

ASTLAND ELECTRIC STRIKE DENIED

NO PICKETING GOING ON, SAY COMPANY MEN

Active picketing by Electric workers at Eastland and Ranger, reported by Fort Worth headquarters of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers at Fort Worth, today was denied at Eastland and Ranger.

There were some signs put up in Eastland, however, it was said, in which readers were urged to "support the union."

There was no active picketing by the union it was reported that conditions leading to the action, reported at Fort Worth, had occurred some time ago.

PORT WORTH, June 12.—Union pickets discharged by the Texas Electric Service company following the recent NRA supreme court decision at noon today took their positions here at Eastland, and Ranger, according to W. L. Ingram, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The pickets are officers of the union's local at Eastland where they were employed in the power plant, now under armed guard, according to the union leaders.

The union approved the picket plan last night after two weeks of negotiations failed to restore jobs to discharged employes, Ingram said.

All discharged employes of the company have letters from the president, A. J. Duncan, written previous to organization of the union in the Eastland-Ranger area, congratulating them on five and 10 years of satisfactory service with the company.

In all seven persons were discharged after union organization was started in November 1934 and 10 were demoted, Ingram said.

WIFE OF BATES ACCUSES LASKA IN MONEY CASE

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 12.—Clara Feldman, wife of the kidnaper Albert Bates, today accused Ben Laska, Denver attorney of giving her instructions on how to pass Bates' share of the $200,000 Charles Urschel ransom without detection.

The accusation came as she testified in United States district court against Laska and James Mathers, Oklahoma City attorney. The government charges the attorneys who defended Bates and other kidnapers accepted knowingly part of the ransom money as fees for their services. The sum involved is $10,000.

In words spoken so softly that as to be only dimly audible in the tense crowded courtroom, Mrs. Feldman told of her flight with Bates' share of the ransom.

She said under questioning that she had been told "her throat would be cut" if she turned the money over to the government.

Stanley Baldwin New Prime Minister

James Ramsey MacDonald, for six years prime minister of Great Britain, has retired and Stanley Baldwin has named his successor. Baldwin is a hard-headed business man and he ranks as one of the master executives of his country. MacDonald began as the leader of the labor party and when the nationalist ministry was created he was elected as head of the coalition government. This coalition was composed of liberals, conservatives and laborites who bolted with MacDonald from their party organization, and it has been continued in power many strenuous years. It is announced that the government will appeal to the people in the near future when an election will be held and the labor party will put forth strenuous efforts to capture control and make the laws of the empire.

For years and years the liberal party and the old Tory party battled for control. Then came the labor party. It won a great victory and then frittered away its strength until its leaders "deserted to the opposition." As for the liberal party it is dead and the contest to come at the polls will be fought out between the leaders of the national coalition party and organized labor of Great Britain and North Ireland. British labor organizations have been very successful in by-elections in electing their candidates for parliamentary service but the coalition leaders are confident that the people will return a large majority for the government whenever the appeal is answered and a general election takes place.

For years and years Gladstone and many of the greatest men of the Empire contested every election with the conservative or Tory party. Now the verdict of the people will be awaited with vast interest not only in British circles but the world over.

In the United States for 50 years the democrats have been the liberals. Now a third party is threatened in 1936. In addition to this there are surface signs that a coalition of so-called conservative democrats and the old-time reactionary republicans may join forces to give battle to all comers in the campaign next year. There is a powerful agrarian movement in the United States backed by many of the radical labor organizations and the non-partisan farmer factions of Minnesota, North Dakota and other agricultural states of the West and the Northwest.

House Passes NRA Extension Bill

There is another NRA extension measure in skeletonized form which has received the approval of the house and which will be sent to the senate for action. Sponsors of the bill have invited "American business to govern itself by voluntary codes in current emergencies." It is said that the president told newspaper men that the New Deal would abide by the spirit and letter of the supreme court decision in the famous poultry case where it was held that a chicken hatched and fattened for the market in New Jersey became interstate commerce when it was marketed over the counter by a poultryman in the city of New York. "It is a long way to Tipperary."

John Bull Defaults on War Debt

Great Britain has a new prime minister with the same old coalition-conservative government. Now the announcement has been made that Great Britain has paved the way for another general default on the war debts owed to the United States government by the former allied governments. The amount of the June installment is $85,670,000, which must be added to the $176,461,000 on which the empire is in arrears on previous installments.

Washington has let it be known that the general default of the June 15 installment by all of the debtor governments, with the exception of Finland, is expected to follow the British note, which said, "His Majesty's government found itself unable to meet this installment for the same reason that it defaulted the Dec. 15 installment last year."

Americans furnished millions of armed soldiers and vast shipments of supplies and munitions of war to the allied governments. It made loans running into billions of dollars. Its repudiation of war loans a national virtue or a national disgrace? It is for the British government and its prime minister to make answer.

European nations and individuals are in default to the United States for many billions. Their defense is that Germany did not pay the allied governments and the people of the United States should not expect the British empire with its vast wealth to come across with the large sum it owes the American government and the American people.

Newspapers Criticise President

The New York Herald Tribune says fair-minded Americans will regret the president's statements and his failure to prove himself a good loser. It sees him missing the chance of his outlook. The Boston Herald says it was not the cheery leader of his people who spoke out. Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) says the president's remarks emulate Old World dictators. Senator Fletcher (Dem., Fla.) says there has been enough "tampering" with the Constitution. Senator Borah (Rep., Idaho) says the Supreme Court has affirmed the president in sufficient power to accomplish anything that is of national importance. "And the Court has said that this power is full and complete."

AUSTIN, June 12 — A gain of 55 per cent in the intangible assets valuations of railroads, pipelines and toll bridges was shown in the preliminary valuations made by Tax Commissioner R. B. Anderson, as compared with those made by the tax office a year ago.

The tentative valuations this year amount to $221,522,600, a $145,329,000 and final assessment of $104,520,295 last year. Gains represented were $84,000,000 on railroads and $2,957,620 on pipelines, over final assessments last year. This year's figures are $125,365,000 for railroads; $97,957,600 for oil pipelines; and $200,000 for toll bridges.

Five months behind him, Gov. Alfred has a record in the governor's office, of which he said he is personally and officially proud.

He has granted about 200 clemencies to convicts, and so far none of the prisoners has "come back" into the hands of the law. Further, out of all the pardons or paroles, he has had no protests or kicks, except the sole complaint of District Attorney R. B. Renfro, Jr., at Brownsville for his pardoning a customs officer and a deputy sheriff of three-year sentences imposed by a federal judge on a state under charge. The governor made public a telegram from Renfro's father, Mayor Renfro of Brownsville, urging those pardons, as well as petitions of officials of the United States and Mexico and of the country.

"The legislature," Texas supreme court has announced, "is without power to interfere by limitation with the judicial power to disbar a lawyer."

Civil appeals court at Fort Worth held the general law four-year limitation had run against the pleadings for disbarment of Dee Estes, Fort Worth lawyer; but supreme court, though not holding the legislature had tried to do so, gave warning as did U. S. supreme court in the NRA case, that it would be powerless, even if it tried, to interfere with the judicial process of disbarment.

In this article, he explained how individuals and local groups can cooperate with the state planning board.

Edwin S. Friendly, chairman of the bureau of advertising, A. N. P. A., and business manager of the New York Sun, says:

Fewer Aches and Pains More Health and Pleasure

Dr. Miles Anti-Pain Pills are pleasant to take and prompt to act. They do not upset the stomach, cause constipation or leave you with a dull, depressed feeling.

Ask your druggist or any of the hundreds of thousands enthusiastic users. Probably you too can find relief.

I think all Dr. Miles medicines are wonderful, but Anti-Pain Pills are my favorite.

Mrs. Doc Blankenship, Stamford, Texas: I have used your Anti-Pain Pills only a short time, but they have given me prompt relief. They did for me in a week more than any other medicine I had taken for a year. Phil Goller, Milwaukee, Wisconsin: I am never without Anti-Pain Pills. I think they are much better than anything else I have ever used. Sometimes when I am tired and nervous, and feel like I would go under, I take two Anti-Pain Pills and in a short time I feel like a different person.

Mrs. S. Tidabach, Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania: Your Anti-Pain Pills have been used in my home with wonderful results. I recommend them.

Maggie Belle Dudley, Vanceboro, N. C.: Your Anti-Pain Pills helped me a great deal. I have used them for years. I carry them everywhere in my purse and always keep them in the house. They have saved me a great many sick headaches.

Mrs. Jennie Neill, Coronado, Calif.: I have used your Anti-Pain Pills only a short time, but they have given me prompt relief. KATHARINE STRICKMERT, beautiful, 26, falls in love with MICHAEL DOWNRIG, 26, owner of a riding school. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother a snob.

ZOE PARKER, Katharine's friend, has an unhappy love affair. He is married to a better woman. Michael refuses to go away unless Katharine comes with him. They are married in an obscure little town. Then Michael insists on returning to face the detectives. He leaves her for New York to see the lawyer handling the case. He is injured in a traffic accident.

Katharine, frantic when she does not hear from him, believes Michael has tricked her. She sally goes to New York and locates Michael in a hospital.

NO GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXX

MICHAEL opened his eyes and stared about him. There was a square of light that marked the window. He shut his eyes again because that light hurt him and he felt sore all over—almost as if he had been bruised in a fight.

Yesterday... Yesterday... There was something he wanted to remember. And could not. So he closed his eyes and lay still. Presently the sound of crisp, starched skirts rustling came to his ears, and he opened his eyes again, just a little. There was a nurse. She had a cool, wide face with smiling eyes. She had a thermometer in her hand and shook it a little, smiling down at him.

"Well, we're quite a lot better today, aren't we?" she said. Michael would have frowned if frowning, like the square of light, hadn't hurt him. Nurses always talked that way, as if the patient were a child. Was he better? He didn't know. Wasn't sure, even that he had been really ill. It was too much trouble to talk.

The nurse wrote something down on a chart that hung on the foot of the bed: Michael could see that much, out of the mere crack he had opened in his shuttered lids. Then she went away and came back again with a cloudy draught which she held to his lips.

"Oh, good!" The words came drowsily, almost involuntarily and he could feel a very vibration of triumph go through the nurse's body as she kept cool professional fingers on his wrist.

"Well now, isn't that splendid? He likes his medicine, does he? Well, it's very good he shall see somebody after a bit, and that will make him better still."

Michael hadn't the remotest idea what she was talking about, and he didn't care in the least. It was far too much trouble to ask. He drowsed again and the pain was less. There was somebody—a girl in a dark frock—at his bedside when he wakened. She kissed him and wept a little and then she tucked him up and took her away, making soothing noises. After that he slept for a long time and when he woke again there was a splash of rain against the windows and the room was cooler. It was, the nurse told him brightly, another day.

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McEllett © 1935, N.E.

AFTER a procession of such meaningless days, punctuated only by trays and pills and visits from a tall, melancholy doctor with a gentle voice, and white-coated internees who poked and prodded Michael and asked him questions, he was able to sit up. The dark girl (her name was Sally Moon, it seemed) came often now. And there was an Englishman named Downrigg who made them move Michael from the ward to a private room. Michael couldn't quite understand why it mattered or why Mr. Downrigg cared, but there it was.

One day Downrigg came and they had a long talk. Michael, dressed for the first time in his street clothes, was sitting in the comfortable chair out in the pavilion. Downrigg talked a lot about the estate (what estate? Michael wanted to ask but didn't bother) and said there was a good deal of money tied up, although not, of course, as much as one would like. Death duties and so on, he had said portentously.

"You'll be sailing, I suppose, as soon as you are well," Downrigg had said. "And after you're married."

After he was married. The phrase, for an instant, stirred some memory in Michael, but it passed. It had been like a breeze passing over a wheat field, bending the stalks only for a moment. After he was married—well, when married every day. This Sally-girl was solicitous. She kissed him when she came and asked him what he wanted. He ought to remember more about her, thought. And couldn't.

Downrigg went on. He was leaving for England on the morrow, he said. He could send him in London. He left Michael with his card. On this side, he said, the affairs were in the hands of Whitbread & Forrest in Wall street. He wrote the address down. Michael could draw on them.

"That's nice," Michael said, looking down at his oddity thin, oddly helpless hands. Once they had been brown.

IT was easier after that because he was stronger. Only there was a sort of cloudiness at the back of his brain—not badly disagreeable, but rather worrying, if that cloudiness would lift, Michael felt, he could remember a great deal. He didn't tell the doctors this. He had never been ill in his life before and, for all he knew, this dizziness, this feeling of not being quite sure of oneself might be a part of convalescence.

He satisfied Sally by being gentle and subdued and entirely tractable. He no longer trotted and urged delay when she spoke of their coming marriage, but of let her have things her way.

There was something familiar about the streets through which Sally and her father presently drove him. They expected him to smile in recognition, and so he did, because he didn't like to disappoint them. They had been out a shabby house under pine and trees out on a country road he felt a flash of something that was almost like pain. A young colored boy came out and shook his hand and said he was glad to see him back. Michael was very polite all through.

"Funny, old-timer," Sally said. "You were off to New York. But he's a chance out her own dum hum dum when city tomorrow." About it. He could never think of her. (To be continued)

Here are the facts: Oils not lubricating value. Cars using Germ Processed Oil were driven 15 to 75 miles with the crankcase empty but without motor damage! Germ Processed Oil protects your motor another way. All cars built since 1931 have greatly increased pressures and must have oil of extra high film strength for safe lubrication. Straight mineral oils have no more film strength than they had 10 years ago—some have less! Conoco Germ Processed Oil, with 2 to 4 times the film strength of mineral oils, gives modern motors the lubrication they need. Only Conoco Germ Processed Oil gives full motor protection—when you start, while you drive. You will cut motor wear if you use it!

Ohio Research Aids Perfect Plane Hunt CINCINNATI, O., June 12 — Dr. Harold W. Siebert, associate professor of mathematics in the college of Engineering and Commerce at the University of Cincinnati, has by research evolved a formula which will allow manufacturers to take another step toward the design and construction of the "perfect airplane." For years airplane manufacturers have guessed at the strain each part of the structure would undergo in making maneuvers. Text books and the Department of Commerce literature have either ignored or been indefinite when the point was brought up. Professor Siebert has evolved a mathematical computation which considers all the forces and stresses as they actually exist. Tests have been conducted on a full-sized model plane by the aeronautical engineering department and his calculations were within five per cent of the test findings. Dr. Siebert may submit his method to the Department of Commerce for its approval.

Orchestra Praised For Dance Success

In speaking of the success of his dance on the roof garden last Saturday night, George W. Foster, manager of the Laguna hotel, said that it was a decided success especially since it was the beginning number for the season. He attributed much of the success of the opening night to the splendid orchestra engaged.

Foster, who has had much experience in promoting entertainment of this kind, said that much depends upon the quality of the orchestra and for that reason he has engaged the same orchestra for the regular engagement next Saturday evening.

Difficult Surgery Saves Man's Life REGINA, Sask. June 12 - One of the most unusual stories in the annals of surgery in Saskatchewan has just trickled out of the vast northland. It is the story of the first major surgical operation ever performed north of latitude 55° in Saskatchewan. A trader, J. E. Burnoff, was seriously ill with a strangulated hernia. An immediate operation was imperative, but the spring break-up blocked any effort to take the patient out to civilization and a hospital. So Dr. P. E. Lavigne, superintendent of the little Ile a La Crosse hospital, aided by Rev. Sister Gaudet and Nurse Ann Rapitta, performed the operation - under conditions that would appal a city surgeon. Sterilization was by crudest methods. The operation was performed at night and the only light available was from two gasoline lamps. The operation was a success and Burnoff quickly rallied and within eight days was out of danger.
