victory in a brand new turbocharged Porsche 935.

"The insinuation that I'm a flat-out racer came from somewhere I don't know anything about," Ongais protested.

THEIR CAR performed smoothly, setting a modern speed record of 109.249 mph and a distance record of 2,626 miles, until 11 minutes before the finish. A puff of smoke spurted out as Ongais wheeled around the twisting infield of the 3.84-mile course. He limped to within 500 feet of the finish line and parked until time ran out. Then he crept across the line under the checkered flag.

No one was about to overtake the leader. The second-place Ferrari

Daytona, which was privately entered and driven by Tony Adamowicz of Culver City, Calif., and John Morton of El Segundo, Calif., finished 192 miles behind even with the leaders' late trouble.

The first question to Ongais was, "What went wrong?"

"Nothing," he responded blandly.

Haywood, a veteran endurance driver from Jacksonville, Fla., who won this race for the fourth time and has won at LeMans, supplied the answer: "Danny came on the radio and said the turbo had packed in. The crew chief made a quick decision and told Danny to pull up and wait until the checkered flag falls and come over the line."

FIELD, 26, car owner and an heir to the Marshall Field fortune, said, "We stuck to our plan and we got a little lucky."

Although Porsche won, as it has six of the past eight years, only three of the turbo Porsche starters finished. They took third and fourth as well as first.

Names in the news

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Nelle Connolly, wife of Republican presidential candidate John Connolly, was released from a hospital Sunday after an overnight stay.

Mrs. Connolly, 59, collapsed at an awards banquet Saturday night and was taken to Brackenridge Hospital for emergency treatment. She was hospitalized overnight for observation.

A spokesman at the hospital said she "apparently fainted" during the Headliners Awards Banquet at the Texas Special Events Center.

contagious," Jones says. "I started looking into it, and each day I looked into it more seriously."

With his law degree now securely in hand from the University of Vermont Law School, Class of 1978, Jones says he sees his second career as a chance to keep going when others slow down. "The trip each one of us has through life is pretty short — 50, 60, 70 years. I guess I feel inspired to make the most of the one I have."

EASTON, Md. (AP) — Gov. James Thompson of Illinois says he won't actively seek the 1980 Republican presidential nomination but has left open the possibility of changing his mind.

"My intention is to serve out my term and run for re-election in 1982," Thompson told reporters Saturday at a Republican conference.

However, the governor declined to expand his statement to include a flat pledge to complete his current four-year term.

"That's my intention," he responded repeatedly when pressed.

Thompson said "an active campaign for the presidency is inconsistent" with his duties of being governor of Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. (AP) — After 37 years, J. Franklin Jones Jr., has left the hum of a Springfield gear factory for the quiet of a law library.

The move began as "a scheme to avoid retirement," says the 63-year-old Jones, now practicing with the Springfield law firm of Parker and Lamb Ltd., after working most of his life for the Fellows Corp., a manufacturer of gear-making machinery.

When his son Peter graduated from law school in 1970, Jones said he was "facing the question of what to do with my life — and 65 loomed large in my mind."

"The interest and excitement Peter found in his career was BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — President Tito of Yugoslavia was given an enthusiastic welcome by tens of thousands of people when he arrived here Sunday on the second stop of his four-nation 15-day tour of Arab Middle East states.

The official Iraqi news agency said a crowd of 250,000 turned up at the airport and lined the route to the city to cheer the Yugoslav leader.

President Ahmed Hassan al Bakr was at the airport to greet his guest during an official ceremonial welcome with all the trimmings.

The 86-year-old communist leader arrived here from a four-day stay in the oil-rich conservative sheikhdom of Kuwait. After Iraq, he was to visit Syria, like Iraq a radical socialist state, and Jordan, another conservative monarchy like Kuwait.

McCrorry has new identity, but lives in fear

DALLAS (AP) — David McCrorry, the state's key witness in the murder-for-hire trial of Cullen Davis, has a new life, a new identity and the constant urge to look over his shoulder in fear.

"The price has been too damned high," McCrorry told the Dallas Times Herald.

In exchange for his testimony, McCrorry was given a new home and a new name under the Federal Witness Protection program.

Davis is free on bond after jurors in his murder solicitation trial in Houston failed to reach a verdict.

But McCrorry said he is a prisoner of his own fear in the solitude of his new clandestine life. "All I try to do is stay alive."

information to find where I am. Sooner or later somebody will make a mistake. I have to stay hid real well," McCrorry said.

Davis' defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes said allegations that Davis has spent $100,000 looking for McCrorry are "absolutely, unequivocally wrong."

"We've not spent one dime looking for him," said Haynes.

"I just feel sorry for the folks of the community in which he is residing," McCrorry branded the Houston mistrial as absurd. But said "Haynes may be the most brilliant person I have ever met."

"I can understand the jurors not believing me. I think he (Haynes) could put anyone on the stand in the country and make the jury believe what he wants them to believe. Their (defense) case was nothing but a pack of lies, though, made up by people expecting to get paid by giving false testimony."

McCrorry said a U.S. attorney from Fort Worth suggested the witness protection program.

"He thought I had no protection at the house, and thought it was ridiculous. He told me I wouldn't live 15 minutes."

The protection program provides rent and sustenance money, McCrorry would not specify how much, but also places restrictions on his life. Neither he nor his wife are allowed to work or leave the city where he is relocated.

"When you fear somebody is trying to have you killed and you're worried about your family and your name's been changed, it's probably one of the worst things that could happen to a person other than death," said McCrorry.

Woman will sell house to help Cullen

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Fort Worth woman said her conviction in Cullen Davis' innocence is so strong she would sell her house and all her belongings to stop any future prosecution.

Davis currently is free on bond after a jury in his murder-for-hire trial in Houston failed to reach a verdict. But prosecutors said they would seek a new trial.

Joey Smith heads a group collecting signatures on petitions aimed at convincing District Attorney Tim Curry any further prosecution would only waste tax dollars.

"I think Mr. Curry's a nice guy, I really do. I do think he's been given some bad advice," she said, adding she believes Davis' Houston trial resulted from Curry's "desperate" efforts to make up for "the asinine mistake in Amarillo."

Three trustees to be elected at meeting

Midland school trustees are scheduled to formally set the election of three trustees for April 7 at their meeting at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school administration building.

Places currently held by trustees David Grimes, Ann Page and Ed Runyan will be up for grabs in the April election.

A report on elementary school projections, also scheduled for the meeting, is expected to show an upward swing in elementary school enrollments for several years in the future.

While enrollments are growing, some redistribution of students from one school to another may be necessary. Schools Superintendent Dr. James Malley said. But, he added, the district probably will be able to "make do" with the buildings in existence now until 1985.

In other business, the trustees are scheduled to hear a report on the agriculture programs in the schools and the functions of the vocational advisory committees.

They also are to set the school calendar for the 1979-80 school year, consider renewal of the concessions contract with the Jaycees and give final approval of the Midland High School vocational building.

Homeowners still paying off on 'Blizzard of 1978' bills

By DANIEL Q. HANEY

SCITUATE, Mass. (AP) — Though an occasional bungalow still stands atill along Scituate's oceanfront, the most noticeable leftovers from the Blizzard of '78 are bills to pay for the damage.

Like elsewhere in southern New England, the outward evidence of the worst storm in anyone's memory, which hit a year ago Tuesday, has been patched up and painted over.

Mortgage program tops housing meeting agenda

A proposed single Family Mortgage Revenue Financing Program is scheduled to constitute much of the discussion when the Housing Authority of the City of Midland meets at 2 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

Chairman Harry Clark will give a report on the financing program. That will be followed by the panel's requesting a change in the cooperation agreement between the city of Midland and the Housing Authority to permit the authority's participation in the program.

The authority also should hear recommendations for a long-range maintenance program and will consider taking action based upon the recommendations.

A request from the Hillcrest Manor Residence Council for an exercycle in the Community Room will be considered.

Mrs. August Wenck, a member of the panel, will outline the status of the home rehabilitation program carried out with private contributions.

The authority's financial condition will be reviewed along with the accountant's Statement of Operating Receipts and Expenditures for the six month period ending Dec. 31, 1978.

Harvard honors Bergen, DeNiro

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Film stars Candice Bergen and Robert DeNiro have been named woman and man of the year by Harvard's Hasty Pudding Theatricals, the organization announced Sunday.

Miss Bergen is to receive her award Feb. 13 following a parade through Cambridge, and DeNiro is to receive his award Feb. 21 at the opening of Hasty Pudding's 131st show, "Overtures in Asia Minor."

Both awards, pudding pots, will be presented at the Hasty Pudding clubhouse.

Hasty Pudding Theatricals, the nation's oldest theatrical organization, has presented shows since 1844. Harvard undergraduates produce and act in original musical comedies. Men traditionally play all roles.

The woman of the year award is given for "great artistic skills and feminine qualities."

Teng, SALT opponents sound same

By WALTER R. MEARS

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's too bad Teng Hsiao-ping won't be in town when the Senate gets around to debating a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union. He'd probably enjoy listening to the opposition arguments.

Teng and the conservatives most skeptical about SALT may not speak had closed a great deal, although the United States was somewhat in the lead.

Another came in 1974 and Teng said, "By that time, even opinion in the United States acknowledged that the military strengths of the two countries were on a par."

"Doesn't that show the effects of agreements and disagreements?" he asked.

When a new treaty is signed and sent to the Senate, opponents of ratification will be asking the same question.

In fact, it's already being asked. "How do we know that they are not using arms limitation talks as a smokescreen to mask a drive toward superiority?" asked Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in discussing SALT prospects last fall.

"All we want to say is that the people of the world should not have illusions in this respect," said Teng. "That is...they should not be lulled by such agreements."

Or, as Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said the other day, "I am skeptical about SALT above all because it has dulled our perception of reality during a period when that reality has become vastly more dangerous to us and to the shrinking band of free nations from Tokyo to Tel Aviv."

Teng said it is time for realism, for "more realistic steps, practical steps" to contain the Soviet Union. That brought him to hegemonism, Peking's buzzword for Moscow's attempts to extend Soviet influence.

Hegemony, a word which doesn't turn up often in conversation, means leadership or dominance, especially that of one nation over others.

"Whether it be global hegemonism or local hegemonism, China always adopts a firm position, a firm attitude," said Teng.

Teng said the United States, China,

Europe, Japan and the Third World should unite to deal with Soviet hegemonism. That would make it everybody against the Russians who, according to Teng, should be denied bases and raw materials, hampered, undermined and frustrated wherever they try to move.

He claimed that "on this point of combating hegemonism, there is a shared view" between him and President Carter.

Carter politely demurred. "The security concerns of the United States do not coincide completely, of course, with those of China, nor does China share our responsibilities," he said.

And after Teng left Washington to go on tour, the White House and the State Department said the United States seeks balanced relationships with both China and the Soviet Union.

Egypt building 'cultural bridge' with invitations

By LISETTE BALOUNY

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt is quietly building a "cultural bridge" with Israel despite the political impasse that has stalled peace talks between Cairo and Jerusalem.

Two Israeli artists are the latest to cross the bridge, having arrived here Friday for a one-week visit as guests of President Anwar Sadat.

Egypt began the program immediately after last September's Camp David summit, at which the Egyptians and Israelis drafted a framework for peace after 30 years of war.

Sadat, his wife, Jehan, and his aides have been inviting Israelis for a first-hand look at the Jewish state's long-time enemy. The guest list has included an archeologist, two physicians, journalists, a politician and the artists, Zamy Steynovitz and Isaac Tourel.

Officials hope the initiative will lead to a two-way cultural exchange, but so far Israel has not reciprocated.

"Art is an international language that brings people together," said Steynovitz. While here, he will get Sadat's signature on a silver-and-gold silkscreen painting he made in honor of last fall's Nobel Peace Prize awards to Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"I hope the signatures on the piece of art will lead to signatures on a peace treaty," Steynovitz said in an interview.

Begin has already signed the work, and the artist hopes President Carter, who brought the two leaders together at Camp David, will add his signature. He plans to give each of them an original of the design.

The painting carries a verse from the Old Testament prophet Isaiah: "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." It depicts an angel and a dove swooping in the sky embracing a clock without hands, its pendulum engraved with the faces of two lovers, a violin and an olive branch.

Armed Forces News

Several area servicemen have been in the news recently.

Major Jimmy D. Alexander, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack R. Alexander of Big Spring, recently was promoted to his present rank while serving as a battalion executive officer with the Academy of Health and Sciences, U.S. Army, at Fort Sam Houston.

His wife, Helen, is with him at the post.

Senior Airman Damon W. Bloom, son of Mr. and Mrs. C.G. Bloom of Andrews, has been sent to Saudi Arabia for temporary duty.

Bloom is an aircraft maintenance specialist at Langley Air Force Base, Va., with the First Tactical Fighter Wing, which flies the F-15 Eagle.

The airman, a 1974 graduate of Andrews High School, attended Aero-Technical Institute, Wichita Falls.

Lance Cpl. William E. Smith, son of George R. Smith of Big Lake, has been promoted to his present rank while serving with the First Marine Division, Marine Corps Base, Camp Pendleton, Calif. He joined the Marine Corps in March 1977.

Senior Airman Joni L. Rice, daughter of Mrs. L.W. Lincoln III of Big Spring, has been promoted to her current rank in the U.S. Air Force.

The airman, a vehicle maintenance specialist at Langley Air Force Base, Virginia, serves with a unit of the Strategic Air Command.

Airman Rice is a 1973 graduate of Kaufman High School.

Staff Sgt. Larry H. Holder has been graduated from the 21st Air Force Noncommissioned Officer Leadership School at Rhein-Main Air Force Base, Germany.

Holder, who was trained in military management and supervision, is an air cargo supervisor at Ramstein Air Force Base, Germany.

Holder, a 1971 graduate of Meridian High School, attended the University of Maryland European Division. His wife, Linda, is the daughter of Mrs. Elevina Smith of Lamesa. Her father, K.T. Teal, also lives in Lamesa.

Postal rates won't rise unless inflation does, Bolger says

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of mailing a letter probably won't rise for two years, unless inflation plays havoc with the Postal Service budget, the postmaster general says.

William F. Bolger, head of the U.S. Mail, says the Postal Service's finances are in good shape now and no rate increases appear to be needed until the spring of 1981.

But there is a string attached — inflation. Most of the cost of handling mail is in salaries for workers, who get automatic cost-of-living pay increases tied to the inflation rate.

For this reason, high inflation pushes up Postal Service expenses and, consequently, postal rates.

"For every $200 million in additional expenses we incur, the next rate increase will have to be about one month sooner," Bolger said in an interview.

He also predicted that the mail agency this fiscal year will show its first 12-month surplus since the postal reorganization of the early 1970s.

"This year, we have our best shot to accomplish the major purpose of living within our income," the postmaster general said.

Bolger said the current projection is for a $180 million surplus for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30.

"Inflation is giving us the same problem that everyone else has, but I still think we can have the surplus because the volume of mail continues to go up," Bolger said.

When Congress voted in 1970 to abolish the Post Office Department and establish the Postal Service in its place, one of the major goals was a mail system that would break even financially.

The new agency was organized like a private corporation in the hope that "business-like" management could make it work more efficiently than its politics-laden predecessor.

The last increase in the cost of mailing a first-class letter — from 13 cents to 15 cents — came May 29. Corresponding increases were also posted for other types of mail.

Asked how much the next increase will be, Bolger said, "I have no idea. We haven't even started to put together the documentation for that."

Bolger, who began as a postal clerk in 1941 and, after many promotions, became postmaster general last March, also said mail delivery on Saturdays will continue indefinitely. At one time, its elimination was considered to save money.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Vaginal delivery best when possible

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that once a woman gives birth by cesarean section, all subsequent births must be by the same method?—Mrs. S.W.

Dear Mrs. W.: Not necessarily. A five-year study by University of Texas researchers found that of 526 women who had delivered one baby by cesarean section, 313 subsequently delivered in the normal fashion with safety. However, a significantly higher rate of complications was found among the 213 women whose trial labor ended in a new cesarean. The complications included fever and an increased need for blood transfusions because of infection or postoperative anemia.

The findings do not completely negate the rule "once a cesarean, always a cesarean." But they do suggest that where circumstances are ideal, vaginal delivery in women who previously delivered by cesarean section can often be accomplished with minimum risk. Among the benefits to be gained are savings in pain, hospitalization and expense, as well as the avoidance of a premature birth.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I can't stand our dirty air. How can we get rid of air pollution?—Mr. B.B.

Dear Mr. B.B.: Our engineers and scientists have the knowledge to eliminate most air pollution, and they are searching for solutions to the remaining problems. Not many people, though, whether as individuals or as part of business management, willingly take on the tough and expensive job of installing and maintaining control equipment.

Now, however, the federal government is taking an active part in air-pollution control. For one thing, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has set increasingly severe limits on emissions from motor vehicles. By the mid-70s, new autos will have to emit ninety percent less pollution than 1970 models. New trucks and buses, and aircraft to a lesser extent, are limited, too. States have to be responsible for inspection of vehicle control equipment, since the devices won't function properly unless they are kept in good repair.

The Environmental Protection Agency has also set air quality standards. These determine what amounts of specific pollutants are allowed to be present in the air. So far, the pollutants named are sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons, nitrogen oxides, particulates and photochemical smog. The agency also limits emissions from certain categories of stationary sources. So far, the categories named are steam power plants; sulfuric acid plants, nitric acid plants, portland cement plants, and municipal incinerators.

The main job of limiting pollution at the source is the states'. They have to set emission limits that can attain the federal air quality standards by the mid-70s. The states may also impose stricter standards than the federal ones. And the states are responsible for enforcing these limits and standards, although at least partial surveillance and enforcement take place at the local level.

Dear Dr. Solomon: What are the danger signs of a cold?—Mr. C.F.

Dear Mr. C.F.: The danger signs are: (1) chills and fever, (2) pains in chest, ears or face, (3) shortness of breath, (4) coughing up rusty-colored or bloody material. If you have any of these, call your doctor at once.

BTA finals one of six West Texas discoveries

Six new fields or pays have been opened in West Texas Counties, one each in Culberson, Garza, Upton, Schleicher, Irion and Runnels.

BTA Oil Producers of Midland No. 1 7806 JV-P Duval has been completed as an Atoka gas discovery in Culberson County, 15 miles southwest of Ora.

The operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,469,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, through perforations from 14,308 to 14,440 feet. The pay was acidized with 1,500 gallons and fractured with 10,000 gallons.

The total depth is 15,741 feet and 5.5-inch casing is set at 14,555 feet. The plugged back depth is 14,440 feet.

The Atoka pay was topped at 14,277 feet on ground elevation of 3,252 feet. The Fusselman was topped at 15,711 feet.

Operator has suggested the discovery be designated the opener of the King Edward (Atoka) field. That area also produces from the Fusselman.

Location of the strike is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 31, block 45, psl survey.

GARZA DISCOVERY
The Garza County discovery is Wil-Mc Oil Corp. of Dallas No. 1 J. F. Lott which was completed as a pumping well in the Spraberry sand.

The operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 77 barrels of 37.4-gravity oil, through perforations from 5,268 to 5,296 feet.

The pay section was treated with 1,000 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 8,420 feet, 4.5-inch pipe is set at 5,355 feet and the plugged back depth is 5,302 feet.

The discovery is 2.5 miles northwest of the Lazy JL, Southwest (Spraberry) field.

The operator has suggested Coulter (Spraberry) as the name of the new pool.

It is 12 miles southwest of Post and 2,517 feet from south and 1,609 feet from west lines of section 12, block 1, Jasper Hays survey.

UPTON DISCOVERY
John L. Cox of Midland No. 1 Lynch was completed as a Wolfcamp discovery in Upton County, nine miles northwest of Rankin.

The strike, 1/2 mile northwest of the Old Upland (Bend oil) pool, finalized for a daily flowing potential of 330 barrels of 45-gravity oil and no water, through an 8/4-inch choke and perforations from 8,966 to 9,068 feet. Gas-oil ratio is 1,175-1.

The pay zone was acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Total depth is 10,250 feet.

The Wolfcamp was topped at 8,392 feet on ground elevation of 2,607 feet.

It completed for a daily flowing potential of 89 barrels of 41.2-gravity oil and 30 barrels of water, through a 1/4-inch choke and perforations from 7,313 to 7,341 feet. Gas-oil ratio is 4,491-1.

The pay zone was acidized with 1,500 gallons and fractured with 30,000 gallons.

Operator has suggested new field designation of Taos (Canyon).

The cleaned out total depth is 7,514 feet and 4.5-inch casing is cemented at that point.

Project reported

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. — Phillips Petroleum Co. is modernizing and consolidating its carbon black research and development facilities, according to J. W. Davison, vice president, Research and Development.

The project involves construction of additional carbon black research and development facilities at the company's research center in Bartlesville, Okla., where the program will be headquartered.

These facilities, scheduled for completion in 1980, will enable the company to conduct all of its carbon black laboratory and pilot plant activities at a single location.

Large-scale experimental carbon black projects will be carried out in Phillips' carbon black manufacturing plants near Borger and Orange, Texas and Toledo, Ohio.

Analysts expect Iran to return as exporter

By J.P. SMITH

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Regardless of what form of government ultimately emerges in Iran, most U.S. government and oil industry analysts expect that nation to return to the ranks of the world's oil exporters as soon as stability is restored.

The major questions are how long that will take and whether the new government will let expatriate technicians return to Iran to enable it again to produce up to 6.5 million barrels of oil a day.

Whatever government ascends to power in Iran will be under enormous pressure to replace at least part of the $70 million a day the country once earned from its oil exports.

The new regime at least will have to produce an estimated 3 million barrels a day to provide enough revenues to run a government having far less ambitious plans than the shah's.

In the meantime the world's oil market has been able to live without Iranian oil — largely because of increased oil production from Saudi Arabia and other members of the oil cartel.

This is not to say that the shutdown in Iranian oil production has not had its effects. Prices on the spot market have spiraled upward dramatically, with one cartel member, Iraq, asking as much as $6 a barrel more than the official price. And some domestic independent refiners, such as Ashland Oil, have told the Energy Department they are having difficulty locating crude oil.

In the meantime, the Energy Department is nervously reworking contingency plans to allocate oil supplies and impose mandatory conservation measures if necessary.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger continues cautiously to describe the world oil situation as "serious but not critical," saying the administration will have to make an assessment by April on whether to call for conservation measures.

The Energy Department in the meantime reports that U.S. demand for oil in January was almost the same as a year earlier.

At the State Department and Central Intelligence Agency, officials say that the actual shortfall — because of added production compensating for Iran's loss — is from 750,000 to 1 million barrels a day.

And in Paris, at the International Energy Agency, James Reddington said in a phone interview, "If you ask if there is an oil shortage, I would have to say that it has not been perceived yet." Reddington and other officials also report that none of the 19 industrial countries making up the IEA has pressed to implement the IEA's oil-sharing plan, and that long-term contract prices for crude oil — as opposed to spot sales — have not been driven dramatically upward.

"The major factor so far is that the market had a lot more slosh in it than anyone predicted," says one State Department official in explaining how a serious shortage has been avoided.

Milton Lipton, a New York international oil consultant, says, "At the moment the flow of oil and consumption are not too much out of balance."

Before the disturbances in Iran, the shah's government was exporting more than 5 million barrels of oil a day. Up until mid-January it had exported an average of almost 4 million barrels of oil a day during the previous two and a half months. The last of those oil exports, however, will soon be arriving at their ports of destination.

At the State Department, officials say that the capacity to make up the difference is clearly present in the other oil-exporting countries. If most of this is tapped, the industrial countries should be able to get by with the 350 million barrels on hand in Europe and nearly 250 million barrels in storage or in transit to Japan.

"The capacity is there," says one State Department official.

Privately, however, senior administration officials fear that the Saudis may begin reducing oil production from a recent level of more than 10.5 million barrels a day. If that happens, the fear is that other Arab cartel members such as Kuwait might follow suit. Energy Department officials fear that if that should happen, and if domestic refiners have added difficulty buying oil, the department would be pressed into implementing its allocation plans and mandating conservation measures.

"We are playing with a very thin margin," says Charles Ebinger, an international oil analyst based in Washington.

John Buckley, vice president of New England Petroleum, says, "If Iran is out for two quarters, and Saudi Arabia does cut back to 9.5 million barrels a day, there would be serious worldwide problems."

Despite public assurances that DOE is prepared to allocate crude oil and, eventually, oil products, some DOE officials express fear allocation would prove chaotic.

In anticipation of possible oil allocations, a number of major oil companies, such as Standard of California, have asked for DOE permission to update their standing under oil regulations that were initially published in 1974.

Independent refiners have likewise begun appealing to DOE for protection under existing regulations that would assure them sources of crude oil or products.

L&N still holds 'unsafe' record

EDITORS NOTE: Last June, Associated Press Writer Lee Mitgang reported that a confidential report to federal regulators had found the Louisville & Nashville Railroad had equipment and personnel problems that made it one of the most unsafe in the industry. In the following report, Mitgang takes a follow-up look at the L&N.

"substantial progress" toward upgrading its track, locomotives and general maintenance. "I don't think the L&N is in rags and tatters when you look at other railroads," said Spence. Nonetheless, from January to June of last year — the latest period for which aggregate figures are available —

Corbin division, which serves eastern Kentucky, according to James. The L&N's poor safety record first gained national attention last February, when 16 people were killed and 500 were evacuated after a train carrying hazardous cargo derailed near Waverly, Tenn. Tenn. The noxious chemical seeped into a nearby river thought to contain snail darters, an endangered species of fish. In December, 75 people were evacuated in High Cliff, Tenn., after a train carrying sulfuric acid derailed. And about 1,000 people in Atala, Ala., had to leave their homes when a car carrying propane gas derailed. Since intense federal scrutiny began more than a year ago, says James, "we found the L&N frequently over-class their track." That means the railroad was claiming that certain stretches of its rail were in better condition than they really were, thus allowing it to carry hazardous cargo on those lines.

From January to June of last year, the L&N's safety record was the nation's worst, with accidents resulting in 16 deaths, 48 injuries, and 3,950 people evacuated.

able — the L&N's safety record was the nation's worst, with accidents resulting in 16 deaths, 48 injuries, and 3,950 people evacuated.

All told, the 6,500-mile railroad, which serves 10 states, had 39 rail equipment accidents involving hazardous cargo, placing it third worst among 33 railroads carrying such cargo. "Our feeling is they're not making any progress. I think they're overwhelmed by their problems," said FRA's chief counsel, Raymond K. James. "The only thing left to us is to impose restrictions on certain lines." Spence said "any order that would prohibit carrying hazardous material is simply incredible. Practically every line in the system services hazardous material at one time or another." Among the most accident prone stretches of rail that might be subject to such restrictions are in the L&N's already begun four months before, because the L&N's safety record had been deteriorating. Since the one at Waverly, the railroad has had these accidents involving the release of hazardous material:

April 25: Five hundred people were evacuated from Bowling Green, Ky., when a train carrying dangerous cargo broke a wheel. May 19: A derailment in a yard near Evansville, Ind., caused two cars to leak toxic material. About 2,500 people were evacuated. May 29: A derailment caused by a broken rail near Mossy Head, Fla., sent 400 people fleeing from their homes. Oct. 18: A train carrying sulfuric acid was derailed because of a track problem near Madisonville, Tenn. There were four injuries, and 3,500 people were evacuated. Nov. 27: Sulfuric acid was released in a derailment near Appalachian,

The London strike, scheduled to start at midnight, was abandoned after an all-night meeting between Social Services Secretary David Enns and Alan Fisher, general secretary of the National Union of Public Employees. A rash of strikes in London's state-run National Health Service hospitals began last Tuesday over the suspension of six women cleaners at the Westminster hospitals after they refused to work in wards reserved for private patients.

Parent charges neglect

By JANET STAIHAR

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former Peoples Temple member whose son died in Guyana said today the U.S. government was aware of an "unmistakable potential for mass violence by the cult" but took no action. Grace Stoen, in prepared testimony before an unofficial congressional hearing on the cult phenomena, said such a potential for violence is not limited to the Peoples Temple. "Other cults also have a present potential for extreme violence," she said. "Some of them are far more sophisticated than the Peoples Temple."

Mrs. Stoen said that if the hearing, conducted by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., can bring such a potential "within the eyes of the public and government, perhaps such foreseeable disaster can be thwarted in the future."

The U.S. government was forewarned months in advance, not only by ex-members but also by the wife of cult leader Jim Jones, that there was a potential for mass suicide.

Another witness, Virginia Mabry, who described herself as a former member of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, said she was told to solicit money on false pretenses and commit other illegal acts to bolster the finances of the organization.

Dole said he hopes the hearing will educate members of Congress on the legal and constitutional complexities surrounding cults. Scheduled witnesses included representatives of the National Council of Churches and the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs.

Former members of the Peoples Temple and the Unification Church were also due to testify, along with Ted Patrick, who has gained notoriety for "de-programming" cult believers.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., a strong advocate of church-state separation, said in prepared testimony that invoking a religious purpose does not sanitize every enterprise carried out in the service of a supreme being.

"The First Amendment must be neither a shield for illegal or repressive activities nor a reason to hinder the free pursuit of religious philosophies, however unorthodox," said Hatfield.

But he added that "if there is obvious illegal activity, like drug and arms traffic in the Peoples Temple organization or kidnapping, extortion and misuse of tax-exempt status, then vigorous enforcement of the law is not meddling."

Dole has asked the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., to explore the tax-exempt status of religious cults.

'Domestics' cancel strike

LONDON (AP) — Domestic workers called off a strike today that threatened to paralyze services in 16 London hospitals, but hundreds of hospitals across the country continued to be plagued by slowdowns and strikes launched by their workers two weeks ago.

The London strike, scheduled to start at midnight, was abandoned after an all-night meeting between Social Services Secretary David Enns and Alan Fisher, general secretary of the National Union of Public Employees.

A rash of strikes in London's state-run National Health Service hospitals began last Tuesday over the suspension of six women cleaners at the Westminster hospitals after they refused to work in wards reserved for private patients.
