Boosters Announce Jubilee Entertainment

SHAPE PLANS TO CELEBRATE THIS WEEKEND

Cisco Boosters Saturday announced that entertainment features for their first annual jubilee this week had been secured and that work upon the exhibit and the concessions for the event would begin Monday.

Tod Fields, noted comedian and vaudeville actor has been secured for the free shows each of the three nights, a telegram to the Boosters from J. B. Moreno, director of entertainment, said.

Fields will be remembered for his recent appearance at the Lions club minstrel here.

Other entertainment also is being arranged, it was said. Black-face comedy, slight of hand, and other vaudeville acts, different each night, will be presented.

Moreno will be here tomorrow to begin work on the construction of concession booths and the manufacturers' exhibit. The jubilee is to be held at the building formerly occupied by the Quick Service Garage, in the 600 block on D avenue.

Leonard Hudson has been named general chairman of the Jubilee committee. Committees of the organization will begin active work Monday, it was announced, looking forward to a large crowd at the opening on Thursday night.

A good exhibit of Cisco manufactured products will be featured, along with the free entertainment. This will be in connection with the purpose of the Boosters to advertise and promote Cisco resources and products.

CHARITY MEET HERE MONDAY IS IMPORTANT

Importance of the United Charities and Welfare association meeting Monday morning was stressed again yesterday by J. T. Elliott, president of the organization.

The meeting, which will be for organization of the local charity body, will be held at the mayor's office in the city hall at 9:30.

"We must have a large representation," Elliott said. "Every organization, relations, civic, and fraternal, is expected to have either its president or someone appointed by him to be present."

At the meeting of this group, which will make up the executive committee of the welfare association, an executive board of five members will be named. These will include the president, vice president, two secretaries, and treasurer.

Depend on Local Charity

"We are going to have to depend upon local charity this winter," President Roosevelt has told us," Elliott said. "If the local organization must take care of the local needs, we must get that organization formed. Winter will soon be here and the needy will be hungry and cold."

In the past the organization has played an important part in caring for the charity problem in Cisco. During the last two years, however, its work has been chiefly in furnishing clothing, due to federal and state charity funds being supplied.

This year, however, most of the government relief will be cut off and it will remain for such organizations as the one here to take care of their own relief situations.

Map of No Man's Land in Africa

Italian troops were converging their attacks from three sides today upon Aduwa, scene 40 years ago, of a humiliating defeat at the hands of the Ethiopians. The map shows Aduwa, in the north of Ethiopia, where the troops were massing their forces. The Fascists were determined to take the city not only because it is a key point in the Ethiopian defense. Addis Ababa, the capital, is shown far in the interior. The lines show the routes taken by British warships from Malta as they steamed from Malta to Cyprus and Port Said and Alexandria, keys to the Suez Canal.

CITY MAY BE CAPTURED IS FIRST RUMOR

BULLETIN

LONDON, Oct. 6. — Italian troops may be in Aduwa now. They have established contact with Ethiopian outposts as the final drive to be begun by three army corps was started this morning.

Copyright 1935 by United Press

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 6. — The Italian armies were advancing deep into territory on the northern, eastern, and southern frontiers today, government advisers showed.

In the north, infantry, light tanks, machine gunners and light artillery moved slowly but relentlessly southward from the Eritrea in the region of Aduwa, scene of Italy's defeat in 1896.

It was reported the Italian army occupied Aduwa but officials were unable to confirm this news. However, if the town should not have fallen, its capture was believed imminent.

Ethiopia does not expect to stop the first steamborne Italian advance in the north but it expects to hamper its progress and retreat slowly, harassing the enemy flanks. When the Italians enter Aduwa, they are likely to find only civilians there.

Three Columns of Italian Troops On March Over Rocky Area To Aduwa

By WEBB MILLER

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Oct. 6. — Three columns of Italian troops, tanks, machine gunners, and light artillery are pushing forward tonight, all aimed at Aduwa and sweeping southward toward the capital.

These columns are pushing forward under the most trying circumstances in a broiling tropical sun and suffocating clouds of dust. Roads now that were prepared for Italians now on the march have been passed and must be built as the troops advance.

Italian black shirts and black native troops from Eritrea are moving slowly over narrow, stony roads. The United Press correspondent walked these trails with the Italian army. They were impassable for motor travel and sometimes it was necessary to walk when even mules could not travel along the narrow paths overlooking the rocky gullies and gorges.

Thousands of Italian laborers and engineers followed us, frantically rolling stones cutting down trees, and widening the trails for trucks and soldiers. The road workers progressed at about six miles a day.

HUNDREDS OF ETHIOPIANS IN LIST OF DEAD

By United Press

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 6. — Details of the battles with Italians today indicates that hundreds have been killed.

Emperor Haile Selassie's attaches announced that the dead included an officer and that three non-commissioned officers of the Ethiopian army had been captured by Italy.

His Majesty, realizing the danger of air raids on the capital, accepted offers of immediate assistance of the International Red Cross at Geneva and also from expert Red Cross workers of the United States and England who are enroute here from Nairobi and Kenya colonies.

Germany Plays Waiting Game of Both Ends Against Middle in War Crisis

Copyright 1935 by United Press

BERLIN, Oct. 5. — In the smoke of war drifting toward Europe just across the Mediterranean and in the atmosphere of intrigue blossoming in every European capital — the same atmosphere that in 1918 cost the Kaiser an empire — Germany is playing a deep and quiet game of both ends against the middle for mighty stakes.

If the time comes when Germany must choose a side in the African war which threatens Europe, Germany is prepared to sell to the highest bidder. The German government believes the law of supply and demand will make the price high.

Many a foreign office will be bidding for aid, the Germans think, if events move in the direction they are now taking.

Germany has become the political sphinx of the world and its border patrols of Italy at Uvalde, the cunning of the strategy is apparent only after careful study of events clear back to 1918. It is believed that the future policy of the United States is a factor. Germany might support either side in a war with Europe for political reasons for upholding either side. There is the least advantage in an alliance with Britain.

Honor List of School Tax Payers Announced; Early Payment Is Urged

The Cisco school board, in announcing an "honor roll" of persons who have already paid their school taxes for the coming year, today said that Mrs. J. W. Howell was the first on the list.

"We are hoping that many more will pay their taxes soon to aid in the school finances," Frank Walker, secretary of the school board, said in listing those who have already paid.

The taxes were due on October 1. A number of those listed paid their taxes some time before then. Following is the list of those who have already paid school taxes.

Mrs. J. W. Howell, A. J. Olson, J. Q. Pickett, Mrs. John Brown, A. H. Richardson, First National Bank, Self Cooling Seat corporation, George D. Fee, McDaniel-Jay company, Mrs. H. C. Wallenburg, Texas Coca Cola Bottling company, J. T. Berry, Burton-Lingo company, Gallagher and Lawson, Mrs. F. Weddington, J. A. Bearman, Reimer's Cleaning Plant, Mrs. Emma L. Chesley, The Texas company, D. B. Bezdu, Magnolia Petroleum company, Mrs. Lena Loyd Bender.

R. F. St. John, F. D. Wright, Mrs. J. J. Butts, Butts and Wright, W. I. Agnew, W. Rasmussen, C. R. Arnold, Lone Star Gas corporation, Community Natural Gas company, Lone Star Gasoline company, E. H. PECAN SHELL PROJECT WILL AID STUDENTS

Encouraged by the favorable enrollment this year, Randolph college officials Saturday announced a plan whereby students may earn all or a part of their expenses through a pecan shelling project.

For some time a committee from the board of trustees and faculty has had in mind some sort of plan for helping the students to earn their own expenses, and recently decided upon this one, it was said. The plan calls for the purchase of large quantities of pecans, which will be shelled by students and sold by students, who will receive the full profit.

The sole object, according to Business Manager H. R. Garrett, will be to provide the students with employment so that they can earn at least a part of their expenses.

"It is estimated that an industrious student can earn at least half and in many cases much more than half of his or her entire college expenses. A prospective student needs to have only enough money to pay his first month's expenses in order to take advantage of this favorable opportunity. Ambitious young people who are interested should phone or write the business manager."

Gen. Butler Gets Requests to Speak

EASTLAND, Oct. 5. — News of the appearance of General Smedley Butler on the eve of his arrival here, brought telegraphic requests that he speak in various Texas towns, at a banquet in New York City, and commit himself on matters of international importance.

Samuel Butler, brother with whom the military figure was to begin his visit Sunday at noon, said Saturday that he had accepted a request of the ex-students of the University of Texas to speak in Austin Tuesday night.

Another request came from Cleburne for the general to speak Monday night.

Knowing his knowledge of international diplomacy, the "New Masses" society wanted him to speak Oct. 27 on "Can We Keep Out of War?"

"The Daily Worker," publication at New York City, wanted Butler to wire his opinion on "Mussolini invading Ethiopia."

The New York Oil association, composed of 600 oil executives, asked that he be a guest Monday, Oct. 22.

The majority of these requests sent to Butler indicated he would have to be refused.

The Booster Jubilee

The Boosters this week are celebrating their first anniversary with a jubilee on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The club was formed a year ago to boost Cisco and to aid the city in realizing the possibilities of its resources. In many ways it has been notably successful in carrying out its aims in making the city more civic minded, in aiding to get projects under way for the betterment of the city, and in providing an organization to absorb the energies of the younger men for a civic interest.

The jubilee this week will be typical of the Booster aims. It will have as an important phase the exhibit of articles manufactured in Cisco. The list has grown constantly since the exhibit was proposed, until it will make a fitting background for the entertainment and other features of the jubilee.

The Boosters started out a year ago to bring more industry to Cisco. In some ways they have been successful in creating more Cisco-mindedness and in boosting Cisco's resources and recreational facilities. They have not accomplished everything they set out to do, but as their first year closes they have made a good beginning.

Eliminating Traffic Toll

While Italy is sending more planes to rain bombs upon Ethiopian villages, while Japan is sending more troops into Manchuria and north China, while the nations of the world are preparing to fight, the violent death toll is mounting in the United States.

Every Monday newspapers over the country, of which the Daily News is a typical example, carry news accounts of deaths caused violently. Most of such deaths are caused by automobile accidents and could have been prevented.

There is a movement on foot to license Texas motorists as well as their cars and to slap a stiff penalty upon violators of traffic and licensing laws. One group says to "make the license easy to get but hard to keep."

By eliminating the undesirable and unfit drivers, Texas could do much to cut down its death toll, as could other states. It might be worth thinking over—seriously.

Fire Prevention Observance

Fire Marshal O. Gustafson has asked for the cooperation of every citizen of Cisco this week in preventing fire losses.

Not that the fire marshal wants cooperation only for a week, for he believes it should be stressed 52 weeks out of the year. But he is asking that every man, woman, and child pay a little more attention to fire hazards and eliminate them at this time.

"Clean up the place" is the slogan for the week. The

Behind the Scenes in Washington

Willis Thornton, NEA Service Staff correspondent, is pinching his nose at the Washington correspondent, during Dutcher's vacation.

BY WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—With war headlines screaming at them every day, the peace societies are redoubling their efforts.

The campaign of the National Council for the Prevention of War to raise a million dollars to propagate peace is only one of several. There is World Peaceways, for instance, whose work is looking up these perilous days.

There are two interesting developments in the peace movement, however. One is the way the churches are taking it up, particularly the evangelical denominations, which used to be so hot for prohibition.

By Armistice Day the Methodist, Baptist, Congregational, and Christian churches will have completed a members-by-member canvass to determine the attitude of their members toward war under varying circumstances.

The other development is the fact that the National Council for the Prevention of War is preparing to go direct to town in the coming congressional elections, organizing by precinct, ward, and district to defeat candidates who won't subscribe to their peace program. This is the old Anti-Saloon League technique right back again, and presents one more jolt for candidates for Congress.

THIS "peace action" program is so reminiscent of the days when Wayne Wheeler had half of Congress jumping through his hoop that one wonders whether just such a forceful leader may arise in the interests of peace.

The youthful Senator Holt is about to stump the country for peace, and arrangements are being made to stage demonstrations next spring just before the party and Washington conventions that can hardly fail to influence the party platforms that will be in the making then.

EDUCATING for peace is like all educating—discouraging work at times. The Quaker Frederick J. Libby of the NCPW ran smack into this one during a poll being taken at the Rochester State Fair recently.

The question was "Shall the United States join the League of Nations on terms of the Pope resolution, which provides that we shall not be obliged to use armed force to support the league?" The author of this plan is, of course, Senator Pope of Idaho, currently in Europe and sounding off after each day's crisis.

Two questionnaire-answers had evidently never heard of the senator. One answered, "No, I won't vote. I don't see any reason for bringing the Pope into this." The other opined, "I think the Pope's judgment is very good."

NEWTON D. BAKER has lost neither his adroitness nor his public office since retiring from here of a commission of the American Council on Education to study and make recommendations on a better program for youth. Baker was approached by reporters for a statement.

He demurred, protesting, "If you want to talk to someone really distinguished, you'd better talk to Mrs. Fisher."

He referred to Dorothy Canfield Fisher, author of "The Bent Twig," "The Brimming Cup," and many other novels, who is the latest literary light to turn to for public service by asserting that she is willing to give all her time to the work of this commission if necessary.

cleaning up of property likely will eliminate much of the threat from fire under which everyone lives. Much of this threat is from the fact that rubbish is allowed to collect and furnish a good starting place for the fire.

How about the wiring? That is another important question in this day of electricity. The fire marshal says that everyone ought to have a competent electrician look over the wiring every so often. Besides that, he has a poster of wiring "doubts" which he plans to place in prominent spots. Take a look at the poster and profit from its suggestions—that's his request.

The schools are planning to observe the fire prevention week with fire drills, fire prevention themes and speeches, and practical observation work.

All the observance is for a purpose—that of stamping out, as much as possible, the fire threat. Every year millions of dollars worth of property is lost through preventable fires, while many persons are burned to death. The special observance of this week is to prevent as many fires as possible.

Cisco has been notably successful in cutting down the city fire loss in the last few years. Much property has been saved, and at the same time, because the fire loss has been less, the city has been able to realize a substantial reduction on its insurance key rate.

Floating Airport Study at Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 5—A $4,000,000 revolving airport 1,500 feet out in Lake Michigan is being studied by Chicago officials as a possible substitute for a triangular island port originally planned by Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

The floating airport is the scheme of E. LeRoy Pelletier of Detroit, formerly consulting engineer for the Ford Motor company.

Federal funds, already promised to Chicago, will be obtained for the project if it is finally approved.

The plan proposed by Pelletier consists of a mammoth turn-table formed like a dart and constructed of reinforced concrete floats completely enclosed in a basin of water. The dart, 3,500 feet long and 700 feet wide, would be — in effect — a huge weather vane keeping its nose pointed into the wind at all times.

The area in which the vast turntable revolves will be enclosed by a dyke with a 50-foot runway on top. Hydraulically operated draw bridges connect the floating pontoon with the roadway, at the same time preventing any motion which might disturb planes landing or taking off.

Two buildings, each 600 feet long and 100 feet wide, would provide emergency hangars for repairs, office space and waiting rooms. Water inside the dyke would be smooth at all times and a special device would cut ice forming during the winter, thus preventing any loss of efficiency.

The project, which would require about six months to complete, has been approved by the department of commerce and navy engineers, Pelletier said.

AUSTIN, Oct. 5 — Both liquor control and old-age pension bills were in serious jeopardy early this week.

The pension bill faced possible inclusion of a sales tax in the senate, held by Attorney General McCraw to be a legal procedure, and its ultimate rejection by the house. The liquor bill, restricted by a separate senate act to package sales and further limited by the house to state monopoly, faced all sorts of hazards that threatened it at several stages.

Veterans of both houses began to dig in for a November session, believing the tetter, or both, will fail on the final test, and what has so far loomed as a fair prospect of a second session will be made a virtual certainty.

The house dry majority asserted itself. But its vote to restrict sales to state-operated stores, as the most restricted outlet for liquor may have been influenced by the recent testimony of the Rep. John Peachy, whose son had been killed by a truck, pleading for strict provisions against drunken driving and by Austin's bloody record of two traffic deaths in car accidents the day before his vote.

the hotel and restaurant men, and by all the strength both of those committed to selling the drink and to private licensing, will make a most determined fight to overturn the monopoly vote in the house; then to reject it in the senate; and then, at last to fight for a more liberal bill in the conference report.

The house stood ready, after having taken out the last bit of taxation from the pension-payment bill, to turn down the whole bill if it should come back from the senate with a general sales tax—"tax on poverty"—in it.

A statewide drivers' license law, and at least 50 local or special or corrective bills are being urged upon Gov. Allred for submission, even though the session is at such a stage that the wrangle over pending bills will prevent much attention to anything else.

In view of the appalling toll of traffic deaths, Governor Allred is eager to submit the drivers' license law; but he does not want to jeopardize essential measures now pending or to offer it up to a good chance of its own defeat.

That in order to make a pleasing impression on visitors, a city should be kept clean not once in a while but all the while.

It should be kept so attractive that the more visitors see of it the more they will want to come again. When visitors like a city, the more they will talk about it and wish they lived there—and many will arrange to do so.

Every city needs more good citizens added to the number they already have.

Good citizens stimulate a city's growth by doing things worth while. A clean city builds a good reputation that is soon known far and wide.

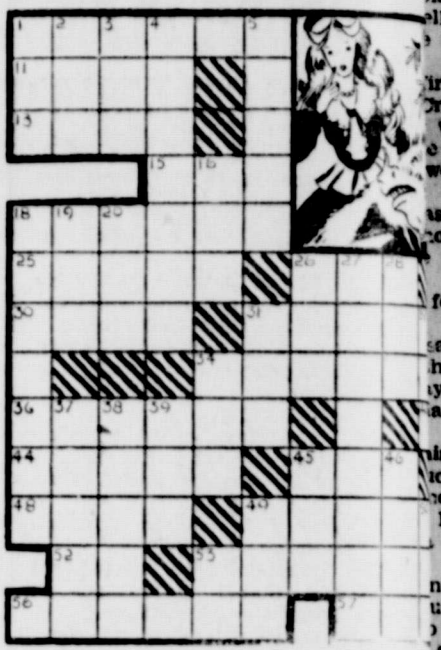

Well kept lawns and parks make a city better looking and more outstanding.

Using the eyes in poor light is the surest way to make them dull and listless. Frowns and wrinkles are another result of eyestrain.

Scientists agree that eyestrain — whether it be due to insufficient light or to uncorrected eye defects — is one of the principal causes of fatigue; not only of the eyes but of the entire body. Headaches, nervousness, indigestion, are often traced directly to the eyes.

Eyestrain is insidious. You may not be conscious of it until the harm is done. That is why it is so important to have your eyes examined and to have your lighting checked by an expert.

ETHIOPIA IS LIVING UPON PAST GLORIES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 - What will Mussolini have if he succeeds in conquering Ethiopia? He'll get about 350,000 square miles of African plateau, mountains, and some lowlands. He'll find from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000 natives (the country has never had a census) to whom fierceness is a tradition and whose standard of living is simple.

Descendants From Ham
About 1-3 of the people, according to the Stepanian Yearbook are Ethiopian proper. They are Christians descended from Ham, son of Noah.

French Control Railroad
There is one railroad, controlled by the French, which runs 486 1-2 miles from Djibouti in French Somaliland, near the lower end of the Red Sea, to Addis Ababa. Trains run twice a week each way, covering the distance in three days, but stopping over each night. In the dry season, a 36 hour express runs once a week.

Telegraph lines, controlled by Italy, string out for 1,299 miles and telephone lines for 5,113 miles. In 1933 there were 31 post offices.

Like the old-fashioned speaker, Ethiopia is going to be difficult to break into. According to Isaiah Bowman, director of the American Geographical Society of New York, as it is cut off from the outside world by deserts and arid plains on the north, east and south and by great swamps on the west. The edges of its plateau are nicked by great canyons.

Man Is Known By The Mule He Rides In Ethiopia

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 5 - Foreign correspondents ride mules all day in Addis Ababa, and spend the evening standing up.

Actually, there is no reason for the mules. They take a half or three-quarters of an hour to reach any given point, and they eat their heads off. If it rains, a taxi is necessary, anyway. But there is something about a mule.

If the rider kicks the animal and yells "metsch" it will trot, and the next time it hears metsch will trot again, not so much in agreement as in anticipation of the kick to follow.

There are several two-mule men among the foreign correspondents at Addis Ababa. As such they are two-hoys men—one boy to care for the beasts and the second to ride the extra mule and carry bundles. A two-mule, two-boy man must be careful not to get too familiar with a one-mule man. It isn't done.

He must not associate too closely with a horseman. Mules cost much more than horses in Ethiopia, probably because of their supreme contempt for anything human. And he must in no case be seen too often with mere pedestrians.

Then there is the matter of equipment. There is a German correspondent with a car, a wife, a chauffeur and a great Dane. There is an Englishman with a fly switch, a gas mask, and a case of Scotch whisky which almost caused an international incident on the frontier.

There is a Canadian with two mosquito nets, a kettle for boiling water, and a pair of mosquito boots of canvas which would hold at least five gallons of water apiece, he says.

The GOLDEN FEATHER

by Robert Bruce

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN DUNN, pretty, 21-year-old secretary and BOBBY WALLACE, young automobile salesman, spend an evening at The Golden Feather night club.

ARI LANNING, the proprietor, introduces them to SANDY HARRIS, who explains he is in the beer business. Sandy and Jean dance. When he asks if he can telephone her she evades.

Later Sandy has a mysterious conversation with two men who mention Jean's employer, DONALD MONTAGUE, and hint they may be able to do some business.

LARRY GLENN, who is "doing some work for Uncle Sam," joins Jean and Bobby. He cautions them against spending much time in such places as The Golden Feather. When Jean and Bobby leave Larry sees them into a cab.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV
WHEN Larry Glenn re-entered the Golden Feather night club, he walked over to the corner table where he had been seated before he spied Jean and Bobby. He sat down there, and drew an envelope from a coat pocket. From the envelope he took half a dozen postcard-size photographs of a girl.

Three of them were close-ups of her face; they showed a dark-haired, laughing girl whose eyes held just a faint suggestion of hard, worldly-wise sophistication. The other photos showed her in theatrical costume, full-length; and the costume, in each case, was exceedingly skimpy, revealing a great deal of shapely leg and torso.

He studied these thoughtfully, looking closely at each one in turn. Then he put them back in the envelope, returned the envelope to his pocket, and began a slow, unobtrusive and methodical survey of the room, scanning closely the face of every woman he could see. A waiter came up and hovered at his elbow, suggestively; Larry looked up blankly, then smiled and ordered a drink. When it had been brought to him he practically ignored it, taking only an abstemious sip now and then as he continued to look about the room.

His reverie was broken by the approach of a man; a heavy-set man in a tweed suit whose loose lines could not conceal the outlines of a muscular and supple body. This man removed his hat, revealing a shock of rebellious hair that was more red than brown, and sauntered up to lay a hand on Larry's shoulder.

"I thought I'd find you here," he said.
Larry looked up, startled. A sudden grin of recognition came over his face, and he sprang to his feet and seized the man's hand enthusiastically.

"Mike Hagan, by all that's holy!" he said. "And just the man I wanted to see! You old loafer, you! And what made you think you'd find me here?"

Hagan pumped Larry's hand vigorously, tossed his hat on an empty chair, and sat down with him.
"Oh, I ran into one of the boys over at the federal building the other day, and he said you'd been transferred here," he said, answering the last question first. "And I figured you'd be bound to hit his joint sooner or later. How you been, anyhow?"

"Swell. And you?"
"Can't kick. What're you doing here? Just killing time, or after something?"

"After something," said Larry. "I'll bet you can help me. Look at these." He took out the envelope and spread out the photos before Hagan. "Ever see her before?"

HAGAN looked at them carefully, while he applied a match to his cigar. At last he grunted.
"Uh," he said, "I think I have. I wouldn't be dead sure, but she Larry spread out the photographs. "Ever see her before?" he asked.

looks like a dame that plays this place more or less regularly."
He puffed at his cigar.
"What'd you want of her?" he asked.

It was a rather long story that Larry told in reply, and it explained not only his interest in this unidentified girl but his own presence in the Golden Feather night club.

It began several weeks before this particular evening, in the National Bank of Neola, a small town some 200 miles to the west of Dover. . . .

The morning was hot and quiet. A farmer stood at the glass-topped counter along the wall, making out an entry for his savings account with gnarled, work-roughened fingers. The gray-haired cashier stood behind one barred window, busy at whatever it is that bank cashiers busy themselves with on dull mornings, his eyes abstracted with that far-away, other-worldly look peculiar to bankers. At the other wicket there was a youthful teller. In the railed-off space by the front window, which served the president as an office, a slim girl in a white sports dress clicked away at a typewriter.

In the dusty street outside a big sedan swung noiselessly to the curb. Three men got out, leaving a fourth seated behind the steering wheel.

Had anyone been passing by at the moment, he might have noticed that the driver did not shut off the motor. And if that had drawn his attention to the men, he most certainly would have stared, pop-eyed, at them. For one of them brought a vicious-looking sub-machine gun out of the back of the waist, mounted horizontally at his side, and turned the steps of the little bank, and turned to look up and down the street. The other two men walked swiftly into the bank.

Entering the little lobby they proceeded to shatter its Sabbath-like calm. They held ugly automatic pistols in their hands, and they swung their muzzles back and forth in slow, menacing arcs; and one of them barked sharply, "Put 'em up, everybody! Reach for the ceiling if you want to live!"

THE cashier, the teller, the stenographer, and the farmer stared at them in unbelieving bewilderment for a moment, and then slowly, uncertainly, put their hands into the air.

"Come on—up! Up!" cried the bandit who had spoken before. "And no funny business!"

He remained in the center of the lobby, glaring at his victims with a gaze which seemed capable of looking at all four of them simultaneously. His companion walked quickly to the railing behind which the stenographer sat and stepped over it. He smirked at the terror-stricken girl.

"Take it easy, sister, nobody's going to hurt you," he jeered. Then he opened the wire-netting door that gave access to the cashier's and teller's cages, and walked in. From beneath his coat he took a wide-mouthed canvas sack, and into it he quickly swept all the currency that the shelves and cash drawers contained. Then, holding the sack with one hand, he thrust the muzzle of his revolver into the ribs of the cashier.

"Now, grandpa," he said jocosely, "suppose you open that safe over yonder—and do it dam' quick, too."

The cashier gulped, looked about helplessly, felt the hard gun-muzzle against his thin chest, and obeyed. Pushing him ahead of him, the bandit entered. More cash went into the sack, and a fat sheaf of bonds. Then, still preceded by the trembling cashier, the bandit came out. He shepherded the cashier into the front office, gave him a parting jab with the gun, tucked his now filled sack under his coat, and rejoined his companion in the lobby. With a parting threat, the two men hurried outside, and—joined by the man with the machine gun—trooped over to their auto. Tumbling inside, they cried, "Step on her!" to the driver.

The driver swung the car out from the curb just as the town's one policeman, hastily summoned by a merchant who had witnessed things from his store window across the street, came around the corner. Helplessly valiant, he ran toward the car, revolver in hand, shouting. The snout of the machine gun protruded from a side window of the car, which was gathering speed. There was a swift, dry sputter of metallic sound, a dozen stabling spurts of flame—and the policeman, who had planned to get home early that evening to freeze ice cream for his small daughter's birthday party, fell down on the sidewalk and died.

THE big sedan sped down the road and was out of sight before anyone had got to the policeman's side.

After a time the confusion lessened enough, and the aging cashier recovered enough, so that he and the teller and the bank's president, who had been summoned by telephone, could begin to reckon up the total of the loss. About the time they had finished—they found that some $10,000 in cash and bonds worth $20,000 had been taken—another big car came whirling to a stop in front of the bank; and out of this one sprang half a dozen policemen from the city, eager to pick up the trail of the departed gunman.

The policemen questioned the people in the bank. The sheriff and his deputies arrived and asked some questions. The entire populace of the little town—459, by the last census—seemed to be congregated just outside the bank, eager to ask still more questions on its own hook. At last the police captain from the city, after telephoning a general alarm to be broadcast throughout the state, and conferring briefly with the sheriff, turned to the president.

"Look," he said, "those birds are probably a hundred miles away by now, and getting farther away every minute. You're a national bank, so this robbery is a federal offense. Your best stunt is to notify the regional office of the Department of Justice. They'll have a man out here right away, and they can go after these birds better than we can hope to do, because they can chase 'em all over the United States, if necessary—and it'll be necessary, too, if I know anything about this sort of thing. . . . So why don't you do that? Want me to make the call?"

The president agreed, and the policeman got on the phone and talked to a man in an office 50 miles away. And that was how it was that late that afternoon Larry Glenn got out of a small coupe and walked briskly into the bank and presented himself to the president with the words, "I'm Glenn, regional director of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice. Now about this robbery—"

Mike Hagan listened while Larry brought the story this far.

"Okay," he said, "but about this girl you're looking for. How does she draw cards in all of this?"

Children in Coughlin's New School Take Hate Oath to Crush Communism

By NEIL WEBER
United Press Staff Correspondent
DETROIT, Oct. 5. — Two hundred children stood with arms outstretched in the form of a cross in the tiny classroom at St. Theresa's parish school in Royal Oak, Mich., and with faltering voices solemnly repeated an oath to hate the "Red Flag."

Thus did the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, inaugurate his anti-Communist school, the first institution of its kind.

The children took the following oath:

"I pledge myself in the presence of God and my classmates, to hate Communism, but to love Communists, as Christ loved His executioners on the cross."

"I pledge myself to do all in my power to destroy Communism."

"If necessary I will surrender my life as Father Pro, our patron did."

rather than obey the dictates of Karl Marx and those who hate our country and our church."

Hopes Idea Will Spread

Father Coughlin expressed hope that the school ultimately would become the cornerstone of a nationwide drive against the "red menace." The radio priest said pupils would be taught Communism "so they can fight its evils."

"The only way to overcome the teaching of Communism," he said, "is to establish new schools where we can combat such activities. This is the first school started in America and we hope the movement will spread. The new club will be called the Father Pro Club, named after Fr. Michael Augustine Pro, S. J., who was the first martyr killed by Communists in North America."

Includes Sixth Grade

He was killed in Guadalajara, Mexico, on the orders of General Calles in 1926, without trial." Father er Coughlin said. "We are requiring the children above the fifth grade to join this club and take a daily oath of allegiance to God and Country, with their arms outstretched, just as did Father Pro when the Mexicans shot him."

At present St. Theresa's school instructs 240 pupils. The anti-Communist instruction for the smaller children will consist largely of talks by the teaching nuns. But the higher grades will be required to watch newspapers for clippings on the subject, which will be used in discussion, to point out the fallacies and evils of the Communist system. Father Coughlin added.

Seeks 1,000 Pupils

His complete plans call for raising of a $300,000 fund for construction of a new school building large enough for at least 1,000 pupils. Then he will attempt to line up other schools in the country to follow the plan laid out by the new school.

"I am sure the people will respond," the priest said. "After all, it is a question of spending the money to teach the children Christianity. And if we don't spend the money that way the Communists will get it all in the end anyway."

"Will Fight From Without"

"If necessary we will expand the curricula in all the schools to put in anti-Communist courses," he continued. "We'll teach the children what Communism is all about. That's the only way to fight back. They are fighting from within — we'll fight from without. We'll take the candy from the pill, and show what's inside."

Father Coughlin also revealed he had recently appointed a parish school board of trustees, which include Sylvester J. Christie, state HOLC manager.

Rustlers To Face Guns in Missouri

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 5 — For the first time since pioneer days, Missouri farmers are arming themselves and organizing night patrols to halt cattle rustling, the theft of small farm animals and raids on orchards.

Strange as it seems in this modern age, the practice which has grown to huge proportions in the last six months has been based on the use of the motor car.

Farmers of rural Jackson county, near here, have held meetings and mapped plans. Shotgun have been cleaned and rusty revolvers removed from trunks filled with war memorabilia.

Old Group Reorganized

The Farmers' Protective Association which operated years ago to stop farm thievery has been reorganized and will take an active part. Jackson county will be divided into districts and farmers detailed to ride those districts nightly. Law enforcement agencies plan to co-operate with the farmers.

In Macon county in the center of the state Judge Harry Libby of the circuit court called a special grand jury to investigate cattle rustling and farm thefts.

"The use of a speedy motor car," Judge Libby said, "makes it possible for the thieves to move quickly and dispose of their loot quickly." He instructed the grand jury to spare no efforts or expense in investigating the depredations.

Large Band Exposed

At Lamar, Mo., in the southwest section of the state, two persons recently were sentenced to prison for cattle rustling. Their confessions uncovered a large band that stole cattle and all types of farm animals and fowls and escaped across the

Isaiah Portrays the Suffering Servant

Text: Isaiah 53:1-12
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Oct. 6.
BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

THE studies of representative men and women of the Bible during the third quarter have taken characters from the Old Testament and from the New. In the fourth quarter we turn from a succession of New Testament studies back to the Old Testament. The personalities of these lessons are the older prophets and leaders of Judah, from Isaiah to Malachi.

stand something of the source and reality of the noble, religious ideas of this lesson and of the accompanying chapters in the latter part of the Book of Isaiah. Here was a people professing to be the chosen people of God, to whom there had been great promises and whose literature was full of sublime triumphs and the evidences of divine leadership. The conception of a glorious kingdom in which Israel should lead and share was enshrined in that history. But how could these promises and purposes of God concerning Israel be fulfilled in a nation that had been blasted by war torn up by the roots and taken off in exile to a far and unfriendly country? Was there no justice and no hope as men looked up in the light of the spiritual history of the nation?

ALABAMAS, ONLY INDIAN TRIBE OF TEXAS HAVE WHITE CHIEF

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
PARIS, Oct. 5.—Strange plants United Press Staff Correspondent that eat meat and have stomach aches are among the latest botanical collection gathered from obscure corners of the world by the Paris Museum of Natural History. These carnivorous plants, which thrive on the meaty substance of flies, mosquitoes and other insects, are being divided by French scientists today into different classes according to digestive organs and will devour tiny pieces of beefsteak.

sweet-smelling honey glands these pitchers attract any insect winging by. Walks Into Trap Unaware of any danger, the fly or beetle sips the tasty secretion and ventures further into the trap. Then it suddenly finds itself sliding down a slippery track into the bottom of the pitcher where its presence stimulates a flow of fluid, which drowns and digests it. The creature is then gradually absorbed by the plant. When one of these pitchers gets too large a morsel and proper digestion cannot take place, disorders similar to the stomach aches of human beings result. The Venus fly trap, scientifically classified as a member of the Droseraceae family, is another herb being studied at the Museum. Its leaves are composed of two lobes, the edges of which are spiked. When an insect alights on one of them, they clap together within a split second, the bristles interlocking. The insect then finds itself in a stomach from which there is no outlet. Secretion immediately follows and it is drowned within 15 minutes.

Flourish in Marshes Practically all of these insectivorous plants have been gathered by French scientists in bogs, marshes and damp heaths, which are stated to be their natural habitat. Since their roots have no contact with sufficient supplies of inorganic food, these plants have been forced to develop their stems or leaves into veritable mouths and stomachs. One of the most curious plants being studied at the Museum is the pitcher-plant belonging to the genus Nepenthes. Different varieties of it have been brought from swamps and jungle pools of New Guinea, New Caledonia, Madagascar and Cochinchina. From its stem dangles leaves which have a large pitcher-like cavity at the end. These pits vary in size from a few inches to more than a foot in depth. Usually spotted with yellow, purple and red and lined with Besides these meat-eaters, the Museum collection offers another peculiar kind of plant which apparently performs surgical operations on itself. It is the Cerapegia Dictyoma which starts life with an abundance of leaves, but amputates them when dryness sets in and the water supply is scarce.

If you will devote your time to the gathering of subscriptions. Work just as delightfully at this as you would any other job. Then you are bound to come out with larger dividends for your work, so than anything else you could do in the same period of time. The Opportunity club was inaugurated for you made to order for you. The campaign will close on Dec. 21, just a few days before the holidays. It will be to your interest to make inquiry about the Opportunity club. This means hundreds of dollars to you. Don't put off any longer, the time is here when you should make an active start.

Rural Entries Needed

The rural district has very few entries as yet, although there is a car guaranteed to go to district too. This means you folks who live outside of the city limits of Cisco should get busy at once. Don't put off seeing about the one opportunity which means hundreds of dollars to you for the next few weeks work. There should be entries from all towns and communities in Eastland and adjoining counties.

If you will enter your name today, take part in this large dividend paying proposition offered you for a few weeks of spare time work, then you may find your name at the top of the list on prize day. See the advertisement in today's News. Clip your entry blank, mail it to the Opportunity club manager in care of the News. He will deliver the supplies at once. The clipping of this blank is all it takes to start you—no cost to enter, compete, or win. This is your one opportunity, don't let it pass you by. Your gain—Is in grasping your opportunity. Now!
