Israel gives landslide support to treaty

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel's Parliament gave its landslide endorsement to the peace treaty with Egypt early today, clearing the way for Prime Minister Mehachem Begin and President Anwar Sadat to sign the historic pact on Monday in Washington.

Capping an often-raucous 28-hour debate, the 120-member Knesset voted 95-18 in favor of the treaty that will end the 30-year state of war with Egypt, Israel's most populous Arab foe; return the Sinai Peninsula, captured from Egypt in 1967, and pave the way for limited Palestianian autonomy on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip.

Most of those voting against the treaty were nationalists, many from Begin's own Likud Party, who oppose return of the Sinai and the creation of a Palestinian council to govern the West Bank and Gaza. The tiny pro-Soviet Communist Party also opposed the pact, claiming it did not go far enough toward Palestinian independence.

Two deputies abstained, three others voted "present," and two were

Begin, grinning, told reporters the vote was "the largest majority the Knesset has ever given on a political issue."

President Carter sent congratulations saying, "Israel's Knesset spoke with a voice heard around the world — a voice for peace."

A few hours after the vote, Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan left for Washington to wrap up negotiations on a memorandum of understanding between Israel and the United States.

"The question is ... would the U.S. assume the responsibility and take measures in case one of the parties would not honor the agreement," Dayan told reporters as he left.

He said Defense Minister Ezer Weizman would follow him on Friday to negotiate the remaining dispute between Israel and Egypt - a timetable for giving up the offshore oil wells the Israelis developed in the Gulf of Suez off the Sinai coast.

Israeli officials have repeatedly said the oil issue is unlikely to hold up the treaty signing, but the Jerusalem Post reported the issue is proving

Treaty inking Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The peace treaty between Egypt and Israel will be signed at 2 p.m. EST Monday on the North Lawn of the White House, it was announced officially today.

The ceremony will occur in the middle of a day of specially planned festivities, including a state dinner for 1,300 in a circus tent Monday

Before the ceremony, President Carter will meet separately with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin Both leaders and their wives are scheduled to arrive in Washington Sunday afternoon. They will be greeted at Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland by Vice President Walter Mondale and Secretary of difficult. It said Israel wants to keep pumping oil from thewells until it begins its pullout from Sinai nine months after the treaty is signed. Egypt wants the pumps stopped immediately and has asked Israel to hand over the field in six months, the Post said.

Begin stepped to the Knesset's rosewood rostrum shortly before 4 a.m. -9 p.m. EST — to deliver a speech concluding the emotional debate. "There is joy that we have reached this day," he said. "There is worry for the future. There is trembling in our hearts — it is perfectly natural.

With all this, there is recognition that we have reached a certain turning point ... all of us together want to achieve that goal, there is none more simple or more humanitarian: Shalom — Peace.'

Begin proposed that he and Sadat shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem on Monday, April 2 to sign Hebrew and Arabic treaty texts. Asked why he chose that day, Begin quipped, "Because Sunday is April Fool's Day." He said he would take up his proposal with Sadat in Washington. In Cairo, Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak discounted the possibility of Begin visiting Cairo to sign the treaty. "Let us leave his visit to circumstances," he said. "... Let us first sign the treaty (in Washington) and start the talks for Palestinian self-rule.' Egypt and Israel have agreed to start those negotiations one month after the treaty is signed. Sadat suggested last week that the English, Arabic and Hebrew texts all be signed in Washington as a tribute to President Carter's work in mediat-

Dayan due to work on U.S. treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) - Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan was flying to Washington today to work out final details of the military annex to the Egypt-Israel peace treaty and a "memorandum of assurances" between the Jewish state and the United

The last unresolved detail on the military annex is the date of the Israeli military withdrawal from the Sinai oil fields. Israel wants it to be nine months from the signing of the treaty, while Egypt is seeking to make it two or three months sooner.

The annex must be completed before the treaty is signed at the White House Monday afternoon by President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian Presno deadline for the memorandum of assurances, U.S. officials said.

The memorandum would set out in writing American assurances of political and economic support for Israel in the event that the peace process

The U.S. officials, who declined to be identified, said they expect Dayan to ask Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance for assurances tantamount to a military security treaty but hope Dayan can be persuaded to settle for less binding assurances of political

The New York Times reported today that the memorandum will include these two principles:

If Egypt violates any part of the treaty, the United States would consult with Israel on what to do next. And if the United Nations Security Council takes action against the treaty, the United States would use its veto power or otherwise take necessary steps.

The memorandum of assurances is similar to a secret series of agreements the United States and Israel signed in 1975 after the Sinai disengagement agreement. But this time, the State Department has said the document will be made public.

Weather conditions in the Midland area went from "post to post" Wednesday — the second day of spring — with clear skies and warm temperatures in the afternoon giving way to a tempestuous thunderstorm that dumped almost an inch of rain in some parts of the Tall City Wednesday night. Dense gray clouds accompanied Wednesday's sunset in Midland and unleashed lightning, pea-size hail and in places — a drenching rain. Officially, .57 inch of rain, mixed with quarter-inch hail, fell at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport and came within .02 inch of matching the .59 normal rainfall for March.

Southerly winds gusted to a peak of 69 mph at 7:23 p.m. Wednesday. No significant damage was reported. Wind-driven rain and soft hail cut

Coast Air Quality Management District's chairman says the board could rule on Standard Oil Co. of Ohio's request for environmental permits for its oil pipeline project by April

The Cleveland-based oil firm resubmitted an application to the air quality agency on Wednesday, after earlier withdrawing the application be cause of delays in getting approval. The air resources board also must evaluate the plan.

Al McCandless, chairman of the air quality management district, said the board will resume hearings on the proposal March 30.

'We will continue on Saturday, and if necessary into Sunday, in the hopes that by working those three days the board can complete the hearing process," McCandless said.

Sohio Chairman Alton Whitehouse announced the new applications in Cleveland, following a meeting in Washington on Tuesday with Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Whitehouse said, however, that he is still concerned that the permit process and lawsuits could block the project, which was first proposed about five years ago.

In ditching the plan last week, Whitehouse said it had grown too expensive because of the delay in issuing environmental permits. He said then that Sohio would continue its shipping surplus oil from the West Coast through the Panama Canal.

Hospital won't change employee pension plan

Replacing social security benefits with a private pension plan providing all the services the government plan offers would cost "more than you can afford," Midland County Hospital District directors were told Wednes-

After meeting with consultants from Boone-Chapman, the agency that handles the hospital district's insurance, directors decided to stay with the social security system rather than change to a private pension

The district had the option to remove its employees from the social security system when the hospital district was formed. Political subdivisions do not have to participate in the federal program.

Social security costs a total of 12 percent of payroll, Joe Duckworth, the Boone-Chapman consultant said, including employee donations and the matching funds from the employer. To duplicate the services rendered by the system would cost 150 percent of payroll, he said.

Directors also agreed to write off some $84,891 in bad debts and indigent care for March for the hospital district as recommended by hospital trustees.

Trustees met Wednesday just before the directors meeting. For the first five months of the year, the losses written off by the hospital have exceeded the amount expected in the year's buget by some $95,000, according to John Grimland, chairman of the trustees' finance

On the other hand, losses from Medicare and Medicaid programs have been some $143,000 more than aniticipated in the budget.

'Since the net loss is only $95,000, the hospital must be doing something right operationally," Grimland said.

Trustees also requested and directors granted a transfer of $50,000 in tax money collected by the district to be transferred to the hospital operat-

Owners of good used submarines might find a buyer at Midland Memorial Hospital soon.

Opening of the hospital's $1.5 million critical care pavilion has been pushed back by delays in shipping a pull-down type toilet fixture like the ones used in old Pullman railroad cars or Navy submarines, administrator Wayne Ulrich told hospital trustees Wednesday.

The fixtures are manufactured by only one company in the country, and Midland Memorial's shipment has been on backorder since early December, he said.

So far, neither hospital officials nor the contractor has been able to get word when the shipment will be sent, Ulrich said.

Once the fold-up facilities are in, the pavilion — originally scheduled to open in January can be put to use Until then, critical care patients are being housed in another area of the hospital destined for renovation, further disrupting the contractor's schedule The impasse led one trustee to suggest the hospital try getting in touch with railroads to see if they might have some of the fixtures for salvage. "We might want to buy a Pullman car," he

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) -Two mysterious gunmen shot the British ambassador to the Netherlands and his valet today on a Hague street and then escaped in morning rush-hour traffic. The two men died a short time later at a hospital. Authorities could not immediately explain the motive for the assassination. The ambassador, Sir Richard Sykes, 57, was a security expert within the British diplomatic corps.

Police said Sykes and the 19-yearold Dutch valet were shot at about 9 a.m. outside the ambassador's residence as the envoy was about to enter his Rolls-Royce for the 10-minute drive to the British Embassy.

Three shots were fired, the ambassador was hit at least once, and one bullet struck the valet, who was holding open the car door, police said.

Eyewitnesses said the two gunmen fled through a nearby alley and disappeared into traffic, police reported. The killers were between 35 and 40 years old and were dressed in dark suits, the witnesses said.

The ambassador's residence, a historic mansion, is in an affluent residential area of the Dutch capital.

HOUSTON (AP) -For 20 years Gordon Bankston spent his days in the oil fields of West Texas, working as a roughneck, a pusher and a pumper.

At nights he would soak the oil and the grime from his calloused hands, pick up a pen and draw another cartoon, or a brush and paint a scene from that flat, often desolate, but always beautiful land where the the black energy is sucked from deep under the sandy soil

From the oil fields, Bankston made his living. From his paintings, found "where I always thought I belonged."

Today Gordon Bankston has put aside his hard hat and his oil-stained overalls He is a full-time artist, with paintings going as high as $1,500, and prints as low as $4.50, and a cartoon strip called "Oil Patch," and playing cards, calendars, Christmas cards and designs

"I'VE HIT a lot of dry holes since I went at art all the way, but I'd just back up and drill again. There was a time when first starting that I left Dallas with 15 cents in my pockets and heading for home in Odessa," Bankston recalled in a recent interview. "I'm still not making a fortune, but I'm getting by. I set a goal and I'm going for it. I'd advise everybody to do something they enjoy. I went a lot of days without a payday, but I stayed with Bankston was born 47 years ago in the shadow of an oil field in the Smackover field of Arkansas and grew up in the famed Permian Basin of West Texas.

He drew his first work of art at the age of 6, and naturally it was a drawing of a drilling rig.

WHEN IT came time to decide on a future, Bankston went where he knew a paycheck would arrive every week or so-to the oil fields where his father had worked for three decades until his retirement in 1957.

He never lost his love for art and eventually his cartoon strip became a fixture in several West Texas newspapers. It depicts the hard, but humorous life of the fields.

Using the cartoons as his base, Bankston spent $4,000 to print calendars and postcards and "then I had to spend so much time working for the rent, the groceries and the clothes, I couldn't market them. Finally, I just took off and went the art route all the way."

Once travel money was hard to come by, but Bankston now says he can afford airplane fare to the major markets where his seemingly all decorated with his cartoons and paintings, are sold.

On some occasions he likes to go back to his earlier days and drive his 1948 pickup truck, loaded with his goodies, from one city to the

HE ADMITS it might not be in the best taste of the serious artist, but Bankston doesn't mind using a couple of goodlooking gals in tight jeans to help promote his paintings, as he did recently in Abilene.

A man with the zeal of an evangelist and more energy than he pumped out of the ground in two decades, Bankston bounces up and down during an interview, flipping out this painting, displaying that cartoon, showing off his bath mats with the oil field

Always dressed in a sports shirt with the sleeves turned up a roll

Howdy, engineers!

The 11th Biennial Permian Basin Oil & Gas Recovery Conference holds the spotlight in the Tall City today and Friday, and well it should since it is one of the largest and most significant sessions of its kind ever held here.

The conference registration desk opened Wednesday afternoon in the Midland Hilton, headquarters hotel, and the initial technical session was held this morning, with others scheduled this afternoon and Friday, morning and afternoon. The conference will adjourn late Friday.

The meeting is expected to attract more than 600 persons from "all over."

The conference program features a 16-paper technical program. The papers will be delivered by distinguished persons representing oil and gas firms, service companies, law firms, universities and federal 'agencies.

The conference is sponsored by the Permian Basin and Trans-Pecos sections of the Society of Petroleum Engineers of AIME.

"Additional Reserves from Improved Technology" is the conference theme.

And it is this very subject which makes the conference so important at this particular time as the nation struggles to overcome an energy shortage and make the United States less dependent on high-priced foreign crude oil. The reserves are in place, just as they have been for centuries, and it is the improved technology as developed and practiced by petroleum engineers, such as those meeting here today, which will make it possible to recover every drop of oil from them. Recovery is the name of the game.

This is a practical, workable approach to solving the energy crisis, and the petroleum engineers aren't looking back as they forge ahead in their work and research.

The Tall City of Midland, as always, is glad to be the host city to oil personnel and petroleum groups, and this certainly is no exception.

Midlanders are proud that their city was selected as the meeting place for this particular Oil Recovery Conference, and they direct a great big, typically West Texas WELCOME to all those attending the session, which it is hoped will be one of the most successful ever.

Those in charge of arranging and staging the conference have worked diligently at their assignments, and they are to be commended for their efforts.

Meanwhile, and directed to conference delegates, have an enjoyable time while here and come back to see us soon and

So it took sonething as big as Voyager I, dashing to within 174,000 miles of Jupiter, and taking a sort of flirtation walk among the planet's radiation belts and magnetic forces, to perk up public interest.

Voyager I accomplished its Jupiter mission like a robot space buccaneer, sending back photos of the planet's mysterious Great Red Spot and whirling clouds and grabbing snapshots of several of its 13 known satellite moons, before heading off into a space rendezvous with the planet

The Jupiter moons visited included Io - whose color photo looked strikingly like a cheesecoated pizza, dotted with bits of anchovy - the cylinder-like

Chances are most folks weren't too familiar with these Jupiter moons until Voyager I brought them closer to home, so to speak, by photographs. Some of them sound as strange as most of the emerging countries of the Third World.

Space scientists were delighted with the quality of the photographs and the other data returned by the 1,800-pound spacecraft. Yes, it's an amazing world in which we live. It seems like only yesterday the Russian Sputnik set the world afire with what can now be looked back upon as pathetic

NICK THIMMESCH

Stein offers new insight about 'electronic monster'

WASHINGTON - For an entire generation, social critics and others in the intelligentsia have fretted about television, its banality, the vioence (and now sex), and how this wonder can reduce the masses to boob-tube idiots. But TV goes on and on. It's rooted in the folk culture now, and the Republic survives. Still, when someone offers a new insight about this electronic monster, am willing to pay attention. Now comes Ben Stein, a young writer who likes dealing with popular culture, to tell us that a few hundred people in Los Angeles - through the powerful medium of TV - have created a new sort of folk culture which, for better or worse, goes against traditional American grain. Stein worked briefly as a writer in the TV game himself and became fascinated with the parochialism of its writers and producers, whom he then interviewed. Stein's new book, 'The View From Sunset Boulevard," is the first tangible consequence of this experience. It will win him no Emmys from those he passes judg-

Since Stein occasionally writes for the Wall Street Journal, his view of businessmen clashes sharply with those of the TV writers. In traditional American culture, the businessman might be benevolent or beastly, but on TV, according to Stein, he is always a bad guy. "On almost every episode of Columbo," Stein writes, "a rich businessman has killed someone and seeks to bully Columbo into leaving him alone because of his high status Ineedless to say, he never succeeds)." Businessmen also traffic with the Mafia, hard drugs and generally make life miserable for minorities, the way Stein sees them portrayed on TV. At that, the typical TV murder is a white killing a white. If the poor or minorities get involved it is because a rich white duped them. Stein comments: "I have never seen a major crime committed (on TV) by a poor, teen-age, black, Mexican or Puerto Rican youth, even though they account for a high percentage of all violent crimes.

Moreover, when the white punk commits a crime, there has to be an affluent perpetrator lurking somewhere. Veteran producer Stanley Kramer, according to Stein, blames society and its misdeeds for crime. "Crime comes from wars and repressions and ghettos," Kramer says. Apparently individual responsibility never figures. Similarly, on TV, it is difficult for a poor person to commit a sin. The cast of Good Times, for example, is kindly and considerate, almost too good to be true. Trouble comes from avaricious outsiders. Thus we get the sainted poor who are spectators to perfidy, not participants. "Poor people," explains Kramer again, "are the victims of a social malfunction." Gary Marshall, producer of Laverne and Shirley, says, "For some people to be poor, others have to be rich. The poor are taken advantage of by the rich."

Now when the plutocrats aren't hatching murders or trying to dupe poor Columbo, they blatantly flaunt their demonic ideology or even their sexual appetites. Rich women on TV, Stein observes, lustfully eye the shabby private detective, order servants around and generally bring Scarlett O'Hara to Beverly Hills. And yet the writers and producers of this stuff make anywhere from hundreds of thousands to millions of dollars a year. They see themselves as working-class folk, blessed with luck and happy to endow lavish life on their children whom they would never group with the villainous heirs and heiresses in their scripts, although these children will indeed one day inherit their money. And so it goes. MASH pretty well typifies the military - an institution trying to get as many people killed as possible, burn down as many villages as possible, separate loved ones as often as possible, and generally stand in the way of warm and natural human development." The clergy are usually irrelevant or hypocritical on TV, by Stein's measure, and thoughtful people are rare but they are too quiet for television.

Small towns are wicked places, but big cities, while rough and tough, have a heart of gold. Sure there are killers and mean people in Kojak or Starsky and Hutch, but there is always the impoverished roommate who'll do anything to catch the murderer of her roommate - a topless dancer.

In small towns, conspiracies of the mean-minded lurk everywhere. Only in Little House on the Prairie or in The Waltons do we see something wholesome and pleasant in small town or rural life. And yet TV commercials reek of the old-fashioned goodness of how something was made on the farm or small town. What does this inversion of traditional values do to those millions who soak up this stuff at night? Does it make any difference? What's interesting, as Stein points out, is that the TV picture coincides almost exactly with the attitudes of the small group of writers and producers.

love the poor criminal. They believe in action and disparage introspection. They love material things and hate materialism (as they drive their Rolls-Royces about). They distrust small towns and adore cities. The military is to be laughed at. Cops are too, sometimes, although they are also to be loved.

I agree with Stein when he concludes that nothing terrible is necessarily happening because of this stereotyping. It so happens that this little band holds power now, but life changes. Recent studies show people are getting fed up with commercial TV and watching it less. Who knows what's next?

They hate rich businessmen and

Pet cemeteries, undertaking become big business

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) - Fred Miller - a man who has helped bury more than 9,000 pets says there's a good reason why some folks seem to care more about their pets than their relatives.

"People don't have bad memories with pets that they might have with relatives and friends. Even if you kick him, he still licks your hand," Miller, president of the International Association of Pet Cemeteries, said.

Some 60 pet undertakers are here this week for the association's eighth annual convention. The meeting includes a trade show featuring the latest in pet cemetery wares - including caskets for everything from a hamster to a large dog and Grecian urns for Fido's ashes.

When a half dozen of us met in Chicago in 1971 we sort of looked at each other. Back then you were considered an unusual person — even an oddball," Miller, who owns a 30-acre pet cemetery outside of Detroit, said. But everyone looked normal and that gave us the courage to go on." Now the association has 213 mem-

Miller said the industry will continue to grow. He said the move to apartment living and local ordinances against burying pets in backyards have created an immediate need for pet cemeteries.

"Man's best friend is still the dog. 10-inch molded plastic box for a bird But we've had everything, We've buried birds, rabbits, horses - anything a kid will make a pet. Turtles,

And the pet casket makers are joining in on the boom. Dennis Hoegh, a Gladstone, Mich., man who claims to have been the first manufacturer of pet caskets, said his plants crank out 57 caskets an hour.

The prices range from $5 for a or hamster to $160 for the 40-inch deluxe model. That's without the satin liners and pillows.

Miller said the average pet funeral costs from $95 up to $250. But that's the average.

"I had one old guy who spent $8,000 for a half dozen dogs. He decided he didn't want his relatives to fight over his money, so he spent it on his dogs. A pink granite stone. It was beauti-

He also recalled a dog funeral that attracted a 140-car procession. A maintenance man in a factory near the cemetery lost his pet and all his co-workers turned out for the Sunday

"A lot of them thought it was a lark until they saw more flowers than you see at some human funerals," he said, adding that the factory now provides much of his business.

By KEVIN McKEAN NEW YORK (AP) -As lead players in an end-of-the-world scenario, they're laughable. As members of an invading horde, they're a flop.

But laughable or not, those Africanized - or "killer" - bees are buzzing steadily through Venezuela on a northward trek that should bring them to the United States around 1988, give or take a year.

And rather than fueling a public outcry, they're posing a question for scientists interested in population genetics: Will the bees reach the U.S. border with fiery temperament intact? Some entomologists expect the bees to intermix with local bees along the way and lose their legendary bad tempers. "I don't say they're a perfectly lovable bee. What I'm saying is they're darn good honey producers," says Dr. Roger A. Morse of Cornell University, a "killer" bee defender who has studied their habits in

But other scientists, like Dr. Orley R. Taylor Jr., head of a U.S. Agriculture Department research project on the bees, fear that if they reach North America untamed, they will pose a sticky problem for the country's $125 million-a-year honey industry. The African "killer" bees were brought to this hemisphere in 1956 to an experimental breeding station at Sao Paulo, Brazil, where it was ducing powers could be tapped.

Instead, 26 queens escaped the following year and began mating with local bees.

The Africans were used to tougher natural predators than the indiginous bees, who had descended from European stock. They acquired a reputation for nastiness. 'A pig bumps up against a beehive and bees come out and start hoped their honey-pro- stinging everything within 200 meters. When it's over, several animals are dead, several people are stung and the beekeeper is scared to death," says Taylor, professor of entomology at ble fellows. Hugo Muxsthe University of Kan-feldt, former president of the Brazilian Beekeeping Association, says there's been no effect on the country's 5,000-ton annual honey production. Nevertheless, U.S. beekeepers remain wary that the hybrids could years of intermixing

have mellowed the irritahurt business. Bees make 115,000 tons of honey a year in the United States and help pollinate 90 crops, including most fruits and nuts.

Dr. Burt Martin, staff scientist for bees at the USDA research center in Beltsville, Md., says the aggressive tendencies probably can be bred out of the bees. But Martin is worried about two other undesirable traits their tendency to swarm unpredictably and their tendency to abscond, or abandon a hive. "Commercial beekeepers are oriented to putting colonies on a truck and moving them around," says Martin.

This aid provides you with a guide to product freshness. An example is milk! Look at the date imprinted in the top of the carton. This specifies the last date this item can be sold and still allow you reasonable time to store and use the product at home. Lucerne You'll find this same kind of dating on many other products. Cottage cheese has the date stamped on the bottom. Egg cartons have the dates imprinted on the end. The places for the date may vary but their purpose does not.

Store clerks know these products are not to be sold beyond the stamped date. The quality and freshness of the food also depends on the efficiency of storage

BIG SPRING - Nat Shick whittled out a two-story-tall totem pole back in

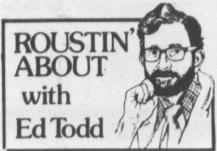

It's still standing. He isn't. Today, it marks and stands guard over the Heritage Museum of Big Spring like the old proverbial wooden Indian; it doesn't do much, but it sure looks as if it's got some business being there. Big Spring rancher Kent Morgan bought the monument at an auction sometime back after Shick, a postmaster here in the Roosevelt-Truman eras, died and gave it to the museum about five years age.

"He's well fixed," Gerri Atwell, the museum's curator, said of Morgan. "He's got at least two bits." She's one

Mrs. Atwell, too, is well-fixed in wit, at least, and keenly can take you for a spin in (and around, if she's up to it) the museum.

THE MUSEUM is marked, too, by an old Aermotor Co. windmill that doesn't spin with the wind, a green covered wagon that's not covered (the top's ripped), and of course, the

"I don't know why anybody would carve a totem pole," Mrs. Atwell mused, "but it's here."

There's a lot of Howard County history inside that museum, but there are few of Nat Shick's totem poles standing around town. (Another big one is at Comanche Trail Park here.) "He was always whittling on something And even if the old native limestone museum were an empty cavity, it would make pretty good history. Mrs. Atwell is immersed in it

Harry Abney, an Englishman by way of Virginia, built the edifice that's now the museum in 1909. The building blocks were from the 1883constructed courthouse.

"He (Abney) came from England and tried to make a castle out of it on the hill," Mrs. Atwell said.

FIVE YEARS LATER, rancherlandowner Dora Roberts bought the 'castle" and lived there. It was her last home. Several years after her death in 1953 at age 90, the Dora Roberts Foundation gave the oldhouse and $40,000 to the county. It was converted to a library.

Now, since the library was been shifted to the old post office, the castle was turned into a museum and has been in that condition since 1971, when Mrs. Atwell walked in as curator.

"We're on our own," she said, and figured "that makes us eligible to go nuts." The museum, which under went a $65,000 renovation in 1976, compactly displays a harvest of Howard County history — from the free-spirit Comanche and buffalo days to Capt. Randolph Marcy's mapping the "big spring" watering hole here in 1849 and to the days of the locomotive, horseless carriage and

"THEY HAVE WATER trickling out of it now," Mrs. Atwell said of the spring, town's namesake, "but it's not running like it used to.'

Everything in the museum is a Howard County original.

There's a weathered chuck box from Col. C.C. Slaughter's Long S Ranch which stretched clear from New Mexico to 18 miles north of Big

A sampling of the museum's wares include arrowheads, a Comanche atlatl (spear-thrower), spurs, firearms, saddles, branding irons, oxen, yoke, Longhorn and Durham bull horns, a Graphophone, New Home treadle sewing machine, coffee grinder, coalfired heater, scrub board, kerosene lamps, 1900 bedroom set, and more stuff than you could pack in a freight wagon pulled by a team of draft

There's an 1893 photograph of some men folks taking it easy in the old courthouse. The floor was stained. 'Look at that tobacco spit all over the store," the curator said. Lying around a physician's pill case are patented pills and salve: Foster's Pills, Ramon's Pink Pills, Mother's Salve and Hanson's Magic Corn Photographs include those of Big Spring's first motorized fire engine, 1908; first car crash, 1913; first airplane, a Wright Brothers Model B biplane to fly into town, 1911; first Texas & Pacific Railway depot here, 1882, and S.E.J. Cox and his General Oil Co. No. 1 McDowell oilwell der-

Abuse of alcohol increasing

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)

— Alcohol abuse is increasing while treatment and prevention programs shut down for lack of funds, the House Committee on Health Affairs has been told.

She spoke in favor of a proposal to designate up to 20 percent of the state's income from the mixed drink tax to help fund regional alcoholism programs.

Some savings industry people share their view.

By DONALD WOUTAT

DETROIT (AP) - What the 1980 General Motors compacts will look like is a poorly kept secret, but the auto industry is watching closely to see if these so-called "X-cars" will live up to their advance billing as the most significant new automobiles in The front-wheel-drive cars, to be unveiled April 3.

are of strategic importance to the nation's No. 1 automaker in any event. They represent GM's most critical move yet to satisfy the demands of the energy-short 1980s. The auto giant, whose traditional strength is the lucrative bigger cars, can no longer afford to wink at the compact market and its fuel-economy advantages. And when GM takes aim, it is an enormous threat to competitors.

"They're going to hurt everybody else," Richard Haydon, auto analyst for Goldman, Sachs & Co., says of the new X-cars. The cars - dubbed "X" not with the idea of secrecy but because autos are usually named by letter during their development - have attracted exceptional interest in industry circles. "Sneak" photos of the cars have appeared routinely for months. Chrysler president Lee A. Iacocca says he has already taken a test spin. X-cars have been spotted at Ford headquarters in Dearborn, on Detroit freeways and in dealer lots. GM says the five-year development program for the compacts cost nearly $2.7 billion, the most ever for a new car line. Industry insiders expect the cars to start at under $4,500.

The new compacts will replace the Chevrolet Nova, Pontiac Phoenix, Oldsmobile Omega and Buick Skylark. The Nova becomes the Citation. but the other names are unchanged. Depending on who's talking, the X-car is either a significant development in auto design or a moderately interesting car that falls short of its advance billing. All agree it's a creature of Washington.

The cars are 800 pounds lighter and 20 inches shorter than the current models. With the base four-cylinder engine and manual transmission, the 2,500-pound Citation is rated by the Environmental Protection Agency at 24 miles per gallon in city driving - up 26 percent from 19 mpg on the Pentagon plans to spend $108 million on bomber

WASHINGTON (AP) - Pentagon officials, acting in response to strong congressional pressure, are going to spend $108 million to continue development of a Marine bomber program that President Carter had sought to cut from the defense budget.

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., a supporter of the AV-8B fighter-bomber, said Wednesday work would continue. on the new Marine Corps plane.

Earlier this year, the Defense De-partment had frozen all but $15 milion of $123 million Congress appropriated last year for engineering work on the plane, called a "jump

Bill proposes to raise Texas' drinking age

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A bill aimed at stopping high school drinking by raising the minimum age limit to 19 was sent to the Senate Wednes-

In 1973, the Legislature lowered the alcoholic drinking age minimum from 21 to 18.

"The phrase used then was, 'If they're old enough to fight, they're old enough to drink,''' Roger Wiley, prin-cipal of Lanier High School in Austin, told the Senate State Affairs Commit-

But the reasoning does not hold because an 18-year-old going off to fight doesn't take his 14 or 15-year-old friend with him," Wiley said. "It's not unusual for high school students to leave on lunch breaks, have a few beers and return to school somewhat

Other witnesses who appeared but did not testify included representives of school boards and professional organizations.

The committee approved the bill by Sen. Walter Mengden, R-Houston.

Also, a Marine request for $203 million for the aircraft in fiscal 1980 was denied by the Pentagon and White House budget officers.

Hart sponsored a Senate resolution to overturn the Pentagon's deferral of spending the $108 million and he has fought for it in the Senate Armed Services Committee during consideration of the administration's request for $2.2 billion in supplemental appropriations for 1979.

Hart proposed holding up the supplemental money, or freezing funds for salaries of high-ranking civilian defense officials to force release of the AV-8B funds. The panel had not acted on either proposal.

But release of the money, announced Wednesday, will continue engineering work on the AV-8B for the remainder of the year and give Congress a chance to consider whether to order the Pentagon to continue development in 1980

Defense Secretary Harold Brown has been skeptical of the aircraft, and some officials have said it failed to measure up against higher priority programs this year.

In addition, one official, who asked to remain anonymous, has called the bomber a "turkey."

The Marines bought 110 first-generation AV-8A Harriers, built in Great Britian, but 32 have crashed, killing 11 airmen.

Even so, Marine officials - led by Gen. Louis Wilson, commandant of the Corps - have been lobbying Congress to lift the funding freeze and to appropriate more money in 1980 to continue development of an AV-8B model to correct the earlier model's technical problems and increase its range and weapons-carrying capac-

The Marines have hoped the plane would become their main battlefield bomber to provide close support for ground troops.

Carter's diplomacy fails to improve rating

NEW YORK (AP) - After the Camp David Mi- country in the form of higher prices and some shortdeast summit last year, Americans' opinion of President Carter soared. But his successful Middle East shuttle diplomacy this month didn't raise his standing in the eyes of the public, an Associated Press-NBC News poll found.

Americans do approve of Carter's efforts to get Egypt and Israel to sign a peace treaty, the poll taken Monday and Tuesday shows.

What they don't like is the way the president has dealt with energy and the economy — two issues nearer to Americans' everyday cares than for-

The public's ratings of Carter's work on economic and energy problems are at the lowest levels ever found for the Democratic chief executive in these specific areas.

In sum, these changes add up to essentially no change in the public's opinion of Carter's work

Twenty-nine percent of those interviewed rated Carter's performance excellent or good. That is not significantly higher than the 28 percent finding in last month's AP-NBC News poll.

On the other side, 18 percent gave him poor Fifty percent said Carter's work was only fair and three percent were not sure. This poll was conducted after Carter had succeeded in his shuttle diplomacy to bring Egypt and Israel to the point of signing a peace treaty.

In a poll conducted right after the Camp David summit last September — when Carter brought Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat together for 13 days of talks - Carter's overall job rating improved 16

The president's recent success in the Middle East did boost the public's opinion of his handling of foreign policy matters.

Forty-four percent gave his handling of international affairs good or excellent marks, up 9 points from last month's survey finding. Eighteen percent rated his foreign policy work poor, while 34 perent gave it only fair marks. Four percent of the 1,600 adults nationwide interviewed by telephone were not sure.

Specifically on the Middle East, 64 percent rated Carter's efforts as excellent or good. Only 7 percent rated his work poor and 25 percent said it was only

But the twin problems of the continuing rise in prices and the specter of oil shortages have pushed the public's perception of Carter's work in those areas to the lowest points of his administration. Forty-seven percent rated Carter's work in handling energy problems as poor. That is the most negative performance rating ever found by the AP-NBC News poll for Carter in any area and is up 14 points from the February survey. Only 13 percent of the public gave his response to energy problems a good or excellent rating. Thirty-five percent said his work in the area was only fair and 5 percent were not sure.

Since the February survey, the effects of the Iranian oil shutdown have begun to show up in this ages. Other oil producing nations have also raised their prices for crude in light of the tight supply On the economy, Carter's problems were similar.

Forty-one percent rated his economic work as poor, down 8 points from last month. Another 41 percent gave him only fair marks. Only 14 percent rated his economic work excellent or good. Four percent were not sure.

DEAR ABBY

Bad examples did him good

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents fought all the time. When they finally got a divorce, I was sent to live with my grandparents. Well, they fought worse than my parents, but it was better than an orphanage. I had a pretty rough life as a kid, but it didn't do me any harm. I had a paper route when I was 10. I had to get up at 4 a.m. daily. Nobody drove me; I went alone in the pitch dark when it was sometimes 20 below zero. They say kids learn from example, but that's not always true. My father was an alcoholic. After seeing what it did to him and our family, you couldn't pay me to take a drink. My grandfather smoked like a chimney and his breath smelled so bad I vowed I'd never smoke. And I never have.

Sometimes the bad examples kids

see will work in reverse. Instead of imitating those bad habits, kids will try all the harder to do the opposite. What do you say, Abby?-RED IN BURLINGTON, IOWA

DEAR RED: I say you could be right, but I still believe that when kids have GOOD examples to follow, their chances for turning out good are a lot DEAR'ABBY: You told a woman whose husband looked at other women, "Let him look. When he's through looking, he's through. Did you mean he is through sex, or dead?-FLO IN FLORIDA

DEAR FLO: I meant "through with sex." But some men aren't through with sex until they're dead. DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and eight months pregnant. I am not married, and have no plans to be. I made a very important decision a few weeks ago. I decided to give my

4 to 5 cups all-purpose flour

1/4 cup light corn syrup baby up for adoption. Abby, I love this baby very, very much. That is why I'm giving it up. Some people think I'm wrong. They say I am cruel and heartless and even selfish for wanting to give away my child, but I think it would be much more selfish of me to keep the baby and make it suffer for my mistakes. Every child should have a home with a mother and father who want it and can give it everything a child deserves. For months I was undecided about what I should do. Now I'm sure. I am thinking of the baby first. That's why I'm giving it up.

I have always respected your opinion, Abby. Do you think I made the right choice?—EXPECTING THE BEST IN TEXAS DEAR EXPECTING: Yes. God

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the letter signed FIREMAN'S

DAUGHTER urging thrill seekers to stay home and watch the news on TV instead of driving to the scene of a fire: there's an alternative. Become a volunteer fire fighter!

That's what I did. As a trained fire fighter I fought fires and provided first aid at the scene of many accidents. I was paid for attending drill practice as well as for each night I spent at the station. (It wasn't much, but it was something.) I not only got a great education in first aid, I was able to help people and satisfy my curiosity.—NATURALLY NOSY DEAR NOSY: A good suggestion that could catch fire.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to ABBY in care of this newspaper.

MIDKIFF-The Midkiff Bridge Club met in the home of Sue Winters. Guests from Midland included Evelyn Melear and Mrs. Reese McDonald. Patricia Barrett was high scorer, Mrs. McDonald was second high and Mrs. Estee Smith won a game. The group will meet April 2 in the home of Margaret Whorton.

In a large bowl dissolve yeast in water. Heat milk and butter until lukewarm; butter does not need to melt; stir into yeast mixture with sugar, salt and spice. Whisk in eggs until blended. Stir in raisins. Gradually stir in enough flour (about 4 cups) to make an easily managed dough. On a smooth floured surface, knead until smooth and elastic (about 5 minutes), using additional flour if necessary.

Frosting, recipe follows

Place in a greased bowl, turn to grease top; cover; let rise in warm, draft- free place (about 80 degrees) until doubled - 1 hour. Punch down dough; let rest 10 minutes. Divide into 24 equal parts. Shape each into a ball.

Place balls, sides touching, in a greased and floured 13 by 9 by 2-inch pan; do not cover. Place in a warm, closed place such as an unheated oven or cupboard. Let rise until doubled - 45 minutes. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven about 15 minutes; brush with the corn syrup; continue baking until buns have a beautiful golden-brown glaze - 5 minutes longer. Place buns in pan on a rack; cool 10 minutes. Pipe frosting on each bun to form a thick cross. Serve warm. Makes 24.

Frosting: Mix 1 tablespoon light corn syrup with 1 tablespoon hot water; gradually stir in, keeping smooth, enough confectioners' sugar (about 1½ cups) to form a stiff mixture. Turn into a pastry-tube bag; use as directed above.

Doggett excoriates bar during Senate filibuster

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A senator who practices law for a living blistered his professional organization the State Bar of Texas — for what he said was its refusal to let the public see what it does.

No state agency, except the bar, protested Sen. Lloyd Doggett "has come to the Legislature and said, 'We're too big, we're too professional, too secretive...to accept changes.""

The Austin senator got help from Sen. Carlos Truan, a Corpus Christi life insurance agent, in stalling for four hours a bill extending the bar's life as a state agency. Spectators were surprised at Truan testing his stamina in that he had a heart attack earlier this session.

Their delaying tactics were partially successful as the bill sponsor, Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless, accepted an amendment placing six non-lawyers on the bar's 36-member board of

Then the Senate sent the bill to the House on a 27-4 vote, with four senator-lawyers - Oscar Mauzy of Dallas, A.R. Schwartz of Galveston, Walter Mengden of Houston and Doggett voting against it.

Doggett described the bar, to which he must belong to practice law in Texas, as a "sacred cow plodding through the halls of the Legislature' and "the only closed-shop in the state of Texas without public participa-mind," said Doggett, "the legal mind that refused to acknowledge the Sunset process until the process was nearly complete.'

The bar was one of 25 state agencies reviewed by the Sunset Advisory Commission prior to the legislative session. "You would think that a profession that relies so much on the public - on lay persons — in the jury process would respect public input," said

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Meier, Doggett and Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, huddled about 3 p.m., and Farabee offered the amendment placing six non-lawyers on the board of directors.

Doggett had sought nine non-lawyer directors but described the amendment as a "meaningful compromise with significant benefits.'

The Senate rejected overwhelmingly a bill by Schwartz, which would have required the bar to deposit its members' dues in the state treasury, with the Legislature appropriating its operational funds. The bill also would have prohibited lobbying, as well as require public members as direc-

Schwartz said the bar has taken the position that "we are perfect and need no change.'

Earlier, the Senate voted 14-17 against a specific amendment to force the bar to deposit dues in the Mother favors law allowing retarded to donate organs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Margaret Little, a mother fresh from a long legal battle to allow her mentally retarded daughter to donate a kidney and save her son's life, took time out to speak for a bill that might ease the pain for other families.

Fourteen-year-old Steve Little, victim of a congenital kidney disease, and 15-year-old Anne Little are at home in Seguin awaiting the medical go-ahead for the transplant.

"I'm the mother of Anne and Steve Little," the grey-haired, stocky woman told the House Judiciary Committee on Wednesday night.

"Where would you like me to begin?" she asked in a businesslike but soft voice that wavered only rarely. "I can begin when Steve was born

Her husband Thomas was present at the hearing but did not testify.

A bill sponsored by Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, would set a legal procedure to allow mentally retarded minors to donate kidneys under certain safeguards.

A civil appeals court decision to allow the transplant for the Little family was handed down Feb. 7.

Bock said he had introduced the bill needed emergency help from the Legislature.

'They don't need it now but somebody else might, and that's why the Littles were here," he said.

Steve, who lost one kidney when he was four, had been admitted to the hospital in deteriorating condition Feb. 5, two days before the appeals court decision.

His remaining kidney was removed Feb. 15. The youth is receiving dialysis treatments five hours a day and three days a week until the transplant takes Mrs. Little said Anne understood

The court ruled that the transplant should proceed because Anne would receive benefits.

The court said she faced the loss of a loved brother without the transplant and would receive from it self-esteem and increased status in the family.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals upheld Charlie Brooks' cle ath penalty conviction Wednesday in the Fort Worth abduction-slaying of David Gregory.

The victim was a paint and body repai rman at a used car dealership. He accompanied Brooks on a test drive on Dec. 14, 1976, the appeals court said.

Brooks picked up some companions who se car had stalled and then drove to his room in a Stouth Side motel frequented by dope addicts and p,ro, stitutes, the court said. Witnesses said they saw Brooks release a man

Fort Worth policemen found Gregory's body bound and gagged with adhesive tape and shot in the head. Brooks argued that the jury was prejudiced against him by introduction of evidence showing he

Dear Dr. Solomon: To breast-feed or not to breastfeed —that is the question. I am expecting my first baby in a few months and would like to know if there is any evidence that breast-feeding actually is beneficial for the child.— Mr. A.L. Dear Mrs. L.: Those who minimize the advantages of breast-feeding would probably argue that the evidence in its favor is circumstantial. For example:

At present, it is a fact that only about one of every four American mothers breast-feeds her infant. It is also a fact that the United States ranks twelfth among nations in infant mortality. Are the two facts related? Dr. J. Kelly Smith, an associate professor of medicine at Cornell University, thinks they may be. He points out that in developed countries such as Sweden, which have the lowest incidence of infant mortality, breast-feeding is popular. For some time, research has demonstrated that breast-feeding provides nutritional and immunological advantages, helping fight against viruses, bacteria, and some allergies. Dr. Smith further notes that some diseases for which the cause has not yet been established—such as the sudden infant death syndrome—seem to be less common among breast-fed infants. Breast-feeding is particularly important for premature infants, who are more prone to serious infection. Although breast-feeding is not mandatory for the health and well-being of most children, nature has conferred many advantages on this method of nourishing infants.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I recently had occasion to go to a hospital emergency room to get a couple of stitches for a cut. After sitting in the smoke-filled room for an hour before being treated, I think I was healthier before I went to the hospital than when I left. If doctors are so certain that smoking is hazardous to a person's health, why don't they control it in hospitals?—Mrs. K.G.

Dear Mrs. G.: I couldn't agree more. Hospitals are moving in the direction of banning smoking, but I must admit they are moving slowly. The American Cancer Society has reported that a survey of the nation's 7,200 hospitals shows that 491 have banned cigarette sales, and 472 have designated nonsmoking

The National Commission on Smoking and Public Policy has recommended that hospitals prohibit smoking in nonprivate rooms and public areas. And the American Hospital Assn. is preparing guidelines on how hospitals can discourage people from smoking. Some hospitals now sponsor smokecessation clinics. While much obviously remains to be done, hospitals are gradually moving in the right direction.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is gonorrhea the same as syphilis? - Jana R.

Dear Jana R .: No. They are two different diseases, caused by different germs, and diagnosed by different tests. However, you can have both of these diseases at the same time.

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE Carter Mideast mission brings real nightmares

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's actionpacked Middle East mission gave some people nightmares. Literally.

These people weren't anti-treaty Arab rejectionists, either, although the rejectionists were far from pleased at Carter's success.

The nightmares, alas, afflicted several hard-working members of Carter's White House staff. A prime example is Gael Doar, administrative assistant to Greg Schneiders, who in turn is deputy to Gerald M. Rafshoon, Carter's assistant for communications.

Ms. Doar, a young veteran of the president's 1976 campaign, was responsible for getting White House press corps "pools" to and from various events in Jerusalem. These designated pools represent the entire corps when space or transport limitations preclude what is called "open coverage" by every-

On her second night back in Washington, Ms. Doar was telephoned at 11 p.m. by a friend who asked, "Are you busy?"

"I'm trying to get some sleep," she replied. "I've got to take an early morning pool to the King David"
— the name of the Jerusalem hotel where Carter had staved.

The next night, another caller wanted to set up a tennis game with Ms. Doar. Again she mumbled something about having to get to the King David, and

On Saturday, Ms. Doar went to bed at 1 p.m. and slept until 6 a.m. Sunday. That put a stop to her nightmares about the King

MS. DOAR AND a lot of others surely were pleased to learn that Carter would not be returning to the Middle East to sign the prospective Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty.

Such journeys not only induce mind-numbing fatigue but sometimes pose physical hazards, real or

Take the case of the Egyptian air force C-130 transport that hauled members of the traveling press corps from Alexandria, Egypt, to Cairo.

One of the plane's four engines failed during a critical moment in its takeoff.

Ed Hodges of the Durham (N.C.) Morning Herald, a retired U.S. Air Force command pilot, immediately headed for the cockpit to assure himself that the craft was not in imminent danger of plunging to

VICE PRESIDENT Walter F. Mondale was outlining for reporters the president's proposal to move the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration from the Commerce Department to the Interior Department, which in turn would be renamed the Department of Natural Resources.

Noting that Commerce now handles oceans while Interior has jurisdiction over the outer continental shelf, Mondale declared, "The laws of nature don't respect bureaucratic boundaries."

The House Committee on Health Affairs approved Wednesday her bill that would allow the state Department of Health to gather information about cancer cases from hospitals and clinics throughout Texas.

Mrs. Denton, D-Waco, said the reports would help doctors find better ways to treat the disease. Cancer statistics in Texas are presently compiled from death certificates, she

Dr. Fred Conrad of Houston, representing the Texas Medical Association, said cancer registries in other states have proven their value. "For example, we have completely changed the treatment of breast cancer," he said. The bill goes next to the full

The information gathered on each case would be confidential, Mrs. Denton said. Only the general statistics would be released.

'The system would red flag any unusually high rate of cancer in any area," she said. "The information from these medical records would be invaluable research tools in evaluating treatment methods and perhaps even the cause.'

Dr. C.R. Allen Jr. of the health department said the cost for the cancer registry would be about $370,000 for its first two years. He estimated that 85 percent of the cancer cases would be included in the registry at

Judge quits Davis case FORT WORTH, Texas comes up here and kicks

Barron

(AP) - Enraged by what he called "arbitrary actions" of a "weteared fool prosecutor" the presiding judge in the long and bitter Cullen gally or unethically in Davis divorce case has called it quits.

District Judge John Barron said Wednesday he would withdraw from the case and declare a mistrial after five weeks of tedious testimony. Prosecutors Jack Strickland and John the court reporter and Bankston appeared in Barron's chambers Wednesday about 1 p.m. with a grand jury subpoena for all the records of the divorce trial.

The records were to have been presented to a special session of the Tarrant County grand jury Wednesday afternoon and returned this morning.

"I've never been treated as a judge in this way before, by an arrogant DA, which Strickland is in the purest sense of the word," said Barron in an interview with KDFW-TV in Dallas.

'I'm withdrawing from the case and will declare a mistrial after five weeks of trial due to the calumny and arrogance and arbitrary actions in embarrassing me and my court by a wet-eared fool prosecutor having no respect for anyone," said Barron.

"I'M NOT GOING to put up with this. I'll go back to Bryan and hunt rabbits.

The judge said Strickland "insulted everyone connected with his court including Mr. (Cecil) Munn, Mr. (Donn) Fullenweider, Mr. (Ronald) Aultman and myself." Munn and Fullen-weider are Davis' lawyers, and Aultman is Houston jury could not Mrs. Davis' attorney. The judge said lawyers for both Davis and his estranged wife, Prisciltrial would have ended today. And Davis' attorney indicated he understood why the judge reacted as he did

Strickland said he did "I know he (Barron) was irritated. He was treated pretty shabbily. This man has come down "IN MY OPINION, I here (as a visiting judge) certainly treated the ... and the damn district attorney comes in here and doesn't say boo to WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration's concern over a big jump in corporate profits in the final three months of 1978 will not prompt it to set an overall target for corporate earnings, a spokesman

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, said Wednesday the ad-ministration is worried that a 26.4 percent rise in corporate profits in the fourth quarter of 1978, compared with the fourth quarter of 1977, will undermine support for President Carter's wage and price guideline program.

But he said the administration does not want to try to tell corporations what level of earnings would be appropriate.

Powell appeared to be turning aside a suggestion from AFL-CIO President George Meany that the government tax "excessive profits" of businesses to help keep prices its in the fourth quarter, which totaled $225.3 billion at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, were up 9.6 percent over the third quarter and 26.4 percent over the fourth quarter of 1977. However, a fourth quarter to fourth quarter in-

Profits in the first quarter had declined from the final quarter of 1977, then rose sharply in the second quarter. They eased slightly in the third quarter before increasing to the $225.3 billion seasonally adjusted annual fourth quarter figure.

Lubbock teacher fears international food cartel

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A Lubbock teacher who wants foreigners to register their Texas land ownership says she fears the same thing will happen to food as happened to oil.

'We know our family farmers can't compete with these foreign bidders. ... I hope we never see the day when we must buy our food from the same international cartel that we buy our oil from," Sue Duncan told the House Agriculture and Livestock Commit-

The committee heard testimony Wednesday on four bills requiring reports of foreign purchases of Texas land, then sent them to a subcommittee headed by Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, sponsor of one of the bills.

Bill Abington, representing Shell Oil Co., said friendship treaties between the United States and foreign countries usually prohibit restrictions on alien ownership of land. Shell, he said, is 65 percent owned by a Dutch corporation.

Abington also said a new federal law already requires reports of foreign land holdings to the U.S. secretary of agriculture.

Shell does not believe Texas will receive any substantial benefit from a reporting system that duplicates the federal system," Abington said.

Rep. Bob Close, R-Perryton, sponsor of one of the bills, said the duplication made sense because his measure would require reports within three months after purchase. The federal act allows purchasers six months

"I would like to get this information quicker than six months," Close Close's bill also provides a $10,000 penalty for failing to report while, he said, the federal law is vague about sanctions for not reporting.

Rep. Bill Keese, D-Somerville, is sponsor of another bill that also would require American-owned corporations to report their land holdings.

"We should require domestic corporations to report because they could be fronts for foreign investors,"

Jay Naman, president of the Texas Farmers Union, suggested giving county clerks half the penalties collected for not reporting.

This, he said, would encourage them to seek out foreign purchasers who have hidden behind fronts or not

Employers may be forced to finance workers' strikes

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new Supreme Court ruling could lead, as three justices view it, to states requiring employers to entirely finance 33,000 members of the strikes by their workers. Communications Work-

That sharp warning was sounded Wednesday as a six-member majority of the high court told states they are free to pay unemployment benefits to striking workers.

The court ruled that a New York law allowing such benefits for strikers in work stoppages lasting longer than eight weeks is not preempted by federal labor law.

Justice John Paul Stevens acknowledged for the majority, however, that such laws do affect "the relative strength of the antagonists in a bargaining dispute.

New York Telephone sued the state six years ago, contending the statute conflicts with federal laws mandating governmental neutrality in labor disputes.

Providing benefits to strikers has the effect of Voters put city workers out of jobs

VICTORY GARDENS N.J. (AP) - Voters in this tiny borough may have given the heave-ho to the community's fulltime municipal employees by rejecting a $50,000 referendum to pay their salaries.

Mayor William Gratacos said he is notifying municipal employees they will be laid off at the end of the month - if the town council agrees.

But the council could decide to retain some of the employees, or it could offer the town's 1,-400 residents a second chance to pass the referendum. The city, located about 25 miles northwest of Newark, has $75,000, and hopes state aid might make up the difference.

Townspeople rejected the referendum 136 to 29 Tuesday night. A large portion of the funds, said Gratacos, would go toward borough compliance of state regulations requiring a full-time po-lice force, necessary because of its size. It has had three full-time patrolmen since last year.

The mayor said a clerk's error had resulted in the borough's losing about $55,000 in federal Comprehensive Employ-ment and Training Act funds, which had been used to pay some employee salaries. A deadline in applying for the funds was missed, officials have said.

encouraging prolonged omission of any direct strikes, the telephone company charged. During a seven-month strike in 1971-72, about ers of America collected some $49 million in unemployment benefits. All but a small percentage of those benefits were paid to the state by

New York Telephone. Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said the court's ruling "sustains a New York law that requires the employer, after a specified time, to pay striking employees as much as 50 percent of their normal wages.' What's more, Powell claimed, the majority's reasoning leaves states free to require that employers pay their striking workers 100 percent of their salaries as soon as a strike begins. He said the ruling "distorts the core policy of the NLRA - the protection of free collective bargaining.

'The court's sweeping view of (the National Labor Relations Act and the Social Security Act) thus lays open the way for any state to undermine completely the collective-bargaining process within its borders," Powell said.

He was joined in dissent by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Potter Stewart.

The dissenters' apprehensions, however, did not sway the majority. 'There is no evidence that the Congress that enacted the Natonal Labor Relations Act in 1935 intended to deny the states the power to provide unemployment benefits for strikers," Stevens said.

The NLRA and the Social Security Act, also a 1935 law, imply through statement on the subject 'that Congress intended the states to be free to authorize or to prohibit such payments," Ste-

Only Rhode Island has a law duplicating New York's, but, according to Stevens, most states provide benefits in various forms to striking work-

The ruling, affecting some 110,000 lay teachers in nearly 10,000 Catholic schools, also hinted that any federal or state law providing such a right may violate the Constitution's freedom-of-religion protections.

Bulldogs put it together in 13-2 win over Permian

By RICHARD VINCENT Sports Writer

ODESSA - Everything came together Wednesday afternoon for the Midland High Bulldogs and it couldn't have happened at a better time.

The Bulldogs pounded out 21 hits and got three hit, eight strikeout pitching from Archie Booth en route to a 13-2 District 5-4A victory over the Odessa Permian Panthers on Mojo's diamond.

Midland High is now 7-3 overall and 1-0 in district play heading into Saturday's contest at Big Spring. Permian is 9-4 and 0-1, respectively.

Bulldog coach Larry Peel had a simple explanation for the runaway triumph. "We were ready to play," he

Jimmy Zachry and Tommy Munoz continued to wield lethal bats for the Bulldogs as each collected four hits in five trips to the plate. Senior catcher Munoz had three singles and a double with one RBI while Zachry cracked his fourth homer of the season and added a pair of doubles and a base hit. The senior shortstop now has 23

IN THE second, the Bulldogs continued to hammer Panther starter and eventual loser Conley Crawford. Midland High used four hits, including Mike Feldt's single that brought in two runs, to pull ahead 4-0.

But that was just the beginning Pack pulled off two nifty sacrifice plays, one of which was a hit, to help tally a pair of third inning runs.

Speaking of sacrifices, Peel said the way his team advanced runners was a "big turning point" in the encounter. He said the Bulldogs had been unsuccessful in their previous eight sacrifice attempts.

Zachry's solo homer ignited a four run fourth inning rampage. Brigham and Booth also had RBIs as the Bulldogs threatened to end the game on the ten run rule with a 10-0 bulge.

Panther reliever Jay Doelling, who came on for Crawford in the third, managed to hold the Bulldogs scoreless in the fifth. And it was the same inning that Permian managed to get their only runs.

Carroll was held to 14 points after scoring 42 in Purdue's semifinal victory over Alabama. But while the Boilermakers' all-Big Ten center was held in check, Indiana's own all-conference performer, Mike Woodson, got only 10 points on 5-of-16 shooting. Obviously, since the two teams had already played each other twice before Wednesday night, they knew exactly what to do to stop the other.

So in the end, one Indiana shot that went in and one Boilermaker shot that didn't determined the outcome. Butch Carter hit a 20-foot jumper with six seconds left to give Indiana a 53-52 victory, a triumph not clinched until senior Jerry Sichting's baseline shot bounced off the back of the rim at "They concentrated on Woodson and we obviously concentrated hard on Carroll, and it showed (in the statistics)," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, who won the NIT in his seventh try, twice as coach at Indiana and five times at Army, dating back

That was the case, so Carter, who scored 12 points along with fellow Most Valuable Player Ray Tolbert, launched the game-winner.

A little more than a minute earlier and with Purdue ahead 52-51, Carter had climaxed a 31/2-minute stall by Indiana that ran the clock from 4:30 to 1:10 by throwing an interception. But he insisted he wasn't thinking of the error in the closing seconds.

"I was taught that if you make a bad play you don't think about it or you'll make another bad play," said Carter. "So I wasn't about to redeem myself with that shot. If you think about a bad play you might make a bad foul or another bad pass."

But Knight said of his 6-foot-5 junior guard, "I think he was really upset after the interception, but he came back and made two good plays - the foul on Carroll and the shot.'

The 7-foot-1 Carroll, who hit only two of eight free throws, was fouled by Carter near midcourt after Carter's bad pass. But with a chance to salt the game away for the Boilermakers, Carroll missed the first of a 1-and-1 free throw opportunity and Indiana got the rebound.

Knight said of the unorthodox stall, "I've never held the ball like that when I was behind. But with us one point down I was content to hold the bail and reduce it to a 20-second gameinstead of 41/2 minutes.'

After Carter put Indiana ahead, four seconds were on the clock when Purdue called timeout near midcourt. An inbounds pass hit Sichting at the corner, but his shot missed. After the game, Knight walked over to the Purdue bench and spoke to the disconsolate 6-1 senior guard. Later he told newsmen he had told Sichting "that he had been a great player against us for four years and the fact that he missed the last shot should not detract in any way from his great career." "It's amazing what a free throw can do to change the strategy of the whole game," said Purdue Coach Lee Rose of his team's 6-of-13 performance from the charity line. Rose, who lost an NIT final once before while at North Carolina-Charlotte in 1976, was asked if he thought Carroll's subpar performance had cost Purdue the game. "If we hit a few free throws and Sichting hits the last shot, then I'm not asked that kind of question." Purdue finished the season at 27-8, while Indiana was 22-12.

In the third-place game, Alabama's Reggie King scored 21 points and set an NIT scoring record of 132 points in the Crimson Tide's 96-86 victory over Ohio State. The old mark of 129 by Bob Lloyd of Rutgers in 1967 was set

Jud Heathcote hates to play in favored role

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote says he's got the best team in the NCAA Final Four, but he hates being favored and his players are off-limits to the news media until after their semifinal game Saturday against Penn.

The Spartans arrived in Salt Lake Wednesday, a day ahead of the other three finalists in the NCAA Basketball Tournament, and Heathcote immediately served notice their practices would be closed.

"We are out here early to get away from all the distractions surfacing at this time," he said Wednesday in a telephone news conference with the head coaches of the other three final-

"We've had a number of columnists in our area indicate there is no need even to come out here ... that we've won it already. We hope they're right, but we don't think that's the kind of columns that we want our players reading at the present time.'

compete. Profitt drives a hydrogen peroxide rocket dragster that can traverse a quarter mile in 4.5 sec-

When the Spartans were ranked No. 1 during the regular season for two weeks, Heathcote said, "we lost four of six games."

"I'm not blaming the accolades heaped on the club at that time," he said, "but I think there was a tendency to think we could win without defense and intensity, which have been our strengths the entire year." Despite Heathcote's claims that top-ranked and unbeaten Indiana State should be favored, he feels his 24-6 Spartans, energized by brilliant guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson and high-scoring forward Greg Kelser, should win.

"We're coming into the tournament with the worst won-loss record of all the teams, but I honestly think we're the best team," he said. "But in a tournament it's not how good you are, it's how good you're playing. You can talk about tough schedules and tough leagues, but when you get to the Final Four, that's all behind you. I can't believe Indiana State can come into here with a 32-0 record, having been ranked No. 1 for six or seven weeks, and suddenly we end up being the favorite.

"No, I can't understand that." Heathcote's Spartans are favored by as many as 17 points in their Saturday tipoff against Ivy League champion Penn, and Indiana State is favored over DePaul in their semifinal. Saturday's losers will play for third-place Monday followed by the championship game.

Penn Coach Bob Weinhauer said he's figured out how to stop Johnson

"We're going to play three on Magic and two on Greg," he said, "and try to leave everybody else alone. Quite honestly, I think Johnson is a great player. He's a much more dangerous person when he's putting the ball on the floor and trying to make something happen. Kelser is a tremendous leaper. The thing I don't like about him is it looks like he shoots equally well from the outside and the in-

"We have not settled on any direct matchups as yet," Weinhauer said. "In fact, we'll probably zone more than man. The thing that's important for us to remember is that they are not a two-man team."

DePaul, which zipped through three tournament victories with its starting five playing virtually every minute, may not have forward Curtis Watkins at full strength, said Coach Ray Meyer.

The 6-foot-6 senior forward, Meyer's choice to guard Indiana State All-American Larry Bird, suffered strained knee ligaments in the final minutes of DePaul's West Regional victory over UCLA last Saturday.

"He extended all the ligaments on the inside of his knee," said Meyer. "It's very painful and he's been working on weights trying to build up the strength. He can run around the gym. turning left, but he has a lot of pain turning to his right. But each day he says it's getting better and better. I don't know how well it will be by Saturday. Yesterday I would have said he would not play Saturday. But he ran today for the first time, and shot a ball today for the first time." If Watkins can't go, his replacement will be sophomore Dennis McGuire, 6-7, and freshman Mark Aguirre will be asked to guard Bird. "I know we're taking an awful gamble on Mark fouling out," Meyer said. "But Mark is such a great athlete he always rises to the occasion.' Indiana State's first-year head coach, Bill Hodges, the Associated Press Coach of the Year, admitted he feels strange doing battle with the esteemed Meyer, a 37-year coaching giant who will be enshrined into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame next month. "Ray Meyer has probably forgotten more about basketball than I've learned vet," said Hodges. "There isn't anyone I've ever met in coaching who has more class than Ray does. He's probably the most renowned man in Chicago since Mayor (Richard) Daley.

Recruiting shows football's sad side

By BILL SHIRLEY The Los Angeles Timese

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Recruiting. The dirty side of college football. Get a group of coaches together with a bunch of reporters and talk of unenforceable rules, cheaters and dirty tricks is as popular as beer.

So naturally that's what everyone was talking about here the other day when the National Colleagiate Athletic Association invited nine coaches to a seminar to plug their sport just when interest in basketball was peaking. The concensus: recruiting is tiring, boring and expensive, somecoaches cheat and the rules are unen-

The coaches, exhausted from weeks of recruiting, apparently had to accept the NCAA's invitation. It was, in the words of one coach, "virtually a command performance. My athletic director suggested I'd better go."

AND EVEN if the coaches had preferred to discuss Xs and Os, 63 sportswriters, also invited by the NCAA, wouldn't let them get off the subject of recruiting very long. A championship football playoff and Title IX were the only other subjects that drew much attention at the third such gathering held by the NCAA, which is headquartered in this neighborhood at Shawnee Mission, Kan.

For coaches, recruiting is blowing too much time on the road, much of it in airports and coffee shops, and some of it in the living rooms of the young athletes they are tracking. Often, they say, they meet old friends in the living rooms - their fellow coaches

More frustrating than the travel, say the coaches, are the rules imposed by the NCAA, rules that the claim are unenforceable and, in Akers' opinion, rules that produce "limitations that are forcing us into mediocrity.

One limitation, the three-visitation rule, allows a school and an athlete a total of only three visits, either at the athlete's home or at the school.

There is also the hated "bump" rule, so called because it prohibits a coach from meeting an athlete even inadvertently, that is. He can't "bump" into him on the street or campus. Each chance encounter eliminates a scheduled visit.

"You can't enforce it so why have it," Texas' Fred Akers said. "It's a joke. It's ridiculous. Rules only affect honest people; thieves pay no attention anyway.

SOME COACHES say they do not obey the bump rule but Notre Dame's Dan Devine asked, "How can we as a group say we will not obey it?"

To enforce its rules, the NCAA had extra investigators in the field this winter looking over the coaches' shoulders as they recruited. At least one coach, LSU's Charlie McLendon, said it was a good idea, on the theory that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.'

But not all the coaches agreed with NCAA executive director Walter Byers that the 30-95 rule is reasonable. "Coaches can operate with it," he said. The rule allows a school to recruit up to 30 new football players a year, as long as it does not exceed a total of 95 scholarships. So unless a coach cuts a player or two and takes away their scholarships, chances are he will take less than the maximum.

Nebraska's Tom Osborne signed only 24. Michigan State's Darryl Rogers 20 and UCLA's Terry Donahue 23 this year. Devine said he hasn't taken 30 in his five years at Notre Dame because "it's not our philosophy to cut people and we have very little attrition. So we stay at 95 by not taking 30."

Akers: "The (30-95) limitation has brought the top teams down, not the poor teams up. It's the bare minimum to keep a good program. But one of these days it will be 10, not 30, and we'll start recruiting poorer stu-keeps fewer than 95 (he has 91 now) on scholarship to remain flexible. "We'll use them for walk-ons or JC transfers," he said.

Walkeons still make the team in some places, especially in a state that has only one major university, like Nebraska. Osborne said he has had good luck with uninvited athletes. Why does a school need 95 on scholarship when only 22 can play and 50 seems to be enough? "We need a resource pool from someplace to keep filling in," Rogers said. "If a kid doesn't have a scholarship, he has no incentive.' Not all coaches are unhappy with the 30-95 restriction. George Welsh of

Navy is one. The academy is not a grant-in-aid school and he said the reduction in scholarships enables him to recruit more players. Darrell Mudra is another. He coaches at a small college, Eastern Illinois. The 30 limit, he said, means a lot more good players will end up at Division II

BUT AT the major schools coaches view the restrictions as a major crisis. Devine said Notre Dame has virtually no spring practice because he doesn't have enough players. "I didn't take all our 20 days last year, but we'll try to play a practice game this year," he said.

LSU's McLendon said he wouldn't play a spring game and UCLA's Donahue said spring practice today ain't what it used to be. "We practice in shorts and there's no hitting," he said. "It's not like the old days."

McLendon: "It's hard to encourage young coaches to get into the game because of all the limitations we place on them.'

One of the limitations the NCAA insists upon, of course, is for a coach to follow the rules. "Coaches, if given enough time, will foul up anything," Devine said in a canidid moment. "Limitations were imposed because schools and coaches broke the rules. We were allowed 90 players and School X took 98. I know who School X was; I was around. Some coach screwed it up. The majority of coaches don't cheat, Akers said, but the Texas coach also said some schools make outrageous inducments to athletes and dirty tricks are not uncommon

among coaches. The best recruiting, Akers thinks, is done by talking to the player and his mother "although you have to get the attention of all the family." But mothers seem to be the target of most coaches, rather than the men of the

SOME COACHES play dirty tricks, Akers said, frequently by sending telegrams or letters to a player or his family to create doubt. A few years ago, for example, Akers was recruiting a quarterback named Donnie Little. "We never suggested he would be anything but a quarterback," the coach said, "but he received a letter telling him we would turn him into an outstanding defensive back. It was a well-written letter - but we didn't send it." Little went to Texas - as a quarterback.

Akers said recruiting is personal. "It's a one-on-one thing in most cases. You must correctly judge values so you can avoid personality conflicts."

COACHES RUN into all sorts of problems. Notre Dame's Devine said he once went to a home of an athlete in Southern California and, "the minute I arrived I knew why I was there. The parents wanted to say their son was recruited by the coach of Notre Dame.

Strangely, Notre Dame recruits successfully in what Devine calls "little pockets" around the country. Last year, for example, he got 13 from the Cincinnati area. He also has good luck in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, the Northwest and Dallas. "But we come in a close second on just about every kid we recruit in Florida," he

Major league baseball locker rooms are raucous, bawdy, crowded and sweaty. They are possibly the most uncomfortable places for journalists to interview athletes.

NHL President John Ziegler has been hearing "ifs" since discussion began years ago.

"People are saying 'Yes, provided " said Ziegler. "We'll have to find out now what they mean. We'll have to see what the debate entails.'

It is certain to entail extensive discussion on the format of the draft which will stock the incoming franchises. The Oilers, Nordiques, Jets and New England Whalers would be treated as expansion teams, and the complicated manner through which they would populate their rosters has sparked controversy.

"How idiotic it is for us to say we're going to take their players away!" said Toronto owner Harold Ballard, noting the incoming clubs would be allowed to protect only two skaters and two goaltenders from their current rosters for the draft. "I don't want them coming into Maple Leaf Gardens with some crummy lineup that nobody's going to want to

Gullikson, ranked 53rd in national standings, failed to get past the first round five straight times before getting into the quarter-final match against Connors

The left-handed pro from Lacrosse, Wis., said beating Connors was the biggest victory of his life.

"I beat (Bjorn) Borg last year in a $50,000 tournament in Miami, but this is a better tournament," he said. "Connors has beaten me four times in a row in straight sets.'

"I had a history of getting ahead in the third set and losing," Gullikson said. "Tonight, I concentrated wholly on each point. If I had thought about being ahead of Jimmy Connors, I would have choked.' He said that Connors had always managed to handle his serve in past matches, causing him to bear down even more.

"I took more pace off of the first serve and used more top spin. That way, I got a higher percentage of serves in, and I didn't miss many volleys," he said.

Phillies' Wright hears 'pop' in pitching arm over the Kansas City Royals. Rusty League East champs if their hitters

By The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Phillies haven't been able to find the pitcher they want but they sure know how to lose the ones they've got.

The Phillies seem to have everything a baseball team could want except a sound and deep pitching rotation. Steve Carlton had shoulder problems a year ago, Dick Ruthven has had a touch of bursitis in his elbow this spring and, of course, there was Larry Christenson's broken collarbone in a bicycle mishap.

While Christenson's collarbone snapped and Carlton and Ruthven have had some shoulder-and-elbow crackling, the ulna bone in rookie Jim Wright's pitching arm went "pop!" during an exhibition game Wednesday between the 'B' squads of the Phillies' and the St. Louis Cardinals.

The 6-foot-6, 24-year-old righthander, one of the best prospects in the Phils' system and a candidate for a starting job, suffered a broken bone in his arm and Dr. Phillip J. Marone, the club physician, said he would not be able to pitch this year.

Wright, who hurt his arm in 1977 and was limited to five appearances in the minors last year before undergoing surgery, had pitched 22-3 innings when he heard the bone crack as St. Louis outfielder Tom Grieve

"It was right on the spot they operated on, or right above," Wright said with tears in his eyes and his arm in a cast from the wrist to above the elbow. "As soon as I heard that loud pop I knew in my heart that something was broken.

Earlier in the week, Manager Danny Ozark said he planned to keep Wright with the Phillies...provided he remained in good health.

"I'll be back next year," Wright said. "I'll go back home and join my family. It was just something I had no control over. I'm a believer in the good Lord. I'll keep my faith. I won't

However, the Phillies may have enough pitching to repeat as National keep bombing. The 'A' squad ham-mered the Texas Rangers 10-4 Wednesday. Ruthven pitched three scoreless innings and Mike Schmidt hit two home runs, Greg Luzinski delivered two singles and a triple, Hebner drove in two runs with a single and double and rookie John Poff homered. Pete Rose, 2-for-26 this spring, collected his first RBI with a fifth-inning single.

Elsewhere, Don Sutton, who was fined earlier in the day by Manager Tom Lasorda, allowed two runs over the final six innings as the Los Angeles Dodgers defeated the New York Mets 7-5. Lasorda fined Sutton an undisclosed amount because the pitcher did not accompany the team from Vero Beach to St. Petersburg, Fla., and arrived late. Steve Garvey and Dusty Baker homered for the GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) - Duane Thomas, the running back whose tryout with the Green Bay Packers last fall touched off a storm of controversy, has signed with the National Football League club, the Packers announced Wednesday.

'You can't expect to come back from that long a layoff and be sharp. You have to work at it after that long a lavoff.

"I've worked at it the last few weeks. I'm still working at it. I feel confident that if I continue to work, if I don't let myself get uptight about not winning every tournament I play, I'll play some good golf. And I'll play some good golf soon.

"Actually, I'm striking the ball pretty well. I'm not scoring. I'm really playing better now than I was at this time last year. But last year I was scoring. I came into this tournament having finished second, won and second. I come into this one having shot

"Last year I'm standing on the first tee wondering if I was going to shoot 66, 67 or 68. Now I'm standing on the tee wondering if I'm going to shoot 73, 74 or 75. That's not a good situation. 'But it'll come around.

"I'm getting sick and tired of not playing well and sitting here and explaining why I'm not playing well."

Nicklaus, off to the poorest start of his life, made the comments before teeing off today as the defending champion in the prestigious Tournament Players Championship, his fifth event of the year. He hasn't yet finished in the top 10 and there has been published speculation his long absence from golf and his announced cut-back in schedule may signal the end of his long reign as the game's premier performer.

"There will come a time when I can't produce," he said. "It happens to all of us. But that time is some distance in the future."

King has respect for girl

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) - If you were on center court at Wimbledon, behind 1-5 and 30-40 in the final set and could select one tennis player to try to battle you out of the jam, whom would

"Billie Jean King," said France's Francoise Durr without a moment's hesitation. "Chris Evert is steadiest but Billie Jean is toughest in a tight spot.."

"I agree," added Rosie Casals, Billie Jean's longtime doubles partner. "No one is better at turning a match around on a single shot."

"I would have to pick Billie Jean at her best," said Martina Navratilova. "Consistently, Chris is hardest to beat but for one occasion, one big match, one crucial point, yes, it would have to be Billie Jean."

Chris Evert and her friends were lolling around Madison Square Garden, awaiting their turns in the $275,-000 Avon Championships, and the talk naturally turned to tennis, with a few detours involving love and marriage, slumps and the game's fierce new tigresses.

It's now one of the best shows in sports - the ladies' tour. The competitors are attractive, bright, personable. They have a splendid organization. When they elect to put on a show - unlike the men's tour, which is fragmented by selfishness and inflated egos - all the stars show up. Fans who buy tickets to see Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert see Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert, with their full supporting cast. No AWOLs as in the case of the rich Grand Prix Masters this winter when Bjorn Borg, Guillermo Vilas and Vitas Gerulaitis all chose to ignore Chris Evert, the No. 1 women's player in the world for the last five years, is here, intent on defending her position despite one of the biggest distractions that can afflict a lady an impending marriage. Sometime in the next few weeks the court princess from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will take her prince - young John Lloyd of England.

"The trouble with me, I wake up happy every morning," Chris said, attempting to explain her inexplicable loss of three matches so far this season when as many as three losses a year have been rare. "I play better when I wake up tense and edgy, when I am mad at the world."

Chris was beaten in two quick sets last week by Britain's diminutive Sue Barker, who paradoxically had to fall out of love to regain her winning form. She had been engaged to Syd Ball, an Australian player. "I wasn't fighting on the court any more," Sue explained. "Our engagement just didn't work out. Now I haven't missed a day of practice in 10 weeks."

Sue is just one of the tough new challengers ready to grab the crown when Chris slackens her grip. Dianne Fromholtz is a formidable left-hander out of Australia. Greer Stevens is a pig-tailed battler from South Africa. Teenagers Tracy Austin and Pam Shriver have beaten the best. Billie Jean, the court bulldog who has won six Wimbledons, now at 35 and with two fragile knees, is more spectator than competitor.

"I'm phasing myself out," she said. "There are too many good players around now. It's getting tougher and Billie Jean left her mark. "No matter how far down you got her, you never could be sure of beating her." said Rosie. "She might make one shot and suddenly catch fire. She is very emotional - up and down. Chris is not as flashy. She is more level, cold and consistent."

beat her mind," added Francoise. "She was prepared mentally to stay on the court all day. She gave 125 percent effort. Chris could be depended upon to maintain a higher level. She might never get as high as Billie Jean nor as low.

"To beat Billie Jean, you had to

"Chris is a machine, she rarely varies."

Women's tennis remains largely a Chris and Martina show. Martina has beaten her rival in two of their three meetings this year but Chris has an overall edge over the strong, lefthanded Czech defector.

"We both enjoy playing each other," said Chris. "It's a challenge. We realize every time we meet, No.1 is on the line."

Three Rivers pulls big upset

HUTCHINSON, Kan. (AP) - Robert Kirby pumped in a field goal with 15 seconds left to break a 64-64 tie and Three Rivers, Mo., went on to upset top-ranked Westchester, N.Y., 68-64, in National Junior College Tournament first-round action Wednesday.

In games later Wednesday, Niagara faced Willmar, Minn., Brevard, N.C., met Dixie, Utah, and Mercer County, N.J. squared off against Nebraska Western.

In first-round action Wednesday, Brevard, Fla., slipped past Belleville, Ill., 81-75, with Bobby Ford leading two other Brevard players in double figures. Brevard's 56 percent shooting from the field was led by Ford's 21 points, Steve Swank with 20 and Ruben Cotton with 15. Keith Lewis was high for Belleville with 26, but his squad could do no better than 35 percent from the Kirby's bucket pulled Three Rivers ahead 66-64. Three Rivers managed a steal on Westchester's trip down the court and capped it with a dunk by Mark Guethle as the last second ticked off.

Three Rivers, now 34-3, led most of the game and Marvin McCrary pumped in 19 points. Westchester, 33-3, was led by Felix Tertulien with 22 points on 10 of 12 shots from the

Nastase is bad again

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Doug Laing, the umpire who kicked Ilie Nastase out of the $175,000 New Orleans Tennis Festival for repeated obscene gestures Tuesday night, withdrew from the tournament on Wednesday. No reason was given for Laing's withdrawal.

Laing, the head teaching pro at a Mobile, Ala., country club, first penalized Nastase Tuesday night for kicking the ball, then assessed a game penalty for an obscne gesture. Then, two sets later, he booted the Romanian star out of the match with Bob Lutz. Lutz got the victory 7-6, 3-6, 15-30, with a notation that the match was defaulted at that point.

Nastase said Laing was too strict, but Grand Prix umpire Dick Roberson backed Laing's call, saying he had followed the three-step procedure in calling a disqualification. "The chair umpire was simply enforcing the rule," said Roberson, supervisor of the Grand Prix of Tennis event. "Nastase knows that the first step is a point penalty; the next step is a game penalty, and the next step is a default." Nastase's first run-in with the officials came in the third game of the first set. He double-faulted and kicked the ball, and Lang awarded the point to Bob Nastase — down 1-3 and obviously upset — gestured moments later and Lang awarded the game to Lutz, putting Nastase down 1-4. He went on to lose the set 7-6. Nastase won the second set 6-3.

In the fourth game of the third set, Nastase was leading 3-1 and in front 30-15 when he made another gesture and was disqualified.

"I didn't give it to anybody. I gave it to myself," Nastase said.

"They were too strict with me," he said. "They defaulted me too fast. The guys are not flexible, especially with me.

"A Borg or a Connors could do this and they wouldn't have to default," Nastase said. "If you're No. 1 or No. 2, you can do anything you want and they won't default you. I understand that. When I was No. 1 they wouldn't default me.

Transportation head asks for new vehicles

WASHINGTON (AP) - With energy experts in and out of government agreeing that coping with gasoline shortages soon will be a way of life for American motorists, Transportation Secretary Brock Adams is renewing his call for the U.S. auto industry to re-invent the car.

"We have to have a basic breakthrough in the next seven years, technologically, if the American motorist is to keep the kind of mobility he now has," Adams told reporters Wednesday.

Adams said he has seen little response since challenging Detroit automakers last December to turn to new materials and approaches to produce a car that would get 50 miles per gallon of gasoline. However, he is going ahead with plans for top-level officials from government and the auto industry to meet in Washington in the next couple of months to discuss the situation. Adams said he disagrees with the domestic automakers' contention that small, fuel-efficient cars won't sell. "My position is that by the time they get firmshed making it - and it takes them at least five years to get anything changed up there - it's going to be marketable," said Adams. He said he is convinced the oil situation is not going to get better and 'I to get concerned. Adams' views on gasoline shortages were reinforced Wednesday by a new CIA study, government energy officials and executives from two think the American public is starting major oil companies. The CIA study, parts of which were made public by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., concluded that low oil stocks. in the United States "will inevitably lead to increased rationing of supplies by oil companies, higher prices and curtailed economic growth.' The CIA predicted that scenario

OIL & GAS

'even with high levels of production in Saudi Arabia and elsewhere" to partially offset a curtailment of Iranian oil available for export.

A separate study released Wednesday by the Treasury Department concluded that the threat to U.S. national security from this country's growing dependence on foreign oil is "greater now than at any time in the past." It based that assessment on the ity of an actual disruption of foreign oil supplies as well as the erosion of the U.S. dollar stemming from a large volume of imports.

Herbert I. Goodman, president of Gulf Oil Corp.'s trading and transportation subsidiary, told the Senate Energy Committee Wednesday in prepared testimony that even before the shutdown of oil production in Iran there was a budding shortage of the type of oil suitable for refining into gasoline and aviation fuel.

"And therein lie the seeds of the next real oil crisis: a scarcity of light crude oils, resulting in a scarcity of gasoline, aviation fuel ... and the inevitable spiraling prices for all these commodities.

Robert N. Dolph, president of Exxon International, told the committee there is the possibility of major heating oil shortages next winter because the loss of Iranian oil has left oil companies unable to build a stockpile as they normally do at this time of year.

Assistant Energy Secretary Harry E. Bergold Jr., questioned by the committee, agreed that serious shortages - particularly of heating oil are possible.

He said President Carter will lay out possible ways to deal with the problem in an energy policy speech to the nation March 29.

Meanwhile, a new Associated Press-NBC News poll indicates the public's ratings of Carter's work on political climate as well and the government now respects the rights of opposition parties. He added that the real test will come in the congressional elections July 1: He said that if any of the handful of tiny leftist parties achieve any significant victories that would be evidence of improvement. A spokesman for the Popular Socialist Party said he agrees with this view. The membership of both parties is not accurately known. The Commu-murder and bank robbery," he said. Mrs. Ibarra de Piedra said she disagrees, adding that her National Committee's records show that about 300 political prisoners were passed over by the amnesty bill and are still in jail. She claimed that she herself — a resident of the northern city of Monterrey - is under constant surveillance and that often two or three men sit in a car without registration plates outside her home. "The internal politics of the country are very different from the face it presents to the world," she said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. She claimed many of the prisoners are in Military Camp No. 1 on the outskirts of Mexico

A RECENTLY RELEASED International League of Human Rights report dated last May listed 301 persons missing in Mexico and accused the government of condoning illegal arrests, torture, secret jails, the existence of secret police forces and the harassment of families of political Attorney General Oscar Flores Sanchez refuted the accusations at a recent news conference and said of the 314 persons listed as missing since 1971 and investigation by his office showed 154 had died in shootouts with military troops or police, 89 were fugitives, 26 had no criminal record and the rest were either in jail or died from other causes. "Tortures are crazy and don't accomplish anything," he said. "Just like anywhere else, there are bad policemen... "The government doesn't have to petitions for official certification repeatedly went ignored. The political reform bill passed by Congress almost at the same time as the amnesty law broke the PRI's power monopoly. Beginning with the House elections July 1, parties by law can obtain official registration and field their own candidates provided they have a certified membership of 60,000 in each of the country's 32 electoral districts. CONGRESS' CHAMBER of Deputies has been enlarged from 237 to 400 seats - with 100 seats to be apportioned to minority groups through proportional representation. The PRI currently holds 195 of the 237 seats in the Chamber and all but one of 64 in the Senate, which is renewed every six years. An official who requested anonymiaty but who is close to Lopez Portillo said the purpose of the two laws is to provide a legal outlet for dissidents in Mexico and take the wind out of the sails of elements who would otherwise be prone to violence. "We have reduced anti-social pressures. We have definitely reduced the possibility of violence in the future," the official added.

'Angie' comfy in TV 'hammock'

Boys don't use their training after graduation

St. Thomas Choir School trains boy sopranos, although rather few graduate. Last year, only three members of a 14-member graduating class could

Which is no reflection on the school, or on the boys, but on the brief life of a chorister. Boys become men, and voices change.

"When I see those mustaches sprout, I think, 'Oh dear God, all the notes, all the music that kid knows is just down the drain," says Gerre Hancock, the master of the choir. "I can't stand the thought of weeks and months and years of work being lost when those mustaches appear.

"But, wouldn't it be dreadful ifvoices didn't change?'

The choir school, which celebrates its 60th anniversary this month, is the only residential choir school in the United States. Its 50 students, in grades 5-8, sing in as many six services at week at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in midtown Manhattan.

The choir school traces its roots to the Middle Ages, when boys were first added to choirs of monks. In an era of sexual equality, a choir boys seems an anomaly.

But Hancock says this male-only policy has sound musical roots.

"A boy's prepubescent voice has a unique sound - straight, smooth, even. It has a much wider vocal range than an adult woman," he says. "In girls the same age, the voice is much less mature."

Prospective students must convince Hancock that they have "a good ear, a good voice, a certain intelligence." Applicants are also tested for intelligence and maturity.

Competition is keen, with three to five applicants for every place. Tuition is $2,500 a year, although affluent parents often contribute more, and in cases of need, the tuition is cut.

"Elite' is a lousy word applied to our kids, because we have familes from welfare on up," says Gordon Clem, the headmaster. "They are bright kids, of necessity, because they have so much music to learn.'

One rope of the hammock is hitched to "Mork and Mindy," among the medium's top-rated shows, and the other to "Barney Miller." "Angie" has finished consistently among the 10 top-rated shows.

It doesn't hurt, either, that "Angie" was created by the same people who came up with the Man from Ork, Garry Marshall and Dale McRaven. Marshall also created "Happy Days" and "Laverne & Shirley.

Its favored position in the ratings will give "Angie" time to develop and find an audience on its own, a luxury that's denied to the new comedies on NBC and CBS. They don't have many posts to hitch the hammock to.

During a break in rehearsal at Paramount Studios, where the show is filmed before an audience, Miss Pescow said she was first offered "Angie" about eight months ago, just after she'd appeared as love-smitten Annett in the smash movie "Saturday Night Fever."

"Garry Marshall called me about the show," she recalled. "Surprisingly, he had not seen my work before 'Saturday Night Fever.' So even though it was a dramatic role, Garry has an eye for people's work and can tell how you would do in other, like

It's not really her first series. She spent four months on the ABC soap opera "One Life to Live."

All of her experience had been on the stage, as in the national tour of 'Ah, Wilderness" after graduation from the American Academy of Dra-

"I took a course in camera and soap opera techniques," she said. "One of my teachers was the casting director for 'One Life to Live' and she asked me to come in. I didn't get the role, but they signed me as the hat check girl. Every time they had a restaurant scene I got a few lines.'

She never got a contract for the soap opera, which was lucky, because it left her free to accept the part in 'Saturday Night Fever." Miss Pescow spent two years of intense study to lose her Brooklyn accent — then had to reacquire it for "Fever."

For premiere in New York, she rented a limousine and took her family. Her grandfather, Jack Goldress, 82, was her date.

'Network' preempts shows

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) - TV viewers in Sacramento, Calif., might be wondering about that extravagant NBC "Supertrain"; that is, they might be wondering why they've never seen it on their local NBC sta-

Viewers in Boston might be wondering why "The Incredible Hulk" suddenly disappeared from their local CBS outlet and then, just as suddenly, reappeared. Similar mysteries might have stirred the curiosities of viewers in Milwaukee, Denver, Cleveland and other cities

The mysteries are created by a fourth network, the so-called "ad hoc network," run by Mobil Oil. It's not really a network, just a cheaper way of television advertising that has had the curious side-effect of prompting some network-affiliated local stations to dump a network program in favor of the Mobil Oil show.

Mobil's current offering is "Edward the King," which runs on Wednesday nights in most towns in the U.S. It's part of the "Mobil Showcase" series, started by the oil company three years ago when it struck someone that TV advertising would be cheaper if the advertiser just skipped past the network and went' straight to the local stations with a program.

Independent local stations - usually stuck with reruns, sports and movies in prime time - find the Mobil plan a relatively cheap way to get fine original programming that can compete with network programming. But some network affiliates have begun to bite the Mobil bait too, much to the vexation of the networks.

In Sacramento, for example, NBC affiliate KCRA has been doing quite well with "Edward the King" in place of NBC's "Supertrain."

Composer disavows music's tag

By JOSEPH McLELLAN The Washington Post

There is no such thing as electronic music," says Morton Subotnick, who composes electronic music. "If I used a pencil to write a novel, would you call me a pencil artist - or a typewriter artist if I used a ty-

He has a point, perhaps (although we do talk about "violin music" or 'piano music"): "there is such a thing as music; there are various ways of producing sounds; there are electronics and violins, and there are people who choose to be artists and arrange these sounds in meaningful forms.

But you have to have a name for what Subotnick does, perhaps more successfully than anyone else on the scene, and for lack of a better term, he also reluctantly calls it electronic music.

What Subotnick has is the ultimate musical instrument, the result of a shotgun wedding between art and science. In his field, slide rules and graph paper and little black boxes with wires become a composer's tools, and the composer's status approaches that of a god.

No longer need he write down notes on paper and wonder whether the effect will be spoiled in performance by the clarinetist's temperament, the violinist's intonation. He can reach into an unfathomable grab-bag of available sounds, pick out the exact whoosh, bleep, splat or even melody he may want, fix it on tape, proofread and correct it, and play it back for himself or an audience without relying on any middlemen.

GODS GET RESTLESS; perfection palls. After nearly 20 years of working primarily with pure electronics, of having his music played not only on records and in concert halls but in the Electric Circus and Creative Playthings and the elevators of a Manhattan office building, Subotnick is slipping the human element back into his

For the past six years, he has been producing a series of electronic works in which the central metaphor is that of butterflies - a good, workable image for a new musical medium that is still emerging from a sort of cocoon. In a recent lecture-concert at the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn Museum, he played what he called "my last butterfly," a brilliant collage of sounds that swept around the concert hall, bounding from speaker to speaker like an avalanche of Ping-Pong balls, working an intricate balance and counterpoint between two germinal motifs and finally fluttering off like - yes, like a sky full of butter-

It was as complex and, in its way as masterful as a Bach fugue, and it showed the composer at the moment of his career when he has completely mastered his medium and begins to look elsewhere for new challenges. Subotnick has begun working on what he calls "ghost music."

"Ghost music" is a little closer to what the traditionalist might call simply "music"; one of its distinctive qualities is that it involves real human beings sanding up there in front of the audience and using voice, clarinet or piano to make sounds. The live music interacts with tracks that the composer has set down on tape and, again, that is hardly new. Edgard Varese taped electronic inserts to play along with the orchestra in his "Deserts" as early as 1953; Mario Davidovsky has won a Pulitzer for one of his "synchronisms" in which the piano interacts with a tape, and Luciano Berio has worked extensively on blending voices and tape. But the standard live-and-tape composition is like an old-fashioned duet or concerto, a sort of dialogue between electronics and flesh and blood; in ghost music, the live sound becomes electronic. In some compositions, the voice is unheard, but it goes into the amplifier and modifies the sound that is coming off the tape. In others, the messages imprinted on the tape are unheard, but they modify the sound coming from the voice or instrument.

Electronic sounds have been mingled with live sound in classical music at least since Ottorino Respighi called for a recorded nightingale's song to be played (which may look dry on paper but can sound electrifying in performance) brings a new element into the old connection. It is not the first time Subotnick has broken new ground in the field. His "Silver Apples of the Moon," commissioned for Nonesuch Records in 1967, was the first electronic composition written specifically for records (which are this music's natural medium), and also the first electronic music to reach the classical top 10.

"THEY CAME AND offered me $500 to compose it,'. Subotnick recalls, "and I told them I wasn't interested; I didn't want to be recorded on some small label that I had never heard of. Then I went home and looked at my record collection and I noticed that it was full of Nonesuch records; I wanted to call them back and tell them I had changed my mind. but I didn't know how to reach them; I didn't know at the time that Nonesuch was a subsidiary of Elektra. Fortunately, they came back the next day and offered me $1,000. The record was on Billboard's list of the 10 classical best sellers for three months, and I would look at the list and begin planning my trip around the world. When my first royalty check arrived, months later, it was for $1,500, and I learned something about classical best sellers, but I didn't make my trip around the electronic music, a medium that was already rising fast. By the mid-'70s, according to an estimate in John Vinton's "Dictionary of Contemporary Music," more than 10,000 electronic compositions had been produced "by more than 2,000 composers using equipment that includes over 500 permanent electronic music studios not used for other purposes." Electronic music has been used in films, in radio and TV commercials, in a rudimentary form by every rock group and with considerably subtlety by some. Walter Carlos has translated Bach into electronic sounds, and an electronic Beethoven dominated the soundtrack of "A Clockwork Orange." The medium has come a long way since Respighi's nightingale, and its future potential seems unlimited.

He did, however, give a boost to

So why go back to human performers? A detached observer, looking at Subotnick's work in the context of what is happening generally in music, may see it as part of a trend. Sometimes it is called neoromanticism or neoimpressionism; whatever the name, it can be seen most simply as a welcome humanization of serious music. Composer Elie Siegmeister. whose orientation is basically traditional, has conjectured that music was in a state of traumatic shock after World War II; composers became afraid of emotion, and many produced works that sounded (sometimes correctly) as though they had been composed by mathematical for-

But in recent years, there have been signs of change everywhere. Wild, exotic colors intrude on the that once characterized Stockhausen's work; Berio takes his listeners on excursions into riotous wit and deep feeling; Wuorinen begins to make serial music sound pretty; Rochberg steps, unabashed, into warm, romantic sentiment, and Crumb weaves his wisps of sound into patterns of misty mysticism Subotnick can explain the attraction of human performers in one word: "unpredictableness," but then he is quick to elaborate. His explanation boils down to the idea that a purely electronic work is frozen in its definitive form, but one that has human performers has a chance to go on growing.

The first stage of composing, he says, is an idea, a vague impulse. Then, in the second stage, getting it down on paper, a composer becomes a critic of his own work, asking "What did I mean by that?" When he figures out what he meant and gets it down, that ends the process in a composition without performers, but "in instrumental music you have another person asking, 'What did he mean by that?' and when the piece is performed in public, you get another view with the audience coming in and saying, 'I wonder what he meant by that.' Large-scale pieces need this kind of exposure to other views. Certain pieces of music are better after three of hearts on the fourth trump. going through two or three different performers.

SUBOTNICK PAUSED A moment, looking thoughtful. "There are architects and there are builders. You wouldn't want to live in a house that was built by an architect."

If purely electronic music can be like "a house built by an architect," it also can be like the smallest and most intimate forms of art - a line drawing, an etching. Subotnick calls purely electronic music "studio art" and adds that "for me, it is very personal; orchestral music is public art, like a

"Traditionally," he adds, "most painters have been studio artists, but in the mid-20th century, many painters became performing artists — at the same time that most composers and make lots of were able to become studio artists."

Now, Subotnick feels, he is ready to bring his music out of the studio back into the performing arts, where it has Vaughn, the jazz humbeen through virtually all its history. mer. this is a choice never faced by a composer before this generation.

He is not abandoning studio compositions, but he has reached a level of expertise where they no longer need to absorb so much of his time and energy. "In the beginning," he says, "it would take me a year or even two to do things in the studio that I can do speaks. The veteran now in four weeks. So. I will probably be producing studio works as often as career. He recommend-I used to, but I will have time to do a lot of other things as well."

Egrets raise some brows

By GORDON GRANT The Los Angeles Times

IRVINE, Calif. - The bird books describe egrets as being gregarious. In fact, one text says, gregariousness - the inclination to associate with others of one's kind - is their outstanding feature.

It's not unusual for many species of nature's creatures to hang around "with their own kind" although there are many others who play the solitary

But for a flock of wild egrets to carry their togetherness over to a close association with man, in one of man's worst environments - a freeway interchange - is enough to raise some Audubon

Yet, in recent weeks, a score or more of cattle egrets - white-plumed, long-necked, long-legged and long-billed - have chosen to feed in a patch of grass hemmed in closely on all sides by roaring The site is at the Jamboree Boulevard overpass of the San Diego Freeway in Irvine, Calif., about 32 miles southeast of downtown Los Angeles. The grass, made lush by rains, is bordered by the onramp and offramp cloverleafs. This means that cars and trucks generally traveling at high speeds pass within a few feet of the birds. But they seem unruffled. "I have no idea why they would choose a place like that," said Gordon Marsh, director of the Museum of Systematic Biology at the University of California

"We do know that the population of cattle egrets seems to be growing. Cattle egrets, as their name implies, usually congregate among herds of cattle, snapping up the bugs and small frogs or lizards that expose themselves when trying to get out of the way of bovine hooves.

"Any bug that jumps away from a hoof when an egret is around has made a fatal mistake," Marsh Greg Nuessly, a laboratory assistant at the museum, said that cattle egrets were first seen the Irvine area in 1964, that they are known to migrate to some extent and that more and more of them are showing up here each year.

The birds stand about 20 inches tall and have wingspreads of up to 4 feet.

The flock that feeds by the freeway, incidentally, seems to do so mostly during the morning rush hour. When traffic eases off after midmorning, the birds fly to nearby but more sequestered fields.

Like white-tailed kites and other hawks, whose habitats are being taken over by housing developments, these egrets have turned to the "open spaces" along the freeways - seemingly aware that men do not tread there.

Singer keeps one foot in classroom

By MARIAN FOX

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) - When he isn't singing Mississippi Delta blues in a local bistro, you might find Sid Selvidge at the zoo teaching an orangutan sign language or in a college classroom describing Mbuti Pygmies.

"I've got one foot in the ivory tower and one foot in the streets," Selvidge says. "That's the way I like to maintain my life."

Selvidge, 35, is a blues musician who sunlights as an anthropology instructor at Southwestern at Memphis, a private college. He once felt drawn between the books and the blues "It's very schizophrenic. I've been trying very hard over the years to figure out how I was going to balance academia and the artistic life.'

About six years ago, about to write his doctoral dissertation, Selvidge decided he'd rather sing the blues. "I had to make a choice between fulltime teaching or music. The music was getting neglected."

For Selvidge, a relaxed, witty man, married and the father of five, the choice was a natural.

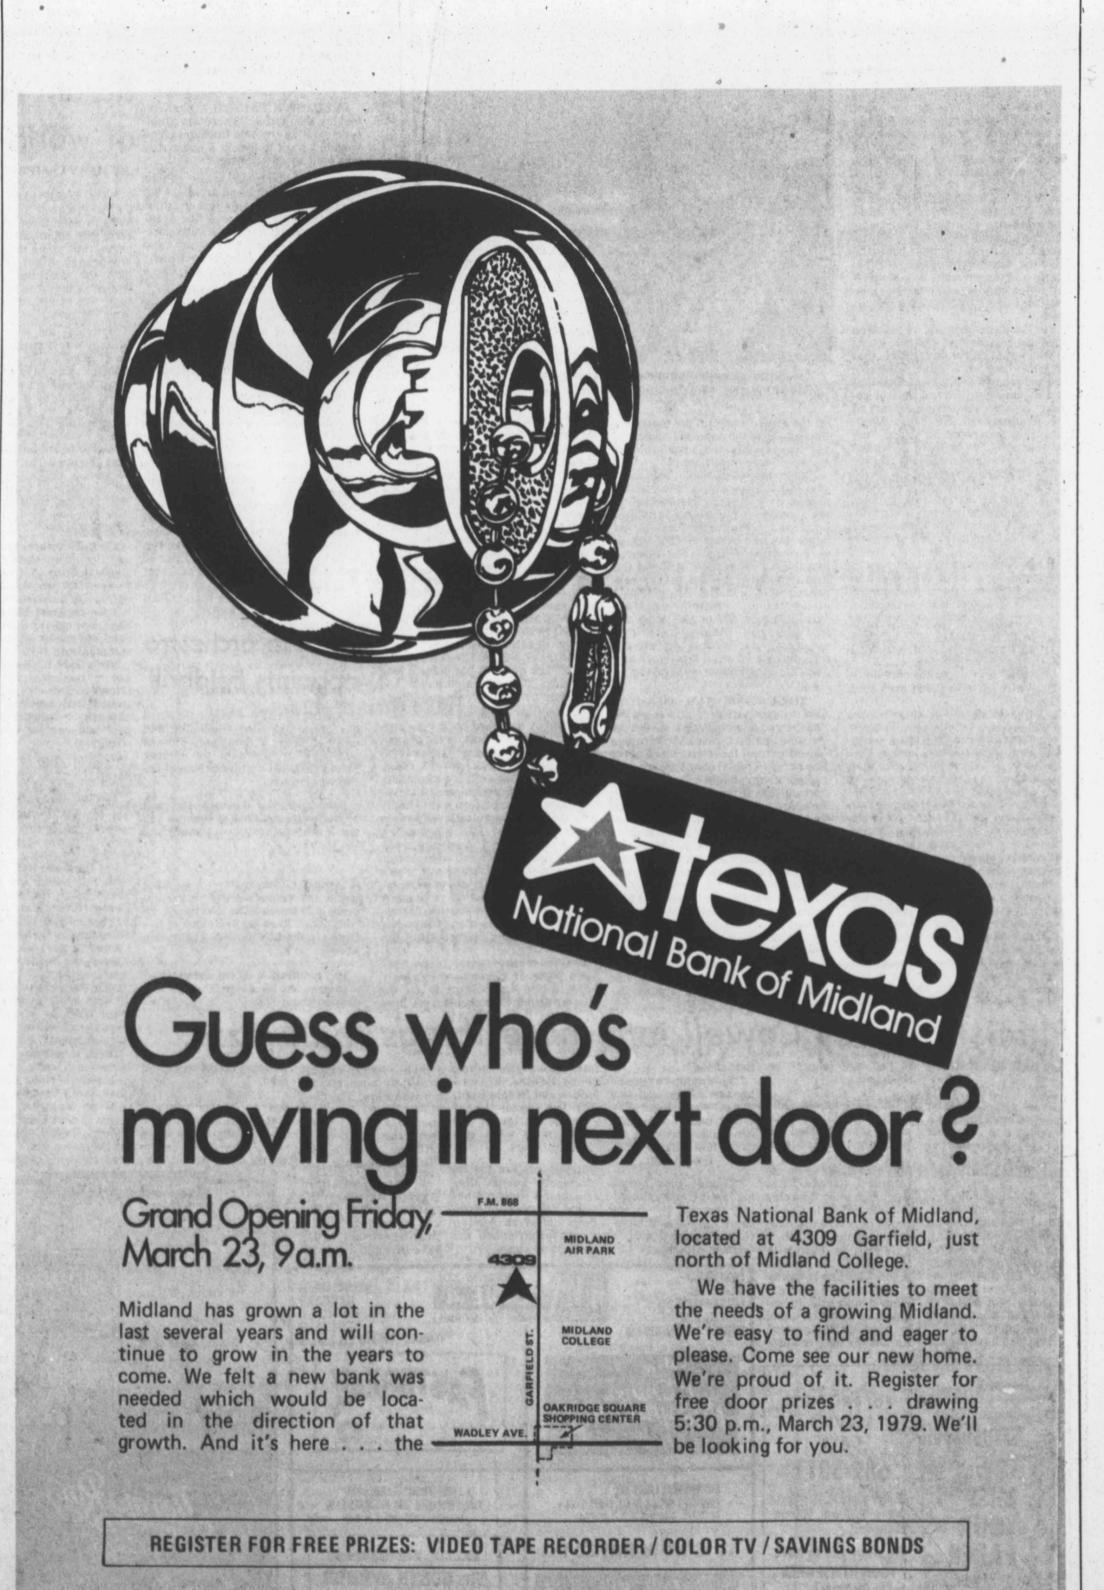

"I crawled on the stage when I was 6 years old in elementary school in Greenville, Miss., and played 'Ole Black Joe' on a harmonica. I loved it. Certain people like to get up in front of other people ... and I'm one of them.'

Still his interest in anthropology persisted, and, between recording himself and Alex Childress, former lead singer of the Box Tops, on his own Peabody label, Selvidge teaches six hours a week.
"I'm teaching at Southwestern for an academic base, to do research projects I'm interested in," he says. "And teaching is similar to performing. You've got a body of information you've got to get across so people like it and want to come back."

Although he's had some national exposure, the name Sid Selvidge is not universally known. He'd like it that way, but he wants fame on his own terms and, above all, he wants his music to be fun.

Selvidge's laid-back approach is apparent when he plays with a group called "Mud Boy and the Neu-

Space shuttle Columbia lands in San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) - The American space shuttle Columbia, bolted to the back of a jumbo jet, landed here for refueling this morning after an unscheduled two-day stopover in El Paso on its way to Florida. But it was "very unlikey" the trip would continue today.

Steve Rice)

Only a two-hour refueling stop was scheduled here, but officials said just before noon that poor weather ahead probably would keep the flying tandem grounded in San Antonio at least overnight.

Security police at Kelly Air Force

Base, where the piggy-back pair of aircraft landed under cloudless skies at 10:38 CST, estimated more than 10,000 people were on hand to see the spacecraft, which is bolted atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet.

The shuttle is being flown to its launch facility in Florida.

Former astronaut Deke Slayton, commander of the cross-country mission, said the weather between San Antonio and Florida was "lousy" and that it was "very unlikely" the tandem would leave Kelly Air Force base on schedule.

"We're going to check it (the weather) and decide. Unless it improves considerably, we're not going today,' said Slayton. "We'll just have to sit tight. We're at the mercy of the weather. Nobody can control that. We'll wait until we get good enough weather to go.' Fitzhugh Fulton Jr., a civilian test pilot who is flying the jumbo jet with the Columbia on its back, said the flight from El Paso to San Antonio "was the nicest leg we've had. It was nice and smooth with clear weather all the way from El Paso."

The shuttle is on its way from California to shuttle launch facilities in Florida.

The shuttle made a two-day, unscheduled stopover at Biggs Field at Fort Bliss near El Paso because of bad weather in southern and western

The trouble-plagued flight of the orbiter started Tuesday afternoon at Edwards Air Force Base in California. The original trip was delayed from March 9 because of problems with the shuttle itself.

U.S. farmers won't be sacrificed: Kahn

WASHINGTON (AP) - In an attempt to calm fears and indecision among farmers, the administration is assuring them that they will not be sacrificed in a scramble to dampen food price increases and curb infla-

Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, says he is cooperating with the Agriculture Department in what he called "very intensive monitoring activity" on food prices to determine what is making them go higher.

"We have no quarrel with the American farmer," he said. "The anti-inflation program depends heavily on American farmers having ample incentives to expand produc-

we can solve the problems of inflation in food prices ... by imposing price controls, which are surely counterproductive, or by creating uncertainties in the minds of farmers," Kahn

Bergland, also attempting to clear away some rumors that have persisted about farm programs, outlined how he and Kahn are working together to "trace the increases in farm commodity prices from the farm gate to the grocery store" and to identify where unjustifiable increases occur. Asked what effect consumers might expect from his and Bergland's efforts, Kahn replied, "I'm not in the business of promising miracles." The sharp price increases in recent months for beef, fish, fruits and vege-

Bergland said "many rumors have been generated in the food and agriculture sector" as a result of talks between his and other agencies on the food inflation problem.

Thus, he said, the following declarations are in order:

-Wheat, corn and other feed grains from the 1978 harvest will not be permitted to enter the government's grain reserve program under which farmers hold the grain for up to three years or until prices go up enough to trigger their release.

-Soybeans will not be allowed to be grown this year on cropland set-aside from production under wheat and feed grain programs.

-The administration "will not accept any increases in commodity price supports or target prices" as some have suggested to bolster government crop guarantees to farm-

-No further changes will be made in the set-aside programs already announced for wheat and feed grains.

Kahn said he had asked Bergland to consider whether it might be wise to let farmers plant soybeans on setaside acres this year. But after conferring with Bergland, "We agreed that it would not be a desirable thing to do." he said.

New Jersey teachers settle strike at college

By The Associated Press

A strike by state college teachers in New Jersey is over and a boycott at Boston University has been averted, but teacher picket lines are still up in Minnesota, Louisiana and Washington D.C.

And, a spokesman for a Rhode Island teachers union says a strike by bus drivers may force a walkout there

The New Jersey settlement by 3,200 state college teachers, which was reached Wednesday, will cost the state at least an extra $1 million and probably will spark other state employee unions to seek similar increases, a state labor official said.

Teachers in the 65,000-pupil system voted by a 10-1 margin to ratify a new two-year pact that provides for 7 percent across-the-board salary increases each year.

Frank Mason, director of the state Office of Employee Relations and the state's chief negotiator in the dispute, said other employee unions will use the settlement as a model in their contract negotiations.

Insurance rates reduced for Midland's homes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - The State Insurance Board today ordered a 4.1 percent average statewide reduction in property insurance rates, effective July 1

Included in the board's unanimous decision was an average cut of 2.3 percent in rates for homeowners policies, the most common type of cover-

The board's decision means a $38 million reduction in total premiums for property insurance during the 12 months beginning July 1.

Despite the overall reduction in homeowners rates, the Central rating territory, which includes five of Texas' six largest cities, will have a 3.3 percent increase

The Central territory includes Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio and El Paso.

Homeowners in the Seacoast territory, which includes Houston, Beaumont, Port Arthur, Galveston, Corpus Christi and Brownsville, will enjoy a 7.5 percent drop in their rates.

In the North-Northwest territory, which includes Amarillo, Lubbock, Midland-Odessa, Abilene, Wichita Falls and San Angelo, homeowners rates will fall by 5.7 percent.

The rate decisions mean the cost of insuring a $40,000 brick veneer home will drop $26.70 in Houston, $30.67 in Corpus Christi and $29.07 in Lubbock, Wichita Falls, Amarillo, San Angelo, Abilene and Midland-Odessa.

The cost of insuring such a house in Dallas and Fort Worth would rise Other rate changes ordered by the board include:

Tenant homeowners - Seacoast down .3 percent, Central up 5.2 percent and North-Northwest down 3.7

percent. Farm and ranch owners - Seacoast down 13.5 percent, Central down 7.8 percent and North-Northwest down 10.5 percent.

Fire - statewide, dwellings down 1.9 percent, farms up 3.1 percent and "all other" up 3.8 percent. Extended coverage - Seacoast down 23.4 percent, Central down 8.5 percent and North-Northwest down 6.6 percent.

NEW YORK (AP) - A recent report warning of increased cancer danger from ordinary medical X-rays has touched off an attack by scientists who question the study's methods and conclu-The article by Dr.

Irwin D.J. Bross was published in February's American Journal of Public Health, a scientific monthly.

But the journal took the unusual step of publishing the article without "peer review," a process in which other scientists evaluate an article before it is printed.

Its editor, Dr. Alfred Yankauer an editor's note that he did so because, "Its subject matter is of great importance to the public health, yet Dr. Bross stands virtually alone in defense of his data."

The same issue carried an article rebutting Bross by two scientists at the National Cancer Institute. Drs. John Boice and Charles Land accused Bross of "incorrect statistical manipulations" that "produce estimates so imprecise as to be meaningless."

Bross, in a telephone interview, characterized their rebuttal as a 'hatchet job.'

Land and Boice, in separate interviews, accused Bross of sloppy science and "polemics."

The first national report of Bross' conclusions, carried Feb. 21 by The Associated Press, was written after an interview with Bross and without benefit of a copy of the journal or knowledge of its full contents. Hence, it omitted mention of the editor's note and rebuttal article.

The controversy surrounding Bross' article reflects the impassioned and sometimes bitter debate among scientists over whether repeated doses of low-level radiation pose a special health threat.

The debate is important both because it has the potential to slow the growth of nuclear energy and more importantly because, if critics such as Bross are correct, thousands of lives may have been lost or will be lost as the result of underestimating the dan-

At issue is whether the small but well established cancer risk from large doses of radiation exists in a proportional level at low doses as well. Scientists have traditionally assumed that it does, an assumption that has been regarded as conservative.

But perhaps a halfdozen recent studies, including the one by Bross, assert that the danger per unit of radiation actually increases at lower doses because of genetic damage to the cells.

In the journal study, Bross said this damage could express itself later as either heart disease or non-lymphatic leukemia, a blood disease.

He based his conclusion on a complex re-analysis of the X-ray history of 220 men with leukemia.

But Boice and Land said Bross failed to consider alternate explana-
