Prison Riot Yields Tales Of Horror

Inmates Slaughter Inmates

A-J Wire Services
SANTA FE, N.M. — Officials at the still-smoldering New Mexico State Penitentiary spent Monday pulling bodies out of the prison ruins where racial vendettas among drug-crazed inmates fueled one of America's bloodiest prison riots.

Warden Jerry Griffin said, late Monday, that the death toll certified by the state medical examiner's office was 35, but National Guard Lt. Col. Bobby Carman said he saw "at least three bodies and there might have been a couple more" in the gymnasium, where officials were unable to search because of intense heat from a fire.

Seven of the victims died of drug overdose. Others were victims of smoke inhalation or burns.

Some bodies were burned beyond recognition, and surviving inmates told prison officials they could expect to find more victims in the prison gymnasium and a cellblock, which were still burning Monday. Damage was estimated at up to $40 million, which would make it the costliest prison riot in U.S. history. New Mexico inmates said that after the riot broke out, early Saturday, executioners snatched some prisoners from their cells and tortured them with blowtorches, axes and metal rods. Some were beheaded, they said.

Prison officials said the rioters ransacked prison offices and found confidential files. That is when the blood-bath began, the officials added, as the inmates rounded up informers.

"There was an execution squad of seven prisoners," a hooded inmate said.

Chief Warrant Officer Alfred Ortiz, a member of the National Guard body detail, helped take 22 bodies to Bernalillo County Medical Center, in Albuquerque, on Sunday night. He said one of the dead

"Assassination Squad"
 Dr. Marc Orner, psychologist at the prison, said some prisoners claimed that most of the deaths were caused by an "assassination squad" of inmates. Orner said prison officials were unable to confirm the existence of the death squad.

With more victims expected to be pulled from the bloodstained rubble, authorities predicted that the death toll would surpass the 43 killed in the 1971 riot at Attica in upstate New York, the worst uprising in modern U.S. history.

 The 36-hour rampage of burning, convict fighting and reprisals ranged from gang rapes to mutilations, authorities said. Another 15 prisoners were listed as missing, but officials said they doubted that any had escaped.

The injury list included 57 inmates and nine prison employees. All the dead were convicts. There were 1,136 inmates in the prison when the riot broke out, and officials estimated that 250 were involved in the most serious violence.

State Police Maj. Don Moberly told UPI some of the grisly killings and mutilations were racially oriented and others were the result of reprisals against suspected inmate informants, identified from pilfered prison records.

"They had snitch riots and they had race riots," Moberly said.

Corrections Commissioner Felix Rodriguez, a former warden at the institution, said he felt the killings "had nothing to do with racial problems. I would say that they got so high on drugs they just started killing each other," he said.

Bonehead Club Hails Anthony Dollar Coin

DALLAS (UPI) — It was worth a dollar, but the U.S. Government could barely give it away. No one, it seemed, wanted the Susan B. Anthony dollar coin.

For the lack of foresight shown by the U.S. Mint, the Treasury Department, Congress and feminist groups that designed, commissioned, distributed and promoted the coin, the Dallas Bonehead Club has an honor: Bonehead of the Year.

"Our newest coin, the Susan B. Anthony dollar, is a textbook example of the government's ability to do the wrong thing in the wrong way," the Bonehead Club said.

The coin, similar in size to a quarter, never caught on with the public, and few remain in circulation.

Economist Howard Ruff, author of "How to Prosper During the Coming Bad Years," will accept the award on behalf of the federal government and feminist groups.

The Bonehead Club, with the motto of "to learn more and more about less and less until eventually we know everything about nothing," annually honors the unusual and hapless.

Previous Bonehead winners include Andrea Weitman, the first female Boy Scout, President Richard Nixon and Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder.

Rash Of Public Office Filings Beat Deadline

A RASH of last-minute entries Monday marked the close of filings for state and county offices here and increased the competition in several races.

When all the dust had settled following the 6 p.m. Monday filing deadline, additional candidates had emerged in the already crowded sheriff's race, two county commissioner contests and one race for constable.

Two sheriff's candidates — Republican Charles Southerland and Democrat Willy Turner — officially launched their campaigns at news conferences Monday afternoon.

And Eliseo Solis, a former Raza Union official, announced Monday that he will seek the county commissioners post for Precinct 3.

Both sheriff candidates criticized incumbent C.H. "Choc" Blanchard, who is seeking his fourth term as sheriff.

commissioner contests and one race for constable.

Two sheriff's candidates — Republican Charles Southerland and Democrat Willy Turner — officially launched their campaigns at news conferences Monday afternoon.

And Eliseo Solis, a former Raza Union official, announced Monday that he will seek the county commissioners post for Precinct 3.

Both sheriff candidates criticized incumbent C.H. "Choc" Blanchard, who is seeking his fourth term as sheriff.

Southerland, a 13-year veteran of the Lubbock Police Department, called the current operations in the sheriff's department "a lopsided organization."

Jail Spending Criticized
 According to Southerland, "A lot of money is being poured into the new jail, but the rest of the sheriff's department has been forgotten."

Southerland said, as an example, that the current chief deputy, who is second in command under Blanchard, draws approximately $3,000 less salary than the jail administrator.

Further evidence of the imbalance favoring the jail, Southerland said, is the fact that younger, untrained individuals are being hired as jailers for the same base salary paid other deputies.

"We went from one extreme to another with our jail," Southerland said. "I think if it continues under the same operation and with the same system, the jail will someday become a burden on taxpayers."

Outsider Proposed
 Southerland, noting that all other candidates have been employed in the sheriff's department, said, "A new person from the outside comes in with new ideas."

One of Southerland's new ideas would be to reorganize the sheriff's office under three divisions, covering the jail, administration and patrol. Under his organizational plan, Southerland said there would be three equally paid supervisors, who would all work directly under the chief deputy.

Southerland said that his proposed organizational plan should provide better patrol coverage in the county's rural areas.

The 47-year-old Southerland is a native of Brownfield and served 17 years in the Army before joining the police department in 1966. He was made a corporal in 1977 and has been a member of the department SWAT team.

Turner ripped into the incumbent for what he described as mismanagement of law enforcement and jail administration during the 10 years Blanchard has been in office.

Campaign co-chairman Bob Van Sycle announced at Turner's campaign opening that the campaign "will be open, direct, issue-oriented and fair — but it will be tough."

"I would like to stand here and tell you you have a good sheriff who has a good program going," Turner, 46, a former

Goals For 80s To Highlight Town Meetings
 CIVIC LEADERS hope to get input from thousands of Lubbock residents in developing the goals for the city in the 1980s in a series of meetings held in 10 locations across town tonight.

Last fall, civic leaders established several goals for the city in the coming decade, but Chamber of Commerce president John Logan stresses that "these are only suggestions. We want the people's input to decide just what we need to do."

Among the goals listed and attained during the 1970s, were the construction of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center, teaching hospital and airport, and the development of the Canyon Lakes.

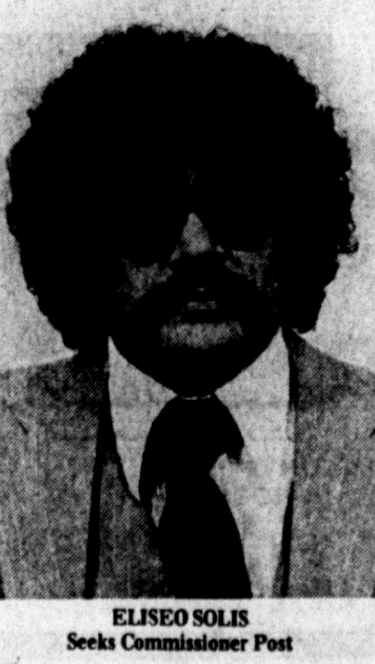

A slide presentation outlining some of the suggested goals for the next decade will be shown at each of the meetings tonight. All meetings are similar, and persons are urged to attend the gathering closest to them. About 4,000 persons attended the meetings 10 years ago.

Tonight's meetings are set for 7:30 p.m., and will be held at Alderson Junior High, Atkins Junior High, Dunbar High School, Evans Junior High, Hardwick Elementary, Hutchinson Junior High and Thompson Junior High.

An additional meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Lubbock High School.

Tech Officials Cool To Cutback Request

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff
GOV. BILL Clements' requested 5 percent cut in the number of state employees at Texas Tech University and its medical school is receiving only lukewarm support from school officials, who will present resolutions on the issue to the board of regents Friday.

The resolutions were requested last month by Clements, who asked all state agencies and state colleges and universities to adopt statements agreeing to reduce the number of state employees by 5 percent during each year of the 1980-81 biennium.

But the resolutions drawn up by Tech officials offer less than enthusiastic support for the proposed cuts.

Meat Ax Approach Opposed
 "We support the governor's program for improving the efficiency of state government," said Dan Williams, Tech's vice president for finance and administration. "But, we can't take the meat ax approach" to reducing the number of employees, he added.

"Through turnover and attrition, we occasionally will have the opportunity to reduce and consolidate staff. But if a reduction will seriously jeopardize a program or cut off a service, then we can't do it," Williams said.

The university's chief financial officer said the resolution university officials will present to the regents stresses that Tech already has had a 6.2 percent drop in the number of employees during January to December 1979.

"And in fall 1978, before the governor was inaugurated, our physical plant eliminated 55 positions," Williams noted. The loss of those 55 positions should be included in the governor's accounting, he said. "We shouldn't be penalized by not being able to count all those people. We were way ahead of the governor."

Tagged "Most Wasteful"
 Clements, who has called the state's university and college system the most wasteful part of the state bureaucracy, wants staff cuts in classified employees, such as maintenance and clerical workers, plus faculty and administrative positions. The Legislature, however, Williams notes, has indicated that staff reductions only should apply to classified employees.

"The governor has gone further (in his request)," Williams said. "But legally, he has no real basis on which to force us to do it."

"He says, 'You will reduce the number of employees or tell me why.' The Legislature says we should attempt to reduce the staff."

As of January 1979, the date Clements says state institutions and agencies should use in calculating their number of employees, Texas Tech had 1,167 classified employees and 1,146 faculty, professional and administrative staffers working for the university and being paid from state funds. A 5 percent reduction in these staffs would mean 116 employees would have to be cut.

State-paid employees at Tech's Health Sciences Center, which includes the school of medicine and affiliated regional centers, number 552 classified and 315 professional, administrative and faculty positions. Forty-four medical school employees would have to be cut to implement the governor's proposed reduction plan.

Khomeini Swears In Bani Sadr

By The Associated Press
ABOLHASSAN Bani Sadr became Iran's first president, Monday night, at the Tehran hospital where ailing Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini swore him in and endorsed him before a television audience.

Earlier in the day, the 79-year-old Khomeini condemned the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and swore "unconditional support" for the Moslem Afghan rebels.

At the hospital ceremony, Bani Sadr pledged to Khomeini and the broadcast audience that he would work to rid the country of hundreds of years of corruption brought on by successive monarchical governments.

In return, Khomeini promised to endorse and support Bani Sadr's electoral victory as long as the new president followed the sacred principles of Islam, abided by the constitution and helped the poor and the oppressed.

Khomeini's public display of support for Bani Sadr should provide the 46-year-old president with enormous political strength, at least in the initial stages of his four-year term.

During his brief tenure as Iran's foreign minister last fall, Bani Sadr displayed a more moderate approach to the American hostage crisis than his successor, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, has.

Militants occupying the U.S. Embassy in Tehran have rejected all efforts to win release of the 50 Americans, who began their fourth month in captivity, Monday, insisting that the deposed shah first be returned to stand trial for corruption. The government endorsed their demands, but has agreed to establishment of an international commission to investigate alleged crimes of toppled Shah

Homeowners Reminded To Claim Energy Credit

By Ray DeCrane
(Seventh in a Series)

The energy credit, which was first made available on tax returns a year ago, is still around. And if you haven't used up all of the credit on the same residence, it will still be available until 1987.

Both homeowners and renters may claim a credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 of outlays for making their homes more energy efficient. Any part of that $2,000 spent that wasn't claimed on 1978 tax returns may be claimed for expenditures made in 1979. Once you have used up the maximum of $2,000 in spending, no further credit is possible unless you move into another principal residence before 1987.

There are two types of energy credits. The first is for energy conservation items. This is the one that applies to most people and allows you to take credit for funds spent in:

INSULATING your home. This includes insulation for walls, ceilings, floors, roof and water heaters.

INSTALLING storm or thermopane windows and doors to the outside of your home.

CAULKING or weatherstripping the exterior doors and windows.

BUYING a more fuel-efficient burner for your furnace.

CORRECTING flue openings with devices that make your heating system more efficient.

REPLACING a gas pilot light on your furnace with a mechanical or electrical ignition system.

INSTALLING thermostats that cut back on the amount of energy, or meters that show the cost of energy you are using.

This produces a maximum credit (a reduction against your tax) of $300 ($2,000 x 15 percent). Any part of the credit that was not used last year may be claimed this year if your spending qualifies you for the full balance. If you had no claim last year, you could be eligible for the full $300 of credits on your current return.

The second part of the credit is for the more exotic expenditures for solar, geothermal energy-source items, even for the installation of a windmill that generates electricity for your home.

The maximum outlay that may be considered for these items is $10,000, and the rate of credit is 20 percent, for a top credit of $2,000.

When the energy credit is claimed, Form 5695 must be completed and filed with your Form 1040. Form 1040A may not be used when this credit is claimed.

Commissioner Outlines Issues

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Railroad Commissioner John Poerner says the major issue in his Democratic race with Rep. Buddy Temple will be what he called "conflicts of interest."

"It is amazing to me that an individual with all the built-in and inescapable conflicts that Buddy Temple clearly has would choose the Railroad Commission for his first statewide race," Poerner told a news conference Monday after filing as a candidate for re-election.

Poerner, 47, a former Texas House member, was appointed to the commission in January 1978 and became chairman in 1979.

Poerner said the use of regulated motor carriers and trains and production of oil and gas on millions of acres of timber land are just a few of the vast Temple-Eastex Corp. interests that come under the Railroad Commission.

"There is really only one major issue between Mr. Temple and me — I have no conflicts of interest, personal, family or corporate. On the other hand, his conflicts are so numerous that it would be virtually impossible for him to remove them," Poerner said.

He pledged to continue his two-year record as "a sound, conservative state administrator and advocate of a strong Texas economy."

"My number one goal, if elected, is to make it possible to move people faster and cheaper, by using less energy, wherever it is practical and possible," Poerner said.

Poerner listed other goals if he is elected to a full term on the powerful three-member commission that regulates the oil and gas industry as well as railroad and motor transportation.

He said he would work for:

- A "bullet train" service between Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio as one means of promoting more passenger service.
- I want to help reverse the federal concept of throwing roadblocks against our own oil production, and this effort must be continued at all times.
- An improved bus system to serve the smaller communities throughout the state so that all our citizens have adequate public transportation.

Chevron energy report:

In 1979, Chevron made a nickel on a sales dollar.

But, most people think we made ten times that much.

A recent independent nationwide survey found that people believe, on the average, that oil company profits are about 57¢ on each sales dollar. That just isn't the case.

Actually, Chevron's 1979 profit on each dollar of U.S. petroleum sales was 5.1¢—about a nickel. Worldwide it was 5.3¢. (This compares to a 9-month average of 5.6¢ for all other major U.S. industries.)

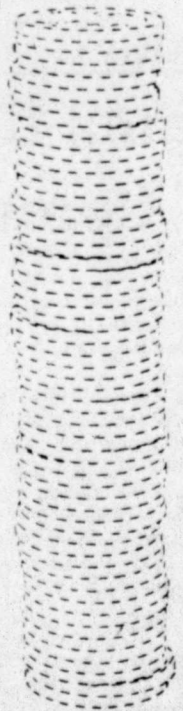

Part of Chevron's profit, of course, went back to our shareholders. The remaining profit and other cash from operations provided the funds for Chevron's expenditures in such areas as exploration and development of oil and gas fields, refineries, and transportation facilities.

In the U.S., these Chevron expenditures were equivalent to 10.7¢ per dollar of U.S. petroleum sales, more than double our U.S. profit.

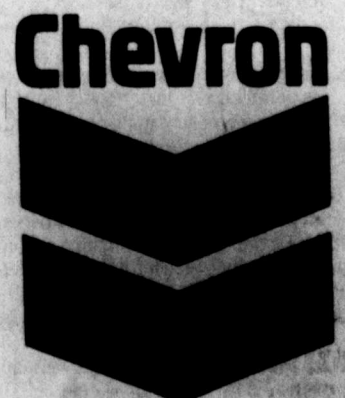

Thank you for listening.

57¢ What most people think is oil company profit on a sales dollar, after taxes.*

5.1¢ Actual 1979 Chevron U.S. profit on a sales dollar, after taxes.

AN EDITORIAL:

Latter Day Ethics Evolution

COMPARED WITH the major congressional scandals of past years, the formal accusation of misconduct filed against Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., clearly falls into the small potatoes category.

But the decision of the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to initiate a full investigation represents a watershed in the evolution of ethical standards on Capitol Hill.

Both House and Senate established ethics committees more than 10 years ago, but in the ensuing years those panels generally have restricted themselves to perfunctory activities that wouldn't bruise oversized egos or tarnish cherished political reputations.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the Wilson case lies in the fact that it represents the first time either ethics committee has undertaken an investigation of a legislator on its own initiative and has pursued the matter to the point of publicly accusing the target of the probe of serious violations.

Public displays of Congress' dirty laundry have been confined to cases where outside pressures made full-scale, open investigations an uncomfortable but unavoidable alternative.

The first major probe conducted by the Senate's ethics committee involved charges against then-Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn. But the panel opened its investigations only after months of damaging disclosures from columnist Jack Anderson.

The more recent investigations conducted by both ethics committees into allegations of influence peddling by Korean businessman Tongsun Park were a grudging response to allegations in the newspapers, primarily the Washington Post.

In cases involving Sens. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., and Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., the committee acted only after embittered and estranged wives forced the disclosure of information that virtually mandated probes.

THE WILSON CASE is distinguished by the lack of any public pressure on the House committee, whose initial suspicions reportedly were aroused by information its own investigators developed during the Korean influence peddling probe.

Wilson is charged with accepting "under circumstances which might be construed by reasonable persons as influencing the performance of government duties ($15,000 from a man who had a direct interest in legislation before the Congress."

Wilson also is accused of converting almost $29,000 worth of campaign funds "to his personal use."

Neither the House nor the Senate committee is in danger of being mistaken for an unleashed tiger. To its credit, however, the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct appears to be seriously pursuing the case—a possible landmark in the troubled history of ethical reform on Capitol Hill.

AN EDITORIAL:

You Play Role In '80 Goals

TO GET ANYWHERE, a community has to know where it is going and how to get there. And why.

Lubbock residents have an opportunity tonight to help chart their city's course for the next 10 years. Neighborhood meetings are scheduled in nine locations at 7:30 p.m. to discuss Lubbock's "Goals for the '80s."

The goals, when finally adopted, must be flexible and realistic enough to adapt to changes as they occur during the new decade.

But they will be meaningless unless they accurately express a communitywide consensus of the kind of city the people want to live in and work toward.

Broad participation in tonight's goal-setting process is therefore extremely important.

TENTATIVE GOALS, as a starting point for reaction and discussion, already have been published as a result of a year-long study by citizen committees.

Those suggestions, which were published in The Avalanche-Journal Sunday, merit reading by every resident. If they need to be changed, modified, deleted, elaborated upon or added to, now is the time to speak out.

If the goals are to work any magic—and they can—they must spring from the ground-roots upward. Committee '80, which directly involves dozens of Lubbockites from all walks of life and every part of the city, has attempted to capture the essence of that community spirit.

The process demands the review and input of every informed citizen, though, in order to be a mandate to public officials, the Chamber of Commerce and others who will bear the responsibility for implementing programs to carry out the goals.

BY THEIR NATURE, goals embody the very best hopes and dreams of an individual, an enterprise or a people—dreams that are tempered by reality so that they become attainable.

Very few, if any, goals will have 100 percent approval, but the overall thrust of the goals as a group should be what the people as a whole can enthusiastically support.

It is in that spirit that each of us, as an interested part of the whole, should make every effort to attend tonight's meeting in our own neighborhood and participate in the purest form of democracy.

If tonight's work is done well, each of us will be a part of something great in the 1980s.

M. STANTON ELANS:

Kama River Only Tip Of Commerce Iceberg

WASHINGTON—The Carter administration's decision to embargo technology sales to the Soviet Union is a welcome—if belated—acknowledgment that commerce of this type has crucial military implications.

Triggering the decision was the disclosure that vehicles from the gigantic Kama River truck plant—built for the Soviets with hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of our technology—are being used by Moscow in its invasion of Afghanistan.

The shutdown came however only after months of hammering on the issue by export official Lawrence Brady and other critics of strategic trade with Moscow.

HITHERTO, THE administration response to all such charges has been to argue that military use of Kama River was nothing to worry about, and to stage a long-running guerrilla campaign against the dissident Brady.

As a result of this conflict, Brady last month resigned from Commerce, charging that the pro-trade policy within the Department continues despite the President's embargo.

At a press briefing announcing his resignation, Brady stated that, even under the embargo, Commerce officials were avidly seeking ways and means to keep U.S. technology flowing to the Soviets.

He released a memo from a Commerce official which recommended that the Department "develop and implement a policy (for permitting) hardship" exceptions to the embargo.

BRADY ALSO revealed that a Department of Defense memo had been sent to Commerce Jan. 11, spelling out the "military contribution" of U.S. technology generally to Soviet deployments in Afghanistan and Europe.

This memo is classified as "secret." Brady said it fully vindicated his previous testimony about the military uses of Kama River, and contended it should be released for public inspection.

In view of these developments, Brady voiced the suspicion that the high-technology embargo might be a PR ploy rather than a serious policy.

Lending credence to this view is a report in the New York Times, which quotes unnamed administration sources as saying Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick had been given a hurry-up order to find eight export licenses which could be announced as having been denied under the President's embargo.

THE TIMES reports that Klutznick was given one hour to come up with the denials.

However, the paper says, the news conference announcing this feat "proved embarrassing when Klutznick acknowledged under questioning from reporters that the licenses would have been denied anyway, even without the new policy."

Also supporting the Brady view is the Times report that the embargo was imposed over the objections of Klutznick, and that the Commerce Department was even then battling to go ahead with the export of computer parts to Kama River.

As frequently noted, secrecy and PR games have marked administration handling of Kama River and strategic trade from the beginning.

IT IS NOW conceded by all concerned that Kama River has been used for military purposes, but numerous questions remain.

Why did the Carter administration wait until the invasion of Afghanistan to move against this lethal trade, when the military potential of Kama River has been known for months?

Is the crackdown really serious, or is it being undermined by Commerce officials? What else is being traded to Moscow, which we will find out about in a future act of bloody aggression?

To get answers to these questions, the veil of secrecy that has been draped over the issue of strategic trade should be stripped away.

To accomplish that, a Congress which has remained passive in the face of Commerce covers-ups will have to dig in and provide the necessary information to the American people.

"NOW TO GET IT ON THE TRACKS"

Letters to the Editor

Drafting Of Women Seen As Prime Goal Of ERA

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Why are we talking about drafting women today? Because the women's lib movement has promoted the notion that women must be treated absolutely equally with men in all things—and this applies to the draft and to military combat.

If we do not let our voices be heard immediately, Congress will think that women's lib is speaking for all of us.

In the morning edition of The Avalanche-Journal Jan. 31, a front page article quoted Mary Grete, President of the American Assn. of University Women saying, "We did urge him (President Carter) to make his decision as quickly as possible so that it won't be identified with the Equal Rights Amendment."

For her information many, many Americans already know that registering and drafting women will be automatic with the passage of the ERA. This is one issue concerning the ERA that the proponents have always boasted would come with the ERA—the law of "absolute sameness."

Entire recorded history teaches us that battles are not won by coed armies or coed navies. Even Hitler and the Japanese, when they ran short of manpower, found it more efficient to use under- and over-age men than females in combat. No one wants to go into combat! Combat is hell on earth. It is inhumane and contemptible to send women into combat knowing that the average woman has only 60 percent of the physical strength of the average man. It is bad enough that our young men have had to go. Young women in POW camps would be heartbreaking.

Send telegrams now to President Carter, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, Sen. John Tower and U.S. Rep. Kent Hance. Address it Washington, D.C. I do not think we can complain if this issue becomes law if we do not speak up now.

P.S. This is an open note to Sarah Weddington, women's aide to the President. Sarah, how about letting some of who represent traditional women into the White House as you have others?

U.S. Riding To Poor House On Oil Truck, He Claims

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
Sometimes when words get mixed with emotions, the words don't fit the feelings as the feelings are beyond expression.

That fancy paragraph means I sometimes wag my jawbone too fast and yell too loud.

The gist of our present frame of mind reflects the countless malefactions we aimed at the Texas oil industry while Uncle Sam was selling Wyoming crude for $42 a barrel.

New Jerseyans are still unhappy about oil prices. With fuel costs at present levels, it's eat or heat for many elderly citizens.

However, when the United States government spins a legislative web around Texas, when Congress introduces bills for "windfall profit tax," regulates new oil old oil mumbo-jumbo at the well head and then sells oil on the spot market for $42 a barrel, then somebody in Washington, D.C. has some talk explaining to do.

In this tri-state area, (New York, New Jersey and Connecticut) the average price for gasoline is $1.06 a gallon, heating oil is 86 to 90 cents a gallon. Natural gas is up 11 1/2 percent from last year. One major company has increased gasoline prices twice in one week. The last hike was 5 cents a gallon.

There must be someone, somehow, somewhere who can bring all factions together so the American people won't be riding to the poor house in an oil truck.

Khomeini Not Real Culprit In U.S. Foreign Policy

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
I was amused at the front page coverage of large profits earned from the sale of Khomeini dart boards and door mats.

Once again patriotic Americans are gunning for the wrong culprit. Since when has Khomeini been responsible for U.S. foreign policy?

Lubbock Man Says UN Is Answer To Mideast Crisis

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
President Carter's State of the Union address contained several disturbing implications which I am sure you will wish to question and oppose.

His call for authority to reinstate registration is merely the first step in the resurrection of a peacetime draft. He does not need an act of Congress to reinstate registration, only to reinstate induction. Why then does he ask for Congressional cooperation?

My guess is he is testing the political water. If there is a negative public response, he hopes to spread the displeasure around. He is probably also sending a message to the Soviet Union.

This brings up the most disturbing part of Carter's speech—the fundamental assumption of his foreign policy. He has thrown over detente because he considers the Soviet moves in Afghanistan as a threat to America's vital interest.

Our interest is not tied to Afghanistan. Our only commitment to this tumultuous political entity is through our pledge to the UN.

When will we learn that it is not our responsibility to maintain harmony and peace in the world? This procrustean task is the legal responsibility of the UN. We can participate if necessary with other nations in joint sanctions, but I doubt the UN will act. The USSR is moving in an area contiguous to its border. The turmoil in Afghanistan is chronic and related to causes of long standing. The problems cannot be shoved into western equations of good democrats versus bad communists.

Once again we are tipping our toes into a fray without analyzing the complexities of the problem or the long-range consequences. We are satisfied that the Moslem rebels must be good guys because they are fighting Russians. This kind of reductionism got us into Vietnam.

We must stop saying the Middle East represents an area of vital interest to the U.S. The only thing vital to us in this area is oil. The only reason we need this oil is because we, as a nation and as individuals, engage in an orgy of petroleum consumption that makes Penthouse look like Readers Digest.

With a modest conservation program at home, say raising the driving limit to 21 and limiting each family to one car, we would be free of dependence on Mideast oil.

When we examine the Carter program closely it boils down to a call for young men to spill their guts in the sands of the Mideast so that other Americans can continue to enjoy the dubious pleasure of driving high-powered gas guzzlers, exceeding the 55 mph speed limit and owning several cars plus an RV. Do we really want our sons blown to bits so that young, strapping teenagers can ride rather than walk to football practice?

If this is what we mean about asking the last full measure of devotion, pardon me while I bail out of this lunatic limousine called the American way of life.

A.C.E. Spokesman Offers An Explanation On Film Choice

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:
This is an open letter to Concerned Parents of Lubbock.

A.C.E. members would like to offer a few words of explanation concerning the film, King Kong. This film was chosen from a list of films recommended for children's viewing.

Neither A.C.E. members nor the theater personnel were given an opportunity to preview it locally. No one was more shocked at the language in the film than we were.

We would like to apologize to you, the concerned parents of Lubbock, and ask you to forgive our accepting a rating made by someone else. The overcrowding and the film breakage were irritants to you and we also apologize for those.

We would like to thank you for responding so well to our over-zealous selling of tickets. You handled the time change beautifully.

We are concerned for your children and the things to which they are exposed. We deeply regret that we the members of A.C.E. were the cause of your anxiety.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Fems Go For Top

DALLAS—Women have always been great ones for meetings, seminars and how-to huddles—and they still are. But now they're not talking children; they're talking challenges.

No more trading tuna casserole recipes for today's female; she's too busy comparing employment goals. The briefcase has replaced the needlepoint (and the diaper bag), the better to help her tune in to her chances of making it in a man's world.

And she's finding out that they're still just that—chancy.

She goes to all those meetings, but nowadays she's getting a more realistic picture of what it's like out there. What a program speaker has to say isn't always what she wants to hear.

SHE'S LEARNING, for instance, that the old-time practice of paying women less than men still goes, that females still earn 58 percent of male salaries, even though the pay is for the same kind of work.

She's learning that women may outnumber men in the work force, but they're still taking orders, not giving them. And that, when her boss bumps into a financial squeeze, she's the first one to get bounced.

She's also learning that her chances of changing that around by crashing the executive suite are not what anybody who's honest about it would exactly call a piece of cake.

That's because, barring a few highly touted exceptions, the only way a woman makes it to the top in the business world is to work like a dog and let the chips (called husband, children and personal life) fall where they may.

COMPETITION FOR senior management jobs these days is worse than tough; it's terrible. And you almost have to be a little on the weird side, even to want one.

That's what the head of E. F. Hutton investment company told a two-day conference of working women in New York last week. He didn't put it exactly that way (he called it "eccentric"), but the ladies got the message, all right.

There's no way a woman can juggle an executive job and a family, according to George Ball, unless she's willing to make tremendous sacrifices.

If you don't put in more hours, more dedication and more concentration, you just won't make it," he warned them.

"There's no room for balance if you're going to get to the top. You're going to have to accommodate your life to a work week that often averages out to 70 or 80 hours. Every week."

A BIG CHUNK of that is spent traveling, often with male colleagues. And that, he said, brings up a whole new can of worms.

The men's wives don't like it, the women's husbands don't like it, and management is still trying to figure out how to cope with that one.

Another obstacle is family responsibilities. Corporations look at it this way: For men to be married and have children is positive; for women, it's negative.

Period. She can scream her apron strings off that that's not fair, but that's the way it is.

Still, the ladies keep trying. They're organizing (boy, are they organizing) into NOW, the National Committee for Employment Policy, the Labor Department's Women's Bureau, the Older Women's League, Rural American Women, the National Association of Women Religious (sic), the National Gay Task Force, the National Committee on Household Employment, the National Congress of Neighborhood Women, etc., etc. No-body gets left out these days.

WOMEN WITH menial jobs want to improve their working skills, nuns are agitating to move up to the priesthood, farmers' wives want more government support, housewives want rights to half their husbands' income to guarantee them Social Security, pension, retirement and divorce payments, and women over 45 (there will be 36 million of them, by the end of the century) are working for more clout at the polls.

Every one of these groups is optimistic that they'll score big in the '80s. They don't for a minute believe the pollsters who say there's no such thing as a "women's vote"; they think there is and they think it might just elect the next President.

A lot of White House contenders think so, too. Why else do they go to those women's caucuses, meetings, business gatherings, etc.?

Proving, although the ladies might not believe it, that men who want to reach the top have to suffer a little, too.

Incidentally, you rarely hear the likes of Rich Little or other impressionists do imitations of Hope. Something about his snap, crackle and pop is unique, and they can't seem to get it down pat. That, too, is why he pays so much for his writers. I'd guess. Few can lace the lingo into his rhythms. It's a talent in itself.

To that list of authors who stood up much of the time while they wrote—Ernest Hemingway, Thomas Wolfe—add Robin Moore, the creator of "The Green Berets." But with Moore there's a difference. He does it stark naked.

Fishermen Describe Collision

'Missing Order' May Have Caused Disaster

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A crewman from the Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn was waiting for an order to turn — an order that never came — just before the vessel slammed into a tanker three times its size last week, two fishermen testified Monday.

Both Ventrice "Vince" Dyer, 41, and Charles Whitelaw, 21, told federal investigators they overheard discussions among the men they rescued after the collision near the mouth of Tampa Bay where 23 Coast Guardsmen perished.

"I heard one man ask another, 'Why didn't you turn if you knew the boat was coming,'" said Whitelaw, of Floral City, Fla., a deckhand on the shrimp trawler The Bayou. The man who answered replied that "he was waiting on orders to change course," Whitelaw said.

Dyer, also a deckhand on the trawler, gave a similar account of what was discussed by survivors of the Jan. 28 collision of the Blackthorn and the 605-foot tanker Capricorn.

"I heard one fella, said he had seen the ship (Capricorn) and was watching it close in. He was waiting for an order to turn and the order never came," Dyer said.

"I guess it was pretty fast when they closed in," he added.

Dyer and Whitelaw told the Marine Board of Inquiry on the worst peacetime accident in modern Coast Guard history that they didn't take note of what the men looked like because their first concern was saving men floundering about the chilly waters.

The Bayou's skipper, William Parker, 53, of Floral City, Fla., testified the Capricorn cut in front of his vessel just after the collision on the Gulf side of the Sunshine Skyway bridge.

"As I came under the Skyway I noticed sparks and thought someone was welding. Then the Capricorn made a 90-degree turn across my bow," Parker said.

"As I came around Capricorn's stern, I saw the Coast Guard cutter turning over ... the lights were still burning under water."

Even as they testified, ships passing through Tampa Bay were dipping their flags to half-mast to honor the sailors who died. One body was found the night of the wreck, and five others were recovered the next day. A seventh was found late Sunday near the site, but the others are missing.

The Bayou was passing through the channel at the time of the collision. "I saw the sparks (as the ships hit). It looked like somebody had a cutter torch or a welding machine," Dyer said. He said neither he nor the Bayou's captain paid much attention to the sparks at first. "I thought it strange they might be welding or burning going out of the channel."

After the sparks flared, Dyer stepped out of the wheelhouse. "I may have heard a collision alarm. I won't swear I heard whistles."

Then, he said, the Capricorn cut across the channel leading from Tampa Bay to the deep waters of the Gulf of Mexico.

"It made an erratic turn as it was coming across the channel. As we cleared the tanker, we saw the men in the water," Dyer said.

The Bayou's skipper switched on the radio emergency band. "They were hollering 'mayday, collision,'" Dyer said.

Dyer said there were ample lights on the vessels, though he didn't note exactly which ones were burning — "I wasn't driving," he commented.

The fishermen spotted men in the water. "They were scattered over 100 yards ... There were some people on the hull of the Coast Guard vessel, possibly two or three. I did hear some of the guys in the water yelling to get away from the hull," Dyer said.

Eight Convicted In 'Black Tuna' Drug Smuggling Ring Trial

MIAMI (AP) — Eight men accused of running a sophisticated, multi-million dollar drug smuggling ring known as "Black Tuna" were convicted Monday after a 4½-month trial.

The verdicts were handed down after six days of deliberation by a jury of six men and six women.

Three men were named as leaders of the ring: Robert Jay Meister, 40, and Robert Elliot Platshorn, 37, of both Philadelphia and Miami Beach and Eugene and a federal charge of running a "continual-criminal enterprise" that carries a mandatory 10-year prison term but could result in life sentences.

The other five were convicted on charges ranging from conspiracy and racketeering to possession of marijuana and perjury. Two of them disappeared after the trial started. Of the 14 people indicted April 30, 1979, by a Miami federal grand jury, one was never caught. Plea bargaining deals were worked out for four defendants and one is to be tried separately.

Prosecutors said the ring imported $300 million in marijuana into the country in the four years that ended in 1978. The ring was nicknamed "Black Tuna" after the radio code name assigned to its alleged Colombian supplier, who remains hidden in the jungles of Colombia. Ring members wore "Black Tuna" medallions around their necks.

The government said the ring smuggled more than one million pounds of marijuana and at one point was responsible for 8 percent of the nation's smuggling total.

Since the case went to trial, the FBI said it uncovered a plot to disrupt the trial, assassinate the judge and murder a government witness, and a juror was charged with agreeing to accept a bribe. Even as the jury deliberated, one person

Myers, a Tampa seafood importer, was found guilty on all eight counts against him. He could be fined up to $240,000.

Convicted of conspiracy, racketeering and other charges were: Modesto Echezarreta-Cruz, 43, a Key Biscayne auto importer; Randall Gene Fisher, 22, a Fort Lauderdale boat captain; Richard Elliott Grant Jr., 24, of Hollywood, Fla., and Mark Steven Phillips, 31, an executive with a Fort Lauderdale yacht firm.

Carl Jerry London, 38, former mayor of Clarksville, Ga., was convicted of conspiracy and perjury. Each of the five could be sentenced to prison terms ranging from 25 to 58 years and fines ranging from $65,000 to $130,000. Phillips and London escaped custody and were fugitives when the trial ended.

With the alternate seated, the jury had to start over and deliberated another four days before returning its verdicts.

Meister was found guilty of 10 of 12 counts against him and could be fined as much as $270,000. He was found innocent of two counts of marijuana possession and distribution.

Platshorn, was convicted on 14 of 17 counts against him. He is liable for fines totaling $325,000. But he was spared the possibility of a second life term when the jury found him innocent of a kidnap-conspiracy count. He also was acquitted on two charges that he helped out in an at-

Suspect Charged In Shoeshine Parlor Murder

Cleveland Hawkins, 43, of 2403 Fir St. was charged Monday with murder in the stabbing death of a Lubbock man.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy set bond at $50,000.

Bonnie Jewel Cox, 55, of 2642 E. Bates St. was pronounced dead about 1:30 a.m. Saturday at an East Lubbock shoeshine parlor. Police said Cox was stabbed through the heart with a knife witnesses said was about 20 inches long.

Det. Lt. Billy Knox said the stabbing occurred after Cox reportedly poked the suspect with his finger.

Witnesses said the altercation erupted after the suspect warned Cox not to poke him again. The victim suffered a single stab wound in the left side of his back. Police arrested the suspect about 2 a.m. Sunday at a nightclub.

The death was the city's second homicide of the year.

Infant's Death Ruled Homicide

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy has ruled homicide in Saturday's death of a 19-month-old Lubbock County infant.

Authorities were told a car had fallen on the head of the child, Brandon Fansler, shortly after 11 a.m. Saturday at a trailer park just west of the city. The tot died about 1½ hours later at Methodist Hospital. However, LeCroy ordered an autopsy performed in Amarillo, and after receiving results of the tests, returned the homicide ruling.

No arrests had been made by Monday, but officers said the investigation was continuing.

Blind Fan Invited To Attend Game

CRAB ORCHARD, W.Va. (AP) — For most of his life, 58-year-old Joe Minter has followed the fortunes of West Virginia University's basketball and football teams without being able to watch the games.

Blind since birth, Minter's only link with his favorite teams has been through his radio and he rarely misses a game. But Minter will soon be heading for Morgantown to attend his first Mountaineer basketball game when WVU plays on the University of Louisville on Feb. 14. The trip is being sponsored by the Beckley Post-Herald and WVU's Department of Interscholastic Athletics and the Department of Sports Information.

"I've always been interested in WVU basketball. Ever since Gale Catlett, Rod Hundley and Jerry West were there."

Man Hospitalized After Struggle

A struggle Sunday night ended with a 20-year-old Lubbock man being taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital, where he was treated for two stab wounds, then released.

Police questioned a 17-year-old female suspect in connection with the 10:45 p.m. incident in the 2400-block of East 28th Street. However, she was not immediately taken into custody because the man allegedly was intoxicated and had assaulted the teen-ager just before he was stabbed in the arm and upper back.

The victim, whose name was not released, was found by police lying on the floor at a private residence. Reports allege that the man was too intoxicated to be questioned at the scene.

The woman said the man had been drinking with her brother earlier in the day and had fallen asleep at the house. She said she woke the man and was driving him home when he opened her car door and refused to shut it.

The teen-ager drove back to the East 28th Street residence where a fight erupted in the front yard, reports indicate. She said she attacked the man with the knife after he had struck her several times in the face.

A 38-year-old woman told police she was cut on the hand when she tried to stop the fight. Police confiscated the knife at the scene.

In other activity, a 22-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 1 a.m. Monday after police spotted him leaning under the hood of a car parked on a dealer's lot at 19th Street and Avenue M.

The suspect reportedly told the approaching officers, "I'm not stealing this battery. I just need to boost my car."

Police said they found a switchblade knife in the suspect's coat pocket, along with a wrench and screwdriver.

The man briefly struggled with the two policemen before being handcuffed and booked into the county jail on suspicion of theft, unlawfully carrying a weapon and resisting arrest.

David Burton Johnson, 45-year-old attendant at the Town and Country Food Store at 2025 Clovis Road, told police he was threatened by a knife-wielding youth and his two companions about 11:15 p.m. Sunday after the trio disputed the price they were told to pay for gasoline.

Johnson said that after he was finally paid for the gasoline, the suspects threatened to beat him and that one of the trio waved a 4-inch knife in front of him.

The attendant went to call police, but by the time officers arrived the suspects were gone. They were described as Mexican-American teen-agers in a blue 1973 El Camino.

Robbery Trial Slated To Begin

A panel of 137th District Court jurors will begin hearing testimony this morning in the aggravated robbery trial of Cecilia Munoz Richardson.

The five-woman, seven-man jury was seated about 5:30 p.m. Monday after Judge Robert C. Wright heard almost a full day of testimony concerning a venue change requested by Mrs. Richardson's attorneys.

Mrs. Richardson, 25, is accused of helping Valton Donnell Lewis hold up the 7-Eleven store at 802 Ave. Q early the morning of Sept. 3, 1979. A "Crime Eye" hidden camera photographed the robbery.

Last November, the photographs were key evidence in Lewis' trial. The 22-year-old Lewis was convicted of the aggravated robbery and assessed a life prison sentence.

Chuck Lanehart and Byron Chappell, Mrs. Richardson's counsel, argued that

A 16-year-old Lubbock boy told police his brother was stabbed and beaten, about 10 p.m. Saturday near Seventh Street and Avenue U.

But when officers questioned the 17-year-old youth Sunday, he told them he did not want to file charges and would "get" his three assailants at a later time.

Olivia Moreno of 2813 Ave. K told police the sides of her car was kicked in and a window smashed late Sunday or early this morning while the vehicle was parked outside a club in the 1700-block of Fourth Street.

The woman estimated about $1,100 in damage and named three young Mexican-American women as possible suspects.

Vandals in the past week struck a house owned by the Lubbock Housing Authority and did about $2,500 in damage, according to Fulton Berry Jr., the authority's security director.

Berry said the vacant 3307 East Baylor St. house had windows knocked out, holes punched in the walls, siding ripped off and the backyard fence knocked down.

An 18-year-old motorist was apprehended about 3:45 p.m. Sunday just minutes after he allegedly collided with a car at University Avenue and Broadway and then left the scene.

Reports indicate the driver of the second vehicle, Debra Lynn Zakovec, a 19-year-old Texas Tech coed, and her two passengers suffered minor injuries in the collision and were treated at Health Sciences Center Hospital.

The male suspect was arrested minutes later at 10th Street and Avenue W and booked into the county jail on suspicion of failing to stop and render aid.

Erinda T. Gonzales of 2107 Ave. O told police his house was burglarized between 2:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. Sunday and $1,150 in property stolen, including stereo equipment, a television set and a watch.

A witness told police he saw the suspect stagger into the Lubbock Motor Lodge complex and said the victim had asked him for $10 and passed out. The witness said he realized the man had been stabbed, took him to a room and called EMS.

News Brief

Jesus Lopez, 62, of Andrews was in critical condition Monday at Odessa Medical Center with injuries received in a head-on collision Saturday on U.S. 385 about 10 miles north of Crane.

The publicity given the hidden camera photographs and Lewis' trial would prevent the empanelling of an impartial jury in Mrs. Richardson's case.

However, few witnesses told Wright they had heard Lubbockites express a preconceived opinion about Mrs. Richardson's involvement in the case. Most said the majority of public comment concerned the hidden camera photos rather than the robbery itself.

Several media representatives testified that while the photographs created more than usual publicity in connection with the offense, they did not think the coverage was excessive compared to that given other first degree felony offenses, such as murder.

Wright denied the defense request to have the trial moved from Lubbock County, and jury selection began about 3 p.m. Prosecuting the case are assistant district attorneys Hollis Browning and Clint Averitte.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: How does a person know if he is depressed? I realize it isn't possible to be happy all the time, yet I fear my bout with "the blues" and the "blahs."

Please describe the symptoms of depression so I can have a better understanding of what goes on with me. I feel isolated and inadequate. — OK Today But Worried About Tomorrow

Dear Worried: Between six and eight million Americans suffer from severe depression, according to the National Institute of Mental Health, so if you are severely depressed, you are not alone.

Dr. John Kane, who heads the depression clinic at the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center, listed the common warning signals of severe depression in an interview with Olive Evans of the New York Times. Here they are:

- (1) Feelings of sadness and hopelessness ("I will never be better").
- (2) Loss of the "pleasure capacity," the ability to enjoy anything.
- (3) Loss of interest in sex.
- (4) Loss of appetite (or over-eating).
- (5) Insomnia (or sleeping too much).
- (6) Anxious or restless behavior (or apathy).
- (7) Difficulty in concentration, remembering things and making decisions.
- (8) Becoming upset by small things.
- (9) Feelings of worthlessness ("I'm no good").
- (10) Withdrawal from friends and relatives.

- If you see yourself in six or more of the above, you are probably severely depressed. I urge you to take this column to your physician and talk to him about your depression. Ask him to recommend a counselor. If you cannot afford a private therapist, check the phone book under "mental health clinics." There are many excellent government-funded clinics that cost very little. Moreover, you've already paid for them through your taxes, so GO. And don't forget Recovery, Inc. This organization is free. If you can't find it in the phone book, write to the national headquarters: 116 South Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60603.

Dear Ann Landers: A 26-year-old woman wrote and wanted to know, "Where are all the decent men?" I'm a 27-year-old male asking another question, "Where are all the decent women?"

I am a college graduate, have a good job and have never been married. (No, I'm not gay.) In an average week, I ask two girls for dates. In 10 average weeks, I get turned down about 19 times, which leaves me about five dates a year.

If the girl accepts, it's a safe bet that she's a junkie, a lesbian, an alcoholic, a nymphomaniac, has the IQ of a houseplant or she is madly in love with a married man.

True, a lot of men these days are (as the writer said) homosexuals, alcoholics, spaced-out or just plain rats — so, the only advice I can give HER is keep looking. She needs to find only one good man to win.

Any advice for me, Ann? — Mellow As A Cello

Dear Mellow: Yes — the same as yours to the woman who wrote. Keep looking.

Tips Offer Inflation Controls

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Feel poorer in spite of earning the highest income of your life? You're not alone, and there is something you can do about it, says Nancy Granovsky, a family resource management specialist.

Mrs. Granovsky is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A & M University System.

One reason we feel poorer comes from the tax squeeze, she says. "Inflation has helped push our incomes to higher levels, but because of the way our tax system works, our wage-increase dollars are taxed at a higher rate than our pre-wage-increase dollars," she explains. "And changes in the social security laws also take a bigger bite than they did before."

Controlling personal inflation involves choice-making, Mrs. Granovsky says. How we spend our after-tax dollars is the key. One thing we can do is fight the rate of inflation. For example, if prices increase at the rate of 1.1 percent each month, consumers can:

1. Cut back spending by 1.1 percent.
2. Substitute for (or change) the mix of things you buy so your total bill is 1.1 percent less.
3. Don't change anything, but pay 1.1 percent less through careful buying.
4. Find alternative, non-economic means of satisfying your needs.

Fighting the rate of inflation will take specific "impact" steps, Mrs. Granovsky says. Here are five "impact" steps to accomplish some of the four plans listed above:

- Kick the credit habit. Use credit prudently, not for spreading out the cost his ace of clubs and ruffed the eight. Then he cashed dummy's ace-king of hearts and ruffed the seven. Now he led a low diamond. West was in with the king and didn't have another diamond to lead. He could lead a club or a heart, but it made no difference. South ruffed in dummy, discarded his last diamond and ruffed up game, slam and rubber.

West would have beaten the slam if he had just gotten rid of his king of diamonds under South's ace. Should he have made that play? The answer is a decided "Yes."

If South held either the 10 or queen of diamonds there was no reason why he should lead the ace. Suppose the diamond ace was singleton? Then East would hold queen-10-eight and be able to cover any diamond led from dummy later.

Eleanor Roosevelt Remembered

WASHINGTON (WNS) — Clare Boothe Luce, known for her blond beauty as well as her brains and barbed wit, takes a wry look at Eleanor Roosevelt after the release of the intimate correspondence between the former first lady and her close friend, Lorena Hickok.

Going back to New Deal days, there never was any love lost between the Republican and the Democratic Roosevelts. Although that political chapter is past history and Clare had mellowed some, on the subject of Eleanor she cannot resist talking like one of The Women from her famous play.

"We always felt sorry for Eleanor Roosevelt," she recalled here recently. "It was well known she wasn't the prettiest. Life with her husband was not very happy."

Then, she added, deadpan, "The letters with Hick were a revelation that, after all she had a very full, warm love life. But what interested me most is the confirmation that it will sometimes take years and years to learn the real truth about people."

Mrs. Luce served in Congress during the New Deal and frequently clashed with Roosevelt policies. But, later, when Mrs. Luce became ambassador to Italy in the Eisenhower administration, time had eased the early strain.

With this background, Mrs. Luce recalled a visit Mrs. Roosevelt made to Rome when the latter presided there at the U.S. embassy. This incident, too, has an ironic twist such as Mrs. Luce can give.

In the interview on a local TV station, Mrs. Luce offered her assessment of Mrs. Roosevelt leading up to this experience.

"Mrs. Roosevelt was always very pleasant to me. I always thought her a warm and generous minded person," Mrs. Luce said. "I disagreed with almost everything she advocated. I didn't think she was an intellectual giant. She wrote several books, all ghost-written. One was about women in politics and contained twelve profiles."

Then Mrs. Luce made her point: "Eleven were written about Mrs. Roosevelt's friends. This one about me was written with a poison pen."

Despite the book, Mrs. Luce said she spared no effort to give Mrs. Roosevelt a grand welcome during her Italian visit. The former first lady was entertained at parties and presented for speeches at several important places.

"After thirty years of the New Deal," she said, "My staff was mostly Democratic. I wanted to please her and please them. She was the widow of a former president. I laid it on."

Mrs. Roosevelt, in turn, apparently tried to express her appreciation. When she came down the stairway to leave, she handed Mrs. Luce a book autographed "To Clare Boothe Luce, one of the women I have admired most."

To Mrs. Luce's dismay, it was that same volume with the "poison pen" profile about her.

In the recent interview, she concluded, "Apparently, she not only didn't write her book, she didn't read it."

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.
Dear Dr. Donohue: Although I have not taken large amounts, I feel I have been careless with the use of my Valium. I feel I could have done without it a long time before now if I tried. I no longer take it. Can one become addicted? Please tell how long it will take for the effects of the drug to leave my body. — M.S.

A person may become dependent with the continued use of any mood altering drug — such as Valium or any of the tranquilizers. They have their place when used wisely. You were quite right in correcting whatever carelessness you had fallen into.

After taking a constant level of diazepam (Valium) over an extended period of time it takes three days for half of it to be eliminated. In another three days half of the remaining amount is eliminated. And so on, until the body is completely clear. For this reason withdrawal symptoms may not appear for a week after stopping the drug. If one has used it infrequently, elimination is much more rapid. But by a week, even after chronic use, most of the drug should have left the body.

Dear Dr. Donohue: A relative, a male, gets pain in his jaws, and after eating he gets pain in the chest area. The doctor said it is his heart. Why after eating? — L.P.

Jaw pain is a common sign of angina pectoris.

Angina is caused by an insufficient amount of blood reaching the heart muscle. After eating, some blood is diverted to the intestinal tract to help support the digestive activity going on there. If blood supply to the heart is already decreased, sudden rerouting of only a small amount can cause the pain (from heart muscle starvation). He should also report this to the physician and take a nitroglycerine pill before eating. That would have to be prescribed if it hasn't been already. Your relative might find the booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris" helpful. For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I know that you modern doctors all pooh-poo simple remedies. But how do you answer this? My grandmother has arthritis bad. She started taking honey and vinegar daily and in a couple of weeks was able to use her arms (which were virtually crippled) just like a young person's. How do you square that with what you say about diet not helping arthritis? — M.E.

I won't try to square it. I'll just say that I maintain healthy skepticism about any diet helping arthritis. Remember, though, that arthritis, like many other conditions, can have periods of remission (absence of symptoms). Otherwise, doctors, based on centuries of research, have concluded almost unanimously that what you eat has no effect on the progress of arthritis. If your grandmother feels her honey and vinegar has helped, don't discourage her. I mention my reservations only to save thousands of other arthritis sufferers from falling for quack medical cures for arthritis.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Several years ago, I clipped a recipe out of a newspaper for hot dinner rolls made with beer. We loved them.

I wanted to pass the recipe on to my daughters as it was so easy but — you guessed it — I can't find that clipping.

I guess I loaned the recipe out thinking I could remember it. My big mistake was in thinking I could remember. I forgot that I forgot.

Anyway, the rolls were very simple to make and oh, so good! Only four or five ingredients were used.

Sure hope one of your readers can come up with the recipe for beer rolls and help me out. Those seven grandchildren of mine would really enjoy them.

Also, perhaps some busy young mother could have hot rolls for dinner for that loving young man since they are so quick and easy to make. — Forgetful Grandmother

Who could pass up such an impassioned plea?

I'm sure there must be lots and lots of you friends out there who have the answer, so would you please help this dear lady out, gals? We'll print the recipe most often sent in.

Just address your card or letter to me in care of this newspaper.

You're a real pal and "Grandmother" and I will love you for writing. — Hugs, Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

One day last week I was in a hurry to get dressed for an appointment, so after taking my shower, I rushed in and got out my favorite bra.

But, when I tried to hook it, I found there were several eyes loose or missing. I was in a tizzy wondering what to do.

Just as I had given up, I turned around to my husband's chest of drawers and there lay his hand stapler. I thought, "Why not?"

So, I just stapled several "eyes" in the place where they had been. And, it worked!

Thought perhaps some other gal might be in the same situation some morning and need a temporary solution to the problem. Just make sure the ends of the staples are embedded in the fabric so they won't scratch. — M.W.

DEAR HELOISE:

When you see something you are cooking ready to boil over, just blow across the top to cool it down.

This gives you those precious seconds needed to stir it and turn down the heat.

It really works — even on macaroni and jams and jellies that are so hard to clean up. — Verna Lue Gledhill

JOAN WILSON

Producer Bringing 'Mystery' To PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Wilson, calling herself Joan Sullivan at the time, took over as producer of public TV's "Masterpiece Theater" in 1973, and almost immediately struck a responsive chord with American viewers by importing "Clouds of Witness" for the series.

The five-part miniseries from Britain, aired Oct. 7-Nov. 4, 1973, attracted enough of a following to make Dorothy Sayers' unorthodox private eye, Lord Peter Wimsey, a "Masterpiece Theater" regular — in "The Unpleasantness at the Bellona Club," Dec. 2-23, 1973; "Murder Must Advertise," Oct. 6-27, 1974; "The Nine Tailors," April 13-May 4, 1975; and "The Five Herring," Dec. 19-Jan. 9, 1977.

Now, nearly seven years after "Clouds of Witness" was first broadcast, Wimsey has spawned a stepchild of sorts, a collection of five mysteries from across the Atlantic. The Public Broadcasting Service series begins tonight at 8 p.m. CST with Malcolm McDowell starring in Robert Chandos' "She Fell Among Thieves."

"We've been thinking about this kind of thing ever since Wimsey became so popular on 'Masterpiece Theater,'" says Miss Wilson, the new series' producer. "I'm always looking for what's not happening on American television, and except for things like 'Starsky and Hutch,' mysteries aren't being done."

The series, collected as "Mystery!" and supported, like "Masterpiece Theater," with a grant from Mobil, developed more quickly in concept than it did in fact, Miss Wilson says.

"I talked to the BBC, London Weekend Television, Granada, all the houses there, and got everything, including stuff from Canada and New Zealand. And I didn't find too much."

"Most of what we've collected here," she says, "were done after they became aware of what we were looking for."

"We wanted 'Mystery!' to be lighter than 'Masterpiece Theater,' sheerly escapist, good entertainment," the producer says "and I hope our audience will see that distinction."

The premiere program will be followed by John Mortimer's "Rumpole of the Bailey" in four parts, Feb. 12-March 4, Daphne du Maurier's "Rebecca" in four installments, March 11-April 1, "The Racing Game" by Dick Francis in three chapters, April 8-22, and "Sergeant Cribb," by Peter Lovesey, in three parts, April 29-May 13.

"This first season," Miss Wilson says, "reflects the fact that even though I'm interested in basing the series on mystery literature, I'll stretch the definition to include something like 'Rumpole of the Bailey,' which is essentially courtroom drama."

"If there had been an extraordinary gothic tale, I suppose I would have been tempted to include that. What you want to do is try to give something in a season for everybody, and tastes do differ greatly."

Gene Shalit from NBC's "Today" show is the host — the Alistair Cooke — of "Mystery!"

Joan Wilson, a Wisconsin native, went to work for the Radio Drama Development Project at Boston's WGBH in the mid-1960s. Barely a year after moving to WGBH-TV to produce "Masterpiece Theater," she brought "Upstairs, Downstairs" into American homes.

Since she took the television job, "Masterpiece Theater" has won a dozen Emmy awards, and approaches its 10th season this fall. "Duchess of Duke Street II," on the air now, is the 50th production in the series.

"When I started with 'Masterpiece Theater,'" she says, "there was an enormous wealth of material available. We've about exhausted that, and now we're running some almost concurrently with their broadcast in England."

"No one is more anxious to do American literature and American history than PBS," Miss Wilson says, "and naturally, I would prefer 'Masterpiece Theater' to have the American classics."

"Things are happening, like 'American Short Story,' but..."

There's an interesting footnote to Miss Wilson's supply problem: "Masterpiece Theater" competes today with the Mobil Showcase Network for British productions. Mobil's specially constructed network currently features "Edward and Mrs. Simpson."

Bob Hope Revisits Christmas Tours In Six-Hour TV Special

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Bob Hope arched an eight-iron shot from the terrace of his spacious rear garden and watched the ball plunk into the swimming pool some 75 yards distant.

It was a tranquil afternoon at his San Fernando Valley home, the serenity contrasting with six hours of film he'd just seen of his hectic three decades of entertaining American fighting men abroad in a trio of wars.

The first three hours of "Bob Hope's Overseas Christmas Tours: Around the World With the Troops" was televised Sunday night. The second three hours will be seen next Sunday.

Hope's shows for millions of servicemen between 1941 and 1972 covered more than a dozen countries and included more performances than he can count. He also took along scores of Hollywood's top stars.

And that's what this retrospective is all about — footage of old black-and-white newsreel shots of Hope and his troupes from World War II and color film from his TV specials in Korea and Vietnam.

Hope worked with documentary producers Andrew Solt and Malcolm Leo on the six-hour project which includes footage, some from the National Archives, of stars other than Hope who sold war bonds in this country and traveled abroad to entertain troops.

Altogether 201 stars are involved in the footage, including shots of Al Jolson, Jimmy Durante, Robert Mitchum, Marlene Dietrich, Marilyn Monroe, Bette Davis, Robert Taylor and Mickey Rooney.

There is a segment devoted to the Hollywood Canteen with Jimmy Cagney, Humphrey Bogart and Fred Astaire, among many others, doing their bit for the World War II GIs.

One of the most moving segments is that of Carole Lombard speaking at a bond rally in Indianapolis. En route home to Hollywood she was killed in a plane crash. There is film of the crash site, followed by Clark Gable in uniform attending the christening of a liberty ship named for his wife.

There were poignant moments showing Hope in hospital wards comforting the wounded. Close-ups of young men, dazed by wounds, breaking into grins at the sight of a familiar face from home — Hope's.

The substance of both shows, however, is the brash, ski-nosed comedian, carrying a golf club, belting out jokes for enormous crowds of appreciative GIs and flashes of the traveling stars doing their turns.

The Victory Caravan is included, too. That was the 1942 trainload of stars which visited 25 American cities selling bonds. Hope and Cary Grant were the masters of ceremonies for such others as Bing Crosby, Pat O'Brien, Laurel and Hardy, Groucho Marx, Desi Arnaz and eight beautiful girls.

Hope put his golf club aside and said, "I didn't know about half the stars who appeared at bond rallies and went overseas — I mean people like Danny Kaye, John Wayne and Debbie Reynolds. Some of this film has never been seen before."

"I must have 50 hours of film on my Christmas shows from 1954 to 1972. It took some judicious selecting."

"Three years ago NBC asked what I was going to do with all that footage. I told 'em I had no plans. They remembered that my 1970 Christmas show is the sixth most viewed of all TV shows and three others are in the top 15."

"They suggested I do a couple of two-hour specials. I said no. I didn't want to leave out too much and disappoint a lot of people, both the outfits we did shows for and the stars who worked in them."

"Last year when they asked, 'How much time do you need?' I asked for six hours which is just about right."

Footage of Hope's shows in various parts of the world represent only a fraction of the appearances he made at small outposts and hospitals and aboard ships. Some of his best stories were never captured on film.

FCC Head Slams Stereotyping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Television often has stereotyped blacks on the air and excluded them from the front office, but more regulation won't solve the problem, the chairman of the Federal Communications Commission said Monday.

However, said Charles D. Ferris, newly emerging alternatives to the established networks probably will be a solution.

Ferris made the prediction in a speech prepared for delivery Monday night in Los Angeles before The Media Forum, an organization of blacks working in the television and entertainment industry. The speech was made available in The FCC can best encourage minority participation in the industry, Ferris said, by removing barriers to such alternatives as cable TV, satellite-to-home transmission and video tape or disc distribution.

In the last decade, we have seen the networks' fitful efforts to reflect the changing role of blacks and other minorities," the FCC chairman said. "One result has been more roles for blacks and other minorities, although still few meaningful ones. Television at times makes it seem as if crime and drug-pushing are the only successful minority enterprises in this country."

It would be wrong, however, for the FCC to play an active role in removing demeaning characterizations from the air through censorship, Ferris added.

"I believe that none of us really want the government directly or indirectly dictating scripts to producers or editing tapes for viewers," he explained. "For a government entrusted to dictate what we see or hear is a government empowered to dictate what we think or do."

The better answer, Ferris continued, is to encourage the creation of new outlets for programming and thus more jobs that can be filled by minorities.

Solutions must be based on a full awareness of the cold economic realities of the media business," Ferris said. "The television industry structure, dominated by three commercial networks, can support a program only when it draws immense numbers of viewers."

Issuance Of W.C. Fields Postage Stamp Yields Celebration

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "What an irony," observed "Tonight" second banana Ed McMahon. "This kind of a tribute for a man who hated the Establishment."

Ah, yes, my little cupcake, it was the kind of program that would have driven W.C. Fields to his bucket of martinis. The occasion was the centenary of the comedian's birth. The observance: Issuance of a postage stamp in his honor.

The event was held on a rainy night in the Samuel Goldwyn theater of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Speeches were made by Academy president Fay Kanin ("anyone can take on mothers-in-law, but who else would attack children, dogs and even drinking water?" by Postmaster General William

F. Bolger, who bore a message from President Carter ("He was a comedy genius and a great American eccentric.") also by Ernest Borgnine, member of the Citizens' Stamp Advisory Committee ("This is the kind of night W.C. would have loved — wet.") and by the Beverly Hills postmaster, who lost his speech and introduced numerous postal employees.

Fields' co-workers were introduced, and they lauded him. Mary Brian: "No day was ever dull working with Mr. Fields." Gloria Jean: "I was terrified at first, but he was very sweet to me." Grady Sutton: "A very dear man." Others: Madge Kennedy, Buddy Rogers, Constance Moore. Also introduced were the widow of Fields' son and five grand-children.

The best part of the program came with screenings of classic Fields scenes. The riverboat gambler drawing five aces in "Mississippi." The henpecked husband of "It's a Gift" trying to sleep on the back porch amid a myriad of noises. The amazing juggler of "The Old Fashioned Way." The maladroit pool shark in "Six of a Kind."

While the Academy program was going on, another observance was being held a few miles away at the Saratoga restaurant in West Hollywood. The guest of honor: Carlotta Monti, the actress who lived with Fields for 14 years, author of "W.C. Fields and Me," basis for the film biography starring Rod Steiger with Valerie Perrine as Monti.

friends, said Miss Monti. They had asked the Academy if she had been invited to the event, she reported, and had been told: "The family doesn't want her there."

So the party was arranged at Dave Hyar's Saratoga, which has a life-size portrait of Fields, appropriately next to the bar.

"Oh, it was wonderful," the still-lively Miss Monti said the morning after. "Channel 2, 4 and 7 sent camera crews, and Lee Grant of the Los Angeles Times interviewed me for 40 minutes. I never saw so many cameras."

"I think Mr. Fields would have approved. He loved a fighter." Although Miss Monti was with Fields at his death on Christmas Day 1946, his long-estranged wife and his son claimed the body and estate.

"I think I had $14 when he died," Miss Monti recalled. "I had a couple of pieces of jewelry, and I pawned one of them for $700 — you can tell how much it was worth in those days. The estate was finally depleted, so I never did receive my bequest ($50 a week for 10 years)."

The one bequest she retains is Fields' 12-cylinder 1938 Cadillac. She used to drive it to Technicolor, where she worked as a film clerk from 1952 to 1972. Now the car is stored. She lives alone, devotes most of her time to painting.

Her feelings about the movie, "W.C. Fields and Me": "I thought it created a wonderful feeling of the man, though not in his relations with his friends. He never showed off. He was a dignified man, a nice man who liked to play tennis and golf and go on picnics and listen to the sound of a brook — he liked to do things he couldn't do as a child."

The stamp was issued Jan. 29, 1980, which the Post Office regards as the 100th anniversary of Fields' birth. Not so, said Miss Monti:

"He always said that he was born in 1879. We celebrated our birthday together: mine was Jan. 20, his was Jan. 29, or so I thought. But someone who researched his birth in Philadelphia wrote me that the date was April 9, 1879.

Veteran Actor Avoiding Retirement

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — One day a few years ago, Forrest Tucker was riding a horse through the Arizona desert. He was searching for Goldwyn City, the old location site where he filmed his first movie.

"I recognized one old tree," Tucker said. "I had to scrounge around in the sand for a while, but I finally found a couple of foundations. But that's all that was left."

Tucker, now 60, has a lot in common with that old tree. Both are survivors, but both somehow manage to keep blooming.

"Sometimes, when you're feeling down and the ol' feet hurt, you get to thinking about how many of my guys are gone," Tucker said.

It's not often that Tucker has the time to reflect on his 52 years in show business, from the time he was a youngster in burlesque through his years in movies, stage and television. After a 10-month retirement 14 years ago that had him "crawling the walls," Tucker promised himself that he "would never get out of show business" again until they throw me out.

"A good friend of mine, Bob Hope, was asked once why he didn't stop touring and retire, and he said, 'To what? That's what I say. To what?'

Tucker's latest role, one that will keep him on the road until May, is that of Captain Andy in the venerable stage classic, "Showboat."

The reviews — save one — have been excellent, "and that reviewer," Tucker recalled, "said the play was old and worn out. How can Ol' Man River be old?"

"But I've been out there 52 years on those boards and an audience never lies to me," he added. "This one works. People are bringing their children and grandchildren, and telling them about when they saw this play 30 or 50 years ago. The chuckles in this show are nice, family chuckles. It's very satisfying."

DOWN THE DRAIN—The worldwide chain of Holiday Inn's officially has stopped ordering Russian vodka for their bars, even though it is considered to be "the best." Bill Figg, general manager of Lubbock's Holiday Inn, at left, however, took the action a step further Monday, when he and John Batrice of J Bob's Liquor Store poured almost a case of liter-sized bottles down the drain. Figg said a bottle of the unusually smooth vodka costs about $12 a bottle, about twice as much as American vodka. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

More Than 1,000 Said Massacred In Afghanistan

BOSTON (UPI) — Afghan soldiers and policemen, acting under Soviet orders, machinegunned more than 1,000 unarmed civilians to death, last April, in one of the worst massacres in recent history, the Christian Science Monitor reported Monday.

In Moscow, the official Soviet Tass news agency hotly denied the report, calling it "monstrous information" and "new dirty slander that is part and parcel of the malicious propaganda campaign which was launched by Washington and by some of its allies around the events in Afghanistan, but which does not produce the desired effect."

In a copyright story, the newspaper said the massacre — involving about 200 soldiers and police — wiped out almost the entire male population of a small eastern Afghan town.

Collaboration Claimed

Afghan soldiers had accused residents of Kerala, a small riverside town in Kunar Province, of collaborating with anti-government Moslem "Mujahideen" fighters, hidden in the surrounding, pine-forested mountains, eyewitnesses told the Monitor.

The newspaper said the April 20, 1979, shooting of an estimated 1,170 unarmed males — including boys in their early teens — was the first reported case of a mass military reprisal against Afghanistan's civilian population since the fighting began almost two years ago.

The total number killed, while not precisely recorded, was more than the population of Lidice, Czechoslovakia, slaughtered during World War II by the Nazis, or when American troops killed civilians in the Vietnamese village of My Lai in March 1968, the Monitor said.

Monitor reporter Edward Girardet said he and three other journalists went to Pakistan to confirm rumors of the shooting, which occurred on an Islamic Holy Friday before the Soviets invaded Afghanistan at the end of 1979.

400 Surviving Families

The four journalists discovered 400 families who survived the Kerala massacre by walking four days to Pakistan.

"They forced all the men to line up in crouching positions in the field just outside the town and then opened up with their machine guns from behind," said eyewitness Abdul Latif, a bearded traffic policeman and one of the few male survivors of the attack.

Then they spread out through the town, gunning down all the remaining men they could find," he said.

"They knew very well that we had been secretly giving the Mujahideen food, ammunition, shelter and money," Khalid Ullah, a teacher who managed to escape, was quoted as saying.

Five In Family Drown After Car Dives Into Creek

BAY CITY (AP) — Five members of a South Texas family apparently drowned when their car flipped over into a creek about 12 miles east of here, police said.

Department of Public Safety troopers said the bodies were found shortly before 3 p.m. Sunday, about 12 hours after the early morning accident.

Matagorda County Sheriff's deputy Milton Jarrell said the 1962 sedan was eastbound on Texas 35 near Van Vleck when it veered across the westbound lane, through a ditch and into rain-swollen Linville Creek, near the Matagorda-Brazoria County line.

Jarrell said the victims apparently drowned when their car turned upside down in the water.

"We've had a good bit of rain," he said. "That creek usually runs a good bit of water."

They were identified as Linda Parker McCrae, 30, Samuel Jefferson McCrae, 35, and their children, Kevin, 3, and Jeff, 4, all of Sweeney. Mrs. McCrae's sister, Trisha Lynn Parker, 29, of Columbus, also was killed, troopers said.

The newspaper said it learned the shooting was ordered by a dark-blond, green-eyed Russian officer who wore an Afghan uniform without rank insignia.

The Monitor said the senior Soviet military adviser, using words to the effect, "You can be sure that next year's potato crop will be a good one," looked on as the town's wailing women struggled vainly to push past a cordon of soldiers toward the bodies of their slaughtered husbands, brothers and sons.

As they watched, survivors said an army bulldozer plowed the bodies into the soft earth of the open field.

Tech Cool Toward Reductions

also offer only limited support for the governor's plan.

Although the medical school will "make an honest effort to try" and reduce unnecessary staff positions, officials say, for a school that is still developing "it's hard to talk about cutting," said one administrator.

"We made it clear to the governor (when he visited Tech two weeks ago) that Tech is in the developing phase and has not achieved steady growth.

"You can't hold back the development of a school to meet a quota," the official added.

Medical school officials say that in those areas that have achieved steady growth, "We will make every effort to comply" with the governor's call for staff cuts. But those areas, such as faculty recruitment, that were funded by the Legislature at a higher level in order to develop, there will be very few reductions. "We will exercise restraint and maximize those hired," an administrator said, but attrition may satisfy the governor's demands without the need for further reductions, he added.

"It's like a growing tree," commented Williams in regards to reductions in medical school staff. "You cut off its root, you can't expect it to grow."

Bani Sadr Sworn In As President

Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the Shah is in Panama.

Election of a parliament, expected in about a month, will complete the transfer of power from the Shah.

Khomeini holds supreme power under the new Islamic constitution and can dismiss Bani Sadr if he wishes.

Bani Sadr officially became president when Khomeini handed him the presidential farman, or decree, in the brief ceremony.

The president is free to choose a cabinet, but is expected to wait until after the elections.

"I ask Mr. Bani Sadr to remain humble and his morality not be changed by serving as president," Khomeini said. "I pray to God to protect all of us from tending towards the East or the West."

Khomeini, advised by his doctors to cut down his activities as a precautionary measure, after a mild heart attack, immediately left the ceremony to return to his room.

The president told his countrymen: "We are facing great difficulties, but I am sure that we will overcome them thanks to the powerful will of our nation."

Armed with Khomeini's endorsement, the president is expected to wield more power as candidates are selected for the coming election.

Bani Sadr also will carry considerable clout in the deliberations of the Revolutionary Council, leading up to election.

There had been a power struggle within the council over whether Bani Sadr should await the sitting of the new parliament before being sworn in. Monday's ceremony has given the president a clear victory over his political opponents.

Khomeini denounced the Soviets' Afghan action in a message read by his son to a Tehran crowd celebrating the birth date of the Prophet Mohammed. It was his first comment on the Afghanistan issue.

The Soviet troops that moved into Afghanistan in December to back a government coup remained to fight the Moslem Afghans opposed to a "godless" communist government.

JETLINER SKIDS

BERLIN (AP) — A Pan American jetliner, carrying 52 passengers, slid off a snow-swept taxiway after landing Monday, at West Berlin's Tegel Airport, authorities said. The Boeing 727 came to rest on grass adjacent to the taxiway, frightening the passengers but causing no injuries, police said. Passengers were evacuated through the plane's rear door and brought to the terminal in buses. The airliner, which was on a flight from Munich, was not damaged, police said.

Ninth Hinted In Bribe Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government lodged its first criminal charges Monday, in the FBI's 14-month political corruption investigation as a source close to the case said there is a possibility that a ninth member of Congress might be involved.

This source, asking anonymity, said Monday that seven House members and one senator, whose names became public over the weekend, remain subject to potential grand jury action.

The source said the ninth member of Congress who may be involved in the case does not appear to be the subject of further scrutiny at this time. The source declined to identify the ninth member and would not give any details of the possible involvement.

However, the source denied that the ninth member was Rep. James Howard, D-N.J. Howard volunteered to reporters on Monday that he refused an offer of campaign contributions for helping Arab sheiks invest money in his home state. It was not clear whether the incident Howard reported had anything to do with the FBI undercover operation.

The source emphasized that only one member of Congress who met with FBI undercover agents, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., has been completely cleared by the government. Sources have reported that Pressler angrily stormed out of a meeting with undercover FBI agents when it was indicated that they represented a client willing to pay for political favors.

Investigator Charged

The first formal charges arising from the FBI investigation were filed against an Immigration and Naturalization Service investigator in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Alexander Andrews Alexandro Jr., 29, of Comack, N.Y., was arraigned before a U.S. magistrate and was formally charged with one count of bribery and one count of conspiracy.

Officials said the government might begin presenting evidence against other public officials to several grand juries, later this week.

All the subjects in the probe, some 20 public officials and 10 businessmen and lawyers, were visited by the FBI over the weekend and notified that they were under investigation, one source said.

In addition to state and local officials in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, sources said those who became subjects of the FBI investigation included Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., D-N.J., and Reps. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y.; Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J.; Michael O. Myers, D-Pa.; Raymond F. Lederer, D-Pa.; John W. Jenrette, D-S.C.; John P. Murtha, D-Pa.; and Richard Kelly, R-Fla.

Most Deny Wrongdoing

Most of the eight members of Congress have issued statements denying any wrongdoing.

On Capitol Hill, congressional leaders expressed shock at reports linking the eight lawmakers to the FBI investigation, and ethics committees in both the House and Senate announced that they would conduct their own inquiries.

The House ethics committee quickly called a meeting to begin its probe after disclosure that FBI agents posed as aides to a wealthy Arab sheik, who was willing to pay bribes to congressmen and other officials in exchange for political favors. Sources say some officials were photographed with video-tape equipment in the act of taking money.

The chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., promised a "thorough investigation," and said he had met earlier in the day with FBI Director William Webster and Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti.

Evidence In Other Hands

Heflin said he discussed having the FBI turn the results of its investigation over to the ethics panel, but the Justice Department officials did not immediately offer to do so.

The problem is that all the evidence, all the tapes, all the videotapes are in the hands of the Department of Justice," Heflin said. "We are dependent upon them."

The House committee took no action on a proposal to subpoena the videotapes before they become wrapped up in grand jury proceedings.

At the Brooklyn arraignment for Alexandro, the government charged that on May 31, 1979, an undercover FBI agent was introduced to the immigration inspector as a person who would pay to secure permanent U.S. resident status for an individual outside the country.

The government complaint said Alexandro agreed to provide that service and that on Aug. 23, at the International Hotel at New York's Kennedy Airport, he accepted a $2,000 down payment on a total of $15,000 promised to him for his efforts.

Alexandro's attorney, Joel Winograd, told reporters that Alexandro, whose job mer deputy in Lubbock and Hockley counties served 10 years under Sheriff Grady Harrist and three years under Blanchard, resigning in 1971 to work in airport security at Lubbock International Airport. He also was chief deputy in Hockley County from 1974 to 1977. He has since been employed by Verna Drilling Co. at Levelland and has worked as a truck driver out of Lubbock.

Turner criticized Blanchard for the several unsolved murder cases remaining on Lubbock County books and said he obtained convictions on all 15 of the murder cases he was assigned as a deputy.

He also said he is an authority on foreign cases.

Jail Labeled "Disaster"

With all the escapes, beatings, stabblings, suicides and lawsuits," he said, the Lubbock County Jail, in my opinion has been a disaster."

He said he has "never lost a prisoner" in his law enforcement career.

"I would use economy cars for serving civil papers and other non-patrol work and would use larger cars only where necessary."

Turner said he expects "a two-party race" for the office this year.

Solis, chairman of the Lubbock County Raza Unida Party during 1977 and 1978, said any philosophical differences he might have with other commissioners would prove beneficial. He said he moved to the Democratic party because La Raza did not garner enough votes in the last election to qualify as a party.

Solis serves as executive director for the migrant worker program Llano Estivado.

Solis outlined what he sees as the primary concerns of the third precinct as better road conditions, employment and beautification, explaining his own candidacy as a "sincere intent to serve."

While claiming budget limitations when asked to spend money in other areas.

"I don't believe their point of view is necessarily representative of the whole community," Solis said. Using community standards, he said, he would probably be classified as a liberal.

He added that if wishing to better the community made him a liberal, he was uncomfortable with the label.

Wants "Orderly Campaign"

Solis, who said he wants to run an "orderly campaign," has been a member of CASS (a local organization to review and monitor the desegregation plan in the Lubbock Independent School District), the Mexican-American Chamber of Commerce, and a member of the Human Relations Commission.

He helped organize a conference on voter education in July 1978 for the purpose of registering and promoting larger voter turnout from the Mexican-American community.

Solis graduated from Wichita State University in 1977 with a master of arts in communications and from Texas Tech in 1968 with a bachelor's degree in Latin American Studies.

Another candidate for the Precinct 1 commissioner post also filed shortly before the deadline Monday. Local furniture store owner Rodney G. Harvey filed as a Democrat for the post currently held by Edgar Chance. The precinct covers the southwestern sector of the county.

Other candidates who had previously filed in the sheriff's race include Blanchard and former deputy Mike DeRosa, both Democrats, and former deputy D.L. Sonny Keesee, a Republican. A sixth candidate, Wayne Kirkpatrick, decided not to make the race.

Candidates who filed earlier in the Precinct 1 commissioner race are the other candidates in the Precinct 3 commissioner contest include incumbent Commissioner James Lancaster and Idaho farmer Franklin Dunn. Both filed as Democrats.

U.S. Rep. Kent Hance of Lubbock is one of the few local office holders who had not drawn an opponent Monday. A Democrat, Hance serves as representative for the 19th Congressional District, which includes Lubbock County.

Hance won the congressional seat long held by George Mahon in 1978, after defeating Republican George Bush of Midland. He filed for re-election in January.

The state legislative races on both sides of the city will be contested in the general election, District 75-A, which encompasses most of the western half of Lubbock, will see a match between incumbent State Rep. Nolan "Buzz" Robnett, a Republican, and City Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan, who has filed as a Democrat.

In District 75-B, which covers the city's eastside, Democratic incumbent Froy Salinas will face McKinley Shepard, who is attempting to become the first black Republican elected to the Texas Legislature since Reconstruction.

Laney Seeks Office

As of late Monday, Democratic incumbent James E. "Pete" Laney was the only candidate running in state legislative District 76, which covers Hale and Swisher counties and a portion of Lubbock County. Laney, who resides in Hale County, has held the post since 1972.

A two-man race has shaped up for the county tax assessor-collector post. Incumbent Frank A. Stuart, who was appointed to the post in 1979, will face former state Rep. Delwin Jones in the May 3 Democratic primary. No Republican candidate had surfaced in that race Monday.

Three district judges are up for re-election this year, but none has drawn an opponent. Running for re-election on the Democratic ticket are Denzil Bevers, 72nd District Court; Thomas Clinton, 99th District Court; and William Shaver, 140th District Court.

Two county justices of the peace also have filed for re-election and have drawn no opponents. They are Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, Precinct 1, Place 1, and Justice of the Peace Melvin Powers, Precinct 5, Place 1. Both are running as Democrats.

There apparently will be only one contested constable race here. Bennie Fred Sethif, Manuel Molina Flores and Abel A. Anzaldina have filed as Democrats in Precinct 6.

Other constable candidates running unopposed include Lane Anderson, Precinct 1, Allen L. Meurer, Precinct 2, and Robert Huffman, Precinct 5. All have filed as Democrats.

The filing deadline for congressional, state and county offices is 6 p.m. today. Candidates for offices within one county must file with either Democratic County Chairman Madison Sowder or Republican County Chairman Ruth Schiermeyer.

Candidates for statewide offices and for district offices that involve more than one county must file with their respective Democratic or Republican state headquarters.

While the deadline for state and county candidates drew to a close Monday, the filing season has just opened for city and school candidates. Individuals planning to run for either the Lubbock City Council or Lubbock School Board have until March 5 to complete their filings.

The first day for filings only drew one candidate, Paul Looney, who announced last week for the Place 4 seat on the council, turned in his filing papers to the City Secretary's office.

prisoners had a rod stuck through his head.

There was a rod stuck into one of the prisoner's ears, forced through his head and through the other side. He still had it in when we took the body out," Ortiz said.

Ortiz said many of the dead had been tortured.

One of them still had a rope around his neck and then they smashed his head in," Ortiz said. "It was horrible."

Blowtorch Attack

Margaret Babcock, a prison secretary, said she was looking through binoculars from a prison fence when she saw one inmate being tortured with a blowtorch near a cellblock.

"Four or five men were holding one man down and burning his head and face with a torch," she said. "He was screaming. I couldn't believe it. It was like a nightmare."

One guard and nine inmates were listed in critical condition in area hospitals. Seven guards and 55 inmates were admitted to hospitals, and 14 inmates were treated for drug overdoses.

"It's one hell of a bloody mess in there," said Corrections Commission chairman Bud Richards. "There are a hell of a lot of bodies in there."

National Guardsmen are throwing up all over."

There was blood all over, against the wall, smeared around," said Lt. Richard Montoya, who headed the special weapons team that led the move to regain control of the prison.

All the 15 guards and other employees taken hostage escaped death. Only 18 guards were on duty when the riot erupted.

Guard Fred Herrera said, "Some of those guys' (inmates) faces are totally gone." State Sen. Ben Altamirano said he saw the body of a black inmate who had been decapitated and his head stuffed between his legs. Guards said another inmate had his arm cut off before he was hurled from an upper window.

Study Claims Daily Aspirin Not Helpful To Heart Attack Survivors

NEW YORK (AP) — Taking aspirin every day does not help heart attack survivors live longer, the largest study ever of aspirin and heart disease concluded Monday.

But the $17 million government-financed study was under attack even before it was released by those who said it might have missed aspirin's benefit.

The study, which involved 4,524 patients at 30 medical centers, focused on whether taking the equivalent of three aspirin a day would help prevent second heart attacks among the 350,000 Americans who survive heart attacks each year.

Men and women in the study were divided randomly into groups taking aspirin or an inactive placebo. Neither the patients nor their doctors knew who was in which group.

After following the patients for three years, the researchers found that the aspirin group had slightly fewer non-fatal heart attacks than the placebo group, but essentially the same number of deaths.

In fact, we saw a slight trend in the wrong direction — excess deaths in the aspirin group — but I'm sure that was just chance," said Dr. William T. Friedewald of the U.S. National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which organized and paid for the study.

Friedewald said the aspirin group suffered more side effects, with 23.7 percent getting either heartburn or ulcers as compared with only 14.9 percent of the placebo group.

The Aspirin Myocardial Infarction Study was begun in 1975 after a series of smaller studies suggested that aspirin's well-known ability to inhibit blood clotting might help heart attack survivors.

The theory was that blood clots in the arteries supplying the heart might cause or aggravate heart attacks. Heart attack survivors run a very high risk of dying from further coronary problems.

"Based on the results, we cannot recommend the use of this drug in survivors of heart attacks. That seems clear," Friedewald said.

But critics have said that the study used too large a dose of aspirin and inducted its patients too long after their heart attacks.

Dr. Philip W. Majerus and his colleagues at Washington University in St. Louis have found that just half an aspirin a day is enough to knock out the blood cells called platelets that promote clotting.

Majerus says too much aspirin may actually restore the clotting ability by inhibiting another mechanism.

And a study released last week of the drug sulfinpyrazone or Anturane — like aspirin, an anti-platelet drug — found all the benefit of the drug packed into the first six months after leaving the hospital. But 85 percent of patients in the Aspirin Myocardial Infarction Study started taking aspirin after this six-month period had passed.

"Don't forget that the quantity of information is still in favor of aspirin when you consider other studies. It just happens that the biggest and latest of them did not show anything. The book is not closed on aspirin," said Dr. Christian R. Klimt, chief of clinical investigations at the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

Klimt is head of another large study of aspirin and heart attacks due to be released later this month. Researchers who have seen it say there is a clear trend of benefit for aspirin takers in that study.

Sponsors of the AMIS study concede that many Americans — including many doctors — already take daily aspirin to help ward off cardiovascular problems, whether or not they have had a heart attack.

A panel of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has recommended approving aspirin for use in preventing strokes in men who have suffered transient ischemic attacks, a form of mini-stroke.

But Friedewald said the AMIS data could not be used to support or discourage general aspirin use, since it focused only on heart attack survivors and showed no benefit for them.

Results of the study had been circulated among physicians and were known by several news organizations, although the study was not due to be released until publication in the Journal of the American Medical Association on Feb. 15. But the embargo was broken when the Wall Street Journal published a story on it Monday.

Fuel-Saving Ideas Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a severe fuel shortage, Americans may face odd-even gasoline sales, carless days, boatless weekends and four-day workweeks, the Energy Department said Monday.

The proposed fuel-saving measures are part of a standby plan put forth by the department. Public hearings will be held on the measures before they are adopted. They would go into effect only in an energy emergency declared by the president.

The standby plan also suggests measures state governments might take to cut fuel consumption, such as mandatory temperature restrictions on homes as well as public buildings. Federal rules already limit the thermostat settings in non-residential buildings.

Exemptions would be allowed in certain cases.

During past fuel shortages, motorists in many states were permitted to buy a minimum amount of gas only on odd-or-even-numbered days. The new standby plan includes those measures as "interim final regulations" which can be continued or revised as necessary.

But the plan takes a more tentative approach to such newer proposals as boatless weekends and carless days.

The federal government would impose its standby fuel-saving measures on ly in states that fail to implement their own measures.

Here's how the department sees the new fuel-saving measures working during an energy emergency:

•Carless days: Every gasoline-and-diesel-powered vehicle would be barred from use one, two or three days a week, depending on the severity of the shortage. Vehicle owners would have to display on their vehicles stickers identifying their no-driving days.

Under the proposal, each household would select the no-driving day or days for all of its vehicles. People who regularly rent cars would have to get stickers for those vehicles as well.

•Boatless weekends: The use of recreational powerboats would be prohibited on one or both days of the weekend. Sailing would not be affected. Exceptions would be made for using powerboats to reach permanent residences, and for emergency use of auxiliary engines on sailboats.

•Shortened workweeks: Employers would be required to shorten their workweeks by one day, but would be encouraged to readjust schedules to maintain production and employee income. The typical workweek of five, eight-hour days, for example, would be compressed into four 10-hour days to maintain a 40-hour workweek.

To avoid midweek disruptions, the department suggests that the dropped workday be either Friday or Monday.

•Employer-based commuting programs: In the most complex new proposal, employers would be required to develop programs to reduce job commuting, especially by individuals alone in their cars. The requirement would apply mainly to work sites employing 100 or more people, schools above high school level with a combined total of more than 100 students, faculty and staff members; and state, county and municipal government facilities with 50 or more people.

Some of the travel-reducing strategies employers could use are: carpools, vanpools or "some form of prepaid transit, preferably through payroll deduction." Others include: reduced employee parking privileges, preferential parking for carpools; staggered work hours; making company-owned vehicles available for carpooling; company-sponsored shuttle services; and emergency work-at-home programs.

The department also proposed changing school schedules, temperature restrictions for homes, cutbacks in electricity to homes, business and factories and reductions in industrial and commercial lighting.

WAR AGAINST BUGS — Forest Service Ranger James Fox sprays a tree in a campground south of Livingston, Mont., recently. The tree, killed by mountain pine beetles, will have to be cut down. Agreement Reached To Allow Departure Of Soviet Airliner

NEW YORK (AP) — An agreement to end a two-day delay in the takeoff of a Moscow-bound jet carrying 80 passengers was reached Monday between the Soviet airline Aeroflot and operators of Kennedy International Airport.

Ground crews at the airport, members of the Teamsters union, had refused for two days to service the Aeroflot jet as a protest against Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

The plane was expected to depart during the evening after being serviced by management officials of a private company, according to a release from the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which runs the airport.

The agreement, which was reached with the concurrence and participation of the U.S. State Department, specifies that Aeroflot will not come into Kennedy Airport on further scheduled flights until it has made arrangements with another carrier already serving the airport to handle them," the Port Authority statement said.

Pan American World Airways had suspended its contract to handle terminal and ground services for Aeroflot on Jan. 25 after Teamsters union baggage handlers and grounds crew began boycotting Aeroflot.

The PA said Aeroflot also agreed that, until it is able to contract for new ground service arrangements here, it will clear plans for any necessary special landings here with the bi-state agency, which will review any such requests with the State Department.

The agreement ended a growing dispute between the two governments over the refusal of crews to service the jet that landed here Sunday, despite orders from the Port Authority to land at Dulles Airport in Washington, D.C. It was not known why the plane's crew ignored the order.

The crudest sort of provocation is taking place against the Soviet aircraft, which must be viewed as part of the unremitting campaign aimed at interfering with the normal air communications between the Soviet Union and the United States," the Soviet news agency Tass had said earlier in the day.

The campaign of "unprecedented actions," the Soviets said, was being launched "with the knowledge of official U.S. authorities," and was in "direct violation of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. international agreement on air traffic."

In Washington, the State Department said Monday that the U.S.-Soviet air agreement does not require it to provide ground service for Aeroflot planes. Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the Soviets were told a week ago that they would have to make alternate arrangements for ground maintenance if they wanted to continue to fly to Kennedy. Department officials said maintenance was available to Aeroflot at Dulles Airport outside Washington.

In an earlier incident involving Aeroflot, a Kennedy-bound flight carrying Anatoly Dobrynin, the Soviet ambassador to the United Nations, was routed through airspace reserved for other traffic on Jan. 18 after important data was erased from an airport computer.

Federal officials have subpoenaed several air-traffic controllers in an effort to determine if the erasure was deliberate. Uncertain when they would be able to leave the United States, the 80 passengers were put up in an undisclosed hotel.

"We consider this an exercise in tough judgment by Aeroflot's people in insisting the plane arrive here. It's forcing a confrontation," said Tom Young, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates the airport.

The Ilyushin 62 jet landed at Kennedy on Sunday despite orders that it fly instead to Dulles Airport in Washington, D.C., because Aeroflot had not found anyone to service the jet.

The 68 passengers and 10 crew members on Sunday's flight disembarked, and baggage was unloaded by managers from a private contractor after the State Department intervened.

However, the aircraft's 5:30 p.m. outgoing flight was delayed after the private contractor and everyone else refused to perform pre-flight servicing.

Repayment Of Misused Funds Ends Squabble

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — A three-year legal tangle involving Wichita County Commissioners, the county treasurer's office, a family service program, the Texas Criminal Justice Division and $48,000 finally came to an end Monday.

County Treasurer Mary Lynn Welborn said she will issue a check for that amount to the Criminal Justice Division, after getting "heavy pressure and even harassment" from both sides in the issue.

"I'm doing what I think is best," she said. "I didn't make the move until I knew I was in the right."

The dispute began in 1977 when the Criminal Justice Division awarded the local family court services agency a $48,000 grant, but later demanded repayment, alleging the money was spent improperly.

County commissioners voted to repay the money, but former County Auditor Joe Gowdy withheld payment, claiming the repayment was not the county's responsibility.

Gowdy retired in May 1978 but then-treasurer Helen Kollman carried on his battle, suing commissioners to stop the repayment.

When she resigned, Mrs. Welborn succeeded her and still refused to issue the check, until a December 1978 ruling from the Texas Court of Civil Appeals against the treasurer's lawsuit.

'EST' Founder Enthusiastic After Years Of 'Transformation'

NEW YORK (AP) — Surely, after 10 years — 10 years of 15-hour seminars, 10 years of talk, 10 years guiding the faithful to "transformation" — surely, Werner Erhard is weary.

Wrong. The founder of "est" fairly crackles with enthusiasm.

Erhard overflows with all the terrific notions he wants to explain so that, sometimes, the verbs and nouns and gerunds get jammed in his gullet and he drops his head into his hands in silent frustration.

Werner Erhard could talk all day — and frequently does so — about est and "Being Ready For The Rest Of Your Life."

Erhard recently talked all day on both days of a weekend as his "BRFTROYL" played Madison Square Garden here. Several thousand of the curious, the needy or the devoted settled into the underheated Felt Forum to see a tiny Erhard sitting on a distant stage beneath a giant, live television image of himself.

They came to hear Erhard talk for eight hours. His message: Like everyone else, you want your life to matter, but nothing you do makes any difference.

"BRFTROYL" purports to teach people to live in a way that "matters." Yet Erhard never says, "Here's how." That's because he believes you cannot tell people "The Truth."

Instead, he says, you must build a jungle gym-like structure of words and ideas that people can "climb through." Once listeners reach the top of Erhard's 8-hour message, he is confident most will know how to make life "matter."

"You can talk in such a way that people can climb through what you say and see the truth themselves, and that's really the whole nature of that presentation," a slightly hoarse but buoyant Erhard said in an interview later.

"I truly do not want to convince people," he said. "I don't care what they see when it's over. I want to give them something to stand on."

Erhard was born Jack Rosenberg 44 years ago in Philadelphia. After high school, he worked as a car salesman. In 1960, he left his wife and children, changed his name to Werner Erhard — two names found in a magazine — and migrated west. Est followed 10 years ago.

Since 1971, 225,000 people — among them actress Valerie Harper and singer John Denver — have graduated from est, the controversial Erhard Seminar Training.

The est sessions, which purport to teach an expanded awareness of personal potential, are held in large meeting halls where the doors are secured and guarded by monitors.

Except for one meal and bathroom breaks spaced many hours apart, people are forbidden to leave each day's session, where — as one newspaper reported — they listen to hours-long lectures on complex Eastern philosophy, declarations of purpose and stinging personal insults.

Today, a $350 fee is charged to attend the two-weekend, 60-hour sessions.

The money, says Erhard, goes to est, which is "owned by an international charity (an apparent reference to the est Foundation) so whatever profit there is will wind up in the charity."

Erhard is salaried. His staff reports he is paid $75,000 a year. Also, Erhard says, he gets "expenses and a lot of facilities. I have an office and a house in which I work and an automobile."

What is est? Est booklets say the seminar aims to "transform your ability to experience living so that the situations you have been trying to change ... clear up just in the process of life itself."

Est is not all Erhard's done these last 10 years. The lean, blue-eyed Erhard is a veritable blur of motion. There is the est Graduate Seminar Program, for instance, and the est Communication Network.

There is the Hunger Project, which Erhard founded in 1977. Its goal is to end hunger in the world by 1997. How? "By generating a worldwide commitment to accomplish the task," according to the project's literature.

There is also Breakthrough Racing, an Erhard "research project" that worked this way: Erhard became an amateur national road racing champion, then went on to drive in professional car races.

Erhard says he considered sky-diving, entering a monastery or taking a university sabbatical from est but settled on racing because success in the sport requires a combination of careful planning, good teamwork and a solitary, personal test — the race.

Among the things Erhard hoped to "research" by racing a car, he says, was how to change "organizations from places that use people up into places of power within the organization, and that he hoped to find ways to provide that through his racing.

So what is the point of all this frenzied activity — the seminars and projects, the appearances and races? What is Werner Erhard trying to accomplish? What is his goal?

"I don't have any goal," he said. "My commitment is not to getting someplace. My commitment is to discovering the truth."

Bribery Scheme 'Shocks' Businessmen

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's young gambling industry was reeling Monday from allegations that several officials, including one responsible for regulating casinos, were involved in a bribery scheme involving gambling licenses.

"This is a hell of a big shock around here. It's really scary," said one ranking casino executive, who asked not to be identified. "It's scary because it creates such an aura of wrongdoing. One has to ask how far does this permeate? Who else is involved?"

Democratic state Sen. Steven P. Perskie, a major force for the legalization of casino gambling, warned that East Coast gaming could be crippled by charges a casino commissioner sought a $100,000 bribe from FBI undercover agents.

"If the people of New Jersey become convinced that we can't honestly regulate casinos, there could be pressure to end the (casino) experiment," Perskie said.

The allegations center on Kenneth N. MacDonald, vice chairman of the New Jersey Casino Control Commission. The FBI is said to allege that MacDonald sought $100,000 in exchange for a casino license.

MacDonald, 58, resigned from his $18,000-a-year, part-time post on Monday, but he has denied accepting any money.

Gov. Brendan Byrne said MacDonald resigned to protect the integrity of the five-member commission.

The FBI's investigation also reportedly implicates Angelo Errichetti, who is both the mayor of Camden and a Democratic state senator, and Democratic state Sen. Joseph Maressa, who allegedly bragged to undercover agents that they could help secure a casino license.

Errichetti and MacDonald allegedly took a bribe in a Cherry Hill hotel last March, according to reports.

The New Jersey officials are caught up in a much larger political corruption investigation in which the FBI has implicated eight members of Congress from several states. Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., is one of those named in the investigation, but not in connection with the gambling industry.

Casino industry experts, including Wall Street analysts, agreed the FBI's allegations cast a "cloud of suspicion" over casino gambling in Atlantic City.

"At best, it will have no effect," said one executive who also asked not to be quoted by name. "But it certainly looks bad and some people are sure to say, 'Hey, who are they kidding in New Jersey?"

"It challenges the credibility of a lot of things, especially the licensing process," said Theodore W. Anderson, Wall Street gaming analyst for Argus Research Corp.

Commission Chairman Joseph P. Lordi, a former Essex County prosecutor admitted his commission's "reputation is at stake" in the MacDonald case.

The commission has issued one casino license to Resorts International Hotel Casino and two temporary permits to Caesars World Inc. of Los Angeles and Bally Manufacturing Corp. of Chicago.

The commission is scheduled to begin hearings on Caesars' license application Feb. 28.

Raiders Stun Aggies

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Using defense as a chisel, and clutch free throw shooting as a hammer, Texas Tech did what no other Southwest Conference school had been able to do yet this year — the Raiders knocked a few bricks out of the vaunted Texas A&M Wall.

When the demolition work was completed Monday night in the Municipal Coliseum, the Raiders owned a stunning 63-53 upset over the Aggies and all that remained of A&M's perfect Southwest Conference record was rubble. It was the first SWC loss for the Aggies in 10 league outings.

The Raiders — effective in shutting off the Aggies' inside attack of Rudy Woods, Vernon Smith and Rynn Wright — delivered a 10-point knockout as 8,139 delirious fans and a television audience in 47 states looked on. Tech is now 7-4 in SWC play and 13-8 on the year. The Aggies season record fell to 17-6.

The loss knocks the Aggies out of sole possession of first place and into a tie with Arkansas for the league's top spot.

According to Tech coach Gerald Myers, it was the Raider defense that proved to be the difference.

"We had to start off by stopping them," explained the Tech coach. "(Ralph) Brewster, (Ben) Hill and (David) Little just did an outstanding job stopping their inside game. And, of course, so did (Jeff) Taylor and (Kent) Williams outside. Thad Sanders came off the bench and also gave us a lift He (Sanders) played as good as anyone.

"I can't single anybody out," he added. "It was just a great, great team win. Hopefully, our defense is picking up now — we can play decent defense."

All the Raiders "decent defense" did was hold Woods to three field goals — including a meaningless slam dunk at the bench and also gave us a lift He (Sanders) played as good as anyone. Brewster missed the free throw. The ball somehow bounced out to Hill, who dropped in another short one to make it Tech 43-41 with 7:26 to go.

Down on the other end of the court, Smith drew his fifth foul — sending Little to the line with 7:01 remaining. Protesting the foul, Smith also drew a technical foul as he left the game. Little hit both ends of the one-and-one. Williams connected on the technical free throw and Brewster got a layup on the in-bounds play. Score: Tech 50-41.

Brewster also drew a foul on the bucket, hit the free throw and the Raiders had racked up six unanswered points since Smith's departure. Suddenly, with 5:59 to go the Raiders owned a 10-point lead, 51-41.

Both coaches agreed that was the turning point.

"Tech deserved to win," said A&M's Shelby Metcalf. "They played better than we did. They had a good game plan and they stuck with it all night. Tech did an excellent job inside tonight, unlike our first game."

The Aggies claimed a 63-60 win over the Raiders in that first game when Woods scored 20 points and Wright had 15. But this time, the Tech defense kept Woods from getting the ball inside.

"Woods is the heart of their team," explained Tech's Brewster. "So we just tried to keep him from getting the ball. Before we'd been playing hard, but we hadn't been playing defense. Coach Myers had been stressing that and that's what we worked on."

Brewster scored 12 points for the Raiders and hauled down seven rebounds while working on the bigger Woods. Taylor led Tech in scoring with 13 points, while Little and Williams scored 12 apiece.

Little was four of four at the line in the game's waning moments and Williams hit eight of nine charity shots in the contest, including four straight in the game's final three minutes.

Once the Raiders got their 10-point spread, they went into a delay game that looked like it might cost them dearly.

Arkansas Beats Texas Christian

By The Associated Press

Scott Hastings and U.S. Reed combined for 27 points Monday night as the Arkansas Razorbacks roared to a 74-47 victory over Texas Christian University.

Arkansas turned nine steals into seven stuff shots and smothered TCU with its man-to-man defense.

TCU managed to shoot only 31 percent from the floor, the lowest percentage by a Razorback opponent this year.

Arkansas jumped out to an early 7-2 lead, with Reed and Brad Friess making steals and breakaway dump shots in the first four minutes.

After TCU sliced the margin to 9-5, Arkansas ripped to a 20-8 lead midway through the opening half, and TCU never recovered.

Texas 84, Houston 82

LaSalle Thompson led Texas to a 34-point first-half explosion and the Longhorns held off a late Houston rally to capture an 84-82 Southwest Conference victory at home Monday night.

The contest was a battle for fourth place in the SWC, as both teams had a conference record of 5-3.

Thompson, a 6-10 freshman, pitched in 13 points and grabbed 14 rebounds in the first half as Texas bolted to a 54-32 lead.

Cousins Robert and Kenneth Williams led a late surge by Houston which came within a single basket of tying the game.

SMU 73, Baylor 69

Southern Methodist survived a second-half cold spell and held off the Baylor Bears 73-69 Monday night in a Southwest Conference basketball game, despite 25 points by Terry Teagle, the conference's leading scorer.

SMU led 64-54 with 10:31 to play, but failed to score over the next 6:03 and Baylor pulled to within five points.

Brad Branson, who scored 12 of his 19 points in the second half, hit a 12-foot jumper and teammate Richard Harris put in two more baskets for a 70-59 lead and the Mustangs went to a control game to preserve the victory.

Rice 84, Wright State 78

Ricky Pierce scored 26 points and Brian Burns led a second half surge as Rice overcame 33 turnovers Monday night to defeat Wright State 84-78 in a non-conference game in Houston.

Rice shot an amazing 71 per cent from the field in the decisive second half and finished with 62 percent for the game.

Wright State, the No. 2 ranked NCAA Division II team in the country, led Rice 63-57 with 9:57 left in the game.

The loss snapped an eight-game winning streak for the Raiders.

Aggie Women Beat Tech

The Texas Tech women's team lost its shooting touch Monday afternoon in Municipal Coliseum and dropped its first home game of the season, losing a 66-64 heartbreaker to Texas A&M.

The Red Raiders are now 19-7 this season, and 10-1 in the Coliseum. The Aggies, under new coach Cheri Rapp are now 14-8.

Tech trailed 63-54 with a little over two minutes left in the game, but the Aggies responded by missing the front end of four straight one-and-one free throws.

When Lynn Webb connected on a behind-the-back layup with 12 seconds showing on the clock, the Raiders had cut the gap to 65-64. But the Raiders were unable to get the ball in the game's final seconds, and the Aggies tacked on a free throw with two seconds remaining to seal the victory.

Tech could connect on only 22 of 63 field goal attempts in the game for an anemic 34.9 percentage. Tech's Pam Stone hit on only five of 16 efforts. Rose Pankunis went one for seven and Miss Webb was three of 13 as the Raiders could not find the range.

Only a 20 of 24 effort from the free throw line kept Tech close.

The Aggie women, on the other hand, hit 30 of 68 field goal efforts, but could only connect of six of 17 free throw opportunities. Lori Foreman led the A&M attack with 16 points and nine rebounds.

Louise Davis, who hit on six of 10 field goals, led the Raiders with 14 points. Vicki Lee was next with 12. Miss Davis hauled down 10 rebounds and Miss Stone had 12.

The Tech women will continue their schedule Friday when they host the Texas Longhorn women, the nation's No. 1-rated women's college team.

Participation In Doubt Taiwanese Lose Olympic Lawsuit

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Taiwan no longer can compete in the Olympics under the name "Republic of China" and no longer can use its flag or anthem in Olympic ceremonies under a ruling handed down by a Swiss court on Monday.

Rejection of the appeal, made against a lower court ruling last month and culminating a tense legal battle, paved the way for Mainland China's return to the Games for the first time since the Communist takeover in 1949. The attorney for the Taiwanese said he felt they would rather not compete than go to the Games under the conditions imposed by the International Olympic Committee and supported by the courts.

Under a formula devised by the IOC and supported by two-thirds of its members, Taiwan's athletes had been ordered to change their name, flag and anthem in all future Games.

The Taiwanese National Olympic Committee and the IOC member in Taipei, Henry Hsu, contested the idea and sought a court injunction setting the formula aside for the upcoming Winter Games and the summer event later this year.

"The decision by a three-man panel of judges was relayed by mail to both sets of lawyers and confirmed to The Associated Press on Monday by Francois Carrard, lawyer for the IOC.

The decision is bound to be viewed in Olympic circles as a personal triumph for IOC President Lord Killanin, who tried for years to bring athletes from the Mainland into the Games. But it also seemed to end Killanin's chances of both sides competing in the Olympics.

Alain Wurzbarger, counsel for the Taiwanese, said on receipt of the decision that his clients would now probably decide not to take part in this year's Winter or Summer Games.

"It is clear they will probably not now compete," he said. At the appeal hearing last Thursday, representatives of the Taiwan NOC said its athletes would find it "extremely difficult" to appear without their national flag and anthem.

Wurzbarger stressed, however, that the Taiwanese fight was "far from over."

The Taiwan NOC and Hsu already have filed two complex lawsuits calling for the complete annulment of the IOC formula which, they claimed, violated key passages of the Olympic charter. Wurzbarger said neither suit was expected to be heard for several months.

Carrard said the three judges at Thursday's appeal session had ruled that the formula was not detrimental to Hsu either materially or morally and that he was the only party legally allowed to bring the appeal.

LCC Baseball Season Begins

EL PASO (Special) — The Lubbock Christian College baseball team begins its tenth season when it plays double-headers today and Wednesday against the University of Texas-El Paso. Both days games are scheduled to start at 1 p.m.

The Chaparrals, winners of the District VIII title in six of the last seven years, were 42-24 last year, but coach Larry Hays is concerned with their depleted pitching staff.

Hays had counted on the return of ace Kevin Burke and Dick Battle, but those two have been lost to academic ineligibility and chronic arm troubles, respectively.

Two-time NAIA All-American first baseman Tim Leslie will split duty between the infield and the pitcher's mound and may start one of the opening-day games with UTEP.

Hays has selected Rick Coskrey and Noel Delgado as his first-day starters, and Leslie and Toney as his pitchers Wednesday.

Dan Sanders is the top relief pitcher. Hays' starting lineup elsewhere is expected to consist of catcher Bob Nottbart, first baseman Leslie, second baseman Tommy Inman, shortstop Steve Brigante, third baseman Kenny Toney, center fielder Jimmy Durham, either Steve Cargil or Armando Sedeno in left and either John White or Karl Mahan in right. Richard Bowles is the designated hitter.

The Chaparrals lost two of three games with UTEP last season.

Lawyers Try To Speed Raiders' Move

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lawyers for the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission told a federal judge today that if the Oakland Raiders are to play in Los Angeles next season, improvements at the Coliseum "must be undertaken yesterday, if not within the next few weeks."

Maxwell Blecher also told U.S. District Judge Harry Pregerson that work could begin "within the week or three-abouts" if the judge issues a preliminary injunction barring a National Football League rule that requires three-fourths of the 28 team owners to approve a franchise move.

The Coliseum Commission, seeking to lure the Raiders to Los Angeles, is challenging the NFL's three-fourths rule on the grounds it violates federal antitrust laws by denying team owners the right to decide where they will do business.

Pregerson, however, appeared skeptical about Fletcher's claim of urgency. The judge pointed out that even if he ruled in the Coliseum Commission's favor, NFL appeals could take a year or two.

"The case has been on file here for two years," he said. "Now all of a sudden there's an 11th-hour rush to judgment."

Pregerson also questioned the commission's claim that the Raiders' move would not be approved by the necessary 21 club owners during a vote. Noting that the NFL has claimed its members are not competitors because they share in ticket and television revenues, the judge said he assumed the owners would approve a move since what is good for the Raiders is good for the league.

Blecher replied, "You're assuming that these owners are all rational people."

Last winter, the Los Angeles commission tried to have the league's territorial restraints struck down as a violation of antitrust law provisions making it illegal for economic competitors to agree among themselves not to battle in the same geographic markets.

Had the court found a per se violation, it could have declared the restraints illegal on their face without any further argument.

But Pregerson ruled that while NFL clubs were economic competitors, they were not competing "in the traditional sense," and refused to issue the immediate ruling requested by the commission.

Meanwhile, the Raiders appeared closer to committing themselves to a move here following a team spokesman's claim Sunday that Oakland officials had lied to the club.

"What it boils down to is that we have been lied to," Raiders publicist John Herrera told the San Francisco Chronicle after learning that an $8 million loan-and-improvements offer aimed at persuading Raiders Managing General Partner Al Davis to renew the team's lease with the Oakland Coliseum was no longer

BOSTON (AP) — A judge on Monday ordered life-preserving kidney treatments to continue for Earle Spring until more doctors can examine him and say whether he is mentally competent to decide about the treatment.

Spring's family has been trying for weeks to win court permission to suspend dialysis treatment for the 78-year-old nursing home patient, contending he would prefer a relatively quick death if he were still mentally alert. However, a doctor and several nurses who have observed Spring contend he is lucid at times and has expressed the will to live.

In Monday's ruling, Massachusetts Supreme Court Justice Francis J. Quirico, ordered that dialysis continue indefinitely. Quirico also ordered a lower-court judge to reopen the case and make a new decision after receiving the opinions of three additional doctors.

Quirico said Spring should be examined by a general practitioner, a psychiatrist and a geriatric specialist, and each should submit his findings separately to Franklin County Probate Judge Sanford Keedy.

Doctors say Spring, an outdoorsman and retired pharmacist, would die within months without dialysis.

Last month, Keedy ruled the blood-purifying treatments could be stopped. However, Quirico reinstated the treatments a few days later while the case was under review.

"I am willing to concede that (Keedy) did not abuse his discretion or commit legal error," Quirico said of the earlier ruling.

However, Quirico added that the case was extraordinary and required special efforts to get the best medical evidence possible.

Keedy also was ordered to hold further hearings on the case in the local probate court in Greenfield.

Quirico noted that Spring's family had him examined by a psychiatrist only a week ago. The judge noted that he had not treated that psychiatrist's report as evidence but that, if he had, he would have issued the same ruling anyway.

Keedy said he would not comment on the case except to say that he may have a timetable today for selecting a panel of doctors.

Mark Berson, the court-appointed guardian for Spring, also refused comment until he had read the order.

Marguerite M. Dolan, attorney for Spring's wife and son, Robert, said, said the elder Spring remained in the Holyoke Geriatric Center except for his thrice-weekly dialysis treatments in Springfield.

"His condition is essentially unchanged," she said. "He is tied in a wheel chair. He tends to slump over so his head is almost down on the tray. Sometimes he speaks and sometimes he responds only with grunts. At no time does he speak in sentences."

J. Owen Todd, the Boston attorney who represented Holyoke nurses seeking to prevent the end of the dialysis treatment, said of the Quirico ruling that "this is particularly gratifying that he has ordered an exhaustive, selective examination."

Gas Dealer Jailed For Overcharging

BOSTON (AP) — A service station owner was sentenced in federal court Monday to spend a month behind bars for charging up to $1.57 a gallon for gasoline, 66 cents more than the nationwide average during last summer's shortage.

Glenn Heller, owner of a tiny, one-island station at the foot of Beacon Hill, was convicted last month of 27 counts of overcharging.

Before he was sentenced, Heller read a 30-minute statement in court accusing big oil companies of trying to drive independently operated service stations out of business.

In addition to the 30-day term, U.S. District Judge Rya Zobel gave Heller an 11-month suspended sentence and fined him $9,450 — $350 per each of the 27 counts. He was released on bail pending appeal.

The judge said Heller, 30, was the first service station operator to be prosecuted for price gouging. Heller was indicted Aug. 1, 1979, for charging up to $1.57 for a gallon of unleaded gas in June.

Prices nationwide averaged 91 cents for a gallon of unleaded during June, according to Energy Department figures.

Heller argued that he needed to charge more than the legal maximum so that he could pay his rent on his little Beacon Hill Gulf. He drastically raised his prices during the gasoline shortage, he said, to slow down sales so he could stay open around the clock.

The courtroom was packed with gasoline dealers from around New England who applauded loudly after Heller finished his statement.

"The retail gasoline dealer, the little guy at the corner filling station, is surprisingly the only businessman in the United States today who has a federally regulated margin of profit that is destined to put him into bankruptcy," Heller said.

Heller noted that there are no controls on food or heating oil — only on gasoline, a fuel that "merely powers the personal luxury automobile, which is the most inefficient and wasteful machine in our society."

He maintained that big oil companies are squeezing independent operators of company-owned stations with higher rent so they will go out of business. The purpose, he said, is to replace them with a few profitable company-operated service stations.

"In 10 years you look to see how many of your friendly neighborhood service stations are left," he said. "You won't see any. They will have all been replaced by big company-operated pumps."

During his trial, Heller argued that he was following his lawyer's advice when he boosted his prices. He said his lawyer told him that since the station had been closed for three weeks before he took it over, he was not bound by the previous proprietor's profit margins.

Heller has operated the station since August 1976.

Former Inmates Detail Torture Inside Camps

LONDON (UPI) — Hundreds of prisoners in Argentina's concentration camps are tortured with electric cattle prods and some are drugged and then dropped unconscious from a plane into the sea, two former camp inmates said Monday.

Speaking at a news conference called by the human rights group Amnesty International, the two men who spent more than a year in the camps said torture for Jewish prisoners also includes kneeling before a picture of Hitler or Mussolini.

Amnesty International, based in London, said it spent months cross-checking the story before releasing the report of what has happened to some of the more than 15,000 people reported missing in Argentina since 1976.

The two men, Oscar Alfredo Gonzalez, 29, a union activist, and Horacio Guillermo, 22, a student leader, said they escaped Feb. 18, 1979, while on their way to be interrogated. They said they spent 15 months in five different camps.

Guillermo and Gonzalez named 25 fellow prisoners who they were certain were killed and more than 800 who were tortured or held in concentration camps. Amnesty International listed 330 of the names in an appendix to its report.

The men described their first camp, Club Atletico — The Athletic Club — in Buenos Aires, as a house of horrors where prisoners were taken to one of three "operating theaters" — torture chambers — for hours on end.

"Naked, we were bound hand and foot with thick chains or straps to a metal table. Then an earthing (grounding) cable was attached to one of our toes and the torture began," they said.

"For the first hour, they would apply the Piena (cattle prod) to us, without asking any questions. The purpose of this, as they put it, was to soften you up, and so that we'll understand one another. They went on like this for hours."

Gonzalez and Guillermo went on to describe an even worse fate — what was known among the prisoners as "transfers" or the "final decision."

"In April 1980, a comrade who had been held in another camp told us what he managed to find out about the 'transfers' in that camp," they said.

All those transferred were injected with a powerful sedative. Afterwards, they were loaded into a lorry and from there into an aircraft, from which they were thrown into the sea, alive but unconscious."

The Amnesty International report said Jewish prisoners were singled out for special treatment.

"From the moment they were kidnapped until they were included in a 'transfer,' they (Jews) were systematically tortured," the two men said. "Some of them were made to kneel in front of pictures of Hitler and Mussolini, to renounce their origins."

Female Worker Fired For Wearing Swim Suit On Job

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — Sue Jacobs, a shapely 21-year-old construction worker, was fired last summer for wearing a one-piece bathing suit on the job. Her boss said he was afraid she might cause an accident.

Now Miss Jacobs is complaining to the Michigan Civil Rights Department, saying the company broke its promise to hire her as a permanent employee. She was as a probationary worker when the incident occurred.

"I'm still as mad about it today as when they told me," Miss Jacobs said last week. "If the men weren't working because they were watching me, why didn't they fire the men?"

'Unfit' Prison May House Up To 30 Inmates

DENVER (UPI) — A reluctant but "morally obligated" Gov. Richard Lamm Monday said Colorado would temporarily house 30 maximum security inmates from the riot-torn New Mexico State Prison, even though the Colorado penitentiary was recently declared unfit for human habitation.

"A neighbor's house is on fire and we feel morally obligated to lend a helping hand," Lamm told a Capitol news conference. "I've got to say that this isn't something we would do normally but we feel it is only proper and fitting that we reciprocate the help New Mexico has given us in the past."

The New Mexico facility, located in a desert area 10 miles southeast of Santa Fe, was the scene of weekend rioting by inmates that ended in the deaths of at least 35 prisoners.

Lamm said he decided to accept the New Mexico inmates without conferring with the federal judge who late last year ordered the Colorado prison shut down within 45 days if evidence of major improvements at the facility was not made.

Ironically, the deadline for the state's submission of its prison improvement plan to U.S. District Judge John Kane was Monday.

"I have met with the state attorney general and he has concurred that it would be acceptable to bring the New Mexico inmates to Colorado," Lamm said. "I also suspect that Judge Kane would approve."

James Joy, executive of the Colorado chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union which represented inmates in the prison suit resulting in Kane's ruling, said the ACLU was awaiting further information on the planned inmate transfers.

"We're talking to the attorney general's office about accommodations for the New Mexico inmates," Joy said. "The court has said the prison is uninhabitable and that presumably includes people from New Mexico."

"If the addition of the New Mexico inmates means a significant stress on the state's already limited facilities, then we will have to take a hard, firm look at the situation," he said.

Lamm said Bill Wilson, superintendent of the Colorado prison's maximum security unit, would be dispatched to New Mexico as soon as possible to arrange for the transfers.

"I've asked him (Wilson) to check records of inmates to make sure they were not involved in the latest insurrection and that they are people who would not exacerbate our existing situation," Lamm said.

But when told that many prison records had been destroyed by the rioting New Mexico inmates, Lamm said Wilson would then have to use "word of mouth" in determining which prisoners would be brought to Colorado.

He said the New Mexico inmates would be housed in 16 cells at the Colorado prison and that they would be integrated with the general prison population.

"They are going to have to have access," Lamm said. "They will get recreational yard privileges and they'll eat with the other inmates."

The governor also said he did not anticipate any outbreaks of violence as a result of the assimilation of the New Mexico prisoners with Colorado inmates, but admitted "we'll all be walking on eggs."

"It's that way every minute in the prison system," he said.

Lamm said no additional prison staff was planned as a result of the inmate transfers and that New Mexico would compensate Colorado for housing its prisoners.

"We don't know yet what the compensation will be," Lamm said. "They are being forced to move fast and they can't get down to the niceties of how much they are going to pay us, which is understandable."

Writer Describes Scene At Prison After Riot

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A National Guard doctor pulled back the blanket covering one of the bodies brought from the prison on a stretcher.

"You don't want to see this," he said.

He was right. I had already seen it. It was the headless body of a small black man, one of the more than 30 bodies found following this nation's most violent prison riot since 43 men died at Attica prison in upstate New York in 1971.

Prisoners seized control of the state's only maximum security facility early Saturday and held it for 36 hours, until National Guardsmen and state police recaptured it Sunday afternoon.

No shots were fired. I was standing there when they came through in formation, two abreast.

Most of the guardsmen were carrying M-16 carbines. Many policemen toted shotguns.

The men, about 125 of them, moved in rapidly. I saw no resistance.

They marched up to the front of the administration building and motioned for prisoners who had gathered there to move to a grassy area and sit down. They obeyed.

Later, about 25 of the prisoners got a bit rowdy and refused to budge.

"Why don't you go ahead and shoot, we don't have any guns," one of them said, adding a curse.

I went through the administration area as far as the control center, which the inmates had seized to give them control of the whole prison.

Inch-thick tempered glass recently had been installed at the control center. Before that, the glass had also been covered by bars.

I heard one prison official say the glass was supposed to be impregnable, but that it took inmates only seven seconds to shatter it and get control of the center.

In the corridor next to the control center, there was a body lying in the water on the floor. There was no sign of mutilation.

The whole administration area was covered with 2 to 3 inches of water. The prisoners had ripped out the plumbing.

After the prison was back in state hands, most of the inmates coming out were either barefooted or sopping wet up to the trouser knees.

Rookie Guard Said Hidden, Led Toward Freedom

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Victor Gallegos, a rookie guard, lay bound naked on a cold cement floor for 28 hours, hidden from rampaging prisoners, before other convicts led him to freedom.

Gallegos, 22, said Monday a group of inmates befriended him during the siege at New Mexico State Penitentiary and brought him water, coffee, potato chips and little cakes as he lay hidden under a cell bunk.

He said he escaped from the smoke-filled cellblock with four convicts who removed his handcuffs and gave him a steel bar and prisoner's uniform as a disguise.

"I was praying the whole time hoping they wouldn't find me," said Gallegos, a former Marine and a guard at the prison for only three weeks.

He said in an interview at his mother's home that he was "very scared" but remained relatively calm as inmates went on a murderous riot that left at least 35 dead and 15 unaccounted for.

Fifteen prison employees, most of them guards, were taken hostage during the siege Saturday and Sunday, but none of them was among those killed.

Gallegos said he and two other guards were making rounds of the cellblocks Saturday morning, shortly after midnight, when "a guy dressed in a guard's uniform approached us carrying a flashlight and a homemade knife." The guards struggled to get the knife but were overpowered by the inmates, he said.

Gallegos said he was struck on the back of the head and the back with the flashlight.

"One of the officers got stabbed a couple of times when we tried to take the knife from him," he said.

Gallegos said he was blindfolded, stripped and bound with his belt. He was separated from the other guards and placed on his stomach with one wrist shackled to one ankle with handcuffs.

"People kept running by," he said. "I was kicked and slugged and threatened to be stabbed."

Later, Gallegos said, he was placed in a cell with Capt. Greg Roybal, a senior watch captain. Roybal, who was injured, was placed on a bunk, Gallegos said.

Gallegos was shoved by inmates under a bed, hidden from view.

As inmates left the smoke-filled cell, the door was locked from the inside and the outside latch was broken off. He said the rioters started beating the cell door with steel pipes in an attempt to gain entrance.

After about two hours, the door gave way, and about four rioting inmates rushed into the room and dragged Roybal away. Gallegos said the rioters apparently failed to notice him under the bed.

"You could hear them yelling," he said of the inmates. "They were trying to break in cellblock 4 and were cutting up the doors with torches."

Prison Guards Vote To Stay On Jobs

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — State prison guards were back on the job Monday after voting unanimously to remain at their posts following the bloody riot at the New Mexico State Penitentiary.

About 70 off-duty corrections officers met Sunday night at the Fraternal Order of Police lodge in Santa Fe. They said they wanted to dispel rumors that prison guards were planning to strike.

"We're not here to strike or leave the administration down in this time of need," said Capt. Joe Baca at the onset of the 2½-hour meeting.

"This is not a meeting to strike or stay away from work."

We're just here to stay what we feel we're worth."

The guards put together a list of 21 grievances, topped by a request for an increase in the base salary for corrections officers from $728 to $1,500 per month. Other items on the list included a call for a 20-year retirement plan and for the hiring of additional officers.

Prison Warden Jerry Griffin attended the meeting and spoke to the officers.

"We're working hard to increase it to at least $840," he said of the base salary. "The governor is willing to support a figure of $1,000 a month. Now we have to convince the rest of the legislature. I cannot promise it, but we will try for $1,000."

Oklahoma Agrees To Accept Inmates

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Gov. George Nigh said Monday Oklahoma will accept some of the inmates displaced by the New Mexico prison riot if given permission by federal court.

Nigh reminded Oklahoma has been under a federal court order to reduce its prison population on grounds overcrowding constitutes cruel and unusual treatment in violation of the constitution.

"We have been asked by the state of New Mexico to temporarily house as many as 50 inmates displaced by the rioting in Santa Fe over the weekend," Nigh said.

Mexico to reimburse us for any expense we incur in housing these inmates."

"Obviously, no firm agreement or decision has been reached in this matter as of this time," Nigh said. "We don't look forward to accepting this responsibility, but feel we owe it to our sister state of New Mexico to help them if we can."

Nigh's attorney, Larry Brawner, said a motion was filed in federal court at Muskogee, Okla., Monday and a hearing set for Wednesday in federal court in Oklahoma City on a petition to permit Oklahoma to accept some New Mexico prisoners.

Soviet News Agency Slams U.S. Penal System

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news agency on Monday called the riot at New Mexico State Prison a "bloodbath" and said such disorders were an inevitable result of the U.S. penal system.

Tass carried a 250-word dispatch headlined: "Bloodbath at Santa Fe."

The practice of some companies of "dumping" products in foreign markets after the U.S. government bans them for health reasons has been criticized by consumer organizations.

One example of the problem is Tris, a fire retardant used in millions of pairs of children's sleepwear until it was banned on the ground it could cause cancer.

A draft of a White House export policy would forbid export of products or substances that would affect the environment of other countries besides the importing nation, the Washington-based weekly, Product Safety Letter, reported.

The letter said export of local hazards would be permitted, but only if the receiving country granted permission. The draft policy would require annual notice to receiving countries of a hazardous product or substance that is banned or under restricted distribution in the United States.

It asserted that "riots at U.S. prisons are an inevitable consequence of the anti-humane character of the U.S. 'correction' system."

"U.S. authorities use any pretext to do away with imprisoned opponents of the existing order and quite often resort to physical extermination of prisoners," Tass said.
