'They're coming over the wall!'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The radio receiver in the room of Sgt. Ken Kraus, 22, suddenly crackled with the alarmed report. "They're coming over the wall! ... They're coming over the wall! ... They're in the compound!"

Kraus, a member of the 20-man U.S. Marine guard detachment at the American Embassy in Tehran, said he and his Marine roommate had just come off duty and were relaxing in their quarters. They immediately raced to their assigned positions.

"The guerrillas opened fire about 10:30. There were at least 100 of them. They were on every wall around the embassy and on the surrounding rooftops," he said. "It just started popping and popping."

Kraus, who was slightly wounded in the attack and taken to a hospital, headed for his post at the embassy commissary.

"When I got there there were already some guerrillas. They were firing everywhere with automatic weapons. There was a lot of shooting."

"There were two other Marines and two or three Americans in the shopping area and the restaurant, and we shoved them back into the kitchen where we barricaded the door," he said.

"They shot in all the windows and were pounding and pounding on the door. They broke in the door and the first guy they saw, who was a Persian, they just blasted him away."

"They took us outside and made us surrender our weapons and then ordered us to strip down. All I had on was boots and trousers."

"Then one of the guerrillas, who was well dressed and spoke good English, told me he couldn't hold his men back and they wanted our weapons."

"He grabbed me by the hand. We had some weapons hidden in a freezer. I pointed to them. He said something in Farsi (the Iranian language) and suddenly someone gave me a rifle butt in the gut."

"The next thing I heard was a whang and I was on my face and started bleeding. Then I showed up at the hospital here," said Kraus of Lansdale, Pa.

During the firing, he said U.S. Ambassador William Sullivan ordered everyone to "give up. Unless your life is directly in danger don't fire." Kraus, who is on temporary assignment from Cyprus, was taken by ambulance to the nearby Amir Alaam Hospital near the embassy.

A doctor said Kraus received a flying metal fragment, apparently from a bullet, in his forehead but otherwise was not seriously hurt. The metal fragment would be removed later, he said, but the operation was minor and posed no problems.

"I assure you he is very safe here and in very good hands," he said. As he lay in his hospital bed, Kraus asked that his mother, sister and fiancée, Nina Trongone, be reassured that he was all right and being well cared for.

"I don't scare easy," he said. "But I can tell you I was scared."

Guerrillas capture embassy, wound two

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Scores of guerrillas firing automatic weapons stormed the U.S. Embassy in downtown Tehran today, wounded two Marine guards and took the ambassador and 101 other Americans hostage before rival guerrillas rescued them in a 3½-hour gun battle.

Guerrillas loyal to the new government said those who attacked the embassy were communists. One of the attackers also said communists participated in the assault.

Heavy fighting also was reported in Tabriz, 330 miles northwest of Tehran. Spokesmen for the new government named by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said there had been many casualties, but the toll could not be confirmed. There were conflicting accounts of clashes among forces faithful to the army, leftist or Marxist bands, and SAVAK, the shah's secret police.

The fighting here and in Tabriz may signal a brewing confrontation between the generally conservative supporters of the Moslem holy man Khomeini and radical leftists.

U.S. officials said 11 Americans were still in Tabriz.

After the attack on the embassy here, a shaken U.S. official, his eyes stinging from tear gas fired during the melee, told reporters outside the heavily damaged embassy complex that he believed the attackers were left-wing urban guerrillas.

Thousands of heavy weapons seized from military posts fell into the hands of militant civilians both before and after the collapse of the shah-appointed government last Sunday. Since then bands of armed men have roamed the streets, creating a vigilante atmosphere, ignoring pleas from revolutionary leaders to give up their weapons.

Lt. Col. Leland Holland, the embassy's security chief, told reporters gathered outside the embassy that the Americans had been placed under the protection of guerrillas loyal to Khomeini's government. He said staff members were free to go and most had returned to their quarters, remaining inside the embassy on the guerrillas' advice.

Holland said the 3½-hour battle for control of the embassy began at about 10:30 a.m. when snipers opened up with heavy rifle fire from the roof of a hotel across the street from the embassy. The attackers then penetrated the city-block-square compound and began pulling down the American flag.

"Marines at the embassy started shooting in the air and also firing tear-gas canisters," said George B. Lambrakis, an embassy staffer.

Ambassador William Sullivan ordered the embassy's 20 Marine guards to cease resistance and to surrender with the rest of the staff. They all were taken hostage inside the building.

U.S. spared deciding whether to send troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter considered postponing his state visit to Mexico because of developments in Iran but decided to proceed on schedule when he learned that Americans in the Tehran embassy were safe, a White House spokesman said today.

Press Secretary Jody Powell said Carter was awakened sometime after 1 a.m. by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who told him about the mob seizure of the embassy.

The president asked to be "kept on top of the situation" and was given a full briefing on the subject about 6 a.m. by Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser.

Powell, talking to newsmen en route with the president to Mexico City, said Vance, Brzezinski, Defense Secretary Harold Brown and CIA Director Stansfield Turner learned about the embassy seizure between midnight and 1 a.m. He said Vance made a phone call to Carter after receiving all available information.

Earlier, White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum told reporters at Andrews Air Force Base the administration was watching the situation in Iran "very closely."

Not long after the embassy attack occurred, the administration learned of the shooting death of Adolph Dubs, the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Iran's neighbor to the east. Dubs was the fifth U.S. ambassador to have been murdered in a little over a decade. The administration was angered at the way the Afghan government handled the situation but the sense of alarm over developments in Iran soon diminished after it was learned that the American hostages in Tehran had been released.

Later in the morning, after Carter's departure for Mexico City, top officials assembled at the State Department to discuss various options for protecting the embassy staff in Iran and the remaining 7,000 Americans in the country.

The meeting adjourned shortly before 11 a.m. with officials refusing any immediate comment on what their next moves might be.

Despite sanctuary designation, city of Midland going bird hunting

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council is going bird-hunting.

The council changed its ordinance Tuesday during a regular session to allow for removal of birds where large concentrations of them have been determined to be a health hazard.

Parents of teen-agers attending Edison Freshman School at 100 E. Gist St. Tuesday complained to the council of the large number of sparrows, cowbirds and starlings camping out in the school's atrium.

Not only do the birds cause a noise problem, but also a health hazard with the large accumulations of droppings in the enclosed patio, the council was told.

Chief Sanitarian Jewel Smith said there are about half a dozen trees where the birds roost, leaving "quite a lot of droppings. There are diseases that could be communicated to the kids, such as a fungus that could get into the lungs."

When questioned later about the seriousness of the diseases, Smith replied the fungus could remain with the person the rest of his life.

After hearing remarks about the situation, the council agreed something should be done, but tossed solutions back and forth for half an hour, unsure as to whether they could kill the birds or just harass them enough to leave.

THE PROBLEM IS heightened by the fact Midland is a designated bird sanctuary, and the city ordinance prohibits any shooting, trapping or molesting of birds.

Keith Carpenter with the Parks and Wildlife Service in San Angelo said the school definitely has a problem. The proposed solution to trap the birds produces another problem — what to do with them. Carpenter suggested using scare devices and offered the services of his office in ridding the school of the birds.

But, as someone pointed out, "scaring doesn't solve the problem. It only sends them somewhere else."

The ordinance finally was changed to read that a city health officer or animal control director would first have to determine if there was a problem with the birds.

"Then, such birds may be trapped or otherwise eliminated by a professional trapper or animal shelter personnel without such activity constituting a molesting of such birds or any other violation of this section or any other section."

In other council business Tuesday, Midland residents were given another two weeks to review the proposed one-way streets for Illinois and Texas avenues. And those opposing turning Cuthbert Avenue into a one-way street got a reprieve.

Kevin Durham of 2803 Sentinel Drive outlined traffic problems that could stem from a one-way designation on Cuthbert between Ward and Garfield streets, summarizing the plan "ignores the reality of the situation."

ONE MAJOR PROBLEM would be an increase in traffic along Storey Street, with it spilling onto Garfield at an uncontrolled intersection.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. admitted that plan is "more of a bandaid."

The council voted unanimously not to adopt it.

But the feeling went the opposite

Carter wants to listen during trip to Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A festive crowd estimated at 5,000 children and peasants, some waving flags and others shaking maracas, greeted President Carter today as he arrived for a three-day visit that is expected to focus on cross-border differences over oil, trade and immigration.

Carter said before embarking on the trip that he will "listen and learn" during the visit, searching for what he called "a new sense of partnership" with Mexico.

The president's airplane touched down shortly after noon EST at Benito Juarez International Airport, where Carter was greeted by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo and a crowd of schoolchildren, uniformed military personnel and civilians.

Some in the crowd displayed portraits of Carter and of Lopez Portillo. One person beat on a drum and others waved maracas.

After the arrival ceremonies, Carter and Lopez Portillo planned private discussions at the National Palace.

Carter's other scheduled activities included a walking tour of an ancient Aztec archaeological site, a mid-afternoon luncheon hosted by Lopez Portillo, a wreath-laying ceremony at the city's Independence Monument and an evening of ballet.

Although the three-day visit is heavy with such highly visible activities, including a trip on Thursday to a small village more than two hours' drive from the capital, the main business of the visit is expected to be the extended and private discussions between Carter and Lopez Portillo over the strained state of U.S.-Mexican relations.

Carter was awakened during the night to be informed of the armed assault on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, but the Iranian developments caused no change of plans for the trip to Mexico.

Carter told a Mexican television audience last week he believes a new relationship has flourished since he entertained Portillo as the administration's first state visitor two years ago.

But perceptions are quite different in Mexico, where many officials still feel they are treated as a junior partner of the United States.

What has changed in two years, all agree, is Mexico's economic potential, with its oil resources now calculated to approach and perhaps rival those of Saudi Arabia.

Armed with this economic trump card, Lopez Portillo wants to discuss a possible oil deal with the United States as part of a package embracing trade and immigration.

Carter will try to reach an agreement on a U.S. purchase of natural gas, but it would be only a general

Valentines special for this post office

By GUY SULLIVAN

Not every letter that circulates through Doris Kelley's domain is sealed with a kiss. But each one is stamped Valentine.

The volume of mail that flows through her small post office every February belies the size of Valentine, a tiny West Texas town of 212 persons 38 miles south of Van Horn.

It's a tradition that goes back a few years," said Mrs. Kelley. "A lot of people just like to have Valentines postmarked from Valentine, Texas."

The steel-driving men who built the Southern Pacific Railroad line reached this spot on Valentine's day in the late 1890's and "that's how the town got its name," she said.

But now its hearts and flowers center for faraway lovers. Every year Mrs. Kelley contends with more than 1,000 stamped, addressed Valentines she postmarks and dispatches to points across the United States and Canada.

Mrs. Kelley, a 30-year-resident of Valentine, said she postmarks the Valentines "Valentine, Texas" before mailing them on to their destinations.

She said, "People mail their Valentines first class to the Postmaster, Valentine, Texas, 79854."

"We received a bunch of Valentines this year," she said. The townfolks don't celebrate Valentine's Day to any great extent, she said. "The biggest thing that happens is that students from Valentine School, which has over 100 kids, get together for a Valentine's Day dance and party."

'Balanced budget' could create ills

By LINDA HILL, Staff Writer

If the federal budget was balanced this year so that there was no deficit, the U.S. would experience unemployment and inflation rates of about 9 percent each, members of the Midland Business and Estate Council were told Tuesday night.

Dr. Stanley R. Reber, vice president and economist for Texas American Bancshares Inc., told the group the budget ideally should balance out over the life of a complete business cycle.

But, said the University of Chicago Ph.D., he is opposed to a constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget except in declared emergencies.

"I don't want to take away the right of the federal government to have a deficit if we're in a recession," he said.

REBER PREDICTED a mild recession during the latter part of 1979, with recovery by the end of the second quarter of 1980.

The economist said the "equilibrium" rate of real growth — growth less inflation — is about 3 percent, but the rate for the last three and a half years has averaged 4 1/2 to 5 percent.

A 3 percent growth would be "good luck," he said, but he added that he doesn't think it will be that high in 1979.

Achieving that goal would require good monetary and fiscal policy: "no external shocks," such as revolutions in Iran; good inventory policy by the business community, and consumers behaving in a "perfect and stable way," Reber said.

THE ONLY REASON for the high growth since mid-1975 has been a "consumers' binge" brought on by "an inflation high," he said.

Reber estimated that up to 40 percent of large-ticket purchases, including houses and cars, has been the result not of need, but rather because of a reaction to inflation.

"It cannot go on forever," he added, saying houses are "one to a customer" and the added push on automobiles will end when everyone has purchased one year earlier than usual.

"There is a real fear that in 1979 we're going to see below equilibrium spending," he said.

Reber declined to speculate on what kind of "external shocks" the economy might suffer during the coming year, but he did predict the effect from them likely will be bad, also.

AND, HE SAID, the federal government is not likely to react as it usually does to try to avoid an economic slowdown because of its concern with the inflation rate.

In the short run, he added, the only way to curb inflation is to slow down economic growth.

However, the recession should be mild, he said, in part because the American business community learned the need for close inventory control during the 1973-74 recession.

In that case, Reber recalled, consumer spending slowed down six months before the business community suddenly realized inventories were piling up. Then production had to be cut below actual sales, he said.

The effect of that was to throw more people out of work, who then were able to purchase even less, said Reber.

"IT'S SORT OF LIKE a cat chasing its tail," he said. This time, however, "There are no signs whatsoever of that happening," he added.

Another reason Reber gave for predicting an end to the expected recession by the middle of 1980 is that "1980 is still a presidential year."

"And they (government officials) do know how to manage the economy growth... If push comes to shove, in 1980 they will ignore inflation, at least until the election's over," the economist said.

However, even with a recession, Reber held out scant hope for an inflation rate of less than 8 percent by the end of 1979 or of a prime interest rate of less than 10 percent.

TO CURE THE LONG-TERM ills of the economy, Reber suggested changing tax policy and cutting government regulation in a "bottom-up" approach to boosting the economy.

He said he is "mildly optimistic" about the economy because he sees hope in both areas.

"Our tax policy basically penalizes savings, and thus, investment," which he said go hand-in-hand.

Tax cuts traditionally have gone 95 percent to the consumer, with the vast majority of that going to low- and middle-income groups, he said.

But, in 1978, one-third of the tax cut went to the business community. "Most shocking," however, was a cut in the capital gains tax.

"APPARENTLY, IT'S NOW good politics to cut capital gain taxes, and that helps rich people, the bad guys," he said.

Secondly, he said, cutting down on governmental regulation would make individual industries work better and more efficiently.

Reber used the airline industry as an example, saying it used to be the worst example of prices being kept up because of regulation. Now, though, he said, a cutback in government regulation has changed the industry's situation entirely.

U.S. ambassador slain in Afghanistan capital

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, Adolph Dubs, was killed in Kabul today after being kidnapped by members of the Shiite Moslem sect, the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi reported.

Embassy spokesman Arthur Lefkowitz said Dubs' automobile was stopped this morning on a Kabul road by two or three men who opened the door and told the ambassador they were arresting him.

His abductors took him to a hotel in downtown Kabul, the Afghan capital, and demanded the release of Shiite mullahs, or religious teachers, recently arrested by the leftist government, the spokesman continued.

The government refused to negotiate and a police force reportedly attacked the hotel, another U.S. diplomatic source said. Afterward, the U.S. Embassy in Kabul was informed Dubs had been killed.

"We don't know whether the ambassador was killed during the attack or before the attack," the source said.

The embassy also did not know why the mullahs were arrested or how many were being held.

"Our information is very sketchy at this point," said Lefkowitz.

The kidnap-killing of the ambassador coincided with an attack on the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the capital of neighboring Iran. But although the Iranian revolution is led by that country's Shiite Moslem patriarch, there was no apparent connection between the two attacks. The Shiites are the majority sect in Iran while in Afghanistan they are greatly outnumbered by the Sunni Moslems, their traditional enemies.

Dubs, a 58-year-old native of Illinois, went to Kabul after the April 27, 1977, coup which overthrew President Mohammed Daoud and installed a leftist, pro-Soviet regime headed by President Nur Mohammed Taraki.

A naval officer during World War II, he joined the State Department in 1949. He was an expert on Soviet affairs and served at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow as well as at the embassies in Liberia, Canada and Yugoslavia. He also had been deputy assistant secretary of state for South Asian affairs.

Clark, who was in the House for 20 years, originally was charged in a 13-count indictment, but the federal government agreed to drop 11 of the charges when Clark is sentenced.

No sentencing date has been set. Authorities said Clark failed to report $8,941 in income in 1972, for which he owed $1,379 in taxes.

In response to a question from the audience, Reber predicted mandatory wage and price controls if there are six consecutive months of double-digit inflation.

Not only would those controls be mandatory, he said, but also there likely would be other forms of control.

Reber said those controls might take the form of a 36-month limit on automobile loans, the outlawing of "money market" certificates of deposit, or, perhaps, a federal usury law setting interest maximums.

agreement, said John Ferch, the U.S. embassy's deputy chief of mission. "Presidents don't talk about prices," he said.

Negotiations for the purchase of Mexican natural gas have been stalled more than a year because Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger balked at Mexico's asking price — $2.61 per thousand cubic feet direction on Illinois and Texas one-way streets. Attorney Pat Baskin, representing several business owners with firms near U.S. Highway 80 East, said the plan would hurt the small businessman.

Outlining a trip to an East Illinois Avenue business location using the proposed one-way streets which would involve crossing East U.S. Highway 80 twice, Baskin said, "The route almost dares you to try to get there. It is almost as though we are building a stockade around this tiny area."

Fred Baker, director of public works, said officials with Gibraltar Savings Association asked for two more weeks. This will give them time to talk with architects about how one-way streets would affect the design of the new building going up between Texas and Illinois avenues.

A NEW PLAN submitted by Baker calls for the one-way streets to end at Fort Worth Street, possibly easing the situation for the small businesses located past that.

Angelo added that one-way streets have been successful in other cities. "Midland has reached the point where we need to look at one-way streets to improve our traffic flow. This one (with Illinois and Texas) has merit to it," he said.

Pioneer Natural Gas Co. had its rate hike approved on second reading. Residential users will begin paying 19.81 percent more on their bills. Also approved were a standard service charge and decrease in the amount of free line the company will install.

G. Thane Akins and Tom Sloan, council members, will work with the Housing Authority in reviewing a single family mortgage revenue bond program. Harry Clark, chairman of the authority, said the plan would provide house loans for middle-income people.

Loans would be made at 7 percent interest with an addition 1/4 percent for service fees. The best points of the program, he said, are that safeguards are built in to avoid abuse, and funds are administered locally without federal government interference.

Approved by the council were ordinances finalizing purchase of the Wemple Property which will be used in designing a total concept for the block housing the Exhibit Hall.

THE CITY WILL GO out for separate bids to build the ticket counter addition at Midland Regional Airport for Braniff Airlines, who will be starting service March 15, and an addition to the air cargo space.

BFW Construction, the firm currently doing the work at Midland Regional Airport, wants to finish by May and go on to other jobs, the council was told.

Parkhill, Smith and Cooper was given the go-ahead on final design of a new Federal Aviation Administration building at the airport.

Zone changes requested by HBF Corp. for land at FM 868 and Garfield St., to LR-2, local retail district were given the council's OK.

Zone changes requested for Clyde Brown's development on the north side of FM 868 and west of Midkiff were approved. But the zone for Planned District high rise office buildings was given a five year stipulation. If there is no development on the land specified for high-rise offices within five years, the city can reconsider the zoning.

Preliminary plats for Polo Club Addition and Pollard Addition were approved.

Today's gusty winds should die down to 10 to 15 mph tonight, and no rain is in sight to change the monthly precipitation total of .18 inch or the annual accumulation of .34 inch.

Pinochet, 63, maintains iron grip on Chile despite widespread unrest

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — An international murder touches high up in his government, war is narrowly averted with Argentina, a spy scandal erupts with Peru, and foreign labor unions threaten the economy.

At home, his proposed new constitution runs into opposition, the remains of probable victims of repression are dug out of a mine, labor is unhappy, the church criticizes his government.

Yet, Augusto Pinochet Ugarte endures.

The 63-year-old army general presides over Chile like an iron-willed father pounding at the head of the table. He preaches patriotism, family life, hard work and religious orthodoxy. Those who raise questions about the darker side of his rule are accused of being communists or their dupes.

And nearly 5½ years after leading the coup against the late Salvador Allende and his Socialist regime, Pinochet shows no readiness to vacate the chair.

His many critics have been claiming — and hoping — for months that Pinochet was on the verge of being shown the door by more moderate army generals who would turn the nation toward elective democracy.

"I am firm. Very firm," he insisted to journalists last July after an especially large spate of rumors.

The air force, then led by Gen. Gustavo Leigh, was in virtual rebellion against Pinochet's slow timetable for civilian government. Indictments were expected any day from the Washington grand jury investigating the murder of exiled Socialist Orlando Letelier, and it was an open secret that three former officials of the Chilean secret police would be named, including a general close to Pinochet.

With Leigh nipping at Pinochet's heels at the same time as the indictments came down, things would surely come to a head — so went the reasoning of opponents and some observers.

Pinochet was ahead of them. On July 24 he fired Leigh as air force commander and kicked him out of the four-man ruling junta.

The indictments were issued on Aug. 1, but the reaction in Chile was calm, even when U. S. diplomats delivered cartons of evidence to start the long extradition process.

Since then, however, Pinochet's burdens have multiplied in this order:

— Labor unrest grew, partly as a reaction to the declaration of a state of siege around the Chuquibambilla copper mine on Sept. 1 and the banishment of 52 workers to the desert.

— Negotiations with Argentina in the dispute over three islands and surrounding waters near Cape Horn broke down on Nov. 2. Both countries sent their fleets into the area and put troops on alert.

— The Roman Catholic bishops criticized Pinochet's proposed constitution, said a constitutional assembly should be convened instead, and expressed displeasure with his labor policies. Opposition to the constitution also surged within the Pinochet-appointed Council of State.

— Led by the AFL-CIO, unions in a number of Western Hemisphere nations threatened to mount an international boycott against handling goods from or for Chile unless Pinochet changed his labor policies.

— Church officials uncovered a group of human remains in the abandoned Lonquen limestone quarry. Pinochet himself acknowledged they were probably some of the more than 650 leftists reported missing in security police hands since 1973.

— Soon after Vatican mediation diffused the crisis with Argentina, the spy affair erupted with Chile's northern neighbor. Peru expelled several Chilean military men and the ambassador, and executed one of its own men for passing secrets.

So far, Pinochet has skirted all of these problems or seen them simply evaporate. He has indicated he plans to stay in power 8-10 more years, but a dissident retired air force general claims that the regime, with or without Pinochet, plans to stay more than 20 years.

Critics privately characterize Pinochet as another Franco and say the civilians he has been appointing to his Cabinet share his views more fully than former ministers from the military.

Pinochet, his wife, five grown children and various other relatives appear to enjoy the trappings of power. The family lives in the army commander's residence, which was rebuilt after the coup at an estimated cost of $1.5 million. They have bought at least one other expensive piece of real estate themselves.

Surveys by the Chilean Gallup organization conclude that Pinochet is well liked by the majority of the population.

Mrs. Lucia Pinochet Hiriart is an active first lady, presiding over the vast network of women's handicraft centers and traveling with her husband. His mother is feted by the Friends of the Ballet. Two sons-in-law head government corporations, one being the state television network. Three thousand people were invited to the recent wedding of the youngest Pinochet daughter.

Hurrah for Sears!

Practically all business firms of any size in the nation are finding it more and more difficult — even to the point of impossibility in some cases — to live up to all the federal "fair hiring" rules.

And thank goodness that one of the nation's largest business concerns is attempting to do something about it.

Yes sir, Sears, Roebuck and Co., which hires one-two hundredths of America's entire labor force, finally has given up trying to fulfill all the bureaucratic demands, and has filed a class-action law suit against the federal government.

Or, to be more specific, the suit is against 10 of the government's top agencies — the number directly involved in Sears' problem: Attempting to abide by all the "fair hiring" regulations.

Sears, filing the suit on behalf of every American business with 16 or more employees, alleges that federal laws created the white, male dominance among workers through the GI Bill of Rights, veterans preference laws, Selective Service, restrictions on women and blacks in the military, and vocational and educational programs. Under the newest federal rules, these white males can work until age 70.

But on the other hand, other federal agencies demand that Sears hire women and minorities ... "until they have made compliance possible."

And therein lies a most difficult problem facing business institutions today.

Edward R. Telling, Sears' board chairman, said the time has come "to end government practices which are working at cross purposes, hampering real progress and discouraging voluntary efforts."

It is recognized by all businessmen that federal bureaucracy is strangling business and adding untold millions of dollars to the costs of doing business.

But what is not so generally known is the fact that all such costs ultimately must be passed on to the consumer.

Federal regulations have and are increasing the cost of practically every item from a loaf of bread to a new automobile. And again, it is the consumer who eventually pays the overall bill.

It isn't just the "fair hiring" rules either, but rather the thousands of government demands, many of which are absolutely unnecessary.

It was past time for someone to speak out in this regard. So, we join many, many others in shouting "Three Cheers for Sears!"

As stated, the law suit was filed on behalf of Sears and other businesses. But a favorable decision undoubtedly would result in benefits for each and every American.

ART BUCHWALD

It's goodbye to Mr. Big, and where do I eat now?

WASHINGTON — Something happened in Washington last week that has caused great consternation in the power structure of this town. Paul de Lisle, the maitre d'hotel at the Sans Souci Restaurant, resigned, leaving a vacuum in the luncheon scene that is hard to fill. There are better restaurants than the Sans Souci in the capital, and one would be hard pressed in recent years to give it even one star. But the Sans had other things going for it — the most important being Paul.

Paul was really the Mr. Big in this city — the man to whom all of us went to get our orders. He never took credit for it, but it was his idea to send Henry Kissinger to China during the Nixon Administration.

He got the idea when he overheard the Soviet ambassador tell the Polish minister at Table 5 that the Russians would take a very dim view of the United States recognizing the People's Republic of China.

During the Cuban missile crisis, Paul was constantly on the phone to President Kennedy. "I heard an NKVD man," Paul told the President, "say that if you eyeballed it, the Russians would be the first to blink."

Art Buchwald

This is probably the first time it's appeared in print, but Paul came up with the idea for President Johnson's domestic program. Jack Valenti, who then worked for Johnson, was sitting at Table 12 with Bill Moyers. Paul stopped by the table and Jack said, "Paul, who are the people who eat here?" Paul replied, "To my knowledge, they are all members of a great society."

At that moment Johnson called and said, "Where are you, Jack?" "I'm eating with the great society," Jack replied.

"That's it," President Johnson said. "What would you think about calling my program 'The Great Society'?"

"It sounds great to me," Valenti said. "Who asked you?" Johnson wanted to know.

There was some talk at the time of Watergate that Paul was "Deep Throat." My suspicions were aroused early in the scandal when Paul did not recognize Bob Woodward or Carl Bernstein when they came into the restaurant. He told Bernstein he couldn't seat him unless he wore a tie and a jacket. Bernstein said, as he left in a huff, "We'll talk about this in the garage tomorrow morning."

As for myself, it is no secret that I ate at the Sans Souci for lunch every day at the same table. The reason for this was that Paul was my main source of news for the column. We had our own code. When he said, "The roast lamb is very good today," that meant we were sending 50 more fighter planes to Saudi Arabia. Or if he handed me the wine list and remarked that the Beaujolais Villages was drinkable, it really meant that the Fed was going to raise interest rates by 2 percent.

It was no accident that I found 18-2 minutes of Nixon's missing tape in my spaghetti one day. Paul had cleverly denied putting it there.

I've had a lot of calls since Paul's departure asking me where I planned to eat lunch, now that he is no longer at the Sans Souci.

Duke Zeibert has offered me a free baked potato with my steak. Paul Young says I can have all the after-dinner mints I can eat, and the Maison Blanche, a new restaurant in the Federal Home Loan Bank Building on 17th and G Streets, has offered me the same interest rate on my house as the National Bank of Georgia gave Jimmy Carter on his farm.

But I'm keeping my options open. This is a very class-conscious town, and as Pierre Salinger told me when I first got here, "You are where you eat."

Pakistan's dilemma

The Supreme Court of Pakistan has upheld the death sentence of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the deposed prime minister convicted of conspiring to murder a political opponent.

The International Commission of Jurists, Amnesty International, and many others have questioned the fairness of his trial, but the present government of Pakistan should be considering clemency in its own interest.

Despite his shortcomings as a prime minister and his alleged involvement in an assassination plot, Bhutto remains a popular political figure in Pakistan. Demonstrations protesting the carrying out of his death sentence followed quickly after the supreme court's divided decision. It is noted that Turkey has agreed to accept Bhutto as an exile with a promise that he would not be allowed to use that country as a base for political activity. This offers one way for Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, who overthrew Bhutto in 1977, to remove him from the scene without the provocation of an execution.

To send Mr. Bhutto to the gallows amid suspicions that he was railroaded through a trial and conviction could light a fuse leading to an explosion of civil disorder in Pakistan. That country already has enough problems. So does the region in which it lies. Last year's pro-Soviet coup in Afghanistan and the shock waves from the collapse of the shah's government in Iran should give Pakistan enough to worry about without a crisis of its own.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Shah warned Sadat about Carter

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — President Carter and the Central Intelligence Agency have been getting their lumps from just about everybody for not knowing what was going on in Iran, supporting the shah until it was too late and failing to cultivate contacts with the exiled Muslim leader Ayatollah Khomeini.

But there is one man, perhaps the only man in the world, who believes just the opposite: Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi. Bittered and increasingly paranoid since he was forced last month to flee the nation he had ruled and looted, the shah believes Carter and the CIA knew all too well what was happening in Iran. In fact, he actually believes the CIA engineered his fall from power and the ascendancy of Khomeini.

This astonishing interpretation of recent events, which flies in the face of conventionally accepted reality, was expressed just hours after the shah fled into "temporary" exile. He had a private talk with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat at Aswan on Jan. 16; intelligence sources have provided us with a detailed report of this top-secret conversation.

While Carter's critics have faulted him for blindly supporting the shah in the face of mounting evidence that he was losing his grip on Iran, the shah himself credits Carter with the most astute diplomatic double-dealing since Talleyrand. And while the CIA's detractors have castigated the agency for ignoring Khomeini, the shah told Sadat that as early as last spring he had undeniable information that "American agents are flirting with the opposition."

The U.S. embassy in Tehran convinced him, said the shah, that a prerequisite for better understanding of President Carter was the dismissal of Gen. Nematollah Nassiri, head of Iran's secret police. When he fired Nassiri on June 6, 1978, under U.S. pressure, he told the Egyptian president that left-wing Moscow-led groups in Iran interpreted this as a sign of weakness and stepped up their opposition with massive strikes.

The president later hailed Nassiri's ouster as evidence of the shah's concern for human rights, said the shah. He told Sadat that "the biggest double-crossing took place" when Carter reaffirmed his support for Iran, knowing full well that American agents already had "open channels" to Khomeini.

If that was the biggest, what the shah described as "the most disgusting" double-crossing and treason (sic) was carried out in the final days of the January crisis in Tehran. The shah, acting on American advice, decided to leave Iran temporarily to enable the military and his other supporters to keep Khomeini from returning and pave the way for the shah's eventual return to power.

Actually, according to the shah's unique view of events, the Americans were warning the Iranian military that if they tried to seize control and bring the shah back, the United States would cut off all supplies and assistance. This warning was delivered, the shah told Sadat, to top Iranian brass by Gen. Robert E. Huyser, second in command of American forces in Europe, and word of the warning was passed on to Khomeini in Paris.

It was this sneaky power play, the shah said, that made it possible for Khomeini to return from exile and which thwarted the shah's plan to regain his throne. In light of his experience, the shah told Sadat, the Egyptian president should not trust the Carter administration or take its advice.

Footnote: A CIA spokesman said the agency could not comment on the shah's interpretation of events.

UNDER THE DOME: The lone dissenting vote on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee against appointment of an ambassador-at-large to state and local governments came from Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb.

The freshman senator, a former Omaha mayor, said he had nothing against the nominee, W. Beverly Carter, one of the State Department's top-ranking blacks. The senator simply feels there is no need for such liaison between Foggy Bottom and local government. "It's just another layer of bureaucracy," groaned Zorinsky. "I guess we've run out of countries and islands in which to place patronage ambassadorships."

As the Senate's only woman member, freshman Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., is taking pains to bring to the august body the niceties of etiquette that men traditionally expect from her gender. She had an aide call all her fellow senators' staffs to find out how they would like her to greet them when they meet. The aide found that most prefer her to address them formally as "senator," though first names are customary among the boys themselves. Two were less stuffy: Henry Jackson, D-Wash., likes to be called "Scoop," and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., likes to be called "Walkin' Lawton." Or so, at any rate, his aide told Kassebaum's office.

Has the lust in Jimmy Carter's heart been born again? At a recent White House luncheon meeting with Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., and his wife, Kathleen, the president told Murphy he has the "prettiest wife" in Congress. Replied Murphy: "I agree."

Mark Russell says

In Washington, it's just one demonstration after another. Next week — Gay Feminist Indian Farmers Against the Shah. Their slogan — "Let's come out of the closet and get back our land to reserve the right to choose between 90 percent parity and Ayatollah Khomeini."

Some farmers do better financially than others. It would help if they had better understanding, higher supports — and Burt Lance as their banker.

Both sides have a point. Farmers are hurting but so are consumers. The demonstrations make about as much sense as going to a farm and setting fire to a shopping cart.

BIBLE VERSE

"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." — John 3:14.

NICK THIMMESCH

How about giving Vietnam veteran a pat on the back!

WASHINGTON — It is more than a decade since the Tet offensive and half that long since the last U.S. troops left Vietnam. And yet the agonizing question keeps boiling, and with it, the fretting over servicemen who served there.

More than his brothers-in-arms of previous wars, the Vietnam veteran has been limelighted and probed for psychic damage resulting from our failure to achieve purpose in that still embattled region.

In alternate fits of compassion or guilt-salving, writers produce dirges about how depressed, alcoholic, drug-addicted, suicidal and tormented many Vietnam veterans are, and how their work and marriages are messed up.

Now after every war, some citizens view returning veterans suspiciously, fearful that they might figure in a sensational headline, i.e., "Crazed Vet Slays Five," but never expecting or seeing one reading, "Crazed Anti-War Protestor Slays Five" or "Crazed Podiatrist Slays Five."

Still, it can be argued that Vietnam was rougher on our soldiers than previous wars. So there is quick temptation to throw federal money at the problem of anguished veterans, and perhaps incidentally relieve certain guilt-ridden souls who stayed home.

The Veterans Administration wants $10 million to establish "readjustment counseling" for the 700,000 Vietnam veterans it estimates still suffer emotional wounds inflicted from taking part in a useless war, and being subjected to a society's taunts, if not Sure, that's a simplistic pat-on-the-back, but sometimes that's what a person needs who has been part of an unpopular losing effort.

The U.S. involvement in Indochina grew out of our idealistic role in the years after World War II to help what we thought were efforts by nations to be free and democratic. We learned differently, but our intentions in Indochina were the best.

The Americans who served there were overwhelmingly brave and honorable. If they got into drugs, corruption or A.W.O.L., so, in kind, did their kinfolk in World War II and Korea. Some 95 percent of Vietnam veterans received honorable discharges, and most of them are getting along all right in life.

Their father can tell them that anyone who served in World War II would have vastly preferred being captured in Europe than in Asia, for human life ends quicker in the East. Consequently, Indochina was excessively brutal, by Western values, and some of it rubbed off on Americans.

On scale, however, it was the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese who were the worst. There are differences in values, and Americans did not commit in number or character the atrocities the enemy did. We had My Lai, but we punished Capt. Calley. The enemy had 1,000 My Lais, and never ever thought of punishing its guilty.

It was not the American soldier who botched Vietnam. It was more likely the work of technocratic planners in Washington. If guilt should be felt, there's still plenty to be assigned to those who corrupted the anti-war movement by going to Hanoi, serving the Communist enemy, and causing more bloodshed. But America is understanding or oblivious enough to such treachery not to shave Jane Fonda's hair or put an indelible mark on the likes of Ramsey Clark, David Dellner, or Noam Chomsky.

The prosaic truth is that the vast majority of Americans, if pushed to think about it, do not feel shame over Vietnam, nor should they. Nor do they want Vietnam veterans to feel such debilitating guilt. The prosaic truth is that Vietnam veterans are more like the rest of the population than they are dissimilar. They do not have a vested interest in malaise over this tragic war, as some guilt-ridden in this capital do. If the subject comes up, give the veteran a pat on the back, and wish him godspeed. Life goes on.

France seeking cease-fire in Chad's newest internal struggle

PARIS (AP) — Premier Hissene Habre's forces are reported gaining ground in Africa's newest war, to oust President Felix Malloum of Chad, and France is seeking a cease-fire in its former colony.

Before communications were lost Tuesday with the capital of N'Djamena, the city of 400,000 was said to be divided into opposing camps and numerous casualties were reported.

Gen. Louis Forrest, commander of French troops in the former colony in north central Africa, was said to be trying to arrange the truce as the fighting moved into its third day.

Chad gained independence from France in 1960. The French government said Tuesday its forces in Chad were not involved in the latest fighting, which it called an internal matter.

Pierre Hunt, spokesman for French

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, said France "is only a sad observer to the situation in Chad, in which we have no right to intervene."

Agence France-Presse said Habre's "Army of the North" had moved into residential quarters in the northern part of the embattled city and taken over the villas of some French residents, warning other French to remain in their homes. The French news agency reported Habre's men took over a telecommunications facility in the capital and shut it down.

The fighting was touched off Monday by a clash among rival student groups, culminating a long-standing feud between the two leaders over national policy.

Authorities said the student clash followed arguments over whether to obey a strike call by Habre followers. Government soldiers fired in the air to disperse an angry crowd of students and Habre's men fired on the regulars, AFP said.

Soon after, government forces reportedly attacked Habre's residence with rocket and mortar fire, but he was reported to have escaped and fled the capital.

Fallen Washington bridge causes problems for state, federal officials

PORT LUDLOW, Wash. (AP) — State and federal officials are wondering how to cope with the loss of the Hood Canal Floating Bridge, part of which sank during a severe storm.

Thirteen giant pontoons, each weighing nearly 5,000 tons, broke loose from cables during a storm early Tuesday and sank, taking the roadway with them.

The 1.3-mile long bridge linked the Kitsap and Olympic peninsulas, spanning Hood Canal, an arm of Puget Sound. It was used heavily during the summer by tourists and loggers.

William Gassman, a spokesman for the state Transportation Department, said officials were considering use of a ferry or bringing in Army pontoons to restore traffic across the canal.

Gassman added that he didn't know how long it would take to reopen the bridge.

This week is National Office of Education Association Week, and Gov. Bill Clements has proclaimed Feb. 11-17 as Vocational Office of Education Week. Judges from throughout West Texas to meet here

Numerous judges from throughout the state were to converge on Midland today for a three-day West Texas Judicial Conference with Texas Attorney General Mark White as featured speaker.

Registration was to start at 4 p.m. today in the lobby of The Midland Hilton. A reception will begin at 7 p.m. in the Galleria Room of the First National Bank.

White will give his address from noon to 1:30 p.m. Thursday in The Midland Hilton.

Also scheduled Thursday are speeches by 205th District Court Judge Sam W. Callan of El Paso and 72nd District Court Judge Denzil Bevers of Lubbock.

A panel discussion will be headed by Callan and Bevers along with 121st District Court Judge M.C. Ledbetter of Martin, 104th District Court Judge Neil Daniel of Abilene, Texas Adult Probation Commission Executive Director Don Stiles of Austin and Lubbock attorney Donald M. Hunt.

Speaking Thursday afternoon will be First Court of Civil Appeals Judge Phil Peden of Houston, Court of Criminal Appeals Judge Carl Dally of Austin, a panel discussion by Eighth Court of Civil Appeals Judge Max Osborn of El Paso, 11th Court of Civil Appeals Judge Austin McCloud of Eastland and Seventh Court of Civil Appeals Judge Charles Reynolds of Amarillo.

Friday's sessions is to include addresses by Osborn, 19th District Court Judge Bill Logue of Waco, Texas Supreme Court Judge Charles W. Barrow of Austin and another panel discussion.

This panel will include Seventh Administrative Judge Perry D. Pickett of Midland, Ninth Administrative Judge Howard C. Davison of Lubbock and Sixth Administrative Judge Ross E. Doughty of Uvalde.

Closing remarks Friday will be made by 64th District Court Judge John T. Boyd of Plainview.

Congressmen plan sugar price boosting legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some sugar state congressmen, reacting to the Carter administration's efforts to forge a compromise sugar price support bill, plan to introduce bills of their own.

Aides to Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said Tuesday the two senators plan to enlist more than 20 co-sponsors for a bill that would boost sugar prices well above a level the administration would consider tolerable.

Like Church and Long, most co-sponsors would hail from sugar states.

In the House, Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D-

Oregon, chairman of Ways and Means, planned to introduce sugar bills within days.

The Long-Church bill would be far more generous to the $2 billion a year domestic sugar industry than the House plans. It would set a market price objective for the 1978 raw sugar crop of 17 cents a pound. It is now about 15.15 cents.

Over the next three years, the price would escalate according to rising production costs.

The bill is much like the unsuccessful one introduced by Sen. Church last year. It would exclude the direct subsidy payments to producers favored by the administration.

The Foley-Ullman bill would set a market price objective of 15.25 cents a pound for the '78 crop with an additional half-cent direct payment to producers.

An escalation clause would allow for price support increases geared to rising production costs over the next three years and could mean a price of 19 cents a pound by 1982.

MC announcing Ham radio course

Midland College has announced the start of a non-credit evening short course in Ham radio beginning Tuesday.

In making the announcement James Bramlett, director of the MC department of community services, also noted that the course in graphoanalysis, originally scheduled to begin next week has been rescheduled for Feb. 26.

The Ham Radio course is designed for beginners who need to learn basic radio theory, FCC rules and regulations and Morse code.

During a period of six weeks, Bryant Saxon will cover enough information to prepare students for the amateur radio novice license exam which will be given at the close of the course, said MC officials.

Classes meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 100 of the Occupational-Technical Building. The fee is $24.

Those interested in learning Ham radio should pre-register now in room 140 of the Occupational-Technical Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays. The office will remain open during the lunch hour. More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

Odessan satisfactory after cougar attack

ODESSA — A 3-year-old boy was listed in satisfactory condition today in Medical Center Hospital here, recovering from lacerations he received in an attack Monday from a captive cougar.

Stan Williamson Jr., of Odessa, received head and neck lacerations at his babysitter's residence when the animal escaped from its pen and leaped at the child.

However, the babysitter's dog, a Weimaraner, attacked the cougar and saved the child's life, according to the boy's father.

Theaters showing the newly released film will be notified to "take whatever security precautions necessary" at Paramount's expense, according to Gordon Weaver, Paramount's senior vice president in charge of marketing.

The film, set in the Bronx, deals with an embattled gang having to fight its way past a rival gang to reach its own neighborhood. A half-dozen other youth gang films are scheduled for release this spring.

Catholic bishops promise efforts on behalf of poor

PUEBLA, Mexico (AP) — Latin America's Roman Catholic bishops ended their conference setting their policy for the next 10 years with a promise of increasingly vigorous efforts on behalf of the poor.

The document released Tuesday condemned both materialistic capitalism and atheistic Marxism, saying neither is a solution to the grinding poverty of Latin America, where nearly half the world's 750 million Roman Catholics live.

It called for action to end oppression exercised in the name of "national security" and vigorously denounced persecution, torture and other repressive tactics to control the poor and illiterate. It also called for a return to the church's pastoral role, as demanded by conservatives, but within a larger framework demanded by activist clergy of the "liberation" school.

It said the church "will give importance to urban ministry, rural ministry, the importance of the laity, recognize the validity of basic communities, give greater importance to the means of social communication and become involved for the sake of evangelization."

Bishop Nevin Hayes of Chicago said the document "in no way" conflicts with Pope John Paul II's instructions to the conference Jan. 27 when he inaugurated the session at the Palofoxian Seminary on the outskirts of Puebla.

Militant priests and lay people who feared a retreat from the activism-generated by the bishops' 1968 conference held a counter-conference in a Puebla hotel but also approved the bishops' long declaration.

"It is doubtful that the military regimes will be able to take advantage of the document," the counter-conference said. "On the other hand, it will allow the church to continue its work in favor of the poor and oppressed."

The conference secretary, conservative Archbishop Alfonso Lopez Trujillo of Colombia, said there was unity in the conference on the document. But an Argentine delegate said the counter-conference's criticism of conservatism within the church was a "mosquito bite" compared to the debate inside the seminary.

The conference, held behind closed doors, ended with a secret vote on the document. The vote count was not released.

The final document denounced "the lack of respect for human dignity expressed by the lack of labor unions." Military regimes, it said, repress "organization of labor, of peasants and of popular groups." The document rejected capitalist free-market systems because they have widened the gap between rich and poor "by placing capital before work and economic interests before social interests."

But the conference also turned down radical demands for governments in Latin America based on Marxism or socialism and condemned guerrilla violence and terrorism as "an attack on life, which depends on the Creator only."

"Marxist ideologies have spread the promise of greater social justice ... in practice the Marxist strategies have sacrificed many Christian values. Thus the spiral of violence is increased," it said.

The document said the church makes the aspirations of the poor "its own." But it warned that "the real goods of the modern world are translated into a bridge of growing frustrations and tragic oensons. If these present tendencies are not changed, the deterioration between man and nature will continue."

The document was translated into English by volunteers who pointed out their translation was unofficial. But one source said it was translated by "very sound theologians."

The 187 participating cardinals and bishops headed for home today as their final document, nearly 200 pages long, was sent to the Vatican to be reviewed by the pope.

Foreign Affairs name restored to House index

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Before another scandal sweeps through the halls of Congress, let the record be straight. The new name of the House International Relations committee is Committee on Foreign Affairs, not Affaires.

Committee Chairman Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., asked the House to approve changing the name of the panel back to Committee on Foreign Affairs, the title it held for 198 years.

In 1975, committee members decided that Committee on International Relations had a much nicer ring.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., noted that since the 1975 switch "we have had trouble in the Middle East and we are about to lose Iran. Africa is a shambles. We have abandoned Taiwan and embraced Red China and our general foreign policy is in general disarray. Perhaps, a change is necessary."

Then Bauman went to take a close look at the name:

"Foreign, of course, means situated outside a place or country, but affairs, I find, can be described either as commercial, professional or public business or matters of concern, or, if spelled with an e it means a romantic or passionate attachment, particularly of limited duration or an illicit relationship."

After assurances from Zablocki that the word was "affaires" and not "affaires," the House approved the change.

FOR READERS of the Congressional Record, 1978 was the year of the black dot. This is the year of the blank box.

The pages of the record were sprinkled with black dots after Congress voted last year to identify material, such as speeches, which members didn't read but simply inserted in the record.

Before the dots there was no way of telling whether a member was on the floor and delivered a speech which was included in the record.

Now, the proceedings of the House are sprinkled with little blank squares with numbers next to them.

The numbers refer to the time and make it easier for members to locate themselves on the audio and video taped records of House proceedings.

MIRROR, MIRROR, on the wall, who's the tallest senator of all?

It's not Bill Bradley, the former professional basketball player, who's now a 6-foot-5 Democratic senator from New Jersey. Nor is it 6-foot-6 Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn.

The tallest senator is 6-foot-7 Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. Not only that, Simpson says a Senate trivia expert says he's the tallest man ever elected to the Senate.

Filters are not purifiers

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Those water-filtering devices that fit on the faucet or go under the sink can be called almost anything you like, but don't call them purifiers, advises the Water Quality Association.

According to government regulations, the association says, a purifier is a device that makes water safe to drink. The term cannot be applied to other treatment units that merely produce clearer water or get rid of bad tastes and odors.

A device of that kind, explains the association, can legally be called a water clarifier, a water deodorizer, or a water filter.

Bhutto gets brief stay of execution

By GENE KRAMER

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The hanging of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto was stayed by Pakistan's Supreme Court today for at least 10 days. His lawyer wanted at least 30 and argued heatedly with the chief justice before giving up.

The seven-man court will now review the 51-year-old politician's conviction and death sentence on charges of conspiring to murder political opponent Reza Ahmed Kasuri and assemble Feb. 24 to hear arguments by Bhutto's lawyer, Yahya Bakhtiar.

Bakhtiar said he will introduce new evidence to show that the government's key witness, Masud Mahmud, who headed the political police and was pardoned for turning state's evidence, had his own motive to kill Kasuri and that Bhutto was not part of the plot.

Kasuri escaped the ambush in 1974, but his father was killed.

Bakhtiar's petition also said the Lahore High Court which sentenced Bhutto argued for execution rather than life imprisonment because it claimed he was not a good Moslem, and that while the Supreme Court threw out this argument it failed to reduce the sentence accordingly.

Bakhtiar, a former attorney general, applied to the court for the review Tuesday, when the seven-day period allowed for appeals for executive clemency expired. Had the stay been refused, Bhutto could have been hanged Thursday.

Bakhtiar submitted 97 pages of preliminary argument in support of his petition today and argued heatedly with Chief Justice Anwarul Haq for at least a 30-day stay, which he maintained was needed to properly prepare defense arguments.

"I cannot give proper assistance to my client under such tension," Bakhtiar said. The chief justice replied, "We have devoted far too much time already" to this case. "If you are not prepared, it is up to you to withdraw."

Bhutto and four members of his government's political police force were sentenced to death in March by the Lahore High Court, which convicted them of conspiring to murder Kasuri, a former close associate of Bhutto who broke with him.

The Supreme Court confirmed the convictions and death sentences of Bhutto and one of his co-defendants by a 4-3 vote last week and upheld the other three by a unanimous vote.

Bhutto, who dominated Pakistan for most of the last 10 years, said an appeal for clemency would have constituted an admission of guilt and refused to ask for mercy from President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq, his army commander who ousted him in a coup nearly two years ago.

Third school finance measure introduced

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A school finance bill that would add $1.2 billion to state costs over the next two years and prevent a scheduled jump in local property taxes was introduced Tuesday.

Drafted by the Texas School Administrators Council — a coalition of 10 school management organizations — the bill is the third comprehensive school finance measure introduced this session.

Local districts' spending, which is raised by property taxes, would stay at about its current level. State spending would rise.

A 7 percent salary increase for teachers in each of the next two years is proposed.

Reps. Hamp Atkinson, D-New Boston, and Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, are sponsors of the bill.

The bill would raise equalization aid to poor districts by $30 million and adds $30 million in programs for educationally disadvantaged students. Other school finance bills have been introduced by Sen. W.E. Snelson, D-Midland, and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas. Snelson's proposal has the endorsement of the Texas State Teachers Association.

Texas emerging as art power

By MICHAEL O'CONNOR

HOUSTON (AP) — New York and Los Angeles, long the poles of the art world in the United States, may soon give way to what sculptor James Surls calls the "Southern romantic impulse."

He predicts Houston will be the third star in the nation's creative firmament. And the artist hopes to prove his premise by turning guest curator for the Houston Contemporary Art Museum's winter show — an exhibit called "Fire" that consists of one work by each of 100 Texas artists.

"Fire" is a philosophic representation of what the 1980s will be," Surls said in an interview.

"While mainstream art has been reductive and abstract, the southern region has been more romantic," he continued. "It's been more human, more personal than a blue line or a red circle or a box on the floor."

Surls said artists are tired of the "cool calculatedness" of the abstract and are abandoning the "intellectualism" of the past decade for more humanism and romance.

"I think that at the end of any era, there has to be a new beginning. Nothing just ends abruptly," he said. "We're at a natural time shift, and I think the '80s will belong to Texas. It will come into its own culturally."

"This show won't hail the new art form of the '80s, but it will show its high-spirited, romantic nature," the artist predicted.

Surls, who lives in Splendora and is known for his large-scale wooden carved works, had six weeks to organize the show, a short time for such a big production.

He picked the artists and told each to choose the work he wanted to show. Although the artists are all Texans, the art is not of the regional, cowboys-and-Indians nature usually associated with the state.

"We were not interested in minor, regional art," Surls said. "Most of these artists speak a language of a more universal nature that transcends region."

That doesn't mean some important Western artists aren't included, Surls added. Although not usually among the aesthetes, Buck Schwietz and Jim Thomas will be in the show. Thomas was named state sculptor by former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

"I'm trying to cross as many different strata as possible in the show — Western, realist, abstract, ethnic," he said. "This show will present the broad range of our cultural resource."

"Most of the artists will come from Houston — about 40 of them," he said. "From East Texas we will have Velox Ward and Ansel Nunn. Otis Dozier will be here from Dallas, along with a lot of others."

Opening night is Friday, with the first full day on Saturday. It runs through April 16.

Philadelphia's famous heart back in circulation for V-Day

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The most famous heart in Philadelphia, all four tons of it, is back in circulation just in time for Valentine's Day.

Major surgery begun last June has rehabilitated the 18-foot, walk-through heart in the Franklin Institute.

The 25-year-old hunk of steel and plaster was strengthened with fiberglass, and new treads were installed on the stairs on which tourists travel through ventricles, auricles and veins.

On Wednesday — Valentine's Day — it is to be rededicated in a formal reopening by Dr. Michael DeBakey, the Texas heart surgeon.

At a preview Monday, DeBakey told museum members that "heart disease and diseases of its associated vessels constitute more deaths than all other diseases combined. We know we can reduce this by preventive maintenance, and this can only be done by good education of the public."

Education is the major function of the heart — as the centerpiece of a display on heart functions, ailments and repair, including a coronary bypass.

"One of the great advantages of the heart here is that it is educating the public all the time," DeBakey said.

DEATHS

Rev. Horace F. Doyle

Rev. H.F. Doyle

The Rev. Horace F. Doyle, a Baptist minister and a member of the Midland College Board of Trustees, died today at his home, 105 W. Dornard Ave., following an illness.

Services are pending at Jackson Funeral Home.

Doyle, pastor of Mount Calvary Missionary Baptist Church for the past several years, previously had been minister of Macedonia Baptist Church, of which he was founder, for about 30 years.

He had been a Midland College trustee since January 1973, serving as board secretary and vice president.

Prior to the formation of the college in 1973, he served on the Committee to Build Midland College. He was instrumental in the passage of bonds to build the campus.

Flats at Midland College will fly at half-staff through Friday as a tribute to Doyle.

Eula Holder

BIG LAKE — Services for Eula Holder, 89, of Big Lake were to be at 2 p.m. today in First United Methodist Church. Burial was to be in Glen Rest Cemetery directed by Johnson's Funeral Home.

Mrs. Holder died Monday in a Reagan County hospital.

Survivors include a daughter, Faye Staggs of Big Lake; two grandchildren, Janelle Wright and Donald Wright, both of Big Lake, and a great-granddaughter.

Mrs. Hardesty

BIG SPRING — Services for Mrs. J.E. (Cora Jane) Hardesty, 93, of Big Spring will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home with Dr. Kenneth Patrick of the First Baptist Church officiating. Burial will be in Trinity Memorial Park.

Mrs. Hardesty died Monday in a Big Spring hospital.

She was born April 23, 1885, in Cleburne. She was married to Joe E. Hardesty in 1907 in Cleburne. He died in 1966. They moved to Lamesa in 1927 and then to Big Spring in 1942. She was a Baptist and a member of the Big Spring Garden Club.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. J.D. (Corene) Elliott of Big Spring; three sons, Frank Hardesty of Big Spring, Joe Hardesty Jr. of Fort Worth and Jack Hardesty of Los Angeles, Calif.; a sister, Nellie Ranson of Cleburne, six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Mrs. M. Brown

BIG SPRING — Services for Mrs. Marvin (Mamie) Brown, 70, of Big Spring were to be at 2 p.m. today in Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home with burial in Trinity Memorial Park.

She died Monday in a Big Spring hospital after a brief illness.

Mrs. Brown was born Jan. 7, 1909, in Mullin. She moved to Big Spring from Arizona in 1919. She was married to James Marvin Brown in 1957 in Lovington, N.M. He died Dec. 19, 1971. She was a Baptist.

Survivors include five sisters, Gladie Mae Smith, Willie Jean Harvey and Dulah Snow, all of Big Spring, Frances Korchenko of Shallowater and Inez Briscoe of Cisco, a brother, B.W. Malone of Button Willow, Calif., and two grandchildren.

Fund established to aid paralyzed accident victim

A fund to help cover medical costs for an 18-year-old Midland man who was paralyzed in an automobile accident Friday morning has been established at a Midland bank.

Bruce Marshall was paralyzed from his mid-chest down in the accident.

He was to have surgery at Midland Memorial Hospital today to repair some of the damage done in the accident.

If the surgery is successful, recovery from the paralysis will be a long, intensive and very expensive process, family friends said.

There is no insurance to cover the costs. The only income for the family of three is his mother Doris Guisto's $100 per week job.

While Mrs. Guisto waits outside

Tules Castillo

LAMESA — Services for Tules DeLarosa Castillo, 94, of Lamesa will be at 11 a.m. Thursday in North 14th Street Church of Christ here with Pedro Gonzales, pastor of Spanish Church of Christ, officiating. Assisting will be Mike Zuniga of Dimmitt.

Burial will be in Lamesa Cemetery directed by Branon Funeral Home.

Mrs. Castillo died Tuesday in a Lamesa hospital after a lengthy illness.

She was a native of Austin and had lived in Lamesa 42 years.

Survivors include three sons, Pablo Castillo of Roswell, N.M., and Andrew Castillo and Luis Castillo, both of Lamesa; five daughters, Mrs. Pablo Longoria of Sinton, Elva Martinez of Lubbock and Mrs. Juan Bustamante, Mrs. Frank Rosha and Mrs. Felix Hipolito, all of Lamesa; a sister, Ramona Guerrero of Austin; a brother, Frank Cruz of Linton Springs, 41 grandchildren and 119 great-grandchildren.

Men sought in slaying of policeman escape dragnet through thick fog

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Two men sought in the slaying of a Crowley policeman apparently eluded a police dragnet in a blanket of dense fog that shrouded a remote area south of here.

Authorities combed the area north of Crowley for 16 hours Tuesday before suspending the search at dark.

"The only thing we can do now is to be on the lookout," said a dispatcher with the Crowley police department.

James Michael Carpenter, 25, was gunned down when he stopped a stolen pickup truck for a routine traffic check, Crowley police said.

The pickup had been stolen from a suburban businessman who later was found tied up but unharmed in an abandoned barn near Burleson.

Fort Worth police spotted the two men, believed to be armed with Carpenter's service revolver and another handgun, in the truck after the shooting. The men abandoned the truck and fled on foot into a field.

Fort Worth and Crowley police sealed off the field but the suspects apparently slipped past roadblocks under cover of darkness and a dense fog.

Fort Worth police Capt. Roy Tate said officers "searched as thoroughly as anyone could. We walked and drove all over that area ... looked in pipelines and barns.

"I feel like by now they've either stolen a car or hitched a ride, or they are holed up somewhere."

Your Valentine card to Iran will probably be returned

If your Valentine greeting to a sweetheart in Iran comes back marked "Return to Sender," don't feel rejected.

All civilian mail service to the country from the United States has been suspended, according to U.S. Postal Service offices in Midland, and mail currently in the system destined for Iran will be returned to sender.

Airmail service to the country was suspended Jan. 9. The elimination of surface mail Feb. 6 cut off all civilian mail from this country to Iran.

Postal officials said the latest action was taken because of the lack of reliable air and surface transportation, either in or out of that country.

The suspension means no U.S. post office will accept civil mail bound for Iran until further notice, said officials.

Big Run residents return to homes

BIG RUN, Pa. (AP) — About 1,000 residents of Big Run and surrounding rural communities returned to their homes after the dispersal of a cloud of hazardous chemical that escaped from a derailed tank car.

The residents faced another evacuation today when workers try to right two overturned tank cars containing deadly chlorine gas, officials said.

"The evacuation is being undertaken strictly as a safety measure. There is no immediate danger to citizens," said Bill Bogardus, head of the Jefferson County Office of Emergency Management.

Three mass care centers were to be set up and two area schools were closed for the day, officials said.

Bulldogs down Rebels in thriller, 61-59

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

It wasn't easy, but the Midland Bulldogs pulled out a heart-stopper Tuesday night.

Playing without the services of floor general and playmaker Walter Bryson who sat on the bench with the flu, Coach Don Humphrey's Purple Pack, down by 12 points at halftime, stormed back to outscore Midland Lee's Rebels, 41-27, in the second half to take a narrow 61-59 victory in the beautiful Chaparral Center on the Midland College campus.

The victory keeps Midland's winning streak alive at 16 games and gives them a perfect 14-0 reading in sweeping to the District 5-4A basketball championship.

HUMPHREY DECIDED to start three new players, inserting Archie Booth, Darrin Matlock and Daryl Loudd in the lineup and Lee stormed off to a 20-9 first period lead and held on to a 32-20 advantage at intermission.

Milton Sanders, Charles Johnson and Roy Lee Jefferson came into the game with 2:13 left in the second period with the Rebels holding on to a commanding lead.

It wasn't until right at the buzzer, ending the third period, that the Pack finally took the lead for the first time in the contest which was a sharp contrast to the first meeting in which Midland bombed the Rebels, 56-26.

Ernest Merritt, 6-foot-1 senior, who dumped in 22 points for Lee, kept the Bulldogs off balance and teammates Mike McGaha, Tyler Alcorn and Bruce Crawford, also played well as the Rebels took that 20-9 first period lead.

Lee also outscored Midland, 12-11 in the second period for the 32-20 advantage at intermission, but the Pack came back with 24 big points to Lee's 11 for a 44-43 lead going into the final eight minutes of action-packed play.

Probably the unsung hero for Lee was David Hatfield, 5-8 senior, who was all over the floor and although he only scored four points, made his presence known to the taller Bulldogs. He even blocked a shot attempt by 6-8 sophomore center Herbert Johnson in the final period which delighted the crowd which was around 2,300 this time around compared to the 4,000-plus crowd at the Chaparral Center in the first half of the 5-4A race.

MERRITT CAME right back with a basket for a 52-48 lead with 5:16 left and Hebert Johnson hit a shot from close in to make it 52-50. The Pack tied the score, 52-52 with 4:48 left on Roy Lee Jefferson's 20-footer. Three consecutive free tosses by Mike McGaha and Merritt made it 55-52 with 4:45 remaining in favor of the Rebs.

Charles Johnson, who scored 11 points after sitting out almost all of the first half, hit a layup to cut the lead to 55-54 and this is when Stueckler ordered his team into the Dumino stall game. Herbert Johnson added 19 more to the MHS attack.

Midland stole the ball away with 2:59 left and called time out. Tim Spirling's basket made it 56-55 in favor of the Pack with 2:41 left, but Merritt matched Spirling's bucket to hand the lead back to Lee, 57-56 with 1:58 left.

This time it was Jefferson's turn to connect and the 6-2 senior popped one in from 18 feet out for a 58-57 MHS lead with 1:36 left on the big scoreboard. Matlock hit his only basket of the night for the Bulldogs when he took a feed from Jefferson with 1:14 left to give Midland a 60-57 lead. Merritt answered with a pair of free throws to make it 60-59 with 51 ticks left in the clock. Alcorn was fouled, but missed the first of a one-and-one and Charles Johnson's free throw with 13 seconds left, gave Midland a 61-59 lead.

Lee winds up the 1978-79 campaign with a 14-18 season record and a 2-5 finish in the second half of the race.

In the junior varsity game, Lee snapped a 16-game winning streak by Coach Eddie Shirley's Bullpups, posting an exciting 58-57 win. The loss winds up the MHS season with a sparkling 26-2 mark and Lee ends its season with a 21-7 mark.

Coach Greg Wright's Lee JV, which lost at the buzzer to the Bullpups two weeks ago, were led by Brent Sanders and David Keys with 12 and 10 points, respectively while the Pups got 17 points out of Perry Bolger and 10 more from Pat Hickey.

Greenwood's Rayme Williams (22) battles Sterling City's Fred Thompson rebound as Rangers won 73-36 to finish season with a 24-0 record. Greenwood will play Sanderson in bi-district action next week. (Photo by Mike Kardos)

THE CROWD was not disappointed this time around as the two Tall City rivals played one of their classics like the ones they used to hook up in the early 1970s.

For Midland, the victory is a tune-up for state playoff competition as the Bulldogs travel to Abilene next Tuesday to take on the Wichita Falls Coyotes in a Class AAAA bi-district confrontation in the Taylor County Coliseum at 8 p.m.

The 16th straight win for Humphrey's crew gives them a 26-8 record compared to the Coyotes' 21-10 reading in next weeks playoff battle in the Key City.

Midland showed just how quick it can get back into a ball game by outscoring the Rebels, 10-2 at the offset of the third period and the Bulldogs made their move with less than two minutes left in the period when Sanders hit two quick baskets to cut the lead to 43-42 with the second two-pointer coming with 28 seconds left. Herbert Johnson's bucket with two seconds left, game Midland the lead for the first time in the game at 44-43 going into the final period.

Herbert hit another basket at the offset of the fourth quarter to give MHS a 46-43 lead, but the Rebels weren't through yet.

With 7:11 left, Hatfield hit a pair of free throws to cut the lead to 46-45 and the Merritt scored on a three-point play on a driving layup and Coach Paul Stueckler's battling crew led, 49-46 with 6:09 left in the game.

Sanders' basket for the Pack cut the lead to 49-48, but Ken Van Hoozer's free throw gave Lee a 50-48 advan-

Midland-Wichita Falls playoff tilt in Abilene

The final arrangements have been completed for the AAAA bi-district contest between Midland and Wichita Falls, according to Sam Cox, Midland athletic director.

Cox and Midland High cage boss Don Humphrey met with Wichita Falls officials Tuesday prior to the Midland Lee-Midland contest at the Chaparral Center to work out all the fine details.

The game will be played Tuesday in the Taylor County Coliseum adjacent to Shotwell Stadium where District 5-4A teams play football games in Abilene. Game time has been set for 8 p.m., and Midland won the flip of the coin and will be designated as the home team. The Bulldogs have been asked to wear dark colored uniforms.

Cox said that the only pre-sale of tickets would be to the students at school. Student tickets purchased at school will cost $1. All other tickets can be purchased at the gate at $2.

"We will give a break to our students who want to save a dollar for the game, but all tickets at the gate will be $2 because there are so many college and high school kids in Abilene. It just seemed like the easiest way to handle the ticket situation. There won't be a seating problem because Taylor County Coliseum has plenty of seats. That's why there will be no pre-sale of tickets in Midland other than the student tickets."

Midland will be heading into the state playoffs with a 26-8 record while Wichita Falls owns a 21-10 reading. The Bulldogs, however, are on a 16-game winning streak while Wichita Falls lost their last game to Wichita Falls Rider. Rider was the last team to defeat Midland and that was in overtime, 58-55 in December in the Wichita Falls Tournament.

Cooper, Permian take 5-4A basketball wins

Abilene Cooper, Odessa Permian and Big Spring posted District 5-4A basketball victories Tuesday as the season came to an end for everybody in the league, but the champion Midland High Bulldogs.

Cooper took a 57-54 victory over cross-town rival Abilene while Permian outscored Odessa, 71-64 and Big Spring won its second straight, gunning down San Angelo Central, 70-57. The Steers had upended Cooper, 53-50, Saturday night in a makeup game in Big Spring. David Williams, Greg Cruse and Kyle Stuard paced Cooper with 17, 16 and 12 points while high for Abilene was Derrick Caballero and Reggie Thomas with 20 and 18 points, respectively. Cooper winds up the season with a 17-14 mark and finished 4-3 in the second half of the race after a 6-1 finish in the first half.

Abilene, meanwhile, winds up 16-16 and 3-4.

Permian's Brad Kerley, a 6-foot-5 junior and senior guard Danny Ray Wright of OHS, hooked up in a scoring battle with Wright gunning in 39 points and Kerley 34 as the Panthers finish the season with a 17-14 reading and 4-3 mark in the second half of the race. OHS winds up 5-22 and 2-5.

Big Spring got 33 points from Mark Poss along with 10 more from James Magers while Darrell Pearson and Rene DeLeon led Central with 20 and 10 points.

The Bobcats wind up the 1978-79 campaign with a 17-14 record, the same as Cooper and Permian and 4-3 second half finish while the Steers wrap it up with a 7-19 and 2-5 record.

Greenwood takes 24th straight in 73-36 romp over Sterling City

Greenwood's Rangers reported in "mission accomplished," and Coach Bill Jordan may have wound up with a reputation as a Worry Wart in the process, but that would be unfair.

The win advances Greenwood into bi-district play against Sanderson next Monday or Tuesday.

Swofford wound up as high point man with 17 while Joe Mobley scored 11 and Evans 10. Somers and Taylor

Rangers increased their margin to 53-21 and Tommy Somers came off the bench to lead the last period assault with nine points.

The win advances Greenwood into bi-district play against Sanderson next Monday or Tuesday.

Swofford wound up as high point man with 17 while Joe Mobley scored 11 and Evans 10. Somers and Taylor had nine each and Lopez eight as the Rangers displayed a balanced offense to go with a tenacious defense that kept Sterling City off-balance all night.

DEAN FOSHEE'S girls, already with a district title in their pocket, were equally as impressive as the boys, winning 70-30 over Sterling City.

Senior Janna Mobley led the way with 18 points while freshman Lisa Mobley had all. For Sterling City, which trailed 35-13 at half, Angie Gonzales scored 10 points.

The girls also go into bi-district against Sanderson, but must wait until a week after the boys play.

Tuesday's win gave the girls a 21-5 regular season record.

BUT FOR a while, the Rangers had everybody worried. Halfway through the first period Greenwood had just five points. However, the Wildcats were even worse off with only two, only because they had missed six shots from under the rim.

It was 3-2 when Joe Mobley hit successive baskets and then the Rangers turned a couple of turnovers into fastbreak buckets and it was 11-4. First, Vondell Mobley scored off a feed from brother Joe and then Mark Swafford hit on a pass from Joe.

Swafford struck again before the period was over and the Rangers took a 13-4 lead into the second period and the rout was on.

HOMER LOPEZ led the second period charge with two field goals and a couple of free throws while Swafford, Rex Evans and Ronnie Taylor chipped in with two field goals each as Greenwood built up 33-13 halftime spread.

Swafford converted six straight free throws in the third period as the

More than 4,000 fans turned out the first time the Midland Lee Rebels faced the Midland High Bulldogs in basketball this year. There wasn't that many the second time around Tuesday night at the Chaparral Center, maybe 2,500, and those that missed this one, missed the season as far as I'm concerned.

The Bulldogs ran off and left the Rebels seven games ago and posted a lopsided 30-point victory, but Tuesday it was a 61-59 Midland High victory that had fans from both sides wringing their hands because their throats were already sore.

WE KNOW all the reasons that the game was probably as close as it was. We know that Midland High played only two starters for the better part of the first half and that the Bulldogs had three players (Walter Bryson, David Green and Michael Feldt) coming off bad cases of the flu. None of them played. We know that MHS coach Don Humphrey announced Saturday that this game would be played for fun and all of his players would get a chance to play. He was true to his word.

In short, we know the facts. But it was one solid basketball game from the start to finish, and no one in the Center walked away with their head down after this one. It was a supreme effort by all involved and Midland cage fans were the beneficiaries.

THE REBELS knew they would have to jump to as big a lead as they could muster against the starting five Midland put on the court. They rolled out to a 13-point margin. In the second half, the Midland starters, with the exception of Bryson, had chopped off the deficit to take a 44-43 lead at the end of the third quarter. This was where the Rebels were supposed to desert the ship and run up the white flag. That supposedly was the script, but it didn't happen.

The Rebs hung in there and made a fight of it, and who knows, if they were able to hit a couple of key free throws, they just might have pulled it out.

And on the MHS side, it was to their credit that they played so well in this contest since their eyes and thoughts have to be on next week and the playoffs. If all out performance is what Midland cage fans want, they got it Tuesday with both barrels.

LEE PLAYED as well as they could. They could have folded, and didn't. They lost, but that TERRY WILLIAMSON doesn't make them losers. Midland High showed character in winning, and they played like a championship team should. It was really beautiful. It was the season in a nutshell.

It's great to see Midland High's Charles Johnson go to the hoop and block shots. Those are moments that any basketball fan can enjoy. It was fun seeing Herbert Johnson crash the offensive boards and Milton Sanders pump them in from the outside. And it was enjoyable to see Roy Lee Jefferson drive the lane for an easy layup. That was a night in itself, but Lee offered much more of the same, and doubled the fun.

Ernest Merritt's air burning cord rippers from the 30-foot mark can knock you out of your seat. And Bruce Crawford's all-out effort is a thing of beauty to watch. Tyler Alcorn hit some zingers and Arthur Fertile made a move inside that looked like a ballerina, which he is not. And did you catch 5-foot-8 David Hatfield blocking a 6-8 Herbert Johnson's layup attempt? You don't see that very often.

THE BULLDOGS showed why they are on a 16-game winning streak, and the best in District 5-4A. I don't think anyone is going to deny that. The Rebels, on the other hand, came to play as we knew they would. Gosh, it was so much fun.

The victory also tied the series between the two schools at 19-19. There have been so many thrillers in the past, and I'm sure more to come. We have come to expect it from these two teams, and both of them have had their moments of glory. Remember the triple overtimes, the district playoff battles and the one and two pointers that is hard to count on a set of 10 fingers? After all, Midland is 5-4A basketball, and it's good to have the championship back home.

HUMPHREY WAS pleased with the outcome. "I think the fans liked this one. I know we went out there and had a lot of fun. We gave them their chance in the first half, and then we came back. That was good to see. It gave our team a chance to play under a little pressure and that doesn't hurt. All of our kids got in a lot of playing, and they deserved that because they have all worked so hard all year long. We can now get ready for Wichita Falls," Humphrey said.

Paul Stueckler, the only Midland Lee basketball coach in the history of the school, took the loss in stride. His teams have had their glory moments in the past, and he knows the pendulum keeps swinging. "I thought my kids played very well. I was pleased with the way they went after the game."

The two junior varsities also kept up with the Midland High-Lee tradition. Lee won Tuesday's contest by a narrow 58-57 margin over the Bullpups, and Midland basketball continues to look bright. The Bullpups beat Lee at the buzzer the first time they met, so the two split this year in district games. Midland High's JV finished with a 26-2 record while Lee was 21-7. A lot of credit should go to Midland High JV coach Eddie Shirley and Lee JV boss Greg Wright. Combined with the two fine varsity coaches, Midland can expect to dominate in 5-4A over the long haul.

Tuesday was the end of another regular season Tall City style. But really it's just the beginning—isn't it?

Midland girls play in Snyder

SNYDER — The Midland High girls' basketball team will face Abilene High here at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Scurry County Coliseum to decide the District 5-4A first half cage championship.

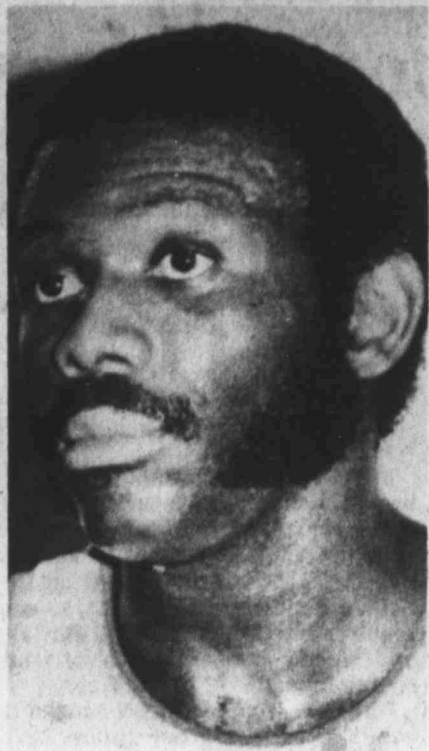

Midland High and Abilene High tied for the first half crown with 6-1 records. Midland Lee won the second half title outright with a 7-0 mark. The winner of the MHS-AHS contest here Thursday will meet Midland Lee in another district playoff game to decide who will advance to the girls' Class AAAA state playoffs.

No date or site has been finalized for the game between Lee and the MHS-AHS winner. No decision will be made until Friday after the Bulldogs take on the Eagles.

Midland High is 25-11 for the year and Abilene High is 15-12. The Bulldogs have won both times that they have faced Abilene High this year.

Tickets for the Midland High-Abilene High matchup will be available only the night of the game at the Scurry County Coliseum. Ticket prices for the contest will be $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for students.

Midland Lee, second half winner, is 27-7 on the season and wait the outcome of the Midland-Abilene battle for the overall championship and a berth in the Class AAAA state playoffs.

Traded to the Boston Celtics today from the New York Knicks was Bob McAdoo. Red Auerbach confirmed the trade. (AP Laser-photo).

Marquette turns back Stetson behind Oliver

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It looks like Oliver and Marquette are going to have a love story after all. And when it's all over, the Warriors may have another Lee bidding for Player of the Year honors.

Oliver is sophomore Oliver Lee and Coach Hank Raymonds says, "He's going to be a superstar." For a budding superstar, Lee has played precious little, seeing only 14 minutes of action in the 10th-ranked Warriors last six games and none at all in last weekend's rout of Louisville.

But Tuesday night in Milwaukee, Oliver brought back memories of Butch (No Relation) Lee, who won The Associated Press' Adolph Rupp Trophy a year ago as the nation's outstanding player. He came off the bench to score 14 points — including 10 in the last 6:43 of the first half — and help Marquette turn back Stetson 86-78. Ironically, Lee hails from DeLand, Fla., home of the Stetson Hatters.

Bernard Toome paced a balanced Marquette attack with 18 points while Lee and Dudley had 14 apiece and Sam Worthen and Odell Ball 12 each. Dirk Ewing and Kevin Tucker had 22 and 21, respectively, for the losers.

Raymonds has predicted that Lee will be Marquette's "next great star." Against Stetson, he connected on five of 10 shots and added three rebounds, two assists, a blocked shot and a steal in 14 minutes.

"Oliver played well," Raymonds said. "He got a chance to play, and he played."

Then Raymonds ripped into published reports that Lee was considering transferring to Jacksonville University in his home state.

"Hey, don't worry about Oliver," the coach snapped. "Let the kid alone. The ballplayers are my problem, not the newspapers." He's my family. My ballplayers are my family. I don't pry into your families.

"Hey, everybody seems worried about who plays instead of about the game. Who plays — that's my job. Listen, I played him against Wisconsin when the score was tough and I played him against Notre Dame when the score was tough."

Lee said there was nothing to the Jacksonville rumors.

"I don't know where that came from," he said. "Jacksonville hasn't been on my mind since recruiting time. They were home, and I wanted to get away. I'm happy at Marquette."

Everybody would like to play a little more, but I guess you've got to wait your turn."

For Oliver Lee, the wait may be over.

Tuesday night's schedule was a slim one and Marquette was the only ranked team in action.

Elsewhere: —Sophomore Tom Sienkiewicz scored 39 points, including 10 free throws in the last 1:49, to lead Villanova over Penn 89-80. The Quakers, who once trailed 19-3, got within four points with 48 seconds left but Sienkiewicz converted six free throws to clinch the triumph.

—Northeast Louisiana rolled to its 15th consecutive victory, trouncing Southeastern Louisiana 77-58 as Calvin Natt scored 22 points and grabbed 13 rebounds.

—Free throws by Ron Webb and Walter Daniels in the final 28 seconds provided Georgia with a 56-55 triumph over Georgia Tech. Tech's Kerry O'Brien scored at the buzzer and was fouled but missed a free throw that would have sent the contest into overtime. Freshman Eric Marbury led Georgia with 24 points.

"We had the game in the bag and almost figured out a way to lose it," said Georgia Coach Hugh Durham.

—Sly Williams' 31 points helped 18-5 Rhode Island defeat Connecticut 84-71 after the winners led by only two points at halftime.

—Ernie Cobb scored 22 points in leading 19-6 Boston College past Dartmouth 66-56.

—Wayne McKay scored 18 points and four teammates also hit double figures as 16-8 St. John's beat Holy Cross 82-66 for its seventh consecutive victory.

Spinks uncomfortable during press interview

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — He wore a full-length wolf-fur coat and a black derby hat. Gold chains dangled at his throat. Diamonds winked from his fingers. Store-bought teeth glistened in the glare of the lights — rows of ivory that could make a president jealous.

Even with all the trappings, there is a refreshing honesty and simplicity about Leon Spinks, the young Olympic gladiator who beat the great Muhammad Ali for the WBA heavyweight ring title and lost it before the gloves got cold.

He is an intriguing personality, this product of the St. Louis ghetto — uneducated but street wise, bull strong and bulldog tough, a survivor of the neighborhood jungle yet, like Ali, a man who cuts through the thick layer of hype and hypocrisy with disarming candor.

"You are a black man and you are going to fight an ex-cop from South Africa," a reporter told him. "Jesse Jackson (the black civil rights activist) has urged that you don't go through with it. Others are exerting political pressure. Have you thought about how the public might feel?"

"No matter how the public feels, no matter how I feel, if I am going after the title I am going after it," Spinks responded. "It's not a racial thing. It's not a hate thing. It's just that I am trying to make a living. This man is in the way."

SPINKS IS uncomfortable on a dais, facing a battery of reporters, TV, radio men and flashing cameras, but anyone who can stand up to Ali for 30 rounds should be able to hold his own under the most trying circumstances.

The 25-year-old heavyweight was brought out of temporary seclusion by Top Rank's Bob Arum, announcing that Spinks' quest to regain the championship would begin against Kallie Knoetze, the terror of Johannesburg, some time in May.

Opponents of South Africa's apartheid (separation of the races) policy have sought to have the South African fighter barred. Spinks was pressed to commit himself on the matter.

"Do you think you'll feel like Joe Louis felt in his fight with Max Schmeling?" another reporter asked, bringing up the specter of a onetime Alabama black wreaking vengeance against a Nazi.

"How do I know?" Spinks replied logically. "How could I feel like somebody I'm not? We are not at war. He is an individual. I am an individual. If you can't fight for a world title, you can't prove anything."

The fighter, who announced he had chosen Henry Grooms of Kalamazoo, Mich., to replace his former trainer Sam Solomons, was asked if the change was made because of confusion in his corner in the second All fight last September in New Orleans.

Leon wasn't ducking any punches. "Naw, Sam was just getting old," he replied. "I don't blame nobody but myself. If I fought Ali in the second fight the way I did in the first, I win again."

"But I don't. I was not ready. My mind told me 'Do this,' but my body don't do it. My timing was off. My body was there but my mind wasn't."

"What were you thinking?" somebody asked. "I ain't going to tell you," the ex-champion answered. No one appeared disposed to try to make him.

SPINKS ACKNOWLEDGED that he had been caught up in the euphoria of his overnight success — from Olympic gold medalist to world champion in less than two years — and he couldn't cope.

He became entangled with promoters and wheelers and dealers. He said business interfered with his boxing. He drove around in a big white limousine, occasionally clashing with the law. He swung with the disco set.

"It all happened too fast," he said. "I didn't have time to think. I couldn't adjust to the mistakes. But it's different now. I got a better handle on my life."

What about Larry Holmes, the WBC titleholder?

"If Holmes is there I will fight him," Spinks said simply. "I don't want to fight nobody. But it's my job, the only one I know. I got to make a living."

McAdoo goes to Boston in big player trade

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks, one player under the National Basketball Association roster limit after dealing Bob McAdoo to Boston, are expected to obtain Tom Barker from the Celtics today to complete the trade.

On Tuesday, Knicks boss Sonny Werblin and Celtics owner John Y. Brown appeared to reach an impasse in selection of a player from the Celtics to complete the trade, in which the Knicks got Boston's three first-round draft choices in exchange for their high-scoring center.

"The deal called for us to get Tom Barker or Curtis Rowe at John Y's option," Werblin was quoted as saying. "He now tells me he won't give up Rowe, so we'll take Barker," a 6-foot-11 center who had been playing for Jersey Shore of the Continental Basketball Association before the Celtics signed him last week as a backup for Dave Cowens, their player-coach.

Brown was quoted as saying, "If the Knicks want Barker, they can have him."

McAdoo, meanwhile, expressed concern over which team is responsible for $1 million in deferred payments, part of an earlier contract. Brown has promised to iron out McAdoo's contract worries, Cohen said Tuesday.

The Knicks agreed to cover the deferred payments when they obtained McAdoo from the Buffalo Braves. McAdoo is concerned now whether the Celtics will honor that contract provision.

Holmes will defend title against Ocasio next

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — If one detail can be worked out, promoter Don King says Larry Holmes will defend his World Boxing Council heavyweight title against Puerto Rico's Osvaldo Ocasio at the Las Vegas Hilton on March 23.

King announced at a news conference Tuesday night that Holmes and Ocasio would meet in a nationally televised (ABC) championship bout if Nevada tax laws can be changed in time.

Holmes has a 29-0 record while Ocasio, the WBC's No. 2 contender, is 13-0. The Puerto Rican defeated Jimmy Young in his most recent action.

In addition to the championship

Lee, Midland to open tourney

John Josefy, Tournament of Champions Director announced today that this year's tourney will start at 7 p.m., Thursday, March 8 in Cubs Stadium.

Four games will be played on Friday, March 9 and four or five games on Saturday, March 10. This year's tourney will be a double elimination format instead of double round robin as in the past.

Teams entered are Midland Lee, Midland, Duncanville, Lubbock Monterey and Carroll-Turner.

Lee and Midland will get the tourney underway with the 7 p.m. game on March 8, according to Josefy.

fight, King said, a companion bout on the card would match No. 1 contender Ken Norton and No. 3 Earnie Shavers in a 12-round elimination contest.

Hilton Hotel spokesman Ron Amos said the tax problem stemmed from a new interpretation of Nevada's law covering boxing events.

MHS downs Lee, clinches 5-4A title tie

Coach Larry Burgin's Midland High netters clinched at worst a tie for the District 5-4A dual competition title by defeating Midland Lee, 12-6, Tuesday.

The win gives Midland a 6-0 record with one match to be made up. Midland Lee is 1-5-1 in district.

Evert, Stevens take net wins

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two comeback players are the focus of the women's tennis tour these days: Chris Evert, fighting to regain her confidence after some disastrous losses last month, and Greer Stevens, battling to overcome a crippled left leg.

Both players are succeeding in their campaigns. Evert breezed to a first-round victory Tuesday night in the $150,000 Los Angeles championship tournament, beating Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-2 while Stevens, playing in her fourth tournament since drastic knee surgery last May, topped Sue Barker 7-5, 6-4.

Evert, the No. 2 seed, declared that her victory last week at the Seattle tournament and her showing Tuesday night have boosted her self-confidence.

Confidence is the characteristic that distinguishes champions, Evert said, and she listed it as the key ingredient in the tennis success of herself, top-seeded Martina Navratilova and No. 3 Tracy Austin, both of whom won first-round matches Monday night.

"My confidence is one of my greatest assets," said Evert. "People don't realize how important the confidence factor is for me."

Stevens dealt Evert a humiliating first-round defeat last month in Florida, two weeks after Evert was bumped off in the Oakland tournament by Navratilova.

At least part of Evert's troubles were attributed to concentration lapses following her engagement to British tennis star John Lloyd.

Stevens, seeded fourth, won the Florida tournament and then made the semifinals the next week in Chicago. She said her game has improved since her injury because her long recuperation forced her to "go back to basic shots" in stationary practice with a ball machine.

Stevens wears an ugly brace on her left leg from the middle of her thigh to the middle of her shin. The contraption of belts and bandages looks like something from Houdini's repertoire.

She said she will wear it for the rest of her playing days to prevent further injury to her knee.

In other first-round matches Tuesday, fifth-seeded Ann Kiyomura beat Stacy Margolin 7-6, 6-4; No. 7 Kerry Reid of Australia won her match when Stephanie Tollson had to quit in the second set because of a foot injury — the score was 6-2, 2-1 when the match ended.

Borg upset by Manson in tourney

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Bjorn Borg, an upset victim in the first round of the $250,000 Tennis Games at Mission Hills Country Club, got no sympathy from Jimmy Connors.

The second-seeded Borg, coming off an impressive 6-3, 6-2 victory over Connors in Sunday's finals of the Grand Slam tournament in Boca West, Fla., was beaten 6-7, 7-5, 6-1 by Bruce Manson on Tuesday.

Borg, a three-time Wimbledon champion from Sweden, had flight delay problems in his trip West and was sluggish in his loss to Manson.

"I take care of my half of the draw, if he doesn't take get through, that's his problem," said the top-seeded Connors, who downed Czechoslovakia's Vladimir Zecnik 6-2, 7-5 Tuesday.

"Everybody travels so much you'd think he'd be used to it. If he was tired, maybe he shouldn't have played."

Manson, a former University of Southern California star who turned professional in 1977, used accurate groundstrokes to tire, then beat Borg, the No. 2 rated player in the world.

"My biggest problem was getting here later than I wanted and not having time to practice," said Borg. "I had intended to get in Sunday night, but the Los Angeles airport was fogged in and I had to spend the night in Houston. I arrived here at Mission Hills Monday night instead."

Manson, 22, said of his triumph, "It's as big a victory as I could get; you can't get a much bigger victory than beating Borg."

Manson, ranked 112th in the world, was a last-minute addition to the field, becoming eligible only when another entry dropped out.

"I think his timing was off," he said of Borg. "I guess he was tired from the trip. If we were both playing with a lot of practice on this hard surface, he would probably beat me."

"Circumstances play a part in the game. But hopefully in a year or two, it won't be a fluke."

In other first-round matches Tuesday, third-seeded John McEnroe whipped Tom Gullikson 6-4, 6-3; Alvaro Fillol of Chile defeated Adriano Panatta of Italy 7-6, 6-2; Pat DuPre downed Rose Case of Australia 6-0, 6-2; Gene Mayer eliminated Jeff Borowiak 6-2, 6-2, and Jose Higuera of Spain beat Marty Riessen 6-4, 6-2.

SWC anxious to ink stars

By The Associated Press

Southwest Conference football teams were able to sign high school football players to letters of intent today, and Texas A&M Coach Tom Wilson was set and ready to grab the No. 1 prize, running back Eric Dickerson of Sealy.

Because the deadline for signing the national letter of intent is a week later, however, seven of the nine SWC schools said they will make no announcements regarding their recruits until the week is up, to hamper "raiding" by non-Texas colleges.

Each school can recruit up to 30 players, with the letter binding the recruit to that school within the SWC. The national letter of intent, binding nationwide, may be signed beginning next Wednesday.

Only Texas A&M and Texas Christian planned publicity releases on their first-day signings. Arkansas, Houston, Texas, Texas Tech, Baylor, Rice and Southern Methodist have said they will wait.

Part of the reason may be that the schools heretofore have ballyhooed a signing only to have the player jump to an out-of-conference school the following week.

Dickerson was said to be still considering the possibility of signing with Oklahoma or Southern California. But he planned to ink an SWC letter with the Aggies.

Sycamores now in big time

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Indiana State University's rise from virtual obscurity to national prominence in basketball began with the arrival of Larry Bird three years ago. But what happens when the 6-foot-9 All-American graduates this spring?

"A super player always helps your program," says Athletic Director Bob King, who doesn't expect a dramatic backslide when Bird departs.

"Anytime you have someone that good, he's going to draw a lot of attention. Not only from the fans, but from the media as well," said King, who signed Bird four years ago, red-shirted him one season and coached him two years before stepping down because of illness.

"As far as recruiting, we can talk with the best now. We don't have to compete with Bobby Knight or any of them."

King, who came here as athletic director and basketball coach in 1974 after 12 years at the University of New Mexico, inherited a program that had produced just one winning season in the previous four years. Attendance at home games averaged barely over 2,000 in the 10,000-seat Hulman Center.

"Sometimes, you could have fired a shotgun at the stands and not hit anybody," said sports information director Ed McKee.

The caliber of basketball "had been a .500 situation," King recalled. "They had just moved to (NCAA) Division I a few years earlier, and our biggest problem was the schedule, getting a major schedule."

"My first job as athletic director was to get us into a good major league. We were able to move into the Missouri Valley Conference, and this was a big help to our program."

Then, of course, came Bird, who had left Knight's squad at Indiana University and enrolled at tiny Northwood Institute near his southern Indiana home at French Lick. Aided primarily by Bill Hodges, who moved up from an assistantship after King suffered a serious heart attack last summer and later an aneurysm, the Sycamore coach lured Bird back to school.

King's first year produced a 13-12 record. The next year, with Bird in the lineup, the Sycamores were 25-3 and earned a National Invitational Tournament bid. They were 23-9 with another NIT bid last year, and they are unbeaten in 23 games so far this season with the conference championship already assured.

Hodges' goal all along has been to win the Missouri Valley championship and earn a berth in the NCAA tourney, where he hopes to stifle critics who contend the Sycamores' schedule hasn't been rugged enough to warrant the nation's No. 1 ranking. But the long-range effect of the Bird-era success, especially in a state long dominated by Indiana, Purdue and Notre Dame, could snowball.

Dickerson gets new auto

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association is investigating blue chip running back Eric Dickerson, seen driving a 1979 automobile believed to have been purchased by a member of his family.

Dickerson also has informed Texas A&M University that he would not sign a Southwest Conference letter of intent today. Dickerson said last week he had decided to attend A&M.

Sealy Coach Ralph Harris, who said he saw Dickerson driving the car the day he announced he would go to A&M, confirmed the NCAA's check, but added "the NCAA says on paper it's clean... but it's poor timing whether it's clean or not."

"He (Dickerson) told me he couldn't sign, that he wasn't ready to do anything," Harris said. "He said he needed much more time."

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram today quoted Harris as saying he believes Dickerson announced the planned signing with Texas A&M in an attempt to relieve some of the pressure placed on him by recruiters from various schools.

The University of Oklahoma also is seeking the services of the 6-2, 202 Dickerson who led Sealy to the state Class AA championship last season.

Capitals are beginning to show some real class

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Washington Capitals certainly aren't ready to dominate the National Hockey League, but neither are they the downtrodden patsies of the past.

A 9-5-1 record in January, including 7-1-1 at home, was the best month in the history of the 5-year-old franchise, and not even a favorable break in the schedule can dim the accomplishment.

"If we ever were to do anything, January was the month," Coach Danny Belisle said, noting the caliber of the opposition and the nine games at home. "We now have confidence to play against anybody, but we have to be realistic, too."

While tying last year's victory total of 17, just seven short of the club record, the Caps remain a longshot playoff hope. They are 8 points away from a wildcard spot, and the two teams just ahead, Minnesota and Pittsburgh, each have two games in hand.

Of the remaining 26 games, split evenly between home and road, five will be against the powerful Montreal Canadiens — a team Washington has never beaten — and five are with tough Patrick Division teams.

"The team has come a long way since October," Belisle said, "overcoming a lot of adversity in a short time. Adversity introduces a man to himself. Now everyone know his capabilities, and can look for solutions rather than blame someone else."

"This club needed time to adjust to my theories," said Belisle, who took over from Tom McVie at the start of the season, "and I needed time to judge them."

The maturing of Washington's young players and the integration of several newcomers also took time, but things fell into place after goalie Gary Inness was signed as a free agent on Dec. 18 following the folding of the World Hockey Association's Indianapolis team.

"It's no secret that our goaltending was a problem," Belisle said. "The players have responded to Gary's way of play, giving them more confidence, and it's been a contagious thing." "Goaltending is at least 50 percent of the game," said second-year defenseman Robert Picard. "With Gary making key saves and the wingers checking their men, I'm able to chip in on offense."

Picard, with 32 points in his last 23 games, ranks third among NHL defencemen with 44 points.

Ryan Walter, shifted from center to left wing, leads the league's rookies with 22 goals even though he missed 11 games because of knee and rib cage injuries.

Center Dennis Maruk, obtained from Minnesota during the first week of the season, leads the Caps with 54 points and center Guy Charron, the team leader the past two seasons, has 51.

San Angelo Stadium gals capture Super bowling meet

The 1979 version of the Super Bowl Ladies Invitational Bowling Tournament is history and the scores were the best ever.

STadium Lanes Travel Team of San Angelo took the team championship with a 3089 as Sandy Davidson rolled 603, Helen Miller 650, Vada Crane 599; Frances Alexander 628, and Peg Alvey 609.

TML's of Midland took second with 3086 while the Midland Dingalings took third with 3073. Some 128 teams competed over three weekends.

Sharon Wassenberg (682) and Melinda Walraven (709) of Midland won the doubles championship with a 1391.

Carol Wood and Cathy Muse, Midland, took second with 1367 while Cathy McNeese and Annie Brackets scored a 1307 for third as 232 teams participated.

Laverne Bean, Andrews, took first in singles with 764 while Judy Luna, Midland, was second with 696 and Cheryl Bush was third with 670.

Dee Beggs, Odessa, rolled for first in all events while Mary Ann Caldwell, Snyder, was second on 1989 and Cathy Muse of Midland was third on 1987.

Champions lin each event received trophies while 16 teams, 30 doubles, 47 singles and 43 all events entries received prize money.

Neil Bonnett runs away fast from dentist chair

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Neil Bonnett isn't joking when he says the highlight of the last two weeks for him has been root canal work.

"The fastest I've run in two weeks was getting away from the dentist's office," said Bonnett, who was unquestionably the cream of NASCAR's crop of young drivers until he hooked up with Harry Hyde and Jim Stacy more than a year ago.

Bonnett was at ground zero when the Stacy-Hyde partnership blew up in the middle of last season and landed in a courtroom. Since then Bonnett's career has been going down the pipes — literally.

Bonnett is a journeyman pipefitter. He figures he may be heading back in that direction if the horizon doesn't brighten up soon.

And he has no reason to believe it will.

"That's why I'm still carrying my pipefitter's card," he said Tuesday during a break in practice for Sunday's $600,000 Daytona 500 stock car race.

What makes it doubly hard for the talent-rich 32-year-old Alabamian is seeing drivers like Buddy Baker buzz by him 11 miles an hour faster or hearing Baker say, "Any driver out here could have won if they'd been in this car," after winning the 500 pole and $50,000 in the Busch Clash of '79.

Bonnett was reportedly ahead of Baker in consideration for that car until Bonnett pulled himself out of the running. The reason: Bonnett had signed a two-year contract with Stacy in better days.

Bonnett decided the honorable thing to do was abide by it.

The decision was commendable from an idealistic standpoint, but suicidal for his career. Bonnett, however, refuses to bad-mouth Stacy or anyone in the operation. But the car itself is another matter. That involves his pride in his profession.

The root canal work was a less painful experience than appearing on the track in view of his peers and the public in the equipment he's committed to run.

"I'll tell you how I feel about it. I'm embarrassed," he said. "I'm not running fast enough to blow the dust off the windshield."

Bonnett could have discarded his qualifying speed from Sunday and spent the first three days of this week trying to better it. The situation was hopeless, he reckoned.

"They say things have to get worse before they can get better. I believe I'm now at that point," he said.

Bonnett has also had problems with the Camaro he plans to run in Friday's NASCAR 200 for modifieds. That machine earned ninth position, but it's more than one second per lap slower than the No. 1 qualifier, Johnny Anderson. The Firebird Bonnett is planning to race in Saturday's Sportsman 300 went into today's final round of qualifying without a spot in the lineup.

Today was the last opportunity to improve speeds in all divisions racing this weekend as Speed Weeks '79 draws to a close.

day's $600,000 Daytona 500 stock car race. Behind him was his Stacy-owned Oldsmobile which could turn no better than 33rd fastest qualifying speed last Sunday. That's not good enough to make the 500 lineup without a good finish Thursday in one of the 125-mile qualifying races.

"If we don't find more speed and horsepower somewhere, I might be a spectator come Sunday. The crew's doing what it can, but there's an awful lot of equipment around here that makes our car look like a clunker."

What makes it doubly hard for the talent-rich 32-year-old Alabamian is seeing drivers like Buddy Baker buzz by him 11 miles an hour faster or hearing Baker say, "Any driver out here could have won if they'd been in this car," after winning the 500 pole and $50,000 in the Busch Clash of '79.

Chap netters face Angelo State next

Barring another snowstorm, Midland College tennis teams get their first action this spring today at 2 p.m. in a dual meet on the MC courts against Angelo State.

Leading Coach Brian Gilley's squad will be asophomore lettermen Jose Rivera, who finished fourth in NJCC tournament last year; Mike Burch, Houston Cypress-Fairbanks; and Steve Wyatt, Lubbock Coronado. Freshmen are Scott Dunn, Putnam City, Okla.; Kevin Jackson, Andrews; Oscar Ontiveros, El Paso; Des Ward, Edenvale, Johannesburg, South Africa; and Dale Boven, a mid-term transfer from Pan American University.

Kathy Bovell, Perth, Australia, is the only returning squad member and she will be joined by freshmen Leslie Miller, Odessa Permian; Debbie Smith, Houston Westchester; Mary Jane Spencer, Arlington Lamar; and Karen Young, Wichita Falls Rider.

Last year, MC tied with Odessa and NMMI for the NJCAA title and the women finished behind Odessa as runnerup. This year, the NJCAA is inviting only the top two finishers in the regional tournaments to attend national tournaments. Men's teams previously only had to be in the top three regionally.

"All conference teams are strong this year and we'll have to have a good effort from all our players if we are going to the nationals," Gilley said. "Our depth is particularly important this year, since the men's teams will be competing in six singles and three doubles matches instead of four singles and two doubles as in the past."

Last month's snowed out match with Angelo State, will be rescheduled later this month. MC will be in the Fort Worth-Dallas area March 7-9 for dual matches with North Texas, TCJU, Texas Wesleyan and the University of Dallas before opening conference play March 14 against OC.

Ali agrees to face Ellis

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Muhammad Ali has agreed to fight an exhibition match with Jimmy Ellis at the Civic Center on March 12 as part of what is billed as the heavyweight champion's farewell tour.

Mike Striar of Millis, Mass., owner of Konkert King promotions, said Tuesday four or five bouts will also be featured on the card. He said he is negotiating with ranking fighters, although no commitments have been made.

Alli, who regained his crown for an unprecedented third time last year, also has signed for five-round exhibition bouts in Hartford, Conn., and Buffalo next month.

Ellis, once Ali's sparring partner, formerly held the World Boxing Association title. Ali is recognized as champ by the WBA.

Lee, MHS golf teams going separate ways this weekend

The Midland Lee and Midland High golf teams go separate ways this weekend for competition in two golf tournaments.

Midland High travels to the San Marcos Invitational for a Thursday and Friday meet to kick off the weekend at the Quail Creek Country Club. The meet will feature 36 teams from the San Antonio and Houston area.

The Bulldog traveling squad will be Mike Young, Jeff Lutke, Richard Minnix, Jim Kern and Robert Upham, the only junior. MHS won the championship last year and was runnerup in 1977.

Midland Lee travels to the Odessa Invitational which will feature several area teams. Lee varsity members are Grant Spencer, Bill Davis, Mark Leonard, Mike Moses and Herbie Ware.

Midland High's second team of Randy Minnix, Russell Hays, Jeff Howes, Stacey Raney and Joe Sloan will also compete in the Odessa tournament.

Waldrep meets Turcotte

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The jockey who electrified the racing world when he rode Secretariat to the Triple Crown in 1974 journeyed to Texas in a wheelchair to meet another former athlete similarly afflicted.

Ron Turcotte, paralyzed from the waist down when he was thrown from a mount, flew to Dallas-Fort Worth Airport Tuesday to talk with Kent Waldrep about the former TCU running back's recent spinal cord injury treatment in the Soviet Union.

Waldrep has been confined to a wheelchair since his neck was broken in a 1974 football game in Alabama.

"We kind of struck of a friendship over the phone," Waldrep said. He said Turcotte called him about the Soviet treatment methods.

"He had to go out to California and he wanted to stop here on his way back to New York," Waldrep said.

Turcotte and Waldrep had dinner together to discuss their common problems and the Russian treatments.

Waldrep has been an outspoken critic of the American doctors and their methods of dealing with the paralyzed victims of spinal cord injuries.

Waldrep underwent special medical treatments at the Polenovsky Neurological Institute at Leningrad, utilizing enzymes and oxygen, and physical therapy, unavailable in the United States.

And since his return, Waldrep has heaped nothing but praise on the attitude and methods of Soviet physicians he said are dedicated to getting paralyzed patients back on their feet.

Turcotte, who was given a cowboy hat during a reception at the airport, wants to study therapy techniques to see if they can be beneficial to him.

Waldrep said he is encouraged by the progress he's made since being treated by Soviet doctors.

Pitcher inks pact

TONONTO (AP) — Blue Jay pitcher Mark Lemongello, acquired in an off-season trade that sent catcher Allan Ashby to the Houston Astros, signed a two-year contract, a Toronto team spokesman said Tuesday.

Lemongello had filed for binding salary arbitration to settle his contract differences with the American League team.

The right-hander posted 9-14 records in each of the last two seasons with the Astros. He had a 3.47 earned run average in 1977 and a 3.94 ERA last season.

NHL resumes second half of play

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — It was the first day of the rest of the season for the New York Islanders and Colorado Rockies. The National Hockey League's all-star break over, it was back to the chase for points in the standings and other such matters.

"I just sat down with myself and said, 'That series was a long time ago; now I've got to start thinking about the 28 games we have left.'" said Islanders defenseman Denis Potvin, who had played for the all-stars with three of his teammates in the Challenge Cup loss to the Soviet Nationals last week.

He was back with the Islanders Tuesday night, scoring his 21st goal of the season and helping New York to a 6-1 rout of the Colorado Rockies. In the other NHL game, the St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks skated to a 3-3 tie.

period; only a strong performance by goalie Glenn Resch — especially during a mid-period Rockies power play — kept Colorado off the scoreboard.

"Most of the other players were flat from not playing in so long," observed Rockies defenseman Barry Beck, who distinguished himself against the Soviets. "The other guys, who had played last week, were just tired."

But it was the ones who played last week who played best Tuesday.

New York right wing Mike Bossy scored his 44th goal and set up three others; center Bryan Trottier had two goals and an assist on the goal by Potvin. Gillies set up Bossy's score in a three-goal Islanders second period.

Beck, meanwhile, fed John Van Boxmeer for the 25-foot power play shot that ruined Resch's shutout bid at 6:30 of the third period.

"The intensity wasn't there for me," said Beck. "There was no fire."

Trottier echoed Beck's sentiments after the Islanders had run to 23 games their unbeaten streak against the Rockies. "There was no intensity," he admitted, "but this team has a lot to achieve yet."

The Challenge Cup may have ended just two days before the game, but it's recent history now.

Canucks 3, Blues 3
Ron Seldbauer's power-play goal at 7:03 of the third period gave Vancouver its tie with St. Louis.

Fuzzy Zoeller is favorite to win in Tucson Open Golf

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, according to defending champion Tom Watson's formula, could be the man to beat in the $250,000 Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open Golf Tournament.

"These things tend to go in cycles, trends," Watson said. "At any tournament, all you have to do is look at the men who have been playing well recently and you know who's likely to play well at that particular tournament."

"That doesn't mean that the man necessarily will win — but the chances are that he's playing well enough to win."

He scored his first career victory last month in San Diego. And he was second alone last week in the weather-plagued Hawaiian Open. Those two performances put him at the top of the year's money-winners with more than $82,000 and stamped him as a factor to be considered in the 72-hole test that begins Thursday on the 6,708-yard Randolph Municipal Golf Club course.

"I'm driving good and I'm putting good," Zoeller said after he and Watson and a number of other players had recovered from a 13-hour, weather-delayed flight from Hawaii. "Usually, you don't have but one of those things going for you. When you have both, it's really something. It takes so much pressure off your irons. You don't feel like you have to get it close to the hole to score, and you're not always digging it out of the cages."

Watson, Player of the Year the last two seasons, Zoeller, former Tucson title-holder Bruce Lietzke and others were on a flight that was grounded by fog in Los Angeles. They were bused to Burbank and eventually arrived in Tucson about eight hours behind schedule. Others had even greater difficulty when fog closed the Los Angeles airport, and many skipped the traditional practice round Tuesday.

"That could be costly. Many will be playing the little municipal course for the first time. It was pressed into service on a once-only basis while Tucson National — the usual site of this event — is undergoing renovation."

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Bruce Manson scored a stunning 6-7, 7-6, 6-1 victory over Sweden's Bjorn Borg in a first-round match of the $200,000 Tennis Masters at Mission Hills Country Club.

In other first-round matches, Jimmy Connors beat Czechoslovakia's Vladim Zednik 6-3, 7-5; third-seeded John McEnroe defeated Tom Gullikson 6-4, 6-3, and Alvaro Fillard of Chile defeated Adriano Panatta of Italy 7-6, 6-2.

In second-round action, Billie Jean King defeated Terry Moor 6-2, 6-2. Colle Dibley of Australia downed Betty Mayer 6-1, 6-4, 6-2. Billy Martin whopped Matt Mikulka 6-1, 6-2.

Champion Bruce Manson rallied to beat Cliff Drysdale of South Africa 5-7, 7-6, 7-4. Nick Saviano eliminated Tom Gullikson 6-4, 6-3, and Victor Amonte won over Steve Zverev of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-2.

SARASOTA, Fla. — The Nassau of Bahamas defeated John James of Great Britain 6-3, 6-2 in first-round play of the $100,000 Orange State Men's Indoor Tennis Championship.

Nassau will face defending champion Tomaso Seid of Czechoslovakia, who defeated Joel Bailey 6-3, 7-6.

In other matches, Rod Phillips of Australia defeated Christopher Freys of France 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. Rick Fisher stopped John Austin 6-4, 6-2, 6-2. Bruce Manson won over Steve Zverev of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-2.

LOS ANGELES — Ann Kiyomura struggled to a 7-6, 6-4 victory over Margaret Smith Court in first-round action of a $150,000 women's tennis tournament.

Ferry Fed of Australia won over Stephanie Tuboan when Tuboan had to quit in the second set because of a foot injury. Fed won 6-3, 6-1 when the match ended.

Virginia Rustic of Romania topped Leslie Allen 7-6, 6-2, 6-2. Kathy Anderson downed Bettina Bunge 7-6, 6-4. Maria Bednarek topped Betty Stone of the Netherlands 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 and Barbara Potter rallied to beat Renata Tomaseva of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 6-2.

LARGO, Fla. — Ron Baker shot a par 71 to win the $20,000 PGA Club Pro Series with a 36-hole total of 161.

Baker was followed by three golfers tied three strokes behind at 141: David Glen, Stan Bitts, and Chandler.

SPED SKATING
OSLO, Norway — Speed skating world champion Eric Heiden of the U.S. was awarded the Oscar Mathison memorial stamper by the Oslo skating club as the world's best speed skater in 1978.

Later, the 30-year-old Heiden won both the 500 and 1,000-meter races of the special club of the 1978-79 season. Heiden finished the 500 meters in 38.26 seconds and won in 1:13.23 in the 1,000-meter race in 1:13.23.

Dorothy finished second in both races with 41 seconds and 1:19.28, respectively.

SALISBURY, N.C. — The National Sportsmen and Sportswriters Association of America elected Bill Grimsey of The Associated Press as sports writer of the year and Vin Scully of Los Angeles as sportscaster of the year for 1978.

Grimsey and Scully, play-by-play announcer for the Los Angeles Dodgers, will be honored by the association at an awards banquet April 9 in Salisbury.

Grimsey, who wrote a national sports column for a daily issue for 10 years, was honored by the association in 1977. Scully's award had been won by Jim Murray of The Los Angeles Times for the past 12 years.

MOOSE RACING
ALBANY, Mo. — Don Albert, 68, scored a five-length victory over Quillette in the $10,000 feature of Golden Gate Plaza.

BOWIE, Md. — Paul W. Hill, 59, won the $15,000 feature at Bowie. He beat Diane's Porsche by a length and a half.

BALLANTRAE, Fla. — Magic One, 10, overpowered Charleston Girl at the top of the stretch to score a 7 1/2-length victory in the feature at Gulfstream.

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — It was the first day of the rest of the season for the New York Islanders and Colorado Rockies. The National Hockey League's all-star break over, it was back to the chase for points in the standings and other such matters.

"I just sat down with myself and said, 'That series was a long time ago; now I've got to start thinking about the 28 games we have left.'"

said Islanders defenseman Denis Potvin, who had played for the all-stars with three of his teammates in the Challenge Cup loss to the Soviet Nationals last week.

He was back with the Islanders Tuesday night, scoring his 21st goal of the season and helping New York to a 6-1 rout of the Colorado Rockies. In the other NHL game, the St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks skated to a 3-3 tie.

period; only a strong performance by goalie Glenn Resch — especially during a mid-period Rockies power play — kept Colorado off the scoreboard.

"Most of the other players were flat from not playing in so long," observed Rockies defenseman Barry Beck, who distinguished himself against the Soviets. "The other guys, who had played last week, were just tired."

But it was the ones who played last week who played best Tuesday.

New York right wing Mike Bossy scored his 44th goal and set up three others; center Bryan Trottier had two goals and an assist on the goal by Potvin. Gillies set up Bossy's score in a three-goal Islanders second period.

Beck, meanwhile, fed John Van Boxmeer for the 25-foot power play shot that ruined Resch's shutout bid at 6:30 of the third period.

"The intensity wasn't there for me," said Beck. "There was no fire."

Trottier echoed Beck's sentiments after the Islanders had run to 23 games their unbeaten streak against the Rockies. "There was no intensity," he admitted, "but this team has a lot to achieve yet."

The Challenge Cup may have ended just two days before the game, but it's recent history now.

Canucks 3, Blues 3
Ron Seldbauer's power-play goal at 7:03 of the third period gave Vancouver its tie with St. Louis.

N-blasts linked to leukemia in Utah

By VERN ANDERSON

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Nearly 4,300 sheep grazing downwind from Nevada nuclear tests died in the spring of 1953 after absorbing up to 1,000 times the maximum amount of radioactive iodine allowed for humans, government documents show.

"If that happened to sheep out here, what about the people that lived in Cedar City, who got a higher dose?" said Michael Zimmerman, a member of Gov. Scott Matheson's radiation committee, which released the papers Tuesday. Cedar City, Utah, is about 100 miles east of the test site in neighboring Nevada.

The 400 documents — most of them from the federal government — were released the same day the Deseret News revealed a study concluding that southern Utah children born during the 1950s nuclear tests had died from leukemia 2½ times more often than those born before and after the tests.

Zimmerman told reporters that some of the documents show radiation contributed to the sheep deaths. Despite evidence of high levels of radiation exposure however, he said, the Atomic Energy Commission concluded in late 1953 that radiation had not actually caused the sheep deaths.

Zimmerman said the documents indicate "a willful refusal" by the AEC to investigate the deaths and to determine if high radiation levels may also have affected human health.

Between March 17 and June 4, 1953, the AEC conducted 11 atmospheric nuclear tests at the Nevada Test Site, according to the documents. Such tests ended in 1962.

The documents, discovered in the state archives late last year, show that Utah ranchers in November 1952 placed about 18,000 sheep on winter grazing land in Lincoln County, Nev. The grazing areas were between a few miles and about 120 miles north and east of Nevada Proving Grounds borders.

When the sheep were returned to Utah in the spring of 1953, ranchers noted many were sick and dying. Ewes had spontaneous abortions and showed burn-like lesions on the face, neck and ears. The majority of lambs were born dead and stunted, and ewes died either during lambing or within a few days, the documents show.

A U.S. Public Health Service report said that June 9 autopsies on two ewes showed the concentration of iodine 131 in their thyroid glands "exceeds by a factor of 250 to 1,000 the maximum permissible concentration of radioactive iodine for humans."

Bone marrow tests on the same ewes showed radioactive concentrations 50 percent above the maximum allowable level for humans. However, the report concluded there was "no direct evidence that radiation could have been the cause" of the sheep deaths.

Matheson said the documents contain "some very damning information with respect to the effect of radiation fallout on sheep, and the sheep happen to be in the same area where there were, at that time, numbers of people. And we have to assume that the exposure on one was also an exposure on the other."

In a copyright story Tuesday, the Deseret News reported on a year-long study by Dr. Joseph Lyon, co-director of the Utah Cancer Registry. Lyon was quoted by the News as saying from 15 to 20 children died of leukemia who would not have died without the tests.

Lyon, who declined comment on the report Tuesday, reported on the study to government scientists in Washington Dec. 12. The University of Utah study is scheduled for publication Feb. 22 in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Over 230 claims have been filed by cancer victims and their families in Utah, Arizona and Nevada with the Department of Energy — the successor of the AEC — alleging the tests caused cancer and deaths.

Hanging by a rope attached to spikes driven into ice would be sheer terror for most people, but Don Gallagher of Lancaster, Pa., does it for fun. Gallagher claims the Norman Wood cliff near the Susquehanna River is one of the best climbing spots in the eastern United States. (AP Laserphoto)

PTA turns ratings to TV advertisers in expanded fight to improve programming

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The national PTA has rated advertisers along with the best and worst television shows for the first time in its fight to improve the quality of programming.

The latest round of program ratings was released Tuesday, and the organization said it found the Sterling Drug Co. "the most offensive advertiser in America" for the programs on which it advertises.

"Little House on the Prairie" was called the best prime-time show and "Starsky and Hutch" the worst and the most violent.

NBC was first among the three networks with five of the PTA's 10 top-rated programs, while ABC, first in the spring 1978 ratings, fell to last with only two programs deemed in the top 10. CBS was second with three. NBC had been second with three last spring, while ABC had been top-ranked with five.

The PTA called Avon Products, Bell Telephone, Campbell Soup, Consolidated Foods, Kellogg Products and Quaker Oats "distinguished" advertisers.

William Young, director of the PTA program review project, praised NBC President Fred Silverman for extreme cooperation over efforts to improve both program quality and diversity. Young assailed ABC head Fred Pierce for "almost no communication" and his constant criticism of consumer groups and said CBS continued to follow a "see-sawing" middle road.

The nationwide, 6½ million-member parent-teacher organization has reviewed television programs twice before. The review and ranking of advertisers based on their airing commercials over programs rated by quality was its first.

"At this time the PTA has no plans to urge a national boycott" by television viewers of products sold by advertisers termed objectionable or indiscriminate, said PTA President Grace Baisinger.

But she refused to rule that out. Members were urged to write advertisers to praise as well as criticize where appropriate, she said. "If letters are found insufficiently effective, viewers will be urged to employ selective product usage to support their written messages," she said.

Named second through 10th as the shows considered "excellent" based on positive contribution to the quality of life in America, lack of offensive content and artistic and technical program merit, were "The Waltons" (CBS); "60 Minutes" (CBS); "Life-line" (NBC); "Eight is Enough" (ABC); "CBS Specials"; "Wonderful World of Disney" (NBC); "Family" (ABC); "Centennial" (NBC); and "Grandpa Goes to Washington" (NBC).

Following "Starsky and Hutch" — also termed the "most objectionable" program for most violent content — for poorest in overall quality were: "Soap" (ABC); "Who's Watching the Kids?" (NBC); "Vegas" (ABC); "David Cassidy: Man Undercover" (NBC); "Rockford Files" (NBC); "Carter Country" (ABC); "Charlie's Angels" (ABC); "Eddie Capra Mysteries" (NBC); and "New Adventures of Wonder Woman" (CBS).

Lawyer takes fatal bullet from irate husband

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A 26-year-old lawyer died in the courtroom when she stepped in front of her di-voice case client as the woman's husband pulled the trigger of a revolver, a witness said.

Investigation to follow alleged beating by Miami deputies

MIAMI (AP) — Nathaniel LaFleur says he was watching television when someone knocked on his door. Moments later, he said, police were kicking and pistol-whipping him, asking him about drugs.

Police said Tuesday they made a mistake when they raided LaFleur's home Monday night.

Metro Sheriff E. Wilson Purdy said LaFleur's address wasn't the one listed on a search warrant served by five officers. He said the officers have been assigned to administrative duties pending an investigation.

LaFleur, whose head is bandaged, said when he asked who was at the door Monday, he heard an unfamiliar name.

"I opened the door and there were these policemen standing there pointing a gun that looked like one you use to shoot elephants," the 48-year-old school teacher said.

"I slammed the door and locked it."

LaFleur said he ran into his bedroom and dialed the county's three-digit emergency telephone number.

He said he "told the police that the police were breaking into my house."

Officers smashed down the front door and broke through the wooden door to the bedroom, LaFleur said, adding that they threw him on the bed, beat him and demanded to know where the drugs were.

He said he wasn't read his rights or taken to a hospital until police finished searching his northwest Miami home nearly three hours later.

He was treated at a hospital for a fractured skull and broken ribs and released Tuesday.

After shooting attorney Candice DuBoff Jones, 26, the husband — Ernest McClain, 39, of Astoria — then shot and killed himself. His 21-year-old wife, Billie Lee McClain of Portland, suffered only powder burns on her face.

McClain had been called into court in connection with an earlier order requiring him to pay support to his wife and child while awaiting a final divorce decree.

Judge Mercedes Deiz had ordered McClain, a carpenter, to make the payments when he drew the .357-caliber pistol and fired toward his wife, authorities said.

Ms. Jones moved as if to intervene and was hit by a second shot, officers said.

"This guy pulled a gun," said Tim Kubil of Portland, who was in the courtroom on another matter. "I saw him shoot the woman attorney. Then I started to run, and I heard a couple of more shots. I was very scared. "The guy seemed to be going after his wife when the attorney stepped in front of her. That's when he shot her."

Ms. Deiz, of the Multnomah County Circuit Court, entered her chambers, then emerged about an hour later near tears, saying, "Candy! I just can't stop thinking about Candy."

Ms. Jones had practiced law in Portland about a year, since her graduation from law school.

"It's a terrible shame," said David Cargo of Portland, a lawyer who knew Ms. Jones. "She was a very competent young attorney and a pleasure to deal with at all times."

McClain had been ordered to pay $475 a month support to his wife and 2-year-old son, Ernest.

Circuit Judge Phillip Roth inspected the courtroom where the shooting occurred and said, "It's pretty bloody in there. It's just horrible."

Sister's devotion helps retarded twin survive

By ALVIN BENN
Walker County Messenger

LAFAYETTE, Ga. (AP) — Holly Clark is more than a sister to her mentally retarded twin brother, Stevie. She is his teacher and his best friend.

"I can remember in the first grade when we were sitting on a swing behind the house," she said. "I was trying to teach him to talk. I used to cry about it all the time, especially when I first started to read and he couldn't."

The twins, children of Mr. and Mrs. Wes Clark, were six weeks premature when they were born 17 years ago.

Holly weighed 4½ pounds, but she grew rapidly. Stevie, who weighed only 3½ pounds, did not.

Doctors told the Clarks their son was mongoloid and urged them to place him in a home for the mentally retarded. But they decided to keep him at home.

That decision allowed Stevie and Holly to grow up together.

"Stevie feels closer to Holly than to me," said his mother. "There's something about being twins and, in this case, it's something special."

While Holly attended public schools, Stevie went to a special training center in nearby Chattanooga, Tenn. A few years ago, he began attending the Walker County Training Center in Wallaceville, which is closer to home.

The children spent their free time together.

"We used to play house," Holly recalled in an interview. "I would sit him down at a table with little cups and saucers. We'd also play ball together. When we'd go on vacation, Stevie and I would sit in the sand and play."

Doctors at first said Stevie's life expectancy would be only four years, but he has fooled everyone.

"They later said they had never seen a mongoloid with such a strong heart," said his father. "He had no murmur at all, and that was unusual."

With Holly's help and his training at school, Stevie has learned to do things once thought impossible for him, his mother said. Last year, he brought home two first place ribbons from the Special Olympics, a sporting event for handicapped youngsters.

"He can do so many things," Mrs. Clark said. "They try to help them help themselves. Fifteen years ago, if you had a retarded child, there was no place to go."

She and her husband are helping raise funds for a new training center for the mentally retarded in this area of northwest Georgia.

Holly, a band member and a cheerleader for the wrestling team at LaFayette High School, is considering a career in special education.

Bexar County jail officials in for shake-up over tests

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bexar County officials say the administrator of the county jail will be replaced in the wake of evidence that several guards, including the assistant chief jailer, submitted false, newly-required high school equivalency certificates.

Capt. Antonio T. Sandoval, 61, the assistant chief jailer and an 18-year veteran guard, has resigned after admitting that the General Education Development certificate he submitted to meet new state standards was "no good," Sheriff Rudy Garza said Tuesday.

Another guard has been fired and eight others suspended indefinitely without pay pending state and county investigations into the matter.

Garza said Tuesday that he planned today to ask county commissioners for the authority to replace Chief Jailer Ray Olivarri and reorganize his jail staff. Bexar County Judge Albert Bustamante predicted commissioners would readily grant the request.

"Ray Olivarri is either going to be demoted or replaced," said Bustamante.

Olivarri, 49, said he doesn't mind being demoted to captain and knew such plans were already in motion. Garza refused to say if he planned to fire or demote Olivarri.

"We now have the money to get a first class professional. That's what this place needs, a first class professional — an outsider," said Garza.

Sandoval, who could not be reached for comment Tuesday, resigned last weekend, Garza said.

The other guard was fired after admitting his GED certificate was false, but refusing to turn it over to investigators.

The other eight suspended guards await the outcome of the investigation that includes the Texas Education Agency, which certifies the GED program.

Most of the suspended guards have admitted buying phony certificates for $50 each, Garza has said.

New state standards for jail guards, passed in 1977, required guards to show proof of graduating from high school or an equivalent certificate by Jan. 1, 1979.

Alex Haley

Names in the news

HENNING, Tenn. (AP) — Except for a few new Main Street businesses and a large sign hailing Henning as the "Home of Alex Haley," this small West Tennessee town has changed little from pre-"Roots" days.

But local officials are hoping the television sequel to Haley's best-selling novel "Roots" will change that.

"We had about 2,000 people visit here because of interest in the book," Mayor Bill Brandon said Tuesday. "And we have had people who have moved here who never would have otherwise."

Otis Scoggins, who moved to Henning two years ago, converted an old movie house to a beer tavern. Two antique shops and a sporting goods store also have opened for business.

Henning was mentioned only briefly at the conclusion of the original television film "Roots," but residents say Haley hasn't forgotten his hometown.

"He has been very generous to all the black churches here and has promised to donate to a park when we get one," Brandon said. "The city has about $2,000 to buy some land."

Haley also is negotiating to buy his family home in Henning, which has been listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

"Roots II," a 14-hour sequel to the award-winning television series, will be aired by ABC-TV beginning Sunday.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Evel Knievel's request to have his felony conviction for assault and battery reduced to a misdemeanor has been dropped from the court calendar at his request.

The reason: the daredevil stuntman no longer needs the court action to obtain permission for an Australian tour.

"We had been informed Australian authorities would not let him in because of a felony conviction," attorney Peter Brown said Tuesday. "But we withdrew the action when a judge signed an order allowing him to go."

Brown said Australian authorities had agreed to give Knievel a visitor's permit if a judge in his assault case allowed the trip.

Knievel served just under five months of a sentence for assault on a former publicity agent with a baseball bat. He still has two years of a three-year probation term remaining.

"He left at 8 o'clock last night," Brown said Tuesday. "He's got an eight-week tour in Australia with his daredevil show."

LONDON (AP) — A rejuvenation of society is taking place in the Soviet Union, says exiled Russian author Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who repeated his desire to return home.

In an interview, Solzhenitsyn, winner of the 1970 Nobel Prize for literature, said communism is a "dead dog" in Russia, "while for many people in the West it is still a living lion."

Solzhenitsyn was exiled from the Soviet Union five years ago. He now lives in Vermont, where he was interviewed Feb. 3 by the British Broadcasting Corp.

The interview was copyrighted by Solzhenitsyn. It was broadcast Tuesday night in the BBC Russian Service, which has a potential listening audience of millions.

Speaking of his home country, the bearded 60-year-old author said, "Yes, we are still prisoners of communism," but "we have in Russia withstood this period of trial spiritually, and amazingly we are still standing."

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — President Arnold Miller of the United Mine Workers Union says the UMW Journal has been something of a failure, and he's turning to a UMW legacy to help straighten things out.

The monthly publication's new special assistant for communications is Thomas Lewis — grandson of former union chief John L. Lewis.

Lewis' grandfather was president of the UMW from 1920 to 1960 and was one of the country's best-known labor leaders.

Thomas Lewis is described in the magazine's January issue as a graduate of Johns Hopkins University. The Journal adds, "As for his background and special qualifications, Lewis simply says that his grandfather 'was a miner and was active as a member of the UMW.'"

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amy Carter can skate, but doesn't do it too often, says her mother, first lady Rosalynn Carter. Nevertheless, figure skater Dorothy Hamill presented Mrs. Carter and Amy with a caricature of Amy and Dorothy on skates.

Miss Hamill, the 1976 Olympic figure skating gold medalist, made the White House presentation Tuesday after she was sworn in as a member of the President's Council on Physical Fitness.

Eleven-year-old Amy was at the presentation because heavy snow forced cancellation of school.

Amy apparently prefers downhill skiing to skating, said her mother. Amy was on the slopes last weekend in New Hampshire.

Snow helps pilot survive crash, sub-zero weather

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — A five-foot cushion of snow and a rewired radio helped pilot Bill Bruning survive a plane crash and 16 hours of sub-zero temperatures atop a 5,500-foot mountain peak.

His only shield from the cold: a blanket and a light sport coat.

"It feels good to walk, I've been wrapped up all night," Bruning, 32, of Jonesboro, Ga., said Tuesday as he spurned offers by rescuers to carry him. "I feel fine."

His single-engine Piper Tri-Pacer crashed into the peak in the Great Smoky Mountains on the Tennessee-North Carolina border about 3:30 p.m. Monday as he made an approach into a Knoxville airport.

A rescue party dropped by helicopter over the icy mountain range reached him after daybreak Tuesday. Other than minor cuts, bruises and a slightly frostbitten foot, Bruning was all right. He was released Tuesday afternoon from the University of Tennessee Hospital.

"I had about 25 minutes to put down. I knew the crash was going to come but there was no way to avoid it," Bruning said in a telephone interview after returning to Georgia.

The airplane was flying at about 8,500 feet when he first started losing altitude, Bruning said. Ice on the plane's wings and fuselage prevented him from maintaining altitude, he said.

"After the impact, I sat there about five minutes and collected my thoughts," he said. "I never really worried, because after I survived the crash I knew I had it made. It was just a matter of sitting it out until the rescue team got there. It was my first crash and I pray my last."

Maj. Dennis Sparks of the Civil Air Patrol said the snow drift that cushioned the crash probably saved Bruning's life.

Except for his feet, Bruning was able to stay warm by following radio instructions from Dr. Robert Lash of the Federal Aviation Administration to stuff newspapers and air charts into his clothing. He kept his head covered with a blanket in the plane.

Lash said Bruning's ability to repair his radio and think clearly enabled him to survive the sub-zero chill.

"Considering the temperatures and conditions out there, he looks like a rose," Lash said. "He was calm and intelligent enough to rewire the radio so that we could talk to him. He took the ELT (emergency locator transmitter) and connected it to the plane's battery, which really saved him."

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Nine Boy Scouts and their four adult leaders sat out a Sierra Mountain snow storm in two tents telling jokes and munching salami and cheese, one leader said.

"We never felt lost; we were just behind schedule," said 16-year-old Jeffrey Merwin.

Placer County sheriff's deputy Jerry Dollinger said temperatures dropped to 30 degrees and winds gusted at 50 mph and 80 mph.

They were cold and tired but unharmed when they headed back Tuesday night to their home in Clarksburg, south of Sacramento. They had left Saturday on a weekend cross-country ski outing.

A search for the group ended when three youths and two adults hiked on skis up Emigrant Peak in swirling winds and snow Tuesday afternoon, broke into a ski lift cabin at the 8,700-foot level and telephoned the ski patrol.

"We finally decided we couldn't spend another night up there, so we went for it," said 15-year-old Andy Wallace. He, Merwin, Steve Pylman, 14, and leaders Graham Conner, 41, and Tom Wallace, 43, were the ones who left the group and found the cabin.

It was a difficult climb of three-quarters of a mile to a mile, said Dollinger. "I don't know how long it would have taken us to find them if they hadn't gone for help," he said.

The cabin was less than two miles from the bustling Squaw Valley ski resort, Dollinger said.

The group started the trip Saturday near Interstate 80 about 10 miles north of Squaw Valley. The scouts were trying to reach the resort Monday when the storm closed in.

"We made a wrong turn. The wind really did us in," said Conner. "It blew us right off our feet."

Conner said that after deciding to sit out the storm they tried to build caves in the snow, but the roofs collapsed. They then piled into the two tents.

The area is rugged, filled with cliffs and canyons, and prone to avalanches, said Sheriff's Lt. Mel McDougall. "You can get lost there in five minutes," he said.

"I never even thought about it (fear)," said Wallace. "It wasn't that bad last night, but it was kind of cold."

Six of the nine Boy Scouts rescued from the Sierra snow gave a victory salute in Squaw Valley, Calif., Tuesday after being rescued. The troop was found safe in an abandoned shack on Emigrant Peak overlooking Squaw Valley. (AP Laserphoto)

Man convicted of Mineo murder

By YARDENA ARAR

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 22-year-old former pizza delivery man has been convicted in the murder of actor Sal Mineo, three years after the one-time teen idol was stabbed to death outside his West Hollywood apartment.

Lionel Williams was found guilty

Tuesday of second-degree murder in the Feb. 12, 1976, slaying of the 37-year-old film star, but innocent of attempted robbery in the assault on Mineo.

However, Williams was also found guilty of nine first-degree armed robberies — most of them using a pistol — and one second-degree robbery, all committed within several weeks of the Mineo killing.

Williams, a short, stocky man with a billowing Afro, appeared unperturbed during the 20-minute Superior Court session. He turned to gaze at the audience of about 20 persons several times and unwrapped a stick of gum as the court clerk read the verdicts.

Judge Bonnie Lee Martin set a March 15 sentencing date for Williams, who faces 15 years to life imprisonment on the murder conviction alone. He remained in custody in lieu of $200,000 bail.

Defense attorney Mort Herbert said the verdict would be appealed on technical grounds, including his contention that the robbery and murder trials should have been conducted separately.

Mineo was killed as he returned from a play rehearsal. His death came at a time when friends believed his career was on the rise after a long eclipse. Mineo's greatest triumphs came in the 1950s and early 1960s, when he was nominated for Academy Awards for his performances in "Rebel Without a Cause" and "Exodus."

The six-man, six-woman jury handed in its decisions in the 12-count indictment after spending more than six days studying four weeks of testimony and evidence.

Williams was brought here in January 1978 from the Calhoun County, Mich., jail where he was serving an eight-month sentence for passing a bad check.

A guard at the jail was one of two prosecution witnesses who said they heard Williams boast of killing Mineo in the parking lot of his apartment building.

That testimony buttressed apparently convincing circumstantial evidence built by Deputy District Attorney Mike Genelin.

One prosecution witness said Williams had rented a yellow Dodge Colt on the day of the murder. Another witness said he had seen a man run away from the scene of the crime, jump into a car fitting that description and speed away into the night without turning on the lights.

Yet another witness said that on the same day Mineo was killed, Williams bought a hunting knife from a nearby store. Although the murder weapon has never been found, investigators obtained a similar knife and it "fits the wound exactly," Genelin said.

A witness from the coroner's office testified that the knife was an unusual one, different from 200 others in the coroner's collection. Williams later tattooed a drawing of that knife on his arm.

However, defense attorney Herbert introduced three witnesses who believed they saw Mineo's killer. All said the assailant was white and at least 5-foot-8 or taller. Williams is black and 5-foot-5.

But Genelin countered that it was simply too dark in the alley to determine the skin color or height of the killer.

ABA adopts stringent measures on discipline

By RICHARD CARELLI

ATLANTA (AP) — The American Bar Association wants the public to be better informed about dishonest or incompetent lawyers and is urging state and federal courts to adopt stronger disciplinary standards.

ABA delegates voted to ask for the more stringent standards — including public trials for lawyers suspected of misconduct — before ending a week-long national convention Tuesday.

The ABA is recommending that states establish nine-member commissions that include non-lawyers to investigate all possible lawyer misconduct. If there is good reason to believe a lawyer is not meeting minimal standards, a public trial is called for.

Only one-third of state disciplinary panels currently include non-lawyers. In about half the states, all lawyer disciplinary proceedings are closed to the public.

The new standards include these other provisions:

—Persons who file a complaint against a lawyer shall be kept informed of the subsequent investigation's progress.

—Lawyers may be forced to verify the accuracy of bank accounts they hold in trust for clients when there is "probable cause" to believe the accounts have not been properly maintained.

—There is no time limit — no "statute of limitations" — on when a lawyer may be disciplined for past misconduct.

Other highlights of the ABA convention included these:

—Chief Justice Warren Burger's annual skirmish with the broadcast media over his demand that the ABA bar television cameras and radio microphones from his State of the Judiciary speech. The Georgia Association of Newscasters charged Burger with "unbridled discrimination" and formal complaints were filed with the ABA by CBS and NBC.

—Adoption of a proposal for revolutionary changes in the nation's juvenile courts and for enhanced legal rights for children. The ABA now will lobby state legislatures in attempts to have its guidelines implemented.

—Defeat of an attempt to drop the association's 42-year opposition to courtroom coverage by television, radio or still photography.

—A vote to ask President Carter to establish a federally-financed program to provide more free legal help to poor persons accused of crimes.

Chad Green's parents denied stay of warrants

BOSTON (AP) — An Appeals Court judge has refused to modify contempt citations and arrest warrants against the parents of 3-year-old Chad Green, who was taken to a Mexican Laetrile clinic for leukemia treatment three weeks ago.

Chief Justice Allan Hale of the state Court of Appeals on Tuesday declined to act on a request from the Greens' attorney for a stay of the civil contempt citation issued against the couple by Plymouth Superior Court Judge Guy Volterra when they fled to Tijuana.

"I'm not going to pass judgment, but it's very, very doubtful in my mind that these people would be put in the slammer" if they returned voluntarily, Hale said about the pending actions. "I think the element of risk to them in this case is minimal."

Gerald and Diana Green went to Mexico with their son shortly after Volterra ordered that Chad should continue chemotherapy treatments at Massachusetts General Hospital, and stop his Laetrile-based "metabolic therapy."

Green has applied for a visa to work in Mexico near the clinic and said his son has begun kindergarten.

Advocates claim Laetrile, a trademark for a substance derived from a chemical found in apricot and peach pits and in bitter almonds, is an effective cancer treatment. But the federal government and the U.S. medical establishment have said there is no proof it is of any value in treating cancer.

Dormant polio virus found in Pennsylvania Amish child

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The state Health Department has received a report of the first case of dormant polio outside Franklin County, where 17 Amish residents have been struck by the virus this year.

Health officials said Tuesday that polio virus was found in a 4-year-old Amish boy living near the Cumberland County town of Newburg, a short distance beyond the Franklin County line.

"The boy has no symptoms of polio, but the presence of virus in this individual represents a source of infection from an unimmunized person," said Dr. William Parkin, a department epidemics expert.

Health officials said most virus carriers do not become ill, but can infect others.

Since the outbreak in Franklin County — where one young woman was crippled by the disease — tests on 71 persons, most of them Amish, have been done in four Pennsylvania counties.

The Cumberland County youth was the only person with the virus among 39 Amish who were tested in Franklin, Cumberland, Lebanon and Lancaster counties. Other tests have been conducted in Maryland, and more than 40 dormant cases have been found in the two states.

Thousands of persons, mostly non-Amish residents living near Amish settlements, have been immunized against polio in the two states.

The Amish, a breakaway Mennonite sect, generally avoid all drugs and other outside influences.

New drug shows 'promise' in treating even severe acne

BOSTON (AP) — A drug related to Vitamin A reportedly shows tremendous promise in treating acne, the disfiguring malady which can scar the faces of its youthful victims.

"It's the most exciting drug for acne ever seen," said Peter E. Pochi, a Boston University School of Medicine professor. "This may actually be the cure for acne."

In experiments at the dermatology branch of the National Cancer Institute, the drug — a variation of the active form of Vitamin A — completely cleared up severe, disfiguring acne in 13 of 14 volunteers and was 75 percent effective in the remaining patients.

The drug, taken orally in capsule form, worked within a 16-week course of therapy.

Researchers say smaller doses may be equally effective and work in as little as eight weeks, according to a report on the drug treatment published in today's Boston Globe.

Pochi cautioned, as did the cancer institute researchers, that the drug, called 13-cis-retinoic acid, should not be used by women unless they use some form of contraception, since the retinoid class of drugs can damage unborn embryos.

Acne afflicts 90 percent of all adolescents and young adults. The exact cause is unknown, but its eruptions occur because of overproduction of oils by skin glands.

The new drug "knocks the oil glands out, stops them in their tracks," said Pochi.

The drug trials were carried out at the institute in Bethesda, Md., using volunteers whose acne had resisted all known forms of treatment, including antibiotics, vitamin A, peroxide, x-rays and sex hormones.

Visiting professor to speak Friday on UTPB campus

ODESSA — A professor of psychology from North Texas State University will speak on the role of cognition in behavior therapy at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 7 p.m. Friday.

Dr. David Rimm, who has written texts on behavior therapy, abnormal psychology and general psychology, has done extensive work on behavior therapy.

The lecture is one of a series sponsored by Psi Chi, the national honor society in psychology. It will be in the faculty dining room located in the student lounge.

The public is invited to attend the free lecture. Refreshments will be served after the talk.

Mexico holds top cards in parleys with Carter

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Carter and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo lay their cards on the table in Mexico City this week, Lopez Portillo will be holding two high trumps — oil and natural gas.

They give Mexico a strong hand in dealing for U.S. cooperation on trade, immigration, and other touchy issues.

It is easy to cast recent U.S.-Mexican contacts in an apparently simple mold: Mexico offered to sell the United States natural gas at $2.60 per thousand cubic feet; the U.S. turned it down because the price was too high; Mexico got miffed and threatened to sell elsewhere; and the critics said U.S. Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger had bungled a chance for more energy.

But that is much too simple a description of U.S.-Mexican relations on energy, even at a time of uncertainty over Mideast oil supplies.

U.S. OFFICIALS have emphasized that Carter would not try, on his visit to Mexico starting today, to negotiate a natural gas price.

And Carter said in a news conference Monday that broader questions of timing and pricing must be worked out.

Jorge Diaz Serrano, head of Mexico's government petroleum monopoly, estimated in 1977 that his country's production could increase by some 1.1 million barrels of oil and 2 billion cubic feet of gas daily by 1982. But not all that may be exported; Mexico may use some, perhaps most of it, for its own development.

Interviewed in Business Week magazine last month, Lopez Portillo said U.S. planners "are in for a rude awakening" if they expect Mexican oil to solve the United States' energy problems.

The United States now buys some 80 percent of Mexico's oil exports and might want more, expecting to pay prevailing world prices but gaining a closer, more reliable supply than with Middle East oil.

MOST OF THE apparent friction has centered on natural gas.

In August 1977, Mexico agreed to sell six U.S. companies 2 billion cubic feet of gas a day, some 3 percent of anticipated U.S. needs in 1980 when deliveries were to begin. But Mexico was charging $2.60 per thousand cubic feet, a premium price pegged to the cost of the nearest alternative fuel, light oil.

Schlesinger blocked the deal while Congress worked out a U.S. gas-pricing policy; then Mexico withdrew its offer, suggesting it might sell the gas elsewhere or use it at home.

Meanwhile, however, Mexico had already started construction of a gas pipeline to the border which now lies unfinished, and some Mexican gas is reportedly being burned wastefully for lack of a market.

WHEN THE NEW U.S. energy law was passed last November, Mexico's asking price turned out to be about one-third higher than the U.S. domestic gas price ceiling. Lopez Portillo says he will not back down and, to make matters worse, Canada says it will raise its gas price of $2.16 per thousand cubic feet if Mexico gets more money.

Carter seemed to indicate Monday that the United States may be even more concerned about Mexico's linking gas prices to the price of fuel oil, which could make gas prices indirectly subject to decisions by the foreign cartel OPEC, which already dictates world oil prices.

But price is not the only problem. While Mexican natural gas is looking for a market, so is U.S. natural gas.

Under the new energy act, some 2.7 billion cubic feet of natural gas a day is expected to become available at home. Also, there are large, undeveloped natural gas reserves in Alaska and construction of a pipeline to the "lower 48" has been approved.

THESE SUPPLIES could supplant the need for large amounts of Mexican gas in the 1980s. On the other hand, Mexican gas could be imported, in addition, to displace some Middle East oil imports.

U.S. officials have said Carter would seek to match Mexico's timetable for oil and gas production to the expected U.S. market. And Carter said Monday he wanted policies "predictable on delivery dates and also on price schedules, and we'll try to be a customer."

Mexican oil and gas exports could have other strings attached, too — ones linked to U.S. attitudes toward jobless-Mexicans who enter the United States illegally and seek work.

If the United States gets tough on aliens, Mexico can ask: How can we provide jobs at home if you refuse to buy our gas, denying us capital for development?

HIGHLIGHTING another sore spot last March, some 200 U.S. farmers briefly blockaded the Mexican border near Nogales, Ariz., in a demonstration against competing imports of Mexican farm produce.

Mexico, struggling with a foreign trade deficit of its own, wants to protect and increase its sales of produce in the United States. If the United States wants more Mexican petroleum, it could be asked to buy a bigger shopping bag of Mexican tomatoes and watermelons.

In addition to the policies on aliens and imports, the United States will have to deal with Mexico's sensitivity to any hint of U.S. domination.

Last April, U.S. Ambassador Patrick J. Lucey said Mexico had turned down $2 billion in U.S. aid — which could have created 800,000 jobs — because it did not want to be "dependent on the United States."

Thus, before his Mexico visit, Carter insisted that "we have no inclination to force them to give us a special privilege or to do anything ... damaging to the well-being of the Mexican people."

HE WAS ASKED pointedly whether Mexico, with its large new petroleum resources, "has us over a barrel" in pressing its own views on immigration and trade.

"One of the reasons for going to Mexico," Carter said, "is to explore the possibilities for resolving these differences of opinion between our people and theirs."

Beginning March 1 ending March 14, youngsters will be participating in the Multiple Sclerosis Read-a-thon to raise money to help fight the disease. Hazel Lewis, left, executive director of

Permian Basin Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Association, and Trish Lenihan, a former national rodeo queen and singer, make plans for the event. (Staff Photo)

Watergate figures heading back into living rooms of Americans

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Those Watergate folks will once again be coming into American living rooms in May.

First came the news events themselves, especially the Senate hearings of that summer of '73. Then ABC's 1977 mini-series "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," more or less fictional, more or less based on a John Ehrlichman novel.

In May, CBS will telecast eight hours of drama based on John Dean's confessional, "Blind Ambition." David Susskind is executive producer for Time-Life Television. George Schaefer the habitual Emmy winner, is producer-director. Filming began, appropriately enough, at Halloween and is just now coming to an end.

The other day, "Blind Ambition" was on location in Toluca Lake, a short distance from Bob Hope's house. A local residence was subbing for the Washington suburb home of John Dean, the White House lawyer who blew the whistle on Richard Nixon, and his wife, Maureen. They are played by Martin Sheen ("The Subject Was Roses") and newcomer Theresa Russell.

Schaefer was giving instructions to the two stars before the lunch break, then he spoke to a visitor.

"It has been a long haul," said the director. "And now I will have only three months to edit eight hours of film! But it has been a marvelous experience, and I think it will be a good show. If the viewers come back for the second night, I think they'll stay throughout the run. The story has a kind of cumulative drive."

Also in the cast of "Blind Ambition": Rip Torn as Richard Nixon, William Schallart as Herbert Kalmbach, William Windom as Richard Kleindienst, John Randolph as John Mitchell, William Daniels as Gordon Liddy, Graham Jarvis as John Ehrlichman, Laurence Pressman as H. R. Haldeman. The script was written by Stanley R. Greenberg, author of the docu-dramas "Pueblo" and "The Missiles of October."

Co-producing with Schaefer is Renee Valente, who is marking a return with Susskind. Twenty-five years ago, she came out of New York University to work as assistant story editor for his Talent Associates. She has since risen to become Columbia Pictures vice president for talent, then for TV movies, and now heads her own production company.

"It has been an exhausting three and a half months, working from 5:30-6:00 in the morning until eight at night," said Miss Valente. "But morale has been high. There have been no dropouts at the dailies; everyone is eager to see the film that has been shot. That's a good sign."

Her first encounter with the project came when she was in the east to act as judge at the Miss America contest. Susskind invited her to lunch and over coffee said, "How would you like to produce 'Blind Ambition'?" It seemed like a good idea to her. Even though the public had a taste of Watergate with "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," she reasons that "no one has seen Watergate from the inside."

The TV show is based on Dean's book and Maureen's as well, said Miss Valente, adding: "I think there will be some surprises. For instance, I didn't know that Dean had been a womanizer. Or that Maureen had suffered a nervous breakdown. The public has the impression of her from the hearings as being so cool and calm. She wasn't that way at all."

"Blind Ambition" shot for 15 days in Washington where the company received little or no cooperation, said the co-producer.

"We couldn't even get into the parking lot of the E.O.B. (Executive Office Building)," she said. "We wanted to take photographs inside the White House so we could make our sets authentic. That wasn't allowed, although our art director was able to make sketches of some of the offices."

The Deans have visited the movie set only twice and have answered questions from the actors. The pair declined Valente's suggestion to "do a Hitchcock" — walking through a scene.

Kansas has lowest, Alaska highest unemployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kansas had the lowest unemployment rate and Alaska the highest jobless rate among the 50 states at the end of 1978, the federal government reports.

Unemployment estimates released this week by the Bureau of Labor Statistics showed that Kansas had a jobless rate of 2.7 percent in December, while unemployment in Alaska stood at 11.4 percent.

Nationally, the unemployment rate was 5.8 percent in December. However, the national figure is adjusted for seasonal variations in employment patterns, while the state figures are not. Thus, state jobless rates cannot be compared directly to the national rate.

Kansas was among eight states with unemployment rates estimated to be under 4 percent at the end of 1978. The others were South Dakota, 3.0 percent; Nebraska, 3.1; Oklahoma, 3.2; Wyoming, 3.5; New Hampshire, 3.6; Utah, 3.7, and Minnesota, 3.9.

Ten other states besides Alaska had unemployment rates of 6.5 percent or more. They were Arkansas, 7.8; Hawaii, 7.2; New Jersey, 6.9; Michigan and Washington, 6.7; Mississippi and New York, 6.6, and Idaho, Oregon and West Virginia, 6.5.

The government said jobless rates declined from December 1977 levels in 34 states, rose in 12 states and remained unchanged in four states.

The states where unemployment rates rose were Alaska, Arkansas, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, North Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia and Wisconsin. Unchanged were Maryland, New Jersey, South Dakota and Texas.

DEAR ABBY

Silence does not necessarily imply one's guilt

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A woman I work with asked me if I had ever had an affair! I was dumbfounded and didn't answer one way or the other because I felt it wasn't any of her business.

She took my refusal to answer to mean "yes"—saying, "If the answer had been 'no,' you would have said 'no.'"

Abby, can you suggest a snappy or clever comeback for a question I don't want to answer?—TONGUE-TIED IN TORRANCE

DEAR TIED: Don't feel obligated to provide a snappy or clever comeback for a rude and insolent question. Silence is golden, but not necessarily GUILTY!

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday was our ninth anniversary and my husband didn't remember it. I was heartsick all day. I suppose I should be over it by now, but I'm not.

Dick is a good provider, a considerate husband and father, but he's not at all sentimental. Birthdays, anniversaries and most holidays are overlooked. If the children didn't make such a big fuss about Christmas, I'm sure he'd forget that too. Last year I tried giving Dick a taste of his own medicine, so I "forgot" his birthday, but it didn't work because he forgot it too. I can't help feeling hurt and resentful. Any suggestions?—DICK'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes. Create a festive mood by planning in advance to celebrate occasions. On HIS birthday, bake a cake and invite friends in. Or make plans to go out to celebrate. On YOURS, do the same.

Repeat on Mother's Day, Father's Day, anniversaries and any other day you're sentimental about. If you suffer in silence, feeling sorry for yourself, you have no one to blame but yourself.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the mother whose 8-year-old was sulking because her mother wouldn't buy her a brassiere brought back a lot of memories.

My now lovely 28-year-old (I'll call her Sally) was 11 when she gave me that same fit. A neighbor had given Sally some bras her daughter had outgrown, and I carried on the way most mothers do when faced with that kind of situation. I said, "You don't NEED a bra yet—it's silly. I'll tell you when you're ready for one!"

Then I asked myself a few questions: "Am I just trying to show my daughter who's boss?" (I was.) Also, "Who will she be hurting if she wears a bra?" (No one.) And, "How much will it cost me?" (Nothing.)

Then I told myself that I had better save my "absolutely not's" for more important things. So, I gave Sally a big hug and told her she could wear a bra to school the next day!

I could hardly wait for her to get home from school. When she walked through the door, I asked if any of her friends had told her how much better she looked in a bra.

Her reply, "Oh, gee, I forgot to wear it."—"THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES"

DEAR THANKS: Thanks for a delightful day-brightener.

Copley News Service
LOS ANGELES — Ten-year-old Linda had ample reason to be afraid of the world.

She had been molested by a man, and although the incident clearly troubled her, she would not — or could not — talk about it. Instead, she masked her feelings in silence, polite compliance and withdrawal.

When asked how she felt, her typical response was a shrugged, "I don't know."

She is typical of most of the children who come to Dr. Violet Oaklander, a Gestalt therapist. Not equipped with words to verbalize their feelings, the children are unable to say exactly what is troubling them.

Oaklander gets them to open up with the simplest of tools — crayons, paints, games, toys and puppets.

In Linda's case, Oaklander asked her to draw a picture of the man who had molested her.

Linda drew herself shooting dozens of arrows through the man's body. The very act of drawing her emotions allowed her to express her anger and rapidly recover from the incident.

A former consultant to the Los Angeles School District, Oaklander specializes in teaching seminars in art therapy for children.

Experts jogging some beliefs about running

Copley News Service

A doctor has uncovered rocks along the runner's road to health.

The many harmful effects of strenuous exercise, especially long-distance running, need to be recognized if serious injury, illness and even death are to be avoided among the millions of Americans turning to jogging and running as some kind of magic mile to immortality, according to Dr. James P. Knochel.

Many runners, Knochel said, are fainting during hot-weather runs because of water depletion which can cause a serious loss of minerals such as potassium and chloride.

Knochel said in an interview that it is not unusual for runners to lose one or two quarts of water an hour during a marathon.

Rectal temperatures of 106 degrees are not uncommon during long, hot runs. These are temperatures that can lead to heat stroke, he said.

Knochel, professor of internal medicine, University of Texas Health Science Center, said that during long-distance runs, skeletal muscles in the legs can actually die, releasing their contents, notably potassium, into the system.

"Concentration of potassium can be so high in the system when that happens," Knochel said, "that it can stop the heart."

He said this condition may account for reports of long-distance runners dropping dead during strenuous workouts. He said the marathon does not assure resistance to cardiovascular disease as some have claimed.

instances of experienced marathoners dying during and after running. One was a veteran, marathoner recently training for a 50-mile run.

He warned against a practice becoming common among world-class runners — carbohydrate loading. Many runners have found they can increase their performances, sometimes tenfold, by depleting their bodies of glycogen by running to exhaustion several days before a race or with a high-fat diet several days before a race and then by eating high amounts of energy-rich carbohydrates.

Knochel said this may be causing the high incidence of a condition called lactic acidosis being reported.

Mrs. Jack Glenn receives Altrusa award

Mrs. Jack Glenn, left, is presented the Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year award annually given by the Midland Altrusa Club. Making the presentation is Mrs. J. P. H. McMullan, member of Altrusa's Community Service Committee. Mrs. Glenn is dietician and director of the Meals-on-Wheels program. (Staff Photo).

Mrs. Jack Glenn was named recipient of the Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year award at the annual Altrusa Club dinner held at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Mrs. Glenn is the fifth recipient of the award. A registered dietician who directs Meals-On-Wheels, Mrs. Glenn was nominated by the Midland Society of University Women and was represented at the dinner by Mr. and Mrs. John Seerey.

Other nominees were Mrs. Theo Ferguson, sponsored by the Midland Volunteer Auxiliary to the Big Spring State Hospital and accompanied by Ann Braselton; Mrs. Francis Y. Grubb, by the Newcomers Club, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy; Lotta Z. Williams, Midland Community Concerts Association, accompanied by Dorothy Perkins; Mrs. Vincent Scury, Midland Branch of AAUW, represented by Mr. and Mrs. Barton Evans; and Mrs. J. R. Smith, Golden Agers of Midland, represented by Mr. and Mrs. Lee May.

Former recipients of the award are Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. Jack Samples, Mrs. Joe Mims and Mrs. E. A. Culbertson.

Mary Alice Tidwell, club president, welcomed guests and introduced Jim and Lucy Mashburn, special guests for the evening.

Mrs. William R. Cain, club hospitality chairman, introduced Janis Walker, who sang a number of selections, accompanied at the piano by Shirley King.

Mrs. J. P. H. McMullan, Jr., a member of the community service committee, introduced the award nominees and presented the winner.

Guest speaker was Mrs. Bobby Page, a member of the board of trustees of Midland Independent School District. She was introduced by Myrtle Bearden, vice president of the club.

In keeping with Altrusa International's theme of the year, "illiteracy," Mrs. Page discussed learning problems among students in the Midland schools, and noted that students' inability to read was the greatest handicap, presenting further learning problems.

Mrs. Page said that for many years there has been an LD/Resource room at each elementary school with a specially trained teacher to individually help each student with learning disabilities. The program is now being expanded into junior and senior grades.

She further noted that one of the biggest problems facing the Midland schools is with children who do not speak English. Most of the Hispanic children who start their education in Midland schools have attended the Head Start program, but many come here from areas where this program is not available. There are also a number of Laotian children entering the schools who also have a very limited use of English. The MISD is currently searching for bilingual teachers to help these students.

Mrs. Page commented on the Partners-in-Reading program, a one-to-one reading assistance program in the school, noting that a number of Altrusa members are volunteering in this project.

Mrs. Page also said that Midland schools have been able to ease the drop-out problem by channeling students into various vocational training programs.

She added that MISD was working to help each student overcome problems and to equip them for a successful future through finding areas in which they do excel.

In charge of arrangements for the banquet was Mrs. Cain. Valentine bouquets at the tables were taken to the club's shut-in members. Mrs. Ada Phillips, charter member of the group, gave the invocation. Mrs. John J. Carter gave the benediction.

Special guests for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. John Reid; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Samples; Fayrene Biro, immediate past governor of District Nine; Emmy Detlof of San Angelo; Mr. and Mrs. Mashburn; and Patti Harbison, Thelma Stevens, Bessie Lou Doelling, and Hazel Costin, all of the Odessa Altrusa Club. Approximately 150 members and guests attended.

New technology advances rayon

Copley News Service

NEW YORK — New fabric technology could revolutionize the clothes of the future.

Rayon, the world's first man-made fiber, has a new profile in its bid for space age acceptance.

Scientists at the Avril Lifestyle Center, a textile testing laboratory, report that the new rayon is truly the fiber of the future — from transportation and space travel to apparel and entertainment.

"Rayon may be the only fiber used in Mr. and Mrs. America's wardrobe by 1990," says B.V. Hittick, director of Research and Development for Avtex Fibers.

"It's not science fiction. The world is on the threshold of major technical advances that will propel us into the future much sooner than expected. And since rayon is a derivative of wood cellulose — not petrochemicals — and is dependent upon trees, a constantly renewable source of wood — it must get top consideration."

"By consulting with experts in varied fields we can predict future lifestyles. We can construct a realistic scenario of life for today and into the year 2079."

The next century will see very utilitarian clothes during the day and fantasy dressing for night, according to the Avril scientists. Fashion will be directed by the needs of a very sophisticated world.

Lick stress with exercise on a daily schedule

Copley News Service

How can you tell if you are under stress?

According to David Jacobs, a Ph.D. and clinical psychologist, there are several telltale signs that might indicate you are stressed:

— Chronic muscle tension in facial muscles, the neck or shoulders ("I mean the pain is there a lot of the time")

— Emotional and irritable behavior. You find it difficult to enjoy yourself, are angered by insignificant things and cry easily. ("You can be very vulnerable and very angry at the same time") — Problems concentrating, remembering or learning things.

Jacobs who said there are some general techniques almost anyone can follow to relieve such tensions.

The psychologist said the best way to relieve stress is to exercise regularly.

"It's the simplest and least expensive thing you can do," he noted in an interview. "I'm all in favor of jogging, swimming and playing tennis."

"These are all what I call 'big-muscle-users' that are important to get those muscles relaxed during the day."

"Although the techniques I will teach in the course are somewhat more passive than that, in that they don't focus on the big muscles, I've found that the group of people responding best to our conditioning is our athletes. They've learned how to relax."

By "passive muscle relaxation procedures," Jacobs said he means "easing a muscle that is tense and keeping it that way."

Many people, he said, "have a great deal of tension in their shoulders and neck, for example. Well, if they have that long enough, they'll get a muscle contraction headache. People can also have problems with headaches if they've become used to clenching their jaw under stressful conditions. There are also breathing procedures people can use when under stress — an area of relaxation with which athletes are particularly adept."

Jacobs said that "nearly everybody" who lives in a highly technologized society, such as that of the United States, is always under some form of "mild chronic stress."

In fact, he said, this country is worse in that respect than any place else in the world psychologists have measured for stress.

"It just follows in a highly technical society," he added. "That's because in a society like ours everything is timed so carefully, watched so carefully. It's always, 'gotta be there, be here, do this, do that.' When you don't have that technology in a society, you don't find as much stress."

Perfectionists, he added, are among those most likely to be plagued by stress.

'Julius Caesar' begins Shakespeare series

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a new series coming to TV Wednesday night. Big deal. There's a new series every night, isn't there?

So, what'll this one be? Fleshy detectives? A show about adolescents? Maybe a sitcom about a divorced parent with teenagers; that would be novel.

Let's see... "The Plays of William Shakespeare" on public television.

Well, that sounds interesting. I wonder which ones they'll do. Better check the publicity sheets.

All 37 of them? Aw, c'mon. When is public television going to catch on? TV series are supposed to be conceived in flashy Beverly Hills restaurants with unlisted phone numbers; they're supposed to take two, maybe three months from linguistic debut date. All of the Shakespeare plays would take a year or two to make and air.

I'd better find out who's running this show. Hmm... Cedric Messina of the British Broadcasting Corporation. That figures. Only the BBC would try to pull off a television series that could take two years to produce.

"Six years, actually," Messina corrects. He says it took a year to produce seven plays, six of which will air this season, and the series will run for five years.

The entire first folio plus "Pericles, Prince of Tyre." No light undertaking. Why all 37? "Why not?" Messina asks. Oh, OK.

"Julius Caesar," the enduring tale of envy, treachery and betrayal, will be the first airing of the season tonight. The plays will not be shown in chronological order, allowing a mixture each season of Shakespeare's comedies and his tragedies, his popular works and his lesser known plays.

Following "Julius Caesar" this season will be "As You Like It," "Romeo and Juliet," "Richard II," "Measure for Measure" and "Henry VIII," airing every other week.

This BBC series was also sold to Australia, Canada, Sweden, Germany, Japan and the Soviet Union. It will bring Shakespeare to more people the next six years than have seen his works in the 363 years since his death.

South discarded a diamond on the ace of spades, took the ace of diamonds and gave up a diamond.

West won and returned a heart to dummy's ace.

South ruffed a diamond and led a trump to dummy's eight, planning to ruff another diamond and then return to dummy with a trump to cash a good diamond. The 3-0 trump break made it impossible for South to cash a diamond after drawing trumps.

VITAL DISCARD

The proof of the bidding is in the play. South should cover the opening lead with the five of spades and should discard a diamond from his hand.

South wins the diamond return, leads a trump to the eight, discards a diamond on the ace of spades and ruffs a diamond. He gets back with a trump to ruff another diamond, draws the last trump and finally gets to dummy with a heart to discard on a good diamond.

The unusual first trick is necessary to prevent West from getting in to lead hearts through the dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S-A52; H-AQ3; D-98532; C-Q8. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. The hand is not quite worth an opening bid. If you had two low clubs and five diamonds headed by the queen, you might scrape up an opening bid of one diamond. High cards are worth more in long suits than in short suits.

'Dolly and Carol in Nashville' works with natural teamwork

By BILL HANSE
Special to Newsday

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It was an unlikely duo. Some folks even felt the match-up most likely would never work. Their styles, their statures, were miles apart.

A blonde, voluptuous country-music sensation playing opposite a thin, somewhat sophisticated and seasoned TV comedian. There was some doubt.

But they did it anyway, and viewers can see the results for themselves tonight, Valentine's day, when CBS airs "Dolly and Carol in Nashville."

The natural teamwork of Dolly Parton and Carol Burnett worked like a charm during the two weeks of rehearsals at Nashville's Grand Ole Opry House, more so for the two-hour-long tapings before capacity audiences.

It's basically a two-woman performance, backed by some Nashville pickers, a black gospel choir, a couple of country artists in cameos and dancers, headed by choreographer Joe Layton.

This is Parton's first television special, one that the 33-year-old country music star said came as "a shock and a surprise."

"You want to know how I learned about it?" she asked during a rehearsal break. "I found out I was going to do the show through friends who watched one of Carol's last weekly shows."

"On the show she was asked by someone in the audience what she planned to do in the near future. She told them she was coming to Nashville to do a special with me."

"It was news to me," she said, "but I'm glad it worked out."

"Dolly and Carol in Nashville" is produced by Joe Hamilton, who is Carol's husband and the producer of the "Carol Burnett Show," which had an 11-year run and found new life in syndication.

Hamilton figures this one will be just as good, if not better, than the well-received special his wife did with Julie Andrews.

"I think this is a good concept," Hamilton said. "On both projects, we have Carol performing with women whose talents are in other fields of show business. But both blend well."

Tickets for the two tapings at the 4,400-seat Opry House went in a flash, faster than any other attraction, according to the management.

"Dolly and Carol in Nashville" is a blend of music and comedy and, surprisingly, is not loaded with country "corn" comedy and music from the hills.

The initial shot is of Parton and Burnett silhouetted on the stage, standing back to back. There is no doubt who is on the right and who is on the left — the difference between night and day.

The first routine is a song about how each woman feels toward the other, preceded by Burnett telling the audience (while at the same time staring at Parton's form), "Oh, Miss Parton, the first time I saw you on TV, I said to myself... and then I said... I've got to work with you! And please, call me Carol."

"Oh, I couldn't," Parton says. "I couldn't call my idol by her first name."

"You're a heavenly critter, the pick of the litter," croons Parton.

Elvis movie 'was super'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A television movie about the life of Elvis Presley surprised a member of the late rock 'n' roll king's back-up group.

"I expected it to be junk," said Gordon Stoker of The Jordanaires, who sang with Presley from 1965 until 1970. "We all thought the movie was super."

Stoker said Monday that the movie, aired by ABC-TV Sunday night, correctly portrayed several events in Presley's life, including his deep love for his mother, attempts by high school classmates to cut his hair, his insecurity over performing at Las Vegas in 1969 and wedding arrangements that excluded some close friends.

Juarez glitter helps to expand El Paso tourism

By TOM DeCOLA
(Last of a Series)

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — El Paso and its jobs are a magnet for Mexicans, and Juarez, just across the Rio Grande, is a magnet for American tourists and conventioners.

There are plenty of good places to eat, drink and play in El Paso. There are more, and with more variety, in Juarez.

Curiously, El Paso residents seldom avail themselves of adventure across the border.

But the glitter and utter availability of most everything in Juarez gives El Paso a leg up when competing for transient dollars with, for example, Kansas City.

Crossing the border is no problem. Waves from customs agents on each side of the border are common when entering Mexico. Returning, visitors can expect a more thorough going-over.

It would be hard to imagine an American returning without something on which duty must (or at least is supposed to) be paid.

You can buy a bottle of good tequila for a little more than $2. A carton of American cigarettes will cost from $3.50 to $4.00, depending on negotiating skill.

Transient carnivals provide all kinds of betting, and the Juarez racetrack provides pari-mutuel action on greyhounds and horses.

There are good and bad restaurants and bars. And there are bordellos where one can purchase sex or a ticket to a "show" that would defy any rating.

For a while, there were strong rumors that Mexico will soon allow casino gambling, but those rumors have softened to hopeful whispers among the gamblers. "They'll never do gambling now that they're gonna have oil," said El Paso Mayor Pro-Tem Dan Ponder.

The Juarez racetrack handles about $10 million annually, and is suffering through a slight slump. Better dogs are competing for higher purses at other tracks.

A few years ago, a United States venture called "Operation Intercept" was launched, aimed at drying up drug traffic from Mexico. Mostly it dried up tourism and dollars, clogging bridges while customs inspectors made diligent searches of cars.

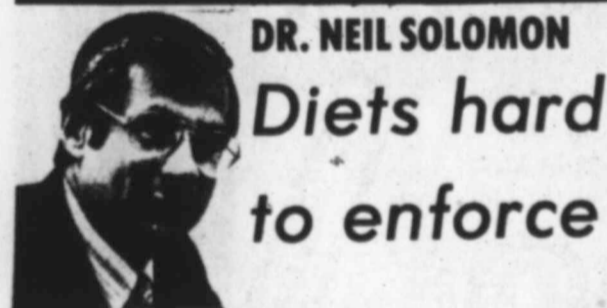

The racetrack and other outlets are just beginning to climb back into full swing.

For those who are too cautious for international adventure but still have a yen for legal gambling, New Mexico is a short drive away.

The significance is that horse race betting is legal in New Mexico, and Sunland Park belongs more to El Paso than to New Mexico.

Given the devaluation of the peso and the nature of purchases in Mexico, it's difficult to pinpoint a number when discussing the impact of U.S. dollars in Mexico.

It is perhaps significant to point out that 10 years ago, El Paso and Juarez both had populations of about 260,000, El Paso Mayor Ray Salazar said. Now Juarez is twice the size of El Paso.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Diets hard to enforce

Dear Dr. Solomon: My daughter is 13 and about 15 pounds overweight. Our doctor has given her a good clear diet to follow—one which, in theory, should not be that difficult to stay on. (She did manage to keep to it pretty well for the first two weeks.) But she is not sticking to it the way she ought to. After a couple of days, as she puts it, she "blows it." And then she tries to start all over again. It doesn't work. Is there anything I could do to help her?—Inga W.

Dear Inga: I think it is very hard to get teen-agers to follow a diet—or to do anything else, for that matter—by lecturing them or laying down the law. But there are two things that you, or any parent, can do to help a dieting adolescent.

One is to set a good example yourself (which I trust you are doing) by avoiding overeating and over-weight. The other is to get temptations out of the house—to "fat proof" the kitchen. Ice cream, cookies, cakes, snacks, junk food—it is amazing how much of this is eaten simply because it happens to be in the refrigerator or on the kitchen shelf. And you do not really miss it if it is not there.

Fruit and vegetable snacks are good substitutes—they are almost always lower in calories, you don't eat as much of them, and they are much better for you.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is breast feeding really that much better than bottle feeding? I've just had a long lecture about this from a friend of mine, but I don't see how I can spare that much time from my job.—Claire

Dear Claire: Most doctors do recommend breast feeding as the best way to provide babies the nutrients they require. Breast feeding also seems to give them better defenses against illness, and it helps establish a warm psychological bond between mother and child.

However, modern formulas also give excellent nutrition. If, for one reason or another, you find that you can't breast feed your baby, I certainly don't think you should feel guilty about it. After all, there are millions and millions of healthy and happy children who started off life on a bottle. Why don't you talk all this over with your doctor and see what he says?

Dear Dr. Solomon: How safe is the measles vaccine?—Mrs. F.S.

Dear Mrs. F.S.: More than 89 million doses (live virus) have been administered in the United States. As with other vaccines, some children develop a fever after receiving measles vaccine. A few may even develop a mild rash. These symptoms may occur seven to 15 days after vaccination. They usually last only a day or two, and the children usually continue to act as if they feel well.

Parents of children who develop high or persistent fever or show other obvious signs of illness should consult a physician, since other causes may be responsible. More serious reactions, such as encephalitis, have been noted approximately once in every million doses of vaccine administered.

Japanese biologist explains Laetrile's usefulness

By CLIFF SMITH
Copley News Service

A discovery in Japan provides the first scientifically acceptable explanation of how the drug Laetrile may be effective against cancer, a noted biologist says.

Dr. Andrew A. Benson of Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif., said Japanese colleagues have used a substance isolated from figs to treat several types of human cancer with considerable success.

The anti-tumor substance is an inexpensive, natural chemical called benzaldehyde. It is present in many fruits and nuts — and also in Laetrile, the extract of apricot pits banned as cancer medicine in the United States.

Benson said the Japanese research also indicates why Laetrile failed certain tests for its effectiveness. The apparent explanation is that Laetrile has to be broken down by bacteria in the human intestine before the cancer-active component benzaldehyde is ready for use by the body.

Controversy over Laetrile has intensified recently with the case of Chad Green, a 3-year-old leukemia victim whose parents took him to Tijuana, Mexico, for Laetrile treatments in defiance of a court order to cease such treatments in Massachusetts.

Benson, a professor of biology at Scripps, is noted for his work on plant photosynthesis. He formerly headed SIO's Physiological Research Laboratory.

Benson said he recently was informed by Dr. Kenji Sakaguchi, one of Japan's top molecular biologists, of the promising find and the application of benzaldehyde to human cancer treatment. Benson stressed that while he is not a cancer expert, Sakaguchi is.

Sakaguchi, who worked at Scripps for about two years in the early 1960s, told Benson in a letter how at least 100 cancer patients have been treated with benzaldehyde over the last three years with up to "a 30 percent increase in recovery rate."

Benson said that although he still does not understand exactly what this means, Sakaguchi and a physician collaborator, Dr. Mutsuyuki Kochi, made it clear that benzaldehyde was effective against two lung cancers called adenocarcinoma and squamous cell carcinoma, as well as malignant lymphomas, multiple myeloma and leukemia.

"Kochi reported on these trials in October at the International Cancer Congress in Buenos Aires," Benson said. "His findings were that the component in figs which causes cancer cells to stop growing is benzaldehyde."

"If you open a bottle of almond extract and smell it, you are smelling benzaldehyde. Its relationship to Laetrile is that if you take one molecule of cyanide and let them sit, they bind together and form a compound called amygdalin.

"That's the component of bitter almonds, and this is what everybody agrees Laetrile is."

Benson said other experiments by the Japanese researchers showed that cancerous "transformed cells," produced by exposing cultured rat cells to a special virus, stop growing when exposed to a dilute solution of benzaldehyde. Normal rat cells grown in laboratory dishes were unaffected by the chemical.

Teng's visit to U.S.: He said nothing that wasn't already known

When the next elections are held for the "Overstatement Hall of Fame," Jimmy Carter is in — hands down. The Teng Hsiao-ping visit, he declared, was "one of the most historic events in our nation's history," presumably equating it with the signing of the Declaration of Independence, VE Day and the Emancipation Proclamation.

The truth is, it was a staged performance, devoid of substance. Teng, the shaky No. 3 man in a shaky Marxist coalition, brought nothing with him to Washington that we did not already know.

He made plain that the Chinese Communists hate the Russians. They do. The gut struggle to see who is to lead the world into socialism has been going on for 30 years. Teng simply confirmed the fact.

He told us that the Peking regime wants to industrialize and move into the 20th century. They do. There is no other way they can compete with the Russians — or us.

He said that they want to trade with the United States.

They do, and there is no reason why our businessmen should not try it if they wish, realizing that the Chinese Communists have little to offer in the way of hard money, raw materials or mineral resources to exchange for the fruits of our factories.

And he made clear that they intend, one way or another, to acquire control of the island and the people of Taiwan. They do. Despite his convoluted rhetoric in responding to congressional questions — "We no longer say 'liberation of Taiwan.' Now we say 'return of Taiwan to the Motherland'" — their determination is plain. They aim to have Taiwan. Just how they plan to do it is less clear.

Certainly, as Sens. Church and Helms concluded, Teng evaded a direct disclaimer of any intent to use military force, saying that such a declaration "would damage our bargaining position."

And on what exactly would happen to Taiwan under Peking's control Teng was even less specific. "So long as Taiwan is returned to the Motherland, we will respect the realities," he said.

The realities are sobering to contemplate. Mainland China, under the Communists, is a police state. People go where they are told, do what they are told; freedom of choice and speech is unknown.

In Taiwan, on the other hand, freedom is the name of the game; free enterprise, free speech, freedom to come and go. The Republic of China is a developed industrialized democratic country and the likelihood of Teng and his Peking colleagues willingly tolerating such a continuing affront to their totalitarian system is less than nil.

No, the realities are, if the Communists acquired control of the island, that its 17 million free and happy people would quickly be absorbed into the 900 million hapless souls on the mainland, whose lives, literally, are not their own.

All of this poses an immense problem for the United States because if these 17 million people on Taiwan are delivered into slavery it will be because we permitted it to happen, in violation of everything we profess regarding human rights and in violation of our own word. On 20 occasions since the Nixon visit to Peking the United States has reassured the Republic of China on Taiwan that there would be no rupture of diplomatic relations, that our Mutual Defense Treaty commitments would be fulfilled.

But if Congress permits Carter to have his way the whole world will have to look on us as irresolute and undependable.

Lament for a cross-eyed virgin

MERIDA, Mexico (AP)—Yucatan sand from the sandals of a columnist south of the border:

In Mexico there is 'no one last drink' before calling it a night. Ordering 'la ultima', the final one, is considered a faux pas worse than stepping on an hombre's sombrero during the Mexican hat dance. Instead, one asks the waiter for 'del estribo', one for the stirrup before riding off into the sunrise.

Mexico is the last stand of the 25 cent (5 peso) shoeshine and the five cent (one peso) subway ride, and both are glittering experiences.

Hernando Cortes vanquished the Aztec empire and other tribes along the way with Spanish infantry, 13 musketeers, 16 horses for the officers, 32 artillerymen and 200 Indian bearers. He was a firm believer in light military budgets.

BUT MEXICO has come to terms with its violent history. A plaque in Plaza de las Tres Culturas — Square of the Three Cultures — at the site of the last Aztec battle reads:

"On the 13th of August, 1521, heroically defended by Cuauhtemoc, Tlatelolco fell under control of Hernando Cortes. It was neither a triumph nor a defeat. It was the painful birth of the mixed race people which is the Mexico of today. The square in Mexico City contains pre-Columbian ruins, old Spanish colonial buildings and the glass and marble skyscraper of the Foreign Ministry.

Coyotes still infest the heart of Mexico City in the vicinity of the Monte de Piedra, the national pawn shop. This is the name given to the sidewalk touts offering a quick easy-term loan to strapped citizens coming to pawn their watch, typewriter or jewelry for ready cash at this unique government institution. The national pawn shop has been in business since the early 18th century. It lends money to nearly 700 Jesuits were seized in their monasteries and put aboard ships at Veracruz. Like today's Vietnamese refugees, no European country would take them. They wandered around the Mediterranean for more than a year before finding refuge on the isle of Corsica.

smacking sounds with the lips that elsewhere might earn you a belt in the chops. Despite what the language books say, most waiters no longer like being called mesero which means table attendant.

MARIACHI, the string musicians you hire to serenade your seniorita, got their name from the French word for marriage. During the three-year French rule imposed by Napoleon III, French officers hired street musicians to assist them in wooing the local lovelies.

On its food trays, most Mexican airlines serve an individually wrapped chile pepper that erupts in the lower duodenal track like a smart bomb. Fortunately los bomberos, the fire fighters, arrive in the form of free beer served on every flight.

The chamber of commerce and the government tourist ministry think the gringo affliction known as "Montezuma's revenge," has been vastly exaggerated. They say the same or worse happens to them in Colorado or Boston. Still, jogging seems to be a less than optional activity down here and an official tourist brochure did carry the warning: Play safe: purify all drinking water with hydrochlorone tablets.

IN WALES they pride themselves on town names that take up half the railway platform to spell out. The Mexicans pride themselves on unpronounceable jaw busters like Tlaco Chahuaya and Yeixochilt. Great places to visit, they say if you can bring yourself to ask how to get there.

The Mayans and later other tribes appeased the gods by tossing cross-eyed virgins, spaced out on hallucinogenic mushrooms, into a sacred well. Cross-eyed was considered beautiful. Mothers hung a jewel in the center of a young girl's forehead to configure their eyes according to the reigning fashion.

Mexicans joke that the conquistadors came from Spain to find yellow gold and now the Yanqui come south of the border for green gold to smoke. The sun god of the Aztecs is appeased these days by pie-eyed tourist zonked on Acapulco gold.

Dying couple renews vows in Catholic rites

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — With cake and champagne, John and Carolyn Toppin celebrated the marriage blessings of the Roman Catholic Church, 34 years after their wedding.

The ceremony was especially poignant to the Toppins: Both are dying of cancer.

"Thank you all for making it so beautiful," Mrs. Toppin, 54, told about two dozen friends, reporters and relatives including their two children — Carol, 24, and John, 23 — who gathered for the ceremony.

"This is something I've wanted to do for 34 years," whispered her 55-year-old husband, a former longshoreman. He was pale and weak. Doctors say he has terminal prostate cancer and has only a few days to live.

The ceremony was conducted Friday by Father Paul Ross of St. Benedict's Church in nearby Oakland. The scene was the "family room" in the Kaiser Hospital hospice unit — a place where the remaining days of terminally ill patients are made as comfortable and cheerful as possible.

The Toppins — married in 1945 in a civil ceremony — held hands throughout the service, seated at a table bearing an open Bible and lighted candles.

She wore a red knit suit and white blouse and clutched a small bouquet of mixed flowers. He wore blue pajamas, a red robe and a white carnation.

During the ceremony, each read a brief statement which they had written, expressing their love for each other.

Mrs. Toppin, who learned a year ago that she had terminal lung cancer, is still strong enough to live at home, in San Leandro.

"At the time they said I had six months, maybe a year, to live. I had chemotherapy, but it didn't work; I just became bald-headed," said Mrs. Toppin.

Of the prospect of dying, she said, "I'm very frightened of it — extremely so."

But she added, "When I go to bed at night, I thank God for that day. Every day becomes more beautiful than before."

The Toppins said they at first planned their renewal of marriage vows to be private. But they invited news reporters and photographers to call public attention to the hospice program, which they called "fantastic" in helping terminally ill patients prepare for death.

Loyalty, enthusiasm long required by presidents

By WALTER R. MEARS (An AP Analysis)

WASHINGTON (AP) — With President Carter as with his predecessors, the bottom line is loyalty to the administration once the president has set its course.

Presidents never have taken kindly to public disclosure of the private debates that shape policy, or to public dissent within the official family.

"Once I make that decision, I expect my policy to be carried out, with loyalty and with enthusiasm," Carter said Monday.

Enthusiasm may be a bit much to expect from an aide who has seen his counsel rejected, but a president certainly is entitled to expect loyalty from his advisers even if they don't agree with something he has decided to do.

In that situation, loyalty can simply mean silence.

There is, after all, an option available to a presidential assistant who can't accept a White House decision: quit.

All of this came up after Carter lectured his top aides in three White House meetings, telling them to be careful what they say to reporters.

Carter was quoted as saying that "those of us in responsible positions ought to be very careful about making public comments which could contribute to a misapprehension about what our policy was."

The subject is a difficult one because Richard M. Nixon gave confidentiality a bad name by invoking national security and the privacy of White House conversations in the attempted Watergate cover-up.

But the excesses of the Nixon administration don't change the fact that a president couldn't function if everything he and his staff said to each other was available for publication.

Nixon always said that without confidentiality, he would not have been able to get the full range of opinions a president should get from his advisers. The White House tape transcripts indicate that he didn't get dissenting views anyhow, at least not on the Watergate scandals that eventually forced him from office.

Carter came to office promising an open administration, and suggesting at one point that even the meetings of his Cabinet might be open to coverage by newsmen. He dropped the latter idea, but not the commitment to openness.

The question becomes how open. An administration in which every adviser was free to recount every conversation would be a free-for-all in which debate would substitute for policy.

Carter said he never told his aides to stop talking to reporters. "I do, however, have to insist upon a degree of teamwork once a decision is made that relates to a sensitive issue, like the Middle East, or like SALT negotiations or like the relationships with Iran in recent months," he said at his news conference.

"That's what I have admonished them to do, to have a free expression of opinion and to let me have their individual opinions up to the time that I make a decision. Once I make a decision, to comply with it."

The net result of the Carter lectures is sure to be a more reticent administration. His aides and advisers won't get into trouble by keeping their mouths shut.

Lithuanian village 'a helluva town'

By NIKKI FINKE

KAUNAS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Kaunas is a helluva town. What else can be said about a centuries-old Lithuanian city which houses 4,000 "devils," a collection intended to preserve one of the most interesting folklores in this Baltic state. It all started on June 13, 1906, when a Catholic priest came to the home of Lithuanian painter and collector Antanas Zmuidzinavicius in hopes of persuading the non-believer to begin attending church. The artist refused, and the frustrated priest gave him a present — a crudely carved wooden sculpture of the smiling face of Satan. "Then at least you must make friends with the devil," the priest

...many of even the most religious Lithuanian families keep a devil or two prominently around the house for old time's sake.

According to Lithuanian folklore, the devil was not always an evil person. Quite often he would help the poor, and in some fairy tales he is even portrayed as a comic, absurd and pitiable creature.

And many Lithuanians still believe in the old superstition that anyone who collects devils will become the richest, most powerful person — with a little help from Satan.

reportedly said, and Zmuidzinavicius — who already had 22 collections of various stripes — eagerly started a 23rd by gathering likenesses of the devil from around the world.

By the time of his death at 90 in 1966, the Kaunas artist had found some 260 little Satans in all shapes and sizes.

After the painter's death, the Lithuanian government took control of the collection and put it on display in a tiny museum, tucked away on one of the city's narrow, cobble-stoned streets. Outside stands a stone sculpture of the devil, smirking at the 2,000 daily visitors.

The devil has both pagan and religious significance in this country, which is a Catholic stronghold and the last country in Europe to be Christianized, as late as the 16th Century.

Kaunas, Lithuania's second-biggest city, located some 100 kilometers from the capital of Vilnius, has a population of 370,000.

It is here that the county's last remaining Catholic seminary is located. Surrounded by a high wall to keep the curious away, the seminary has 73 students and last year graduated seven priests who filled places in the handful of churches still allowed to remain open under the Soviet policy of atheism.

But many of even the most religious Lithuanian families keep a devil or two prominently around the house for old time's sake.

According to Lithuanian folklore, the devil was not always an evil person. Quite often he would help the poor, and in some fairy tales he is even portrayed as a comic, absurd and pitiable creature.

And many Lithuanians still believe in the old superstition that anyone who collects devils will become the richest, most powerful person — with a little help from Satan.

In medieval times, a Lithuanian courtship rite called for each prospective suitor to wear a handsome devil mask, one of which is proudly displayed in the A. Zmuidzinavicius Memorial Museum here.

And nowadays, Lithuanian mothers still warn their daughters to beware of a handsome man as he may be the devil in disguise.

One small wooden sculpture in the museum shows the devil resting idly at his job. The museum guide, pointing at the figure with a satanic-headed pen, explained that laziness is a devilish fault since Satan works only 15 minutes and rests for more than an hour.

And when you get drunk and stumble a bit, it's said here that the devil is "sitting on your neck." One carved piece showed a hefty Satan squatting on top of a stupefied victim.

Another shows a hairy devil clutching a vodka bottle while a third has a swooning woman in his arms, indicating that Lithuanian Catholics still associate Satan with drunkenness and illicit sex.

Besides gathering devils from around the Soviet Union to expand Zmuidzinavicius' original collection, the museum gets dozen of devils each day in the mail, sent by visitors from around the world who are intrigued with the unusual Kaunas exhibition.

Devil helmets from Africa, devil clocks from Germany and even a souvenir paperweight from Atlantic City, N.J., are displayed.

An Englishman sent the Lithuanians a devilish looking little girl with a caption in English that reads: "Good little girls may go to heaven. But bad little girls go everywhere."

There also is a devil woman sent from Japan, and the guide gleefully announces what most male visitors say upon seeing this Medusa-like creature:

"She looks like my mother-in-law!"

A smiling Satan is one of the 4,000 devils displayed at an unusual museum in Kaunas, Lithuania, U.S.S.R. The collection was begun by an artist who received his first devil from an unconvincing priest. (AP Laserphoto)

Enrollment still high

ODESSA — Enrollment at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin continues to climb as spring enrollment stands 2.5 percent above the same figure a year ago. Enrollment reached 1,533 compared to last spring's figure of 1,497. UTPB Director of Admissions Robert Warmann said the record high for a spring semester at UTPB includes 71 students registered in off-campus courses in Midland, Big Spring and Pecos.

Warmann noted the largest growth is in graduate student enrollment which was up by 4.4 percent over the same time a year ago.

Currently, 665 graduates are enrolled, compared to last spring's figure of 637. Spring undergraduates total 868, compared to the spring 1978 figure of 860.

Registration is still open at the upper-level university for persons wanting to take self-paced courses.

UTPB President V.R. Cardozier said students involved in self-paced courses attend few or no classes but work instead from a highly structured and detailed course outline studying independently and meeting frequently with the professor for counseling, instruction and testing.

Spring semester classes began Jan. 15 with late registration closing Jan. 30. Classes continue through May 4 with final exams slated May 7-11. Commencement is scheduled May 12.

Old gift may get new home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hymie Singer acquired the Great White Steamer — the S.S. Catalina — at a 1977 auction for $70,000 as a Valentine's Day present for his wife. Two Valentine's Days later, Gene Webber says he has signed a lease with Singer that gives him an option to buy the craft for $300,000 at any time in the next 20 years.

Webber, from Huntington Harbour, wants to make a floating restaurant-museum of the 301-foot steamer, which carried about 25 million persons across the Catalina Channel from 1924 to the 1970s, when a federal judge ordered her sold to pay back debts.

That was when Singer rescued her. But since July 19, the ship has been sitting 3.1 miles offshore, because the Port of Los Angeles is demanding $30,000 for what it says are delinquent dockage fees, and the state attorney general has filed suit charging the ship is unsafe and obstructs shipping while at its Los Angeles berth.

Webber says he will ask the Avalon City Council permission to rent the steamer's old pier in Avalon harbor on Santa Catalina Island,

Wilson sets site; discovery finals

John M. Wilson of Midland is expected to spud his No. 1 Nail in the Fran-Glass (Pennsylvanian oil) field of Martin County next week.

The project, one location north of the RPL 1 Nail, is 2,173 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of section 3, block 38, T-1-S, T&P survey and 12 miles south of Stanton.

Contract depth is 10,700 feet. The field has three producers. The RPL No. 1 Nail was potentiated as a Strawn discovery for a daily flowing potential of 312 barrels of oil.

It was reported in error Tuesday that the Fran-Glass field is depleted.

Operator has suggested the discovery be designated the opener of the Caprito (Wolfcamp) field. On 24-hour potential test it flowed 36 barrels of 46-gravity oil and 33 barrels of water, through a 14/64-inch choke and perforations from 11,714 to 12,477 feet. Gas-oil ratio is 2,111-1.

A re-entry of a former Atoka producer in the Lion multipay field, the project is bottomed at 18,800 feet and plugged back to 12,223 feet.

The pay zone was fractured with 79,800 gallons. Location is 990 feet from north and west lines of section 40, block 17, University Lands survey. It originally was completed from the Atoka through perforations from 13,494 to 13,582 feet.

SHELL WELL Shell Oil Co. No. 161 Sealy-Smith Foundation is a new flowing well in the Monahans, East (lower Pennsylvanian) field of Winkler County, five miles north of Monahans.

On 24-hour potential test it made 133 barrels of 42.8-gravity oil, no water, through an 18/64-inch choke and perforations from 9,074 to 9,090 feet. Gas-oil ratio is 376-1.

Total depth is 9,715 feet, 4.5-inch casing is set a 9,700 feet and hole is plugged back to 9,657 feet. Location is 660 feet from north and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 34, block A, G&MMB&A survey.

It is one location south and slightly west of other lower Pennsylvanian production.

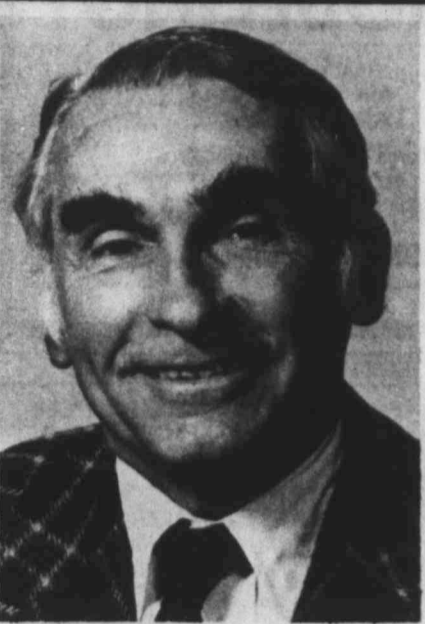

TERRY TEST Texland-Recor & Schumacher No. 4 Elaine Duncan is to be drilled in the south side of the War Horse (upper Clear Fork) field of Terry County, 13 miles west of Meadow.

Slotted for a 6,900-foot bottom, it is 2,227 feet from north and 1,690 feet from east lines of section 25, block D-11, SK&K survey.

GAINES PROJECT Indian Wells Oil Co. of Ozona No. 4 Jones Ranch has been staked as an east offset to production in the Edmonson (San Andres) field of Gaines County, 23 miles northwest of Seminole.

Location is 2,130 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 30, block AX, psi survey.

The project is contracted to 5,200 feet.

Robert S. Cooke

Midlander on board

Robert S. Cooke of Midland has been elected to a three-year term on the board of directors of the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical and Petroleum Engineers.

He will take office at the institute's annual meeting Feb. 18-22 in New Orleans.

He recently completed three years of service on the board of directors of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, one of AIME's four constituent societies.

Cooke is engineering manager for Union Oil Co. of California's Central Region and has been a Midland resident since 1961.

Wildcats, oil discovery reported in PB areas

A 10,200-foot wildcat has been announced for Hockley County, seven miles northeast of Levelland. It is Clark Oil Producing Co. of Midland No. 1 Christian.

It will be spudded 467 feet from south and 1,100 feet from east lines of labor 20, league 729, Abner Taylor survey. The ground level elevation is 3,470 feet.

The location is one mile southwest of the one-well Van Mac (lower Clear Fork) field. There is no nearby deep production.

HOWARD STRIKE Florida Gas Exploration Co., operating from Midland, has completed its No. 1-32 Stella Petty as a Strawn oil discovery in Howard County, four miles southwest of Big Spring.

The new field opener completed for a 24-hour flowing potential of 270 barrels of 41-gravity oil, no water, through a 17/64-inch choke. Gas-oil ratio is 1,041-1.

The pay section, opposite perforations from 9,336 to 9,353 feet and 9,360 to 9,370 feet, was treated with 500 gallons of acid.

Hole was drilled to 10,219 feet, 5.5-inch casing was set at total depth, and the plugged back depth is 9,843 feet. The Strawn was topped at 9,330 feet on kelly bushing elevation of 2,527 feet. Other tops include the Yates 1,743 feet; Mississippian lime, 9,664 feet; Woodford, 9,870 feet; Siluro-Devonian, 9,943 feet; Fusselman, 10,020 feet; Sylvan, 10,131 feet, and the Ellenburger at 10,152 feet.

The wellsite is 2,080 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 32, block 33, T-1-S, T&P survey. It is 7/8 miles southeast of the shallow Moore pool.

TERRELL EXPLORER The Superior Oil Co. No. 2 Sid Harkins has been spotted as a 2,000-foot wildcat in Terrell County, 20 miles north of Sanderson.

The operation is 1,300 feet from north and east lines of block 602, Robert Belcher survey No. 13. The site is 1/4 mile northeast of the discovery well and lone producer in the Six Shooter (Wolfcamp) field and separated from that well by a 22,418-foot dry hole.

The discovery well, Superior No. 1 Sid Harkins, finished through perforations from 1,800 to 1,904 feet for a daily potential of 36 barrels of 28.4-gravity oil and two barrels of water, with a gas-oil ratio of 1,841-1.

EDDY WILDCAT Hondo Oil & Gas Co. of Hobbs, N.M., No. 1 Exxon-State is to be drilled as a 10,800-foot Morrow wildcat in Eddy County, 12 miles southwest of Loco Hills.

Some flights canceled

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's airlines say the loss of Iranian oil because of the political upheaval there has created a shortage of jet fuel, which has forced cancellation of some flights from New York.

National Airlines said Tuesday's scheduled daily flight from New York to Amsterdam did not take off because of the fuel problem and the same flight scheduled for Friday and Saturday has been cancelled.

President seeks halt to drilling on reserve

By W. DALE NELSON WASHINGTON (AP) — If the Carter administration gets its way, a forlorn outpost named Camp Lonely may be all that's left in several months to mark decades of searching for oil under 23 million acres of Alaska's North Slope.

In an effort to save money, the administration says it wants to stop drilling exploratory wells in the National Petroleum Reserve on Alaska's North Slope next January unless the test wells already scheduled pan out.

The decision has brought an outcry from supporters of the oil drilling program and is expected to encounter stiff resistance in Congress.

"With the crisis we are facing, it would not be prudent to abandon this area," says Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, also defended the exploratory program, particularly after Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus told a House committee, "My personal recommendation is that we put it on the shelf and wait to see if it is needed."

Appearing later before the Energy Committee, Andrus said the administration had "agonized" over the decision, but added, "At the time we are trying to reduce the deficit, we have to look at the big-ticket items."

An Energy Committee spokesman said approximately $623 million has been spent on the program since 1974. He said the saving would be from $150 million to $170 million by halting the program for the next fiscal year.

"To date there have been no discoveries of oil or gas," Andrus told the Senate committee. There are currently five drilling rigs in the area and 11 wells have been completed.

The most recent estimate of undiscovered oil in the area, made by the Federal Energy Administration, is from four billion to five billion barrels. The same study estimated there was 14.3 trillion cubic feet of recoverable natural gas.

In reply to a set of questions submitted by Jackson, Andrus said if the program is closed down, all government-owned supplies will be removed except those at Camp Lonely on the Arctic Ocean. That camp would remain as a caretaker operation.

The reserve was set aside by President Harding in 1924 with the idea of guaranteeing a fuel supply for Navy ships. The Navy sent a team of Seabees, or Navy civil engineers, to begin exploration during World War II. This continued until 1953, when President Eisenhower halted the drilling.

During the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and 1974, Congress ordered a resumption of exploration, authorizing the Navy to drill an additional 26 wells. In 1976, the program was transferred to the Interior Department and the number of wells reduced to 19.

Loan wins approval

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A $2.5 million emergency loan to finance state efforts to build a deepwater port for supertankers has won House subcommittee approval.

But panel members voted to finance the Texas Deepwater Port Authority in installments, based on its progress, rather than in a lump sum. The House Appropriations Committee is expected to vote on the subcommittee bill this week.

The measure divides the $2.5 million sought by the authority into three segments, each related to a necessary step toward starting construction of the superport 26 miles south of Freeport.

Even with that compromise, Republican Reps. Fred Agnich of Dallas and Milton Fox of Houston, both oilmen, voted against the bill.

The bill would allot the authority $565,000 through Aug. 31, 1979, long enough to complete its application for a federal license to build the port.

If the U.S. Department of Transportation approves the license, the authority would get another $200,000 on Nov. 1, 1979, for "necessary expenses."

The rest of the money, $1.6 million, would be available once Gov. Bill Clements approves the bonds to finance actual construction of the port, some $1.2 billion worth.

The authority would have to repay the full $2.5 million that was appropriated as soon as it issues its first block of bonds.

"The (compromise) amendment improves it, but I still am not satisfied the state of Texas should be in the risk capital business. I would rather leave it to private dollars," Fox said.

Association seeks closings

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association has asked its members to cut back weekday hours and close their stations on Sundays starting Feb. 25, executive director Robert Jacobs said today.

The association voted unanimously to ask for the voluntary closings "until further notice" because of already short supplies of gasoline to many dealers, Jacobs said.

He said the dealers also have been asked to reduce the number of hours they are open daily as another means of conserving fuel supplies.

"It costs a lot of money to operate a station unprofitably on Sunday," Jacobs said. "I think the motoring public can get in the habit of buying gasoline on six days of the week."

The association, which has members statewide, mailed its request to all service station members after a special Monday night meeting.

Jacobs said he will meet with the association's Indiana board in the next week or so in an effort to extend the action to its 1,100 stations there.

He said the association urged Sunday closings in 1974 and that it was 60 percent effective the first week and 95 percent effective within a month.

Jacobs said there would be certain designated emergency stations.

Iran shutdown causes slowdown at salt domes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The oil pinch in Iran has cut back shipments of crude oil being stored in salt domes along the Gulf Coast, and a spokesman says there are no plans to advance the date for use capability.

The goal of the $20 billion project is to store a billion barrels of crude in the huge caverns scooped out in underground salt domes.

Days go by with no crude to pump into pipelines feeding the huge underground storage caverns of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve — some bigger than a block-sized 10-story building.

The program was among the first to feel the squeeze resulting from the revolution in Iran, which virtually shut down that nation's rich oil fields.

William Parker, deputy project manager, said the expected "shortfall" for February, March and April will be 10 million barrels. A barrel, a common form of oil measurement, is 42 gallons.

Most of the crude pumped into the caverns — 72.2 million barrels thus far — comes from the Persian Gulf, brought by tanker to pumping terminals at Nederland, Texas, near Port Arthur, or to the Mississippi River oil port of St. James.

Parker said the storage system can take in 10 million barrels a month normally, with a surge rate of 15 million barrels.

Most of the crude is obtained under long-term contracts let months in advance. However, the contracts do not keep the pipelines full. Parker said the project depended on picking up extra tanker loads called "distress cargoes" to fill the gap. For a while it worked fine.

"But since December that spot market has virtually disappeared," he said. "There are days when we don't have any oil to pump into the ground."

"We have contracts for 20 million barrels during February, March and April. So you can see, based on our intake capability, we already have some shortfall."

As part of the Carter administration assessment of the fuel situation, Parker said the project had advised Washington that, if necessary, it can undertake emergency measures which within 45 days would enable it to begin extracting a million barrels a day from its hoard.

Crude oil pumped out of the caverns would feed into pipelines to refineries.

Withdrawal would require a presidential decision and Parker said no such action is expected since the situation is a long way from being a fuel crisis.

"We are proceeding with our normal schedule, which calls for us to have withdrawal capability by next September or October," he said.

Increases approved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Railroad Commission gave its approval Monday to natural gas service rate increases in rural sections of West Texas and the Rio Grande Valley.

The new rates affect areas near 63 West Texas and 26 valley cities.

The increase would not be effective for any location unless the nearest incorporated city approves the same increase, hearings examiners said.

The new rates affect about 11,200 customers of Pioneer Natural Gas Corp. in West Texas and 2,301 customers of Rio Grande Valley Gas Co. in the valley.

The increases would produce an additional $1.89 million in revenue for Pioneer annually and $172,000 for the Rio Grande company.

Get ready for silver dollar sale

By ROBERT PARRY

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is expected to promptly approve a House-passed bill that would put 1 million Carson City silver dollars on sale, probably this year.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., was approved by the House on a voice vote Tuesday.

A staff aide to the Senate Banking Committee said the bill appeared to have no opposition in the Senate and predicted it would win quick final passage.

The coins, minted in the 1880s at Carson City, Nev., were believed melted down during World War I for their silver content. However, a 1964 audit discovered 3 million of the coins in government vaults.

Two million coins were sold to collectors between 1972 and 1974, but the sales were halted due to the high costs of complex bidding arrangements used by the government and restrictions placed on the number of coins each buyer could obtain.

The new bill would ease the restrictions of the earlier sale.

In hearings last year, the General Services Administration said it will sell the remaining 1 million coins at fixed prices ranging from $15 to $60 with no limit on the number of coins an individual can buy.

The government's housekeeping agency also said that if some of the silver dollars remain after the sale, they will be offered to dealers at a slight discount.

During brief floor debate in the House, Annunzio noted that the proposed sale would raise about $20 million for the U.S. Treasury. He called the measure a "taxpayers' delight."

"It is significant that the first bill to come before the House of Representatives this year is a bill that will not cost the taxpayers any money," Annunzio said. "I hope this is an indication of the type of tax-cutting measures that will come before the Congress this year."

An identical bill cleared the House last year and was approved by the Senate after an amendment on textile imports was attached.

Man charged in Mineral Wells

MINERAL WELLS, Texas (AP) — A 40-year-old Parker County man has been charged with attempted capital murder in connection with the shootings Monday night of the sheriff and a deputy of Palo Pinto County.

The deputy, Joe Wages, suffered a broken jaw when he was hit in the mouth with a shot from a small-caliber weapon. Sheriff Ray Patterson was shot in the arm in an exchange of gunfire as officers tried to apprehend a man in a wooded area in northwest Parker County.

Clarence Garner, who lives in the Poolville community, about 25 miles northeast of Mineral Wells, was arraigned Tuesday before Justice of the Peace Glen Densmore of Weatherford.

Wages and a Mineral Wells city policeman pursued Garner in a high-speed chase that began in Mineral Wells and ended near the man's home, authorities said. They said Garner drove away at high speeds from a Mineral Wells residence when officers answered a domestic disturbance call.

Garner was arrested following an intensive manhunt touched off by the Monday shootings.

Thick fog hampered the manhunt early Tuesday as officers tried to track Garner using dogs.

The DPS said Wages was shot as he approached a house. Patterson was wounded later as he searched a wooded area for Wages' assailant, officers said.

Chandelle is a Nice Place to Call Home...*

WHY BUY A CONDOMINIUM?

Condominiums afford quality living in prime locations. They allow the owner all the financial and tax advantages of owning a home without the headaches.

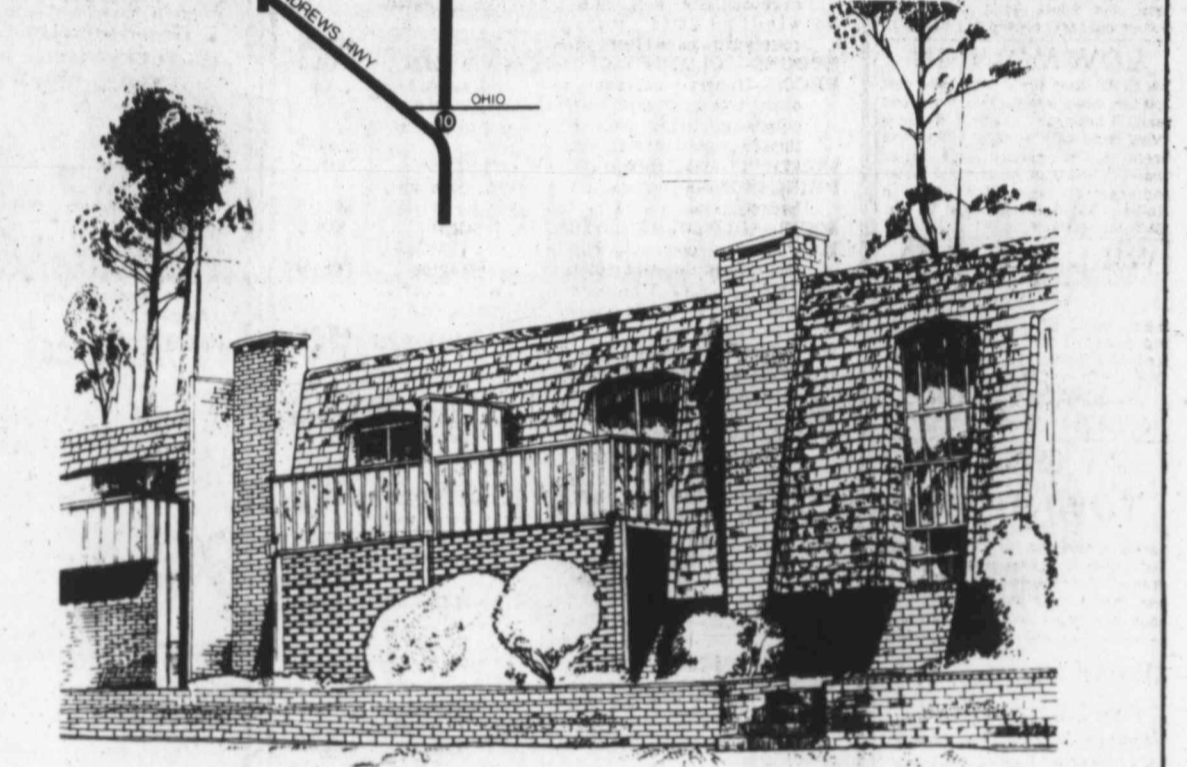

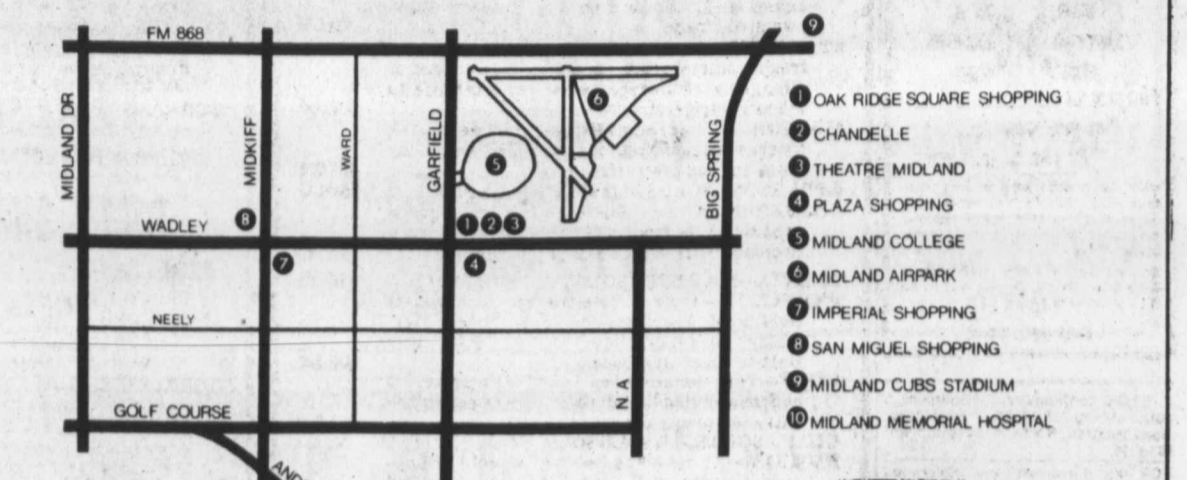

Condominiums are designed for a more flexible lifestyle. Most important, you have greater control over your housing costs when compared to renting.

WHY BUY A "CHANDELLE" CONDOMINIUM?*

"CHANDELLE's" location at 2100 West Wadley is within minutes of downtown, theatres, recreational areas, shopping, restaurants, schools, churches, the college, and Airpark. At "CHANDELLE" you get an equity investment, the same tax breaks as a home owner, and greater control of your housing costs. "CHANDELLE" is the only real alternative people have to get away from the maintenance problems - of home owning, and doing it with style.

Come out to 2100 West Wadley or call 684-7884 to find out why "CHANDELLE" is a nice place to call home. Models are open from 12:00 noon until 6:00 p.m. seven days a week.

* The 20 people who have decided to call "CHANDELLE" home will tell you why.
