Coal and Retail Trade Codes Nearing Completion Today

FAST PACE OF NRA PROGRAM CONTINUED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — The fast pace of the national recovery program was maintained today as the interest of millions involved in developments on codes for the coal and the retail trade. A code drafted by the government and intended to end the competitive wage-labor troubles of the soft coal industry neared completion. Administrator Hugh C. Johnson acted to finish work on the coal code by tonight. Deputy Administrator A. D. Besse prepared for the nation's public hearing on trade, as dispatched from industry. It was estimated here about 10 p. m. 1,500,000 persons employing more than 1,000 persons. Those affected included nearly 500 storekeepers whose investment is less than $500. Most retail terms, except those dealing in food, would be governed by the outcome of today's hearing.

ARM GROUP RETURN FROM TRIP TO SPUR

H. Varnell and 28 Cisco country men and those interested in mining returned last night from a trip to the Spur agricultural experiment station at Spur, Texas. The trip making the trip in one day, here about 10 p. m. It was the fourth annual tour of the character conducted by Mr. Varnell. Of outstanding interest to the group was the increased yield shown in land which the station has tried to retain all water that falls. Varnell said. The greater yield in land traced to permit water drain away was significant, he said.

Some of these days," said Varnell, "farmers of our section are going to learn how to handle rainfall in a way that they can go through a rough summer without damage to their crops."

Those making the trip were: W. McKinney, Karl Winge, J. McCracken, Standee McCracken, H. H. H. U. G. Kinard, Wayne Britman, Clint Britan, Morgan Biddle, M. O. Hood, C. H. Wendt, G. A. Swenson, Herman Bauer, J. L. Smith, N. A. Berry, J. Lambright, Oscar Schaefer, W. E. Hensley, W. B. Peoples, and E. H. Varnell, and Varnell.

GRIFFITH ASKS CUT IN HIGHWAY ACCIDENT TOLL

AUSTIN, Aug. 22 — Rep. A. W. Griffith, Austin, has started planning legislation for September to cut down the huge toll of fatalities caused by trucks in highway accidents. Rep. Griffith talked with all members of the highway commission, and announced all three favor reducing the width of trucks from eight feet—half the average width of paved roads—to six or 6 1/2 feet. He will prepare bills on this phase of highway safety, he announced, and will adopt suggestions of Highway Commissioner W. R. Ely for more drastic penalties for violations of the highway code.

Only NRA Firms to Get Texas Contracts

AUSTIN, Aug. 22 — Texas state contract work will be awarded only to those who comply with the NRA requirements, the board of control announced. This policy was voted by the board when bids were being taken for construction of a power house at the state deaf school in Austin. It will be applied to all state construction. Char. Claude D. Teer of the board said. The huge program of highway construction already is limited to those who meet the government's regulations as to hours and wages, and the purchase of materials only from those who are complying with the requirements, since the money is a federal allotment subject to these conditions. Contractors pointed out to the board of control that if any competitor who were not complying with the NRA hour and wage provisions, such non-subscribers would have an advantage.

Crossing Tragedy Takes Lives of 7

LUMBERTON, N. C., Aug. 22 — Seven persons were killed and five others injured, four critically, when a tobacco truck crashed into the side of a Seaboard Airline passenger train at a grade crossing near here today. #### TEXAS CITIES REGISTER BIG BUSINESS GAIN

AUSTIN, Aug. 22 — The building industry in Texas showed unusual vigor for the mid-summer month of July by showing a gain over June of 32 per cent in building permits awarded, as against a "normal" seasonal decline, based on experience since 1926, of 17 per cent. Reports to the University of Texas bureau of business research from 38 chambers of commerce showed that building permits, totaling $2,507,900 were awarded during July as against $1,897,447 during the preceding month. It was the first time since April, 1932 that building permits exceeded $2,000,000. "Encouraging as is the seasonal increase in building permits, the comparison with a year ago is still more favorable," the bureau's report said. "The total value of the building permits awarded in July is practically double that for July a year ago—a new experience since the slump in the building industry started. Three-fourths of the cities showed increases as compared with a year ago. "Much of the improved showing in the building industry of the state is due to the increase in Houston, where building permits totaling $1,032,329 were awarded; however, Ft. Worth, with a total of $473,140, Dallas with $267,242 and Austin with $138,140, also made excellent records."

Wanted: Homes for Randolph Students

Randolph college is seeking business research work declared. Failure of the bond issue, the workers have shown, would disintegrate many families and send many children to institutions, and would hurt the small children, through lack of food, undernourishment and lack of proper care, as to deny them the right of a healthy body and normal growth and development. Children would bear the greatest share of suffering, if the relief funds are cut off by refusal of Texans to vote the bond issue in the face of such pressing need, sponsors of child welfare work declared. Violet S. Greenhill, state child welfare director, and responses have indicated they had an immediate and aggressive response. Greenhill, state child welfare director, and responses have indicated they had an immediate and aggressive response. Coach Wilson "Bull" Elkins, mentor of the Cisco high school athletic team last season and one of the most popular faculty members that the local schools ever had, leaves late today or early tomorrow morning for San Antonio after a brief vacation return to Cisco. Elkins, praised at the University of Texas as one of the best if not the best all-around student that institution ever graduated, will spend but a few hours in San Antonio, the home of his parents. His ultimate destination as he leaves Cisco will be Oxford, England, where for two years he will pursue a post-graduate course of study as a Rhodes scholar. A portion of the time spent abroad on the Rhodes annuity will be occupied with traveling over England and continental Europe, with brief intervals spent at famous Old World universities where the erstwhile Cisco mentor will add further polish to his educated self. His First Love. Elkins' first love is history, the subject in which he majored at the University of Texas. That subject will get the most attention at Oxford, no doubt. Elkins, quiet, unassuming and pleasant, is succeeded by a teammate of the same characteristics—Dexter Shelley. Mr. Shelley and his bride have already arrived and established their home here for the opening of the new term. Shelley and Elkins were both stars of a University of Texas championship eleven. Both were backfield men. Elkins as quarterback and Shelley as full and half. Both will have had their first coaching experience in Cisco. Elkins came here last year at the conclusion of his final year in college. Shelley for two years played professional football. He finished his college career a year ahead of Elkins. Elkins, carrying the Cisco team through the most trying season of his history, a season when it was outlawed by the state league and term of office would have expired September 12.

Government buying will begin at St. Paul, Sioux City, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Omaha and Chicago. Buying also will be started in other markets before August 28. Nine and one-half cents a pound will be paid at Chicago for pigs weighing 25 to 30 pounds. Prices range down to 6 cents a pound for pigs weighing 95 to 100 pounds. Prices in other centers will correspond to the Chicago quotations after freight rates have been taken into consideration.

DEMANDS TWO HEAD SUPPLY $500 RANSOM

FORT WORTH, Aug. 22 — Thomas Brabham, 12-year-old son of Dr. W. T. Brabham, president of Texas Women's college, was under close guard today after the father received a note threatening to abduct the child and asking $500 ransom. The note was received in yesterday afternoon's mail and it informed Dr. Brabham that if the money was not left at a certain place the child would be abducted. Immediately after receiving the threat Dr. Brabham called the sheriff's office and two deputies were assigned to the case. Federal officers also were informed and they joined in the investigation. It was learned from a reliable source that the letter contained a map showing where the money was to be left. Deputies tied up a dummy package of bills and left it at the spot, guarding it all night. No one appeared. Dr. Brabham made it clear extreme precautions were being taken to protect the child. He said his wife, two daughters and the child had been rushed out of the city and now are being guarded in a secret place.

SEEK HOOVER AS WITNESS IN BANK INQUIRY

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 22 — Former President Hoover will be requested to accept a subpoena to testify before the grand jury investigating bank failures here. The decision to subpoena the former president came as a result of the repeated testimony of Sen. James Couzens, now concluding a three-day appearance before the grand jury, that banks throughout the country were permitted to operate in technical violation of the law because of the attitude of the Hoover administration. The grand jury has no power to enforce its subpoenas outside the state, officials admitted, but they were "hopeful Mr. Hoover will cooperate and voluntarily accept the subpoena."

VOTE THE RELIEF BONDS.

With the United States government standing flat on its side that no more relief funds will be allotted Texans until this state begins to do its share, the proposed $20,000,000 bond proposal to be voted upon next Saturday stands out as the all-important issue.

The formula, "necessity is the mother of invention," looms large in Texas as the fall and winter months approach. That there will be a dire necessity of relief funds goes without saying.

What to invent, then, to supply the money needed?

Wise counsel from public officials and state relief workers has urged that the only way out is the voting of the $20,000,000 proposal. Until and unless we can invent some other better and more effective way of providing this relief, what else is there to do? This newspaper sees no other way out.

There is a salient point most of us overlook in the matter, too. Did it ever occur to you that the federal government is not using money—vast sums of money—for these relief purposes which it merely reaches out and takes from a sort of indefinable, yet exhaustless treasure trove. No, indeed. These vast sums of money are supplied the federal government by various means of taxation paid by every citizen of the nation, including Texas.

The act of voting permission to the legislature to issue state bonds enabling Texas to match federal aid and thereby assure a continuance of federal financial assistance in keeping the poor and destitute from starving or dying is an act assuring that we get our share of the money we are supplying the federal government for nation-wide relief purposes.

All other things being equal, this is no time to vote bonds for any purpose. But all other things are not equal.

KINK STRAIGHTENED OUT.

Some minor officials with a bureaucratic trend, in some of the county relief organizations, did a degree of harm to the pending bond issue relief proposal before they got straightened out.

Specifically, voters in one county who were being asked to help the bond issue saw fit to inquire what money was being spent in relief employes' salaries in that county. A rather dictatorially-minded minor official told them in effect it was none of their business, and that they shouldn't be snooping around. The citizens appealed to Col. Lawrence Westbrook. His reply was that the information should come from local sources. This left the citizens wholly dissatisfied, and the matter went back to Westbrook.

The result is the entirely commendable showing that the cost of administering relief is less than 5 cents on the dollar, and that by setting up a trained administrative personnel of responsible employes, far more than 5 per cent is being saved.

The result showed that the county administrator of one of the three or four largest counties, a $10,000-a-year man in normal times, is working for $300 a month, and handling many hundreds of thousands of dollars and thousands of relief cases.

It showed that in the second rank counties of up to around 100,000 population, administrators are being hired for $150 a month. There can, and could have been no objection to disclosing that these people are paid these small salaries—small as compared with the volume of work, the special training required, and the calibre of those in the jobs.

The whole situation showed that you cannot appeal to the people of Texas to put across anything even as great an emergency need as the state bond issue, without dealing with them in a frank, fair spirit, and recognizing their right to know every fact concerned with a public administration such as this. The situation, too, in its satisfactory ending, only emphasized the tremendous need that exists for Texas citizens to do their utmost to aid the relief situation—and active work for the bond issue is the foremost means now to that end.

HOME LOAN COURT TEST.

Six thousand Texas applications in less than two weeks for loans from the Home Owners' Loan corporation have shown the need of putting this relief machinery swiftly and effectively into action.

Director James Shaw, and the corporation's local organizations in Texas counties, are getting ready for big-scale loans, each loan designed to protect a family from the loss of its home.

A far-reaching court test has been filed, on whose outcome will depend whether the relief plan may function to its fullest extent. That suit seeks to stop a mortgage-holder from a foreclosure action after refusing to accept bonds of the loan corporation—bonds whose interest is guaranteed by the government—in exchange for the mortgage.

If this relief legislation is to be vitalized, mortgage-holders must show a friendly attitude toward these bonds. Officials of the corporation believe there will be a growing warmth toward them, with or without court action to compel acceptance.

Texans should not be uneasy if the crush of thousands of applications delay their loans to some extent.

They should remember that the state already has passed legislation that when invoked can delay for considerable periods the actual foreclosure of a home mortgage. The homeowner must not let the foreclosure suit go by default. He has been furnished a legal course of action to be pleaded in defense of the suit, if he is to be given the additional time.

The very fact that national government has created the loan corporation and, through it, stands ready to come to the homeowners' defense should, and probably will deter the active prosecution of foreclosure suits.

Every loan made through this semi-governmental agency will ease up the credit situation for all other distressed borrowers. When the first 6,000 Texas loans have been made, the situation among holders of frozen mortgages, as well as among home-owners themselves, should be greatly improved.

"I Haven't Signed Any Code"

They Won't Blame a Relief Bond Defeat on Him

EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is an extract from a recent address delivered by M. F. Foster, editor of the Houston Press.

I have opposed every proposition heretofore made to issue state bonds. They tried to put a $300,000,000 bond issue on us for building state roads. It didn't get through the legislature and it had it would have been killed by the people.

Despite my prejudice against state bonds I intend to vote for the relief bond issue on August 26. I am for that one because it means shelter for the homeless, food for the hungry and fuel for those who face the winter.

I can't vote for state bonds that mean money to be spent for cement and construction, but I must vote for those that mean bread and meat for people who have no work, no money and who must exist on the charity of others.

There are over a million of such people in Texas. It's not their fault. They don't want a dole. They do not want to live on charity. They want to work and they hope soon to exist by their own labor.

No true man wants his neighbor or his friends to feed him, but no man or woman who has a heart wants to see any human being suffering for lack of food.

That's what will happen in Texas next fall and winter if we do not carry this proposal.

I could not sleep if I felt that my vote, or any word I uttered or wrote, caused the poor to be deprived of actual necessities that will come from this bond issue.

If I slept my nights would be made a hell by seeing in my dreams the pinched faces, the thin bodies of little children who were underfed and under-clothed. I would have nightmares in which sorrowful men would pass before my eyes looking hungry, homeless, in rags and poverty and they would shake their bony fingers at me and say "You did it, you by your vote took away the bread our great state and our great national government wanted to give us."

I would hear in my dreams the cries of some poor mother who could not find food for her children; I would see the ghost of some father who had hunted for work for weeks, who had spent his last penny and who shot himself in order that his family might have the little insurance he carried.

I would dream of being seated at some banquet table where fine food was served amidst the flash of beautiful china and fine silverware. Suddenly I would see the walls of that banquet hall disappear, and there would come before my eyes a mob of the poverty-stricken, the sick and the diseased, the crippled and the emaciated, and I would hear them shrieking "You did it, MEFO; you who claim to be a friend of the poor and the helpless; you are responsible. You failed to do your part."

That shall not rest on my soul. Those who wish may pick flaws in the amendment. Politicians may yell there is a better way. Some may cry it is a wrong step to take. Others may say let's wait awhile.

They can do it if they want the failure to feed the hungry, to help the sick and diseased, to rest on their souls, but not this poor, weak mortal.

I am going to vote for that bond issue and I hope you will, and that you will get your neighbors to do the same.

What does it mean in actual dollars and cents to the average citizen? So little that one should hang his head in shame for the rest of his life if he failed to vote for the bonds.

In the first place, it can not be a tax on any man's property. The legislative act says it must never be a tax on real estate.

It will be a tax on something, of course. You can't have bonds without having taxes.

Perhaps the legislature will tax some luxury or luxuries. I am sure the women wouldn't mind paying a little tax on their rouge or face powder, or lipstick, if thereby they would be helping some other woman who is begging for milk for her babies.

The men might stand a little tax on chewing tobacco, or cigars, if they felt thereby they were doing their part to give needed relief.

I am sorry to say it is the easiest thing in the world to make new taxes. The legislature will find a way to pay the interest and retire the bonds.

But here's the comforting part of it. No matter what article or how many are taxed, the average per capita cost will be only 50 cents.

That's all. Fifty cents a year for the next 10 years per person in order to raise $20,000,000 or what part of it that may be needed, to care for the hungry and homeless.

It will cost some of us more than that, of course, for we buy more and will pay more taxes. Fifty cents is the average cost.

If we fail to vote for these bonds I do not know what will happen—neither do you.

But why paint a doleful picture? Why try to frighten?

I have never seen the time yet when an appeal to the hearts of people was not more productive of results than an appeal to their fears. I do not like to frighten little children, nor try to on sensible men and women.

I prefer to appeal to minds that think—hearts that beat.

I love those words—FAITH, HOPE, CHARITY.

Take away faith and man is helpless, hopeless.

Today we see in this country the greatest exhibition of faith the nation has ever known. We have faith in our great president. We believe in him and we will stand by him, or back of him. When he says do your part, we will. We have faith.

We also have hope. That is what has sustained us during four trying years.

We hope unemployment will soon end, that all business will revive and the need to feed the hungry and clothe the naked will not be with us. It has been a long, long wait, but we will continue to hope and to have faith.

While faith and hope are beautiful and inspiring, the greatest of these words is charity.

Charity and love are synonymous. If you have charity in your heart you have a love for your fellow man that rises above all else.

It is that love of your neighbor; the charity in the heart of the average citizen, that makes me believe we will vote the Bread Bonds. That's what they are—bonds for bread.

Are you willing to give the hungry man bread, or will you cast a stone at him?

If you vote FOR the amendment you are giving him bread.

If you vote AGAINST you are putting a stone on his heart and yours.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

I awoke this morning to the realization of a mistake in timing. Instead of having wisely selected a week wherein the city commission holds regular pop-wow as the period of my vacation, I went and picked one betwixt and between with the result that I've got no relief at all from which I want a vacation. Just a lack of foresight, that's all.

You would hardly expect a trip through east Texas to produce anything awe-inspiring, outside the spectacle of crowding oil wells, with their blood red gas flares, or, perchance, the disaster of a flaming derrick.

But the most impressive spectacle that I remember of that section occurred in the least urban portion of the route. It was the sight of spectre-like cloud streamers sweeping along the earth in a ghostly rush. Viewed with the naked eye these torn veils of stratus seemed no less natural than so much coarse mist. But through the amber tint of a pair of driving glasses, which threw their highlights and shadows into dark contrast and gave every streamer a body of denser shade, the spectacle had the appearance of an on-rushing host of unearthly shapes. The supernatural effect was heightened with a sense of everlasting distance when the body of drooping cloud blotted out the low hillslopes and wrapped even the tips of the pines in a floating mantle. It is remarkable what difference a tint will make in a scene. Pulling off our glasses, the vision was merely an ordinary scene of threatening rain. But through the darker view of the colored spectacles we seemed moving, not through the lowlands of east Texas, but in the rarified atmosphere of some high mountain trail. Imagine that in east Texas. We even held our breath for fear the curving road would suddenly crowd back from the lip of a precipice. There was no drop of more than ten feet within a hundred miles of the spot.

Bicyclists who ride their two-wheeled mounts after dark had better provide their vehicles with some sort of lamp or reflector so that automobile drivers may be warned of their presence. Otherwise somebody is going to be seriously hurt if not killed.

Bicycles make no noise. A car, making a turn, could crash into one of them before either the person driving the car or the person riding the bicycle could move to avert the accident.

No automobilist wants to kill or maim a bicyclist, no more than he or she wants to run over a pedestrian. But, if the bicyclist rider doesn't try to be safe, how can the automobile driver be expected to take all the precaution?

Wheels are increasing in numbers. Most of the riding is done at night. Sooner or later something serious is going to happen, unless you people who ride these machines use your heads and don't depend upon the drivers of the automobiles to do your thinking for you.

Put some lights on those bicycles!

Maury Hughes, visiting here last weekend, illustrates a point on habits with the following story:

In the middle of a busy day a client called the Hughes law office with a plea that the attorney "come down and get me out of here".

Hughes sent an emissary to arrange the necessary bond, and the client presently showed up at the office. "What in the world have you done to get in jail?" demanded Hughes. "I must have been drunk," admitted the client. "Drunk on what?" "Three two." "For goodness sake, how much did you drink?" "Oh, 18 or 20 bottles." Then, as seriously as sin: "You know, I'm going to let that stuff alone and stick to something I'm acquainted with."

A lot of this NRA patriotism strikes me as crude grandstanding. A lot of fellows, like those who have the NRA emblem tattooed on their chests or arms, are always ready to make a display of cooperation, just as if they are doing something that isn't expected of them. In other words they are so darned patriotic that they have to pat themselves on the back for getting on the bandwagon.

You can put it down for a fact that nine times out of ten the bird who is making the most blow about the NRA is the bird who needed it the most. The rest of the world, who have been trying to do right without mobilized public opinion, are doing a lot more than they are talking about.

Telephone Company Submits Agreement

A copy of the president's re-employment agreement as modified for the Bell telephone company, and accepted by N. R. A. officials, was submitted to the postmaster today by P. Pettit, district manager, for the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

Details of the code filed here were made public in Washington August 11, at the time of its acceptance by the National Recovery administration.

"The company," said Mr. Pettit "will comply not only with the letter but the spirit of the agreement."

Complete estimates of the effect of the code on the operations of the company locally are not available as yet.

Freckles and His Friends.

For the LOVE of EVE by Lucy Walling

DICK felt the spirit of Christmas for which he had long been homesick. He accompanied his father-in-law to the woods and helped him nail together a stand for the Christmas tree. Later he helped Eve trim the tree. He put extra leaves in the dining room table to accommodate the guests and when Eve's sister, Esther, arrived with her husband and child the baby held out her arms to Dick and seemed to prefer him to anyone else. Later, to the child's intense delight, Dick made a snow man.

Eve's grandmother, accompanied by the son with whom she lived, came for dinner. Grandmother Bayless, little, spry and yet always complaining, enjoyed the day enormously. "I have lived a great many years," she said, "but I declare to goodness no one ever surprised me as much as Eve does. That announcement now—coming with a Christmas greeting! 'Twas right odd! I thought to myself, 'That's just like Eve.' Seems like you picked out a right nice man, though. I know you must have asked him; he doesn't look as though he was bold enough to ask you."

After dinner they all gathered in the old parlor and Esther played the piano while the others sang Christmas carols. Then the gifts were distributed. Dick, who had been alone at Christmas for the last 19 years, was amazed at the unselfish generosity displayed. Accustomed to paying his way and expecting favors from no one, he was touched and pleased to see how he was accepted and included in the group as one of the family.

DICK surprised Eve with his gift—a beautifully designed dinner ring set with diamonds. "We were engaged and married all in one breath," Eve explained to her mother, "and I asked to have only the wedding ring."

That evening the whole family bundled into heavy wraps and rode out to "Cousin Myrtle's" in Beachwood. There, in a modern suburb, Cousin Myrtle and her family lived in a house of Normandy type. There was a tower with a winding, wrought iron stair and casement windows. Through diamond-shaped panes of glass the lights of an outdoor Christmas tree twinkled. The beautifully furnished home had not been built by wealth but rather by years of hard work combined with thrift and careful planning.

Dick felt himself attracted to all of Eve's relatives who seemed so friendly and merry. The next morning he built a crate to hold their gifts. "It's such fun," the cousins had declared, "to celebrate Christmas and a marriage at the same time." There were shell pink dishes, an onyx base lamp and a portable radio. There were exquisite silver pieces and an electric waffle iron.

Monday evening Esther invited a crowd of young people—all of them old friends of Eve's—to her home. There was bridge with a buffet supper and music afterward. Then Christmas night the Bayless family escorted Eve, Dick to the station. "Eve," her mother a moment before train arrived, "here is a little present for you. Buy a self some nice silver or something you really want to fit. And tell your Pat I saved it for you. It was a $50 bill."

Eve was awake and had a breakfast long before the train reached Lake City next morning. She was filled with anxiety, the time she reached the office store would have been spent some time and she would have face everyone at once. They all know about her marriage, wondered how they would greet, and what new complications would have to face.

Eve's trepidation increased when she entered the store. Barnes had given her permission to arrive late, inasmuch as a train did not reach Lake City 10 o'clock. A throng of after holiday shoppers already was gazing the attention of the counter but Eve felt all eyes focused herself. She nodded to acquaintances as she hurried toward the elevator. Her legs were weak by the time she entered the advertising office.

"Eve!" shrieked Arlene Seidarting up from her typewriter, flinging her arms about Eve's slight form. "Congratulations!"

Marya looked up from the evening slippers she was sketching. She arose and with dignified tenderness her hand and kissed Eve smiling. "Eve never," she said, "what she answered. She the giddily, 'What deep dimples has!'"

Mona Allen assumed a bored expression. She remained at her desk and as Eve passed she glanced and returned her greeting with "Good morning, Mrs. Rader." words came as a distinct to Eve. Strange as it seemed to Eve, she had never thought of being called anything but "Miss Bay" or "Eve" by her business associates.

To her intense relief Mr. Barnes was in consultation and she time to regain her composure before facing him. As Eve opened her desk and lifted out sketches and notes she answered Arlene's questions and learned that the marriage announcement had had pleasant excitement in the office. Arlene and Marya said hoped Eve would continue work. Mona Allen permitted corner of her mouth to lift a scornful quiver.

The office boy entered the most buried under the stack newspapers he was carrying, tossed the papers on a large topped desk and smiled brightly greeted Eve. Approaching desk, he scowled darkly and perched, "Don't let Miss Allen your job. She's counting on (To Be Continued).

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, August 22—Genial Adrian Pool of El Paso will quit the state board of control September 1, it is reliably reported here.

He will take up his duties as United States customs collector and the scramble will be on for his place on the board.

Roy Tennant of Temple was for a long time thought to be the first choice for the place. Now two others are mentioned more frequently.

One is F. J. Chudej, pronounced "choo-day" with the accent on the last syllable. Chudej was made a member of the state board of education by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson in her former administration.

The other mentioned is Former Mayor George Meyers of Rockdale. He was an aspirant for the highway commissionership.

One report is Chudej is to serve until January and that a permanent appointment then will be made. Another is that Frank Denson of Temple will be named. Denson was appointed chairman of the state highway commission succeeding the late Cone Johnson of Tyler. The senate did not confirm the appointment.

MOM'N POP.

J. E. McDonald, state agricultural commissioner, has allowed up 50 per cent of his cotton to aid the movement for higher prices.

"I'm willing to plow up the remainder if it is needed to help President Roosevelt accomplish what he has set out to do," said McDonald, a ruddy six-foot, square-jawed farmer.

McDonald was the original sponsor in Texas of enforced cotton acreage reduction. Ridiculed at first, he won over enough legislators to pass the bill. Then a court held the bill invalid.

Lack of sufficient testimony as to the pest destroying effect of reduced acreage is blamed for the downfall of the McDonald bill.

Jim Holloway, who was described several months ago in the capitol dome as the "forgotten man of the Roosevelt campaign," apparently has been remembered.

He posts cards from Savannah after a trip to Washington: "It pays to boost F.D.R."

Holloway had a majority of the Texas legislators signed as Roosevelt endorser before booms for any of the presidential candidates started.

Two directly conflicting stories are told of the recent visit of Former Governor James E. Ferguson to Washington.

One has Amos G. Carter, long a Ferguson foe, cooling his heels in an outer room while "Governor Jim" and C. C. McDonald were in conference with Postmaster General James A. Farley.

The other has Farley laughing over the Ferguson Forum report of a conference.

R. A. Thompson of Dallas is another of the men associated with political foes of Governor Ferguson, receiving high federal appointment. As engineer for federal relief projects his approval is necessary.

A former railroad civil engineer, he was made state highway engineer when Former Governor Ross Sterling was chairman of the highway commission.

The term of State Auditor Moore

Lynn expires on September 17.

He was appointed by Gov. Dan Moody, under whose administration the office was established, and reappointed by Gov. Ross S. Sterling. If the special session of the legislature is in progress when Lynn's term expires, Gov. Ferguson may permit him to remain, as sessions always call for a great amount of data from the auditor's department and a change at such a time would hamper the legislature.

More oil paintings of Former Governor Ross S. Sterling are to be submitted before his portrait for the state capitol is selected.

He and Mrs. Sterling recently viewed several that have been submitted but did not pick one.

FEDERAL AID IS NECESSARY FOR COUNTY RELIEF

AUSTIN, August 22.—In many counties in Texas the federal government is now spending more money every month for relief work than those counties would have to pay back in a year in paying off the relief bonds, according to William Straus, chairman of the committee campaigning for adoption of the proposed relief bond amendment.

"It is primarily a matter of bread and meat for the hungry," said Mr. Straus. "It is unthinkable that Texas will let its women and children go hungry. But some people may want to know what Texas will get for authorizing a bond issue that may go up to $30,000,000 if the legislature finds that much is needed.

"In the first place, there is hardly a county in Texas that can care for its own destitute through local taxation. If they could the burden of taxes would fall on homes and farms and be tremendously heavy. By issuing state bonds the burden is taken off homes and farms, for the taxes to fund these bonds cannot be raised on real or personal property. If all the bonds are issued the tax capital will not average over 41 cents a year for 10 years. Actually it probably will be some special tax that will fall heavier on city people and be lighter than on rural citizens.

"In Eastland county the federal government in the past ten months has spent for relief work $125,969. The county has asked for $39,960 to carry on the work during August for the benefit of 13,740 persons on its relief rolls."

PIONEERS OF TRANSPORTATION, 200 ACTORS MAKE "WINGS OF CENTURY" TRUE WORLD'S FAIR THRILL

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Conquest and travel will always thrill Americans. It took conquerors brave and bold to mould America from a vast wilderness. It took conquest as courageous to gain victory over the tremendous distances between the corners of a great nation.

What patriot has not wished for the chance to turn back the years that he might see for himself the struggles and the triumphs of his forebears? A dream, a dream...

Now in the Chicago World's Fair—A Century of Progress—it is a dream come to life. For "Wings of a Century," gigantic pageant of the romance of transportation, brings it to life.

Here, in a great amphitheater, on a spacious stage whose only backdrop is the spread of the skies, making the onlooker feel that he is gazing over the heads of the actors into a glorious future, are the actual vehicles that created the history of transportation in the United States.

Reenact Boone's Trip.

As the pageant begins, the wilderness pathfinder of 1790 to 1790, with his fellow pioneers, beats his way across the wastes on foot, horse, in canoes, Indians, priests, hunters and trappers all are garbed actually as they were in the days of their work. The caravan of Daniel Boone follows, with the first wagons and carts to probe the new West. Even the blood-thirsting battles with savages are accurately reproduced.

The scene shifts to 1807. It is "Little Old New York," and the day is that of the voyage of the first steamboat, creation of Robert Fulton, opening a new chapter in water travel. The mayor and his party are on hand to greet it. Seeing the smoke, city freemen rush to the fore with buckets to save the ship from destruction, only to learn that it is meant to smoke like that.

Next come the barges of the old Erie canal of 1825, with their motley crowds arrogant and happy in this, for them, last word in modern travel. There is the landing of the famous Baltimore Clipper ship reenacted in the next scene.

Now 1830 brings that new wonder of wonders, the "Iron Horse." Across the stage move the old Tom Thumb of 1829, the De Witt Clinton of 1831, the Thomas Jefferson, famed locomotive of 1836. The steel rails carry their trains of today. All of them are carrying their load of passengers dressed authentically in period to lend realism.

Not replicas or miniatures are these pioneer locomotives. They are real, the actual engines that made history, and they all move under their own power. Many of them are operated by the same men who were in their cabs when they rendered actual service. Thrills run up many a chilly spine when the ancient whistles blast the message: "There's life in the old girl yet!"

Produce Old Autos.

The "horseless carriage" is not long in appearing upon the scene, and long and loud are the laughs at some of the ludicrous trail-blazers that paved the way for one of the world's greatest industries. And when the newest models of 1933 automobiles speed into view, there is a world of sincerity and gratitude. In the applause of the thousands who view "Wings of a Century" every night.

In a grand finale, the take-off of the Wright brothers' airplane is brought to life again to the tune of rustic jeers and far-sighted acclaim. In a final center-stage gesture, a huge transport plane of today hoves into view, with the question: What will tomorrow bring?

There is plenty of life in "Wings of a Century." Unlike many pageants, it moves fast and is full of
