NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Any erroneous reflection upon the character, standing or reputation of any person, firm or corporation which may appear in the columns of this paper will be gladly corrected upon being brought to the attention of the editor.

GUARANTY AGAINST PROPERTY TAX.

Bonds issued hereunder shall never become a charge against the farms, homes or other real property.

Substantially that language in the constitutional amendment on which Texans will vote next Saturday forms an unqualified guaranty against any property tax levy to meet the bonds for relief that the amendment provides for.

Earnings, business, profits, sales, production or severance levies will pay the relief oil represented by those bonds.

Business people generally have found the bond issue an easier and cheaper way to pay the relief burden than any other that has been proposed. They are supporting the bond issue, even though they are those who will pay it off.

Principal opposition to the bond issue has come from those who have not had the opportunity to study details of the plan, and those who did not know of the constitutional guaranty against an ad valorem levy to discharge them.

Those who have feared the bond issue would pile up more taxes against their farms, ranches or homes should realize, rather than deciding to vote against it, that it means bringing to Texas considerably better than $2 for $1 voted, since it will hold the continued allotment of federal aid.

Most of the uncertainty and misunderstanding concerning the proposed amendment would probably disappear in a careful reading of its language. Nothing is less ambiguous, more positive and plainer in its intent. It requires no legal mind to understand its express provisions, the limitations that it lays down and the permissions it confers.

SESSION DATE SET.

A week after the election, Texas lawmakers will be re-assembled at Austin to adjust state laws to the relief emergency and to the national recovery program.

This is the report from members of the house and senate, who have been told by Gov. Ferguson to be ready for the session Sept. 5.

Rep. J. D. Young, Cuero, and more than half a dozen other lawmakers have been assured the day after Labor day, Sept. 5, has been chosen for the reconvening.

This session itself is an evidence of the unusual situation. It is the first special session ever called by Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, and the first called by the Fergusons except that already convened by Speaker F. O. Fuller in 1917.

If the state bond issue amendment has been adopted, the Legislature will authorize issuance of about $6,000,000 or $7,000,000 of the bonds—to be sold to the R. F. C., by the way—but if it should after all be defeated, then the legislature will have to take direct action to pay the state's total relief load from month to month.

Under this call date, the lawmakers will be in session when the bond, beer, repeal and other election returns are canvassed Sept. 11, and the results promulgated by Secy. of State W. W. Heath.

Seemingly, partisan politics and controversy will be laid aside in this session called for emergency needs of the state, and the best efforts of all factions and groups will be given to meeting the extraordinary conditions in the most effective way.

Allred Still Untouched by Current Political Issue

By RAYMOND BROOKS

ASTIN, Aug. 23.—The bombardment of speeches this final week of the wet drive vividly brings into relief the fact that James V. Allred has gone this far without having touched, or been touched by, the political issue.

His attitude toward repeal, resubmission, modification and all those catch terms of political partisanship, wet and dry, has been left for other times and other campaigns.

The ruling of his department, as to meaning of the recent law and its effective date, hardly could be construed into a personal expression of views.

Before Texas gets through with wet and dry campaigning and the wash of the same old wisecracks of yesterday, probably a great many people will wish that others might find a few other issues.

Within a short time it will be found that every American state that has a state banking system, such as that in Texas, and every state that has tried to curb the manifold evils of branch and chain banking, will have joined to achieve a double objective.

Adjust the new Glass-Steagall bill at the next session of congress to avoid possible injustices to state banking; to revise state laws to afford the state institutions similar protection and similar benefits conferred by congress upon the national and federal reserve member institutions.

Texas will hear about it in the September session after the senate failed to pass the Hopkins bill to the same end over an executive veto.

Will the Texas lignite industry come back? Not while oil is selling so far below its worth, seems to be the answer now. But if the long-looked-for depletion of oil ever comes about, then it may be the vast stores of this low-grade fuel may find a market.

Twenty years ago, lignite mining was an important industry. The stores of this fuel have hardly been touched.

Just about the time the legislature meets, Texas will have a test suit on its hands to determine whether the producer of oil shall pay 2 cents per barrel tax, or 2 per cent, now about 12 cents, and at times as low as 2 cents per barrel.

The 2-cent rate was put into the bill levying an intangible tax on oil pipelines. It was passed also as a separate statute, when the legislature met.

THE office boy's warning, "Don't let Miss Allen get your job; she's counting on it," was still echoing in Eve's ears when the buzzer summoned her to Mr. Barnes' office. Her heart seemed to skip a beat as she entered the room.

The advertising manager's greeting was pleasant enough but brief. "I need hardly say," he told her frankly, "that I should have hesitated to recommend you for Miss Marshall's place had I known at the time of your marriage. But since you have started the work you may continue for the present and we'll see how it goes. However, the situation comes down to this: Bixby's will permit no divided interest. We will tolerate no deviation from the standard of excellence which heretofore has marked your work."

Considering his natural brusqueness, Eve felt that Barnes had been fairly diplomatic. But he had made clear the fact that she was still on trial at Bixby's instead of being firmly established. The least indication of carelessness on her part would be sure to be attributed to her marriage. Barnes' statement, together with Charles' warning about Mona's designs, showed Eve clearly that there must be no let-down in her work.

She realized, too, that she had underestimated Mona. The girl had ability of a sort. And she had a way of flattering men that Eve knew sometimes advanced a woman in the business world more rapidly than did hard work, even with such clear-headed, fair-minded men as Earle Barnes and Mr. Bixby.

Eve's code forbade trying to take the place of an established worker. Mona obviously had no such scruples. Well, Eve decided, it was of no use to borrow trouble. So long as the girl played reasonably fair Eve would take no notice of her antagonism.

THAT evening Mrs. Brooks was watching for Eve when she arrived home. Mrs. Brooks brought forth two gift boxes which had been delivered that day.

"Candiesticks from Marya and a Venetian glass bowl from Arlene!" exclaimed Eve as she lifted the gifts from their tissue paper wrappings. "The darlings—I want to have a party for them!" she told Dick.

At noon she went to Martin's, opened a charge account and ordered the nest of tables sent home. She felt very business-like, very efficient. It worried her, however, that Martin's credit manager asked the name of her husband's employers and of his bank as well as her own. She intended to pay for the tables, a little each week, from her own earnings and she did not see why Dick should know anything about it.

The check for the rent and the money for meat and groceries, Eve put out of her mind. The rent was not yet due and there would be time enough to worry about that after the party. Dick probably would be reasonable about the matter after he knew the things she bought and saw how much the purchases improved the apartment.

THE day of the party Eve awakened feeling tired and with a sense of foreboding. She would have been glad to remain at her home in order to prepare for the party. The fact that she was tired emphasized the irony of having to sit for eight hours in an office where, as luck would have it, there was very little to do.

Mona Allen was elsewhere in the store most of the day, dallying longer than necessary over a few simple errands. Arlene came back from an unusually long lunch period with her head topped by stiff black waves. Her face was glowing and her nails very pink. "All set for the big time!" she announced. "I can scarcely wait until tonight. I went through the rug department just to have another look at Mr. Bliss. He didn't notice me, of course. Eve, you were a peep darling to invite him to your party. Honestly I do think he's the handsomest thing!"

It was recalled, while Texans talk of how hard they tried to raise new revenues, that the oil tax bill lacked only four votes of being made immediately effective last May 30.

On 900,000 barrels daily production, that would have increased the state tax more than $7,000,000 per day, or $650,000 in the 90-day period. But nobody tried to get the bill back and master the other four votes.

One of the rehabilitation projects to be sponsored out of the state bond issue and matched federal money will be a small farm-garden colony, to locate a few families on small three or five acre irrigated tracts, as a test of a direct back-to-the-land movement. If a family can grow its own food and be self-supporting on a small tract of rich land, a way will be opened to permanently take off the load many of those not vocationally-trained for gainful occupation who have crowded into the cities.

It may be a real economy to give outright enough land to the unemployed head of a family to permit his supporting his dependents.

It was somewhat of a relief to discover that the stamping wasn't tattooing, which, technically at least, was defense for my statement. The Eagles were easily washed off.

Comm'r W. J. Foxworth, leader of the U-turn section of the Cisco commission, is the most unambiguous bloc on the commission. There is never any disagreement in Comm'r Foxworth's faction. It is the most unanimous proposition that Specs ever could be beat.

Unfortunately, however, all the rest of the commission are firmly anti-U-turn in sympathy and though the sandy-haired street commissioner can control his own section perfectly he can't get any other member of the city council to agree with him.

So it begins to look as if the anti-U-turn signs in the center of certain blocks on D avenue are going to remain there, at least during the life of the present administration.

For the life of me, I cannot see the spokesman for the U-turn bloc last night. "I can't see any advantage in stopping U-turns when you are going to allow left-hand turns. After a car is already atwart the street and blocking traffic it doesn't cause any more danger to keep turning and going back where it came from. I'm awfully sorry you fellows don't agree with me."

One thing can be said for the U-turn bloc. It is a mighty persistent bloc. Some of the other commissioners weren't altogether certain in just what way anti-U-turn signs keep cars from running together

Eve smiled wanly and ran a fresh sheet of paper into the typewriter. She wrote half a line and x'd it out. After three more starts she crumpled the paper and threw it into the wastebasket. She hadn't a single original thought, she told herself, and it was no use trying to write. She longed to lie down and relax so she might feel refreshed for her duties as hostess that evening. And she was becoming more worried every moment over the antiques.

Dick telephoned in the middle of the afternoon and suggested dropping in at the Old Mill for dinner on their way home. Eve was glad she would escape cooking and washing the dishes afterward.

When they arrived home at a quarter to seven a strange sight greeted them. Stacked up inside the hall were the water bench, the chest of drawers and the nest of tables, topped off by a great bunch of evergreen boughs from Mrs. Brooks' trees.

"What's all this?" Dick frowned as he pushed the furniture away from the door and inserted the key.

"Oh, Dick, I meant to tell you—I sent for those antiques at Tamkinville! You remember how we thought they would just fit into the decorative scheme of this lovely old house." Her heart thumped.

"Yes, I remember," answered Dick. "But nobody said anything about buying them."

He was silent as he brought the furniture into the apartment. He was silent as he followed Eve's directions about setting it in place. The ringing of the telephone interrupted them and Eve answered. It was Mona Allen.

easy to topple over on either side of the perfect and make either a fool or a martyr of yourself.

All of the above is inspired by the fact that in yesterday's column I had something rather nasty to say about folks who tattoo themselves with NRAs. I found no intrinsic wrong with the tattooing, merely having referred to it by way of illustration.

But imagine my chagrin when I walked into the Red Front Drug store and there stood Sam Allred with miniature Blue Eagles stamped all over his arms!

It serves to prove that you can hardly shoot in any direction without hitting some innocent person between the eyes.

But Sam isn't eligible to the recent criticism, because he is not an employer.

It was somewhat of a relief to discover that the stamping wasn't tattooing, which, technically at least, was defense for my statement. The Eagles were easily washed off.

with unpleasant results, but they were mighty certain it was all for the safety of the public. The U-turn bloc could grow searching in his asking to know" but it was extremely difficult to get over the settled opinions.

So you people who want to see the anti-U turn signs taken out of the streets may know that you had a mighty good friend at court, but the trouble was the court was too much in favor of keeping cars from running together.

Model Plane Used As Court Evidence

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 23.—A damage suit over an airplane crash two years ago, which caused the death of Roy Fisher, pilot, and injuries to Charles R. Coleman, gave Joe Yamamoto, 16-year-old Japanese boy, a chance to show his constructive ability.

Coleman sued George Stonebraker, owner of the plane, on grounds that Fisher navigated in a reckless manner, causing the crash in which Coleman alleges he was injured.

The Japanese boy built a working model like the Stonebraker plane and introduced it in the court.

Sessions of each division were called for during the week to instruct the personnel of each thoroughly in its duties.

Juvenile Judge Is Whipping Advocate

EL PASO, August 23.—Juvenile Judge Ballard Coldwell advocates whipping to correct delinquent children who appear before him for trial.

"Delinquents are certain to get a whipping if they are sent to the state training school," he said. "A whipping at the order of the court would save them from confinement and probably do just as much good."

Judge Coldwell advises mothers of delinquents to whip their children but says it is ineffective since the advice seldom is followed.

Workers who make the drive next week under command of Col. Beerman will be furnished small insignia to be worn as designating their capacity in the NRA service. These buttons have not yet arrived, but Gen. LaRoque said he expected to receive them by the time the drive starts.

A Motto. "Cisco 100 per cent NRA." was suggested for the campaign by Major Wm. Reagan, an officer in the man power division.

Formation of a "stays" committee to pass on applications for permitting employers unable to meet certain terms of the NRA agreement was decided against, this duty being lodged with Col. Crawford's division. In larger communities, Gen. LaRoque said, it may be necessary to form a more complicated organization but in Cisco it was felt the existing and simpler form would serve well enough.

By GEORGE

I sometimes wish I'd never started this darn column. Once started things like this have got to go on forever or the starter loses some prestige as to stickability and journalistic policy, regardless of the intrinsic value of the department specified.

It's something similar to the plight of the cotton farmer. Once involved the poor fellow has to keep up the annual trolley, with no prospect more reliable than a forlorn hope that, betimes, a Roosevelt or a Daniel will arise with brilliant ideas to pull him out of his difficulties.

I have succeeded quite well in insulating a number of readers, and occasionally I have insulted myself. The formula is a matter of juxtaposition, a delicate balance on the thin edge between the commonplace and the terrible. If you are successful in achieving that singular balance you get a real thrill, but it is so

I ALWAYS SMOKE STEADILY AT A PARTY. YOU CAN SMOKE CAMELS ONE AFTER THE OTHER... THEY TASTE GRAND AND NEVER JANGLE YOUR NERVES.

Camel's costlier Tobaccos never get on your Nerves... Never tire your Taste

Freckles and His Friends.

IS THERE SOMEBODY HERE BY THE NAME OF FRECKLES? HEY! COME HERE, FRECKLES—WHO IS THAT TALKIN' TO UNCLE JOHN? WELL, LET'S GET DOWN AND GET SOMETHING TO EAT, RED! SURE—MAN! THE VIEW OUT OF THIS WINDOW IS GREAT—I'LL HATE TO LEAVE IT! WHAT DOES ANYONE WANT WITH FRECKLES, WAY UP AT PARADISE LAKE. OH, DICK, I MEANT TO TELL YOU—I SENT FOR THOSE ANTIQUES AT TAMKINVILLE! YOU REMEMBER HOW WE THOUGHT THEY WOULD JUST FIT INTO THE DECORATIVE SCHEME OF THIS LOVELY OLD HOUSE. HER HEART THUMPED. "YES, I REMEMBER," ANSWERED DICK. "BUT NOBODY SAID ANYTHING ABOUT BUYING THEM." HE WAS SILENT AS HE BROUGHT THE FURNITURE INTO THE APARTMENT. HE WAS SILENT AS HE FOLLOWED EVE'S DIRECTIONS ABOUT SETTING IT IN PLACE. THE RINGING OF THE TELEPHONE INTERRUPTED THEM AND EVE ANSWERED. IT WAS MONA ALLEN. (To Be Continued)

Texans!

Heed this 1933 War Call from the Economic Front

A historic Texas institution is in a fight and invites you to pitch in!

General Sam Houston at the Battle of San Jacinto

THE history of Texas is a romantic story of courage and thrilling adventure. The early settlers had first to make Texas a free land for free men. Then came the prolonged struggle against the virgin wilderness, to convert Texas into the modern and glorious state she is today. But the path of progress was not always strewn with roses. Economic reactions of the past interrupted but could not retard the determined advance of a determined people.

So, the history of Texas is also a tale of strife against odds, dogged persistence and rigid self-discipline. Her people have always clung together in a community of spirit, so the world acknowledges a loose-knit fraternity among Texans—without formal membership, but irresistible when aroused.

Today, though the strife has been transferred from military to economic fronts, the spirit of Texas citizenship will rise again in defense of an institution which is as much a part of Texas history as Sam Houston, Davy Crockett or James Bowie. That institution is the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Lines.

The same independence and freedom from outside domination that is born in the blood of every Texan is also an inheritance of the Katy. That independence and that freedom is now threatened by pressure from without and the pioneering Katy, which played so rich a part in the conquering of the wilderness and making Texas the home land it is, comes directly to her people for support.

The Katy has been self-sustaining and self-supporting throughout the last four disheartening years. With heroic determination and supreme effort, the Katy has fought to avoid seeking help from any quarter. Now, with victory in sight—the economic skies clearing—one final effort must be put forth.

One course would be to appeal to the Government of the United States for money from the public treasury, and so increase the national burden. The other way is to appeal to the men and women of Texas. This is done here, directly and straightforwardly, without hesitation, apology or sacrifice of pride. For, has not the Katy contributed its full share to the pioneering and developing of this great land, and does it not stand today a Texas institution devoted to the service and welfare of Texas people?

Texans! Only a little cooperation is asked. Route every available shipment via Katy Lines—patronize Katy trains when you travel. The resulting increase in revenue will enable the Katy to remain self-supporting— independent, free from the need for outside capital which charges as its price the sacrifice of identity and freedom, which this generation of Texans holds as near and dear as their fathers before them.

Never in the past has Texas refused to rise in defense of her native and traditional institutions. She will not refuse now!

FOREIGN WAR VETS TO SEEK BONUS MONEY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 23 — Resolutions calling upon President Roosevelt to restore veteran benefits to their original status and for immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates will be considered at the 1933 national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, national headquarters announced.

Reduction of service men's pensions by the economy act and the pay cuts given officers and enlisted men of the army, navy and marines were scored by Admiral Robert E. Koonza, foreign veterans commander-in-chief.

Payment of the adjusted service certificates, or "bonus" was cited as a "means of making use of the currency inflation powers granted to the president by the last congress."

"Delegates, who will attend the convention in Milwaukee, Aug. 27 to Sept. 1, definitely are pledged to support immediate cash payment of the bonus," Admiral Koonza said.

"This offers an ideal method of controlled currency inflation and President Roosevelt himself emphasizes the need of an increased purchasing power as a guarantee of success for the national industrial recovery act."

The foreign veterans' commander called the plan "the only orderly method of controlled currency expansion that has yet been proposed."

Advance hotel reservations in Milwaukee indicate the biggest encampment in the history of the organization, headquarters officials said. General attendance will be augmented by the presence of more than 50 bands or drum and bugle corps, they added.

Ten past national commanders of the organization have signified their intention of attending, headed by James C. Futnam, of Wood Plains, Mo., the first V. F. W. national commander.

Loss of Appetite

May Mean You're Rundown!

When your appetite goes back on you and you feel weak, tired and depressed, it's a sign you're rundown and in need of a good tonic. There is nothing better than Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic contains both iron and tasteless quinine in highly concentrated form. Iron to build the blood, quinine to act as a blood purifier. These two effects make Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic an exceptional medicine. Try it for three days and notice the results. Appetite restored, pep and energy renewed. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take. Absolutely no taste of quinine. Even children like it. Get a bottle today and enjoy the vigor that makes life worth while. Sold by all stores.—Adv.

Planned Break.

Bailey's fame as a leader among criminals reached a peak in the Memorial Day break at the Kansas state penitentiary, in which he and ten other convicts escaped. Bailey was credited with having planned the break, although Wilbur Underhill, "tri-state killer," received most of the blame for the series of crimes which followed the escape as the fugitives fled southward through Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Underhill still is at large.

Belief that Bailey's associates were

Hurricane Strikes Eastern Seaboard

(By United Press)

A storm of hurricane force swirled up the eastern seaboard today, damaging property on land and imperiling ships at sea.

The steamship Madison, with 90 aboard, was in distress off the Virginia Capes, fighting valiantly against the gale while other vessels went to her aid.

The storm was spreading along the coast. A 52-mile gale threatened Atlantic City. Coastal resorts along the Virginia coast were hard hit.

Why—

You're always saying Chesterfields taste better

— I wish you'd tell me why

Well, I've worked in tobacco; I've manufactured cigarettes... and I'll tell you why Chesterfields taste better.

For a cigarette to have a good taste, it must have first the right kind of Domestic tobacco. This means ripe, mellow, sweet tobacco, filled with Southern sunshine. Then, blended and cross-blended with this tobacco there must be the right quantity of the right kinds of aromatic Turkish tobacco... tobacco that has a pleasing flavor and aroma.

Aroma, as you know, adds to the taste. It's just like the pleasing aroma from certain foods. It makes the food taste better. It makes the cigarette taste better.

Then again, for a cigarette to have a good taste, it must be made right. The size, the cigarette paper, everything about it must be right.

Just try Chesterfields.
