POLICE HOLD TRAVEL CHECK SUSPECT

THINK MAN HELD AT COLEMAN MAY BE ONE SOUGHT WHEN 4 DISAPPEAR THREE WEEKS AGO

Mystery of the travelers' checks cashed along the Bankhead highway between El Paso and Dallas was believed near solution today, as Coleman officers held a suspect, pending identification in Cisco.

The man answered the description furnished by Waldo Harris, Cisco service station operator, the Coleman officers told Harris in a telephone conversation this morning.

They were said to believe that the suspect was the man who forged the name of George Lorus, missing with his wife and another couple since May 22, to travelers' checks along Highway 80, one of which was cashed by Harris.

LEADERS FAIL TO RUSH NRA BILL THROUGH

WASHINGTON, June 11 — Administration leaders failed today in their effort to rush an NRA extension resolution through the senate during a half-hour overtime session.

The senate's traditional fondness for protracted discussion caused downfall of the leader's plan.

The senate met at 11:30 but encountered an unexpected move from Sen. Thomas Gore, dem., Okla., who offered an amendment requiring all government workers receiving $4,000 or more annually be appointed by the president and approved by the senate.

Gore was supported by Sen. Huey Long.

At noon by prior agreement, the senate reverted to the public utility bill.

Seven minutes of the half hour were consumed by a quorum call. Another interruption came when a messenger from the house delivered a bill that had been acted on there.

TEXANS FOUND INTERESTED IN PLANNING BODY

AUSTIN, June 11 — Texas planning board members find citizens more interested in recovery and work of the board than was anticipated, Chairman W. M. Massie of Fort Worth said today.

In the first two meetings, sponsors of rural rehabilitation communities have taken up most of the board's time, despite the fact such hearings were not contemplated under the law creating the nine-man planning board. A maze of other activities now face the board. They include water conservation, soil erosion, shelter belt planting, industrial development and new highways.

Massie explained that the board has two original functions:

1. To formulate a state program for spending federal relief funds, seeking to abolish unemployment and rehabilitate needy families of the state.
2. To form a state program for using and conserving natural resources.

Actual research of the board is done by committees composed of from three to seven private citizens. Requests are studied by committees before being taken up by the board. Committees are headed by board members.

Members are: Massie, R. C. Hoppling of Lubbock; John A. Norris, state water engineer, of Austin; Gibb Gilchrist, state highway engineer, of Austin; Hull Youngblood of San Antonio; Wilbur C. Hawk of Amarillo; W. L. Kurth of Lufkin; Wallace C. Reilly of Austin; and Gerald C. Mann, secretary of state, Austin.

Over Half of Kidnap Money Found

FEDERAL MEN CLOSE BEHIND LAST SUSPECT

WASHINGTON, June 11 — Federal agents today, 10 days after the return of kidnaped George Weyerhaeuser, had recovered more than half of the $200,000 ransom money, captured two confessed participants in the abduction, and knew the name of a third.

The recovery of $90,700 buried in a canyon near Salt Lake City was announced by J. Edgar Hoover, making a total of $110,555 recovered or accounted for and leaving $89,445 still in the hands of William Mahan, suspect, or hidden by him.

The record showed: Found buried, $90,700; found in Mahan's car, $15,555; spent by Harmon Waley, $300; burned by Waley, $4,000.

Officials said they believed the abduction was a two-man job; with Mrs. Waley aiding in disposing of the money and that Mahan had the rest of the ransom in his possession or hidden away.

Opposition Voiced To AAA Export Aid

NEW YORK, June 11 — Vigorous opposition to a proposed amendment to the AAA which would devote 30 per cent of customs receipts to bounties and subsidies to exports of American agriculture was expressed today by Robert O'Brien, chairman of the federal tariff commission.

"This bill," he told the conference of mandatory on the treasury to spend about $100,000,000 annually according to the present rate of trade.

"It would work out very badly. For example, it would enable Japan to buy cotton cheaply from us that could turn around and take away our Central and South American markets with our own products. I regard it as a dangerous tendency and I feel we must lessen the strangulating effect of such a nationalistic policy."

WOODMEN WIN MONDAY FROM INDEPENDENTS

After taking an early lead last night, the Woodmen loafed around for a few innings and finally won from the Cisco Independents by a 13 to 8 score.

The Choppers had a 10 to 1 lead at the beginning of the sixth inning, but Starling, hurling for them, lost his control and began walking in. He settled down in the seventh, though, and his teammates put three more runs across the plate.

Boyet, young pitcher for the Independents, tossed a fair game.

This evening's contest will bring together the Community and the Humble teams. The Community has won one and lost one game, while the Humblers have failed to break into the number one column. Both have good clubs and should put up a great game tonight.

Two games are on the card for Thursday. The Nance club, which coasted to an easy win Friday, will be playing Garner's league leaders. The Lobos will take on the Independents in a makeup game, after their scheduled contest was rained out last week.

BRAZILIAN COMPETITION IN COTTON Waning

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, June 11. — Immediate threat of Brazilian competition with American Cotton waned today as the Japanese commission, studying the possibilities of turning its purchases to this country apparently found the Brazilian market at present unprepared for the huge exports required and now normally acquired from the United States.

Cotton circles here gained the impression the Japanese would continue their present method of making purchases from the United States although keeping in close touch with the Brazilian situation for further developments.

Many factors mitigate against large sale of Brazilian cotton to Japan, including quality of staple and prices. The latter are considered unsatisfactory by the Japanese, according to reports.

NEW SINO-JAP CRISIS APPEARS NEAR AS TWO DESTROYERS ARRIVE

TIENTSIN, China, June 11 — Signs of the new Japanese-Chinese crisis were apparent today as two Japanese destroyers moored along the city waterfront and Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, mystery man of the Japanese army arrived to confer with the Japanese high command.

Two thousand Japanese soldiers are believed due tomorrow. Three factors indicated strongly that fresh trouble was near:

- 1—Chinese hints that, although every verbal concession will be made to Japanese demands they will not be met.
- 2—Japanese complain that the Chinese agreement to comply already is being sabotaged.
- 3—The fact that the extent of Japan's intention is not known, but there is every sign of broadened demands for Chinese "cooperation" with Japan throughout northern China.

Another project which commissioners indicated would be given high place on new allotments was opening the three-mile Beckley road outlet to Highway Six in Ellis county.

Parker, Tarrant, and Palo Pinto counties asked construction of a new Highway One, Weatherford to Mineral Wells. Johnson county offered a new right of way to improve Highway 122 between Cleburne and Weatherford.

Secy. Ickes and the Oil Industry

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is never out of the picture. Truth is, "he is ever in the picture," speaking of the petroleum industry, which is one of the largest in the United States.

He declared flatly from his Washington headquarters that "the industry could not regulate itself by voluntary agreements to continue provisions of the oil code" and then endorsed the pending Thomas oil bill in principle.

He recalled President Roosevelt's suggestion "that additional legislation was needed if the petroleum administrative board or other agency were to continue on a legal foundation in view of the supreme court invalidation of NRA." And then disclosed that his lawyers were studying the Thomas measure in the light of the NRA decision.

The NRA decision rendered by the court of last resort speaks for itself. It was a flat announcement that the congress could not delegate its powers or authority to the executive branch of the government. This ruling spoke the downfall of the NRA as it existed before the blow was delivered by the court of last resort.

Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, a republican stalwart and an advocate of the state compact, petitioned Governor Marland of Oklahoma to call a meeting of oil states governors in Oklahoma City "probably late this month in an effort to reach an agreement on voluntary oil conservation." Texas led off through its governor in the movement launched for the state compact plan of control. It has not been given an opportunity to function to date. This is the contention of the secretary of the interior, speaking through Chairman Fahy of the petroleum administrative board of his department. "Petroleum is of the stream or flow type of interstate commerce." And he declared the supreme court decision gave regulation of this type tacit approval.

He admitted that the oil administration would continue making crude oil and gasoline production allocations to the state, but remarked that the PAB might issue advisory recommendations to the industry but had no way to enforce them. He reiterated his oft repeated statement, "that if the industry can't be regulated short of a public utility it ought to be declared a public utility."

There are wise men, including many of the ablest lawyers of the country, who look upon the decision as a most powerful recognition of the rights of the state. As far as Texas and Texas courts and lawmakers and governors are concerned, they are for the right of a state to direct the control of its own treasure wealth, as to quotas and marketing and regulations without price fixing or the federal plan proposed by the secretary of the interior. This is the record made by the courts of our state, the governor, the attorney general, the railroad commission and all concerned to date. Reserve rights of the states should govern but the rights of the federal set-up should not be ignored by those who are responsible for the governmental policies of Texas or its people.

Druggists Desire To Handle Liquor

Texas has a state Pharmaceutical association. Its convention voted at its closing session in the city of Dallas to recommend that "drug stores would be proper agencies for distributing liquor in the event repeal is voted August 24." Also, if repeal is voted that the association should be represented when legislation is drawn to control liquor distribution. The committee also recommended that the association press its fight for a fair trade practice act.

There are two constitutional amendments pending. First, for repeal of the constitutional inhibition of the sale of liquor and second, the control of the traffic should repeal come. These issues have been passed on to the qualified voters who will cast ballots in the referendum to take place late in the month of August. Now, the people are said to be the masters. It is for them to return their verdict as to the fate of the important amendments submitted in the dog day season of the year. If they are not concerned as to the legislation of the future, then they are shirkers of responsibility and regardless of what may happen they should be willing to carry the load as they have carried it since the creation of the American republic and the annexation of the state of Texas by the sisterhood of the federal union.

Colby Poses in the Picture as a Messiah

Bainbridge Colby is an able corporation lawyer of New York. He was very close to the Woodrow Wilson administration. Indeed, he served for a time as secretary of state. He has sent out important letters to 15 so-called democrats who are opposed to the Roosevelt administration and all that the administration stands for in this remarkable period of American history. Bainbridge Colby has ever been a democrat of the Hamiltonian brand. He is for a strong centralized government. He is committed to the theory or gospel that "the brains and the money of a nation should make its laws and direct all the affairs of 125,000,000 men and women and children." There is in the making or planning a campaign from this date on that will not close until the ballots have been counted in November, 1936. It is the same old contest for control which the American people (who are now on earth) have known since the close of the war between the states. It is the growers of things and the wage workers in the industries of the country who will be found on one side and the advocates of the Hamilton theory of control on the opposite side of the political fence.

Maybe This Will Revive The Old Bird

Texas Topics By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, June 11 — Texas, it has been found, doesn't have to wait entirely upon the Rayburn holding companies bill to deal with the situation of pyramided corporations or capital stock structures.

For instance, Texas has proven that it can require every corporation operating in the state to be a Texas corporation. That is, it can require every foreign firm to set up a state corporation, with Texas officers and headquarters. This was proven by the railroad law.

Corporations are creatures of the state, and exist by its permission and according to its terms. The Humble company decision of course permitted outside owners of the stock to veto and control the affairs of a Texas corporation. Texas has proven that it can require the investment of certain types of reserves of insurance companies in Texas securities. It probably can require the ownership of specified percentages of stock in Texas corporations, or its deposit in voting trusts, within the state.

In short, Texas control of all corporations in Texas is within the reach at this time of the legislature. This makes no reference to control through taxing powers such as franchise taxes, and intangible assets taxes. The Texas Young Democrat movement, more aggressive and better organized than in other states, has a broad political objective on these three fronts: Legislative membership, leaders in political and official life; the oncoming younger citizenship. Already, on any matter of division, the Young Democrats have the balance of power in the Texas legislature, whenever they stand together. Members of the legislature, such as J. Doyle Settle and Howard Davison, are active leaders in the organization.

The next decisive showing to be made by the organization will be a concentrated influence in state political races. The organization already has thought to offer its own candidates for state office, but waited for a more propitious time; and in the recent election of Governor Alfred registered strong support. Governor Alfred was an honor guest and the chief speaker on a program of the state convention of Young Democrats in Amarillo.

Summer Sweethearts

BEGIN HERE TODAY KATHARINE STRATHERST, beautiful 20, falls in love with MICHAEL HEATHERSOME, owner of a riding school. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother a snob. ZOE PARKER, Katharine's friend, has an unhappy love affair and is saved from suicide by young DR. JOHN KAYE. Overhearing the detective ask for Katharine's address, Katharine rushes to warn him, although she has not seen him since his engagement to SALLY MOON, local divorcee, has been announced. Michael refuses to go away unless Katharine comes with him. They are married in an obscure little town. Then Michael insists on returning to face the detective. He leaves her to be held to a fortune and title in Ireland. Michael leaves at once for New York to see the lawyer handling the case. He is injured in a traffic accident. Katharine, frantic when she does not hear from him next day, tells VIOLET MENSEN, her friend, that she thinks Michael has run away. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX SALLY said furiously, "I don't understand it. I simply don't get it at all!" She glared at the inoffensive Tips and at Clarence, stooped and graying, in the back ground.

"You say he said he was going to the city?" Sally demanded. Clarence nodded. They had been over the ground several times before, but if the young lady wanted to ask the same questions over and over he had no choice but to answer them. "He say he goin' to the city," Clarence elaborated, with a side-long roll of chocolate eyes in a dark face. "He say fo' me to lock up." "And that was day before yesterday?" "Yes'm. In the evenin'. We ain't heard nothing from him since." Sally waved an afternoon newspaper in his eyes. "Have you seen this?" "No'm. Ain't seen nothin'." Clarence's eyes executed a sudden roll of apprehension. "They ain't nothin' in it 'bout Mist' Michael, is they?" Sally laughed—an unpleasant laugh, drawing back the corners of her lips from small predatory teeth. "Read it." Tips bent over. "Pa can't read," he said. "Lessen he has a magnifying glass. His eyes is bad." "What do it say?" Clarence wanted to know. TIPS bent over the newspaper, reading slowly. "It says how Mist' Michael is a lord or something," he said slowly. "It says how his daddy was a son of a lord in England or Ireland—and now Mist' Michael, seems he comes into the business." "Exactly," Sally Moon, with a sound that was more like a snort than the sarcastic insult she had intended, slipped down into the shabby porch chair. Over her slumped, gloved hands she regarded the two shabby men. "I believe you two know more about this than you pretend to," she said on a note of angry suspicion. "I believe you perfectly well know where Michael is."

"No'm." Clarence shook his head. "Well, I'm going to find out." Sally said swiftly. Before either one of them could stop her she had lunged herself inside the door of Michael's house. "I'm going to search his papers," she said. "And don't either of you interfere!" She was inside the room which had served Michael as a bedroom before either one could say a word. Tips looked at his father, and the older man looked back apprehensively. "She ain't got a bit o' business in there," the boy said humbly. "How we goin' to stop her?" Clarence wanted to know. Sally went through bureau drawers like a whirlwind. The neat, plain, bare chamber did not afford many hiding places. A bed, tidily made up with a mottled white spread, a common oak chest of drawers, a wardrobe with one of the old-fashioned doors swinging wide—she went through them all. There was little enough. There was pitifully little. A handful of old letters with the postmark of a little town in a western state. A thick, clumsy old gold watch. A button box. Sally rifled through the letters. The stable boy came to the door to stare at her. "You go away, Tips," she said crossly. "Don't you bother me. This is my business." "Ain't nobody got any right buttin' into Mist' Michael's private things," he said stubbornly. But he dared not interfere. After all, she was the girl his employer had been engaged to marry. Clarence had shuffled out into the kitchen. You could hear him rattling pots and pans and setting down the cups with angry gusto. Sally paid no attention to all this. She had come with a determination to go through Michael's belongings to see if she could find any clue to his disappearance. She flounced into the living room after a busy five minutes, a small bundle in her hand. TIPS watched her go, open-mouthed. His father came out of the kitchen to ask him, "That her car gone away?" "That's it," Tips sniffed, going into Michael's room and picking up a cushion Sally had dropped in her haste. "She sure made a mess of this here place. She sure is a big-talking young lady, Miss Moon." "Her!" Clarence uttered contemptuously. "Ain't no Moon ever goin' to come high-tonin' me. I know 'em." "She taken away a lot of stuff of Mist' Michael's," Tips offered hesitantly. "Letters and such." Clarence grinned, an old man's stretched inconspicuously wide. "She did, huh?" "Yes, sah!" The stable boy was emphatic. "Looks like Mist' Michael run away from her while he was runnin' was good. What you think about it?" His father lifted his shoulders in an eloquent shrug. "Boy, I ain't mindin' nobody's business." "You think we better stay on a while?" Tips said. "Where'd we go, anyways?" Clarence demanded. "You talk crazy, senny-boy. Course we're stayin'. And, come that girl comes back here lookin' some more, we goin' to look up this here place."

Old Order Changes As First Names Creep Into Use Among People of French Nation

By WAVERLEY LEWIS ROOT United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, June 11 — The old order changes!

A fearless columnist who calls himself "The Plain Speaker" points out daringly one of the breath-taking breaks with tradition now being exemplified in Paris. People are beginning to use their first names!

In France, everyone has plenty of first names. The idea generally is to please as many aunts, uncles and cousins — particularly wealthy ones — as possible, and since French families spread out to a thinness of relationship that comes pretty close to getting the whole nation into one group, that gives almost everyone a plethora of first names. Once acquired, they are promptly forgotten.

French books of reference — Who's Whos, telephone directories, even official lists of the members of Parliament — negligently omit first names whenever they're not commonly used, and many a man prominent in public life has a first name that nobody knows about. Only the Army insists on first names, and records them meticulously in the Army list.

Disapproves of Practice "The Frank Speaker" mentions with a faint tinge of disapproval the new-fangled practice of calling a person with whom you are on friendly relations by his first name.

Deputes, who address one another in moments of the greatest heat, with the intimate form, never salute another by their first names. An exception was Briand, who was known as Aristide to everybody; but that had become less a first name than a "pett non" nickname, like Gaston for ex-President Gaston Doumergue.

When a first name does get into circulation, it is likely to wake up suddenly to discover that it is a surname. An example is Pierre Etienne Flamin, who is not, as many papers write it, Pierre-Etienne Flamin, but Pierre Etienne-Flamin, the last two names having both come down from his father, Joseph Paul-Boncour, who has a first name attached to his surname, and it has become now the family name, while Ambassador to Germany Francois-Poncet and Finance Minister Germain-Martin are further examples of the double-barreled surname.

In the provinces (as in the army) it is customary when the first name is used to write it last. Thus John Smith would be designated as Smith John, with no separating comma. This habit causes great confusion in the present Chamber of Deputies, which contains a violent Communist and a violent Fascist, one named Jean Renaud and the other Renaud Jean.

Law Regulates Names Don't think that because first names are hardly ever used in France you can pick them as fantastic as you like. First names in France, like almost everything else except breathing, are minutely regulated by law. You can call your-

WORLD GROUP ORGANIZED TO FIGHT CANCER

By REYNOLDS PACKARD United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, June 11 — The first international organization to fight cancer throughout the world by the concerted action of the medical forces of all countries has been formed in Paris.

The inaugural congress of the organization, which is composed of representatives from 42 nations, the Papal See and the Knights of Malta, will be held in Brussels at the beginning of next year. New discoveries and the result of research work will be announced at this session in an effort to coordinate the struggle against cancer.

Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the Cancer Institute of Columbia University, who is one of the founders of the organization, stated that its aim is to facilitate the medical profession in every detail of the disease as they are uncovered.

Statistics Far From Complete Dr. Wood pointed out that one of the most mystifying features concerning cancer is the paradox presented by its statistics.

"Where do you find the most cancer cases? Where you find the best doctors," he said.

He explained that this was because only the most excellent physicians are able to recognize the disease in all its various forms. Another phenomenon, he continued, is that the cancer death rate grows higher as scientific progress is made regarding the treatment of other diseases.

"As more cures are effected in these fields," explained Dr. Wood, "more people are left to succumb eventually to cancer, which attacks old people."

Two Developments Under Way Outlining two developments in the research and treatment of cancer Dr. Wood emphasized the work being done by the Cancer Hospital in London where specialists are working on the chemical production of a new series of compounds which cause cancer in animals. Their findings will be reported at the Brussels congress.

The second important development is the increasing use of the 1,000,000-volt X-ray machine developed by Professor Robert Milliken at the Pasadena Institute. He said that this machine has been used successfully for the past five years and a similar one for the past two years at the University of California.

U. S. Getting More Cattle From Canada

OTTAWA, Ont., June 11 — The United States has replaced Great Britain as Canada's best customer for live cattle.

Last year Canada shipped 53,000 head of cattle to Britain. This year shipments have been fewer than 5,000 head.

Canada's exports to the United States, on the other hand, increased from 2,329 head in the ten months ended April 30, 1934, to 42,471 head in the same period this year.

The demand and high prices paid in the United States for cattle as a result of extreme drought is given as the reason for the sudden change of markets.

MIDWEST GREYNA GREEN BOWLING GREEN, O. — This community still lays claim to the "marrying center of Ohio." Probate Judge B. O. REGION PLAN FOR GOVERNING FRANCE URGED

By JOSEPH D. RAVOTTO
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 PARIS, June 11 — The movement to decentralize the French government and establish a French republic equivalent of a federal republic received additional impetus as the result of a congress held in Nice by the Federation of Regionalist Societies.

There is no desire to secede from France, Charles Brun, one of the leaders of this resuscitated movement, emphasized that "regionalism is not separatism."

"We desire," he said, "a simplification of the governmental machine and a rational decentralization of executive power but we desire to remain French."

Pointing to the United States as an example, Brun added that Vermonters, Pennsylvanians, Nebraskans and Californians, remain thoroughly American even though each state has a capital and a state legislature. Similarly, he reasoned, there is nothing to prevent a Breton, a Provençal and an Alsatian, each loving his province and desiring to conserve its customs and customs, from being a good Frenchman as well.

At present France is divided into 89 departments. Under the region-alist scheme, 12 or 15 provinces would be created, with boundaries similar to those that existed under the monarchy. Each province would have a local parliament to legislate on the individual affairs in the fashion of the individual states in the United States.

Better Laws Seen
 What is a good law for a mountainous region like Savoy, argue the regionalists, may be a bad law for Brittany bordered by the sea. What may be all wrong for an agricultural country like the Anjou country. Although the regionalist movement has royalist adherents it is a non-political affair and some of the leaders are republican — as republican as Flandin, Herriot or President Lebrun.

Thousands of Frenchmen would like to see some form of regionalism installed in France but few of them have the crusading zeal of Brun.

Change Believed Remote
 For this reason, the establishment of regionalism is likely far away in France. There is also the opposition of the "prefectures" or capital cities of the 89 departments. Such cities would lose their importance and would suffer economically. Consequently they have little friendly feelings toward regionalism except the few which hope, in case of change, to become provincial capitals.

The Regionalist Federation of France contains representatives from all departments, but those most active are the Bretons and the Provençals.
