Gettle Case Is Confused by Conflicting Ransom Demands

MANY 'PHONE CALLS MADE TO ATTORNEY

LOS ANGELES, May 12 — A series of anonymous telephone calls, purporting to be from the kidnapers of William S. Gettle, millionaire and two-time victim of ransom demands today has thrown into confusion negotiations for the abduction victim's release. Ernest Noon, attorney and intermediary representing the Gettle family, said ransom negotiations are in a turmoil as a result of two demands for $40,000 and $75,000 respectively for the ransom. Noon remained at his office throughout the night in a hope that the real kidnapers would contact him and clarify the situation. The anonymous calls came to Noon yesterday and last night while he was out. Each time Noon called the caller insisted on talking only to Noon. When his secretary refused that he was not in, the conversation was abruptly ended. Noon believed that at least some of the calls were authentic.

New Wells Drilled by Humble Near Star

STARBUCK, May 12 — Jack E. Ezzell, production superintendent for Humble Oil and Refining Co., in a district said this week that his company's new well on the E. P. & W. H. Kilgore tract, almost one mile south of the Humble Co. lake, is now being drilled at 420 feet. The new well is considered a practical wildcat as there are no other wells very near it, and may mean an extension to the field. Several other wells are to be drilled by the company, as new locations are made. This is the first drilling to be done here by the company in the time, and the reason given is that more gas is needed at the Blake mine plant.

No serious effects had developed Saturday.

The group will leave here immediately after graduation June 2 and will sail from San Francisco, June 6 for Yokohama. The itinerary in Japan includes Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe, and the group expects to visit Chosen and Manchuku before returning. The latter is an institution begun a few years ago that has met with a great response from patrons and students in encouraging a more sustained and general effort at scholastic excellence. It meets, to a great extent, the objection that only two or three particularly excellent scholars in the senior class receive public recognition for their accomplishments, while the great body of the students do their work in obscurity so far as reward for meritorious grades is concerned. The program for commencement is in the main tentative, it was announced. Details will be announced from time to time, it was promised.

With both wells showing for production of gas or oil, the Hickok No. 1 Kleiner and the Lone Star Gas company's Kincaid No. 1, immediately north of Cisco, were shut down Saturday until Monday. The Hickok well had 10,000,000 feet of dry gas from the upper Lake sand and no showing of oil. The well was bottomed at 3,394 feet, 21 feet in the pay. Rock pressure was gauged at around 1,200 pounds. The Lone Star well found nothing in the Lake horizon where the formation was broken, and continued to the Marble Falls where drilling was suspended Saturday while oil rose steadily in the hole for an excellent showing. It will be shot Monday. The well entered the production horizon at 3,589 where gas increase set in and was drilled to 3,608 feet. Saturday flow tanks and separator were being set. The wells are within a stone's throw of the east city limits of Cisco. Contracts call for starting at least two more wells in the area within the next few weeks, but successful completion of the two already drilled is expected to stimulate considerable activity.

STANDARDIZED JURY MIND

Because two jurors remained adamant against the death penalty which the rest of the jury as stubbornly believed just, public opinion Friday was furnished with another example on which to hang argument over the administration of criminal justice in this state. Raymond Hamilton, Texas' desperado No. 2, escaped a conviction in connection with the robbery of the Grand Prairie State bank, and the state was put to a considerable expense for the process of arriving exactly nowhere. Whether or not trial by jury is adequate or inadequate is not an issue to be determined by one case; and, indeed, it is not an issue in the problem at all. The issue is whether or not the natural limitations of a jury have been properly allowed for in the system by which the question of the guilt or innocence of an accused is determined. The statements which were attributed to the two men who refused to accede to the majority belief, indicate presence of what may be called a standardization of jury reaction throughout the state, a standardization which usually defeats efforts of crusading prosecutors to make an example of a certain case in an epidemic over which popular opinion has been aroused. It is a well known fact that the extreme penalty is a difficult verdict to secure from a Texas jury in any but the most heinous cases. Instances in which death has been assessed for a bloodless robbery are extremely rare and, unless spot recollection is at fault, no such penalty has been executed since pioneer days. It is difficult to break this stratification of opinion, and to induce a jury to deal with a certain case strictly in accord with the features and deserts of that case and apart from the "stream of tendency" which derives from the traditions with which the lives of the jurors have been associated. It seemed clearly the truth with the two dissenting members of the Hamilton jury, who relied upon appreciation of the standard jury mind in maintaining their argument against capital punishment.

How best to approach the problem is a serious study. Some reformers may advocate abandonment of the jury system altogether and recourse to such a system as Mexico has adopted. Others may propose removing responsibility for assessing the penalty from the jury and lodging it with the judge. When it is recollected that the right of a trial by jury is a first assurance of liberty, the seriousness of the political direction of abandonment of that principle begins to be seen. When it is also remembered that the "stream of tendency" which unconsciously governs the jury's attitude toward a particular case derives from the currents of public opinion and political thought in which the members of the jury live, the concept of reform gains a staggering magnitude of implication. "Where do we go from here?" is a mighty serious question to be asked before any fundamental change.

"THE OTHER SIDE OF THE CANVAS."

"We have but stepped across the threshold of a new year," editorializes Willacy's Facts and Fiction magazine. "This country of ours just can't stay down. A generous providence has too richly endowed it for that. Especially is this true of Texas. We can work with nature and succeed in many ways. We can capitalize a smile but as against a frown we can't borrow a dime, here are, probably, some wrong thinking minds which may not want to be set right. The main thing is for right thinking minds to refuse to be set wrong."

This is campaign year in Texas. A United States senator will be nominated and elected. Twenty-one congressional representatives will be nominated and elected. A governor and all minor state officers will be nominated and elected. A legislature will be elected. A million democratic men and women should place their primary ballots in the box in July. The main thing is for right thinking minds "to refuse to be set wrong," governmentally speaking.

IMPORTANT DECISION

The right of a city to collect personal taxes from a non-resident company was upheld in an opinion handed down in the second court of civil appeals at Fort Worth.

The ruling was returned in the appeal of the Texas Land and Cattle company from a judgment for $17,613 in taxes won by the municipality of Fort Worth in a district court about a year ago. The Texas Land and Cattle company, which was incorporated in Delaware by the late J. N. Booker, contended that it was not liable to taxation because of that fact. Chief Justice Irby Dunklin, one of the outstanding as well as veteran jurists of the commonwealth, in handing down the opinion said: "The evidence supports the finding of the trial court to the effect that the incorporation of the company under laws of Delaware was a subterfuge for the purpose of evading taxes in the city of Fort Worth." An appeal will be taken by the defendant to the state court of last resort. More work for courts and less for the barristers.

BUSINESS SIGNS OF THE TIMES

March sales of Texas department stores in larger cities, stimulated by pre-Easter buying, were 38 per cent larger than in February. This showing is made by the monthly business review of the federal reserve bank of Dallas, and the record exceeded that of the corresponding month of 1933 by 58 per cent. Collections have been well sustained. Number of liabilities and commercial failures were materially lower than a year ago. Debts to individual accounts at banks in principal cities were eight per cent greater than in the previous month and 56 per cent larger than in March of last year. Prospects for agriculture and livestock were materially better. Daily average of combined net demands and time deposits for member banks were well sustained during March. Lastly, construction activities reflected a considerable improvement. The old world is jogging along and the livewires of the American world are marching with it.

Noted Pioneer Texan Passes Out

By HUGH NOBENT FITZGERALD

Capt. T. W. Blount is dead at his home in the historic town of San Augustine. He was 95. He settled at San Augustine when Texas was a republic. He gained his title in the Confederate army. He was a member of Gov. James Throckmorton's famous "bloody 11th legislature." He numbered among his friends many of the prominent in the history of the Lone Star commonwealth. Gen. Sam Houston was very close in a personal and political sense to this aged veteran and pioneer.

From the beginning the Blounts had a vital deal to do with the making of the empire. Capt. Blount's father, who figures in the pages of Texas history as Col. S. W. Blount, was one of the signers of the Texas declaration of independence. He was prominent in the days when the pioneer citizens of the republic made history battling for an Anglo-Saxon civilization and the so-called inalienable rights of man.

There have been Blounts all down the line. One of the fighting champions for prohibition in the famous contests of the past was a Blount. There are many Blounts of wealth and culture who figured in the activities, political and otherwise, in all the bygone years. Eugene Blount, in recent years a distinguished member of the house of representatives, was of this famous old pioneer family.

Just the other day in the town of Cumby, Hopkins county, Blacksmith Bob Williams celebrated his 95th anniversary. In a sense he was and is a noted character in the upper country. He began as a blacksmith. He was a Confederate veteran "shot to pieces" in many an engagement. He continued to be a blacksmith after the close of civil strife. He fought with the Throckmortons and the Cokes for a white man's government in Texas in the days of reconstruction. He was an almost winning candidate for the office of governor. He has served in Texas legislatures, but he never deserted the anvil and the forge. He has survived all the noted political and financial and industrial leaders of the ancient model, all the historic senators and governors of the commonwealth.

Memoirs of Blacksmith Bob Williams would make interesting reading for the people who are now on earth in Texas.

HISTORIAN PREDICTS WAR IN 1940

There is a world war coming in 1940. A famous Britisher, H. G.

Wells, said so as he made the landing at the New York dock.

He is not here to lecture; he won't deliver any speeches; he hasn't anything to say; he is here to rest and see a little of Uncle Sam's domain. Posing into the future, he has let it be known that the next world war will be in 1940.

Furthermore, he will bet his reputation on the roaring of cannon in that year. This "coming war will be a war to end wars," and it will bring about the ultimate salvation of the people but only after much tribulation. As for pacifists of pacifism, the historian said the "gospel of peace is doomed as it is alien to the Anglo-Saxon temperament. Man has been a fighting brute from the beginning. He may be a fighting brute a million years hence. Human nature changes at a snail's pace and human greed (self-interest) is ever uppermost in the human breast.

BORAH DIAGNOSES REPUBLICANS PARTY

Sen. William E. Borah of Idaho, independent republican and ever a lone traveler, has sounded another warning to the standpatters and practical politicians of the republican party.

Borah discussed the political situation. He expressed aggressive views as to the course he believed the republican party should pursue in the future. He demanded a complete separation from recent leaders—meaning Hoover and all his aides as well as "the big boys" who pull the invisible wires in the making of candidates for president and who assist in the drafting of taxation and tariff laws.

"The republican party is pretty close to the brink, and unless it has an organization free from the influences which brought us to our present plight, it will die as the old Wing party did, of sheer political cowardice." Washington correspondents are clever interpreters. They know how to read between the lines. They voice the opinion that Borah did not mention names "but it was apparent he was talking of the republican party leadership during the Hoover administration."

Well, the coming primaries in many erstwhile republican strongholds will tell the story, but the real story will be told when the election returns come in from 48 American commonwealths in the month of November of this year.

Tomorrow's Star Signals

By OCTAVINE

The morning is not important. One's mind will be active but working with too many things. Buy gloves and hats in the afternoon, or set a hair cut, or wave. It is unfavorable for hair dyeing, advertising or lofty schemes. The very late evening is socially pleasant.

The professions best suited to the Pisces (Feb. 9-March 20) type are the following: Actors, dancers, directors, magicians, carpenters, painters and massers.

TOMORROW'S BIRTHDAYS

You must pass through two adverse periods during the coming year, Aug. 26 to Sept. 28 and Nov. 23 to Dec. 23. Your professions, parents or elderly people will be a source of difficulty. Curb your expenses during March 1935. By thoughtful planning and adjusting affairs with your partner you will be able to make money this month.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

A few more days and school will be out again. For the members of the graduating class of the high school the event is a memorable occasion, a mile post that was a long time coming. For those of us who left the school room some years ago it is a different sort of mile post, one of those series of white indicators by a roadside that go flashing past with increasing rapidity as the years advance.

The thought suggests that the portion of life that is given to objectifying it—the period during which it is permanently santed, catalogued and identified among millions of others—is mighty short. A few years tell the story, and after that few years, it is extremely difficult to get out of the channel.

In the professions this is patently true, and, indeed, the result of a conscious choice, since the professions require much specialized training. But in them as in life in general, is the subtle truth that the pattern of life quality is cut within the brief period that intervenes between graduation and the selection of a vocation. That period of life ought to command the most careful attention, for it is the period when the powers of choice, the young judgment, is first exercised beyond the directional influences of the institutions which civilization has set up to perpetuate itself.

Today is Mother's Day. The finest gift of inspiration that was given man is the ability to see Mother apart from all the imperfections and limitations that enter into the human frame. The art which best expresses this transfigurative quality is familiar to us all, and ever reproduced this year upon an issue of commemorative postage stamps—Whistler's Mother. That the picture was so long in achieving the recognition that is its due, is a great tribute to the deep-seated mind, and the transcendental love of Whistler for the woman whose likeness has become the symbolic Mother of the world. Great art, which goes far, far beneath the superficial facts that all of us can see to feed from parents of fundamental truth, is difficult of sensory comprehension. It must be felt, and only in the quietness of our emotional understanding, take long to probe the deep, fertile stratum from which the artist drew his truthful inspiration. So we say, as the world now says of Whistler's painting that the truth grew upon us, and give logic no credit.

We are each of us glad that our Mothers were women. In that is the magic of it—that they could be women and know ourselves so intimately, and yet be the angels they are. That is what I meant when I said that our ability to see them out of limitations and imperfections, to transfigure them in our thoughts, is the finest gift of human inspiration. It is, indeed, a miracle as great as any ever attributed to a god on earth. About what other woman but a man's mother can he see such a miracle?

The reason we see them so is because they first overlooked our imperfections. Anyone who can forgive as much in a human being as each of us had to be forgiven certainly is entitled to adoration as more than human.

There is an extreme example in the case of Clyde Barrow. I'm sure his mother loves him, for he would certainly not regard her with the affection he evidently has for her if the strength of her love for him did not stand the supreme test of his crimes.

If, as is reported to be true, officers resorted to that affection as a means of trapping the criminal, it is a rather sorry commentary on our law enforcement agencies, I should think, to jeopardize a mother as a means of ensnaring a criminal son. It is one way to create popular sentiment in the son's behalf. I should fear the account has a rather sordid tinge.

"Log" Lassiter of Henderson, who served two years as a house member, is among the list of candidates for the senate aspiring to the place from which Miss Margie Neal will retire at the end of the year.

Lassiter studied law after he became a member of the house, and followed through by taking the bar examinations. Once he was asked whether he had been studying law "continuously" for the required length of time. He was to be scrupulous in interpreting the word "continuously" to claim that he had in the books every day so he layed three months taking the examinations.

Ernest Thompson, member of railroad commission, has presented the fight mission by the Texas producers the right to $72,000,000 additional worth oil per year; and that this $14,400,000 more to the state in production tax.

The federal government tried to limit the state to around 200 barrels of oil per day; but on showing made by the commission before the federal agencies, it finally was conceded the state was granted to produce a million barrels a day.

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY
DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDAL who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers.

When Donna Madeline ran away from her grandfather's home, she was injured in a fall from the trapeze. Her father arranged for her to be taken to GRAND FATHER SIDAL'S farm. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeline. She falls in love with the SIDAAL Madeline's cousin, and though she is ashamed of deceiving him, and grandfather she is afraid to tell them the truth.

Meanwhile Madeline marries a COWBOY animal trainer with the circus. He tells her he is going to put her in his home and not the day after their wedding. In spite of her protests, insists she must enter the lion cage.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CON produced a pair of leather trousers, leather leggings and a heavily padded leather jacket from one of his trunks. He gave them to Madeline and told her to put them on.

"Tuck your hair under this cap," he added. "There's never been a woman in the cage with old Sander and Leo and I don't know what their reaction will be, so we'll take no chances."

He did not wait to hear what Madeline might say, but strode off to give some instructions. The great, gilded cage that housed three African lions was pulled into the arena and small steps, mounting to the door, were placed beside it.

While Madeline dressed, cold perspiration poured from her body. She felt so physically ill that she wondered if she could walk from the dressing room to the "big top," let alone enter the lion cage.

Con met her half-way across the arena and smiled approval at her. "There's not a thing to be afraid of," he said.

She managed a wan smile and tried to walk steadily beside him, but her courage did not increase when she realized he was going into the cage unarmed and that none of the men who casually stood close at hand with a revolver, in case a beast should become refractory, was present.

"Stand by," Con said, "and when I call, come in the door." He picked up a chair, mounted the stairs, turned the key in the lock, opened the door a trifle and slid his body through, slamming the door tightly after him.

Waves of suspense swept over Madeline. Hundreds of times she had watched him do this thing. Hundreds of times she had seen him stroke the head and beard of the great shaggy beast, Sander, and the danger of it had not occurred to her. Now, with her limbs like lead, her hands clammy, her head swimming, all she could think of was Donna's warning "The cats all ways got them sometime."

THAT Sander purred like a kitten and seemed to love the touch of Con's hand meant nothing. He would be sure to hate her! He would sense her fear. Oh God, she couldn't do it! Con turned, beckoned to her and unlocked the cage door. "Come on," he said. "Quick."

She moved her weighted limbs. When the door clanged behind her and she realized that she was enclosed behind iron bars with three huge, vicious beasts that could rend her into tatters with one stroke of clawed paw, everything went black before her.

She caught Con's arm and clung to him, not for protection but to keep from falling. The cage seemed to rock as though it were being tossed about on the billows of a stormy sea. She tried to do as Con whispered, to look at the cats. But she couldn't. She felt that the beasts knew her terror and if she looked at them they would spring upon her.

Her wavering gaze focused upon the bars. They danced crazily, came towards her, receded, twisted and writhed.

"Steady," Con whispered. "Steady. Everything's fine!"

Then he called, "Carlo. Come, Carlo."

The yellow beast cringed, slunk backward. Con called again, this time with a rasping command. The cat snarled, lashed its tail. Madeline's muscles tensed. Then the lion started to draw nearer, his body flattened until his shaggy stomach rested upon the floor. Madeline could feel his fetid breath, smell the rank odor of him and her reeling senses seemed to congeal.

Suddenly the animal retreated, crouched and emitted a blood curdling roar. Con smothered an oath, thrust Madeline from him, jammed his chair full in the face of the beast and with his free hand unlatched the door.

"Get out," he muttered. "Get out. Back out! It's your smell!"

Somehow she contrived to do as he commanded. On the steps her legs caved in like jelly, the fog of black nausea swept her along with it, and she did not know what occurred until long afterward.

SHE revived with her clothing soaked with the water that Con had thrown in her face. She burst into tears and sobbed her contrition. "Oh, Con, I'm so sorry! I never faint before in my life. But I was so scared. I never knew any one could be so scared!"

"You were fine," he assured her. "Carlo got nasty, but everything is going to be all right. Maybe I rushed you into it too soon. We'll go slower and in a week's time you'll be playing with the old boy. See if you aren't! Next time you won't be afraid at all."

"Oh God," she thought, "I'll always be afraid. How can I go on with this? How can he take it this way?"

Before dinner time every one in the circus knew of the incident. Con David had forced his bride to enter the lion cage and she had fainted when Carlo attacked her.

Most of the women were indignant. Madeline was an aerial artist and what business had Con trying to put her into an animal act? Every one couldn't control wild beasts.

line's pride. "I don't suppose one was ever exactly joyous as he first went into a lion cage," exclaimed. "But I wasn't fully afraid either. I hadn't all night, for one thing, I wasn't feeling ace high. I was why I fainted. I know it wasn't any real danger with beside me. If I have had been wouldn't have let me do it."

No one but Madeline knew she suffered during the two that followed. No one ever of the nightmares that made sleeping hours a veritable hell, thousand times between midnight and daybreak she endured in the jaws of Sander or Leo Carlo.

Again and again she relived moments that seemed like centuries when she entered the gilded cage and learned to stand, wincing, before the slatted jaws and lashing tails of the gladiators.

IN vain were Con's reassurances that the cats feared his power and chair and whip far more she feared them. She pretent to agree with him, but she it that, given the opportunity, would rend her limb from limb.

Above everything in the world Con cherished his reputation, fearlessness and his ability to control the beasts. He was obsessed with ambition and far from satisfied with his position as star performer with a small touring circus. When he saw that Madeline seemed to enter into the training and appeared to be anxious to add to fame he had visions of achieving more with her assistance than could ever have done alone. He increased his regard for her, more than beauty or love could have done.

After each rehearsal his care helped repay the girl for the panic she suffered. Fortunately there was no reason to mention Donna's name, one Con seldom and, the once Con handed one of those Madeline, he did not inquire as to the other girl or ask what she doing. He took it for granted Donna was married and happy.

Often Madeline wondered if Con would do when he learned truth. Several times she was tempted to write Donna and her to write a letter saying she was engaged to Bill or had broken an engagement to him, she hesitated.

The rehearsals went on, and day for her public appearances the cage drew near. Then one afternoon Con announced that during the evening performance Madeline would enter the cage jungle cats.

"Never before, ladies and gentlemen, has a woman faced a lions and tigers, sworn enemies. Never before has a woman done such a death-defying stunt!"

"God help you!" muttered the Vale of the Flying Vales as she stood beside Madeline. "I'd fall from the bars than step into the cage with that Bengal."

CONGRATULATIONS REACH RHYTHM BAND FROM FAR-AWAY S. AMERICA

From far-away Colombia, South America, congratulations have reached Miss Attie Stevens, Miss Ona Howell and the members of the west ward school Rhythm band upon the band's winning first place in the recent county contest. Mrs. Edgar Butts, who last year was one of the most energetic members of the P. T. A. here and was particularly active in west ward affairs, wrote the letter April 14, after reading an account of the victory in the Cisco Daily News.

Mrs. Butts is with her husband, son of Mrs. J. J. Butts, of Cisco, who is a mining engineer with the Cruzero Mining syndicate at Anserma, Colombia, South America, high up in the Andes mountains. Mr.

Butts went to Columbia about 18 months ago, when the syndicate, a British concern, was formed to develop a gold mining concession. Mrs. Butts and their two children remained here until the end of the 1932-33 school term, and then went to California, from where Mrs. Butts proceeded to South America to join her husband in his remote field.

"You might tell the children," she writes in the letter to Miss Stevens, "I was two weeks on the water, on the train two days, in an auto nearly half a day and rode muleback for three days to reach here. I live on the side of a rock mountain, where the rock was all blasted out to build the house. It sets right against the mountain. Can't even see the sky in front. It's built up three stories to reach the floor of the house. No other human has gone any farther into the mountains here in this range. They are straight up and down."

How much more comfortably it handles, with shock-proof steering. How much more restfully you ride, in a Fisher Body car. How
