Daily News Goes to Washington

A leather-bound volume containing the first pages of 1314 daily newspapers of March 4, and constituting a permanent record of the way in which the nation's press reported the inauguration of President Roosevelt, was presented to the Library of Congress by Wilfred W. Fry, president of N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., of Philadelphia.

The book, titled "The Newspapers of a Nation," is made up of the first pages of the newspapers entered in the Exhibition of Newspaper Typography held each year under the auspices of the Ayer Galleries in the interest of promoting better newspaper typography.

Among the daily newspapers represented in the book is the Cisco Daily News which is entered each year, and which has received very favorable comment, despite the keen competition over the nation.

In presenting the book to Herbert Putnam, Librarian of Congress, Mr. Fry pointed out that, since the papers entered in the exhibition were all of the date of March 4, their first pages were given over in large measure to stories and photographs of President Roosevelt's inauguration. Because of the historic value of the book and the interest it will have for students of history in the years to come, he said, he felt it should be preserved in the national library.

In accepting the huge volume, Mr. Putnam characterized it as "an unique volume whose value will increase with the years." He expressed his appreciation of the exhibition which made it possible to preserve a collection of newspapers of such historical interest.

R. R. Threatened With Public Ownership

In what he called a "left-wing postscript," Joseph R. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Transportation, speaking before the Chamber of Commerce of the state of New York recently, reiterated that unless the rail carriers of the nation co-operate with the government in a program of intelligent and aggressive self help, public ownership is inevitable.

Mr. Eastman insisted that the entire premise of the federal plan was to act "not for the purpose of oppressing or hurting any form of transportation, but for the purpose of putting competition under reasonable control and preventing it from sapping the foundations of the entire transportation system."

"The vital thing is to deal with this situation for the nation as a whole," he continued. "Special interests are presenting their claims, each trying to put an edge on its own special axe, and among them they are likely to defeat any reasonable program, unless our law makers are able to see the public interest through the fog which these special interest create."

The essence of the problem, admitted by every one close to the industry, Mr. Eastman said, was to increase railroad revenues, decrease railroad expenses and some form of financial help or subsidy from the government, but from the beginning, he added, rail executives have made the coordinator's office aware of "a feeling of pulling against a dead weight, or even against active resistance."

"To me," he said, "the railroads have seemed more zealous to prove that my staff was wrong in its conclusions and recommendations than to find with the help of four reports, ways and means of improvement. Their attitude, in short, has been one of defense."

Describing the situation in the transportation industry as "chaotic and demoralized," Mr. Eastman voiced confidence that it could be gradually worked out if the government program were given cooperation all along the line and the managements showed real determination.

Failing this cooperation, he continued, the Federal government would have to assume more direct and immediate responsibility for the system's functioning.

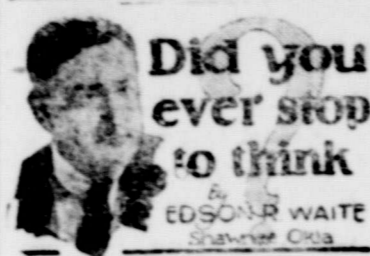

"I have not added this left-wing postscript to my remarks by way of either threat or warning," he said, "but in order that my statement of facts may be more nearly complete. There is probably no phase of our national life which is more in need of improvement than our transportation, and nothing would contribute more to general recovery."

"From this point of view there are very great attractions in the public acquisition and operation of the railroads, for it would at once put them in the market for the many things which they sorely need and which the country just as sorely needs to have them buy. The attractions may in time overbalance the dangers."

Cotton Ginners Ask Government For Money

Cotton ginners in all the fleecy staple states petitioned the congress for an appropriation to reimburse them for expenses incurred under the administration of the Bankhead act. They say the enforcement of the act cost the ginners millions. Well, Uncle Sam is the great Santa Claus of the American people. All who have suffered losses have the American privilege of presenting their claims to their senators and their representatives in order that "the cause may be pushed along." Just now the dust storms are gathering in the wheat growing states and the growers are apprehensive that another drought may put them out of business. Rice growers are demanding a processing tax of one cent a pound as well as government control of the acreage planted in the rice growing belts of the country. This is a history making congress, the second since the coming of the New Deal administration. A famous actress who had married three millionaire husbands and who had spent their fortunes said it all: "Life is just one damned thing after another." It is for the taxpayers.

The Only Outstretched Hand

Did you ever stop to think of EDSON R. WAITE
Harold G. Hoffman, governor of New Jersey, says:
"One of the greatest attributes in this world is to always be yourself. The pompous, puffed-up personality would come down to earth if he could occasionally peer into his own thyroid gland."
"It is startling to contemplate that in the thyroid gland there is a substance called thyroxin—three and one-half grains of which substance is manufactured in a year's time—and this is all that stands between any of us and immortality."
I never pass an asylum for mental cases that I do not look upon them with grave reflection. What a satire on the majesty of man!"

A Conan Doyle once remarked: "Isn't it a shocking thing to think that a fine, noble fellow with every divine instinct can suffer some slight vascular change—the dropping of a bone from the inner table of the skull on to the surface of the brain—and at once he becomes a filthy, pitiable creature with every low and debasing tendency."
"I think this is the finest argument for all of us to lead a good life—for all of us to be ourselves at all times."

REPLACES MANSION
MOBILE, Ala., March 11—The old Foote mansion, where once the belles and beaux of one of the old south's gayest cities danced and flirted, is under the wrecking's hammer. Built in 1858 by Charles Foote, cotton manufacturer, the red-brick mansion housed the wounded Admiral Edward Buchanan when he was injured on the eve of Alabama's secession from the Union during the Civil War. A filling station will be erected on the site.

NEW DEAL "CROSSES STYX"
FREEPORT, O., March 11—The New Deal is about to cross the River Styx—with a dam instead of the legendary boat. Due to high prices asked for land in this part of Harrison county, plans for a dam under the Muskingum conservancy flood control project have been cancelled. Instead, a dam will be built across the Styx on the Wayne-Medina county line near Rittman, Ohio.

BANK DEBITS SHOW GAIN
SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 11—Improved business conditions were responsible for a 3314 per cent gain in bank debits in one week compared with a year ago the same time as compared to a state gain of 35.5 per cent.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, March 11—A legislative committee, its chairman breaking a tie vote has approved the civil judicial council's proposal to nominate the judiciary by convention, instead of the primary system applying now.
Committee action is far from final approval of the legislature, yet, by the deciding vote of one man, the committee is on record as holding the primary system a failure, as to court judges, and of favoring a revision to an older system.

BROOKS When the primary system was achieved, it was hailed as a victory for democracy. It ended every grave abuse. Texans are feeling around now, to see if democracy itself is safe, or whether the citizenship shall turn a little more to the theory of concentrated power, or the dictatorship plan.

The view will be expressed in the legislature that if any candidate for public office is unwilling to trust his case in the hands of the electorate, there is no compelling reason for him to seek public office.
The view logically will be offered that if democracy as to the primary system has failed for the judiciary, it has failed all down the line, and that if it is adequate to name a governor and an attorney general, it should be relied upon to select a chief justice or a district judge. The clients and rings that formerly dominated political conventions, and make the distribution of public offices an "inside" and virtually hierarchical affair were well known. Nowhere does organization flourish better than among those trained in political affairs, the lawyers.

Lawyers make no secret of the fact that reversion to convention nominations would place the selection of the judiciary almost exclusively in the hands of the bar. Its members would be the ones interested.
There are abuses in the primary system. The demagogue is given too big a chance. The ablest man, unwilling to face a political campaign, holds back and doesn't run, in some instances.
But from the time of Jefferson, who had to enfranchise his public before he could rest the powers of popular government in its hands, there have been able and outstanding leaders and officials who were

Stories in STAMPS

RAIN had drenched the fields along the Verdun sector, in the late spring of 1916, and the trenches were sodden with soft mud. In one of these muddy holes waited a company of 100 French soldiers, bayonets fixed ready to go over the top.
Suddenly the rain-soaked ground above caved in and buried the 100 soldiers alive. Only their bayonets remained sticking above ground.
Today this grim reminder of war is enclosed in a memorial and the memory of this tragedy is perpetuated in France's charity issue of 1917-19, for the orphaned of war.

willing to trust the best judgment of the entire voting public.
If Texas scraps the principle of primary nomination of judges now, it should not stop there, but go all the way and discard it as to all public officials. If the legislature believes the electorate incapable of selecting adequate judicial officers, it will be embarrassed with the question whether it has proven able to select worthy legislative representatives.

EXPECTS NICE PROFIT
WAUPACA, Wis., March 11—S. D. Shamben, Waupaca county farmer, bought 100 steers at the St. Paul stockyards last November and expects to realize a profit of $5,000 on them when they all are sold. The steers averaged 700 pounds when purchased but after careful feeding and attention are averaging about 1,000 pounds when Shamben sells them. In addition to the additional weight, the increased market price per pound accounts for Shamben's profit.

PERFECT ATTENDANCE

BRITISH FLEET TO HONOR KING WITH REVIEW

By H. L. PERCY

United Press Staff Correspondent LONDON, March 11—The fleet of Britain's navy will be reviewed by King George off Spithead, Portsmouth, either July 16 or 17. It will be the greatest display of the war, and one of the highlights of the Silver Jubilee program, bringing the 25 years the king has reigned.

Detailed arrangements have to be made, but it is understood the Mediterranean fleet will be represented by the first cruiser squadron, the first destroyer squadron, and a destroyer flotilla.

This would comprise about 30 vessels, but in all about 60 are expected to participate in the review. The king will be aboard the yacht, Victoria and Albert, he will be accompanied by his sons, Princes of Wales and the Duke of Kent, as personal aides-de-camp.

The first battle squadron of the Mediterranean fleet consists of Queen Elizabeth, flagship of the fleet, and the battleships Royal Oak and Sir William Woodcock, commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean; the Resolution, avenge, Royal Sovereign, and others.

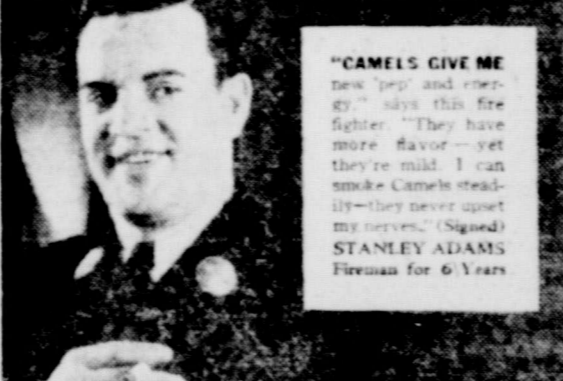

In the first cruiser squadron are the 10,000-ton ship, the flagship of Rear Admiral Knowles in the fleet, the Leander, Shropshire, and Australia, named is serving in place of Sussex, which is cruising for the Australian squadron.

Home Fleet Strength
If the Home Fleet is at strength, it will include the son, flagship of Admiral of the Sea, Lord Jellicoe, the battle cruiser Hood, the aircraft carrier Argus, and the battle cruiser Leader, Achilles, Orion, and Cairo, 27 destroyers, 20 submarines and a number of minesweepers.

It will be easy to distinguish between the ships of the Mediterranean and Home fleets. The Mediterranean fleet has light gray work, which in certain light, while, contrasting with the gray "war point" of the Home Fleet.

LOVE SPOTS NEEDED
BOSTON, March 11—The country needs a good love-making Mrs. Cornelia Parker told members of the Massachusetts State Federation Women's club here recently of the worst results of their own in our cities is that there is no place for people to make love.

LOTIEF FAVORS INCOME TAX, UTILITY REGULATION

By CECIL A. LOTIEF. Representative 107th District AUSTIN, March 11.—I have been intending to write to the newspapers and four weeks, but on account of heavy calendar and important business before the house, I have failed to do so.

Against Oil Tax. Governor Allred recently spoke before the legislature and advocated legislation regarding our tax system. He advised the legislature how to raise sufficient amounts of money to defray the government's expenses.

Against Centennial. Governor Allred, in his message, assured the legislature that the pipeline companies of this state have made a clear profit of 78 million dollars.

Charge Utility Profit. The public utilities of this state have been making money by the broken by a bird's song. The door of the bedroom opened and Doctor Carr came out.

Oh, Josie—if he shouldn't! The door of the bedroom opened and Doctor Carr came out. Doctor Carr, whose red face was usually so grimly, was not smiling.

Now go on with the story. CHAPTER XLVI. A named Jasper Wilkins told them what had happened. Steve had been carried into his own room. Doctor Carr was there now and Mrs. Meyers was there.

When the others had gone Gale opened the bedroom door and looked at the bed. Her head pressed against her son's arm. Steve's eyes were closed and he looked as though he were sleeping.

FARMERS' BODY MAKING PLANS TO JOIN FIGHT

By VALCO LYLE. United Press Staff Correspondent TYRONZA, Ark., March 11.—Although the Southern Tenant Farmers Union sprang up in Northeastern Arkansas to defend sharecroppers against illegal evictions by landlords, the union has long-range plans.

The union organized here in July 1934, eventually wants to unify southern farm tenants like industrial workers have been organized. It hopes some day to have a union organized strong enough to be recognized by the American Federation of Labor.

Other "wants" include a minimum wage scale of 20 cents per hour for a 12-hour day and time and a half for overtime, better living quarters and schooling for their families, definite agreements with landlords regarding making crops and labor, and fair treatment in various government plans to control crop production.

No Recourse. "We want to share in writing the cotton acreage reduction contracts," Ward H. Rodgers, 24-year-old former FERA instructor and union executive, said in an interview.

Right to Meet. Governor Fretwell said the union had a right to meet and discuss union plans without molestation but said there was nothing he could do about it.

Civil Authority. The governor explained "is vested in the courts and the county officers. It cannot do anything to remove them, and I cannot send National Guardsmen into their country to enforce the law, unless the county authorities request it."

The courts and the county officers are controlled by the planters," Rodgers suggested. Governor Agreed "I suspect that is true," the governor agreed.

The union at present is in an embryonic stage. It includes only about 4,000 to 5,000 members, mostly in Brittonville, Cross, Poinsett, and Mississippi counties—in the rich Mississippi delta and tributary cotton-producing sections of Northeastern Arkansas.
