KNAP HOUSE IS FOUND IN SPOKANE

COUPLE HELD CONFESS PART IN ABDUCTION

WASHINGTON, June 10. — The hideout of the Weyerhaeuser kidnapers was located today in Spokane, Wash. Director J. Edgar Hoover of the bureau of investigation announced.

"It is at 1506 West Eleventh street. It was identified only about 10 minutes ago," Hoover said when he had concluded long distance telephone call to the west where he said his men are "mopping up" the remnants of the gang which held young George Weyerhaeuser for $200,000.

One man and his wife had been arrested in Salt Lake City, Utah, while another man is being sought intensively.

While Hoover was telling how the cupboard in the house where the 9-year-old boy was kept was located, he received a long distance call from Tacoma.

"Have police guards thrown around the house and don't let anyone go inside," Hoover told his caller.

"We will permit newspapers to take pictures of the outside of the house only," he said.

Hoover had upon his desk a closely typed statement of some 15 or 20 pages which he said had just arrived by wire from Salt Lake City.

He said it was dictated by Harmon Waley, and his wife, Margaret, who were arrested Saturday and who confessed their part in the kidnaping.

William Mahan, suspect, who escaped from Police in Butte, Mont., Sunday is the object of a vigorous search by Hoover's men.

Wichita Falls To Continue NRA Codes

WICHITA FALLS, June 10. — Action of the U. S. supreme court declaring the NRA unconstitutional is not to affect industry here.

At a mass meeting of business leaders held here after the court's decision, it was decided that hours and wages determined under NRA codes are to be complied with by major oil companies and other businesses.

LAWYERS GAIN FIRST VICTORY IN U. S. TRIAL

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 10. — Counsel for Ben Laska, Denver, and James Mathers, Oklahoma City, attorneys, charged with receiving a portion of the Charles Urschel ransom, as seized claimed a major victory today as the trial opened with a ruling by U. S. Judge Edgar Vaughn.

The judge said he would instruct the jurors that an attorney has a right to represent a person accused of any crime and that the attorney does not need to inquire where the accused person got his money or what kind of money was to be used in paying the fee.

David Tant, Oklahoma City attorney, who entered the case for Laska at the last moment had intended to appeal to the American Bar association for assistance on the plea that all attorneys might be jeopardized by conviction of Mathers and Laska.

Check Casher Object of Nationwide Hunt

TWO MISSING MEN'S NAMES ARE FORGED

EL PASO, June 10. — The man who cashed travel checks by forging the names of two Illinois men was the object of a nationwide government search today, in the hope of finding the bodies of four persons believed to have been murdered.

Government agents sent out a description of a man who signed the name of James Sullivan at a hotel register here after having passed four checks in El Paso.

The checks were issued to George Lorus, East St. Louis, Ill., who with his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Heberer of DuQuoin, Ill., have been missing since they left Albuquerque, N. M., May 22 on a cross country trip.

CISCOANS SENDS IN DESCRIPTION OF MAN
Cisco has added its bit to the evidence piling up in the case of a man who forged the names of missing persons to travel checks to cash them along the Bankhead highway between El Paso and Dallas.

Waldo Harris, manager of a service station here, has turned over a description of a man for whom he cashed a check two weeks ago, to the department of justice, he revealed Saturday.

He said the man, driving a tan Nash sedan, 1931 model, was about 24 years old, six feet tall, slender, dark, and wearing old clothes and a cap.

The car the man was driving later was found on the streets of Dallas and identified as that driven by the four persons missing at Albuquerque since May 22.

CCC Camps To Cut Down Relief Rolls

AUSTIN, June 10. — A plan to remove 50,000 Texans from relief rolls by taking 12,780 youths from transient camps and enlisting them in CCC camps was announced today by Neal Guy, Texas CCC enrollment supervisor.

The new quota for Texas will be filled between July 15 and August 31.

Formerly, transient youths were not allowed to enter civilian conservation camps if their families were receiving government relief. Under the new plan they will become "free army" recruits, which includes sending their monthly salary checks to their homes. Each boy will represent one less relief case, the total involving about 50,000 individuals.

'Grass Roots' Parley Beckoning to Demos

UTILITY BILL SIDETRACKED FOR NRA VOTE

WASHINGTON, June 10. — Administration leaders decided today to lay aside the public utilities bill in the senate and try to rush action upon the resolution calling for a skeletonized NRA.

The decision came after indications from the republican side that any effort to bring the public utilities bill to a vote today would meet with stiff opposition and a flood of amendments.

The republicans wanted to delay voting on the utility bill until absent members could return.

Chairman Pat Harrison, of the senate finance committee, who had planned to let the NRA resolution lie over until the utility bill was disposed of, announced his intention to bring the NRA bill to a vote as soon as the senate convenes after its weekend recess.

BUENOS AIRES, June 10. — By nightfall, three years of warfare in the Gran Chaco between Bolivia and Paraguay may have ended.

CISCO WATER PURE CHEMICAL TEST REVEALS

Reports that Cisco's city water has been causing people here to become ill today were spiked by Water Commissioner W. R. Winston and G. R. Kilpatrick.

"There's nothing to all that," Kilpatrick said this afternoon. "It's just a lot of gossip."

He said that the water is sent to Dallas once a week for chemical analysis and "that it tested pure and entirely free from anything that would cause illness."

The water has also cleared up considerably since the recent rains and the semi-annual "turn-over" he said.

"We just want the people to know that there's no danger of their becoming sick from drinking the city water."

J. T. Elliott's Car Stolen Third Time

Somebody likes J. T. Elliott's automobile. That was the decision the druggist had reached as he trudged his way to work today.

For the third time someone had helped himself to the car, a 1927 model Chevrolet coupe. "And the worst of it is," Elliott said, "that I haven't any insurance now and it's probably gone for good."

The car was stolen from where he parked it on West Seventh street, beside the Dean Drug company. He left it here at 8 o'clock and missed it when he started to lunch at noon, he reported.

Richetti Goes On Trial for Massacre

KANSAS CITY, June 10. — Adam Richetti, accused of being one of the trigger men at the Union Station massacre here two years ago went on trial for murder today.

Four officers and their prisoner were slain in the massacre.

Richetti, who was Charles ("Pretty Boy") Floyd's first lieutenant, was caught in Ohio last fall when he and Floyd were surprised by two small town officers. Richetti surrendered. Floyd fled and was killed two days later.

The state, asking the death penalty, charges that Richetti was one of three gunmen who cut down the officers and Frank Nash in effort to free the latter, who was being taken to the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Lamb is rated as the world's foremost bass fisherman. Like success in any undertaking, however, his rise to renown was not born of luck or good fortune but came through a lifetime of persistent and unwavering endeavor.

It is difficult for the layman to conceive that anyone could carry the sport of fishing to such a high degree of perfection, but Lamb has studied the habits and traits of the wary bass until it has become a relatively simple matter for him to snare them. It is uncanny to watch him jerk them out with clock-like regularity when most fishermen are not getting a nibble.

Fishing is an integral part of Lamb's life. Perhaps the most deeply imbued angler since the days of Isaac Walton, he writes of the sport with as much fervor as he puts into the fishing itself.

He has roamed the lakes and rivers of the Southwest for 25 years and has taught more than 2,000,000 men and boys how to use artificial bait properly, he estimates. He is planning now to give a free school of instruction in both bait and fly casting for the benefit of beginning anglers. "I don't attempt to advise seasoned anglers," he said, "My message is for the unsuccessful fisherman."

Lamb has been fishing since 1910 and during that time has landed more than 40,000 black bass. When not fishing, he is generally wondering how he can get away from his job in the Fort Worth office of the Gulf company long enough to get to a lake or river.

"I'm afraid, though," Lamb said sadly shaking his head Saturday night, "that this will be my last trip west of Fort Worth this year. He has fished in every creek and lake in this county many times, generally slipping in quietly to avoid having a crowd of "people who make too much commotion and keep the bass on the lookout."

He is planning to test some of the bass waters of the county during the latter part of the week.

Barber Confesses To Fatal Shooting

SAN ANTONIO, June 10. — Alton Wright, 29, barber, held today on seven charges of robbery by assault, made a statement to officers admitting the fatal shooting of W. H. Lasswell, filling station operator.

Lasswell was shot during a robbery of his filling station last December 11.

Wright's statement told of twenty-four other robberies which he said netted him $300.

Ace Fisherman Is Here; Brings 'Em In

Jack Lamb, bass fishing champ of Texas, who allows he will do a little fishing in these parts this week, shows what his trusty rod and reel, together with his fishing knowledge, can drag out of the water.

The famed fisherman has cast his lures into nearly all the lakes and streams of Texas and throughout much of the southwest. He is planning a casting exhibition to be held here this week.

Noted Angler Tests Fishing Waters Here; Plans to Hold Casting School

"When you are the best in a sport that takes in everybody, then you are something, and that's what they all say you are when it comes to fishing."

Those words were uttered by no less person than Will Rogers himself in speaking of Jack Lamb, famous Texas angler, here this weekend and returning this week to dip his lure in Cisco waters.

Lamb is rated as the world's foremost bass fisherman. Like success in any undertaking, however, his rise to renown was not born of luck or good fortune but came through a lifetime of persistent and unwavering endeavor.

Under Cover Men In Liquor Case Known

FORT WORTH, June 10. — Use of under cover men to trap druggists suspected of selling liquor without a doctor's prescription was revealed today when hearings before State Comptroller George Sheppard began.

Pharmacy permits of a number of stores were at stake as druggists were charged with violating state liquor laws.

Ranger Captain Tom Hickman disclosed he had used an under cover man known as "Hawkeye" to purchase liquor here. He said the purchase was made with a marked dollar bill which was returned to a another ranger who purchased cigarettes with a $5 bill and received the marked dollar in change.

CISCO RECALLS FROST BLANKET OVER STATE JUST 58 YEARS AGO

While Ciscoans were sweltering in the heat today and the mercury was crowding the 95 degree mark in the shade, an old timer came forward with a tale of weather that fairly made Admiral Bird's reports shiver with envy.

W. R. Ezell, pioneer, who remembers things that happened back a good many years ago, recalled that there was a sudden cold snap just 58 years ago.

"Fifty-eight years ago this morning Texas was covered with white frost," the old timer said.

"F. B. Mathews and Mr. Webb, were here then and will remember the frost," he added. "They will vouch for my story."

President Roosevelt and His Program

It goes without saying that the supreme court of the United States did not leave even a skeleton of the original NRA. Now the president will ask the congress to extend NRA nine and one-half months or until April 6, 1936. He admitted it would be a skeleton of its former self—that it would be a government agency without power to enforce wages, hours or fair trade practices upon industries in general. Thousands of NRA employees will be out of jobs. Seven NRA agencies as they existed under the old codes will be abolished. American bankers, American economists, American industrial kings and kings of lesser rank have been declaring all along that if the men of might and money were turned loose complete recovery would take place of its own accord in the very near future.

Now they are on record. Now they are facing the issue or the many issues "on their own." They are not hampered. They are not chained. They are advised that they can make their own labor codes, direct their own business affairs and deal with their own employees in short, to make without delay, recovery, reduce the army of the idle, smash the dole and make every man and woman in gainful pursuits as happy and as content as they were before the Hoover deluge of depression created what was akin to a reign of economic terror in the American republic.

On with the glorious work. All the planners have an open road. They hold the economic reins. A decision of the supreme court, a unanimous decision, gave all the outstanding figures in industrial and financial life full power to go the limit in the restoration work of recovery and the quick return of confidence to industry and agriculture as well as in other fields of human endeavor. It is for them to make a clear record, for that record will be an open book in the campaigns to come in the very near future.

A Glance At Record — 'Lest We Forget'

Robert J. Buckley is the leader of the Buckeye democracy and a senator of the United States. He has a memory. He has a vivid recollection of the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt March 4 two years ago. In a recent speech the Buckeye lawmaker reviewed the past—the eventful two years. He said: "When President Roosevelt took office he faced an unprecedented business crisis. Banks were unable to meet the demands of their depositors. Business was paralyzed. Public morale had broken down, and drastic mass action motivated by fear was imminent. It was imperative that the president must act in the most courageous manner if the financial structure of the country was to be preserved."

Senator Buckley is one of the able lawyers and one of the foremost democrats of the West. He reminds the American people regardless of political affiliation whatever may be said now in praise or criticism of the various recovery problems of the government there is fairly general agreement that the courageous action of the president during the crisis and since has resulted "in the restoration of public confidence in the basic integrity of our economic system."

Moreover, he said there has likewise been re-established in the public mind a wholesome faith in the capacity of the government to function during a national emergency; that widespread confidence in the fundamental integrity and stability "of our institutions has been the foundation upon which the improved economic structure has been erected during the past two years by the Roosevelt administration."

Herbert Hoover was the president and the throne but not the power behind the throne for four years. His administration was a complete failure. Now he is on the road telling the people that the American form of government is to be changed to a European system by the New Deal administration. As usual he is mistaken. The remarkable change that has taken place is the removal of the capital of the nation from the city of New York to the city of Washington — the official capital of the United States. Why forget?

Teagle Speaks For Standard Oil

Walter C. Teague is president of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey. He is one of the foremost industrial chiefs of the country. He is one of the most successful and perhaps one of the wisest. He has given the pledge that the company will maintain the NRA "in spite of the supreme court's decision outlawing NRA codes." He did not stammer nor stutter nor evade the issue when he placed his proposal in the record: "I give my promise to employees there will be no salary cuts and no increase in hours of employment. Any other benefit derived from NRA will also be permitted to stay." Very encouraging as well as very emphatic, to say the least.

Illinois Enacts Pension Measure

Just the other day the lawmakers of Illinois increased the sales tax to two and one-half per cent for relief aid. Gov. Horner signed the measure. Now the Illinois house of representatives has passed an old age pension bill providing a pension of a dollar a day to persons 65 years of age or over "who have resided in Illinois for the past 10 years." The house bill was sent to the senate for quick action, and the law would become effective on Jan. 1, 1935. Gov. Horner has been having his own troubles. Truth is, all democratic governors are having their own troubles. Including the governor of the imperial state of Texas.

From One "Sure Way" to Another

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN, June 10. — The ogre of state competition in private business bobbed up its head again last week when Attorney General McCraw started selling 3,000,000 barrels of stored "hot" oil.

The state is faced with a many-sided dilemma. If it sells the oil it must necessarily sell on the market with refiners whose oil is legally produced. Oil sold by state receivers was seized because it was illicit.

If the 3,000,000 barrels were unloaded in a short time, it might seriously affect the existing petroleum price structure.

On the other side of the sheet also are strong arguments. As long as the oil, much of it stored in open pits, stands in East Texas, it is both decreasing its own value and threatening the market as a surplus.

A more practical hazard — fire — is presented, especially in flood times when pits overflow.

Texas is not entirely free of danger from federal control. McCraw thinks the large quantity of wasting oil is a strong argument for intervention from outside the state, just as the 1,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas wasted daily in the Texas Panhandle has brought strong criticism from conservationists.

These factors, and the possibility of "oil racketeering" were treated in McCraw's policy for "protection to the state and the entire oil industry and preservation of state's rights."

Simply stated, the policy is for gradual but prompt sale of the 3,000,000 barrels to highest cash bidders.

"Oil racketeering" the like of which Chicago never knew, might be accomplished by "hot" oil merchants running additional oil into the present containers, having the state confiscate it, then making the oil legal by buying it back at public auction.

Style of recent oil confiscation suits, a new wrinkle in local courts, is similar to that employed by federal courts. The oil is sued directly into the present containers, having the state confiscate it, then making the oil legal by buying it back at public auction.

Should the agricultural adjustment and Bankhead acts go the way of NRA, J. E. McDonald, Texas agricultural commissioner, thinks the southern empire of King Cotton will suffer its greatest setback in history, greater even than that following the Civil War.

McDonald believes Texas would be the heaviest loser should the two acts be declared invalid. Texas, he said, produces one-third of America's cotton, 90 per cent of which is exported. Cotton exports have decreased 40 per cent during the depression, while foreign competitors increased production.

The "protective tariff" for farmers, proposed by Congressman Martin Dies in Washington, is considered by McDonald to be the best solution to the question.

It would extend to agriculture the same benefits and privileges received by industries. Production would not be limited except by the extent of the export market. Dies would prorrate tariff benefits and offer crop insurance against the elements and insect pests.

Legislators may have several reams of reports to read when they meet again.

Four committees are doing between-session sleuthing, a senate committee, charged with investigating everything but themselves.

One enterprising news correspondent figured more than 11 per cent of the total membership of the legislature are serving now on extra-curricula committees. Twenty of the 181 members are now investigators.

The "hot" oil committee is in East Texas collecting information. Its investigation may be paralleled by the general senate survey.

A third committee, to investigate the department of agriculture, held its first session in Austin June 4, elected officers, then recessed until June 18.

Considerable interesting information is expected when North Texas dairymen air their troubles before the house milk committee in Fort Worth June 18.

That zone, including the Fort Worth and Dallas milksheds, has been the center of violence and price-cutting. A five-member committee, headed by Rep. Traylor Russell of Mount Pleasant, will recommend legislation for correcting the trouble.

The door-to-door peddler in this country cuts in deep on the business of local merchants and, incidentally, keeps the average housewife busy answering the door-bell, but they have not as yet gone to the extent they have in some countries.

The Pinang Gazette and Straits Chronicle says that one of the outstanding characteristics of Pinang and Malayan life is the hawking question. Nowhere else in the East is hawking carried on to such an extent as in that country. A large proportion of the population in Pinang, as in other parts of that country, depend entirely on the hawker, who supplies them with every meal they need from their first morning meal until the last before they retire. Not only in the matter of food, but various other necessities of life also can be had at one's door.

HER father granted over the telephone rag in the study. Katharine could hear the jangling of the bell and every nerve in her taut body responded to the summons. Any moment now Ellen would call her. . .

But it was only Leonard Willis, making a golf engagement with her father. Her heart raced and slowed again. Not for her. The morning drenched past. Michael must be angry with her—she must have been too repressive in her manner when he called her last night. Oh, he'd have to learn to understand her better—he'd have to see it meant nothing when she was cool and standoffish. She had crawled into her shell for so many years that it was hard, all at once, to break the habit. And she loved him so terribly!

At last, unable to bear the silence further, she got into the car and drove over to the riding school. Tips was in the yard, feeding some chickens that fluffed about on the bare earth. He looked up expectantly. "No'm, Mister Michael, he ain't come back, miss." Tips' white teeth showed. "Pa, he thinks it's mighty funny. He went off last night soon after those men left. . ."

"Went off?" Katharine stared at him. "Yes'm. He say he goin' to New York, and he say for Pa to lock up. This morning when I goin' to call him for breakfast, she'd discarded Michael. . ."

At the thought of him, Katharine's eyes darkened suddenly. She drew a long breath. She was Michael's wife. The miracle had happened yesterday. . .

At any moment now he would telephone her. The bell would ring and before one of the maids could answer it Katharine herself would do so. His voice would sound in her ears. That deep, drawing, wholly delightful voice of Michael's. Katharine bathed and dressed, her green linen frock and the brown and white shoes with the buckskin fringes and a string of dull white beads that looked creamy against her rusburns. . .

But Michael didn't call. Breakfast passed. Bertine said something about missing the rolls for lunch the day before, and Katharine came out of her trance to stare at her stepmother as at a perfect stranger. "What did you say, Bertine?" "I said that Cook was furious when the rolls didn't arrive yesterday. We waited with that infuriating smile of hers, and this girl never showed up. Nora Willis was here and there wasn't a thing but whole wheat bread in the house. You know Nora hates it—"

This went on for some time. Katharine, breaking bits of toast and arranging them in a geometrical pattern on the pink Spode plate, said little words. Bertine was trying to bribe her, trying to good her into some sort

Summer Sweethearts

BEHOLD HERE TODAY KATHARINE STEPHENSON, beautiful, 20, falls in love with MICHAEL HEATHERSON, owner of a riding school. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is a snob.

JOE PARKER, Katharine's friend, has an unhappy love affair and is saved from outside by young DR. JOHN KATE.

Overhearing two detectives ask for Michael's address, Katharine rushes to warn him, although she has not seen him since his engagement to SALLY MOON, local coquette, has been announced. Michael refuses to go away unless Katharine comes with him. They are married in an obscure little town. Then Michael insists on returning to face the detectives. He leaves her to her fortune and title in Ireland. Michael leaves at once for New York to see the lawyer handling the case. He is injured in a traffic accident.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVIII

KATHARINE threw wide the casement window, looking down at the garden below. The long shadows of morning lay everywhere; the borders were starred with dewy drops. Yesterday, she said to herself, had been her wedding day. . .

Today she and Michael would acknowledge their marriage before all the world. She had decided that in the still watches of the night. There was to be no more waiting, no more pretense or secrecy. By this time Sally Moon would have heard the news, no doubt, from Michael's own lips. Sally would be angry—furiously angry—but that would pass. Pride would come to her rescue. She could make it appear that she had discarded Michael. . .

At the thought of him, Katharine's eyes darkened suddenly. She drew a long breath. She was Michael's wife. The miracle had happened yesterday. . .

At any moment now he would telephone her. The bell would ring and before one of the maids could answer it Katharine herself would do so. His voice would sound in her ears. That deep, drawing, wholly delightful voice of Michael's. Katharine bathed and dressed, her green linen frock and the brown and white shoes with the buckskin fringes and a string of dull white beads that looked creamy against her rusburns. . .

But Michael didn't call. Breakfast passed. Bertine said something about missing the rolls for lunch the day before, and Katharine came out of her trance to stare at her stepmother as at a perfect stranger. "What did you say, Bertine?" "I said that Cook was furious when the rolls didn't arrive yesterday. We waited with that infuriating smile of hers, and this girl never showed up. Nora Willis was here and there wasn't a thing but whole wheat bread in the house. You know Nora hates it—"

This went on for some time. Katharine, breaking bits of toast and arranging them in a geometrical pattern on the pink Spode plate, said little words. Bertine was trying to bribe her, trying to good her into some sort

People Lose Taste For Wild Oysters

PORT LAVAC, June 10 — People are losing their taste for "wild" oysters.

Jack Hale, head of an oyster-breeding firm, says that cultivated oysters are of much better quality than those picked up at random.

Hale's company cultivates oysters by transplanting adult oysters to less crowded beds to reefs having the best conditions for growth.

Only the healthiest oysters are transplanted and higher quality results, he said. Cultivated oysters are becoming more in demand.

"There is as much difference between wild oysters and cultivated oysters as there is between wild grain and cultivated grain," Hale said.

POLICE IN 'STOLEN' AUTO

EXCELSIOR SPRINGS, Mo. — When Hugh Taggart asked police to find his stolen car, he didn't expect such sudden service. Chief of Police Bill Payne drove up in the "stolen" auto. He had mistaken it for the police car, an identical model of the Taggart machine.

"Don't do that," his young son said, "something's liable to happen to you."

Benny continued cursing. A bolt of lightning struck the tree. Hubbard was killed and the boy injured seriously.

DOSE WORD WILL YOU TAKE BLOWOUT PROTECTION?

think, larger tires, and the high speed make blowout protection as vital to your safety as never before. You are accepting exaggerated and advertising and sales claims when accepting the judgment of your lives on their tires and the difference the tire that gives greatest blowout protection?

These race drivers and their fans are up for the dangerous, 500-Mile Race at Daytona Speedway May 30th. They were purchased and used one of the thirty-three cars.

They won the race at an average 85 miles per hour. Wilbur Shaw finished across the finish line as the winner. Both drivers broke through without tire trouble. In one of the thirty-three drivers had to of any kind.

Shaw's car was one of the outstanding ones. Evidently, the tire that gave him the edge was a Firestone. By this process, the tire was soaked and every part of it was saturated with pure liquid rubber, which, when dried, formed a protective film of gum. This process is not used in any other tire.

Consider that there were automobile accidents in the United States last year, and of these, 43,000 were caused by blowouts, punctures, and skidding, you will more fully realize how very important it is for you to protect your life and the lives of others by equipping your car with Firestone Gum-Dipped High Speed Tires—the safest tires built.

It will be worth your time to read these three questions and their answers:

QUESTION 1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

ANSWER—Leading university tests show Firestone High Speed Tires stop your car 19% quicker than the best of other popular makes of tires.

QUESTION 2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

ANSWER—Unequaled performance records for sixteen consecutive years prove that Gum-Dipping gives you the greatest blowout protection ever known.

QUESTION 3—"Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

ANSWER—Thousands of car owners report unequalled mileage records—evidence of the longer wear and greater economy of Firestone High Speed Tires.

Volume—Direct Purchasing—Straight Line Manufacturing and Efficient and Economical System of Distributing to 500 Stores and to 30,000 Dealers, enables Firestone to give greater values at lowest prices

Camel is the cigarette with real mildness. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!" • In baseball, and in all the strenuous sports, leading athletes cite the fact that Camels are mild.
