Legion Auxiliary Is Fighting Cancer

American Legion Auxiliary ladies are waging a fight against cancer by raising funds to build a new wing for the M. D. Anderson Hospital at Houston, Texas for the purpose of cancer research and treatment of the disease. Roy C. Heflebower, Assistant Director, expresses his appreciation of the contribution made by the local auxiliary in the following letter:

"During the past few weeks it has not been possible to acknowledge receipt of notices from your Department Headquarters relative to your contribution toward the American Legion Auxiliary Memorial Project. We extremely regret this delay which has been due to insufficient personnel occasioned by the tremendous burden of getting our house in order for the move into our new hospital the latter part of the summer.

Your Department Secretary has consistently forwarded the reports to us and at this time we find you have contributed $145.60 not heretofore acknowledged by the hospital.

On behalf of the Director of this Hospital and his staff, I wish to express our appreciation for your donation. Our move into the new hospital will enable us to greatly increase our work in caring for the victims of cancer and to intensify our efforts in broadening the scope of our research programs. Contributions and interest such as yours, as well as being major factors in the growth of our fight against cancer, are real tributes to the memory of departed friends and to the Units and individuals participating in this program."

Wear A Poppy Saturday

Saturday, May 23, everyone will be asked to wear a little red poppy on their coats or dresses. The day will be Poppy Day, when once each year, all America pays tribute, by wearing the memorial flower, the poppy, to those who gave their lives in America's service during the World Wars. And as we receive our poppy from the ladies of the American Legion Auxiliary, who will distribute the flowers on the streets that day, citizens will be aiding the war's living victims by the contribution we make for the flower.

The poppies which worn on Poppy Day are not, of course, natural flowers from the battle fields. They are flowers which have even greater significance than any nature could produce. They are made in hospitals and workrooms where war's suffering is still going on. They have bloomed under the hands of men disabled in war, the comrades of those in whose honor they will be worn. Their petals are only paper and their stems wire, yet into them have been breathed the spirit of patriotic sacrifice, the spirit of those days when life itself was not too much to give for America.

The disabled veterans who make the poppies derive double benefit from the work. First, it gives them employment, their only chance to help support themselves and families. With strength and health gone they cannot do regular work but they can make poppies. Even in their hospital beds they can do this work, earning money for each flower they make. Second, the work is of real value in aiding their recovery, occupying hands and minds, breaking the tedium of long idleness, and restoring spirits crushed by hopelessness.

The women who distribute the poppies, unlike the disabled veterans who make them, receive nothing for their efforts, nothing tangible, that is, only the satisfaction of having helped brighten the memory of the dead and of having contributed to the welfare of the living.

The money which is given in exchange for the poppies goes entirely to the welfare activities of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary to help support the disabled veterans, the families of the disabled and the families left in need by the death of veterans.

Understanding the meaning of the poppy and the use to which the poppy funds are put, can any of us be deaf to the appeal of Poppy Day? Can any of us fail to greet the Auxiliary poppy workers with a welcome smile, fail to put on the poppy of remembrance for the dead and show that we remember the living by contributing as liberally as our means will permit? I am sure there are few in Stratford in whom remembrance, gratitude and patriotism burns so low. I am sure that the poppy will be on all our coats on Poppy Day.

Food For Defense And Disaster

If your family became isolated during a disaster or atomic attack would the pantry and refrigerator provide enough food until help arrived? Surprise Party By Virgie Evans Roger

In the dining nook of her apartment Sandra Cunningham yanked open the bottom drawer of her buffet. Which table cloth to use? The answer was simultaneous with the question—her best, of course. She pulled the lacy fligree from the bottom of the stack. Would this be the night for her and Jim? Dinner for two, by candlelight, her heart sang, as she placed a tall white taper on each side of the red roses Jim had sent. He usually brought his flowers—but the roses had arrived by messenger soon after she got home from the office. Ah, she smiled, as she brought out her hope chest two-place setting of sterling, was this his way of saying he was ready? Returning to the kitchenette she took a package from the small refrigerator and unwrapped the luscious looking T-bone steaks, Jim's favorite. "Beautiful," she exclaimed under her breath, momentarily pausing to admire them before preparing for the broiler. She lifted the lid to check the bubbling potatoes as the telephone rang sharply. "Oh, don't let it be Jim saying he can't come," she prayed.

"Hi, cookie," Jim said as she answered. "Do I smell chicken?" he teased. "Just wait and see," she sang, anticipating his delight over the juicy steaks. "Mind if I spring a little surprise on you?" he asked. "Please," she begged. "Don't say you can't come." "On the contrary. Could I bring someone along? I have a new girl friend." His words cut like a double-edged knife. Noises hammered in her ears. She couldn't believe she had heard right. "Girl friend!" she tried to hold her voice steady. "Just a little surprise," he answered casually. Little surprise! The bottom had fallen out of everything. "Why, Jim," she stalled, trying to pick from her jumbled thoughts something to say. "If you . . . if you want to," she managed at last. If he said more Sandra didn't hear. She came to with the dial tone in her ear. She slammed the phone into its cradle, a dozen questions pounding in her mind. Her glance fell on the lace-covered table for two. Did Jim want it for three? What would Emily Post say, she wondered ironically, about how to entertain your fiancé's new girl friend? But he wasn't her fiancé, she painfully admitted. And what did the table matter now? Or the steaks?

How could she face Jim? How could she face his new girl friend, she questioned, with panic. She just couldn't. She jumped when she heard a car stop in front—Jim's car. A glance out the window gave her the answer. There was the girl. Jim was helping her from the front seat. Bundled in furs, Sandra couldn't tell whether she was big or little—probably a petite brunette, in contrast to her five-foot-ten blond make-up, she thought with chagrin, as she beat it to the back door. By the time they came in she would be outside. She fumbled nervously with the door. "Darn that tricky latch!" she berated, as Jim rang the chimes and simultaneously burst into the living room. "Hello, Beautiful," he called. "Anybody home?" She was trapped. An instant later Jim's tall frame was coming through the archway, a five-year-old girl in his arms. "Here she is, Cookie," he was saying to Sandra, "this is Pam, my new little girl friend."

"Oh," Sandra said, relief enveloping her, as things began to come into focus again. "Oh, Jim, what a surprise!" Suddenly they were laughing together and everything was beautiful again. Jim quickly explained that his relatives couldn't stay, but he had made them come by to meet her. He turned to the child as she and her mother prepared to go. "Pam, maybe she'd let you call her Aunt Sandra."

Was this a preview of the all important question? Then she'd preview her answer. "Of course, Pam, dear."

No doubt about it... Chevrolet trucks must be the best buy!

Ask us about our Safe-T-Way SERVICE. A public service program to promote safer driving.

This year—for the 12th straight production year—truck users are buying more Chevrolet trucks than any other make. That couldn't be true unless Chevrolet trucks offered more of what you want.

Already, 1953's official sales figures tell a remarkable story of clear-cut and decisive preference for Chevrolet trucks. But, this is not surprising, for truck users everywhere are discovering how far ahead of all others Chevrolet trucks really are.

They are discovering things like the tremendous new power in advanced Load-master engines in heavy-duty models . . . the remarkable gasoline economy . . . the extra ruggedness and strength of heavier, more rigid frame construction. And, in addition to all these advantages, the Chevrolet line lists for less than any other trucks of comparable size and capacity. So, before you buy any truck, stop in and see us.

STRATFORD GRADE SCHOOL NEWS

First Grade Mrs. Garner's Room

We are glad to hear from Gladys Schmidt, who left our room in November, going to Hutchinson, Kansas, then to Meno, Ringwood and on to Fairview, Oklahoma, finally returning to South Dakota. She wrote: Dear Mrs. Gardner:

I am now seven years old. I wish I could come back to your school room. How are you? I miss you."

These are the extra little "bonuses" which teachers receive, making "the struggle" worth while.

Mrs. Russell's Room

Carol Reeder has made the highest average in the year's work, but running with a close second were Senora Mullican, Georgia Ann Reeves, Duane Pittman, Sue Plunk and Charlotte Eller. In the "National Basic Word Test" by Dolch of Boston University, Duane Pittman made 100 in each of the four tests.

We have enjoyed our "Princess" Judith Steinberger this year. She is a friendly little lady and helped to welcome her classmates in the early days of school.

We wish to thank Mrs. Riggs for helping to take our weights and heights for our school record. Oh, yes, thanks to Jean Spurlock, Gwyn Clay, Glennis Webb and Virginia Plunk for helping cover books; Frankie Aduddell and Holly Harrington for putting up display work for our mother's tea.

We have enjoyed our music and art by Miss Watkins and Mrs. Harrison and the many good readers furnished by the school.

Mrs. Clyde Pittman and Mrs. George Allen, co-chairmen of the Mothers Club in our room, gave us a surprise in treating us with remaining room funds. We have enjoyed many treats and parties from our mothers and we do believe the happy faces repaid their efforts. The pot plants have made our room more home like so we say thanks for this thoughtfulness.

We have enrolled 25 in our room but have lost 2, Dow Brewer and Shirrel Collins, who moved away.

We finish the year's work with the following boys and girls: Lynn Allen, Johnny Brannan, Joe Cummings, Dwayne DeBord, Roy Finch, Duane Pittman, Buddy Riggs, Chucko Robinson, Sandy Tillery, Michael Hemphill, Larry and Jerry Robbs, Charlotte Eller, Lanita Judd, Senora Mullican, Sue Plunk, Carol Reeder, Georgia Ann Reeves, Billie Robbins, Judy Steinberger, Gloria Jean Wagner, Wanda Lou Weller and Karen Woolsey.

A list of names of the pupils will be left in the office for the school annually to be passed out when they arrive.

Second Grade Mrs. Peterson's Room

As the school year comes to a close, we wish to thank all who have helped us to make this a good year in the Second Grade. There are our Room Mothers: Mrs. V. W. Foreman, Mrs. David McBryde, Mrs. Virgil Plunk, Mrs. Earl Kirkwood, Mrs. Walter Green and Mrs. Donald Borth, who have been indispensable. Other parents and teachers have helped us by their kindly cooperation and we thank them also.

Every pupil in our room is passing to the Third Grade, except one who was ill too long to catch up on the year's work, and will find it more profitable to renew the basic foundation by taking some second grade work next year.

Remaining in the First or Second grade for a better start is never "failing." It is simply getting a better foundation on which to build the whole education structure. To pass unprepared might mean real failure in the higher grades.

Third Grade Miss Ballinger's Room

All of us are here this week. We are working hard finishing our work so we will be ready for our vacation.

We have one who has been neither absent nor tardy this year. This is Shela Ann Donelson. Several others just missed two other days.

Fifth Grade Mrs. Elliott's Room

(By News Committee) Oh! What a lovely time we had at our skating party in Dumas Monday after school. After the skating party we had a picnic in the park. All of our room mothers were with us and one room dad, too. They were: Mrs. James Cameron, Mrs. J. E. Crabtree, Mrs. G. C. Dortch, Mrs. K. Kendrick, and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Plunk. Mrs. Elliott was also greatly appreciated and Miss Watkins was a guest.

One of the most enjoyed periods throughout the year has been that of Flag appreciation, where-in a different pupil was leader each day in "Flag Salute" and gave some historical event or a proverb with special explanation of its meaning. These have been compiled in a band book and will be given Mrs. Elliott to keep.

Seventy-six visitors have signed our guest book throughout the year. The list includes:

Mothers, Fathers, Pastors, Soldiers, and educational counselors along with friends who are deeply interested in our welfare.

We wish to thank Mr. Ross, editor of the Stratford Star, for his kindness in making our news items just what we wanted them to be.

Final exams are here which means the end of this school year is at hand. It has been a short happy year for most of us however, vacation is a good substitute for confinement, and we are all ready for it.

Room mothers, we want to "thank" you again for all the nice things you have made possible for us this year. You are certainly tops in every respect.

Each year, 45 to 50 million tons of coal move across Ohio for shipment over the Great Lakes.

IT'S THE LAW

Legislative Permission Required For Suit Against State
Included among the measures passed by the current 53rd Texas Legislature are several Concurrent Resolutions permitting various individuals to file suits against the state. Applying to local situations only, they have been attended by very little publicity, and the majority of Texans are probably not even aware of their passage.

In fact, the average individual would seldom have occasion to ponder the question of whether the State of Texas can be sued on the same basis as a person or corporation. One of the prerogatives of sovereignty carried down from ages past into our present day laws is that of immunity from being sued. The State of Texas may not be sued without its consent.

The Legislature by a proper action may permit certain general types of suits to be brought against the state, under certain conditions and restrictions. Then, if a specific situation arises which is not covered by the general rules, the legislators are authorized to pass a special measure to permit suit to be brought.

Therefore, any person seeking to enforce a claim against the state through the courts must petition the Legislature for the necessary permission, unless his claim falls within some general category or type previously recognized by our lawmakers.

Recently passed legislation will allow suits to be brought against the state in a variety of cases, ranging from an action for damages for personal injuries in a collision with a State Highway Department truck to a suit for monetary damages alleged to have been incurred in connection with the securing of a right-of-way for a farm-to-market highway.

Sometimes, however, suits may be brought against individuals holding office under the State of Texas and acting as agents of the state, but where the state itself is not the principal party to the suit, without first gaining consent to sue. There are numerous situations in which an individual officer may be sued with regard to the duties and functions of his office, and in which the state is not directly or substantially a party in interest.

Suppose you do obtain legislative permission to sue the state. What happens then?

If suit is brought against the State of Texas, and the action is successfully prosecuted, you will be awarded a judgment against the state. Then, it's back to the Legislature for more legislation to appropriate the necessary money with which the state may pay off the judgment.

This column, based on Texas law, is written to inform, not to advise.

Seven Sensible Steps

There are seven sensible steps to growing older. That it, if you want to age successfully.

Miss Lucile King, County Home Demonstration Agent, says looking forward to later years can be done pleasantly by planning to include these seven steps in growing older. For healthier and happier years ahead, eat properly; get enough sleep, balance your exercise and rest; wear comfortable, attractive and becoming clothing; keep busy; and cultivate a sense of humor.

Growing older is a lifelong process and means changes of many kinds, physical, mental and social. These changes are natural and should be recognized and accepted. Plans for growing older can fill the need for affection, activity and achievement, companionship, being needed and useful, and for creative interests.

A well-balanced person looks back upon his life and profits from the lessons he has learned. He enjoys pleasant memories. But he also looks into the future to make plans for what he intends to do tomorrow.

What are we going to be like in ten or fifteen years? What kind of a sixty-five or seventy-year old will we be? If we are self-centered and withdrawn now we will be even more isolated when we are old. If we are interested in other people and get pleasure in doing for others we will get increasing pleasure and satisfaction in relations with people as we get older.

Miss King says since older people account for an ever increasing proportion of the total population, many county home demonstration agents have encouraged groups to include the special needs of older family and community members as well as those of children and youth. In 1952 the agents counseled with more than 3,000 older persons. Conferences and representatives of organizations interested in the family have been held in community and county groups as an effective means of creating a more general awareness of the problems which may be solved through community analysis and cooperation.

Food, Fiber, Fuel and Firepower
You will hear and read much in the next few months about economies, proposed economies, budget balancing, tax reduction, the elimination of waste and graft, and other incidental items. It presently appears from the recent announcements of congressional leaders that the proposals to balance the budget and reduce taxes will be confined to talk for about two years. These announcements are confirmed by the action that is being taken by Congress on the appropriations bills. These bills are coming to the House Floor and sailing through after short debate and with too little time for the entire House membership to study them. Most of them still provide for a substantial portion of the services that the federal government has been called upon to perform in the last two decades, the big cuts being in the construction and not the administrative field.

A good example is the appropriations bill for the Department of Interior, which includes the Bureau of Reclamation. The Department of Interior is the caretaker of the real property of the Government and has the responsibility of developing the natural resources. The Appropriations Committee slashed 202 million dollars off the budget estimate of 607 million dollars. 98 million dollars out of the 200 million dollar cut came out of the Bureau of Reclamation funds. 90 million dollars of the 98 million dollar cut represented a reduction in construction, rehabilitation, and matters incident thereto. General administrative expenses were reduced one million dollars. The nature of this cut simply means that there will be a sharp curtailment in maintenance, operation and rehabilitation of existing facilities in this country and a sharp curtailment in the development of our natural resources. At the same time, the taxpayers of this country are being asked to contribute approximately six billion dollars in foreign aid. Much of this money will be used for the development of natural resources in the countries to which it is sent. Some may take issue with me on this point and say that the dollars are not used directly for that purpose. Such a statement would be true, but it is only theoretical. What happens is this. The recipients of foreign aid in many instances use their own funds, called counterpart funds, to develop their natural resources. They use the funds furnished by this country for the purposes for which they would have had to use their own funds had this country not sent the foreign aid. It is sort of a merry-go-round. No one objects to helping other countries who are our allies. However, I cannot reconcile the development of the natural resources in other countries at the expense of permitting ours to go unattended. Many of these foreign countries are under a continuing communist threat. Should any of them capitulate, we know the assets we have provided for those countries would not only be lost to us, but would be used against us.

The cold hard facts that we must face are simply these. The survival of this country from a material standpoint is going to depend upon food, fiber, fuel and firepower. This means that agriculture, the development of our natural resources, and the strengthening of our defenses should be among our top level considerations. The fat should be cut from all of these, but the muscles should not be damaged.

Subsidies
I expect to introduce a resolution within the next few days requesting a full investigation and a definite earmarking of the subsidies enjoyed at the ex-pendence of the American taxpayer. One of the most difficult problems at present is to find out the exact amount of subsidies being paid, who gets them, and why. It is high time that the American taxpayer had this information boiled down to a dollar and cent standpoint. It can then be determined which are justified and which should be reduced or abolished. I feel that if definite and concrete information can be gathered together on this subject tremendous savings can be effected.

A recent newspaper survey reveals that today 58 per cent of America's 45,000,000 households are homeowners, compared with 43.6 per cent in 1940.

CANDY FOR MARY

By Madge O. Adams

THE folks in our town don't care too much for old John Franklin. He's never done much harm, but he's never been known to do much good either. I guess people feel that way about him because of the practical jokes he sometimes pulls. Otherwise he's harmless.

He batches in the little cottage his mother left him when she died and he fills it with fishing rods and coon dogs.

I don't suppose I'd have ever thought much about John either way if Mary Davis hadn't moved into town. We all watched her pretty close, especially the women. It wasn't because she was pretty, she was too hungry looking for that. But, after all she was a female and she was single and she could have been attractive.

Mary was a widow and she had three small children. She moved into the old house on the back of our lot that rented for practically nothing. She soon had the lawn neatly clipped and the windows shining and a back breaking garden planted.

We were soon charmed by Mary's warm smile and completely won over by her honest eyes. It wasn't long before almost everybody in town was thinking about a romance for Mary.

Bill Simpkins was the most logical man. He runs the general store. He was the most eligible young bachelor in town in his day. Mothers had sat up nights trying to think of ways to snare him for their daughters. I guess that was why he had never married.

He had a big pleasant house, a kind heart and a nice income. He was the perfect man for Mary Davis. Everybody in town agreed on that point.

There was only one hitch. He didn't know she existed. And if she thought anything about him, she never let on.

But there's always somebody who can figure out those kind of things. And it usually is somebody you'd never suspect. Leastwise, this time it was. Nobody ever knew about what really happened but me. I was in the candy store in Cedar City the day Old John Franklin bought a big box of candy. I was down at the far end of the counter and he didn't see me.

At the time I didn't think so much about it. I should have, I guess. John Franklin isn't the kind to buy a big frilly box of candy for anybody—except as a practical joke.

Well, that happened on Saturday. On Monday morning I was hanging out the clothes pretty early. It surprised me a little to see Mary streaking across her front yard trying to catch Bill Simpkins before he could drive off in his car.

She was all smiles and flushes and she looked as pretty as could be right then. Of course I couldn't hear everything they said over the clothes line. But she explained the rest of it to me that afternoon when she came to borrow my steam iron to press her only good dress.

She said Bill had been so shy he had left the box of candy on her doorstep instead of giving it to her personally. She had run out to thank him that next morning. Now he had asked her to go to a movie this very night!

My guess was that he was too kind to tell her the truth and thought that by taking her out it would soften the blow if she ever discovered that somebody had played a joke on her.

Well, anyway, it wasn't long before he was taking her to the movies regularly. And the first thing we knew he'd bought a ring! Everybody in town was invited to the wedding.

I couldn't be sure about John Franklin until the day of the wedding. I kept wondering to myself, had he sent that big frilly box of candy to Mary as a practical joke or as a gentle nudge to Bill? But I had my answer when I looked into his face as Mary walked down the aisle. He was the most satisfied looking man in the church!

My mother used to say: You never know what a man's really like, underneath.
