They cover everything, don't they? They do, to be sure; but only in a very general way. What we need

God wanted them to have laws.

They could not be a nation with-

In Exodus 21-23 we have a simple code which is the earliest known group of laws applying the Ten Commandments to actual conditions and situations of living. Christians are not altogether agreed about whether the laws in Ex. 21-23 (and elsewhere in the Old Testament)

The majority of Christians look at it like this: The Ten Command-

SOME of these laws, indeed, could be taken literally today. For in-means this: The number of people who say a thing is right, or is

World's Biggest Tree

While California's Big Trees (Sequoia gigantea) have no peer as a species either in bulk or age, there is a single tree that outranks even the biggest sequoia in diameter and may surpass it in age.

The botannical colossus is the Tule cypress of Santa Maria del Tule, six miles from Oaxaca in southern Mexico. It is a Taxiodium mucronatum, the same cypress as those in Chapultepec Park in Mexico City. Thousands of years old, yet still green and vigorous, the Tule tree's plump, rounded shape suggests an old oak rather than the usual slim cypress. "El Tule," as it is called, is so massive that 28 people, touching fingertips of outstretched arms, barely can encircle it.

Mount Bangbanglan is an 8,000foot peak guarding "No Man's Land" between the domains of the Kalingas, Tingians, Ifugaos and Bontoc Igorot tribes of northern Luzon. As tribal war flared recently on its forest-covered slopes, gunfire made Mount Bangbanglan's Malayan name ring true. Tattooed warriors found bullets better than bolos.
