Funeral Rites Monday For Mrs. Harrington

Funeral services for Mrs. Hollis Harrington, 54, were conducted in the First Christian Church Monday morning by Bruce Clark, minister. Burial was made in the family cemetery plot at Hooker, Oklahoma.

Broiler condemnations at the processing plant are expensive to the producer. F. Z. Beamblossom, extension poultry marketing specialist, says condemnations at the nation's processing plants are taking an estimated $22 to $25 million annually out of the producer's pocket. Since Texas is a major broiler producing state, he says these losses are of prime importance.

Bill Fesler Almost Missed His Wedding

Bill Fesler received confirmation of his leave only a few hours before the plane took off from Frankfurt, Germany, when he came home for a leave and to be married to Miss Betty Jo Naylor.

He persuaded a friend to drive him the 75 miles, but enroute they had a flat tire, didn't have the proper tools to fix it, but finally managed. They later ran out of gas and had to fill the tank from a can in a truck. They arrived just as the last call was being made for departure of the plane and Bill hurried to the ticket window and asked if the plane would wait. The girl at the desk replied that it would not, so he took off toward the plane with the girl following with the ticket. Both Bill and the ticket seller were yelling "wait" and the plane finally did wait and Bill got on. It took him 26 hours to fly from Germany to his destination.

Texas Agricultural Income Ranks High

Texas far outranked other states in cash receipts from farm marketing of cotton, rice and grain sorghum in 1959, reports John G. McHaney, economist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton was the leading income source for Texas farmers as it brought in one-third of the total agricultural receipts. Although Texas grain sorghum accounted for over half of the total U. S. production, it accounted for only 10 percent of the State's farm income, McHaney continued.

In other rankings, Texas was second in receipts from cattle and calves, fourth in sheep and lambs and peanuts, and fifth in flaxseed. Even though Texas retained its top spot for number of cattle and calves on hand, Iowa ranked first in total cash receipts, McHaney says.

Not only is there more to see in Texas, but Texas also provides the best avenues to get there.

Mrs. Bill Fesler

Miss Carolee Baskin was maid of honor and Bobby Bretz of Cactus was best man.

Wheat farmers will vote in a referendum July 21 to decide whether marketing quotas will apply for the 1961 crop.

The Secretary of Agriculture has proclaimed quotas and set the referendum date in accordance with the present law, which requires such action whenever wheat supplies are more than 20 percent in excess of "normal." The supply for 1960-61 is estimated to be 92 percent more than normal which is estimated to be 2.5 billion bushels.

The law directs that acreage allotments are to be used each year, but at least two-thirds of the votes in the referendum must favor quotas if they are to be in effect.

Here are the issues to be decided by the vote on the 1961 crop:

If Quotas Are Approved
All farmers in commercial wheat States with more than 15 acres of wheat who exceed their acreage allotments will be subject to quota penalties on their "excess" except those who comply with the "feed wheat" program.

Growers who comply with their allotments will be eligible for price support at the full level available.

If Quotas Are Not Approved
Marketing quotas and penalties will not be in effect for the 1961 wheat crop, but acreage allotments will remain in effect as a condition of eligibility for price support.

Growers who comply with their wheat allotments will be eligible for price support at 50 percent of parity.

Who Can Vote
Farmers in the 39 commercial wheat States who will harvest more than 15 acres of 1961 crop wheat as grain will be eligible to cast ballots in the July 21 referendum. (This does not include participants in the "feed wheat" program.) For 1961, the non-commercial wheat States, where there will be no referendum, include Alaska, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont.

Price Support
Under quotas, the law provides for wheat price support at a level between 75 and 90 percent of parity, depending on the wheat supply, for producers who comply with their farm acreage allotments. Current estimates indicate a 1961 wheat price support at 75 percent of parity. If marketing quotas are disapproved, the 1961 support level available to such co-operators will be at 50 percent of parity.

Marketing Quota Penalty
Marketing quotas operate through acreage allotments. The national wheat allotment for 1961 is 55 million acres, the legal minimum. The amount of wheat subject to a marketing quota penalty, the "farm marketing excess", is the normal production of the acres in excess of the farm allotment. The penalty will be 45 percent of the parity price as of May 1, 1961. If the producer satisfactorily establishes the fact that his actual wheat crop was below normal, the farm marketing excess may be reduced. If the excess is stored or delivered to the Secretary in accordance with special regulations, the producer is free to market the remainder of his wheat.

None of the wheat from a farm with excess wheat will be eligible for price support.

A farmer who complies with his acreage allotment may market without penalty all the wheat he produces.

THE DEADLY TRUTH—About traffic safety in Texas in 1959 was that only one day in the whole year was free of traffic deaths. In 1958, there were five "Deathless Days" in Texas, four in 1957, five in 1956, three in 1955. If more Texans will drive in such a way that their cars are never involved in a crash which takes a human life, then Texas can record more "Deathless Days." Will YOU drive so that the Fourth of July holiday will add a "Deathless Day" to the Texas traffic calendar? (Official 1959 Texas Traffic Death Calendar Compiled by Statistical Services, Texas Department of Public Safety and Reproduced by the Governor's Highway Safety Commission, Austin, Texas.)

FOR AND ABOUT TEENAGERS

Can Good Manners Hide Something?

By C. D. Smith

THIS WEEK'S LETTER: "I am sixteen. I have been dating this older boy and consider him a very nice person. He is polite and thoughtful. He never even smokes unless he asks me if I mind. Now, someone tells me he is 'no good' and that he has a police record. What should I do?"

The mere fact that someone has a police record does not make that individual a "bad" person... no more than perfect manners are complete assurance of a perfect individual.

Many outstanding citizens have "police records"—parking violations, minor traffic offenses, etc.

And, some of the smoothest "crooks" in the business have the manners, attitude and appearance of bank presidents and business executives.

When someone says that an individual has a police record, they usually infer that this person is a habitual offender, "always in trouble with the police." If such is the case, anyone who associates with this individual too much or too often, is apt to accidentally "get into trouble," too... perhaps by just being at the wrong place at the wrong time.

But... simply stated, without evidence and fact, the remark that someone has a "police record" isn't enough. The girl who is smart, however, will make it her business to find out the truth.

In the matter of manners, we all put our best foot forward when we wish to impress someone. It is the thing to do. But, good manners alone are not concrete evidence of the type of person an individual happens to be. It is certainly evidence of exposure to proper training and some indication that the individual knows the difference between "right" and "wrong"; "good" and "bad"—but it is the real person, the one underneath the outward veneer that is important.

The older we get in this life, the more we learn that it is very easy to be "wrong" about people. We misjudge them. We misunderstand them and their intentions. We listen to others, instead of trusting our own judgement. Eventually we come to the conclusion that the best thing to do is to listen to others; to hear what they have to say—and then find the truth of the matter for ourselves.

Things To See

Mackinac Island, Michigan

In historic Michigan, standing guard over the harbor at Mackinac Island is old Fort Mackinac, preserved today exactly as it looked when built in 1780. Massive limestone ramparts, cannon and block houses are some of its interesting features. The fort also contains a museum displaying relics of early Michigan history. The ancient fort, giant old homes and the magnificent Grand Hotel are some of the top attractions that have made tranquil Mackinac Island a favorite with vacation travelers in Michigan.

Mackinac Island played a vital role in the struggle between England and France for supremacy in the new world. Those who controlled the island controlled the rich fur trade of the great northwest.

In the village of Mackinac Island, which stretches leisurely along the Straits coast, the old Astor Trading Post and the mission church stand as they were built, to mention just a few of the higher points of interest. The original homes of the Astors and Biddles are landmarks also of the island.

The Indians dubbed the island "the great turtle." (Michilimack-inac) and thought it to be "the place of the dancing spirits" where lived Mishaboo, god of the waters, and his attendant gods. Until 1760 the French held the region. It was abandoned to the English after Wolfe's victory at Quebec in 1759; the island and the entire great lakes region be-came British crown land in 1763. Fifteen years after the close of the American revolution, Mack-inac Island was turned over to the United States, but it was lost to the British during the War of 1812, only to be regained in 1815.

Medical history is written in the annals of Mackinac Island. In the old fort Dr. William Beau-mont discovered much of what we know of the digestive system by observing the process at first-hand through an opening in the stomach of a wounded French-Canadian, Alexis St. Martin. To-day Beaumont memorial stands as a monument to one of Amer-ica's first medical researchers.

IT'S A WOMAN'S BUYING WORLD

Because women do 80% of today's spending, it has become increasingly important for advertisers to attract and hold their attention through an advertising medium they read and rely on. That's why newspapers continuously do an outstanding job in attracting and interesting the large responsive feminine audiences which are so vitally important to advertisers.

The newspaper's diversified and extensive coverage of news and information of interest to women, guides mothers and daughters alike in thousands of homes.

For advertisers who sell to women — and how many do not? — newspapers editorially condition women readers to the newest and best. Day after day women shop their favorite advertising medium, the newspaper, at a time and place of their convenience and pleasure.

If you would improve your sales position with women, concentrate your advertising in the newspaper — the medium of their choice and the one which helps them buy.

The Stratford Star

To The People Of The 18th District

(By Walter Rogers)

Almost any youngster will vouch for the fact that "if" is a mighty big word. That one syllable can pack more meaning and importance than the most ponderous and lengthy words in our language. And this lesson has not lost its meaning on Americans, for we have saved ourselves a great deal of unnecessary difficulty by refusing, as one of our proverbs has it, to "cross that bridge until we come to it." For "if" can bring into play countless numbers of vague and worrisome possibilities which are senseless to pursue.

But in the field of foreign policy, it is becoming more and more clear that a greater willingness to consider "if" has enabled the Soviet Union to reap large dividends. Our dislike for ambiguity has found us unprepared for a number of the world crises which the USSR has exploited successfully. And the most unpleasant feature of this tendency in our diplomacy is the fact that many of these crucial international events could have been anticipated.

At this very moment, even the most unpracticed eye can find several potential trouble spots in the world, and yet we offer little or no indication that we have any sort of plan to deal with them and to counter Communist influence. Here are a few of the more obvious indications of future trouble, designed as a quiz for the Department of State:

1. Do we have any plan of diplomatic action if ties between the Soviet Union and Cuba become closer after the visit of Krushchev to our Caribbean neighbor in the near future?
2. Wheat means would we employ to continue access to West Berlin if the Soviet Union signed a separate peace treaty with East Germany and thereby sought to isolate West Berlin?
3. How would we act to prevent a collapse of our East Asian defense perimeter if the present Japanese government should be replaced by a Socialist-Communist one which sought to repudiate the security treaty?
4. If a revolt occurred in an Eastern European satellite nation, such as the one which occurred in Hungary, would our attitude be any more imaginative than the one adopted in that case?
5. Do we have any broad, long range plans, other than haphazard giveaway programs, for achieving support of the vast neutralist nations of Africa and Asia?
6. How would we approach further turmoil if it exploded in the Middle East between the Arab League and Israel and how would we prevent any possible incursions by the Communist bloc?
7. Have we even contemplated any changes in our efforts at home if the Soviet Union should achieve economic equality with the United States?

Unfortunately, there is little evidence that these questions have been answered. It appears that we have been answering questions of equal severity in the past while being pressed by the heat of necessity. This is not to say that our State Department has not prepared plans of action in the event the several "if" situations should develop. If there are such plans of action, it is understandable that they could not be made public in advance. However, there should be advance information conveyed to those who have the power of creating such situations. This advance information should be to the effect that this country has given thought to these possibilities, has prepared and developed an effective plan to cope therewith, and will have no hesitancy in bringing it into play. This would not only improve our chances of preserving and bettering our prestige in the eyes of other nations, but it would also serve to discourage the ambitions of totalitarian nations and reduce their opportunities for the bluff and bluster technique. A firm, tough-minded policy would, in my opinion, be much more effective than the policy of mildness which has

Irrigation wheat in the Texas Panhandle is averaging about 30 bushels to the acre, according to a report from the Texas Employment Commission. The average was derived by averaging the yields which have been produced in the Stratford, Channing, Dalhart, Dumas, Borger, Spearman and Prreyton areas.

THESE WONDERFUL PEOPLE

There's plenty of activity these days down at the "ole swimmin' hole."

The swimming "hole" of pop's day has become a swimming "pool" today, but who can deny that the kids have just as much fun? Grownups do too, for the pool is just another meeting place, a place to visit with friends and neighbors and catch up with the "goings-on." That's what we like most about our town—its people. Working together, playing together, worshipping together, supporting community activities and community projects—these are responsible for making our town a fine place in which to live.

Irrigation And Management Of Soils Aid Productivity

Since soil is one of the most valuable assets a farmer possesses, its care and management should be a primary concern.

Much of the land in Texas is irrigated, and this poses additional problems and considerations of the farmer. To be able to manage this irrigated land correctly, he must understand the processes of soil formation, the texture and structure of the soil, the physical condition and organic content, the relationship between soil

WHAT makes fishing fun? Many things. Ask a dozen anglers and probably no two of them will give you identical answers. Non-anglers, however, are more specific. They usually have two "stock" answers when anyone asks why they have no interest in piscatorial endeavors. 1. "Fishing is nothing but a waste of time." and 2. "I never catch anything, so I just gave it up."

Is fishing a waste of time? Of course not . . . no more than is golfing, boating, swimming, dancing or any other type of recreational activity. An important factor that many recreation-seekers overlook is that fishing is one of very few recreational activities in which each individual can "set his own pace." How's this? Simple. If you are on the golf course and poke along too slowly, the foursome behind you is going to get mighty nervous and upset. Go dancing and you have to keep in step with the music.

With fishing, well, it's different. A man can write his own ticket. He can really work at it; stay up all night gathering night crawlers (worms, you non-fishermen) or soft craws (crayfish which have shed their outer shell; a prime bass bait in some sections of the country).

Then, on the other hand, a fellow can buy all the bait and lures he needs at the local sporting goods store. He can take along a son, cousin, neighbor, or some neophyte who is more than happy to carry the minnow bucket and fishing poles just for the chance to go a'fishing. You're more than apt to see this take-it-easy angler stretched out in the shade somewhere along the bank, hat pulled down over his brow, his thoughts off in the wild blue yonder. He's the fellow who earned fishing the title of a "lazy man's endeavor."

ses, its care and management should be a primary concern. Much of the land in Texas is irrigated, and this poses additional problems and considerations of the farmer. To be able to manage this irrigated land correctly, he must understand the processes of soil formation, the texture and structure of the soil, the physical condition and organic content, the relationship between soil and water, the use of fertilizer on irrigated soils, the development of plants, and the sources of plant nutrients. These factors must be taken into consideration by the farmer who is trying to decide whether or not to irrigate.

John Box, assistant extension agronomist, and William F. Bennett, extension soil chemist for the A & M College System, have written an informative and comprehensive publication on the irrigation and management of Texas soils. They discuss the many aspects of irrigation, and the publication should be helpful to anyone who is considering irrigation or who already operates an irrigated farm. The bulletin may be obtained from the local county agent or by writing the Agricultural Information Office in College Station, Texas.

Stedjes Sign County's First Soil Contract

James and Clifford Stedje have signed Sherman County's first Great Plains Conservation Program Contract. The county program committee met recently and reviewed and approved the contract. The committee is composed of: Wayne Chapman, chairman, of the Soil Conservation Service; R. C. Buckles, ASC chairman; Ernest Goule, County Agent; Freddy Jackson, PHA representative; Vernon Bullard, ASC Office Manager; H. A. Carter, ASC committeeman, and Bill Harland, ASC committeeman.

James and Clifford Stedje worked up their own conservation plan. They did receive assistance from the Soil Conservation Service. These services included: having a soils scientist prepare a soil map, order plan and soils maps for the farm, assistance in securing needed engineering information for a waterway and two diversion terraces, soils and water maps, the typing of the plan of operation developed by James and Clifford Stedje, assembling the plan into a folder, securing certification from the Soil Conservation Service State office for cost share funds, and a soil survey which pointed out alternate conservation practices that would help solve existing conservation problems.

These services were made available to the Stedjes without cost, and no expense will be charged for any assistance they receive in aiding them in applying their conservation plan.

James and Clifford Stedje have been applying conservation practices on their farm for several years. They have already shaped a waterway and built 5 diversion terraces. The Great Plains program offered a way of completing the conservation work with guaranteed cost share money.

State Farm Safety Week July 24-30

Governor Price Daniel by proclamation has designated the week of July 24-30 as Farm Safety Week in Texas. This same period has also been designated as National Farm Safety Week by the President of the United States.

In his proclamation, Governor Daniel said: "The Nation's economy is dependent upon the continued well-being and progress of our State's agricultural population. Accidents from farm work cause needless suffering, distress and loss of life each year among our rural families.

"By directing the attention of our rural residents to safety education, such worthwhile programs now being conducted can greatly reduce accidents. I urge all Texas farm families to increase their vigilance against needless accidents and further encourage interested organizations and individuals to participate in this program."

The Texas Farm and Ranch Safety Council points out that the purpose of the special week is to focus attention on the year-round need for reducing the number of farm accidents, and to cause those who can do something about the problem, to act. The farmer and his family, says the Council, must carry safety into their everyday lives. Nationally, they add, farm accidents cost one and a quarter billion dollars annually, a sizeable sum any way you take it.

The ever-tightening cost-price squeeze faced by agriculturists makes accident prevention even more important, says the Council, because a single costly accident can just about squeeze out the profits of most farm enterprises. The Council joins Governor Daniel in urging rural residents and organizations to make safety their number one project for the months ahead.
