Completing County Road Hopper Control

County road spraying units are completing the spraying of state road right-of-ways this week in the grasshopper control program.

The range spraying program, hindered by rain, wet landing strips and temperature delays, resumed operation Tuesday with eight planes working. Some landowners, discouraged over repeated delays, are withdrawing from the program. Where the program was placed in practice at the proper time, land owners are well pleased with the hopper control.

AMERICANA Cities to See Baltimore—Maryland's Metropolis

SKYLINE—Baltimore, Maryland

"Baltimore on the Chesapeake," is the metropolis of the Maryland "Free State," the nation's sixth-largest city, and second seaport in foreign trade tonnage.

Founded in 1729, Baltimore is rich in historical importance and deeply proud of the fact it is the only large Atlantic seaboard city over which an enemy flag has never waved.

Baltimoreans have always been seafaring people. From the Revolution until the war of 1812, Chesapeake-built ships followed the trade routes of the seven seas, exchanging Baltimore-made goods for raw materials and other products. From initial wealth acquired during the clipper ship era, Baltimore has grown in less than 75 years to be the second city of commercial importance in the United States.

Military Target

During the War of 1812, the British considered Baltimore a "nest of pirates." Baltimore became a military target after the burning of the Capitol at nearby Washington. But the British were defeated at the Battle of North Point and likewise failed in their bombardment of Fort McHenry. The latter engagement inspired Francis Scott Key, the Marylander, to give to the nation "The Star Spangled Banner."

Many diversified products are today made in Baltimore, a city of some 1,654,500 population. Here

Texas Classed Bomb Target

(By Vern Sanford)

Texas has a fairly new addition to its long and much-vaunted list of "firsts" and "mosts." But this one's no fun to brag about.

Texas has the greatest number of designated potential enemy bomb targets of any state in the union, says State Defense Coordinator William L. McGill.

This, added to Texas' long-standing record of leading the nation in natural disasters, puts a heavy responsibility for defense preparedness on Texans, McGill told the annual State Defense Advisory Council conference in Austin.

Officially designated "aiming areas," as they are called, are Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston, Austin, San Antonio, Galveston, Beaumont, Port Arthur, Amarillo, Corpus Christi, El Paso, Laredo, Lubbock, San Angelo, Waco and Wichita Falls.

Others considered possible targets because of nearby military installations are Abilene, Beeville, Big Spring, Brownsville, Bryan, Dalhart, Del Rio, Killeen, Marfa, Pecos, Pyote, Sherman, Victoria and Wink.

Texas has received a $320,000 federal grant, conferees were told, to draw up a state survival plan. Several larger city plans are complete, and the state plan, a massive and complex thing affecting the lives of millions, is due to be finished by December

Rural residents cannot feel themselves invulnerable, the Council was told. In case of a large-scale bombing, it is felt likely that radioactive fallout would cover most of our terrain, contaminating crops, cattle, pasturage and ponds.

Under the present national civil defense plan, considerable responsibility for advance training and preparation rests with the individual family. Each would be responsible for feeding itself for the first two weeks of a post-disaster period. After that, state and local government would take over for two weeks, and after that, if necessary the federal government would step in.

Persons or organizations wanting to obtain official civil defense information and study materials may write the State Defense and Disaster Relief Office, Capitol Station, Austin.

Attorney General Will Wilson is being asked to give an official ruling on a highly controversial question.

It is whether Texas, under present law, can accept additional federal funds to extend the period of unemployment payments. Texas Employment Commission and Gov. Price Dan-

EDUCATION according to the needs of the times is the challenge facing the nation today, a leading educator believes.

Dr. John T. Rettaliata, president of the Illinois Institute of Technology, said that rather than merely providing educational opportunities to large numbers of students, "students must be prepared for social and professional responsibility to the fullest extent of their capabilities."

Rettaliata pointed out that forces are at work laying the foundation for changes that will reshape our way of life and expand our economy in many directions. The key factors in bringing about this world of tomorrow are science and technology.

"Billions of dollars spent annually for scientific research and development are bringing changes that affect the life of everyone," he stated.

"New knowledge and new applications of existing knowledge, new materials and new processes are resulting in new and more products for daily living, and, over the years, are multiplying the numbers of opportunities and jobs, and improving the incomes of the individuals."

The advances of science and technology also are bringing profound changes in our social and economic orders that vitally affect every aspect of human activity.

Rettaliata cited the modern industrialist's need to understand the problems and implications of science and technology as a basis for decisions which affect the conduct of his business and relationships with other industries.

"The public generally needs better understanding of the contributions of science and technology as a basis for decisions which affect the conduct of his business and relationships with other industries."

"The public generally needs better understanding of the contributions of science and technology to our way of life, and the facts of our industrial growth," he said.

"Scientists and engineers, in turn, should understand the extent to which their work affects our civilization. They should understand and accept the social responsibilities involved in their activities, and use the power science and technology have placed in their hands wisely for the welfare of humanity."

These are some of the considerations the IIT president included in the idea of adequate education for the times and the proper preparation of young people for the responsibilities of adult citizenship.

"To have a beneficial relationship with our industrial civilization," he said, "our colleges and universities must not only impart knowledge to more young people that will help them find the best answers to current and future problems; they also must guide students to acquire, through balanced education, the greater technical competence and social wisdom that are required in order to be an effective participant in today's complex and crowded world."

iel are asking for the opinion. Pros and cons already have been the subject of heated discussion. A recently passed federal law would allocate to the state, funds to provide an additional 12 weeks of $14-a-week payments to persons who had already come to the end of their 24-week benefit period. An estimated 60,000 Texans are in this category.

But, to receive this money, the state must repay the funds to the federal government. If it doesn't get the money by some other means, such as the normal accumulation during high employment periods, it would be pledged to raise the tax on employers after January 1, 1963.

Some argue that this would violate the constitutional prohibition against pledging the state's credit. Others say there is no obstacle since the state merely serves as a collecting and disbursing agent for the federal government, with no state money involved.

Spokesmen for organized labor have strongly urged that Texas enter into an agreement to receive the extra money. Free Rides Eyed State Auditor C. H. Cavness, watchdog of departmental spending practices, has questioned use of railroad and bus passes by Railroad Commission employees.

Commission Chairman Olin Culberson declared the passes were used only for official business. Uses of passes for state business is specifically authorized by law for certain Commis-

Cavness noted that 30 employees had passes and that some apparently had not traveled on state business during the past year. He said he felt it violated the new code of ethics law which prohibits a state employee's using his official position to receive special privileges.
