Black, white and read...

A group of second graders at Bowie Elementary School is reading newspapers - and loving it.

While they may not be keeping up with the progress of the SALT talks or checking out the latest tornado photos, the children are getting an idea of what goes into the paper and improving their vocabularies at the same time.

For many of the charges of student teacher Denisa McBee, newspapers are a new medium.

"It gives them a chance to see there is another medium besides television," she said. Before the project began recently, many of the students in the class did not read even newspaper comics.

The second graders are the youngest group using the Newspapers in Education program sponsored by The Reporter-Telegram.

The class activities, in addition to building interest in newspapers and their contents, increases vocabularies for the sec-

While the students learn to recognize "describing words" or place, food, health or weather words to fill in the blanks, they also are getting an idea of the types of information available in newspapers and classifying parts of sentences.

For the 7- and 8-year-olds, the project also is fun.

"It's a change of pace for the kids," noted Ms. McBee, a student at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Derailments of freight and passenger trains in four states injured more than 50 persons and forced hundreds to flee their homes as dangerous chemicals

More than 40 passengers were injured Sunday near Pasco, Wash., when a 10-car Amtrak train traveling at 70 mph rolled off the rails into a 12-foot deep washout. Officials said the tracks had been undermined by irrigation water. Most of the injured sustained minor cuts and bruises, officials said. Fourteen were admitted to hospitals.

The tracks, maintained by the Burlington Northern Railway, were being Passengers said they had no warning of trouble. "There was this big crunch and we started bumping around, then we felt the train rolling off the track,' said Mark Deisen of Auburn. "There was a lot of smoke. All the injured people, we laid them out on the floor as best we could and waited for the ambulance to

The train was en route from Chicago to Seattle.

Two engines derailed and 11 passengers and crew members were injured Sunday in New York's Pennsylvania Station as an Amtrak express sideswiped a switch locomotive moving on a parallel track.

An unidentified passenger said the train "suddenly lurched forward. Some people fell in the aisle, some fell in their seats." No one was seriously injured, Hundreds fled their homes in Braddock and North Braddock, Pa., Sunday when five chemical tank cars and nine freight cars on a Contrail freight train Four of the chemical tankers contained between 10,000 and 20,000 gallons each of vinyl chloride, propylene oxide and butyl acetate, all flammable chemicals, said Conrail spokesman Gary Fulton. The fifth tank car, the only one which leaked, contained flammable propanol alcohol. A small amount escaped, authorities said, but no one was injured. The 550 residents of Sunset Bay in western New York returned to their homes Sunday, two days after 21 cars of a freight train derailed on a bridge. Two of the cars, which plunged nose down into a creek, contained poisonous vinyl chloride, but none of the potentially explosive chemical leaked

Debate may delay busy legislative calendar

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Texas senators expect to talk about a $20.8 billion state spending bill today, but there may be a delay while they settle a fuss over college construction money.

How long a delay was the big question. The House had a long calendar today and possibly faces a vote Tuesday on a proposed "floating ceiling" on home mortgage interest rates. Gov. Bill Clements has endorsed the proposal that effectively would raise the state's usury limit from 10 percent to 12 percent.

Last Thursday the debate on the college construction bill was postponed shortly after Sen. Ed Howard, D-Texarkana, laced up a borrowed pair of tennis shoes and said he was prepared to filibuster against proposed repeal of the state property tax. The assessment provides construction money for 19 state colleges but has been challenged in court as un-

Before Howard could unleash a "few hours" attack on the measure, Senators agreed to postpone further consideration of the bill until Monday

Howard wanted to list other schools among the colleges that will benefit from a constitutionally dedicated fund to replace the tax..

"How long that takes, I don't really know," he said. The fund would be drawn from general revenues and would cost the state $40 million annually beginning in 1982. It would be known as the State Higher Education Assistance Fund. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, it was the duty of Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, to present the proposed 1980-81 state budget kicked out of committee last week. It is $500 million more expensive than the House version. Until this session, Sen. A.M. Aikin Jr., D-Paris, now retired, had chaired the finance panel since 1971. Senators will resolve into a committee of the whole to discuss the budget.

Jones told colleagues last week to get their questions ready. Chairman Oscar Mauzy of the Senate Education Committee called a meeting of his panel today to vote on a public school finance bill.

"If we vote it out, hopefully we could get to it on the floor Wednesday or Thursday," Mauzy, D-Dallas, said last week. After getting the governor's endorsement on a flexible interest rate ceiling, Rep. Jerry "Nub" Donaldson claimed to have enough votes for

Congress falls behind Carter in energy poll

NEW YORK (AP) - Most Americans don't think President Carter is doing a good job handling the nation's energy problems, but they give Congress even lower marks for its work in the area, an Associated Press-NBC

The public, deeply concerned about energy matters, sees claims of energy shortages as a hoax while remaining deeply worried about the availability of power in the future.

In the poll taken April 30 and May 1, 14 percent rated Carter's efforts on energy matters excellent or good. But only 10 percent gave Congress similar ratings for its work on en-

For Carter, the remainder of his energy ratings worked out this way: 35 percent, only fair; 46 percent, poor; and 5 percent, not sure.

These figures are all but unchanged since March, despite Carter's major televised energy speech on April 5 that included the announcement of lifting price controls on domestic oil and the request for a "windfall prof-

Asked about Congress, 39 percent rated its energy work only fair and 44 percent said it was poor. Seven percent of the 1,600 adults interviewed nationwide were not sure.

Carter's overall job rating slipped slightly in this latest survey, putting him back at the lowest levels of his administration.

Twenty-six percent rated his work good or excellent versus 20 percent who said it has been poor. Fifty-two percent said his work has been only fair and 2 percent were not sure.

These figures almost precisely equal his rating in August last year, the previous low point for him. The August readings were taken prior to the triumph in Israeli-Egyptian peace negotiations at Camp David.

Behind these negative judgments on energy problem-solving is the perception that the claims of energy shortages issuing frequently from Washington are just not true. By a 54-37 margin, Americans say claims of an energy shortage now are just a hoax. The others are not sure. But in the long run, energy availability is a bigger concern with

Fifty-six percent of those interviewed by telephone said they are more worried about getting enough energy to meet their needs than they are about how much they will have to pay for it. Thirty-eight percent said they were more worried about the bill for energy than about energy supplies. Six percent were not sure. This contrasts sharply with current skepticism about claims of energy

This long-term perspective translates into a preference for solar power as the best route to energy security.

Fifty-two percent picked solar energy from a list of possible energy sources for America in the year 2000.

Coal was chosen by 21 percent, and nuclear energy by 16 percent. Only 4 percent said oil. Seven percent were not sure.

The respondents also were asked how much more a week they would be willing to pay now to finance the switch to solar and other renewable sources of energy

Nearly one in four, 24 percent, said they didn't want to pay any more. Nineteen percent said they would be willing to increase their energy spending between $1 and $10 a month.

Fourteen percent would agree to an extra $11 to $29 a month, with 12 percent willing to pay $25 or more a month extra. Thirty-one percent were

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News polls could differ from the results of interviews with all Americans with telephones because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,600 interviews, the results should vary no more than three percentage points either way simply because of sample errors. That is, there is only one chance out of 20 that the results of interviews with all American adults would vary from these results by more than 3 percent-

Begin to urge treaty, support of Palestinians

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a major speech a day after Israeli warplanes hit Palestinian targets in Lebanon, will urge the Lebanese government today to negotiate a peace treaty and propose that Arab oil states help the Palestinian refugees, local Neither proposal has any chance of being accepted.

Opening the summer session of the Knesset, the Israeli Parliament, Begin intends to call on Lebanese President Elias Sarkis to join him in a summit meeting in Israel or on neutral ground, the reports said

They said he would also call on the wealthy Arab states to allocate petrodollars to absorb and rehabilitate the Palestinians. Sarkis is in no position to accept any peace proposal from Israel since

Syria has 22,000 troops in Lebanon and would remove Syria from office. In addition, his government is not strong enough to fulfill the first condition Israel would demand, an end to Palestinian raids on Israel from bases in Lebanon. Israeli jets rained bombs and rockets Sunday on the Nahr El-Bared refugee camp, a stronghold of Dr. George Habash's radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine near the north Lebanese port of Tripoli. A spokesman for the Popular Front in Beirut said four civilians were killed and 25 others were wounded. A taxi driver who was in the area said the Israeli jets "hit a house where more than 100 persons were gathered for a wedding party." He said about 30 of the crowd were wounded, "and three or four of them The Lebanese government radio said the planes also bombed the neighboring Lebanese village of Al-Mohmara. But it said nothing about casualties An Israeli communique said the raiders' targets were bases used for training guerrillas for raids in Israel. But Popular Front spokesman Bassam Abu Sharif claimed only civilian areas in the eastern part of the camp were attacked. A report from Beirut said four planes attacked the camp while two others patrolled nearby to ward off Syrian planes. No Syrian attack was reported, and the Israeli communique said all the planes returned safely. Israeli gunboats shelled Nahr El-Bared last month after guerrillas landed on the northern Israeli coast April 22 and raided the town of Nahariya. Four Israelis and two of the three guerrillas died in the raid. Israel retaliated with four dys of air, sea and artillery attacks in which about 60 Palestinian and Lebanese were reported killed before U.N. peacekeeping forces arranged a cease-fire. In Jerusalem, meanwhile, the Israeli Cabinet issued a statement saying: "Jerusalem is the eternal, united, indivisible capital of the state of Israel. Unlike the period of the Jordanian occupation, there exists in Jerusalem total freedom of access for Jews, Christians and Moslems to their holy places. Thus shall it always be. The statement was prompted by an Egyptian Foreign Ministry statement Friday calling on an Islamic conference in Morocco this week to focus its attention on re-establishing Arab control over East Jerusalem. Western observers viewed this as an attempt to counter an expected Libyan-Iraqi attempt to expel Egypt from the 42-nation conference because of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Sunny, mild weather is expected until Tuesday morning for most of the country. Colder weather is forecast from the northern Rockies to the Dakotas, while rain is predicted in the Southeast and for the northern Pacific coast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Khomeini forms military arm for secret Council

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has ordered the formation of a special military arm for his secret Islamic Revolutionary Council Radio Tehran announced the creation of the Guardian Corps of the Islamic Revolution over the weekend and said it will help the council's revolutionary courts carry out their verdicts and defend the revolution and its leaders against "counter-revolutionary elements."

The creation of the new militia answerable to the Revolutionary Council represented a change in earlier plans to incorporate armed guerrillas who supported the revolution into the regular army and police. These are answerable to the provisional government of Prime Minister Mehdi Bazaran, whose authority is secondary to that of the council.

Lazy days of summer here to stay?

The lazy, humdrum days of summer appear to have arrived in the Permian Basin for a lengthy stay, as temperatures are expected to remain in the 90s, according to the weatherman.

The mercury on Tuesday should shoot up into the middle 90s, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. And when the sun drops tonight, the thermometer should descend into the 60s for an overnight low.

Winds should be on the balmy side tonight as they drop to 10 to 15 mph, the weatherman said.

Record high for May 6 was 103 degrees set in 1947, with 47 degrees remaining the record low for today. No rain was recorded in the past 24 hours and only a trace so fat this month. The total precipitation for the year remains at 2.86 inches.

Some items cost even less now than in 1967

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Bargain hunters take heart: It's hard to believe, but some things are actually cheaper today than they used to be. They are, of course, the exception rather than the rule. "If you find anything that is lower in price, it's a rather fluky situation," said one economist who did not want his name used. Among the exceptions is the handheld calculator, introduced to the general public in the early 1970s. In 1972, according to the Electronic Industries Association, the minimum price for a pocket calculator was about $100. Today, you can buy one for less than $10; Citibank, the nation's secondbiggest commercial bank, says market studies show 98.4 percent of all U.S. homes have at least one calcula-

Comparing today's prices with those of the past is hard because of the 1978 revision in the Consumer Price Index. The items checked today are not necessarily the same ones priced 10 years ago; specific products have given way to general cate-

Pat Jackman of the Bureau of Labor Statistics said, however, that a look at the final edition of the unrevised index, in June of 1978, showed a few things cost less than they did in the 1967 base period. They included nylon hosiery, down 6.1 percent; movie cameras, down 3.2 percent; tape recorders, down 5.2 percent; and anti-infective drugs, down 22.7 per-

Most decreases, Jackman said, are temporary, tied to a particular supply and demand situation. A drop in consumption, for example, helped coffee prices to decline sharply from their 1977 peak of $4 a pound and more. But they are still more than twice as high as they were before a 1975 frost in Brazil set off fears of a shortage.

Jackman said long-term price decreases generally occur because of improved technology. New products, like calculators, drop in price as mass production becomes possible.

"Everything has some sort of pric-ing cycle," he said. "Introduction,

Fabian Linden of the Conference Board, a business research group, agreed. Products that cost less today than they did 5 or 10 years ago generally "are items that are largely in the area where efficiencies of production are possible," he said.

Increased competition also can lead to lower, or at least relatively stable, prices. The growing number of airline discount fares means that in many cases you can fly for less today than you could five years ago. Figures provided by the Civil Aeronautics Board for half a dozen routes representing a geographical cross section of the country show that the regular economy fare has risen by an average of almost 40 percent in the past five years. In contrast, the lowest-available fare on the same routes has gone up only 1.3 percent; on two of the routes, the lowest-available fare is lower than it was in 1974.

Linden said it is actually unfair to compare today's prices to yesterday's in absolute terms; you have to compare wages as well.

In September 1969, for example, the Labor Department reported that prothe United States earned an average of $3.24 an hour, including overtime. It took a worker 13 minutes to earn enough to buy a pound of ground beef, then priced at an average of about 66 cents; it took 15 minutes to earn enough for a 76-cent, one-pound can of coffee. The worker had to spend 7 minutes to earn the 40 cents needed for a gallon of premium gasoline and it took 251/2 weeks' earnings to buy a ground beef cost an average of $1.11 a pound, meaning that despite soaring meat prices it took less time - 11 minutes - to "earn" a pound of hamburger than it did more than nine vears earlier.

It also would take less - only about 20 weeks — to earn enough to buy a new car costing $5,000. But it would take longer - about 8 minutes - to make the money to put an 85-cent gallon of gasoline in the car. And you would have to spend 24 minutes earning the money for a $2.50 pound of Joyce McDonald thinks "it's important for people to keep growing and not stagnate.

Three years ago, after 20 years as a housewife, the Midland mother of three put her philosophy te work and went back to school. The experiment paid off so well the December graduate was named top student art teacher at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin this year. Returning to the classroom after 20 years, where most classmates and some instructors were younger than she was, took a little courage.

Still, she had wanted to be an art teacher "since hopes to be employed full-time next year. the ninth grade," so she set out to accomplish her

She resumed her college career at Midland College, but noted "If my daughter hadn't gone with me and physically pushed me toward the door, I probably would have changed my mind" before the first

But now, "I feel like I'm 20 years younger. It's been a totally great experience for me," she said. And her husband, John, head of the reserve section Exxon, agrees, she said. "It's put new life in the old horse," she noted.

In fact, without the backing of her family, she said, she never could have managed.

While she said she will "always consider myself a wife and mother first," her family has learned to be independent while she has been a student, an accomplishment she takes pride in and appreciates.

"They've all been just terrific. My son wanted to know if he got to sign my report cards," she said jokingly. Mrs. McDonald, who did part of her student teaching at Bowie Elementary School in Midland, was cited by her instructors for her hard work and love of teaching. She wants the child to have a good experience involving art, her teachers said, and she cares about the right kinds of things.

She prepared herself for her profession by taking at least a semester of instruction in almost every medium the university offers, although she considers herself strongest in drawing.

Mrs. McDonald's career — she considers herself a teacher first, then an artist - followed the standard wife-mother scenario.

Raised in a family where art is important - her father is an artist in Houston — she attended the University of Houston and Louisiana Tech before meeting and marrying her husband. She put aside her schooling and career goals to make a home, raise three children and be a good wife. Her art activities were limited to taking the kids to exhi-

Cancerous cells were found during the surgery last week, said hospital administrator Bernard Strohm. 'The tissue removed certainly did have cancer throughout it," Strohm said. The actor's cancerous

Good news, and bad

Whether the news about Social Security is good or bad depends on where one stands in the labor force - on the active rolls or retired

Pensioners who have been watching inflation shrink the buying power of their Social Security checks have the good. news that help is on the way. Benefits will rise by almost 10 percent in July, reflecting an automatic semi-annual cost of living adjustment.

But that same news is not so good for the employees and employers paying a Social Security tax which took one jump this year and is scheduled to rise even more sharply in 1980.

Trustees of the system now are questioning whether these tax increases, voted by Congress in 1977 with a promise that they would solve the Social Security financing problem, may turn out to be not enough.

The trustees recently issued a report saying the system will be "financially sound for well past the turn of the century." but with an ominous qualifier. A recession serious enough to raise unemployment to 8 percent while inflation remains at 6 percent or more could put a "severe" strain on Social Security trust funds as early as 1983

That's what happened during the recession of 1975, creating the crisis which Congress purportedly solved in 1977 by increasing the tax and by revising the formula for applying cost-of-living benefit increases.

The trustees - Social Security Commissioner Stanford Ross and cabinet secretaries Michael Blumenthal, Ray Marshall and Joseph Califano - now seem to be saying that the problem isn't solved after all Economists are predicting a business slowdown of some degree this year. It would not have to be very severe - given the present inflation rate and its impact on benefits - to produce another serious imbalance between the amount of money going into the Social Security pipeline and the amount going out.

Obviously, the 96th Congress must grit its teeth and face the truth about Social Security.

First, it must reject the tantalizing notion that the tax increases voted in 1977 can somehow be rolled back as a preelection gift to voters in 1980.

Even the qualified optimist of the trustees would be insupportable if this new infusion of trust fund income were cut back

More important, the House and Senate must act on the Social Security reforms proposed by President Carter earlier this year as a further means of bringing future demands on the system under better control.

It must also proceed with the overhaul of the disability side of Social Security to overcome its demonstrated flaws - benefit levels and other provisions which create a disincentive for the disabled worker to seek retraining and another job

The burden which the new Social Security tax schedules will place on American workers and their employers in the 1980s is as heavy as they can be expected to shoulder

If there are new cracks appearing in the facade, the repair work must be done in the area of the promises the system is making to future beneficiaries and not in higher taxes.

That's a tough order for Congress, which is only comfortable adding new promises to Saudi-Arabia, whose desert-oil fields federal programs, not retracting

But the truth is knocking insistently at the door, demanding prompt action. It's up to Congress.

Mark Russell says

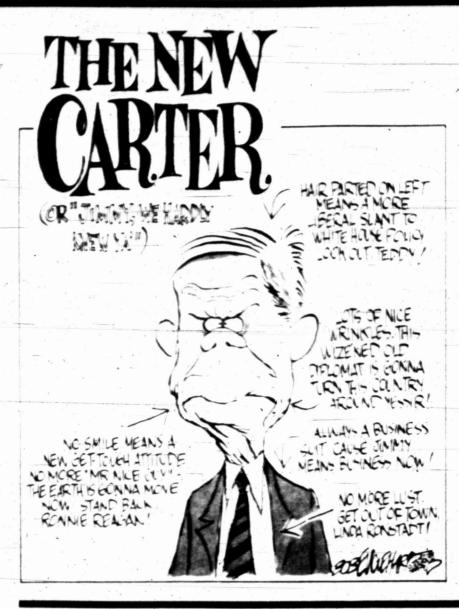

Is there any significance to the fact that President Carter has changed the part in his hair? Could it mean an end to the same old way of doing things? Otherwise, he'll change it

Although most politicians are vain, they strive to conceal it. Beneath that humble exterior, there is a Ted Baxter struggling to get out

While the country has shifted to the right, the President's part has shifted to the left. Does more than one person cut his hair? It's all in the forthcoming book, "All the President's Bar-

Shakespeare said it best: "Vanity, vanity, all is vanity." He also said 'Parting is such sweet sorrow.'' For my part, I don't care

*Why did Carter do it? Does the mail. White House demand it? Did they take a poll? Do they think it's more presidential? In that case, how about a powdered wig?

CHARLEY REESE

Think clearly and avoid myths disguised as facts

By CHARLEY REESE Sun Belt Syndicate

ORLANDO, Fla. - As citizens of a Republic with the responsibility of governing ourselves, we must always be careful to think clearly and to avoid accepting myths, disguised as facts.

Two separate myths recently got a new boost-of life from the same set of statistics. Statistics, collected in Dade County, Fla., showed that blacks committed a disproportionate number of serious crimes. One of the myths which the study is claimed to substantiate is the standard liberal myth that crime is caused by poverty; the other myth, a favorite one of facists, is that blacks are just naturally more violent and crime prone. Both are false. I don't know why anybody even bothered to collect the figures. Statistics have shown for a number of years that blacks account for a disproportionate number of crimes and it is just one more example of how tricky statistical studies Point one to remember is that such studies are based on arrests and that means they describe - not the criminal population - but only that portion of the criminal population which has been arrested. While I haven't seen a copy of this latest report, I'll bet a six-pack that the study counted multiple arrests of the same people which in our day of revolving door courts and release on recognizance can be a big factor.

Still and all, nobody denies - least of all blacks who also make up a disproportionate number of crime victims, that black neighborhoods are high crime areas in many cities. It's worth a hard think.

poverty is the principal cause of crime. Aside from being an insult to the great majority of poor people, there is simply no evidence to support the argument. It is perpetuated as a device to extract more tax dollars for various bureaucratic boondoggles.

alternative to crime is starvation could be a causative factor which is why Aristotle first stated the premise. Poverty in America today, however. is a far cry from poverty in Aristotle's day. Furthermore in cities such as Cairo, Egypt, where poverty and urban congestion exceed the worst nightmares of American sociologists there is almost no crime at all except in the neighborhoods where wealthy, white American teen-age dependents

So let's go back to the black neighborhoods. As a white Southerner, I can provide some insights into the high incidence of crime which, in my opinion, has everything to do with culture and nothing to do with race.

criminal justice system did not work the same way in black neighborhoods as it did in the white neighborhoods. In many areas today it still doesn't. Consider the criminal justice system as a human vacuum cleaner. It is supposed to identify those individuals who cannot live in peace with their neighbors and remove them.

In white neighborhoods, it generally works, or at least it did for genera tions. If you got into a fight with your neighbor and hurt him, especially with a weapon, you were guilty of a serious crime and packed off to pris-

On the other hand, if you were black and cut your black neighbor, chances are high that even if you were arrested, you'd be back in the neighborhood in a relatively short time. That had two results. Your neighbors still had to contend with you and they had learned that the criminal justice sys-

Repeat this process for years and rears and you end up with neighborhoods in which decent and honest people live in fear of the hoodlums and, more importantly, in which reality teaches that self-preservation must depend on self-defense. After being denied police protection, and in many cases given police persecution, black Americans developed a deep cynicism toward the criminal justice the high crime rate when you couple it with the fact the same system which offers no protection to the black in his own community tends to land on him like a mountain when he ventures into the white neighborhoods.

concentrations of black Americans in the North are southerners who left the rural south in search of better jobs.

We will not erase the human scars of 200 years of slavery and over a 100 years of segregation overnight. In the meantime, thinking people should not mistake cultural differences for racial differences. The great irony of the racist view of the black American as a violent person, a view found in the white racist and in the latent racism of the white liberal, is that it is the opposite of the truth.

really were the way they are stereotyped by racists the South would have run red with blood. It never has and what blood that did run was usually that of the black man. It is the worst kind of hypocrisy to drive a man to violence and then claim his last-ditch response to persecution justifies the persecution.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Carter's alienation of Saudis

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - The alienation of pump lifeblood into the factories of America, may go down as Jimmy Carter's biggest boner

For decades, the Saudis have been staunch friends of the United States. The ruling family sent their princes to the United States to study They invited U.S. companies to develop their oil reserves and, later, to help construct modern cities and industrial complexes

The U.S. Army Engineers administer billions' worth of military construction in Saudi Arabia. U.S. government teams work on a joint economic commission with the Saudis to provide technical assistance.

Indeed., secret government documents indicate that the Saudis seemed more concerned than Washington about the impact of the oil gouge upon the Western economies. The Saudis secretly urged the Nixon administration in 1974 to pressure the shah of Iran to hold down oil prices. When Washington failed to respond, the Saudis reluctantly went along with the price increase rather than stand alone against the oil bloc.

Earlier this year, the Middle East was thrown into turmoll by the downfall of the shah and the Egyptian-Israeli peace pact. Yet when the Iranian oil fields were shut down, the pro-American Saudis stepped up their own production so that the United States would not be deprived.

Given this history, it would seem difficult for any president to alienate the Saudis. But Carter has succeeded in doing this, thereby jeopardizing the nation's oil supply. Here's how he accomplished it

BLUNDER NO. 1: Like President Nixon before him. Carter coddled the shah. The president disregarded secret Saudi warnings that the shah was an unstable, undependable ally Carter joined in pressuring the Saudis to accept the shah as the chief protector of the oil-saturated Persian

Against their better judgment, the Saudis embraced the shah. Then Carter, reacting in panic to the Iranian uprising against the shah. abruptly abandoned him. Not only were the Saudis left in awkward embrace with a shah they had opposed in the first place: they also concluded that a Carter who would drop the shah so hastily might also abandon them

BLUNDER NO 2: The Saudis wanted Carter to send a task force into the Persian Gulf as a visible warning to the Soviets and Iranians that the United States was prepared to defend its vital oil stake. At first. Carter ordered a carrier force into the Persian Gulf. Then he had a change of heart and canceled the order perhaps because he felt it was incompatible with his self-appointed role as the Israeli-Egyptian peacemaker.

Intelligence reports suggest that the Soviets interpreted Carter's indecision as weakness or timidity They decided to tighten the pressure on Saudi Arabia by airlifting 500 Cuban mercenaries into South Yemen and then encouraging them to attack Saudi-subsidized North Yemen

In desperation, Saudi Arabia turned to Iraq and Syria, which have close connections with Moscow. They persuaded their Soviet friends to stop the fighting in Yemen. After it was too late. Carter reordered the carrier force into Arabian waters and sent token military support to North Yemen

BLUNDER NO 3: The Saudis warned Washington that an Israeli-Egyptian treaty would isolate Egypt and alienate the moderate Arab states. The Saudis urged Carter not to deal with Egyptlan President Anwar Sadat alone but to keep the moderate Arab bloc intact. It might take longer to negotiate an agreement that all the moderate states would accept, but it was the only way to achieve peace in the Middle East, the Saudis argued. A unilateral agreement by Israel and Egypt, they warned, would drive the moderates into the extremist camp and increase the tensions in the Middle East. In their secret approaches, the Saudis etressed that they were pressing for a broader solution for Carter's own sake to prevent the deterioration of U.S. relations with the Arab world.

He quietly rebuffed them and went ahead with a unilateral pact. He dealt in person with both Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Then Carter sent his son Chip and aide Zbigniew Brzezinski to call upon the Saudis to accept the treaty. As a result of Carter's bungling, the Saudis have lost all confidence in Carter and have tightened their ties with the radical Arab states. The latter are now pressuring the Saudis to turn off the oil tap until the United States supports a more favorable Middle East solution.

ARE YOU SHAH? Iranians who had a high old time working for U.S. milltary advisers before the shah was kicked out now find themselves not only out of work but virtually unemployable because of their redwhite-and-blue taint. Some of the 570 former employees have demanded compensation above and beyond the severance pay they collected.

The U.S. embassy in Tehran is resisting the Iranians' demands. offering them instead jobs loading up household effects of their former American military bosses, who are being kicked out of the country. So much for the "good and faithful servant"routine

ONCE, BUT IT WAS DID YOU EVER GET THE CALL TO GO INTO POLITICS?

Order rules out labor's 'overlapping' contributions

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

INSIDE REPORT:

WASHINGTON - A closed door meeting April 25 of big labor's political arm, called COPE, decided to keep its financial contributions to pro-labor political candidates lowindespite a potentially devastating April 17 U.S. court decision That decision by U.S. District Judge

Charles R. Richey rules out what the court viewed as overlapping contributions by the national COPE, headed by Alexander Barkan, and separate political action committees (PACs) of individual AFL-CIO unions. Under new campaign spending laws, the decision implied, the $5,000 limit by any PAC for a single candidate in a general election - and an equal amount during the primary election - should include the sum of all AFL-CIO contributions, national or local. That means that if candidate Smith received $5,000 from the national COPE, no statewide COPE or individual AFL-CIO union could contribute more.

The court decision, in a case brought by the national Right-to-Work Committee, overruled two unanimous decisions by the federal election commission (FEC). These held that PACs of AFL-CIO unions could make contributions to a candidate wholly independent of contribu-tions by the national COPE. Assembling COPE leaders from a score of AFL-CIO unions, Barkan instructed them to continue as before. without any change, pending COPE's appeal. If not reversed, the decision would cost labor-backed candidates millions of campaign dollars. The loss to business-backed candidates of lumping contributions from national and local PACs together - for example, national and state American Medical Action Committees (AMPAC) - would be far less.

GEORGE BUSH'S WALLACEITE

Charles Snider, the former chief political operative for George Wallace who recently signed on with George Bush's presidential campaign, had been vigorously sought by Ronald Reagan's camp - which now is blaming backstage corporate influence for their loss. Snider and his partner, Alton Dauphin - Wallace's former brother-inlaw - flatly denied any such pressure. Snider told us he joined the Bush campaign after two long meetings with Bush and his campaign chairman, James Baker, after being introduced to Bush by Bill France, the impresario of stock-car racing, in Cebruary 1978

Reagan's men are privately claimng they would have Snider today but were finessed by one of the biggest corporate clients of the Snider-Dauphin, Inc., consulting firm of Montgomery, Ala., which pushed Snider

Snider ran Wallace's presidential campaigns in 1972 and 1976 and remains an influential figure with the old Wallace constituency throughout the country, particularly in Alabama. Consequently, Snider long had been sought for the Reagan campaign by both veteran Reagan political aide Lyn Nofziger and David Keene, Reagan's Southern director in 1976.

When Keene shifted allegiances to become Bush's national field operations director several weeks ago, he informed Snider of the change. Snider then revealed to Keene for the first time that he had been approached by Bush himself and was seriously considering joining his campaign.

The oddity of a Wallaceite preferring the more moderate Bush over Reagan, long a favorite in the Deep South and especially admired by George Wallace, can be explained by the big corporate client, claimed the Reaganites. "Charlie's heart is still with us, but his bank account is with Bush," one Reagan insider told us.

Nonsense, Snider told us. He acknowledged that France is a client, and that France, an original Bush backer, tried to interest him in Bush. But the Snider Dauphin, Inc. account with France is far too modest, Snider told us, to influence his political deci-

REFUSAL OF 'REFUSNIKS'

Rep. Charles Vanik of Ohio picked up no encouragement from Russian dissidents during his recent visit to the Soviet Union as he pressed his campaign to suspend the Jackson-Vanik amendment.

Meeting with the "refusniks" in Russia, Vanik made clear what we first revealed a few weeks ago: he no longer agrees with Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington about the wisdom of continued economic pressure on the Kremlin to liberalize Soviet emigration policies.

The Soviet government refuses to declare the freer emigration policy demanded by the Jackson-Vanik amendment as a pre-condition for full trade between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. Nevertheless, Vanik believes that the flow of Soviet emigrants has increased so impressively that President Carter should back suspension of Jackson-Vanik.

This was the pitch made to the Soviet "refusniks" by Vanik. They refused to buy, telling the congressman that the pressure of Jackson-Vanik should not be relaxed now that the Kremlin is feeling its economic pressure. That was precisely the position taken by Jackson in private meetings with Vanik before his trip to

"If the president does not replace James Schlesinger, then he himself will be replaced in 1980 and that is a fact," declared actress Jane Fonda, a star in the antinuclear movie "The China Syndrome."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., made no effort to dissuade speculation he might challenge Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination and said he expects the issue to be fully debated in the 1980 race "It already is an issue.

It was an issue in my campaign for governor. I don't think it's going to go away," Brown told reporters. He called on Carter to "give up his idea of streamlining the licensing process of nuclear reactors.

The president is proposing legislation to shorten the time to get approval to build and license a nuclear plant.

Gathering across the street from the White House, the protesters chanted, "No more Harrisburgs, no more nukes" as they began the march up Pennsylvania Avenue to the Capitol.

The protest rivaled some of the largest Washington has seen in the past decade, including those against the Vietnam war, for the proposed Equal Rights

Donald Ross, 35, a public activist lawyer and organizer of the march, said the protest marked "the politicization" of the nuclear movement, adding: "The same type of energy that organized this ... is going to be out in the (political) hustings next year.'

Standing near the speakers platform after addressing the crowd, Bella Abzug, a former Democratic New York congresswoman, called the rally "a turning point" and said nuclear power "will be a major factor" in any future political race, including the one for president.

House committee tours Three Mile Island plant

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) - A House energy subcommittee is launching its investigation of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident with a tour of the stricken plant. Chairman Morris Udall calls it a

'look and learn' session The panel, a unit of the House Interior Committee also chaired by the Arizona Democrat, was visiting the site of the nation's most serious nuclear power plant accident today before beginning a year or more of hearings in Washington

Udall said a first-hand look at the plant will be helpful to committee members although the committee investigation will be a broad one, concerned more with the future role of nuclear power than on what happened on Three Mile Island.

"It's for an update on the plant."

Udall said in an interview. "It's to look and learn and ask questions. "I know there's a tendency to charge out and see what happened at Three Mile Island. Everyone wants to get into the act. But I still think it's important for committee members to get out into the field and see things for themselves." Udall said.

The last federal official to visit the central Pennsylvania power plant other than nuclear regulators - was President Carter.

Pennsylvania officials have credited Carter's visit to the plant's control room April 1, during the height of the crisis, with easing tensions among people living near the plant.

Conditions in the control room for the plant's Reactor No. 2 were much more stable for the Udall committee

Dade County voting on restrictions for smokers

By KATHY MARTIN

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County voters may send a smoke signal to the nation on Tuesday - they're voting in a referendum on whether to sharply restrict smoking in offices, schools, hospitals and enclosed public areas.

If the referendum succeeds, "people all over the country will take heart and attempt it," Peter Georgiades, general counsel for Action on Smoking and Health in Washington, D.C., said Sunday.

The proposed ordinance would banish smokers to designated areas in almost all enclosed places in the county except homes, factories, tobacco shops, bars, pool halls, betting par-lors, hotel rooms and boxing and wrestling arenas.

Smoking areas in lobbies and waiting areas would have to be partitioned and restaurants would be required to set aside half their available seats for

The 400-member Group Against Smokers Pollution (GASP) put the proposal on the ballot with a petition

Led by Charles Freefield, 57, and lung specialist Dr. Charles Tate, 64, the all-volunteer GASP campaign has been waged out of Freefield's wedding accessories shop.

The group's "greatest break-through," he said, was to negotiate free advertising time on nearly all the local radio and television stations carrying paid ads from the opposition. They did this by pleading the federal "fairness doctrine."

The GASP pitch is simple: Nonsmokers are entitled to clean indoor air. A tobacco puffer's smoke is irritating and dangerous to others forced to breath it

"I have had patients come into my office and lie on my desk and cry about this problem," Tate said.

New weather radar sought

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal experts are recommending nationwide installation of powerful new weather radars that can detect what is happening inside storm systems as well as where they are.

Weather experts found during two years of study that the new Doppler sets. added about 20 minutes of warning time when tornado conditions formed, increasing the ability to warn people to take shelter, and greatly reduced the number of false tornado alarms.

Women defeated at polls

LONDON (AP) - Margaret Thatcher became Britain's first woman prime minister in an election that gave most other female politicians their worst drubbing at the polls in nearly 30 years.

Only 19 women - eight fewer than in the last Parliament - were returned to the 635-member House of Commons in last week's general election. That gives Parliament its lowest number of women members since

The most stunning defeat was that of Shirley Williams, education minister in James Callaghan's ousted Labor Government

Casualties among many of the 102 other women candidates fielded by the three main parties were predictable because they tried for seats their parties had no hope of winning.

All 50 of the small Liberal Party's female candidates were defeated. The party now has a total of 11 members in the new Parliament.

The Conservatives put 31 women in the election, and emerged only with Mrs. Thatcher and seven others. This increased by one the number of Conservative women in Commons.

Women have been more active in the Labor party, but their legislators dropped from 18 to 11.

The Scottish National Party was trounced, and its losses included two female candidates. But the women's defeats appeared to be on political grounds and not Mrs. Williams lost because the Liberal vote in her Hertford constitutency collapsed and turned Tory. An exception was probably Maureen Colquhoun, 40, a self-ack-nowledged lesbian and campaigner for the rights of prostitutes, who lost her Northampton seat. Among the women returned to Commons was Sally Oppenheim, one of Mrs. Thatcher's closest aides. In opposition, she was the Conservative spokesman on prices.

Callaghan's restrained response to his party's loss cracked when he pondered Mrs. Williams's defeat.

Decorating tot's room not easy

By BARBARA BASLER AP Newsfeatures

Decorating a child's room is anything but child's play.

Of course, the decorating can be fun, but it is also challenging because the child you are decorating for today will be a pre-teen or young adult tomorrow

"If the room is too cute, too adorable, the child will outgrow it," cautions Ms. Ann Heller, an interior designer who specializes in editorial decorating - creating those pictureperfect rooms that appear in decorating magazines and advertisements.

And, as a parent, she has used her own childrens' rooms as a kind of laboratory, decorating and redecorating them to try out new ideas, new colors, new patterns.

"In decorating a child's room I think it is important to stick with simple, versatile furniture that will grow with the child, and change with the child," she says.

"I avoid anything ornate - French Provincial for instance - and anything gimmicky, like the cowboy look for a little boy's room. That's because when it comes time to up update the room for an older child, these pieces won't blend easily.

Furniture, she explains, should be simple so that it can indeed blend with changes in the decor. And it should be versatile, to serve one purpose at one age, and another later.

For furniture that fits both these requirements, Ms. Heller suggests something in the Shaker style, or a campaign piece or a parson's table.

The parson's table, for example, can be used to store and display stuffed animals in a young child's room. Later, it can serve as a desk or a dressing table.

Any decorating project is a matter of time, taste and money. And in decorating a child's room, Ms. Heller suggests investing your money in the permanent, "the things that will have an 18-year life span.

"I would put my money into a good mattress and box spring for the child," she says. "And I would invest in a good floor of polished wood or vinyl because both are attractive, durable and versatile.

Later, when the child is older, Ms. Heller says, carpeting can be added to the room, "but I would avoid carpeting in a youngster's room, because it doesn't take punishment well."

Finally, Ms. Heller says, she would invest money in "the kind of furniture we've been discussing - a few good, simple pieces that will never intrude on the room or the person living in

By investing in the bed, the floor and a few good pieces of furniture, you are then free to "improvise and have fun," Ms. Heller says. "You can go crazy with fabrics, paints, wallpaper and artwork. And all these can be changed as the child grows up, and the basics will still be stylish and functional.' Morever, if you improvise some inexpensive and attractive pieces on your own, you can change them or dump them without wasting huge sums of money.

Ms. Heller, for example, likes to create her own headboards.

"In one child's room I took two pieces of tall lumber, 4 inches wide and 4 feet long, and placed them behind the bed, on either side. In between, I can use paint or wallpaper for more of a headboard effect, and later, I can add another piece of wood to serve as a shelf.' Ms. Heller says that in decorating a child's room you should consult the

"Talk to the child and find out his tikes and dislikes," she advises. 'That's the way children develop their own taste.' Of course, she says, "consulting the child doesn't mean giving him everything he wants. That may not be possible or practical. But, then, he has to learn that, too.'

Abby I know my mother doesn't NEED anything, but I enjoy giving her presents, and it takes the pleasure out of it for me when she takes this attitude. Her attitude is typical of most mothers. They don't want their children to deny themselves anything in order to buy a gift.

I know. When I was a child I recall vividly my own beloved mother (now gone 34 years) saying, "Please don't buy me any presents. I have everything I need." So instead of buying a gift I gave her something money couldn't buy. I wrote a poem or a letter telling her how much I appreciated her. Years later I realized how much they must have meant to her, because after she died I found them tucked away among her souvenirs - all neatly bound together with a ribbon. She had saved every one of them!

Having, eating cake foreseen by economists

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans may be able to have both a balanced federal budget and a tax cut next year, say several prominent economists

The twin goals may be met because inflation is causing a surge in government tax receipts, the economists

A budget expert in the Carter administration, who asked not to be dentified, said recently that inflation is boosting tax receipts to the point where there could be a balanced budget in fiscal year 1981 and a $10 billion to $20 billion surplus to offer to taxpayers. Fiscal year 1981 starts Oct. 1,

A multibillion-dollar tax cut would be politically attractive for President Carter in an election year.

And wiping out the federal deficit would let him deliver on his 1976 campaign promise to balance the budget by 1981 and help defuse the clamor for a budget-balancing constitutional amendment. The president's aides say he has not made a decision on whether to cut taxes in 1980. Both a balanced budget and a taxcut could be ruled out next year if the nation slides into a recession. Such an economic downturn would reduce tax receipts and force the government to spend more on unemployment and

Study recommends tighter GSA control of program

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Gener-I Services Administration needs to tighten its grip on a $2 billion-a-year program that lets federal agencies shop by catalogue for such items as power boats, sauna baths and tyewriters, Congressional investiga-

In a new report, the General Acounting Office recommended that egislation be drawn up to force the scandal-plagued GSA to tighten its control of the "multiple award schedule" program.

The study found that the govern-nent has "little or no idea of what is going on" in the program. The GSA is the federal government's housekeeping agency and landlord. The GAO is the investigative arm of Congress.

Last year, government agencies could choose from 4 million items for total sales of about $2 billion. Products in greatest demand were copying equipment, typewriters, calculators and film chemicals.

Also offered were motorcycles, a power boat, 16 varieties of plastic hats and 13 types of party favors.

Last month, the GSA ordered that some-2,200 luxury items, including sauna baths and sailboats, be removed from the catalogues on June

. The Defense Department often bestowed such items as the boats and baths on members of the military taking leave time for rest and relaxation, said GSA spokesman Peter

Drowned' student found alive

- A 24-year-old former college student who was believed to have drowned last year in Lake Michigan is back home, saying he has no memory of the last 14 months of his life.

Steven Kubacki says he woke up Saturday night 40 miles from his father's house. He was the subject of an intensive search after his skis and backpack were found along the Lake Michigan shoreline south of Holland, Mich., on Feb. 20, 1978.

"They told us he slipped under the ice," Kubacki's father, John, a 53year-old retired factory worker, said Sunday. "We didn't believe that. He told me he lost conciousness and he didn't remember anything until he woke up in Pittfield. The younger Kubacki said he was

Hall-team among CARTs back on beam

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Championship Auto Racing Teams won an important victory in federal court, but the battle with the U.S. Auto Club is far from over. The ruling by U.S. District Court Judge James Noland late Saturday night put 19 entries by six CART teams back in the Indianapolis 500, but its impact could extend well beyond the Indianapolis Motor Speed-

CART president Pat Patrick, one of the six car owners whose entries were rejected by USAC two weeks ago, might be a bit hesitant to voice his options - that's what nearly did CART in on Saturday — but even he admits Noland's ruling left the breakaway racing organization in a good position for the future.

For now, Patrick is letting CART attorney John Frasco talk about specifics. But Frasco still is relishing the court victory and says the CART forces "really haven't given it much thought yet.'

Still, Frasco admitted, "There are still a number of possibilities. The (antitrust) suit (against USAC and the Speedway) could be dropped, or we could go to a full trial on the merits, at some time in the future."

In Noland's ruling, which granted a preliminary injunction against USAC's rejection of the 19 CART entries, the judge stressed it had no bearing on whether USAC and the Speedway in fact conspired in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. He said the decision was made because the "severe hardship the drivers would suffer far outweighs the harm to the defendants by allowing them to

The eight drivers who might have been kept from competing in the 500 were defending champ Al Unser, who drives for the Midland based Jim Hall team, his brother Bobby Unser, Gordon Johncock and Johnny Rutherford, all former Indy winners, plus veterans Wally Dallenbach, Mike Mosley and Steve Krisiloff and last year's co-rookie of the year Rick USAC had maintained all along that its action was not directed at the drivers, whom they said could get rides with other racing teams.

But it was the testimony by three of the drivers, Al Unser, Rutherford and Dallenbach — all of whom said they could not and would not switch allegiance — that might have meant the difference in Noland's decision.

'The other side saying we can go drive another car is completely ridiculous,' ' said Rutherford. "I've been in this business 22 years, 17 of them in championship cars, I'm at the point in my career where I want to be, with Team McLaren, and I don't feel someone should be able to take that away from me.

Both Dallenbach and Unser said there was a special relationship between a driver and his team.

"It's hard to explain," said Dallenbach, who has been the drivers' representative with CART. "But it's an element of trust. I'm too old to trust my life and livelihood to strangers. I'm very fussy about who puts my cartogether, especially when I'm coming in for a 14-second pit stop to change a right tire. That's why if I can't have my car, I choose not to run.' USAC officials cited newspaper stories and taped radio interviews as evidence that CART planned to run a competing race the same day as the Indianapolis 500. Patrick testified in court, however, that it was CART's intention all along to compete at Indianapolis, and he denied he ever intended to create any impression to the contrary. He denied he tried to use the threat of another race as a way to press CART's demands on USAC or the Speedway

Noland, in his ruling, however, said the evidence was "considerable" that the six CART teams had acted in a way that might have exerted a coercive force on USAC and the Speedway. But, he said, the court "does not believe these acts should work to the detriment of the drivers.

He also suggested USAC was not blameless, either, in declaring the six CART teams were "not in good standing" as the reason for their rejec-

"There is a problem in a lack of standards for determining what is good standing with USAC," the judge

During the hearing, CART attorneys repeatedly hammered away at what constitutes "good standing" or how one gets in "good standing" with USAC. The best definition any witness could come up with was that it meant being in "good graces. Eight drivers made it out for prac-

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) - Kevin Grevey, a pure shooter since his high school days, has had his problems of late. Now he feels as if a l0-ton weight has been lifted from his back.

Grevey, one of Washington's struggling guards, found his shooting touch in the third quarter Sunday to spark the Bullets to a 115-95 victory over the San Antonio Spurs to even up their National Basketball Association

"It had to be mental," said Grevey, who scored 12 of his 18 points in the third quarter. "In practice, I would be in the groove. But then I would be pressing in a game.

GREVEY, ALONG with the other Washington guards, has been horrible in postseason play, hitting only 32 of 89 shots, or 36 percent, in the seven-game quarter-final series against Atlanta and the first game against San Antonio, lost by Washington 118-97 Friday night. The guards were only 10 for 39 against the Spurs in Game 1.

"I just haven't been doing normal things," said Grevey. "I haven't been sleeping. I disconnected the phone. I quit reading the newspapers because of the criticism that's been written, some of it directed at me persona-

Elvin Hayes, who had 15 points for the Bullets, said he believes the series will be different when the two teams meet in San Antonio, now that the Washington guards are hitting.

"With Grevey hitting, it's going to make (George) Gervin play more defense. He isn't going to be roaming around like he was," said Hayes. "We had to start running. You got to make Gervin and Silas work. That's the way to beat San Antonio. Wes and I can control the boards but we can't afford to relax and get in a pattern game."

Larry Kenon was the high scorer for San Antonio while Gervin, who had 34 in the series opener, got 22 and James Silas, with 28 Friday night, Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt came to Los Angeles with a batting slump that might have rubbed off on the Dodgers. He left with five home runs and nine runs batted in for the series while Los Angeles went scoreless 21 consecutive innings.

Schmidt was 0-for-17 until the ninth inning of Thursday night's seriesopening contest. Then, after striking out three times against Rick Sutcliffe, he blasted one of the rookie's pitches for a homer.

"I was thinking then it might be a stepping stone," said Schmidt, who couldn't have been more correct. He hit one more Friday night, two on Saturday and another Sunday in the Phillies' 4-0 triumph.

"I hope this streak doesn't end," said Schmidt, "but I'm realistic enough to know I'm not a .300 hit-

But Schmidt, with a .255 lifetime batting average in six full National League seasons, is a long-ball hitter. His homer Sunday was his ninth of the season and the 199th of his career.

THE DODGERS, meanwhile, seem. to have picked up where Schmidt's slump left off. They got six hits Sunday, as Nino Espinosa threw his second shuout of the season, and suffered their sixth loss in seven games.

The defeat also was their sixth in seven games against the Phillies. "I hope we got them mad enough that they beat up Montreal," said

Schmidt, noting the Expos (tied with the NL-East leading Phillies) start a three-game series against Los Angeles later in the week. Doug Rau, 0-4, was the victim of Schmidt's two-run shot. "It was the best he's thrown all year," said Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda after Rau lasted more than five innings for the first time in five starts. "He made just one mistake."

That was Schmidt's home run. Rookie Ramon Aviles and outfielder Bake McBride added run-scoring singles in the eighth off reliever Jerry

Expos 7, Padres 5 Gary Carter's fifth-inning grand slam capped a five-run Montreal burst against Gaylord Perry and carried the Expos past the Padres. "It was a spitter that didn't spit, said Carter, speaking of the pitch he hit. "It must have dried off on the way to the plate."

Perry has been accused of applying substances to the baseball.

The Expos led 7-0 before Bill Lee,

Mets 5, Giants 4 Doug Flynn's run-scoring single with two out in the eighth inning capped a four-run rally and lifted the Mets over the Giants. San Francisco, which had a four-game winning streak snapped, built a 4-1 lead before New York came back.

Cubs 14, Braves 13 Tim Blackwell's windblown triple and Scot Thompson's pinch single gave the Cubs the extra point in their runfest. "The winds of Wrigley Field can never be taken for granted," said Braves Manager Bobby Cox after Blackwell's strange hit. He hit the pop fly down the left field line, took two steps from the batter's box, then returned because, he said, "I thought it was foul."

Atlanta left fielder Charlie Spikes took two steps toward the ball, then stopped because, he said, "I thought it was foul in the stands."

But once the wind got hold of the ball, it sailed and plunked into fair territory to start the winning rally. 'Fourteen runs and you still have to struggle like the devil to win," ex-4-0, gave up five seventh-inning claimed Cubs Manager Herman Franks. Cardinals 4, Pirates 2 Ted Simmons' sixth-inning homer snapped a 1-1 tie and helped St. Louis beat Pittsburgh.

Veteran outfielder Lou Brock added his fifth three-hit game of the season, raising his batting average to .382 and pulling within 74 hits of becoming the 14th player to reach the 3,000-hit mark for his career.

Reds 17-2, Astros 5-8

Cincinnati's Champ Summers, unimpressed by the imposing figure of 6-foot-8 Houston pitcher J.R. Richard, drove in five runs to help the Reds paste the Astros in the first game.

"He's so big his arm was almost touching my numbers when he let the ball go," observed Summers. But when the ball left Richard's hand, Summers cracked a single to score the first two runs of the rout.

Later, Summers added a three-run homer in a perfect 4-for-4 first game at the plate.

Enos Cabell and pitcher Frank Riccelli drove in three runs each to pace the Astros in the nightcap.

Rangers' Fred Shero keeps guessing right

NEW YORK (AP) - It was early in Saturday night's game against the New York Islanders. New York Rangers right wing Don Murdoch skated over to the bench to ask Coach Fred Shero a question.

"Do you want me to come off if (Islanders left wing) Clark Gillies comes on?" Murdoch asked. "What for? You can check that big guy," said the coach. 'It turned out," Murdoch said later, "he was right."

In fact, almost every idea Shero has had during this National Hockey Cup playoff final since 1972. said the Rangers' Phil Esposito, "but you can get shoved over to the passenger seat pretty quick."

The next stop is the back seat, if things don't change," he said. Strange, but true - the catch-phrase of this wild and wooly series. The Islanders, the NHL's regularseason champions, the team that finished 25 points ahead of the Rangers in the Patrick Division standings, are one loss away from elimination. "They finished first, we finished third. The pressure's got to be on them," said Rangers defenseman Carol Vadnais. The pressure has been on them virtually since this series started. And though the Islanders have won two of the games, both in overtime, they don't seem to have handled that pressure very well. It's old news by now, but it bears retelling: the high-scoring forward line of Bryan Trottier, the 6-foot-3 Gillies and right wing Mike Bossy has not produced up to expectations. The Islanders' power play, which produced a goal in one out of every three regular-season chances, is 0-for-20 against the Rangers.

Phoenix gets defense to beat Sonics, 113-103

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Seattle felt it just had an off day, while Phoenix thought it had finally put things together.

The outcome, however, was indisputable: Phoenix had pulled out a 113-103 victory Sunday before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum. The victory cut Seattle's lead in the best-of-seven, NBA Western Conference championship series to 2-1, with Game 4 slated for Tuesday night in Phoenix.

"We just had much better defensive aggressiveness," explained Suns Coach John MacLeod, whose club has won all six playoff games it's played at home this year.

'There was an improvement in defense, and we had some good fast break opportunities. I think we could be more aggressive, although I thought our effort was good." In the first game of the series, the SuperSonics out-rebounded the Suns 56-45 and coasted to a 108-93 victory. In Game 2, the Suns offense improved, but Seattle took a 59-38 edge in rebounding and a 103-96 victory. Sunday, Phoenix sliced Seattle's rebounding margin to 52-46. At the same time, the Suns won the battle on the offensive boards 24-19.

"You can only give them one shot," said Lenny Wilkins, whose SuperSonics are the defending conference champions. "You can't allow a team two or three shots, and that hurt

At the same time, Wilkens doesn't think the victory was due to so much to what the Suns did but what the SuperSonics didn't do.

"They did a better job because we allowed it," said Wilkins. "We played very poorly as a team. I thought at times we were too much in a hurry ... we threw the ball away (31 turnovers) we took hurried shots.

MacLeod attributed Seattle's turnover problems to pressure by the Suns, while Wilkins maintained the Suns were able to get into their running game because "one team played

But the Suns started a scoring spurt with 1:47 left in the third quarter that put them up 82-75 at the buzzer and saw them outscore Seattle 10-4 at the start of the final quarter to take a 17-point lead, 94-77, with 8:40 to go in Seattle never got closer than 10 from then on.

The Suns got 25 points from guard Paul Westphal, while forward Walter Davis added 22 and forward Len "Truck" Robinson 21.

Bird's Martinez two-hits Angels; Guidry relieves

By JOHN NELSON

AP Sports Writer It began on anything but an auspicious note. Dennis Martinez's first six pitches were balls, and Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver sent pitching coach Ray Miller to the mound.

"I told Dennis to start throwing the ball and stop aiming it," Miller said. Martinez, a 23-year-old righthander in his third season with the Orioles, apparently took the advice to heart. He pitched no-hit ball until California's Don Baylor singled on a 1-2 pitch to lead off the seventh and wound up with a two-hit, 6-0 shutout over the Angels.

"Baylor hit a pretty good pitch. It was a slider, low and away," Martinez said, adding that he didn't even know he had a no-hitter going until the previous inning

Martinez said he thought a hard grounder by Dan Ford right at second baseman Kiko Garcia might have been ruled a hit in the fourth. Instead, Garcia was given an error, but Martinez hadn't noticed.

"I looked at the scoreboard in the sixth and said, 'Hey, they don't have any hits. I've got to try and get it. Why

Martinez, 3-2 after three consecutive wins, didn't give up another hit until Rod Carew singled with two out in the ninth. He struck out three and ORIOLES MANAGER Earl Weaver said if Baylor had not gotten his hit, "I would have recommended he pitch around Carew, in view of the score. We've kept him (Carew) in the park, but he must be hitting .340 or .360 against us lifetime.'

Eddie Murray's two-run homer and Gary Roenicke's solo blast provided all the runs Martinez needed.

The victory was Baltimore's sixth straight and 15th in their past 16 games, giving the Orioles a one-game lead over Boston in the AL East, The Orioles have won every series since dropping two of three at Yankee Stadium April 17-19.

Yanks 6, A's 5

Guidry, the Cy Young winner who volunteered to go to the bullpen to replace the injured Rich Gossage, came into a 5-5 ballgame with one out in the seventh and a runner on third.

He struck out Oakland's Miguel Dilone, who was caught looking at a slider on the outside corner, and retired Larry Murray on a popup.

"I was thinking, 'I'm gonna blow that guy away. I don't care who it is, he's not gonna have a chance," the little lefty said.

Guidry went the rest of the way, 32-3 innings because the game went 10, yielded two hits and ran his record to 3-2 on 69 pitches, not your everyday short relief stint.

In the second inning, Oakland's Wayne Gross and Dwayne Murphy hit consecutive homers off Catfish Hunter, only to see New York's Lou Piniella and Cliff Johnson do the same thing

Mariners 3, Red Sox 2

Designated hitter Willie Horton ripped four singles and drove in two runs, including the tie-breaker in the ninth inning, to help Seattle salvage the final game of their series with

Leon Roberts also doubled home a run in the ninth as the Mariners overcame a 2-1 Red Sox lead. Fred Lynn's 11th homer of the season scored two runs in the bottom of the eighth.

Cleveland rallied for all its runs in the ninth inning, capped when reliever Steve Mingori issued a bases-load ed walk to Rick Manning. The Indians' Mike Paxton, 2-1, tossed a five-

Royals starter Steve Busby had a six-hit shutout through 81-3 innings, when Manning started the rally with a single. Ron Pruitt singled home another run, and Tom Veryzer tied the game with his RBI hit up the Butch Wynegar also homered for the Twins and drove in another run with a single.

Left-hander Ken Kravec blanked the Rangers on three singles, striking out five and walking none. The only hit past the infield allowed by Kravec was John Ellis' liner to left center in the eighth when Mike Squires' infield single scored Chet Lemon, who had four hits in the game.

Wayne Nordhagen doubled in a run and then scored on a misjudged fly ball to left fielder Billy Sample in the White Sox's sixth:

King still in Heisman

HOUSTON (AP) -Any time Oklahoma fullback Kenny King walks outside into an overcast sky, he must think it's the shadow of the Heisman Trophy.

That's where King appears doomed to spend his athletic career.

King averaged only seven carries per game for the Sooners last year while 1978 Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims led the nation in rush-

Then came last week's National Football League draft and King was chosen in the third round by the Houston Oilers, where he'll log backup duty to 1977 Heisman winner Earl Camp-

Does King feel he'll be repeating his college dilemma in the pros?

"I don't feel doomed," said King, who got the most out of his carries with a 7.9 average. "I feel Coach (Bum) Phillips is a man of his word and if he says you'll get the ball, I'm not wor-

Victory for the kid

LOUISVILLE. Ky. (AP) — It was a victory for the kid, the Bid, the delightful popoff, Bud — and old-fashioned sentiment. It was a great day for kids with pimply faces and lofty ambitions, hot-walkers and trainers who spend a lifetime medicating and nursing cheap claimers, the little guys in the tough, competitive world of thoroughbred horse racing. Now that Spectacular Bid has spectacularly put his hoof prints on the 105th Kentucky Derby, don't haul out the caviar, shrimp and champagne. Bring on the beer and pretzels. It was a triumph for the little people. More than anything, this race should stand as a Delp gave him a job as a hot-walker, one of the monument to a quality little practiced in today's lowliest chores around a track. hard-bitten society, especially that secor around the backstretch. The quality: heart and understanding. "We've got to give the kid a chance," insisted owner Harry Meyerhoff, his wife Teresa and son Tom when there was talk of benching the Bid's 19-year-old jockey, Ron Franklin, after an abysmal race in the Florida Derby in March.

market loses

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market sustained another broad setback today amid expectations of higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which fell 10.05 to a seven-week low on Friday, slumped another 6.76 to 840.78 by noontime today.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 7-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues

Recent expansion of the money supply has led the Federal Reserve to tighten credit, and brokers said more moves in that direction were likely.

Rising interest rates are considered a negative influence on stock prices because they increase the attractiveness of interest-bearing securities, such as shares of money-market funds, which compete with stocks for investors' money. Fairchild Camera was the only gainer on the active list, rising 11/4 to 551/2. Gould Inc. raised the price of its offer for 2.5 million Fairchild shares from $54 to $57 each. The NYSE's composite index lost-

.63 to 56.13. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped 3.12 to 179.43.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 14.45 million shares at noontime, up from 13.06 million at the same point

Talmadge aide testifies before ethics committee man Talmadge's financial secretary said today that someone intent on covering up the diversion of Senate expense funds in 1973 and 1974 would have had to intercept every expense voucher from the Senate during the

But Allyne Tisdale insisted to the Senate Ethics Committee that she would not have been in a position to detect such a cover-up in those years because she had no responsibility to check expense vouchers and did not even understand how they worked.

Mrs. Tisdale testified as the panel's chief counsel sought to show it would have been difficult for Daniel Minchew, the senator's former top aide and now his chief accuser, to have diverted expense funds to a secret bank account without anyone in the office knowing about it.

Talmadge, D-Ga., and Mrs. Tisdale both have denied knowing of the diversions, which Minchew says he put in the secret account to benefit the senator. Earlier testimony disclosed that a 1973 Senate expense check of $10,604 and a 1974 check for $2,289 went into the account.

Committee counsel Carl Eardley noted that every senator receives a monthly statement from the Senate showing how much has been collected from expenses and how much of the $40,000 maximum allowed each year

Eardley said the $10,604 was paid in June 1973, and that the July statement - and all other statements for the year - reflected the payment and showed a declining balance.

And he asked whether Minchew thus would have had to intercept all subsequent statements from the Senate - including some sent after he had left the office - in order to hide the diversion. Mrs. Tisdale agreed with that assessment. But she said she never had any responsibility to check those statements during those years and that she never had any discussions with the senator or with Minchew about them. Mrs. Tisdale, whom Eardley characterized as the "only qualified bookkeeper" in Talmadge's office during the key years, also repeated her statement that Minchew was responsible for handling all expense vouchers during the two years. But she acknowledged that she never saw him handle the vouchers and never saw him working with the books or any financial summary. Talmadge, who chafed visibly under the slow pace set in the first week of public hearings on his fi-

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Her- nances, has acknowledged that his office unintentionally overcharged the Senate $37,125 and has repaid that amount.

The Georgia Democrat complained that committee lawyers had spent an entire week on questions that were not in dispute, suggesting that this has had the effect of unnecessarily prolonging the proceedings against

But committee attorneys have suggested there is far more at stake than merely whether the overcharges oc-

They are attempting to show that Talmadge could have been aware of the overcharges — something the senator denies. And they are trying to bolster the credibility of Minchew.

Possibly the most important testimony last week came from Mrs. Tisdale, who denied writing two key memos that, if authentic, would bolster Minchew's credibility. Both memos are signed with the lowercase initials "at" and Mrs. Tisdale has acknowledged they were written in

One of the memos appears to imply that Talmadge wanted to conceal two campaign contributions in 1974 totalling $550. The other memo instructs Minchew to give Talmadge $500.

Mrs. Tisdale also told the committee last week of a stormy meeting in which Betty Talmadge, the senator's former wife, fired Minchew and wrote herself a check for $20,100. She said Talmadge later stopped payment on

Minchew contends he set up a secret bank account for Talmadge to arrange extra funds for Betty Talmadge and that he funneled money from the account to the senator, his wife and to Talmadge's late son, Talmadge denies any knowledge of the fund, which contained nearly $40,-000 in campaign contributions and Senate expense checks, and says Minchew is a "liar, cheat and embez-

Of the five allegations against Talmadge, diversion of campaign funds and overcharges of Senate expenses are the two most important.

If the committee decides evidence supports the allegations, it can recommend a wide range of punishment against Talmadge, including censure or expulsion from Senate membership. The full Senate will decide what action, if any, to take.

China trade pact progress slow

PEKING (AP) — Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said after her first day of trade talks today the Chinese are having difficulty in signing a trade agreement and progress "will not be fast-paced.'

The secretary, who arrived here Saturday hoping to sign, or at least initial, a Chinese-American trade agreement, told reporters: "It is clear the Chinese have greater difficulty in signing a trade agreement with us than they have had with other countries because our requirements are more detailed than other coun-

She said the Chinese are faced with complicated rules and regulations set by the 1974 U.S. trade act and that. 'therefore, the process will take a while ... It will not be fast-paced." She said she did not know how long it would take.

She and her staff met for 21/2 hours with China's foreign trade minister. Li Qiang (Li Chiang), in The Great Hall of the People. She called it an exploratory session and a "fruitful first exchange" on the trade agree-

"I sense a willingness to go ahead, but no great urgency on either part."

Mrs. Kreps said she did not believe that China's current reassessment of economic priorities was slowing the progress toward a trade agreement.

American and Chinese negotiators will be meeting daily on the agreement, she said in a briefing at her guest house. And at her request, Li will go to her guest house daily to brief her on progress on the trade agreement.

'The progress in writing the agreement is not going to be speedy," she said, "and I think we should appreciate the fact that this is the first time the Chinese have had to go through this elaborate routine.

Mrs. Kreps said "the Chinese are puzzled" by the requirements. U.S. law requires that a trade agreement protect the American market from disruption by imports, that it protect U.S. business overseas and safeguard patents and trademarks.

"We do not sense any pulling back from their willingness to normalize economic relations overall," the secretary said, adding that China's economic reassessment was not re-

If a trade agreement is not signed on this trip, it would not be "a catastrophe," she said. "It is not important whether we initial it this week ... but it is important to continue the momentum." She called her trip "one more step in a process by which we normalize economic relations."

A U.S. source present during today's session said earlier that Li told Mrs. Kreps that China must correct its trade imbalance with the United States and hoped America would help China pay for new technol-

Don't rush, but... fat is fashionable

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) - "How To Fatten Your Stomach," the waddle away best seller that everyone will be talking about as soon as I get around to writing it, is almost out of the planning Lengthy lunches are being held regularly to planthe big promotional kick-off, which will feature a belly bumping contest between two Suni wrestlers in front of Elizabeth Arden's New York and Hollywood salons and man-in-the-street interviews with some of the more settled sedentary types in our society who help make the Boston Marathon the great spectator sport that it has become.

Ten million non-achievers watching 8,000 strivers puff up Heartbreak Hill in their unionsuits have got to know on which side of the screen sanity is at.

Now that the energy crisis has brought back the pot-bellied stove, real pot bellies out in front of them are in demand to round out the picture. The lean and hungry look so long foisted on our emaciated society by the high priestesses of fashion is definitely on the way out. The aldermanic look of abdominal amplitude is on the way in.

"How to Fatten Your Stomach," the gourmet's guide to an imposing facade, entails no boring exercises, no complex calorie charts, no demanding diets, no prior medical knowledge of the rectus abdominus, the internal obliques or other suety areas that plite people discuss only with perfect strangers in the privacy of the sauna. Not even a ven for yoga or yogurt is required.

Perfecting the prominent paunch, as you will discover if I ever summon up enough energy to complete the manuscript, is basically a matter of projecting a pleasingly pudgy self-image. Fat is there to begin with. The music world has known for centuries, long before Caruso ever had a spaghetti dish named for him, that pear-shaped tenors and prima donnas produce the finest pear-shaped tones. Since it first rang up the great golden curtain in 1883, the Metropolitan Opera has never had a backstage fatality from anorexia, which in laymen's terms translates to psychic starvation induced by over-exposure to too many diet books. The viola da gamba, which is held between the knees, is believed in some quarters to have been invented to accommodate virtuosi unable to fit the standard sized fiddle underneath or among their chins.

Socrates, Buddha, Confucius, Shakespeare, Samuel Johnson, William Howard Taft and Babe Ruth, among a host of historical nice guys, all come across in classic stature as early drop-outs from weight watchers, to say nothing of Santa Claus, Kate Smith, G.K. Chesterton, etc.

Only in our frenetic society has the washboard stomach, and its accompanying character trait, the washboard forehead, been held in high esteem as a symbol of cultural and socio-economic leadership, but at long last this ritualistic obeisance to a cavernous ribcage is coming to an end. Let's face it, most of the people who have bullied and intimidated you and me in this vale of tears and forced us to work by the sweat of our brows have come equipped with washboard stomachs; gym teachers, platoon sergeants, drill instructors, mortgage officers, nightclub bouncers, loan company repossesors, tax auditors, bill

You seldom see a fat mugger in a police lineup, and it's a well known tailoring statistic that stylish stout sizes are rarely available in convict suits, straitjackets or assassination-team jungle fatigues. But now that the three-piece suit is dominant once again on the fashion scene for both men and women, Neo-Edwardian elegance demands a copious expanse of waistcoat to display a gold watch chain, a Phi Beta key or a tridium of ballpoint pens.

As "How to Fatten Your Stomach" will easily explain in a slender volume outrageously padded out with puffed up prose and oversized pictures, swapping a waspish waist for a pouter pigeon's pouch requires little more of the reader than sitting down to the task as soon as possible. Begin now: even in advance of publication.

First, measure your girth at the level of the navel with the stomach stuck out as far as you can and record that statistic. Research aimed at cutting down on damage by animals and birds

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — They're killers, their keepers say. Responsible for untold thousands of deaths and who knows how many millions of dollars worth of damage.

They're also useful. They are the hundreds of rats, mice, coyotes and African birds who live here at the Denver Federal Center while workers try to find out how to reduce the damage they do to vegetation, crops and wildlife

The program at the Denver Wildlife Research Center is one of three in the nation in which researchers try to find ways to prevent the damage caused by birds and animals. They try not to damage the animals while they're at it.

"Lethal agents are generally the last recourse," said Glenn Hood, chief of the Bird Damage Control

Research section. Sam Linhart, who heads the section that studies predators, said the center was testing chemical repellents on about 40 coyotes. Elsewhere, he said, researchers have doused sheep meat with lithium chloride, causing coyotes to vomit after eating it. "We haven't been able to duplicate those results here," Linhart said. "It makes them sick, but it doesn't turn them off killing sheep." The center's use of chemicals in its research is restricted by the "horrendous number of standards" imposed by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, Hood said.

The jet age has added some twists to the research. Huge collections of birds congregating around landfills, which often abut airports, represent a serious threat to airline passengers, Hood said. If the birds fly in the path of an airliner, the engines can suck hundreds of birds into the works, causing disaster.

Denver researchers have come up with plans, implemented around the country, for elimination of the landfills and for devices that frighten birds away

The center also helped produce a tape recording that can be played to frighten birds out of trees in residential neighborhoods.

The African quelea bird - which Hood calls 'probably the most destructive and numerous bird in the world" - is under scrutiny as researchers try to find a way to save African sorghum crops

Special security is necessary to make sure not even a few of those birds escape, reproduce and duplicate their destruction on American crops.

The center does not protect man's interests alone Hood said it was a leader in the drive to get power companies to replace electrified power poles with others which won't electrocute birds - particularly the golden eagle.

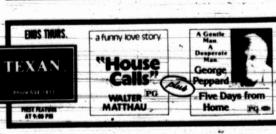

Most birds and animals serve several useful purposes besides being pests, he added. Coyotes, for instance, serve an esthetic purpose, prey on smaller animals that can damage crops and provide hunters with recreation.

In fact, he said, "The only species which by my definition is totally a pest is the sewer rat.

Sharing cosmetics bad as sharing toothbrush

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 17-year-old daughter and bacteria to the area around their eyes. Sampling her friends often share makeup-they enjoy experimenting with the various different shades and brands. They all use the same brush to apply mascara, and it seems like an unsanitary practice to me. My daughter tells me that everyone does it; am I being overly concerned? - Mrs. T.N.C

Dear Mrs. C .: You can tell your daughter that your warning has the support of dermatologists, ophthalmologists and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Any kind of eye makeup, but particularly mascara, can harbor bacteria which may result in eye infections. Because of this, it is not even a good idea to share eye makeup with relatives. Of course, the possibility of contamination becomes much more likely when several people are involved.

A particularly dangerous practice that many stores encourage involves the use of sample eye makeup. When a communal applicator is used by many people over a period of time, there is great likelihood of contamination. This can result in serious infection or injury if the eye is accidentally scratched by a slip of the hand.

The problems start when the container is opened and its contents exposed to microorganisms in the air and on the user's skin and eyelashes. According to a study performed by Dr. Louis Wilson, of the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlenta, half the mascara he and his colleagues sampled contained bacteria, and an additional 20 percent contained potentially harmful fungi. This meant that women were unknowingly adding millions of foreign

The federal government currently is working on regulations that would make cosmetics safer for the consumer. Meanwhile, the FDA advises consumers to follow several precautions when they use eye makeup, especially mascara. Dear Dr. Solomon: Why do more people get the flu and colds in the winter than in the summer?-Ms

Dear Ms. B.: No one knows for sure. It may be that people spend more time indoors and are crowded together more in the winter; thus, they may more easily infect one another. It is also possible that the dry, heated air in many homes dry out the pasal passages, making a person more prone to infection. However, there is no evidence of any association between having a cold and feeling cold, although January and February are the peak months for colds shortages are more serious in California than in the rest of the nation. Carter said the lines could become nationwide problem by summer.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. has proposed that California ease the shortage through a gasoline distribution system tied to vehicle license plate numbers.

Some counties, including Los Angeles, were expected to adopt the plan today.

purchases was used in California in the 1974 shortage.

Only an estimated 15 percent of Los Angeles area gasoline stations opened Sunday, and lines of cars formed before dawn.

At some closed stations, where entrances were not blocked, cars were parked and locked, the owners trying to be in good position when the stations opened today.

Other motorists didn't want to wait and tried to bribe station operators to open early or re-open just for them. "If I wasn't so honest, I could make $200 a day in bribes," said the operator of one Los Angeles station. Some tried getting ahead in lines and that sparked violence.

At a Hollywood station on Saturday. a man cut in front of about 50 motorists. When an angry group moved-toward him, he pulled a derringer and held off the crowd with the gun while he filled his tank, police said. He was still pumping when he was arrested, officers said.

A tow truck driver told police that about 20 persons tried to mug him Saturday as he took six gallons of gas to a motorist whose car had run dry while waiting in a line outside a sta-

Also last week, police said, a pregnant woman was allegedly attacked by a man because he claimed she cut in front of him in line, and a 60-yearold woman, who pulled her car into a line of waiting cars, was pulled out of her car by five men dressed in business suits. "One slammed the door on her foot and the other spat on her," dealer Fred Jacob said.

At the opposite end of the continent from California, the mood was almost carnival-like at two Boston stations, which sold gas for 25 cents a gallon for two hours. The sale was part of a promotion sponsored by radio stations WHDH-AM and WCOZ-FM.

The station managers said they sold 7,500 gallons; the radio stations estimated their bill at more than $4,000.

The pump price had been 78.9 cents a gallon for regular and 83.9 cents for unleaded at one of the two service stations. The average price of all gasoline is a little over 77 cents a gallon across the country.

Some New Jersey drivers were also paying 25 cents — to get on and off the Garden State Parkway so they could get to toll road service stations where purchases were limited to $5. Many other stations around the state were closed Sunday to stretch limited allocations.

Thomas Anderson of the Pennsylvania-Delaware Service Station Dealers Association warned of tight supplies within the month. "We are just not getting enough gas to get through a month like May that has a holiday like Memorial Day in it," he said.

In Georgia, one dealer said allocations for May ran from 90 percent down to 50 percent of supply a year

Alaskans back plan to swap Prudhoe Bay oil

By BILL BILLITER The Los Angeles Times

JUNEAU, Alaska - Motorists waiting in long lines for gasoline might find it hard to believe that Alaska is producing so much crude oil that the West Coast can't refine it all. But until refinery capacity in California and other Western states increases, Alaska's black gold, at considerable extra cost, heads east through the Panama Canal.

Alaska thinks there's a better way: Swap Alaskan oil for Mexican oil -Alaskan oil to Japan in return for Mexican oil to the United States. In the process, says Alaska, the United States would have the same net amount of oil, but at less transporta-

To engineer a quicker, cheaper way to keep Alaska oil moving, this biggest of U.S. states is thinking big indeed.

In effect, Alaska wants to operate like an independent oil nation - buying, selling and swapping oil in a proposed deal with Mexico and 'We can show the rest of the nation that a swaps arrangement will work and that the sky won't fall because of it," said Gov. Jay S. Hammond.

Adds Alaska's Natural Resources Commissioner Robert LeResche: "We have gone to Japan and Mexico and talked to officials there. They are very interested. If Congress doesn't impose another export restriction, I think Alaska could start a swap (of oil) by Jan. 1.

The proposed Alaska-Mexico-Japan deal is designed to end the crude oil surplus on the West Coast. California and other West Coast refiners presently can handle only about 800,000 barrels a day of the 1.2 million barrels daily produced by the Trans-Alaska

The remaining 400,000 barrels a day must be shipped East, either through the Panama Canal or around the Horn of South America. This shipping greatly adds to the cost of Alaskan oil. and oil companies say it discourages increased production.

In a joint interview, Hammond and LeReche told the Los Angeles Times about Alaska's novel proposal for gettiong the state's oil sold with less transportation cost. They said the United States would not lose any oil in the three-way deal; indeed, they predicted a net gain because the arrangement would spur increased Alaskan production.

Here is how the Alaskan trade would operate:

-The state would exercise its option of taking a share of Prudhoe Bay oil as its royalty, rather than a percentage of the money from the sale of the oil. Hammond said this option would entitle the state to about 150,000 barrels of oil daily.

-State government then would contract with Pemex, the Mexican national oil monpoly, to sell it a minimum of 100,000 barrels a day.

-Pemex, in turn, would contract with Japan to sell the Alaskan crude to that oil-starved nation. Pemex would also contract, with Alaska's help, for ships to carry the Alaskan oil from Valdez to Japan.

-Alaska would buy a minimum of 100,000 barrels a day of Mexican crude from Pemex and would then ship it from Mexico to the Gulf and East coasts for sale there. The United States thus would have the same amount of oil available, but with less shipping costs.

Hammond said he believes President Carter will support the Alaskan plan, although he has no firm commitment from the White House. Carter's support is essential since to export of Alaskan oil can take place unless the president declares it in the national interest.

Prohibition against any export of oil from the Trans Alaska Pipeline is written into two laws passed by Congress. The most stringent of the two laws, however, is due to expire June 22. Hammond noted that the remaining structure, which was part of the 1973 pipeline enabling act, gives the president the authority to authorize an Alaskan oil export unless overridden by both houses of Congress.

Export of Alaska oil — generally referred to as "swaps" — is considered a touchy political subject in Washington. Although most energy experts, including Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger, say that swaps are the most sensible way to get oil better distributed in the United States, the proposal has strong opposition in Congress. When the Trans Alaska Pipeline

Bill was being debated six years ago, many Midwestern and Northeastern congressmen argued that the oil companies only wanted a convenient way to sell the oil to Japan. To quell that argument, a restriction was Written into the bill prohibiting export of Alaskan oil unless the president declared it in the national interest. Four years later, Rep. Stewart McKinney, R-Conn., authored a tougher amendment that allows either house of Congress to veto a presidential attempt to allow Alaskan oil exports.

The McKinney amendment is scheduled to expire June 22, but a new measure has been introduced in Congress that would be even more restrictive about such an oil export. Hammond last Tuesday fired off telegrams to members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee urging them to defeat the new amendment.

In the interview, Hammond conceded that Alaska's hopes for a swaps arrangement will be killed if the new amendment authored by Rep. Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., is passed

Schlesinger also urged the defeat of the Wolpe measure. "It is conceivable that swaps of Alaskan North Slope crude oil will become necessary at some time to induce additional Alasimprove economic efficiency," Schlesinger said. Hammond said he hopes that the kan and West Coast production and to Carter administration will be able to head off this latest attempt to keep Alaskan oil from being traded.

The governor said a major reason a swaps is opposed is because many congressmen fear that the American public will not be able to understand how the United States can export oil in a time of shortage - and still have the same amount of oil.
