

Acquire New Goals In Annual Jamboree And Fair

Tired but pleased citizens watched the close of the fifth annual Stratford Jamboree and Junior Fair here this year. The exhibits at the fair represented many new arts and hobbies. Secret hobbies came from hiding to construct one of the most elaborate displays of art work to have been presented at fairs in the Texas Panhandle.

Livestock entries of top breeding classes provided keen competition for each producer of his respective herds.

Two modern dances, a carnival, a grand parade, and three performances of a good rodeo provided continuous entertainment. The barbecue at noon Saturday drew an even larger crowd than had been expected.

The annual celebration was sponsored by the Howard Norvell Green Post of the American Legion although practically every civic organization of the town and county cooperated in making the program possible. Citizens contributing to the success of the celebration represented most of the homes in Sherman County and this cooperation in all probability was the secret of the success of the annual event.

The entire program was carried out with only minor accidents. One cowboy lost three teeth in rodeo events, and a physician was called for another. He took a hard fall but recovered consciousness before a local physician had an opportunity to make an examination.

Finance committeemen still labor with the task of paying off the costs of the celebration. Statements for all the expense of the celebration have not been turned over to this committee, but they believe they have a chance of closing the books on the celebration without a loss of money. A modern day celebration which pays its own way is very successful.

Farm-by-Farm Needed Feature Of '53 ACP Success

The most needed conservation on each individual farm in Texas is the central theme of the "farm-by-farm" contracts which the Production and Marketing Administration is conducting at this time, says B. F. Vance, chairman of the Texas State PMA Committee.

He explains that community committeemen who soon will be visiting each individual farm in their communities will be prepared to assist each farmer to determine what is most needed on the farm to conserve and improve his land and how the Agricultural Conservation program can best be used to meet this need.

While the community committeeman will assist in determining the most needed conservation practice, the decisions will be up to the farmer, the chairman points out. The farmer and the committeeman will check the farm field-by-field. By "pinpointing" ACP assistance on the most needed practices more conservation is expected from each dollar of program funds expended.

Vance explains that ACP in effect is a government-farmer partnership with the government, representing both the consumer and the farmer, sharing in the cost of essential conservation measures. The ACP share averages about 50 percent of the out-of-pocket cost.

Each farmer will be encouraged to carry out all needed conservation practices but ACP assistance will be directed to those key operations which in the long run will be most effective in assuring continued and increasing production.

Vance points out that ACP assistance is limited to the amount allocated to a county. This means that assistance cannot be provided for all conservation practices that may be needed and therefore the assistance will be applied where it will get the most conservation for each dollar of the funds available.

Its Serious Business On Bunker Hill

Pfc. Gene Austin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Austin, sent his parents the following clipping from a newspaper published in Korea. The article includes an interview in which the sergeant with Gene gave a report of what took place.

"Two Marine sergeants, grimy and red eyed with weariness, came off Bunker Hill after three days and three nights of fighting, full of the bitterness of battle and thankful to be alive.

They were two of the many men who stayed off seven fanatical Chinese attempts to recapture scarred and barren Bunker Hill. It's more a ridge than a hill; sprawls way out between the line and when you approach it from any direction you are under excellent observation from both sides. Both sides look down on it from higher ground.

"I'll tell you how it was," said Sgt. Clarence Wilkins, Jr., Hartford, Conn. We didn't eat much and we didn't hardly sleep any and whenever we moved the goonies could see us do it and they'd let us have it with their big guns. Once they threw 7,000 rounds on us in just a few hours. They came at us in all kinds of attacks. But our boys never complained about any thing."

"Even the wounded guys didn't complain." Sgt. Howard Ryan, East Meadow, N. Y., exclaimed. "The first guy I helped carry out was laid wide open under the stomach, but he was grinning and smoking a cigarette.

"He laughed and said, 'I wear a helmet and flak jacket and they get me below the belt.' He was so cheerful and the rest of us had a hard time keeping him from seeing how sick we felt."

What were the Chinese attacks like? "You never knew when you were going to get one," said Ryan. "One started when a goonie ran up on a high ridge and fired three short bursts on a burp gun. That set off the battle and every gun in the world went off. Everybody was waiting. That's the way it always was — everybody waiting."

Temperatures soared 100 degrees and higher.

"You got so hot and tense you couldn't eat," Ryan said. "We had some C rations. Mostly I lived on cocoa."

Artillery pounded the hill constantly. Concussion of one shell blew Ryan clear out of his foxhole and several feet into the air. "It didn't hurt me," he smiled. "Shook me up a little."

"We'd clear our guns and check ammo and shift automatic weapons around and carry out our dead and wounded between artillery bursts," Wilkins said. "We were always busy, seems like."

"We saw more awful things happen," Wilkins said. He shook his head dolefully.

Ryan shuddered at the memories. "Rank didn't mean nothing out there on Bunker Hill," he murmured. "Everybody was a good Joe. Nobody complained."

Beryl Verner Writes From Germany

Cpl. Beryl Verner, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Verner, stationed in Germany, writes home. Dear Mom, Dad and Helen:

Well I will try to write and tell you about my leave in Garmisch. It is a rest center in the Alpine Mountains for the soldiers. We left here last Wednesday the 6th of August. We arrived in Garmisch that afternoon. We had a good night of rest and the next day we went to the Olympic Ski Stadium where all the Olympic games are held. It was very nice, went up on top of the ski jump and it sure is a long way down. We left there and went to Partnach Gorge. It is a mountain stream which runs down between two mountains. It has falls and rapids all along the stream. They have a path cut out in the rocks along one side of the stream. The water is very clear and you can see the bottom even when it is 20 feet deep.

The next day we went to the top of Wank Mountains. They have a cable car to take you up. The mountain is about 1,795 meters which is about 3,000 or more feet. On top they have a large hotel and cafe. There is no snow on the ground at this time but it is very nice up there. You have a view of the mountains for 100 miles or more. We took pictures and stayed there most of the day to get a sun tan. It is very easy to get a tan here.

The third day we went to Eibsu Lake Resort. It is a lake up in the mountains 1,000 meters high. They have a large hotel there for soldiers only. They have water skiing, sail boating, motor boat tours, swimming, golf, tennis, and horseback riding. They have a small bar, photo shop, and a barber shop in the hotel. We went swimming and the water was cold.

The fourth day we took a tour of the Zugspitze, a ski resort winter and summer. It is 9,967 feet high. We went by bus over the Austrian side of the mountains. This cable car lift is the longest in Europe. When we reached the top we went through a tunnel to the German side. It was a 15 minute walk through the tunnel and there was ice all over the walls. On the German side of the Zugspitze we took another cable car to the very summit of the mountains. They have a government weather station on the very top. From the top you can see the mountains in Italy, Switzerland, Austria, and Germany, but the day we went it was cloudy and cold and we did not have such a good view.

The fifth day we went back to Eibsu for a day in the sun to just relax. The sixth day we took a tour of Linderhof castle. It was built by King Ludwig II between 1870 and 1880. It is very beautiful, very small for a castle but the lavish use of gold makes it unbelievable. There was 25 million gold dollars worth of gold on the walls and floors. The king also had a Blue Grotto cave built as a copy of the Blue Grotto of Capri. It took 200 men 6 months to build it. A stage had been built in it for shows and concerts. We went through the castle of Oberammergau where the Passion play theater is located. They have it about every 10 years like the Easter pageant. I get reduced prices on most things and the tours are free to soldiers. The trip was well worth the money.

Texans Face Issues At Convention

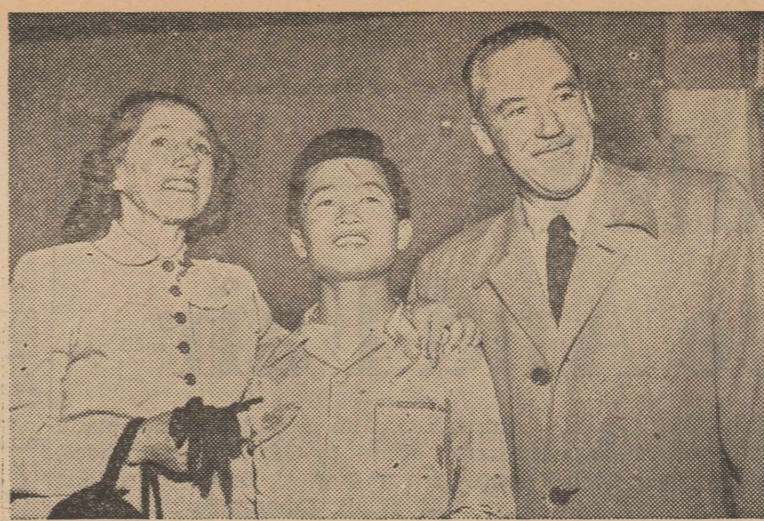

D. W. Wilson, delegate, and Walter Pendleton, alternate, have returned home from the State Democratic Convention held in Amarillo Tuesday and Wednesday.

The convention delegates did their work in a comparative smooth manner, although fireworks threatened to erupt over the tidelands issue.

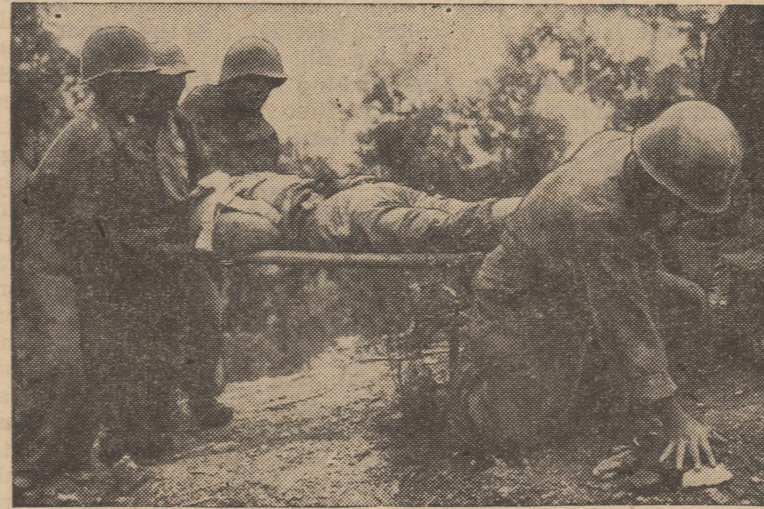

To vote for a presidential candidate favoring state ownership of the tidelands, Texas democrats must vote for a republican in the general election.

Every convention has its moments of amusement and the state convention at Amarillo was no exception. A Harris County delegate circulated this resolution:

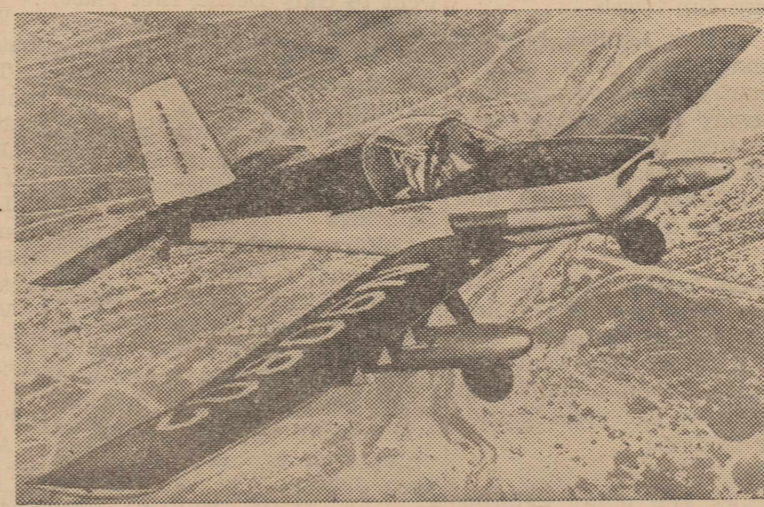

"Be it here resolved that the proposed Fair Employment Practice Commission and Civil Rights Legislation be amended and expanded to provide for the creation of a new bureau with duties and powers to provide husbands for all women who have been passed over in the present unfair marriage market, and who would like to have husbands. That these unfairly treated women shall be provided with husbands, regardless of the woman's age or beauty, color or contour, weight or width, whether she be toothed or toothless. That this new bureau shall be called the Fair Marriage Practices Commission and shall have delegated the necessary power under law to draft the necessary husbands, and shall obtain the spiritual,

STATE POLICE down in Georgia have caught a few law-abiding motorists. The officers thumb these good drivers to the curb and give them a good talking—but it is not the tongue lashing the drivers expect. Instead, it is part of the Georgia highway patrol's policy of stopping safe drivers and commending them on their highway manners.

Caught driving safely near Valdosta last week was Dawdle Dell's "champeen greenhorn," Collard Green, vacationing in the southland with his wife, Blondine. He was sputtering along in his 1930 Ford, not exceeding 25 m.p.h., driving on his side of the road, and veering off a straight line not one iota. Suddenly, the shrill whine of a siren in his left ear forced him to ram his brake pedal to the floor. Neither Collard nor his brakes are as quick as they were in 1930, so the car continued in motion until Collard in confusion turned the front wheels into a ditch. A police cruiser ground to a dusty halt beside him. Blondine screamed.

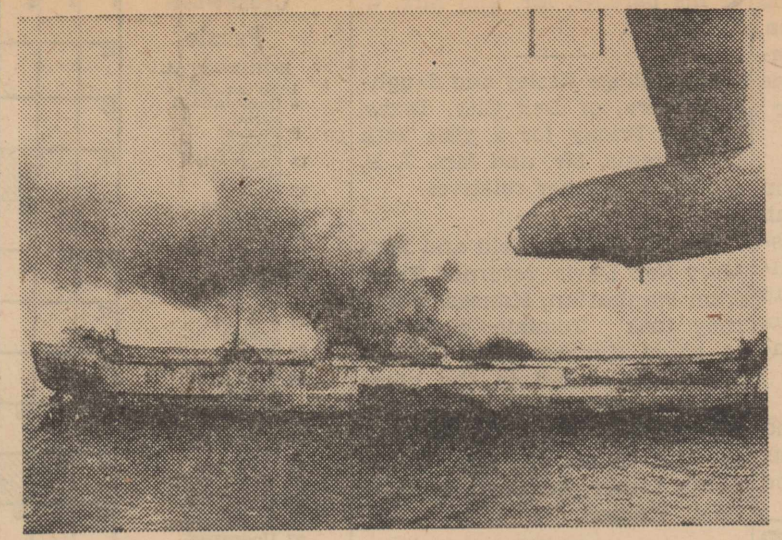

A burly patrolman leaped from the cruiser. "I must compliment you on not exceeding 50 m. p. h.," he growled politely. Collard felt better. The way his coupe rattled, no telling how fast he had been going. "You are not drunk," sneered the cop. "Congratulations, Bud! And although it's not very inspiring, stopping a guy for sticking to his side of the road, I must thank you for driving on the right."

Just then a new car roared past, doing 90 on the left side, veering in a corkscrew spiral, and leaving a trail of whiskey bottles. The cop sighed. "Don't have to worry about those guys any more since we stop the good drivers now. But I can't utter nothing but compliments, and I got a few choice cuss words cankered in my chest."

Blondine hadn't recovered from her fright. She begged, "Officer, please let us go. My husband will buy a driver's license soon as we get home. I promise!"

A new light came into the policeman's eyes as he gazed at Collard. "You dirty, law-breaking skunk!" he snarled. "Welcome to Georgia!"

GREAT AUNT MATILDA
 ...by Eva Whetstone

I HAD ON OLD MAID great-aunt in the attic. My husband and I inherited her with the rambling Victorian house built by my great-grandfather, in whose will "provision for board and shelter the rest of her natural life" was amply provided. Her name was Matilda. After living in the house 10 years, we had seen her no more than a half-dozen times—then only through a crack-door. An old servant, Lucy, who took her meals and cleaned the top floor room, was the only person with whom she communicated. Aunt Matilda had shut herself away 40 years because she was awaiting a certain man's request to marry her. He was a man who existed only for her. No one else ever saw or heard of him.

When her last sister married long ago, Matilda announced she was receiving mail from an admirer. She explained to her surprised parents he was an out-of-town divinity student, who sat in the back pew at church one Sunday and spoke to her after service.

She said she was carrying on correspondence with him, who, she said, was in England waiting to go to Africa. She never spoke of receiving a letter, however, except when she was the one who picked up the mail. Neither her mother nor father could remember the young man, and no one with whom they talked remembered him, either.

Nevertheless, Matilda, helping her mother in household chores, was very preoccupied. One day stew, obviously from left-overs, was set before my great-grandfather; and the gentleman, whose favorite recreation was eating, demanded why.

So my great-grandmother had to explain Matilda had done the shopping that day and lost the grocery list. Then while the man grumbled into his beard, my great-aunt rose with shaky dignity and declared that her mind had been on the young man, who that morning had written permission to ask for her hand.

"But since in my present state of mind I seen to upset you," she told her father, "I shall confine myself to my quarters until you hear from him. Please have Lucy bring my meals. No one else is welcome!"

With that, she left the table. The young man's petition never came, and Lucy was the only person who ever talked to her again.

When my husband and I moved into the house, we worried about Aunt Matilda's health. But Lucy assured us that, despite 80-odd years, my aunt was in the pink of condition.

One morning, we were reading our separate sections of the paper, when suddenly there was a soft cough and a bright-eyed little old lady in old-fashioned clothes stood in the door.

"Niece," she said, "for you must be the one Lucy tells me about—I've just discovered a very serious mistake!"

She thrust before me a yellowed envelope, across which the name "Mr. John R. Davis" was barely legible. "No wonder they never heard from him," she continued as my husband and I sat speechless.

"This morning I was straightening about, when this letter dropped from a coat lining—there was a hole in the pocket. You know, I can't blame Father for being upset. I mailed the grocery list!"

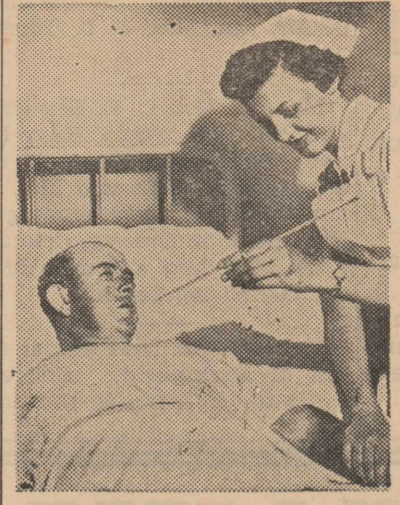

"However, there'll be time for catching later," she declared. "Right now I must mail this letter. He's probably thinking it's not coming!"

"Go after her!" I demanded of my husband as Aunt Matilda hurried out the front door. "Do something to keep her from mailing that letter! In the meantime, I'll burn this newspaper."

I realized that on the envelope was the second place I had seen the name "John R. Davis." The first had been a moment before, in a news item.

It told how the body of a bachelor missionary, serving nearly 40 years in the African jungles without leave, was being returned here because of a deathbed wish to be buried near the only woman he ever loved.

Yes, the A-B-C's, and all other school work, are much easier when the light is good and eyestrain is gone.

Be sure your children study with a lamp with sloping sides to give them the widest area of usable light. Use a tall lamp, and, when writing is part of the studying, be sure the lamp is opposite the hand being used so that the shadows run away from the light.

SANDWICH SNACKS always offer a challenge to your ingenuity whether you have them for refrigerator raids or for lunch boxes. Here are some tips on keeping them interesting:

Hot dog and hamburger buns give interesting variety to the bread picture. Salad mixtures such as tuna fish, egg salad or meat salad go nicely into them.

Here's an interesting sandwich filler which may be a little different from ones you've tried: chopped sharp American cheese, pieces of pickle, pieces of black olives and enough mayonnaise to hold the mixture together.

Why not use the last of the frankfurters and weiners for a sandwich? Slice the weiner and combine with baked beans adding a bit of chili sauce and brown sugar to moisten. If you want to heat this, place on bread or halved

GOOD SENSE
BY RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

THEY DECIDED to be sensible about it.
"I'm only making $30 a week," Ken said. "But I've a good chance of making more soon. I couldn't ask you to get along on $30 a week."
"We'd be happy," Jill told him. "I'd be happy with you no matter what you made a week," she added, practically. "But it is more sensible to wait. Things would be so much easier."
Jill's parents nodded their heads wisely when she told them about it. Their daughter was smart. She had good sense.
"Ken's a bright boy," Mr. Whitney agreed. "He'll be making $50 per in no time at all."
Mr. Whitney had faith. Jill had faith. Ken had faith. But Ken had more. He had incentive. Jill was the incentive. Up until a month ago women hadn't bothered him much. Then he'd met Jill. Neither of them had ever quite recovered from the discovery that they loved each other. It was too wonderful.
Ken was a writer of advertising copy. In the days that followed he wrote advertising copy with a zip and a sparkle that he had never thought himself capable of. He thought surely that Mr. Santrell, his boss, would notice. Mr. Santrell did. He complimented Ken highly and bestowed upon his young shoulders an encouraging pat. But the old pay envelope still contained 30 bucks, no more.
Weeks passed. Ken still zipped out his smart copy, but that was all the good it did him. Every week he opened his pay envelope with an eagerness that made his disappointment double-edged. Every week he hoped that he could call on Jill and tell her that he'd received the raise and there was no need of waiting longer.
But that day didn't come. He and Jill talked about it. Occasionally one of them became discouraged. Then the other assumed a cheerful and optimistic attitude. The raise would come. It was bound to.
But it didn't. Two months passed. Ken began to despair. Jill, he imagined, was becoming less interested. He fancied she was falling out of love with him. He couldn't blame her. On the other hand, if her love were genuine, she'd wait forever.
His fears were realized one day a week later when he saw her out driving with a young man with a black mustache. Sight of the pair laughing and talking together was like a knife-thrust in his heart. He made inquiries and learned that the young man with the black mustache was Cy Parker, son of a business associate of Jill's father. Cy was just home from a year abroad after graduating from college.
The next night when Ken called on Jill he expected her to explain about Cy Parker. But she said nothing. It was a dreary night. The moon was obscured by heavy clouds. There was mist in the air. Ken drove home early. They said good-night without kissing.
Ken wished he were dead. He might, he thought, as well be. Death could have no sting like the pain in his heart.

Thereafter the zip and sparkle went out of Ken's advertising copy. He could think of nothing but Jill. Mr. Santrell no longer paused beside his desk to compliment him and pat him on the shoulder. He began to fear for his job. He was miserable.
Three nights later he called on Jill. She was alone, waiting in the living room, dressed for a party. He knew she must be going out with Cy Parker.
"I guess," he said without preamble, "you've thought it over and decided it was a mistake."
"Thought what over?" Jill said.
"About marrying me. If you loved me you wouldn't care how much I was making."
"I've already told you I could be happy with you no matter what you made a week."
"But you wouldn't marry me on 30 dollars a week."
"Who said I wouldn't?"
"Why," said Ken, "why—you did."
"I never. I never said any such thing. I merely agreed with you when you said we ought to be making more. I thought you wanted me to agree. I thought you didn't think we could be happy on $30."
"Well, for gosh sakes!" said Ken. He stared at her. She was looking at him round-eyed. There was a sort of hopeful appeal in her expression.
"Well, for gosh sakes!" he said again, and suddenly popped out of his chair and strode over to the divan where she was sitting.
When Mr. Cy Parker rang the Whitney doorbell 15 minutes later no one answered it. The elder Whitneys were away and Jill was busy. Quite busy. After awhile Mr. Parker went away.
Shortly after this Ken sat up straight. He looked like one who had swooned into a coma and liked it. Jill said:
"And now that we've decided we can be happy on 30 dollars a week, I want to tell you something. I feel that I have the right."
"You certainly have," declared Ken earnestly. "No one in the world has a better right."
"Then tomorrow you start writing advertising copy with the same zip and sparkle that you did before. And after you've been doing it for a week you go into Mr. Santrell and demand a raise."
"But, holy smoke! I can't do that! Why, he might fire—"
"You do as I say," Jill told him.
"After all, my opinion ought to be considered if I have to get along on half your salary."
Ken did as he was told. The following Saturday night he rushed up the Whitney front walk with wild whoops of joy.
"I knew he'd give you the raise," Jill smiled. "Your stuff is good."
"What gripes me," Ken said, perplexed. "Is why I didn't think of asking him myself long ago."
"There's a lot of things you should have thought of long ago," Jill said wisely.

Easy Does It

CERTAIN SMALL CARES given your electric washing machine will add years of wear and service to it, as well as help cut down on repair costs.

Don't let water stand in the tub for hours after washing is done. Let it drain off, then wipe carefully with a clean cloth, rinse and dry. Agitator and suction cups should be removed and rinsed well, too.

A soft sponge and a hose are ideal for removing lint and soap curd which have formed either on the tub or on the agitator or suction cups.

Wipe rolls or wringer, too, before putting machine away for the next time. It will save the springs and rubber on the rolls if you release the pressure for the time machine is not in use.

Leave the cover off the tub until the dampness has dried. This will prevent a musty odor.

Always wipe the connecting rod dry and carefully wind it around hooks or wringer so that it will not drag on the floor and wear as you move the machine.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Beet Greens, Sour Cream (Serves 6)
 4 cups chopped, cooked beet greens
 2 teaspoons minced onion
 1/2 cup sour cream
 2 1/2 tablespoons prepared horseradish
 3/4 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon pepper
 Combine all ingredients. Heat thoroughly. Serve as vegetable.

Washers should be stored in unheated locations, but all water should be out so they can never freeze and thus become damaged. Place washer in a warm location, then for an hour or so before washing begins so that it can heat and the grease in the gearcase can soften before use. This will help prevent burned out motors.

Always cover the washer after it's dried out, so that dust and grime cannot accumulate. Plastic covers are excellent protection for them, as they're light and easy to wipe clean.

If your washing machine is on wheels, see that they are always lined properly when moving so that you do not have to force them, and thus weaken them.

BARBECUED frankfurters can be served indoors or out during warm weather. Split the frankfurters, place in a pan and baste with barbecue sauce for about 15 minutes.

Huckleberries make a fine upside down cake. Use your regular recipe or cake mix to make the batter, substituting orange juice for the liquid. Use the brown sugar-butter mixture as you would for any upside down cake.

Cool, simple desserts are ideal for hot weather. Dissolve one package of lemon-flavored gelatin in a 12-ounce can hot apricot whole fruit nectar, then add 1/2 cup cold water. Chill until thickened; fold in 1 cup fresh raspberries. To serve mix with softened ice cream.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Wilted Lettuce (Serves 6)
 2 heads lettuce
 1 teaspoon sugar
 1/2 cup olive oil
 3/4 cup vinegar
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 Dash of pepper
 6 slices crisp bacon
 Wash lettuce and remove any wilted leaves. Drain well. Cut into string 1/2-inch thick. Sprinkle with sugar. Add olive oil to vinegar and heat to boiling. Add seasonings and pour over lettuce, tossing well. Place in moderate (350°F.) oven for 3 minutes. Place in serving dish, top with bacon, finely minced.

Next time you make potato salad, use half mayonnaise, half French dressing. Fold in ripe olive chunks, plenty of salt, freshly ground pepper and a bit of gination onion.

Make a good combination salad of baby lima beans, red kidney beans, sliced summer squash and slices of avocado. Use oil and vinegar dressing.

Make a delicious casserole out of left-over turkey. Combine the meat with diced celery and some halved roasted almonds. Bind with mayonnaise, salt and lemon juice. Place in a shallow baker, sprinkle with grated cheese and crushed potato chips. Bake in a hot oven 15 minutes.

Legacy of a King

Lesson for September 14, 1952

DAVID did not mention you in his will. But if you are a Christian, you are one of his heirs all the same. The gold and silver he owned have long since been spent; of his palace not one stone is left upon another; his vast holdings in land have gone to strangers far outside his family. But the most valuable part of what he left us is still with us, imperishable: his legacy of religion.

Dr. Foreman

Experience of God
ONE THING every one will think of: the Psalms. Bible students realize that the titles of the Psalms are not part of the original psalms, but represent later editors' beliefs as to the authors. However, scholars are agreed that David did write some Psalms and may in fact be called the father of the psalm-book.

Now the chief importance of any Psalm is not that it is a hymn or has been the basis of other hymns (as most of them have); it is not simply that it is beautiful and unforgettable poetry. The main point is that it is a first-hand record of first-hand experience of God.

We do not always realize how much of our own religious experience grows out of the experience of others. We would lack much of our interest in God and knowledge of him if we had not been waked up, so to speak, by some one else first. Think of the millions of readers of the 23rd Psalm, for instance, from David's time to now,—the millions who have been inspired and comforted by it. How much we owe to David!

Singing Faith
WE CHRISTIANS owe to David also that blending of beauty with religion which is a mark of our faith. Beauty apart from religion can drag man down and destroy them. Religion apart from beauty is usually a harsh and cold affair. There is a great deal of irreligious beauty and unreligious religion in the world, and neither of them does the world much good.

But for David religion and beauty flowed into each other, or rather beauty found its highest level in the service of God. It was not only in the words and music of the Psalms.

While David did not build the Temple, he dreamed it, and before a stone was laid he could see in his mind's eye the fine carvings, the gold inlays, the cypress and the fir, the brilliantly woven hangings; all the gorgeous gleaming Temple that he never lived to see, was in his mind and heart. He it was who gathered singing men and singing women for the worship of God the Lord. Whatever beauty there is in our church buildings, in our hymns, in our services, we owe much of the original inspiration of it to David.

Ways of Life
RELIGION that cannot be applied to daily living, religion that is a purely solitary affair, has never been typical of the best in Christianity. Christianity has something to say to the world, our world, our world, something to do in it. Christianity in retreat, in hiding, is not full Christianity.

Perhaps we owe more of this ideal to David than we realize. For when he came to the throne, the ark—sacred symbol of the presence of God—was in a little out-of-the-way place where few could know of it. David took that ark and brought it to the nation's capital. Shrine and city must be united.

So wherever today the church stands literally or figuratively at the crossroads of life, challenging, inviting, winning men, a constant reminder of God, we should be thankful to David, who set the symbol of his religion in the very center of his nation's principal city.

Faith Faces Forward
ONE MORE thing must be mentioned, which we owe at least in part to David. It is a characteristic of both Jewish and Christian faith: Hope.

Some religions are religions of regret. Their golden age is in the past; as they see it the world is either going around and around in meaningless circle or in hopeless decay.

But any one who will read the Psalms with a penetrating eye can see how bright the future is to the Psalmist's mind. Bright, because it belongs to God. If Paul can say that hope is one of the things that endures, along with faith and love, he was not the first to think it. David long ago sang his songs of hope, and for this legacy too we may be grateful.

Scout Training Course Planned For Next Week

A training course for scout leaders will be held in the basement of the Central Methodist Church in Dalhart Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of next week. The courses of study will open at 8:00 o'clock. O. Dan Ferguson, who replaces W. M. Teague as field scout executive, states the study Monday night will be devoted to a boy scout training session. Tuesday night the program will be devoted to cub scouts and Wednesday night the study course will be devoted to explore scouts.

Scout leaders, institutional representatives and committee members are invited to attend. Dr. E. U. Johnston, Dalhart dentist, is the leadership training chairman for Dallam, Hartley, and Sherman Counties. Maurice Teague, district field executive of Amarillo, will teach the courses assisted by Dan Ferguson.

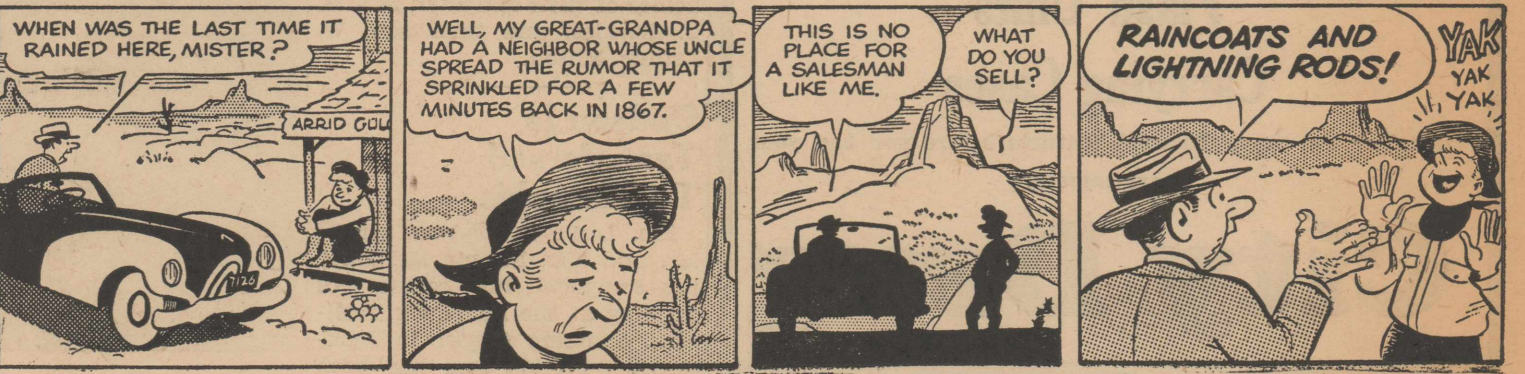

Light and Shadow Affect Decor
 Light and shadow have a definite effect on the colors that are combined in a room's decoration. Because the wall area that surrounds windows is in shadow, it appears darker than the walls on which the light from the windows falls. Decorators sometimes have window walls painted in a lighter tint to compensate for this condition.

A Sailor Reports On Korean Shores

Gardner L. Ross, a brother of Frank Ross, writes of his experiences on the U. S. battleship Iowa, in Korean waters.

BOMB LINE KOREA — Today we are on the bomb line and have a little activity. We rode out a storm last night that was pretty rough. Winds were up to 40 or 50 miles an hour. It cooled the hot weather which has been very disagreeable for some time.

I am sure glad I am not over in those hills with the ground forces where it is a steaming jungle. Those guys are going through plenty. When we pass closest to the front, the artillery can be heard almost all the time. We are outnumbered so much they can easily keep our troops busy most of the time.

They don't hesitate to use primitive brutality when they have the chance. Our helicopter picked up a downed pilot off one of the carriers. When they got to him it was too late. The Chinese had found him and he was horribly mutilated.

We made a sortie into Wosan harbor and blasted a hydroelectric plant, and destroyed bunkers and a gun or two. One of the small craft received an air burst over the ship. There were about a dozen casualties, resulting in three deaths. We received them on board our ship since we have more facilities for their care.

We hope to be in the states in November but that seems like a long time off.

Word Contraction
Sterling, meaning solid silver of a definite fineness, is a contraction of the word Easterling. English merchants of the 12th century applied that term to the merchants of the free towns of the Hanseatic League, on the continent. Finding the silver coinage issued by certain of these towns always uniform and dependable, the English came to insist on it as standard in trade, says the National Geographic Society. Eventually, they adopted "sterling" for English money and highest quality silverware.

Baptist Ladies Hear Book Review

Baptist WMU ladies met at the church Wednesday morning at 10:00 o'clock for an all day meeting and a book review given by Mrs. Clyde Hankins of Dalhart.

The meeting was opened with the singing of two hymns, "Leaning On The Everlasting Arm," and "Blessed Be The Tie That Binds."

The group was led in prayer by Mrs. M. J. Carter.

Mrs. Hankins reviewed the first part of the book, "The Lower Level of Prayer," during the remainder of the morning, after which a covered dish luncheon and social hour was enjoyed.

At 2:00 P. M. the afternoon session was opened with the singing of the hymn, "Sweet Peace, The Gift of God's Love."

Mrs. Clifford Byrd led in prayer which was followed by special music. Mrs. Leon Guthrie and Mrs. J. P. Webb sang "Sweet Hour of Prayer."

The book review was resumed by Mrs. Hankins, who is the wife of the temporary pastor of the First Baptist Church in Dalhart, during the absence of the regular pastor, Rev. W. R. Lawrence, who is now serving as a chaplain in the army. As soon as Rev. Lawrence returns, Rev.

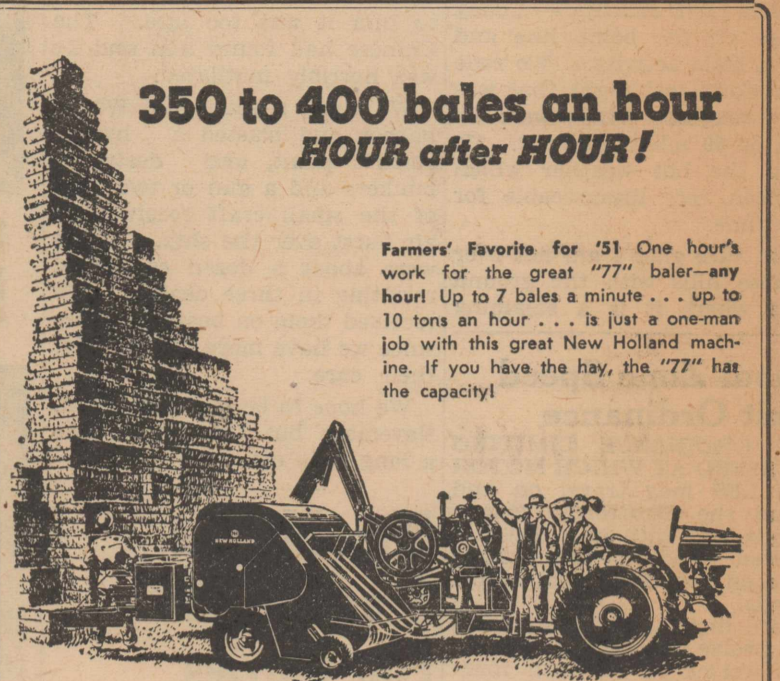

and Mrs. Hankins plan to return to their work as missionaries in Brazil, where they have been for a number of years.

Mrs. Hankins then told of the life she and her husband led, of their work, about the people and conditions in Brazil. This was followed by a question and answer session.

The meeting was dismissed with the Missionary benediction by Mrs. M. E. Upchurch.

Mrs. King Fike, Mrs. Jerry Minter and Miss Sally Childers of Dalhart and 31 local members and visitors attended the meeting.
