American Farmer Big User of Electricity

A startling ten-year rise in farm electrification has made the American farmer one of the nation's biggest users of electric power.

The farmer is now receiving more than twice as much farm high-line service as in 1940. Moreover, the amount of electricity used by farmers has increased nearly five times, and the average use per farmer has more than doubled.

American farms are now using in excess of 15 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year, while in 1940 they consumed only 31/2 billion. In addition, the number of farms serviced by electric power-about two million in 1940has leaped to approximately five million. The average kilowatt hours of power used per farm, exclusive of irrigation projects in the West, has increased from about 1000 ten years ago to 2300 today.

The farmer is just beginning on the road toward complete rural electrification. Many new electric devices will be aiding the farmer in his struggle for higher output. Things like automatic poultry feeders, crop-drying equipment, automatic barn cleaners, silo unloaders, wagon unloaders, and feed handling equipment are all a part of the American farmer's future.

U.S. Farms Have Fewer Phones in '50 Than 1920

According to the 1950 census only 38.3 of America's farms have telephones as compared to 38.7 per cent in 1920. Twenty-eight states reported fewer farm telephones. Those showing declines contain 80 per cent of the country's farms. Among the states suffering sharpest declines were Texas, Missouri, and Illinois. NEW HAMPSHIRE-Political dopesters, both Republican and Democrat, have spent days trying to read a national trend into the results of Morris Nearly Quits the New Hampshire preferential primary. No one can be sure how the results can be applied to the nation as a whole.

but there are several noteworthy facts as a result of the election which the average home town voter can apply to his own area.

General Eisenhower's victory is an indication of the respect and popularity he commands from the average voter. This is important when it is remembered that Eisenhower backers made no all-out effort in the contest. On the other hand, Senator Taft stumped the state as if campaigning in the presidential race itself. There is one obvious conclusion. Except for Ohio, and perhaps, a few other strongholds, Eisenhower appears to be the GOP's best vote getter. Whether or not he can get the nomination, of course, still remains in serious doubt. On the Democratic side of the picture, Senator Kefauver pulled something of an upset by defeating President Truman, who had the state's Democratic machine behind him. As a result, it is reasonable to assume that the Tennessee senator has a far greater vote getting potential than political forecasters realized, or President Truman is so unpopular the votes went to Kefauver as a protest of the Truman administration and policies.

It should be remembered, however, that results of the preferential contest are not binding on the state's convention delegates, either of Jesus' prayer at Calvary,-"Fa- Republican or Democrat. Taft still retains a ther, forgive them; they know not majority of the Republican convention delewhat they do." Furthermore, it is gates. Encouraged by the New Hampshire reonly Luke who conceived and wrote sult, Eisenhower backers may now begin their all-out drive to corral delegates and thus the nomination.

> Kefauver's victory in New Hampshire does not mean he is as popular in other sections of the country. Truman still has the nomination tied up if he wants it. Some observers believe, however, Truman will now hasten his decision about running, if he has not already made up his mind. By a quick announcement he might check growing Kefauver popularity.

DEADLOCK __ With peace talks deadlocked over prisoner exchange and what nations will supervise the armistice, if one is ever negotiated, the big question on the battlefront is what effect spring will have on the Message to Moscow two armies which have faced each other for nearly two years.

In this connection, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U.S. Eighth Army commander, indulged in a little speculation. The commander reported the Chinese and Korean Reds have built up a force of 900,000 men in Korea. He added that the Reds have more men, weapons, and planes

But he does not believe the Reds will launch a spring offensive, but if they did he would welcome it and stop it cold.

"I am confident we could stop any attack the Communists might throw at us", he said. "It would be a good thing if we could get those people out of their foxholes and dugouts to mow them down the way we did last April and May."

As for possible Allied plans, the general said: "The future operations of the Eighth Army are still on the conference table at Panmunjom." That was not saying very much, but it is generally believed there Roberts, a junior at Pineville high will be no all-out Allied offensive unless the truce talks collapse completely. If they should, then the people of the home towns of America must steel themselves for the explosion that of necessity must follow. It could mean an all-out war in Asia.

Meanwhile, the Department of Defense reported the latest American casualty total in Korea at 106,458. Of the total, 18,505 are known to have century-the Korean. been killed.

TAXES___ The all-powerful house-senate economic committee reportedly has agreed that there should be no general increase in tax rates this year. It was not exactly surprising news to the nation's taxpayers, since congressional opposition has been expressed from the moment President Truman announced his record $85,000,000,000 spending budget.

The committee went on record as favoring a $10,000,000,000 cut in the budget. By closing existing tax loopholes, the $10 billion budget cut, and with surpluses which go into government trust funds, the committee in a democratic nation with all the bread. said it believed the budget could be balanced. The President had asked congress to close the tax loopholes in his Talking fast, Murphy urged the new trouble-shooter to talk it over with President Truman, and promptly hustled him to the White House. Within half an hour, Morris was in the oval room conferring earnestly with the President.
