HALL OF REMARKS

BY HERREL HALLMARK

LOBO FANS will be interested to know that if the Lobos won their game Friday night against Frisco in Azle, a chartered bus will be available for the next week's game for the use of the fans.

Ten dollars will be charged per seat to pay for the renting of the bus which will seat 40 persons. If any money is left over it will be used to purchase soft drinks and the like for the passengers.

Since this column was written Friday morning, I have no way of knowing the outcome of the Cisco-Frisco game, but if the Lobos won then you may make reservations on the bus by getting in contact with Bobby Ingram.

TAKEN FROM The Electric Times, a monthly publication for West Texas Utilities employees, is the following article which anyone who is in the printing business can identify with.

It is entitled the Publisher's Lament and goes as follows:

The typographical error is a slippery thing and sly;

You can hunt till your dizzy, but it somehow will get by.

Till the forms are off the presses, it is strange how still it keeps.

It shrinks down in a corner and it never stirs or peeps.

That typographical error, Handpainted Tees

T-shirts by Kyle Wallace, former Ciscoan, are available at The Sidelines, 502 Conrad Hilton Avenue.

Wallace, who resides in Austin, gives personality to the t-shirt with his unique handpainted designs. His shirts are found in boutiques along Austin's lively 'sixth street'.

Shirts are available in medium, large, and extra large in 100% cotton.

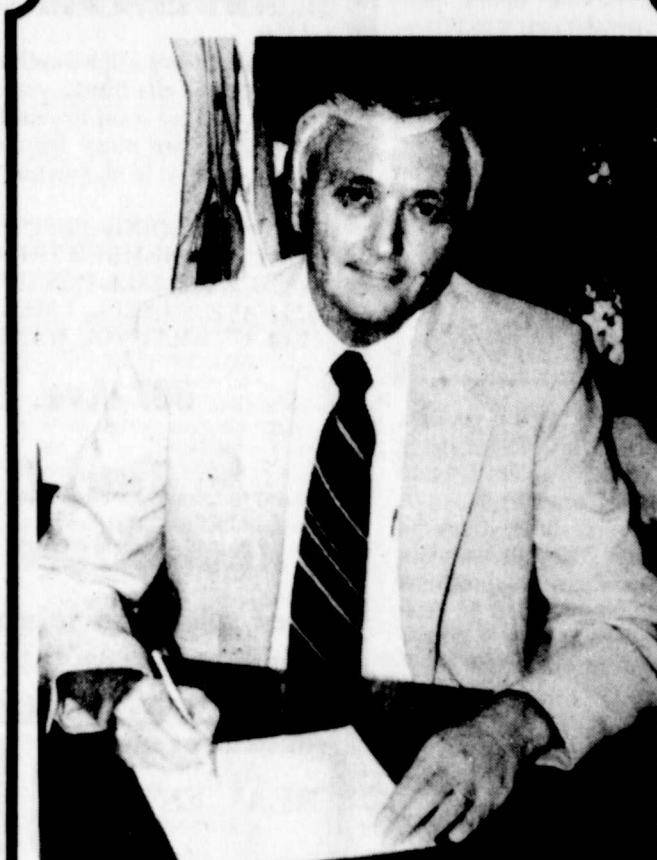

too small for human eyes, Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.

The boss, he stares with horror; then he grabs his hair and moans.

The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and groans.

The remainder of the issue may be clean, as clean can be.

But that typographical error is the thing you always see.

MAYOR PROCLAMATION - Cisco Mayor Eris Ritchie is shown signing a document which proclaims the week of November 28-December 2 as the local Community Chest week. The Chest drive will begin in earnest during that week and every effort will be made to contact all citizens, either at work or at their homes. Everyone is urged to give to this worthy cause which helps so many different organizations in the community.

Eastland County Offers Wonderous Yule World

Eastland County's Wonderous World of Christmas!

That's the theme for a special attraction which will be featured in your local newspaper from now until Christmas to bring emphasis to the fact that this is the retail trade center of a vast area.

This county is a trade center and each of its cities is a pearl on the necklace of "good places to be."

Values abound and the true spirit of Christmas is to be seen in all corners - as really, friendly, hometown people smile and serve their customers as true guests. You'll not find a mob-scene nor a grumpy clerk. You'll find courteous, convenience and a sincere appreciation for your visit when you "stop at any shop" in Eastland County.

And the money you spend stays around.

The Wonderous World will be launched on these pages Thursday and merchants who want to participate in this special consumer-oriented promotion may contact their local Eastland County Newspapers for information:

Cisco Press, 442-2244; Eastland Telegram, 629-1707; Ranger Times, 647-1101; and Rising Star, 643-4141.

The purpose of the program is to emphatically emphasize that Eastland County has everything...you do not have to commute to find the values you deserve. Eastland County merchants work hard and invest in providing the goods and services that this area needs.

Look for the Wonderous World in Eastland County.

There are many Santas and your local newspaper will attempt to show you as many as possible from now until Christmas.

Santas who say: "Eastland County is my kind of place."

City Raises Water Rate, Also Approves Six New Ordinances

A rate increase to $1.27 per 1,000 gallons to the Westbound Water Supply Corporation, which serves rural customers with water purchased from the City of Cisco in this area, was approved by the City Council at its regular semi-monthly meeting Tuesday night.

Westbound has been paying 50 cents per 1,000 gallons since it began operations four years ago. The new rate, which will become effective Dec. 1, was necessitated to provide funds that the city will need to finance substantial improvements in the water system, the Council told Ken Martin, Abilene engineer representing the company, at the meeting.

Mr. Martin requested a rate hike to 93 cents per 1,000 gallons. The Council agreed to hold a work session with directors of Westbound corporation at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 13, prior to a regular Council meeting to discuss the rate hike.

Westbound buys water from Lake Cisco and Lake Leon for re-sale to customers on its lines in rural areas in the Cisco and Eastland areas. A report by City Manager Mike Moore showed that Westbound purchases 12 per cent of water sold from Lake Cisco. In operation since Sept., 1979, Westbound has 292 customers for Lake Cisco water and 126 for Lake Leon.

In other action, the city manager told the Council that he has learned unofficially that the government's revenue sharing program has been renewed for two years on the same basis as in recent years. He gave the Council a time-table on action needed in the waste water treatment facility project, which must be operational by Oct. 1, 1985, to comply with a court order.

Returns of the Nov. 19th city bond election in which voters approved issuance of $675,000 in bonds to complete financing water and sewer improvements were accepted with the passage of an ordinance. M.L. Bailey, election judge, presented results of the voting, showing that the bonds were approved 356 to 115.

After canvassing the vote, Mayor Eris Ritchie reiterated an earlier statement that it would be the determined effort of the Council to find the most cost effective plan for the new waste water facility as well as in improvements for the water system.

An ordinance updating the city's retirement plans for city employees was approved on final reading. This ordinance approximately doubles benefits for employees when they retire, and it defines eligibility for participation.

The Council approved on first reading an ordinance providing that Glendale Avenue in the Webbwood Heights Addition, Section 1, be vacated, abandoned and closed. Property owners on both sides of the one block requested the action.

An ordinance suspending the proposed effective date of West Texas Utilities Company's statement of intent to increase electric rates as set out in their notice of June 10, 1983, was approved. The original suspension of 120 days was extended 30 days as the Public Utility Commission has not rendered a decision in the rate case.

An ordinance to adopt the 1982 Standard Plumbing Code, the 1983 Amendments to the code, and to comply with all state regulations pertaining to plumbing, was passed on first reading. This measure, City Manager Moore said, updates the city code. He said that city officials met recently with area plumbers and they agreed that the measure's purpose was to protect citizens from inferior work and materials and should be approved.

limits of the city, except of educational projects, was passed as an emergency measure to become effective immediately. The exception pertains to the agriculture projects of Cisco High School and Cisco Junior College at their Ag Center. The ordinance provides a penalty for violations and updates a measure on the city books since 1912.

A bid of Blue Shield and Blue Cross to provide health insurance for city employees was accepted. It was the low bid of two submitted and the rates are the same as last year, City Manager Moore reported.

The application of Kelly-Barnett Petroleum, Inc., to drill an oil well on their 40-acre Rhodes South lease in Section 84, Block 4, of the city was approved. Plans call for the well to start Nov. 24th and to go to 4,100 feet. The location is 800 feet from a completed well. A $125 drilling permit fee was paid.

The Council rejected an application by Earl Blackstock for a road to be built to Lots 7, 8, 10 and 11 in Block T, College Heights Addition. The plat showed his property is bounded by Johnston, Bailey and Hartman Street with a 20-foot alley. Mr. Blackstock, appearing at the meeting, said he planned to put a mobile home on the property and needed access to it.

The city manager recommended that the request not be approved, noting that the city has no legal obligation to build streets and has no funds for this type of work. He said the city's policy has been to maintain streets after developers built them.

The regular meeting for Dec. 27th will not be held unless there is pressing business, it was decided.

During the council-citizen discussion period, Mayor Ritchie reported that a rural water customer had contacted him to request free use of the City Landfill for trash dumping because of the new $10 per month water surcharge for rural customers. The council agreed to consider the matter as an agenda item at a future meeting.

Doug Fry and Sutton Crofts of the Cisco Livestock Show Association were present and requested permission to lease the show barn on the Lake Road to a salt water disposal company. The Council instructed City Attorney Bill Wright to prepare the proper papers to approve the request.

Mayor Ritchie presided at the meeting. Present were Councilmen Ivan Webb, Bob Rains, Roy Dennis, Brad Kimbrough and Linton Batteas, City Manager Moore, City Secretary Ginger Johnson, City Attorney Wright and 10 spectators.

Lights From The Christian World
 by Josephine Cleveland

Fletcher Spruce, a well known writer commented, "Shotgun pellets are efficient if you are shooting at close range, for even a tiny ball of lead would get your game if it found its mark. But scatter-shot dissipates readily and is harmless at a distance. Big game hunters, however carry rifles which shoot only one bullet at a time. There is no spray-shooting, no scatter-shot here. Every effort is concentrated on one vital target. The bullet hits its mark and some mighty monarch falls. Friend, some lives, like pellets are scattered over wide areas and have no long-range effect. Other lives have one purpose, one aim, one goal. These are the men who count, the ones who bring down the big game. They achieve the high goals. Paul was such a man. He said it simply: "This one thing I do." Phil 3:13. He did not say, "These forty things I dabble in." The greatest powers on earth is demonstrated by men who are dedicated to God. They are clean, holy, aggressive, enthusiastic, optimistic, faithful, Spirit-filled. These men shape lives, mold nations, and change the stream of history. God is looking for more such men and women. How about you?"

Eastland County Red Cross Teaches CPR

The Eastland County Red Cross teaches many CPR courses throughout the year. If any organization wishes to sponsor a CPR class they should contact the Red Cross chairman, Roy V. Cartee, 442-2024.

The certified instructors taught a CPR refresher course at the Graham Memorial Hospital. Those teaching were Robert Webb, Louise Anderson and Roy Cartee.

The above pictures were taken at one of the classes. Shown in the photos are Nurses Glenda Herendez and Burdell Grozier working with the baby manikin; Nurses Karyn Cathy and Devonna Wheeler are practicing CPR on the man manikin; Nurses Terry Norris and Mary Wasacz are practicing two-man CPR.

The Red Cross relies on the Cisco Community Chest for a donation to its fund each year. This year they are asking for $400 from the Community Chest.

CJC Offering Driving Course

As a service to the community, Cisco Junior College will offer a Defensive Driving Course December 12 and 14 from 6-9:30 p.m. in the Science Hall Lecture Room. Fee for the course is $20.

emergency situations.

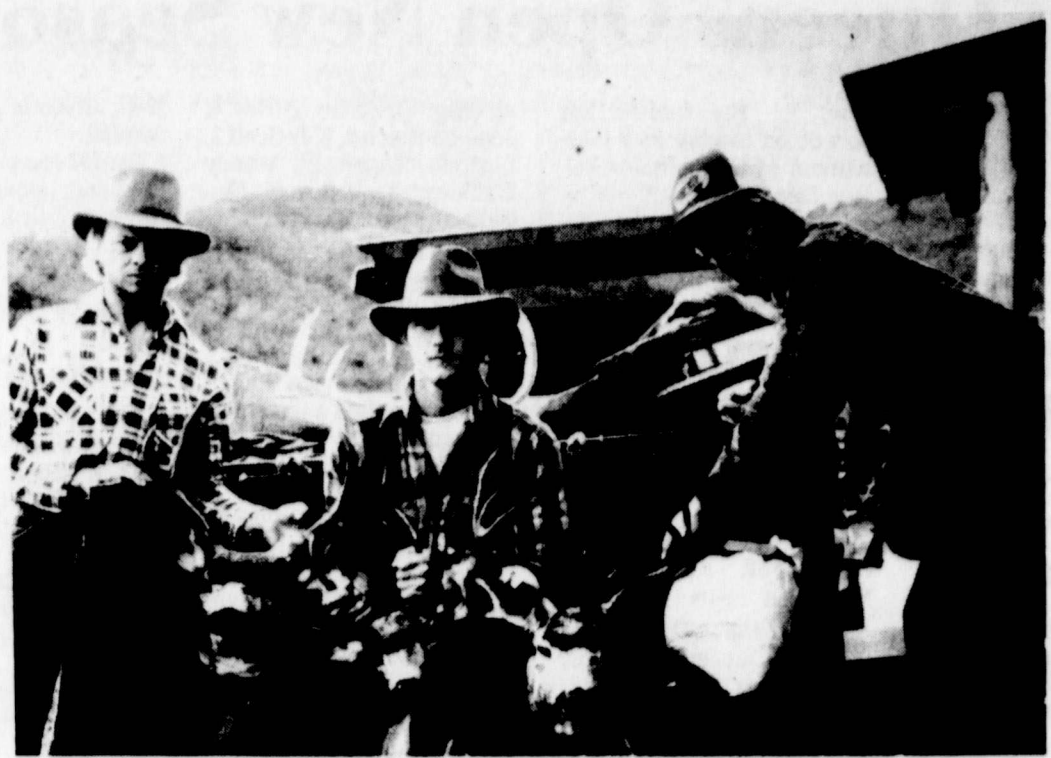

Drivers who complete the training are eligible for a 10% discount on automobile insurance rates covering bodily injuries, property damage, medical payments and collision coverages. Good for three years, the discount may be renewed by retaking the Defensive Driving Course.

Enrollment fee must be paid by 3 p.m. on December 12. No late registration fees will be accepted.

For more information or to register call or come by the President's office at Cisco Junior College.

In Search of "the" Image

I confess, I am scum. With complete disregard for the season, the economy, the overall nature of things, I recently hopped a Republic Airlines jet from Milwaukee to Denver, then shuttled my way via Pioneer to a little town in the Four Corners of Colorado called Durango.

I should have stayed home, tending my seedlings, watching the tulips sprout, awaiting the chance to plant lettuce and onions deep in the still frigid soil. Instead--Lord forgive me--I was out doing the vilest of things...skating at Purgatory, my favorite Colorado ski area.

Now, don't bother telling me about how you've already guessed that this column is going to be about ski photography. After all, you figure, this guy is just whacko enough to try squeezing one more winter sports piece into the paper before the Fourth of July. Well, the joke is on you. Although I enjoyed skiing immensely, I'll spare you my standard diatribe on using fast shutter speeds to freeze action and instead challenge you to a contest. You see, I did something not easily done. I entered a community both changing and changeless and emerged with a record of the trip.

What exactly did I find in Durango? Life in the Southwest the way it was once. Quarter horses and palominos grazing on grass barely discernible between rocks and sagebrush. Angus and black whiteface lolling contentedly in the corral. Great herds of elk and deer roaming the plateaus between mountain ranges.

I found buildings in and around Durango which will never again see their centennials. And a railroad which was hauling men and ore in and out of the mines between Ouray and Silverton before the Civil War. But mostly, I found people--real, honest-to-God, hard-working cowboys and farmers, barmaids and shopkeepers. Capturing everything else was easy. Doing justice to them was just plain hard.

You see, there's an intangible bond between a city or town and its people, a hard-to-explain link, an invisible vein nourishing not one, but both. Like the college preppie in Boston or the northwoodsman in Maine, like the dairy farmer in Wisconsin or the oil magnate in Texas. These are stereotypes, of course. But they nonetheless speak to the image of a place. It need not be the only image--possibly not even the best. But it is viable if it works, if it triggers in us something that says, "This is Texas or Wisconsin or Colorado or Maine."

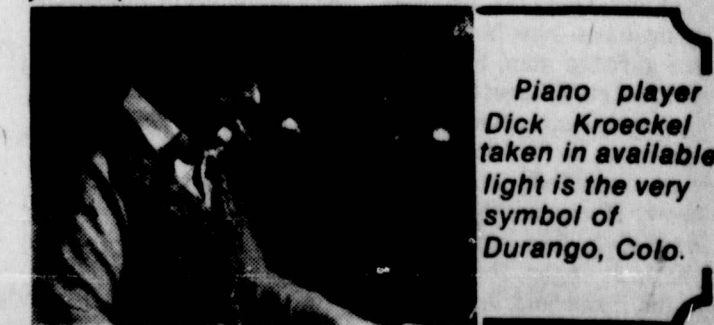

But what about Durango? Who best exemplifies that town? The Colorado cattlemen? No, for Durango is more than that. The skier, railroad brakeman, trapper? She is more than that, too. In fact, Durango is much more a feeling, a spirit, a philosophy of life than a place. She is hard-working and somber sometimes--gay and carefree others. She can be a sophisticated lady when she wants to, but much less than that, too. How could one hope to convey all that through a single photographic image? Through an instant frozen in time?

It wasn't easy, and I may be wrong, but I think I did it. For each night for approximately six weeks a year a man walks into the Strater Hotel on Main Street and seats himself behind a hulking upright piano. And he begins to play. And play. Like nobody you have heard before--a crude cross between Chopin and Scott Joplin, cranking out everything from The Blue Danube to Alley Cat, from On Wisconsin! to Rhapsody in Blue. No excerpts, mind you, but the whole thing. And with a flair that is impossible to miss--both sophisticated and raucous, sedate and imposing. He makes the Strater come alive, the way the town of Durango makes all of Southwestern Colorado spring to life.

Dick Kroeckel is more than a bar piano player in a turn-of-the-century hotel. He is the symbol of Durango, itself. The fact that Kroeckel plays in Durango little more than a month each year is the Strater's bad luck. But if you happen to run across him in Denver or Virginia or Wisconsin or New York, you will know him, nonetheless...and you will have been to Durango.

And now, the contest: Take your camera with you on your next trip and spend several hours searching for just the right image of the place. Send me a print in care of this paper, and you'll win my respect...if you're right. Or simply have an enlargement made and hang it on your wall...to win your own respect. What better reward could you hope for?

Piano player Dick Kroeckel taken in available light is the very symbol of Durango, Colo.

Reflections In Perspective

I.W. Ussery

My Lovely Wife has a police record. Now, I've done it. I have disclosed her secret. But it would be bound to come out one day, anyway. May as well make a clean breast of it.

Those of you who know M.L.W. accuse me of becoming suddenly and impulsively stricken with an attack of vindictiveness simply because she failed to turn on the coffee for breakfast, slightly burned the toast, or left her bedroom slippers where I tripped on them. Not so. I just feel that the truth be known, she will no longer have to worry about people learning of her record. The cat is out of the bag. But there is quite a long story of background to her having become a number on a police blotter.

In Iran, where we lived in the capitol city of Teheran for a number of years, there had been set out by the developers of the subdivision where we lived an assortment of carefully selected trees set out along the streets and walks and in and around the little "courts" which provided access to many of the houses. Our house, or rather garden ("yard", we'd call it in the U.S.) opened onto one of such courts. In fidget parks, they were, in fact.

And near the northwest corner of the court, just outside the column supporting our gate which opened into the car port there was a nice little arbor vitae shrub. Cute little bush, it was. It provided a perfect screen for the garbage barrel. But for some strange reason it attracted not only flies (ever notice that?), but it attracted the children of some of the servants in the houses around the little park. What particular pleasure they derived from it is a mystery to me, but the children seemed to delight in making a short run and jumping into the little arbor vitae.

The little tree could take just so much of that kind of abuse. It began just sort coming apart. The branches split away, one by one. M.L.W. would have the gardener cut off the brutalized branches and place them in the garbage barrel.

Finally, there was only a scruffy skeleton of the little bush left, and M.L.W. in order to maintain a neat appearance in the outside as well as the inside of our garden instructed Baba, the gardener, to cut it down. She attributed his reluctance to do so to a streak of stubbornness. After considerable insistence, Baba cut down the little arbor vitae and put it in the barrel with a gesture which sort of indicated that he said a brief prayer to Allah for having the will of Madame.

At about that time we had a sort of run-in with the garbage collector. He came almost every day, certainly more than three times each week with his pushcart into which he'd dump the garbage. The garbage would be carted away to be placed on a heap in the edge of the wheat field directly across the road from the local supermarket. Every few weeks the municipal garbage truck would clean up what the sheep and goats had left. They, too, believed in neatness. Now Mahmoud, the garbage man, had been paid 100 rials, about 67 cents, by our servants each week in the form of "bakshish". It was expected. Mahmoud knew, of course, that there was but one source of bakshish...Agha, the Master of the Household. And inflation took its course. Mahmoud insisted to Reza, the cook, that 100 rials was just half enough for one household to pay for his invaluable services. He became quite moody and glum.

And one bright sunny day came the gendarmes. It seems that Madame has been charged with cutting a tree without permit. The fact that the tree was doomed anyway made no difference. Before cutting any tree in Iran, one must have a permit. Certainly, Madame had not wielded the axe, but she was principal accessory-before-the-fact. And to answer for that terrible violation of the law, Madame must proceed to the headquarters of the police Tajrij. No, it would not be necessary...at the moment...for her accompany the policeman who served the summons. She had until noon. After that...well, the law must take its course.

With the summons in hand, I immediately called our attorney to seek legal advice. It was going to be frightfully inconvenient for Reza to have to prepare Madame's meals and take them to the Tajrij Police Prison. And there was no assurance that Madame would have a private cell. Meanwhile, Madame was peacefully unaware of just what was taking place. The attorney would send Hunan, a junior partner, to assist in making a plea of "innocent by virtue of ignorance of the law".

And, great news! It would not be necessary for M.L.W. to go in person. She could send me as her "delegate". After all, in the eyes of Iranian Law, the Master of the Household bears certain responsibilities for the acts of all the members of said household...up to including his wife.

Hunan appeared, right away. We reached the Tajrij Police Station long before the critical hour of noon, and after having been passed from flunkey to flunkey, office to office, pleading here and there; we finally reached the individual who had the authority to read the summons, consider the plea, and pronounce sentence. In a surge of magnanimity, taking into account the crime had been committed by an ignorant infidel foreigner, and since there was no human bloodshed; the Court would absolve the culprit of any further prosecution and would consider the case forever closed in return for payment of a "fine" of the equivalent of $37.00.

The payment was made. Entries were made in the books and ledgers. Tea was served. The official congratulated us on our understanding and cooperation. And Hunan and I went back to our house where we informed M.L.W. that she was no longer a hunted criminal.

I asked Hunan to translate the receipt, as I never learned to read Persian script. Smiling, knowingly, Hunan read the receipt which the official had written. Mine was the name; of the party who had been allowed to pay the fine. Mine was the name of the individual who would not be summoned to account for cutting a tree without permit.

So maybe M.L.W.'s name does not appear on the police blotter, after all. But you may be sure that never again did she instruct Baba to cut another tree, even though it was less than three feet tall.

The Cisco Police Department's new drug awareness program was outlined by Sergeant Lonnie Knight and Policeman Lynn Johnson in a slide presentation and demonstration at the weekly luncheon of the Cisco Lions Club last Wednesday noon at the Colony Restaurant.

Mr. Knight distributed a booklet, entitled "Let's All Work to Fight Drug Abuse," and a leaflet designed to acquaint anyone with the various narcotics and drugs and to offer the reader a "drug abuse test."

Sgt. Knight said the police department has accumulated a display of materials confiscated by local and county authorities in drug arrests and raids for display. These items include the various equipment to use drugs as well as samples of some of the drugs.

"We are ready to take our program to groups of 10 or more persons anywhere anytime," Sgt. Knight said. "Ours is a program designed to emphasize awareness."

The slide presentation and drug abuse booklet covers facts about drug and alcohol use, marijuana and its effect on users, quaaludes, PCP, narcotics, stimulants, depressants, cocaine and the like. It is a program of some 30 minutes and appeals to young people as well as to parents.

Sgt. Knight concluded that "we want to hear from anyone, anonymous if you prefer, about any drug problem. Any informative given us will be confidential and welcome and used for the good of all."

Program Chairman Bob Conner complimented the police department on its work in drug awareness.

Letters to the editor...

Dear Editor, National Home Care Week is being celebrated this week all across the country. The week has been set aside to pay tribute to the thousands of dedicated home care workers including registered nurses, speech, physical and occupational therapists, medical social service workers and home health aides. These fine people provide home health services that allow more than two million elderly, disabled, infirm or dying receive the health care they need in the comfort and privacy of their homes.

Home Care can be an ideal arrangement for an elderly person living alone, recovering from a heart attack or stroke, a handicapped child or a dying cancer patient, among others. With home care, personal and medical services are tailored to each person's condition and family situation. All care is supervised by a registered nurse and directed by the patient's own physician.

If a person is confined to their home and needs part-time skilled care or therapy for the treatment of an illness or injury, Medicare can help pay for covered home health services furnished by home health agencies participating in the Medicare program. Skilled services include intermittent nursing care, physical therapy and speech therapy. If the patient needs any of these services, Medicare can also pay for social service workers and medical supplies and equipment.

I want to take this opportunity to salute the home care workers in Eastland County for their dedication in caring for homebound residents in this area.

Thank you, Sincerely, Nancy Clark, R.N., Director, Eastland Manor Home Health

Reflections In Perspective

I.W. Ussery

Mohammad al Jabbar was a rogue. Not a criminal out-cast, nor did Mohammad entertain any outright criminal intentions nor inclinations. But by all standards he could well be classified as an outright rogue. Likeable, jovial, friendly, infinitely subordinate (unless he could figure a way of avoiding doing something which he did not want to do) and he was the driver of the air boat which was used for personal (it had a seating capacity of two, including the driver) transportation over the mud flats outside the village of Fao, Iraq, where our first Middle East venture was launched.

If you've never seen one; a brief description of the air boat is in order. It is a very light, shallow boat with a small, something like 90-100 horsepower aircraft engine complete with propeller mounted on the stern. The mounting of the engine and propeller must be quite high to provide for room for the prop to turn. This gives the little "air skiff" a high center of gravity which contributes to a very cranky disposition. It is not as maneuverable as a common fishing boat, and turns and stops must be anticipated somewhat in advance in order to avoid calamity. Without a muffler, the sound of the engine and the prop, coming from directly behind the passenger is deafening.

The air boat is commonly used in the marshy terrain along the Gulf Coast of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida, and was our only means of convenient contact with the dredge which was eating its way through the mud flats. The mud flats are just that. The accumulation of hundreds of thousands of years of silt deposit, they rise from a water depth of 70 feet along Khor Abdullah to a maximum elevation of just a "ad over thirteen feet, which just barely keeps the beginning of firm, dry land above maximum high tide. At low tide, the flats are exposed for a distance of two to four miles. When the tide is "in", that sweep of mud is covered with only a few inches to perhaps a couple or three feet of turbid, silty water in which the only marine life is the mudfish which ichthyologists tell us hasn't changed in a hundred thousand years. It has escaped all the principles of evolution.

The mud in "the flats" ranges in density from goopy to soupy. And in some of the upper reaches of them the Iraqis have laid out what they call "salt pans" in which a few inches of sea water is trapped at high tide, the "pans" closed with mud and the water impounded to evaporate under the cruel sun, leaving a deposit of salt. After many floodings of this sort, the salt is stripped away, or scooped up, bagged and shipped by river barge to Baghdad where it is refined.

Anyway; when the dredge began excavating the 100 foot wide trench from the sea to high ground, into which trench we were going to install two large-diameter pipelines, we availed ourselves of the opportunity offered by the client to use the air boat. And along with the boat came Mohammad al Jabbar.

Mohammad appeared in the door of my office one day, and in broken English identified himself as "Driver. Boat driver. Mud boat driver". Standing there in the doorway, with his hat in his hand (he had become westernized in his dress, wearing the khaki uniform of the Oil Company Employee, which uniform was supplied by the Company), and wore a wide-brimmed straw hat; he was all smiles. I liked him from the very start. Somewhere, there was a hint of irrepressible sense of humour in Mohammad's smiling face. And there was also the warning that he is a man you'd better keep an eye on.

Now the Oil Company has a custom, in keeping with the newly created National Labour Law, of providing food and lodging for all employees who were on somewhat detached duty. Also, the Company observed the law to the letter in allowing all employees a minimum of one day a week off duty. Transportation by bus was provided from Fao to Basra, and that bus... those busses... departed Fao on the dot at noon on Thursday. The provision of the holiday observance could be waived by the Oil Company in such cases as ours, where the work went on 'round the clock, seven days a week. We had obtained that waiver, to be executed when needed. We usually tried to work around the holiday provision, arranging our work in such manner at the local employees of the Oil Company who were on loan to us could observe their religious "Day of Rest".

But on this particular Thursday, it was vital (or so I thought) that I make a visit to the dredge to pick up the reports, talk to the two engineers I had placed on the dredge, and just generally let them all know that we were still interested in their making all progress possible. But there had to be water over the flat for the trip. Usually, the visit occupied something like a couple of hours, including travel time. The travel time, with Mohammad at the throttle, was only minutes each way. I had informed the driver that morning that when the tide came in we would go the the dredge, and for him to keep himself available. I'd try, having checked the tide tables to determine that we could be well on our way by ten o'clock, all possible to get him on the bus for Basra. Mohammad acquiesced, smilingly.

Just before time to depart the office for the mud boat trip, the driver came into the office and very calmly stated... "No water". That meant that the tide had perhaps failed to make its usual ebb-and-flow thing. It never occurred to Mohammad that his report was contrary to certain natural laws, nor that I kept close watch on the tide tables which are printed and circulated by the British Admiralty. "No water" meant that we just couldn't make the trip. The mud had to at least be moist for the boat to make it without grinding away its hull.

"What do you mean, no water? The flats should be covered by the sea at this very moment." I said. With a shrug of his shoulders and with his hands outstretched, palms turned upward, Mohammad simply repeated, "No water".

"Then when, I asked, will there be enough water?" Mohammad brightened and very cheerily stated... "Maybe... Sunday". "Let's go", apparently. We climbed into the little craft, he pressed the starter button, and nothing happened. Promptly Mohammad announced... "Battery, finished". I ripped away the battery cover and could see why. A post had been broken off. Mohammad won. We returned to camp in time for him to meet his bus to Basra, and I learned a lesson in basic Arab philosophy which insists that... "There is absolutely nothing which simply must be done to-day".

By the time the battery cold have been replaced the tide would have been going out. Mohammad Jabbar knew this, or was betting on it. And he was back on duty, bright, chipper, cheerful as ever on Saturday morning.

Frost will be hitting Eastland County before long, and this could lead to prussic acid poisoning in livestock grazing certain pasture grasses and forage.

Although many plants contain the toxic material that causes poisoning, those causing the highest mortality in livestock when grazing after they have been frozen and wilted are Johnson and Sudan grasses and sorghum or hybrids of these.

The most dangerous time as far as the grazing of these plants is concerned is following frost when the plant material begins to wilt. Livestock should not be allowed access to the wilted material until it has dried completely. This usually takes three or four days of good sunlight. New plant growth usually becomes nontoxic and can be grazed within 10 days to two weeks following a rain.

A far as prussic acid poisoning is concerned, the poison acts rapidly and can kill animals within minutes. In most acute cases, animals become affected within 10-15 minutes after eating toxic material and can die in two to three minutes. Symptoms may include a brief period of stimulation followed by depression and paralysis. Signs of colic may be present. Stupor (loss of sensibility), difficult breathing and frequent convulsions may result. Death is caused by suffocation since oxygen remains in the blood and is not exchanged to the tissues. This also causes the blood to appear bright red.

To prevent prussic acid poisoning in livestock we suggest these steps:

1. Allow plant material affected by frost to dry thoroughly before grazing. This may require a week or more of good sunlight.

2. Feed animals hay or a supplement before turning them in on plants that may contain prussic acid. Animals that are not hungry will not be affected as seriously by toxic material since their intake will be limited.

3. Remove all animals from the pasture if one in the herd shows any signs of poisoning.

4. Call a veterinarian immediately if one in the herd shows any signs of poisoning.

5. Have suspect plant material checked by the Texas Veterinary Medical Diagnostic Laboratories at College Station or Amarillo. Local veterinarians will be happy to submit samples for you.

The overall key to prevent prussic acid poisoning and then to keep cattle from grazing such plants until a safe period has passed.

The annual County Pecan Show will be December 9 and 10. There will be six food divisions (pies, cakes, candy, nut bread, cookies and snacks). Each recipe must have pecans in it. We have an adult and youth division. All entries must be entered and in place by 11:00 a.m. Friday, December 9th at the County Courthouse lobby. Cash awards and ribbons will be given to the winners. The holiday season has arrived and many of you have started doing some Christmas shopping. Or, you may be like me...you've started thinking but have not begun!

Although money may well be spent on celebrating in some instances, we are often tempted to overspend. Christmas time often over extends the family budget which can lend itself to financial problems for the family. Try to make gifts reflect not only appreciation for another person, but also that recipient's genuine need. I suggest drawing on human resources to make celebrations and gifts personal and meaningful.

Here are some ideas for meaningful gifts that are small in costs.

IOU gifts for services are welcome. Colorful envelopes can be used to enclose a coupon book of certificates the recipient can redeem throughout the year. Services might include babysitting, household repairs, or lawn work - whatever you are skilled at and know your recipient could benefit from.

Baked goods are always welcomed as are cuttings from favorite houseplants, but the cuttings need to be rooted early.

Nostalgic items can often be picked up at thrift shops, flea markets, or antique shops. Such items may need some cleaning up, but can be special gifts with added meaning.

Sylvia Porter suggests that the holiday season might be a good time to pass along a seldom used possession such as an heirloom to a favorite relative or friend, rather than including the gift in your will. Such a gift avoids the inheritance taxes which might be involved at the settling of an estate.

RECIPE FOR THE WEEK:

Throughout the holiday season, we have many opportunities for going to parties or attending covered dish dinners. This week I received a copy of the new Extension Homemaker magazine called "The Messenger", and found an interesting cake recipe.

ALMOND JOY CAKE
1 box chocolate cake mix (w-pudding) mix and bake as directed.

Pan size 17 1/2 by 11 1/2.
Filling:
1 cup pet milk
1 cup sugar
24 large marshmallows
14 oz. angel flake coconut
Combine milk and sugar, add Marshmallows and heat until they are melted.
Then add coconut.
Pour over cake while filling and cake are hot.
Topping:
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup pet milk
1 stick oleo
1 1/2 cups chocolate chips

Combine sugar, milk and oleo. Bring to a boil. Add chips and stir until they are melted. Last add 1 cup chopped nuts. (Pecans, almonds or others). Pour over warm cake. Allow to cool. This cake will keep well in the refrigerator and it also freeze well.

Spotlights & Sidelights

Julla Worthy

For those persons able to afford it, there are alternatives to nursing home care.

"Able to afford it" is the catch phrase, but nursing homes are not all that affordable either. The person paying his own way for nursing home care is talking about fees that begin, on an averages, at a thousand dollar minimum.

Nursing homes are for health care primarily—not housing. According to American Association for Retired Persons figures, these facilities provide sixty places for every thousand people over the age of sixty-five.

As it stands now, there are people in the health care centers who could function in a less dependent environment if such happened to be available.

As the numbers of elderly increase, so do alternatives to nursing-home care. Unfortunately, the alternatives may never catch up with the increase, but at least the problem is recognized and getting attention.

About 800 centers called "Adult Day Care" now exist with an average yearly increase of 200 such centers projected.

Congregate Housing, where the residents eat at least one meal together, is subsidized with payments prorated on income.

Home Care offers part-time attendants for people who have only minor physical limitations—again with subsidies based on eligibility.

Respite Care is meant to give unpaid relatives caring for their family elders a breather. This isn't one of those programs subsidized—"subsidized" means the bill is footed by the taxpayers, if you forget. But the Older Women's League is lobbying for passage of a bill to do just that.

If that sounded like a pot-shot, it was.

I never have been able to sort out my ideas about how much government aid is proper. I'm not even sure that "proper" is the proper term here.

It irritates me to think of the immense amount of practical and theoretical knowledge warehoused in the minds of the senior population. It should be used. However, I am aware that physical conditions directly affect mental functions. I would not deny subsidies to those of us who need them to be productive.

I'd much rather subsidize the whole plus-sixty population than pour out on the ground the millions of dollars we spend in "foreign aid."

No, I'm not interested in rinky-dinky rationalizations of politicians about where our "frontier" is. Go as far back in history as you can. I'll give you odds you find that the human element that didn't take care of himself first, then his family, next his tribe—if he didn't take care of himself first, then his family got wiped out. (Grammatically speaking, that's a terrible sentence, but I trust I'm communicating.)

May main question about subsidized housing and health care centers on "qualifying individuals." In most of these programs, it seems to me the people who have contributed least to the social structure get the most benefits. I don't think that's fair.

However, they are here and they must be cared for, and perhaps subsidizing is the way to go. I do think everyone would get the same deal—especially the ones whose taxes paid for the subsidies in the first place.

Maybe this is socialism. Maybe it is communism. Maybe it is an "ism" yet to come. I don't know, but I am troubled.

To repeat, I never am quite satisfied with my reasoning on government subsidies, but my basic reaction is that I feel cheated. I feel that my husband and I are being penalized for "making a living" and providing (we hope) for our later years.

I don't know that I ever would take advantage of getting "free" cheese, but I believe all of us who footed the bills for overproduction of commodities are entitled to those commodities right along with "qualified persons" whose basic incompetence resulted in the qualification.

Dec. 15 Is Deadline For State Hay Show

Texas farmers and ranchers who would like to see how their 1983 hay crop stacks up have until Dec. 15 to submit entries for the Texas State Hay Show.

The show will be held Jan. 24 at the Sheraton Crown Hotel in Houston.

"The main purpose of the annual hay show is to give producers over the state an opportunity to put up their hay against the competition and to have it evaluated for its nutritional content," points out Don J. Dorsett, forage specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. He expects about 400 hay samples to be entered in the show.

Hay quality varies widely over the state in any given year due to growing conditions, the weather and other factors, notes Dorsett. 1983 has been a particularly interesting year in hay production, he points out, due to the adverse spring weather, lack of summer rains in some sections, and some late-season heavy rains in various parts of Texas.

Hay producers may submit one sample in each of seven classes in the show, says the forage specialist.

Classes include coastal bermudagrass, other bermudagrasses, other perennials, mixed grasses, summer annuals, winter annuals and legumes.

Entries should be sent to Dorsett, 355 Soil and Crop Sciences Bldg., Texas A&M University, College Station 77843. County Extension agents can provide additional information on submitting hay samples.

In addition to the judging of hay samples, the annual show will include hay judging contests and special programs concerning forage by members of the Texas and American Forage and Grassland Councils. The hay show will be held in conjunction with meetings of the Councils, Jan. 23-25.

Professor's Responsibility To Students

"We Must Service All Makes and Models... (of Students)..."
by Taylor Rankin

Let me mention some of the models (students) that we service. First, we recognize the well-maintained model with good service record and with all original parts. To these, we may need only to clear their vision, give direction, and provide a fill-up. To these, we apply mechanics rule No. 1, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it!" To such models we do little repair, but we do encourage--we service. These are the makes who are able to enter the ramp at highway speeds and join in the traffic flow. In a panic, these models could lock all four wheels and not go into a spin!

But, what about the other models (students)? Many haven't even backed out of their driveways (this isn't necessarily the students' fault--they simply haven't been driven.) Many are products of the salvage yards and are "junk yard assembled!" By all appearances, they look like college students, but are most dif-icult to service because they are composed of strange and varied parts. One cannot follow a parts book here! Sometimes we find students who don't understand their make-up. These require the services of specialist--the advisor. The task is trouble shooting, testing, and discovering just what make and model the student really is. This procedure is often a tedious and time consuming part of the service but so important. Actually, this task must precede all other services.

What do you suggest when you find a late model with high mileage? What do you do with the one that has a good engine but has a rough exterior? What do you suggest for the one that is difficult to get into gear? How do you service the one whose engine knocks even on premium?

I've found in my workshop good running but dusty pickup trucks from West Texas ranches and I've seen land-rover types from the mission fields of Africa that may need nothing more than shock absorbers.

After helping these models eliminate the shock, they seem to smoothe out the rough places and run beautifully on the highway. I've also seen models who had low odometer readings and who were driven mainly to church on Sundays but had trouble with fast freeway driving.

I have serviced some models who knew that they must be completely rebuilt, that they must experience a complete overhaul in order to achieve the precision and design that they wanted.

We must be able to recognize and recommend action in order to make the vehicles serviceable! What do you suggest for those with too much play in their steering? how do you help the ones zooming through the dark "over driving their headlights?" What do you do with the one with a shabby interior? How do you correct the one bouncing down some unknown destination with all four wheels out-of-round? Here is one that idles to fast--here is another whose main bearing is going out!

Another, because of a restricted intake is running too rich, some non-convertibles insist on running with their tops down. Others seem to be loaded with accessories while possessing a totally inadequate running gear! And how do you service the gootimes van or the hard-to-fit pre-war model? What's to be done with the overpowered muscle make of the underpowered compact model? What do you suggest for the motorized camper? The car-in-tow? Or the convoy that seems to impeded progress?

It is not my intention to be unkind to the students who come our way--my point is this, we as professional educators must be able to diagnose and fix.

We must service all makes and models! It may require all our special training and experience to salvage some models and prepare them for the journey.

Most of us are specialized and can detect problems in some areas but not in others--we really depend on one another for the complete analysis. We must have the specialists in music, in religion, in science, and in business.

Would you agree with the maker who states "Quality is job one"?

Quality may very well be undefinable yet it is an event that we recognize--our students sense it and respond to it.

In recent weeks much has been said about quality in education. The quality that I'm having trouble defining we recognize--our profession requires it--our students deserve it--and our society demands it. The classroom is being blamed for its product.

Let's work toward the goal of having all models, in our classrooms jump skyward and declare, "somebody did it right!"

Now you know that feeling--the lecture goes well, the discussion was rewarding, the material was covered, the hard problems were solved, the experiment worked, the exam questions were clear, you enjoyed meeting the class, everyone understood the class standards and objectives, the professor was fair in the grading--all makes and models were beginning to function to their potential.

Traffic began to move at a steady pace. Breakdowns were few. You began to feel the validity of those automotive terms such as quality, high performance, and excellence. What I want to say as we open our service stations and crank up for another year's work--let's agree that it will be service with a smile and that quality will be job one! Happy motoring!

Bass Club Report

"Structure Placed at Eastland Lake"

Recently the Eastland County Bass Club placed tire reefs at one of our area lakes in Eastland. These should only enhance the excellent fishing that has been enjoyed over the years. These reefs should attract a wide variety of fish: channel cats, bass, crappie and brim. Do these attractors really work? Yes, recently introduced bush piles on an area lake produced the following 5 lb. 8 oz., 4 lb. 2 oz., 2 lb. 13 oz. These bush piles were only in the water for 3 weeks and the results speak for themselves. These new tire reefs are at present on dry land, but as the lake fills they also will be a true honeyhole.

Area lakes are showing use signs of our weather, as boating traffic has slowed considerably. Leon bass slow, but good size, crappie good; Brownwood bass good 2 lb. average, crappie in main lake bush, Daniels bass slowing, crappie good; Eastland bass good, channel cat slowing.

Don't forget December the 3rd we shall hold our annual awards banquet at the Cisco Country Club. We shall begin our program at 8:00 p.m. We hope all members will attend as this is your time, we shall be awarding our trophies which have been won this year. Plus enjoying a fine meal. See you all there Saturday night. Good fishing and keep plugging.

Guest Slot ARE YOU A 10 PER CENTER?

For Thinking Out-Loud...

A local philosopher whose opinion we respect posed a question between cigar puffs this week that set your grey matter a flutter.

Is there, he asked, any parrell between the fact that less than ten per cent of the Soviet population are card-carrying Communist and that most of the election decision made in the United States are also made by less than ten percent of the population?

First mental response on our part went like this: No way; because there's a world of difference in the intent and purpose of the two "10 per centers." On the one hand the bedrock card-carriers are dedicated to forcing their brand of domination on the entire world so that they not only control 90 per cent of their own population, but that they will one day control 90 per cent of the world. Whereas on the other hand, the ten per centers in this country are the ones who care enough about their form of government to take the effort to go to the polls and help make decisions. One could surmise that the 90 per centers here just don't care, or are too lazy to go vote. (The 90 per cent "over there" probably have to keep quiet to save their necks.)

In reflection you get a whiff of what he's alluding to: too few are making decisions for too many. He cites for example the recent constitutional amendment vote in Texas, when so few decided the alteration of this state's sacred document. (When he used this example it brought to mind a wonderment of ours; i.e.: do any other states do as much patching and whittling on their Constitution as does Texas? It would seem that Texas legislatures have found the Amendment route a convenient (and given the lack of general concern) and almost fool-proof way of getting measures taken to satisfy just about any special-interest group they may be wanting to codify.

Some countries require voting. Switzerland for one, our friend pointed out, has laws which make it virtually mandatory to vote in every election. Is that democratic? Debateable, but not debateable is the fact that that Alpine country has had a stable government for centuries. (Universal military service is required there too, you know.)

A recent "essay" in one of the news (?) magazines (can't remember which biased one it was; either traditional Time or Newsweek) had to do with the proposition that maybe traditional low voter turnout in this country is good. Premise with the writer being that perhaps only that number (ten per cent or less) really know enough about their government, and/or the issues and/or the candidates, to cast intelligent vote decisions.

There are now predictions that voting in the presidential election year of 1984 will be heavier, not heavy, but heavier than usual, and we think that's good. But there are other elections too: school boards, city commission or who knows, maybe a bond election of some kind. Should these matters be decided by a few or many? That's your question.

Voter qualifications are so simple nowadays. What? Simple registration six months before a vote. (Let's old timers try not to hark back to the days when we paid "Poll taxes".)

This country is so typical in so many ways. The voter turnouts usually parrell those across the state and nation.

We personally hold that our democratic "rule by majority" is a good system -- and better if there's as near-total sampling of the populace. Just think how many local decision makers have been elected by so few deciders. And this is not to add credence to any party or any candidate. Any who offer themselves as candidates deserve to be elected or defeated by a true majority of the qualified electors.

Are you registered? Will you vote? -H.V.O.

Location is in a 435-acre lease in the H&TC RR Co. A-709 Survey. Bottomed at 3,650 feet, the well will produce from perforations 3,301 to 3,311 into the hole.

At a location nine miles southwest of Eolian, NNB&Z Inc. of Breckenridge has finalized a new oil producer in the Stephens Regular Field.

The well is designated as the No. 1 Garlitz "36", pumping oil at the rate of 19 barrels per day.

Location is in a 40-acre lease in the T&PRR Survey. Bottomed at 4,253 feet, the well will produce from perforations 3,692 to 3,698 feet into the hole.

A 2,000-ft. developmental well is planned by Jackson Oil Co. of Ranger at a drillsite four miles east of Lacasa, Stephens County. The location is in a 60-acre lease in the T&PRR Survey. Well's designation is the No. 25 Robert Jackson. It is in the Jackson Field.

Ridge Oil Co. of Breckenridge has filed for permit to drill the No. 3 Coody, a 4,100-ft. developmental well two miles southeast of Caddo. Location is in a 1,200-acre lease in Stephens County's T&PRR Survey. The well is in the Pit-Rom Field.

S&J Operating Co. of Wichita Falls has revealed plans to drill a 3,300-ft. developmental well in the Stephens Regular Field. The operator has 381 acres leased, with drillsite in Stephens County's Lunatic Asylum Land Survey and has designated the venture as the No. 15 G.F. Kennedy. Drillsite is one mile southeast of Breckenridge.

A Ft. Worth-based operator has staked location for the No. 1 M. Winston "A", a developmental well to be located 12 miles south of Breckenridge. With projected total depth of 4,200 feet, the well is in a 40-acre lease in Stephens County's Snow Field, Southern Pacific Survey. The operator is Richey & Co. Inc.

Palo Pinto County's Miff Field will be seeing more drilling activity when RAW Energy Corp. of Weatherford starts making hole for the No. 1 John Ritchie four miles southeast of the Brad community. With projected total depth of 4,900 feet, the well is in a 367-acre lease, TP&RR Survey.

Location has been staked for a 5,000-ft. developmental well in the Calabria Field, Palo Pinto County. Designated as the No. 2 Hagler, the well is 12 miles south of Mineral Wells in a 304-acre lease in the W. Beddo Survey. Southern Crude Oil Resources of Fort Worth is the operator. Gas production in the Atoka Conglomerate Formation is the objective.

A new restaurant will replace Old Rip, an Eastland landmark. The old cafe building on East Main has been purchased by Jim Martin of Austin, and will be moved from the site. A new 3500 sq. ft. wood frame building with cedar siding will be constructed. The new restaurant is expected to open in mid-January, and will feature steak, pizza, and homemade baked items.

A Rape Crisis Seminar will be held at the Eastland High School cafeteria Dec. 9 and 10. The Friday session will begin at 7:30 p.m. and the Saturday session at 9:00 a.m. The meetings will be conducted by Jane Bingham, Director of the Rape Crisis Center in Ft. Worth, and Carolyn Key Jones, Counselor of the Center. The public is urged to attend this vital and informative program. Further information may be obtained from Lavern Key in the 91st District Court, Ph. 629-1797.

The Eastland Kiwanis Fun Run and Ride will be Dec 3, 1983. A number of trophies will be presented. Advance tickets may be obtained from Kiwanis members. Money raised will be used to buy Christmas presents for underprivileged children.

A new car and truck Wash is being built just east of the Bowling Center on East Main, with an opening planned for the last of December. Owner Russell Walker has a number of special features planned, such as the high water pressure of the spray. The car wash will be 50 cents, and a vacuum the same price. Bill changers will be available.

People n Things

THANKSGIVING Day, 1983, was the date of the first killing frost in our area. The ground was white early Thursday as folks began stirring and beginning preparations for turkey cooking. Thermometers dropped to around 30 degrees before day break.

Tree leaves have been falling and turning red and pink and brown for some time. They're particularly attractive down Rising Star way after you pass the Rudolph Schaefer place. Guess we'll all be inundated with leaves now that frost has visited us.

THANKSGIVING does a lot for preserving the tradition of the American family. Like Christmas, Thanksgiving is a time for family gatherings and giving thanks for the heritage that we Americans enjoy. Truly, it's hard to be humble if you're an American - and a Texan besides.

For the bounty of our dinner tables, even in troubled times, we can all be doubly thankful.

THURSDAY MARKED the beginning of a big football week - the Cowboys on Thanksgiving Day, Cisco in a playoff game on Friday and the UofT-A&M game on Saturday and, of course, another big day of football on Sunday.

We listened while some of the folks around the television discussed the Cowboy pass defense Thursday. After a time, one observer had a pretty good comment when he said: "Landry has been the Cowboy coach for more than 20 years and they've won a lot of games and it's just possible that he knows as much or more about pass defense than I do."

Silence bespoke agreement.

POLICE CHIEF Billy Rains was on vacation during the past week and, we heard, he was out in the deer hunting country. Oil Man Donald Gorr bagged a nice buck in time for Thanksgiving while hunting near Cisco and south of town. Coach John Parchman had several good shots at turkeys recently, according to Rick Whitley, one of his hunting partners. Steve Bailey of Austin came to town in time to help his grandparents, the Dizzy Deans, eat a wild turkey dinner at noon Thursday.

THE SECOND opinion came after x-rays and an examination. "Let's not operate - let's do a lot of exercising it." That's the verdict that CHS Footballer Glen Starr, who suffered a knee injury in a football game a month or so ago, got Tuesday when he and his dad, Travis, visited a doctor in Big D - the same doctor who operated on David Seabourn's knee after he sustained an injury.

The first opinion suggested that a torn cartilage was the problem and surgery was necessary. They'll go with the second opinion, we were informed.

THE WESTBOUND Water District, which had its beginning in September, 1979, has turned out to be a pretty substantial company. Initially, a hundred or so folks signed up to buy water if a government loan and grant could be obtained to run rural lines from Lake Leon and Lake Cisco.

This past week, we did a little checking and learned that Westbound now has 418 customers - 292 using Lake Cisco water and 126 using Lake Leon water. Pretty good growth, huh?

Many of the customers have alternate water sources - wells, lakes, tanks - that they use for gardens and lawns. And they use the Westbound water for their homes.

Water is a pretty precious commodity - a fact that you notice when nothing happens as a faucet is turned on.

THE ROBERT Turners of Plainview spent Tuesday night with Mrs. RT's parents, the Ed Bradshaws. They were en route to College Station for a visit with his parents and to see Texas A&M. Like his wife Leisa, Robert is a graduate of Texas A&MU where his dad is a prof. The Jim Grahams had their children, Plans were announced today for the week-long celebration of National Home Care Week slated for November 27 through December 3, 1983 by Nancy Clark, R.N. director of Eastland Manor Home Health Service.

The week has been set aside to pay tribute to the thousands of dedicated individuals throughout America whose efforts allow more than two million elderly, infirm, disabled or dying persons to receive the health and social services they need in the comfort and privacy of their own home. These home care workers include registered nurses, physical, occupational and speech therapists, medical-social service worker and home health aides.

In an effort to build community awareness of home health care and its services in Eastland County, Eastland Manor Home Health Service has planned during National Home Care Week the following events:

November 28-Chamber of Commerce Day & Eastland Senior Citizens Center noon program; November 29-Bouttoniere Day, a contest will be conducted, listen to our local radio stations for details; November 30 Ride-A-Long Program; December 1 Eastland Manor Nursing Home family, friends and all of community are welcome to attend; December 2 Ballon Release at 2 pm, contest will be conducted, listen to our local radio stations for details.

In announcing home care week in Eastland County, Ms Nancy Clark said: "Home health care is a proud calling. Although home health is a tradition spanning over one hundred years, it has often been called one of America's best kept secrets. We want to let the people of Eastland County know about home health care and the wide range of services we provide to the community. As Congressman Claude Pepper has stated, the providers of home health care services place 'dignity and the meaning of human life and human health and happiness as their primary goals.' That's our goal as well. Our concern is for the individual."

Eastland Manor Home Health Service has selected a theme for this year's home care week celebration that they say sums up the most distinct advantage of home care over the other forms of health care. As Ms. Nancy Clark noted in closing, "Our theme is 'There's no place like home,' and we think most people really believe that."

National Home Care Week Set Nov. 27-Dec. 3

President Proclaims Home Week

President Ronald Reagan and the Congress of the United States have proclaimed the week of November 27 through December 3, 1983, as National Home Health Care week. Federal expenditures on Medicare and Medicaid, two of the government's largest programs serving the elderly, and disabled, are expected to exceed $75 billion dollars in 1983, about two out of every ten dollars spent on health care in this nation. Over the past fourteen years, the number of home health agencies participating in Medicare has increased by two-thirds, and there are now more than 4,000 certified providers of home care.

In Service

Navy Seaman Recruit Jim Kanady, son of Loretta Kanady of Cisco, has completed recruit training at the Naval Training Center, Orlando, Fla.

During the eight-week training cycle, trainees studied general military subjects designed to prepare them for further academic and on-the-job training in one of the Navy's 85 basic occupational fields.

Included in their studies were seamanship, close order drill, Naval history and first aid. Personnel who complete this course of instruction are eligible for three hours of college credit in Physical Education and Hygiene.

has been the gift of long life. At the turn of the century, the elderly represented 2% of the total population in America. Today, their numbers have increased to 11% and by the year 2000, they will make up 15% of the population.

The transition to old age can be a rewarding experience, one that we can anticipate with enthusiasm and with dread. Like every stage in life, it has its own challenges and potentials. At best, it offers rich possibilities for creativity and active participation. At least, it should be a dignified satisfying period. Eastland Manor Home Health Service is committed to making the transition into old age as smooth and rewarding as possible by offering home health services to the residents of this community.

31 Blocks Of City Streets Improved

The city street departments seal coated 31 and a half blocks or 11,340 linear feet of streets during the past summer months, City Manager Mike Moore reported to the City Council at their meeting last Tuesday night.

The work cost a total of $34,294.26, including $18,971.75 for materials from the city's general fund, $5,472.51 for materials from the revenue sharing fund, and $9,800 for equipment and maintenance.

The street department was able to do the paving work at a big savings over costs had it been contracted because equipment had been accumulated for use in a continuing program, Mr. Moore said.

Plans are already underway for another street improvement program in 1984, as soon as weather permits, the city manager said. He hopes the cost will be less because of the equipment now owned by the city.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CISCO, TEXAS THAT:

SECTION 1: It shall be unlawful for any person to keep, maintain, or confine swine of any kind, in any number, or in any manner, within the City Limits of the City of Cisco, Texas.

SECTION 4: All ordinances, or parts thereof, in conflict with this ordinance are hereby superceded and repealed.
