Home-Grown Food

It sometimes looks, nowadays, as if transportation is becoming too efficient and market facilities too modern.

How people used to wait, with watering mouth, for the "first strawberries!" They were home strawberries, of course, grown out of doors. What a flavor they had, and what a celebration there was when the first shortcake appeared on the table! Then the gorgeous luxury of strawberries and cream for breakfast, for days in succession!

It was the same with other domestic fruits, and the same with vegetables. Who, that is older than this present generation of blase youths, cannot recall the sight, smell and taste of the first creamed "new potatoes," fresh from the end of the row in the back yard where the vines were just beginning to die in token of maturity? Also the first radishes, tomatoes and cucumbers, not to mention string beans.

Those glorious days are gone, probably forever, and there are no more food seasons, in the annual rotation that Providence appointed for them. Strawberries come in the north before the frost is out of the ground. Peaches and new potatoes and green beans are in the grocery windows and on the table almost before blossom time has come. All over the country many fresh foodstuffs are now raised in greenhouses and are had out of season even when they are not shipped from distant sections. There may be a notable "first appearance" of fresh commodity, but soon it becomes a matter of course, and by the time the local outdoor crops are available they are an old, stale story.

So the elements of novelty and surprise are lost from our tables. And there is little compensation, really. No foodstuffs ever seem half so good as the seasonable, home-grown crop. And the worst of it is that nothing can be done about it, which somehow seems unfair to nature.

Low Rental Homes for City Dwellers

President Roosevelt is a very active, a very busy and a very progressive chief magistrate of all the people. Now it is known that low rental homes for city dwellers and a drive to better the living conditions of farmers who have poor land has been placed on the list of projects which the president expects to initiate early in the summer. Secretary Ickes has $100,000,000 of housing projects in 28 cities which he hopes to get under way by the middle of August. Secretary Ickes advises that the ruling of the president that all the money ($4,000,000,000) should be spent before July 1, 1936, would not prevent "the construction of housing developments."

There is a large army of idlers—idlers through no fault of their own. There is an army of idlers who prefer the dole to a job. Billions have been voted for the employment of the jobless who are seeking jobs and those who are in charge of the spending of the $4,000,000,000 should see to it that thousands are taken from the relief rolls and given a fair wage instead of the dole of the idler who is not seeking a job and will seek one as long as the dole is within his reach.

Referendum on Dry Laws August 24

Gov. James V. Allred, a prohibitionist, recommended that prohibition should be submitted to the people in all his campaign speeches. Democrats assembled in state convention and declared for submission of the dry laws to the qualified voters. Well, the legislature has acted. Texans will ballot on two propositions. First, on August 24 and second on November 3, 1936. The first proposal will be on straight repeal with the legislature granted power to regulate. The second, for a dispensary system to be decided next year should the qualified voters cast a majority of their ballots for elimination of prohibition from the constitution of Texas.

The people are the masters. They pay the taxes. Woodrow Wilson had a favorite saying, "Let the people rule." In August the balloting will be on repeal with the legislature empowered to regulate. Saloons would be banned and a state monopoly would be optional. Then the question of a mandatory state monopoly would be submitted at the general election in November, 1936.

When the 18th amendment came in John Barleycorn went out—in Texas. Prohibition did not prohibit. Then the congress of the United States declared for the repeal of the 18th amendment and now it will be the privilege of Texans, wet or dry, to vote for the schemes or plans or laws of their choice.

U. S. C. of C. Opposes New Deal

In this land of the free the expected always happens. It happened when the United States Chamber of Commerce leaders condemned all the major proposals of the Roosevelt legislative program. They declared war on the measure known as government control or regulation of the holding companies of the utilities. They denounced any and all attempts at "currency inflation or the issuance of so-called paper money." It is a matter of history that the United States Chamber of Commerce backed the Hoover administration to a flat finish. It backed the Harding administration until Harding passed out and Coolidge came in. Now the heads of the powerful organization are against all "interference with business," all Wagner labor bills, all codes for business and a quick return to Harding normalcy and Hoover plans and policies of "sane government."

Well—why should the few control the government and make all the laws for the people who do their best to support the government and are ever on the fighting line when rifle carriers as necessary and fodder for the cannon are in demand.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, May 6 — Backers of highway projects that have been turned down by the state highway commission in the past will flock to Austin, May 13 and 14. Appointment of a new chairman of the commission, Harry Lines of Wichita Falls, has renewed hope that the rejected projects may now be reinstated. More than 40 delegates have given notice that they will be in Austin for the next sitting of the commission. Many of them are asking hearings on old projects.

SHEARER
Mrs. Helen Moore, Texas City, forced her anti-heart-balm bill to a vote in the house of representatives by being on her toes.

A constitutional amendment had been under discussion when the house recessed for lunch. Members were slow in returning. The proponents of the amendment hesitated to push for a vote because of the small attendance for an amendment must get 100 votes.

"While they are waiting, let me take up the anti-heart-balm bill," Mrs. Moore suggested to Speaker Coke R. Stevenson.

He nodded and the house agreed to do so.

Claude Lindley, who lives near Catarina, in Dimmitt county, asked the legislature for privilege to sue the state of Texas. The house of representatives voted to give it to him.

His petition was presented by Rep. Joe W. Caldwell, Jr., of Asherton.

Lee, ate up Lindley's crop of cane and hegrira. He valued the cane at $1,170 and the hegrira at $250.

The petition said that Lindley complained about the herd of deer to the Fish, Game and Oyster commission, and asked that a game warden be sent to his farm to shoot the deer, which he could not shoot, lawfully.

They sent a game warden out there to see that he didn't shoot the deer," Rep. Caldwell told the house, "and that was all that happened."

"It sounds like a joke, I know," Caldwell said. "But it wasn't a joke to this poor farmer. He nearly starved to death on account of those deer eating up his crops."

Attorney who practice before the state supreme court should be ready to answer questions from the bench when they appear for arguments.

Judge Richard Criz, appointed last week to succeed the late Associate Justice William Pierson, frequently asks them.

On the occasion when he sat with the Supreme court as a member of the Commission of Appeals he quizzed lawyers about the matters they were presenting.

The lawyer who was not well prepared on his case sometimes found the questions difficult to answer and his situation embarrassing.

A scramble for rooms used by legislative committees has begun. State departments wanting more space already have started to ask permission to move in when the legislature moves out.

Legislators, however, are disinclined to grant the requests. They are uncertain how soon they will be back in Austin for a special session.

Senator Weaver Moore, Houston, looks forward eagerly to the end of the legislative session.

Not that he has a pleasant trip in prospect. Instead he will enter a hospital. For weeks he has been attending the sessions under difficulties caused by a rebellious gall stone.

Illness has forced absence of Sen. Ernest Fellbaum, Sr., San Antonio, on all but a few days of the session. Members have paired with him on contested bills so he has had a say in most of the proceedings.

Sen. Eph Davis of Brownwood set one sort of a record in a night session of the senate this week when he succeeded in having three bills taken up out of order and passed.

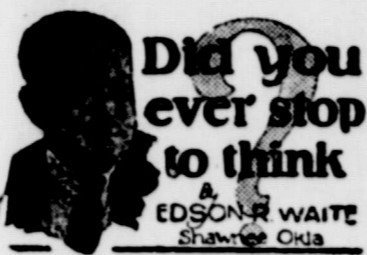

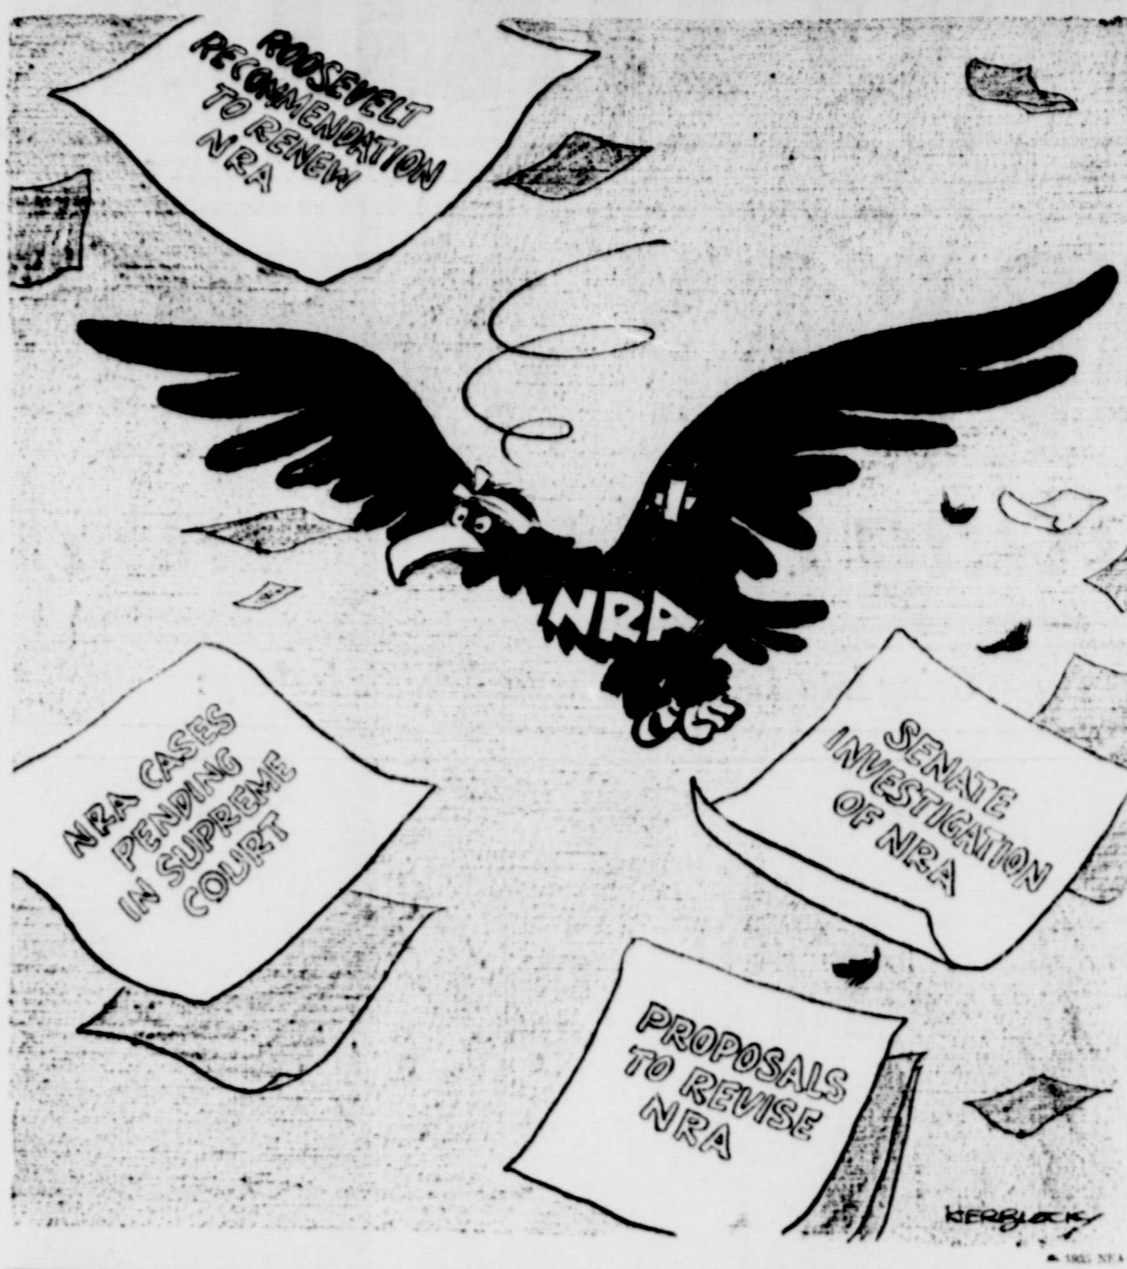

Usually a senator is allowed to get one bill up at a night session. The names are called in order and the Senator allowed to select a bill.

Davis took advantage of other senators picking bills that started contests and had to be withdrawn. He picked the Upper Colorado River Authority, a bill creating a National Guard Armory Board, and a bill that lets water districts exercise health and safety precautions to prevent pollution and drownings.

JUNK WASN'T JUNK
SAUGUS, Mass. — Two aspiring junk dealers were taught the difference between junk and useful articles after they had removed a manhole cover from the street. The amateur junk men hired a horse and wagon and set out to make a name for themselves. They made a grave error, however, when they lifted the manhole cover from its place and were arrested by Patrolman Thomas Canavan.

Still Flapping to Keep Alive

The editor of the Pinang Gazette and Straits Chronicle, in speaking of poverty in the midst of plenty, says in part: "Paradoxical though it may seem it is a fact that poverty and prosperity go hand in hand. On the flood of prosperity there is a certain amount of backwash. In spite of trade recovery, each big nation is grappling with its unemployed problem and there seems to be no royal road to absorb all the unemployed that exist today. Each country has its quota of poor. In Malaya this problem of the poor has never been so accentuated as it is today. And side by side with this problem of the poor, there is the equally pathetic problem of those who are not likely to find employment on account of advancing age or ill health. It seems that there are many people who would rather starve than ask for charity. Some way should be found to coordinate relief work so these people would have assistance. STUBBLE KILLS FARMER
RENO, O. — Pearl McCain, a farmer, suffered an unusual death at his farm here. McCain, 38, was driving a wagon across his cornfield. The wagon lurched and he fell to the ground. A four-inch stubble of corn ran through his eye and entered the brain. McCain died in a hospital.

DOG ANTIQUE COLLECTOR
NASHUA, N. H. — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Multvanity, antique collectors, have a dog that has taken up the same hobby. Cordota, a wire-haired terrier, was digging in the cellar of the house, uncovered a valuable pewter salt shaker, carried it up stairs and presented it to its mistress.

ESSAY CONTEST PLANNED
HANNIBAL, Mo. — A nation-wide essay contest on the subject, Mark Twain, has been opened to children under 16 years by the Samuel Clemens centennial committee. Essays must be under 300 words in length. The contest will close next Oct. 15. Manuscripts may be mailed to the Hannibal Chamber of Commerce.

The DARK BLOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 MILLICENT GRAYES, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, finds her employer in his office dead. JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a beauty. She takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets HIS HAPP, a man who is not to be trusted. ROBERT CAINE, HAPP's partner, DICK CERRY, VERA DRINGOLD, HAPP's maid.

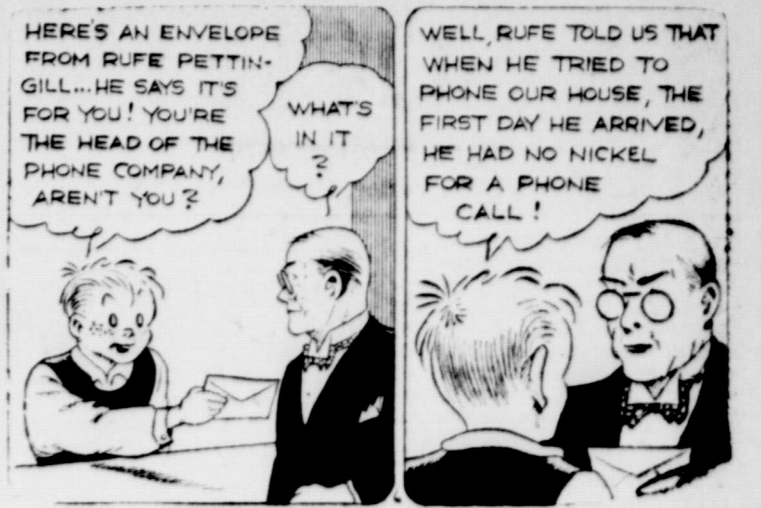

IN HAPP'S HOME
 MILLICENT sees the mysterious "woman in black" whom she believes has some connection with Dringold's death. The chauffeur is found dead. Later HAPP is kidnapped. MILLICENT and NORMAN learn the car driven by the woman in black belongs to PHYLLIS FAULCONER. They go to her apartment. NORMAN enters there. He does not return. MILLICENT follows. The place is in wild disorder and NORMAN is not to be seen. A policeman arrives. MILLICENT escapes.

She goes to the nearby garage where DETECTIVE BUCHANAN accuses her of being PHYLLIS FAULCONER. He tries to get her out of the apartment building to identify her. It proves to be the collector's home. She goes to PHYLLIS FAULCONER's rooms.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER XLVI
DETECTIVE BUCHANAN asked, "Is this the lane?"
 Johansen's eyes, which had riveted themselves on Millicent, said, "You bet that's the lane. She ran like a deer when I fell for the line she handed me. You sure showed brains in putting the bracelets on her. She's got the smoothest line of any crook I've tackled in a year."
 "Is that Phyllis Faulconer?" Buchanan asked.
 "You bet that's Phyllis Faulconer. She was in the apartment and she admitted to me she was there when the fighting was going on. I telephoned headquarters when she made a break."
 "Yes," Buchanan said. "I telephoned in and they told me you'd reported trouble in that apartment so I figured you'd better come around to make positive identification."
 "She was handing you a line?" Buchanan asked.
 "I'll say she was handing me a line."
 Millicent sat speechless. There was nothing she could say. She was trapped in the web of her own incriminating statements to Johansen, her equally incriminating flight.
 A siren sounded outside the door.
 "Well," Buchanan remarked, shaking ashes from his cigar, "that will be the wagon from headquarters. Come on, sister. Here we go."
 The siren grew louder. Tires screamed on the turn and then a red roadster skidded into the garage and slid to a stop.
 Sergeant Mahoney jumped from the car, banged open the door of the office, looked at Buchanan, then at Millicent.
 "Unsnap those handcuffs," he said.
 Buchanan's face turned a dull red. "Listen, Sergeant, she's a killer and she's desperate. She's Phyllis Faulconer, all right. I trapped her when she came to the car."
 "Unsnap the handcuffs," Sergeant Mahoney said. "I don't like to see her handcuffed in the first place and in the second place I don't think she's Phyllis Faulconer."
 "She's the Faulconer woman all right," Johansen said. "I came on her in the apartment."
 "So," he said slowly, "you're the Murderer Girl."
 She knew she could not deceive him further. "Yes," she said, "I'm the Murderer Girl."
 "And Bob Caine knows it?"
 "Yes."
 Sergeant Mahoney's voice was not unkindly. "You know," he said, "you're entitled to have a lawyer represent you. You don't need to say anything. Perhaps a stenographer would be best for you, but I'd like to have you tell me about it."
 "From the beginning?" she inquired.
 "From the beginning," he told her. "Do you want to do it?"
 She faced him unflinchingly. "Sergeant," she said, "I'm going to tell you everything."
 His hand reached out and closed upon the back of hers. "Good girl," he said. "If I can give you a break I'll do it."
 She started talking in a low monotone, told him everything, sparing no detail, beginning with the time Dringold had told her he was going to dictate a confession, including her first meeting with the woman in the black ermine coat, about the murder, and her sudden panic. She even told him about encountering Jarvis C. Happ in the building.

SERGEANT MAHONEY waited until she had finished. Then he asked a few questions.
 "Norman went to that apartment?" Sergeant Mahoney asked.
 "Yes."
 "Do you love him very much, Millicent?"
 "I love him more than I love life."
 "Suppose I should tell you that he is in great danger? Would you be willing to do anything you could to help?"
 "Anything," she said.
 "I want to bait a trap," he told her. "Will you help me?"
 "How can I help you?"
 His eyes stared steadily into hers. "You," he said, "are to be the bait. I want you to go to that apartment house. I want you to knock on the doors of the various apartments and start asking questions."
 "But," she pointed out, "the apartment is vacant now. No one is there and they won't come back after the police have been there."
 "But," he told her, "Norman didn't leave that apartment house. They could hardly have carried him out and he wouldn't have left voluntarily without having joined you in the cab."
 "Then you think he's somewhere in the apartment house?"
 "I'm virtually certain of it."
 "And you believe my story?"
 He nodded solemnly. "Yes," he said. "I'm going to have my men go around to the hotel and pick up the suitcase and your notebook with Dringold's confession as he had dictated it."
 "What are you going to do?"
 "Well," he said, "I'm going to be in charge of the squad of men who will surround that apartment house. I'm going to send you in there—perhaps to your death. At any rate, into great danger, but it's the only way to save Norman."
 She set her lips into a firm line of determination. "Let's start," she said.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS.

Camel Mildness Is Basis for Champion

The mildness of Camels is the theme of the new cigarette advertising campaign of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, which features the announcement that Camels are "so mild you can smoke all you want." It is supported by statements from a representative group of athletic stars and champions in various strenuous sports who smoke Camels and have found that "they don't get your wind."

This new campaign of advertising is now appearing regularly in the Daily News. It is expected that Camels' consistent policy of newspaper advertising will be continued.

In the first advertisement Gene Saruzen, famous golf champion, pictured both smoking a Camel and in action, is quoted: "Travelling and playing as much as I do, I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They're so mild they never get my 'wind' or nerves."

Other athletes who comment on the mildness of Camels in statements accompanied by "action" photographs are Georgia Coleman, holder of 13 national and Olympic diving championships; Melvin Ott, batting star of the New York Giants baseball team; John L. Skillman, squash racquets champion; Bill Miller, four times national sculling champion and Jim Lancaster, captain of an undefeated New York university basketball team. It is pointed out that a cigarette whose mildness has won the patronage of outstanding athletes—who have to know what real tobacco mildness is—naturally has a mildness which will appeal to the non-athletic smoker as well.

The quality of the tobaccos used in the manufacture of Camels is consistently stressed. Each advertisement gives prominent display to the statement, signed by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, that "Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic than any other popular brand."

STAMFORD GIRL BRIDE OF BURETTE KARKALITS

Miss Emma Dee Merritt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Merritt of Stamford, and Mr. Burette W. Karkalits, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Karkalits of Eastland, formerly of Cisco were married Sunday morning at 9:30 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt.

Rev. Sam Morris, pastor of the First Baptist church in Stamford, read the ceremony before an improvised altar of roses.

The bride wore a handsome white suit with white accessories. She wore a corsage of lily-of-the-valley.

Miss Mercia Sherwood of Wichita Falls, cousin of the bride and maid of honor, was gowned in white and wore a corsage of sweet peas. Mr. T. B. Henry of Stamford was best man.

During the ceremony Mrs. Margaret Salter of Dallas, violinist played "I Love You Truly." Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Merritt were hosts to an informal reception after which the bride and groom left for a two weeks honeymoon. They will visit in Midland, Carlsbad, Mexico, New Mexico, San Antonio, and other parts of Texas before returning to Stamford to make their home.

Other than parents of Mr. and Mrs. Karkalits present at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Henry and daughter, Betty Glyn; Miss Mary Tom Boston; Misses Betty Jean Maxine and Mary Elordene Merritt, sister of the bride; Mrs. Margaret Salter of Dallas; Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Sherwood and daughter, Marcia of Wichita Falls; Miss Louise Karkalits of Eastland.

AMERICAN FARM POPULATION IS GREATEST IN HISTORY OF NATION

WASHINGTON, May 6. — The farm population now the largest in the nation's history—is estimated by the bureau of agricultural economics as of January 1, 1935, at 32,779,000 persons. This is 270,000 persons more than on the same date in 1934. The increase is attributed to a surplus of births over deaths rather than to any marked farmward movement from cities.

The bureau says the movement away from farms last year was larger than the movement to farms. It is estimated that 783,000 persons moved out of cities, towns and villages to farms last year, but that 994,000 persons moved from farms to cities, towns, and villages.

The bureau says that although the net change in farm population as a whole was about the same in 1934 as in 1933, more pronounced differences are indicated by the estimates for the various major geographic divisions.

Whereas in 1933 each of these areas showed small net gains ranging from 1.4 per cent in the east South Central States to 2 tenths of one per cent in the Mountain and Pacific States, in 1934 the Pacific states gained 1.7 per cent, the Mountain states lost 1.2 per cent, and the West North Central states lost 1.1 per cent. The drought, it is stated, was responsible for some of these contrasts.

The bureau says the reduction in migration from cities, towns, and villages in northern and northeastern industrial states "was probably the combined result of a farm housing shortage, somewhat better employment opportunities in non-agricultural industries, and the larger cash relief payments generally available to urban residents as contrasted to rural dwellers."

The bureau's estimates do not include so-called subsistence farms to any extent since local correspondents furnishing information to the bureau tend to overlook most of these noncommercial enterprises.

Advertising Wins For Baking Powder

That persistent advertising of an article that has merit behind it, will win out is attested by the fact that K. C. Baking Powder double tested—double-action in quality, has enjoyed such sale and acceptance among the women of this territory that the manufacturers have just increased their advertising schedule with the Cisco Daily News from two times a week to three times a week, and have extended the schedule much longer than has been their custom through the past years.

In addition to the regular schedule of advertising placed with the Daily News each year, home economists, who have held cooking schools and demonstrations under the auspices of the Daily News, have consistently preferred K. C. Baking Powder and have used it in all their demonstrations during the past six years here in Cisco. The manufacturers of K. C. Baking Powder have backed up this use of their products with special schedules of advertising, which have called the housewives' attention to the quality and consistent standardization of this well-known product. All of which has resulted in such a boost in the use of K. C. Baking Powder that the schedule has been increased one-third in frequency.

Merchants will be glad to know of this fact as the increased advertising will aid them in the sale of this immensely popular product in this territory.

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke all you want—that's what athletes say about Camels.

Gene Sarazen says: "Playing as much as I do—I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'—never upset my nerves."

Other athletes back him up... "I smoke all the Camels I want, and keep in top condition," says Mel Ott, slugger of the New York Giants... Georgia Coleman, Olympic diver, says: "Camels don't cut down on my 'wind'..." Bill Miller, oarsman; Jim Lancaster, N.Y.U.'s 1934 basketball captain; John Skillman, pro squash racquets champion—hundreds of sports stars smoke Camels regularly and report that Camels never get their "wind" or nerves.

What this mildness means to you!... It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Athletes have made this discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild, they can smoke all they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.

SO MILD YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!

Camels COSTLIER TOBACCO!

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOES—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.
