

Crime Line Felony Case Rewards Total $2,000

CRIME LINE this week is offering rewards totaling $2,000 in six felony cases.

Tips are continuing to come in to Crime Line concerning felonies in Lubbock. Police emphasize that anyone having information about a felony crime, whether is described in The Avalanche-Journal or not, is urged to call Crime Line.

Rewards ranging from $300 to $1,000 are offered if the information leads to an arrest and indictment. Callers may remain anonymous.

Anyone wishing to make a donation to the Crime Line reward fund may mail the contribution to Crime Line, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, 79457. All donations are tax-deductible.

A $500 reward is offered in the Feb. 9 armed robbery of the Holiday Inn at 6624 Ave. H, in which about $340 cash was taken.

The manager told police two men entered the motel lobby about 12-15 a.m. and demanded money. One of the men was armed with a blue-steel revolver. The other reportedly had a semi-automatic chrome-plated pistol.

One of the men was described as white, about 20 years old, 5 feet 8, stocky build, with short dark hair and a mustache, wearing a green waist-length down jacket. The second robber was described as white, also about 20 years old, 5 feet 10, with blond, near shoulder-length hair.

A $300 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of the persons who have been passing forged checks on Texas Instruments Inc.

The checks cashed in Lubbock Feb. 8 and 9, total about $10,000.

The checks are said to be of very poor quality, signed by J.R. Johnson, a fictitious name. The checks were cashed by a man identifying himself as James Allen Taylor, 39, Colorado driver's license number 110081, and by a woman identifying herself as Erica Leigh Samuels, 42, using Texas identification card number 2504720.

A $300 reward is offered in the burglary of a home at 2127 52nd St., in which goods valued at $1,400 were stolen.

The stolen items include a Zenith AM-FM radio, a lady's beige plastic jewelry box, a man's gold watch, a gold wedding band, a lady's Elgin gold watch and a large assortment of costume jewelry.

A $300 reward is also offered in the Feb. 11 burglary of a house at 2002 32nd St. Between 6:40 and 7:40 p.m. someone broke a window and entered the house, taking items valued at $6,970.

The stolen items include two diamond rings, a wedding ring, a Pinkie ring, a Sears black-and-white television with AM-FM radio, a digital clock, a pair of brass roosters, a brown cowboy hat, a lady's rabbit coat, an HBO control box and an undetermined amount of jewelry.

Crime Line offers a $300 reward in the Feb. 10 burglary of the Ajax Roofing Co., 2115 4th St. Taken in the burglary were $80 cash, several hand tools, Timex and Bulova watches, a .38-caliber Baretta blue-steel revolver in a tan holster and a metal tool box filled with tools. The value of the missing items is $600.

A $300 reward is also offered in the Feb. 13 burglary at the General Tire Co., 1702 Ave. Q. A burglar apparently entered the business through a broken window and made off with a Quasar Video-Tape Recorder valued at $1,500.

Bush Defeats Baker In Puerto Rico Vote

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — George Bush won all 14 of Puerto Rico's Republican convention delegates Sunday in the first presidential primary of 1980.

Bush, a former CIA director and ambassador, defeated Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee by a nearly 3-2 margin in the winner-take-all primary.

The primary, which was held without the privacy of voting booths and paid for by voters dropping donations into coffee cans, was the first-ever presidential primary for Puerto Rico.

Bush's son, Jeb, who was in charge of the campaign here in its final weeks, said in an interview: "We won. The numbers are too far ahead for him (Baker) to catch up."

Baker Popular In Rural Areas

As returns trickled in from rural precincts, Baker did better than he had in the urban areas — but not well enough to overcome Bush's commanding lead there.

Bush, campaigning in Nashua, N.H., Sunday, said that a victory in Puerto Rico would illustrate "the national aspect of our candidacy. It is not just a one or two state campaign."

He said the victory "will lift up our workers and continue our momentum. It will help us in New Hampshire and set off some of the attacks on me."

Bush Leads Delegate Count

Bush will carry a 17-9 lead in formally bound delegates into the New Hampshire voting on Feb. 26. Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, who was not entered in Sunday's primary is second. Baker, in third place, has a total of five delegates committed to him.

A total of 998 delegates is needed for the GOP presidential nomination.

Also on the ballot were former Texas Gov. Jonn Connally, California businessman Benjamin Fernandez, former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, and Kansas Sen. Bob Dole. There were also two political unknowns, Bedo Istvan Karoly of Washington, D.C., and Gerald Thomas de Felice of Hamden, Conn.

Reagan was not a candidate but received 28 write-in votes with 41 per cent of the precincts reporting.

With 3,060 precincts reporting of 3,436, or 89 percent, Bush received 106,872 votes, Baker 62,569, Connally 1,921, Fernandez 1,746, Stassen 549, Dole 429, Reagan 58, Karoly 45 and de Felice 45.

Socialist advocates of independence staged a demonstration at the historic Spanish fort known as El Morro in Old San Juan, tearing down the American flag. The National Park Service, which runs the fort as a museum, park and tourist attraction, closed the fort as a precaution and the protesters and all the usual visitors left. The incident was peaceful. No injuries or arrests were reported.

Orestes Ramos, the Republican Party official in charge of running the election, said that voting booths had been ruled out because of a court decision last Monday that barred the use of public funds to run both this primary and another that Democrats will hold March 16.

Because of that decision, the Republican Party will hold March 16.

SHIP MISSING
CAGLIARI, Sardinia (AP) — Ships and helicopters searched on Sunday for the 900-ton Italian freighter Misurina, which sent a radio distress call saying it was in danger of sinking and its crew of 12 was about to abandon ship.

Warm Trend To Precede New Chiller

AFTER A cold, snowy weekend, the weather once again should begin warming up significantly before taking yet another plunge toward the end of the week.

Lubbock didn't break the freezing barrier Sunday, posting a high of 32 degrees after an overnight low of 22 degrees. Some snow and sleet fell across portions of town throughout the night and day Sunday, but the National Weather Service officially recorded only a trace of precipitation.

A warming trend, boosted by a warm air patch sandwiched between two major arctic air patterns, is expected to enter the area early today, and kick this afternoon's high into the middle 50s. By Tuesday, the South Plains could see highs in the 60s, according to the NWS.

No Precipitation Due

The chance for precipitation, which stood at 20 percent Sunday night, should disappear along with the freezing temperatures today. No precipitation is expected across the area until perhaps late in the week.

While South Plains residents shivered through Sunday, the areas to the north and south both suffered more during the weekend. Most of the Panhandle was covered with snow during the weekend, but roads remained clear and open.

And to the south, a traveler's advisory blanketed the Permian Basin Sunday as rain, sleet and snow fell along a line from

Commission Chosen To Investigate Shah

U.S. Accepts Panel's Composition

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim chose a five-member international commission Sunday to probe Iran's grievances against the deposed shah, and the United States agreed to the selections, a U.N. official said. He added that Waldheim was awaiting Iran's response.

"The secretary-general has finalized the composition of the commission and has communicated it to the parties," U.N. spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said.

"As far as I know the United States has communicated the answer. It is positive. They agreed," the spokesman added.

The commission was designed as a step toward the release of about 50 American hostages held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4 by Islamic militants who have said they take orders only from Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

There have been ambiguous and sometimes contradictory signals in recent days as to when and under what conditions the commission mechanism would lead to the hostages' release.

Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, in an interview over Greek television broadcast Saturday, said the hostages would not be freed until the commission delivered its findings and the United States "undertakes" its obligations. It appeared to be a harder line than he had taken earlier in the week, when he indicated the Americans might be released once the commission began its inquiry.

The temporary transfer of the hostages to a third party also has been mentioned as a possible stage in the release process.

President Carter said Wednesday he favored formation of "an appropriate commission with a carefully defined purpose" as a way to free the hostages, but said he could not go into details. For the first time since the occupation of the embassy, he did not insist that the release of the hostages be the first step in any deal to end the crisis.

Carter also said the United States would not admit any role in alleged misuse by exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi — one of the "obligations" Bani-Sadr mentioned several times last week.

The Iranian president has also said the United States must pledge not to interfere in Iranian affairs. And in the interview with Greek television, he also listed the "return" of the deposed shah from Panama as one of the unresolved obligations, although he had said previously the United States would have to agree not to block Iran's efforts to return the shah and his wealth.

It was not clear which public statements in recent days reflected movement in the delicate, private negotiations.

White House and State Department spokesmen said they had no immediate reaction on the selection of the commission members. The White House was not expected to make any statement on the commission until it is formally announced at the United Nations.

The U.N. spokesman did not name the commission members. He said an announcement would be made once both sides had agreed to the composition of the panel.

Diplomats had said earlier that the commission would consist of five lawyers, from Bangladesh, Algeria, France, Syria and Venezuela. But the chosen panel member from Bangladesh, former President Abu Sayeed Chowdhury, was ill, so Waldheim had to find a replacement, sources said.

A well-placed source, who asked not to be identified, said the replacement was a lawyer from Sri Lanka, Hary W. Jayewardene.

Diplomats have said the other commission members would be Algerian U.N. Ambassador Mohamed Bedjaoui, former Paris Bar Association President Edmond Louis Pettiti, Syrian Presidential aide Adib Daoudy and former Venezuelan Justice Minister Andres Aguilar.

A Venezuelan newspaper, El Diario de Caracas, quoted Aguilar as saying he had accepted designation to the commission, after a telephone call from Waldheim, and would leave for the United States shortly.

Because of the delay in naming the commission, it was unlikely that Waldheim would be able to lead it.

Draft Plan Due House Scrutiny

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is about to begin examining President Carter's draft registration plan, amid growing demands for information the administration has refused to release.

Selective Service Director Bernard Rotker and Pentagon manpower chief Robert B. Pirie Jr. have been summoned to testify Tuesday before the House armed services personnel subcommittee on Carter's plan to register men and women aged 18 to 20.

In general, members of the panel advocate registering men, but are hostile to the idea of registering women.

Rep. Richard White, D-Texas, its chairman, predicts Congress will reject registration of women, and it appears likely the subcommittee will try to stop that part of the program before it goes any further.

Carter already has authority to register men but needs legislation from Congress to begin registering women.

Also taking a look at the plan is the House Budget Committee's task force on defense and international affairs, which has scheduled a hearing for Wednesday on the budgetary impact of registration.

Women To Testify

However, its witness list includes no Pentagon or Selective Service officials or any financial experts.

Instead, the task force has invited Eleanor Smeal, president of the National Organization for Women, former Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., sociologist Charles Moskos and Kathy Teague of the Eagle Forum, a group founded by Phyllis Schlafly which has collected petition signatures against the registration of women.

The administration is coming under increasing pressure in Congress and elsewhere to release a report Selective Service prepared for the White House on various ways to mobilize young people for military duty in time of emergency.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., threatened Sunday to file suit for disclosure of the report under the Freedom of Information Act. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., already has filed a Freedom of Information request for the material.

Similar requests have been filed by representatives of groups opposed to reg-

Poison Cargo Poses Threat To Britain

LONDON (AP) — Every day for more than two months, firemen in airtight yellow suits have been patrolling the beaches of the Isle of Wight.

They are looking for a killer that rides the tides — bottle-shaped canisters filled with a chemical so toxic when it hits the air that getting too close means the "sniff of death."

So far more than 1,000 canisters have washed ashore, all part of a cargo of chemicals aboard the Greek freighter Aeolian Sky when it sank 30 miles east of the island last Nov. 4.

The "sniff of death" canisters illustrate the vulnerability of Britain's coastline to the hazards of shipping accidents.

The island's small firefighting force, just 40 fulltime men, say they are pushed to the limit keeping pace with the tides.

No one has yet been harmed yet.

The islanders may turn to the British army for help.

"If nothing is done we could be faced with a problem for years," said Laurie Campbell, chief scientific officer.

Most of the canisters contain arsenic trichloride, an industrial chemical which gives off deadly fumes when exposed to air. Firemen gingerly remove them for storage in what they say is a "public-proof" compound on a remote part of the island.

England's southern coast is also plagued by the debris.

Coast Guard duty officer Alistair Todd said hundreds of bottles of chemicals, some lethal, from the Aeolian Sky are spoiling a 120-mile stretch of top tourist beach from Brighton to Weymouth.

Concern is growing for wildlife in the area. Just recently five dead pilot whales were washed ashore in the afflicted region and officials fear they were poisoned by chemical-polluted waters.

Tissue samples from the whales are being analyzed at the Fisheries Inspectorate to determine their cause of death.

If it is proved that the whales were poisoned, the British government will be under pressure to ban commercial fish-

Testimonies Postponed In Brilab

HOUSTON (UPI) — The two men who are the main focus of a federal grand jury inquiry into the so-called Brilab scandal in Texas have apparently succeeded in postponing their testimony — at least until the grand jury reconvenes in mid-March.

Operation Brilab is the code name of a government undercover scheme of kickbacks and bribe offers to labor and government officials who were in a position to help assign multi-million dollar health insurance contracts. The grand jury, which adjourned Friday until mid-March, has been investigating allegations of bribery in the insurance industry.

The panel is specifically inquiring into a meeting concerning the state employee insurance program in which Houston labor leader L.G. Moore allegedly gave Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton $5,000 in $100 bills.

Russell T. Kelley, executive assistant to Clayton, testified before the grand jury Friday. Kelley was reportedly present at the November meeting with Clayton and Moore.

Moore and his attorney, Mike Ramsey, walked out of the federal courthouse Friday after Ramsey filed a motion with the district clerk in the court's criminal division. The motion was sealed immediately.

Ramsey had staged a weeklong series of legal maneuvers to keep Moore from testifying before the grand jury before it adjourned its February session.

But Ramsey lost a series of motions and, when it appeared late Friday that Moore would have to testify, Ramsey hurriedly filed the motion. He and Moore then left the courthouse.

Asked if he had been successful at keeping Moore off the stand, Ramsey said: "I got out of there, didn't I?"

"I imagine that everybody will get another round of subpoenas," said Ramsey, indicating Moore would probably be called to testify when the grand jury began its next session in mid-March.

Although Clayton was called by the grand jury to testify, he failed to appear before the panel because his attorneys, who said they had not had time to prepare his case, obtained four postponements.

San Antonio Electric Bills Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — San Antonio consumers may be used to complaining about their electric bills, but a congressional panel suggests they could have had it worse.

A subcommittee report on the rates railroads charge for hauling coal computes what the San Antonio Public Service Board would be paying if its rate were set on a basis comparable to the rate Central Power and Light Co. pays at its new generating plant.

The report on the Interstate Commerce Commission's decisions concludes that the San Antonio rate would have catapulted from the $18.18 per ton rate approved last June to $24.56 per ton.

"Such an increase would cost San Antonio consumers alone more than one-half billion dollars over the life of their coal-fired generating plant," the report released Saturday said.

The study by the House commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations said it undertook those theoretical calculations to get an example of the potential inflationary impact of the Central Power and Light case.

The ICC set a dangerous precedent by authorizing a rate of $20.85 per ton for hauling coal to the Corpus Christi utility's plant at Coletto Creek, the report said.

"If allowed to stand, this decision would severely erode protection for captive shippers which Congress sought to assure," the report said, adding that the main significance was not in the rate itself but in the commission's justification for allowing it.

The ICC said it did not have jurisdiction to decide whether the rate was reasonable because railroads faced the prospect of competition as evidenced by the utility's comparative shopping and its ability to import South African coal.

"The commission concludes that a shipper is not entitled to rate regulation if it considered alternative coal sources and transportation modes in its planning process and if it is authorized to transfer or assign its contract," the report said.

"Moreover, the impact of Coletto Creek is not limited to coal consumers. If allowed to stand, the decision would severely erode the protection of rate regulation in all noncompetitive markets — not just western coal markets," it said.

The report studied the commission's decisions in railroad coal rate cases since the enactment of the Railroad Revitalization and Regulatory Act of 1976, known as the 4-R Act. The law relaxed rail rate regulation in competitive markets and left rate authority to the ICC only where it judged a railroad had "market dominance. The report concluded that as a result national energy goals are jeopardized by the commission's authorization of substantial increases in coal hauling rates.

The Texas cases started and decided by the ICC since the 4-R Act became law include rates charged the San Antonio Public Service Board, the Houston Power and Light Co., and the Celanese Chemical Corp. for hauling coal to its plant in the Panhandle.

The subcommittee's chairman is Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Texas, who said in an accompanying statement, "In setting coal rates, the ICC nullifies the protection Congress envisaged to prevent the public from paying for inefficiencies or excesses of a railroad without effective competition."

The report said San Antonio residents are uniquely sensitive to the effect the 4-R Act had on coal hauling rates since the ICC approved three steadily increasing rates over a two and one-half year period.

"The lessons of the San Antonio case history, however, are not limited in applicability to Texas or the Southwest. The impact of the San Antonio case has already been felt by consumers in the South, the Midwest and the West," the report said.

Lawyers Question Probe Into Santa Fe Riot

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Two attorneys and a state senator have questioned the impartiality of the investigation by the New Mexico attorney general's office into the riot at the state penitentiary.

Defense lawyers Steven Farber and Joan Friedland and Sen. Manny Aragon, D-Bernalillo, have questioned whether the attorney general's office should be responsible for both investigating the riot and prosecuting the criminal cases that stem from it.

"I don't think people are going to open up to the prosecutors," Aragon said Friday.

Aragon, a member of the state Senate Judiciary Committee, said that while the report from the attorney general's office could be "the most excellent report possible," it will "probably never be accepted by 50 percent of the people."

Thirty-three inmates were killed in the uprising Feb. 23.

Farber said the attorney general's staff members are "investigating their own clients — the Corrections Division."

Attorney General Jeff Bingaman said the criticism was unfounded, and that previous reports on the prison show the objectivity of his office.

Bingaman has said that assistant attorneys general Ralph Muxlow and Frank Murray, who represent prison officials, are being kept out of the riot investigation because of possible conflict of interest.

Both assistants work in the criminal division under Mike Francke, a deputy attorney general who has been a lawyer for prison officials in the past and who officials say will participate in the investigation.

Bingaman said it has been several years since Francke has been a lawyer for corrections officials.

Farber, a former assistant attorney general, said "I don't have any confidence at all that the citizens of New Mexico are going to receive an independent, impartial investigation of the conditions which caused the riot."

Miss Friedland said "for the most part, the attorney general represents the state, defends the state," and has an interest in seeing that the state does not incur liability. She said the attorney general's staff members could be reluctant to report information in an investigation "because they know that in a civil suit it could cost the state money."

Bingaman said his office would not handle civil suits stemming from the uprising, and he would personally supervise the investigation.

Many Candidates Running Unopposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Voters won't have any choices to make in electing almost a third of the members of the Texas House this year.

Barring upsets by write-in candidates, 46 of the 150 House members were — in effect — re-elected on the Feb. 4 candidate filing deadline because nobody filed against them.

Three senators of the 16 whose seats will be filled by this year's elections — Carl Parker of Port Arthur, Tati Santesteban of El Paso and Walter Mengden of Houston — also drew no opponents.

John Liston of Orange, says however, he will run against Parker as a write-in candidate.

House members who are home free include four conservatives who have lined up for a shot at the 1981 speakership if Speaker Bill Clayton's troubles with an FBI "sting" investigation cause him to resign. Clayton appointed each to an important committee chairmanship last year.

They are: Rep. Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, chairman of the House Committee on Intergovernmental Affairs; Rep. Lynn Nabers, D-Brownwood, chairman of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence;

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of the House Committee on Regions, Compacts and Districts and speaker pro tem of the House. Clayton chose Von Dohlen to oversee 1981 legislative and congressional redistricting and to make preparations for the politically and technically exhausting task.

Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, chairman of the House Committee on Environmental Affairs.

Skating to elections without opposition will give speaker candidates plenty of time to seek advance pledges of support from other representatives.

Clayton himself is unopposed for a tenth two-year term as representative from a chiefly agricultural district northwest of Lubbock.

Clayton has a subpoena to tell a federal grand jury next month about his encounter with FBI plant Joseph Hauser and union leader L.G. Moore of Deer Park in which Moore left $6,000 behind as a "political contribution."

Several representatives and lobbyists say they believe Clayton would resign as speaker if he is indicted. That could set up a speaker election in August if Gov. Bill Clements goes through with his plan for a special legislative session then.

Normally, House members choose the speaker at the start of each regular session in January of odd-numbered years.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, the only member to challenge Clayton for the 1981 speakership, has both Democratic primary and general election opponents.

Key House members who will return without opposition include Rep. Bill Pernal, D-Bryan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, and veteran committee members Bill Healy, D-Paducah, and Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline.

Two representatives with key responsibilities in oil and gas affairs also are unopposed. Chairman Tom Craddock, R-Midland, of the Natural Resources Committee and Joe Hanna, D-Breckenridge of the Energy Resources Committee.

There will be no incumbents in three Senate races because Sen. Bill Patman, D-Ganado, decided to run for Congress and Sens. Bill Bracklein, R-Dallas, and Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells, chose to retire.

Your Personal Biorhythms

by Bernard Gittelson

Figure your numbers here — For your own permanent biorhythm number for the Physical (P), Emotional (E), and Intellectual (I) cycles, just follow these steps:

STEP 1	YEAR OF BIRTH	P	E	I
STEP 2	A-B MONTH OF BIRTH
STEP 3	DAY OF BIRTH
TOTALS

BIORHYTHMS FOR FEB. 18, 1980
PHYSICAL	14	25	37	48	60	71	82	93	104	115	126
Emotional	15	24	33	42	51	60	69	78	87	96	105
Intellectual	9	23	37	51	65	79	93	107	121	135	149

Step 1 — Year of birth. Read down the left hand column to find the last number in the year of your birth then go across to the appropriate decade. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Labor Unions Plan Efforts To Organize Undocumented Aliens

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Unions representing workers in low-paid, low-skill jobs are venturing more boldly into an area once shunned by organized labor—signing up illegal aliens.

Traditionally, organized labor has opposed signing up illegal aliens because, union leaders claimed, they glutted the work force and drove down wages for American workers.

But the changing nature of the U.S. work force has forced the unions to re-view their policies.

In Los Angeles' garment industry alone, federal, state and union officials estimate more than 80 percent of the 140,000 workers are of Mexican descent and that most of them are illegal aliens.

The Census Bureau, in a special report to President Carter last week, said there are about 6 million illegal aliens in the United States. Union leaders have estimated more than 1 million of those are in Southern California.

For that reason, the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in Los Angeles, which represents workers in Southern California's expanding $3.2-billion-a-year clothing industry, is in the forefront of the new organizing movement.

For Phil Russo, director of ILGWU organizing efforts in Los Angeles, the decision to embrace the "undocumented" was a matter of survival.

Russo said the ILGWU represents less than 10 percent of Southern California's garment workers, compared to 85 percent union membership in the more established East Coast industry, where most of the workers are U.S. citizens.

Similar, although smaller, campaigns have been mounted by other unions—furniture and leather workers, retail clerks, longshoremen and steel, electrical and auto workers.

With a change in the unions' attitude toward illegal aliens there has also been a change in their language. Most union organizers say they prefer the term "undocumented workers" because there is no such thing as an "illegal person" to describe those who come here illegally from Mexico and other countries.

The executive council of the 14 million-member AFL-CIO is scheduled to vote today at its meeting in Bal Harbor, Fla., on whether to abandon its long-standing opposition to illegal aliens, seek amnesty for all undocumented workers now in the country and encourage efforts to bring them under organized labor's umbrella.

But so far, unions have made little headway among undocumented workers, mainly because of workers' fears that joining a union will lead to their employers' notifying immigration officers of their illegal status.

"Often times, an employer only has to threaten to call the immigration service in order to keep people away from the union," said Bert Corona, a member of the National Committee to Organize Undocumented Workers.

Corona said that mood is changing.

"More and more, they are shedding their fears," said Corona. "They are tired of being exploited, of working long hours in terrible conditions for substandard pay. And they are beginning to look to the unions as a way to improve their lot—even if they have to risk deportation. They don't feel they have that much to lose."

Once undocumented workers are organized, they must be protected from deportation. And that can be just as big a task as getting them into the union, officials said.

Some union officials said if they can't win permanent legal residence for an undocumented worker, they can usually delay his deportations—sometimes by three years or more.

A third alternative, says INS spokesman Bob Seitz, is for the undocumented worker to prove that his presence will not displace any American workers.

There are a few jobs that fall into this category, such as tailors, bootmakers and domestics, where no one is training for these positions in the United States, Seitz says. "But for most jobs, well, they just don't have a chance."

FBI Accused In Violence Cover Up

NEW YORK (AP)—A Justice Department report says that FBI agents apparently covered up evidence that their chief paid Ku Klux Klan informant took a leading role in attacks like the 1961 beatings of Freedom Riders in Birmingham, Ala., the New York Times reported Sunday.

Department investigators, however, apparently found insufficient evidence to conclude that the informant, Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., was involved in a series of racial killings while on the FBI payroll from 1960 to 1965, the newspaper said.

Rowe, who lives in Savannah, Ga., is under indictment in Alabama for the 1965 murder of Viola Gregg Liuzzo, a civil rights demonstrator from Detroit who was shot to death in her car. That case had been reopened in 1978 at the order of then-Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

In Birmingham, Joseph Ross, agent in charge of the local FBI office, said Sunday he could not comment on the Justice Department report.

"It will be in court," he said. "Because of that, I do not want to make any comment."

"I do not know of any report of that nature in Birmingham, so I assume it would be in Washington. If there is a report, I am not familiar with the investigation."

Ross said he has been assigned to Birmingham five months.

According to the Times, the 302-page report by four lawyers assigned by Bell to the Rowe investigative force was submitted seven months ago. However, the newspaper said, the Justice Department has refused to release it for several reasons, including confidentiality and concern that it would prejudice Rowe's case if it came to trial.

The Times said the report criticized the FBI for failing to use advance knowledge to protect the Freedom Riders in the 1961 assault at the Trailways Bus Station in Birmingham. The newspaper said the report states that then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover had been informed in advance about the attack and knew that Rowe would lead one of the Klan group with a weighted baseball bat.

The report said the FBI had no clear guidelines in the 1960s forbidding informers to use violence. The Times said the report noted that such rules were imposed by the bureau in 1975.

Murder Plot Fouled By Victim

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo. (AP)—An alleged contract murder plot, which authorities say was hatched by two strangers at an Army base bar, went awry when the intended victim awoke from a beating and shot to death the man hired to kill her, investigators say.

The incident began last Wednesday with what appeared to be a routine winter traffic accident—a car balanced precariously in the snow at the edge of a cliff near here.

But instead of accident victims, sheriff's deputies said they found the body of Army Pfc. Allen Lewis, 22, of Medalia, Minn. He had been shot once in the head. In the car, they found 42-year-old Ramona Lee Goeringer—bloodied and unconscious, clutching a .38-caliber pistol.

According to Teller County Sheriff Gary Shoemaker, Lewis allegedly had met Mrs. Goeringer's husband Lyle—another soldier—at Fort Carson Army Base near Colorado Springs—at a bar the night before.

The two soldiers allegedly struck a deal in which Lewis was to kill Mrs. Goeringer for an undisclosed sum of money, Shoemaker said. The money would have been paid after the killing was done, he said.

Shoemaker said Mrs. Goeringer drove to the spot where her car was found near Colorado 67 after Lewis asked her for a ride to a nearby town.

Investigators allege that Lewis dragged Mrs. Goeringer from her car, beat her head against the pavement until she lost consciousness and then placed her behind the wheel of her car, Shoemaker said.

Lewis and a woman companion then allegedly pushed the car to the brink of a cliff, Shoemaker said.

But Mrs. Goeringer revived, pulled a pistol and shot Lewis once in the head just before her car would have plunged from the precipice, the sheriff said. It was not immediately known why Mrs. Goeringer was carrying a pistol, a sheriff's department official said.

The soldier's companion then fled in her own car, Shoemaker said.

Mrs. Goeringer remained in fair condition Sunday at a Colorado Springs hospital, officials said.

Her 29-year-old husband was arrested Friday for investigation of solicitation to commit first-degree murder. He was being held in the Teller County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond, Shoemaker said.

Kathleen Bercegay, 31, of Colorado Springs was arrested earlier on suspicion of attempted first-degree murder and held in lieu of $25,000 bond, he said.

Efforts To Raise Ship Called Off

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Efforts to raise the sunken Coast Guard Cutter Blackthorn and move it from Tampa Bay shipping channels were called off Sunday because of poor weather, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Ens. John R. Ryan, 29, deck officer of the Blackthorn the night it collided with the tanker Capricorn and sank in minutes, continued his testimony before a Marine Board of Inquiry in Tampa.

Lt. Cmdr. George J. Sepel, commander of the Blackthorn, was expected to take the stand Monday. Sepel had earlier refused to testify, but later agreed to take the stand after Ryan.

Saturday, Ryan had told the board he didn't sound his ship's whistle before the collision because he thought the ships would pass safely. He said he thought the Capricorn had made an agreement with its whistles that the ships would pass to each other's left in the narrow channel at the mouth of Tampa Bay.

The collision near the Sunshine Skyway Bridge sent the 180-foot Blackthorn to the bottom within minutes, killing 23 Coast Guardsmen.

JAY HARRIS:

The Real Issue...

WHAT, IN THE final analysis, will be the key to this year's Presidential Election? Will the price of prunes and interest rates or the cost of oil and the spectre of Soviet Russia launching new adventures sway the voters? Or does the Average American really care? Those questions loom ever larger as New Hampshire's Feb. 26 showdown and the Southland's testing grow closer. Events on the financial front, in Iran and Afghanistan and perhaps soon in South Africa, will cast their shadows. Will the American voters choose their next leaders on the basis of charisma, claims and counter claims or some hardnosed common sense of "what issue who is best for what ails us?"

"YOU CAN SAY all you want about foreign affairs, but what is really important is the price of hogs in Chicago and St. Louis."

That was the advice Gov. William Stratton of Illinois gave candidate Richard M. Nixon on the eve of the 1960 campaign.

It may have sounded like a good idea. Nixon, however, spurned it. And for good reason. While the price of prunes or hogs are gut issues, and may be more so this election year, foreign policy issues seem to put candidates and their campaigns on a higher plane.

It may come as a surprise, but in six of America's last seven presidential elections, foreign affairs have played a dominant role. The exception was 1976, when the main issue was Watergate.

A BRIEF look back might be enlightening. How many recall that in 1952, Dwight D. Eisenhower's pledge to "go to Korea" helped propel him into the White House.

And in that 1960 Kennedy-Nixon donnybrook, a major issue was the U.S. role in protecting two small and since all but forgotten islands in the Formosa Strait, Quemoy and Matsu.

Vietnam, of course, played a role in the next three Presidential elections. In 1964, then President Lyndon B. Johnson came off as the "peace candidate" and made political hay by painting Sen. Barry Goldwater as a mad bomber who wanted to lay waste to Southeast Asia.

"Who do you want to be sittin' beside that Hot Line," LBJ asked, "when the telephone goes ting-aling and the voice on the other end says 'Moscow calling?' It was a ploy that worked, although later there were many who decided Goldwater may have been right after all.

IN THAT VEIN, it is in line to wonder if what a candidate or incumbent thinks, or says he thinks about foreign policy really counts.

It may be remembered that Woodrow Wilson's re-election slogan in 1916 was "He kept us out of war." But it was not long after his inauguration that American Doughboys were in the trenches in Europe.

None other than Franklin D. Roosevelt told millions that "I hate war." But World War II came with a vengeance.

And Nixon was elected president in 1968 to a great degree because he claimed to have a "secret plan" for ending the war in Vietnam. By 1972 and the next election, the conflict raged on, but he offered another solution as opposed to Sen. McGovern's "give in to 'em" peace offensive.

Some may argue that President Carter went to the White House more on his domestic, "Born Again" down home philosophy than on foreign matters. But, it was his somewhat sugar-coated olive branch and President Ford's inability to articulate the nation's growing predicament abroad, even then, that played a key role.

TODAY, IRONICALLY, President Carter is riding the crest in the opinion polls as a result of a foreign crisis.

Never mind that it was he who helped lead the nation into the current abyss with that sugar-coated olive branch and a misguided "human rights" policy, he also will lead us out of it. Or so the script goes.

The truth of the matter, Stephen Hess of the Brookings Institution, says is that the American voting public "is not particularly knowledgeable" about international topics. This is true for a number of reasons, the main one being that the American people have been misled all too often by those in positions of power in Washington, by a liberal eastern media and "one worders" in the State Department.

Today's world is the result. Yet, at the same time, foreign policy—as played out against the American hostages in Iran and Russia's invasion of Afghanistan—comes off as a "us-or-them" sort of thing. Hence, Mr. Carter's current poll standing.

ACTUALLY, THE verdict is still a long way out on this year's election.

It is inconceivable that the American people, even with their alleged lack of knowledge about foreign affairs, will continue to buy a "do nothing" policy about the hostages, or further Soviet nose-thumbing at the U.S. and Free World.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally argues that such events "won't sustain Mr. Carter" through the campaign. The price of prunes as well as oil—double digit inflation with a vengeance—may be an equally strong factor, if not The Issue, at least by November.

It's too bad the American public, and some Congressmen we could name, aren't more knowledgeable about what the President has done in the way of helping put this nation in the gravest peril perhaps in its history.

It was only last year that Mr. Carter opposed the draft. He fought the nuclear carrier, cancelled the B-1, cut back on the Cruise Missile, slashed $57 billion from Mr. Ford's six-year defense plan and admitted he learned more in a week about Russia than he had in three years.

When the history of Election 1980 is written, it may not be Who Lost Iran, Or Afghanistan or Patagonia? But, Who Lost America?

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Ward 9 Showdown

NOVAK

NASHUA, N.H.—Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's attempted new start Jan. 27 failed over the next two weeks to erase backyard suspicion of him here just across the Massachusetts state line, where President Carter now is the substantial favorite in the Feb. 26 New Hampshire Democratic primary.

That is the inescapable conclusion following interviewing earlier this month, with the help of Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey research, in a Nashua ward that has proved a barometer for Democratic statewide voting patterns.

But Carter's 2-to-1 lead over Kennedy reflects minimum enthusiasm for the President, suggesting trouble ahead in a November showdown with Republican George Bush.

Intense anti-Kennedy feelings combined with mild support for Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis was typified by a 32-year-old instructor at Lowell (Mass.) University: "It's not so much I favor Carter, but that I'm against Kennedy. In a more positive sense, Carter has handled the foreign situations well."

Such sentiment led to these results in interviews with 74 registered voters in Nashua's Ward 9 who intend to vote in the Democratic primary: Carter, 42; Kennedy, 21; Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., 0; Bush (write-in), 1; Republican John Anderson (write-in), 1; undecided, 9.

Ward 9 is Democratic country—white-collar and skilled blue-collar workers, many commuting to Massachusetts jobs. Their votes in the 1972 and 1976 Democratic primaries reflected the statewide totals.

BUT THE ward's sentiment has undergone radical transformation the last six months. When we interviewed here last summer just after Carter's Cabinet shake-up, the margin was 6-to-1 for Kennedy over Carter (with the President ahead of unknown Jerry Brown by less than 2-to-1.)

Whereas Ward 9 voters last July widely identified Ted Kennedy with his slain brothers and, therefore, better days for America, only four voters the week of Feb. 1 mentioned the family connection.

Out of Carter's 42 voters, 15 volunteered negative feelings about Kennedy as their main reason for supporting the President. The only other widely offered reason for Carter support was the simple fact of incumbency: Although his record is viewed as mediocre, these voters prefer it to Kennedy and Brown.

"The best thing I can say about Carter is three years in the office," a 45-year-old home-health aide told us, "and the others don't look too promising."

A 70-YEAR-OLD retired machinist put it this way: "None of them have said anything to me to indicate they can get us out of the mess, but Carter at least has some experience."

Kennedy's Georgetown University speech did not help him here, where it was broadcast as a commercial.

Although 41 of the 74 voters said they watched or heard about it, 12 could remember nothing about it and another eight could remember only Kennedy's preceding televised apology for Chapquidick.

Of issues raised in Kennedy's speech, these voters favor his wage-price controls proposal nearly 2-to-1, oppose his gasoline rationing scheme by 3-to-2 and favor Carter's draft registration (opposed by Kennedy) by nearly 6-to-1—going further than Carter and endorsing an immediate draft, 4-to-3.

CARTER HAS no great advantage on the issues. His handling of the Iranian hostage impasse is split between approval and disapproval, and he has only a narrow margin of support on his response to Afghanistan (with a substantial minority saying he reacted "too weakly").

He and Kennedy get equal marks on both defense and domestic policies. Incredibly, these voters, by a 3-to-1 margin, perceive Kennedy as tougher on the Russians. By 2-to-1, they reject Carter's argument that he cannot now debate Kennedy.

Kennedy's only bright spot here is greater intensity by his supporters, all of them solidly pro-Kennedy, seven of Carter's 42 supporters only lean toward him.

Some Kennedy backers complained about Carter's new emphasis on foreign affairs. "Kennedy would do something for the working people right here at home," said the 44-year-old wife of a construction worker.

THAT SPELLS potential November trouble for Carter in Ward 9 if Bush is nominated. Favorable ratings among voters interviewed were Carter, 67 percent; Kennedy, 45 percent; Brown, 16 percent; Ronald Reagan, 16 percent; Sen. Howard Baker, 42 percent.

The stunner is what these 74 Democrats think about Republican Bush; 68 percent favorable.

"Carter is doing nothing," said a 29-year-old tavern manager, who would vote for Bush against the President in November. A 50-year-old air traffic controller will write Bush's name in the Democratic primary.

While last summer's sentimental affection of weather vane Ward 9 for Teddy Kennedy is gone beyond recall, it has surely not been replaced by overwhelming confidence in Jimmy Carter.

No Apple For NEA

WASHINGTON—The push is on again to make more public school students the captives of labor unions.

Now that Jimmy Carter has presented the National Education Association (read union) with a brand new, and unneeded, Department of Education, the NEA's lobbyists are spending fresh money campaigning for legislation that would mandate compulsory union membership for public school teachers.

A recent poll conducted by the professional journal, Instructor Magazine, revealed that 88 percent of the nation's elementary school teachers are opposed to compulsory, dues-gouging unionism.

This showing of hands falls more than a smidgen short of the NEA's claim that only union membership can offer public school teachers adequate job security.

OBVIOUSLY, A lot of teachers are willing to be judged on performance. Obviously, too, that stand helped defeat a similar NEA campaign last year in all but New York, New Jersey and Connecticut.

Forgive me if I whack you readers over the head, again, with a tragic example of the effects of teacher unionism in poor, helpless Washington, D.C.

Public school students in D.C. placed in the bottom 20 percent of all students in the country who took the college board tests last year, with scores more than 200 points below the national average.

The Washington public schools are 100 percent staffed by unionized teachers. They get their jobs solely on the basis of interviews in the School Department's Personnel Office.

NO TESTS are given—testing was stopped in 1969 as "unfair." School administrators are forbidden by union ushke to monitor potential teachers in classrooms before hiring.

Worse, the teachers win tenure after only two years of unsupervised "instruction." From there in, they build up seniority that not only protects them from being discharged but eventually leads to promotion.

Their union's only goal is to keep them "teaching" and thus paying dues.

Discussing the rot in D.C. public schools, a neighbor commented airily that the trouble was that the city's teachers were underpaid.

Incredible, in fact, D.C. public school teachers are the highest paid members of their profession in the wealthy Washington area, including those who teach in private schools.

MOREOVER, WITH the schools running the show, instead of labor unions, private-school teachers are tested regularly and auditioned in classrooms. In short, private schools do everything possible to get the best teachers.

I happen to believe in labor unions. The good ones have always set performance standards for their members.

But the NEA's record shows that it pays little or no attention to the quality of education. Instead its leaders protect their own job security by sheltering incompetents who can only produce more swarms of the uneducated.

AN EDITORIAL:

Soviet 'Edge' Poses Threat

WHILE MOST Americans may feel and pray that the moment may never come, the ability of the U.S. to retaliate against a nuclear attack by the Soviet Union will be about half of what it was three years ago.

This startling information, hinted at in previous Air Force testimony, was given credence this weekend when an Air Force study was made public.

The study indicates that Russia has made major inroads on the once superior American Air Force ability to strike back. The sobering findings hint that no change can be expected in the imbalance for at least another five years.

CAPITAL SOURCES say that Gen. Lew Allen, Air Force chief of staff, became concerned about the Soviet Union's continued buildup about 15 months ago and ordered a complete review of America's readiness.

Those making the study were appalled by what they learned, it was reported.

According to the study, Moscow has developed much greater accuracy in Russia's intercontinental missile system than expected. The Soviets' ocean-launched weapons system, with multiple warheads, plus the Reds' rapid deployment of new ICBMs has also moved ahead much faster than expected.

In brief, Russia has taken a giant step toward not only overhauling and passing the U.S. in its offensive military capabilities, but may have a leg up on staying in that position.

ACTUALLY, MUCH of the responsibility for the current "shortfall" can be laid at President Carter's door.

The report made it clear that cutbacks in

AN EDITORIAL:

High Price For High Prices

THE ZOOMING prices that make the headlines can only be described as fantastic. But there is another word for another aspect of the current frenzied market in precious metals.

Tragic. It is not only old class rings and partial place settings that are being turned in by the ton to dealers by a public rushing to cash in on the gold and silver boom.

Some of the items are heirlooms, worth more for craftsmanship, origin and age than for their metal content, even at today's wild prices.

IN LONDON, according to a current New York Times report, pieces that should be considered part of the national heritage are going into the mass meltdown.

Dealers in most cases are aware of the situation and regret it, but lack the time and facilities to sort out the valuable items and store them.

It is much the same story in New York.

M. STANTON EVANS:

Defense Like Beggar Up Next To Welfare

WASHINGTON—President Carter's request for a modest hike in next year's budget for defense has touched off the usual protests about the military-industrial complex and its voracious appetite for funds.

Rep. Cardiss Collins, D-Ill., charges, for instance, that the President's nominal five percent increase in defense outlays comes at the expense of the domestic poor and unemployed.

"Our young people are being told that money can be found to send them to war," she says, "but not put them to work."

This is typical of the rhetoric we have been hearing on this subject for upwards of a decade. Also typical is the fact that it is totally off-base.

Examination of the budget data shows spending for defense, rather than running out of control, has been dropping like a stone. Carter's budget is a belated, and extremely feeble, effort to reverse the trend.

BY EVERY realistic standard, the Carter defense budget is lower than comparable outlays in the '50s, '60s, and early '70s.

In terms of constant dollars of purchasing power, percent of Gross National Product, and fraction of the Federal budget, the Carter proposal for defense is far below the levels that prevailed from the Korean war until the 1970s.

While defense spending has continued to grow as measured in inflated dollars, it has consistently declined in constant (1972) dollars of purchasing power—from $100 billion in 1953 to $74 billion in 1960 to $67 billion in 1975.

Recent efforts to reverse this slide succeeded in getting outlays up to $70 billion in 1979. Carter's budget, as analyzed in similar fashion, would nudge the total up to $71.6 billion. Thus we are still far below the levels of real outlay attained a generation ago.

Similar results emerge if military spending is the U.S. military posture had played as much a role in the reversal of a "balance of power" as Soviet efforts to overtake America.

Bumper sticker: "Don't Litter—Spay"

Edward Kennedy denies he called President Carter a political cripple. A lame duck, maybe, but not a cripple.

The President's cancellation of the B-1 bomber project, slowing of the Trident submarine weapons system, a cutback and slow-down on the Cruise Missile—to satisfy Russian demands during SALT II negotiations—and the on-again, off-again MX missile system all have contributed to today's picture.

THE REPORT tends to bear out criticism levelled at the administration and military people that the U.S. defense posture has been compromised in recent years.

Some observers assert that one of the reasons that the Kremlin military hawks have taken on a much more militant stance, as reflected in Afghanistan, is because they now know that Russia does have a military superiority in some areas.

While we still believe that overall—in number of missiles, warheads and technological accuracy—the U.S. still holds an edge, there seems to be little doubt but that the edge, whatever it may have been or still is, is in jeopardy.

Many have recognized the 1980s, particularly the first half of the decade, as perhaps the most dangerous which the U.S. faces vis-a-vis Soviet imperialism. If accurate, the Air Force report speaks for itself. And we have no further time to waste in getting the major programs back on track, especially the Cruise Missile, and if not the B-1 bomber, at least an updating of our outdated long-range B52 fleet.

Any later could be too late.

Hong Kong and wherever else there are volume markets in precious metals.

It is by no means the first time—nor undoubtedly the last—that quick profits have been turned at the expense of works of art.

BACK WHEN a New World empire was being built on the ruins of the native cultures, tons upon tons of Inca and Aztec treasures were shipped across the Atlantic and melted down to finance the Spanish king's European wars.

Most of it is still around today, as ingots in vaults, refashioned into contemporary jewelry and crowning innumerable teeth.

The immediate consequence is to increase vastly the marketable supply of the metals.

The long-term effect, with fewer of them around, will be to increase vastly the price of gold and silver antiques.

That could be the good news, if you happen to be a seller, or just more of the bad news, if you happen to be a buyer.

viewed as a percentage of GNP, or of the Federal budget.

In 1963, defense absorbed 14 percent of GNP, by 1970, this had fallen to 8.1 percent; in 1981, under Carter's proposal, it would be 5.2 percent.

As a fraction of Federal outlays, the Pentagon's share has fallen from 57 percent in 1956 to 41 percent in 1970 to roughly 23 percent today—where it will remain in 1981.

By way of contrast, social welfare spending, gauged by all these indices, has been going through the roof.

As noted by Dr. James L. Clayton of the University of Utah, spending for social welfare, measured in constant dollars, ballooned from $66 billion to $242 billion between 1955 and 1976.

IN THE SAME period, social welfare outlays grew from 33 to 60 percent of the Federal budget, and from 8.6 to 20.6 percent of GNP.

From all of which it should be apparent that the facts of the case are just the reverse of what the usual polemics on this subject would have us believe.

Not only have we not been pouring money down the Pentagon rathole, we have been reducing our defense commitment while pumping vast resources into domestic welfare programs. The Carter budget would change this situation only marginally.

In the current fiscal year, for instance, we are devoting an estimated 22.7 percent of the federal budget to defense. Carter would inch this up to 23.2 percent.

IN 1980, IT is calculated, some 5.1 percent of GNP will be expended for defense; in 1981, under Carter's budget, this would move upward by an eyelash to 5.2 percent.

For those who would like to put this issue in context, Dr. Clayton's monograph, "Does Defense Beggar Welfare?" (National Strategy Inflation Center), is a useful handbook.

Clayton provides the historical data on defense outlays in all the categories named above, and shows conclusively that the long-term trend is down, not up.

Collective Group Planned To Succeed Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — With President Josip Broz Tito gravely ill, Yugoslavs have been given quiet reminders of the government that will follow him.

The official news agency Tanjug confirmed over the weekend that some of Tito's top lieutenants had gathered at his bedside.

A collective leadership has been designed to succeed the independent-minded leader who has run this Eastern European country for the past 35 years.

At stake will be holding together the nation's 15-plus ethnic groups who live in six republics and two autonomous regions, practice three major religions, speak three languages and use two alphabets.

Long before he became critically ill, Tito, 87, took steps to assure power would be shared after he died.

His visitors during the weekend included Lazar Kolisevski, 66, who is in line to become president, and Stevan Doronjski, 60, who would succeed Tito as party chief.

Neither would have substantial power in the event of Tito's death.

Rotations are the rule throughout Yugoslavia's leadership apparatus — a structure approved by Tito to prevent any one man from acquiring excessive personal power and that reflects the country's diverse population.

Kolisevski is in line to succeed Tito as president only because he is designated to serve until May as vice president of the nine-man Presidency. He would serve as president until then.

Doronjski, who also holds a rotating position, must share power with 23 others in the Communist Party presidium.

Eight members of the Presidency come from the six republics and two regions, and the party leadership is divided along similar geographic lines.

"All the nationalities want to be independent," one prominent Yugoslav official said privately as Tito lay hospitalized. "The only way they can be independent is to be together."

Ambassador, Jordanian Leaders Meet

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — American U.N. Ambassador Donald McHenry conferred Sunday with Jordanian royalty and other leaders on his mission to try to eliminate "skepticism" over the U.S. role in the Middle East. There was no indication he was making much progress.

The 42-year-old career diplomat also met in Amman earlier with a "select group of Palestinians." But U.S. Embassy officials insisted they included no members of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

On the seven-nation trip that already has taken him to Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Lebanon, McHenry has been told repeatedly that Washington must negotiate directly with the PLO to work out any sort of solution to the Palestinian problem.

In an interview published Sunday in the Beirut weekly magazine Monday Morning, the ambassador conceded that "there is skepticism in much of the Arab world about the U.S. sponsored Egyptian-Israeli Camp David accords."

He said such skepticism can only be removed by "deeds" — But he did not say what those deeds might be.

Government sources in Amman declined to say what McHenry discussed in his talks Sunday with Jordanian Crown Prince Hassan and other cabinet officials.

The American also chatted separately with Prime Minister Adel Hamid Sharaf, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Marwan Qasem and Palestinian-born Hassan Ibrahim, minister of state for cabinet affairs.

But sources said one subject that undoubtedly came up was a request by Jordan and the Islamic council for a meeting of the U.N. Security Council to deal with Israel's continued occupation of the West Bank and a newly imposed curfew on the Arab town of Hebron.

Palace sources said McHenry and King Hussein met at Bassman Palace Saturday to talk over Jordan's request for the council meeting.

McHenry was scheduled to fly to Israel from Amman today on the sixth leg of the swing that later will take him to Tunisia and then back to the United States.

Police Hunting For Leftists May Have Discovered 'Court'

IZMIR, Turkey (AP) — Police hunting for leftists believed involved in the killing of three policemen said they found an empty coffin, rope and burial shrouds in a room apparently used as a "court" to try and punish betrayers of the leftist cause.

The discovery was made, they said, while riot police in armored vehicles conducted a house-to-house search for leftists apparently involved in hit-and-run sniper attacks Saturday that left three policemen dead and 17 persons, including five policemen, wounded.

It was one of the most violence episodes since politically inspired clashes erupted in the NATO-member country in 1975. More than 3,000 persons have been killed since.

There were no new reports of fighting Sunday in this Aegean coastal city of 1.2 million people, Turkey's third largest, and a curfew imposed in the area of heaviest fighting was lifted.

But Ayhan Ozarslan, director of riot police, said police recovered one French-made automatic weapon, 20 pistols, five rifles, two hand grenades and 212 rounds of ammunition.

Major Oil, Gas Find Excites Industry

DENVER (AP) — The U.S. oil industry is probing deep into a section of the Overthrust Belt, a 40-mile-wide geological formation that stretches from Alaska to Mexico, in hopes of finding what could be one of the nation's largest new sources of natural gas and oil.

Much of the interest in the area along the Wyoming-Utah border, 350 miles northwest of here, is centered on a major gas discovery by Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), the nation's sixth-largest oil company.

The interest also is evident on Wall Street: speculation over the outcome of the find by Indiana Standard, which has a 37.16 percent interest in the find, has pushed the price of the company's stock from $93.75 a share Feb. 1 to around $106 at the end of last week.

Other companies with interests in the well — and whose shares have climbed in value in recent weeks — include Gulf Oil Corp., Dow Chemical Co. and Union Pacific Corp.

Oil and gas experts long have called the Wyoming-Utah portion of the Overthrust Belt the largest potential energy source in the lower 48 states, and 10 years ago a map of western Wyoming's portion of the belt looked like a geological Swiss cheese from the number of oil and gas wells that had been drilled.

But the wells were dry, and industry activity turned toward Alaska and Texas until about two years ago. This time, the industry found one answer to the Overthrust riddle was to drill deeper.

The dry wells were from 5,000 to 8,000 feet deep, but Indiana Standard's Amoco division had to go to 15,826 feet for the Kewanee Federal wildcat well, as the new find is known.

The Kewanee well is located north of Evanston, Wyo., between two already proven fields, Whitney Canyon and Carter Creek. Analysts have speculated the Kewanee find may link the Whitney Canyon and Carter Creek areas and prove to be part of a vast 50-mile-long field underlying all three.

Trapped in the belt between Jackson and Evanston, Wyo., oilmen say, may be billions of barrels of high-grade, low-sulfur crude oil and trillions of cubic feet of clean-burning natural gas.

Further tests are needed to determine just how rich the Kewanee find is, said Indiana Standard spokesman Carl Meyerdirk in Chicago. So far, he said, tests have shown Kewanee "is a good gas-producing well," but "not a phenomenal well."

The two biggest gas producing areas in the United States today are the Hugoton field in Texas and the Prudhoe Bay field in Alaska, which each contain 25 trillion to 30 trillion cubic feet of gas.

U.S. proved reserves of natural gas totaled 200.3 trillion cubic feet in 1979, the American Gas Association estimates.

U.S. consumption of gas totaled 19.6 billion cubic feet in 1978 and 17.5 billion cubic feet in the first 11 months of 1979, the Energy Department says. The U.S. imports about half its oil needs, but gets only 6 percent of its gas needs from foreign sources.

The Overthrust Belt, composed of overlapping layers of sand and shale, was formed millions of years ago when continental plates shifted in the same actions that produced the Rocky Mountains.

Today, there are more than 210 wells either tapped or staked out over the southwestern Wyoming portion of the Overthrust Belt, according to Tom Dougherty, vice president of Petroleum Information Corp. here.

Dougherty calls Wyoming's four southwestern counties "the focus at this time of exploration in the Rocky Mountain region."

But the last of the wells staked out won't be drilled until summer because only 386 drilling rigs are available for the entire Rocky Mountain region and all are booked months ahead, he said.

Olympics Plagued By Winds, Chaotic Transportation, Long Lines

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Arctic temperatures and biting wind added to the woes of thousands of spectators Sunday as they again endured long lines and chaotic transportation to see the XIII Winter Olympic Games.

In seven days of operations, the Winter Games has yet to work out its problems — and a major one is the shortage of buses and drivers to take people to various events.

Gov. Hugh Carey declared a limited state of emergency Saturday to try to relieve the problems, which have brought traffic jams, kept ticketholders from seeing the events, and forced medalists and officials to miss awards ceremonies.

Tickets are moving slower than expected, but the buses hired to ferry spectators from parking lots to events haven't been able to handle even the reduced crowds.

Olympic visitors — some totally unprepared for the elements — were warned to wear several layers of clothing to fight off temperatures of near or below zero and a wind chill factor of up to 50 degrees below zero.

"We are very concerned about the large number of people coming into the area without proper winter clothing," said Howard Clark, the governor's representative at the Games. "We saw some people out there wearing sneakers or sandals."

The limited state of emergency declared by Carey on Saturday allows the state to bypass normal bidding procedures in contracting more buses to add to the 300 in use, provides state snow removal equipment for the area and authorizes longer hours for bus drivers.

State police moved back their main traffic control checkpoint from 11 to 26 miles from the Olympic resort to try to stem road congestion by turning back people without tickets or accreditation.

Hundreds of spectators were stranded in the cold for hours during the weekend waiting in parking lots for buses that never showed up or arrived late. Clark said there were delays of at least one hour for buses, and police said 600 people were stranded at a peripheral parking lot west of Lake Placid on Sunday morning.

At Whiteface Mountain on Sunday, some competitors in the women's downhill events had to be given quick facial massages by coaches to prevent frostbite. Some competitors suffered frostbitten cheeks during Alpine training Monday.

And at Mount Hoevenberg, it was 5 below zero at the start of cross country event Sunday. The wind chill at Whiteface and Hoevenberg ranged from 40 to 50 degrees below zero at the top of the course to about 20 degrees below zero at the finish, the National Weather Service said.

The Department of Transportation cautioned motorists headed for the Lake Placid area to expect delays of at least an hour at the checkpoint, warning that those without tickets they could not get to the sites by car. Clark said parking lots should be able to accommodate the cars of ticketholders.

The transportation department said the bus system counted 225,000 rides Saturday.

As the ski jumping event got underway Sunday, police said 400 cars — most carrying ticketholders — were snarled in a traffic jam nearby. About 15,000 tickets were sold to the event.

Attendance at some events has been very small. Only 850 people bought tickets to watch Sweden and West Germany play hockey Saturday and 115 more paid for tickets to the U.S.-Norway hockey game.

Officials of the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee said 44,795 people paid admissions for Saturday events. Attendance Friday was 29,500.

Even medal winners had trouble. The Russians who took the gold and silver medals in the 30 kilometer cross-country ski race failed to show up for the awards ceremony. The Soviet news agency, Tass, said the Russians were not given directions to Mirror Lake, site of the ceremony.

Farmers Less Hostile This Year

WARRENTON, Va. (AP) — Farmers bound for Washington gathered here Sunday as the American Agriculture Movement prepared for its 1980 assault on Capitol Hill.

The mood of farmers taking part in this year's tractorcade for farm-price parity and alcohol-based fuels was less hostile toward the government than in previous years, an organizer said.

The American Agriculture Movement's Virginia coordinator, Don Patterson, said the "paritycade" of tractors and pickup trucks is only part of the 1980 campaign. "Different groups have split off and are doing a number of things instead of coming across the country in one cohesive parade," he said.

The 1979 AAM tractorcade created traffic problems in the Washington area, and several farmers were arrested.

"Last year the emphasis was on the quantity of people," Patterson said. "We feel we never got around to the real job of educating and lobbying because we were so busy fooling around with tractors in the streets. This year we are getting people who are skilled in doing that work on Capitol Hill."

Patterson said he did not know how many would attend go to Washington for the AAM convention.

The farmers' group has cited government support for the production of alcohol-based fuels as its top priority for 1980.

The AAM has received permission to set up four stills in Washington to demonstrate alcohol production, and many of the vehicles the farmers are driving to Washington are running on pure alcohol or gasohol, a mixture of gasoline and alcohol.

The farmers also want 100 percent parity on farm price supports and will support two bills in Congress to grant 90 percent parity.

Full parity would tie the prices of agricultural commodities to a set price linked to the base year 1968. It would mean a farmer who could buy a pair of shoes with a bushel of wheat in 1968 would be able to do the same in 1980, Patterson said.

official who was supposed to award the medal couldn't get a bus.

Clark said part of the breakdown of the transportation system was caused by more people bringing private vehicles than had been expected. The committee had estimated 50 percent of the spectators would take tour buses, but only about 20 percent have done so.

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Economists accuse the federal government of causing inflation by "printing more money." Isn't it a fact that big corporations print more money by issuing additional stock certificates, which naturally lowers the price of their stock?

A. I am enclosing data on five stocks I bought — all as "new issues" when they were first offered by the companies involved. All five are now selling below the prices I paid.

When I bought, the dividends on these stocks resulted in yields of 10 or 11 percent. That's low, now that savings certificates yield close to 12 percent. So, what happens? The prices of the stocks fall and people who buy at the new lower prices get yields of 12 percent or so.

A. It's understandable that you're unhappy about buying five stocks whose prices headed downhill. Two of the five you named are preferred stocks, on which the dividends never change. The market prices of fixed-income securities always go in the opposite direction of "money costs." When interest rates go up, such stocks go down.

Your other three are common stocks of utility companies. They react the same way — because the increases in their dividends have been moderate and because utilities borrow large amounts of money.

But that has nothing to do with inflation. As a matter of fact, when companies sell new issues of stock they usually use the money to build new plants and buy new equipment. That increases the companies' efficiency and productivity.

That, in turn, reduces the costs of the goods and services the companies produce.

For a crash course on economics, I recommend you watch Milton Friedman's public broadcasting television series "Free to Choose," or read his book of the same title.

Q. In mid-1974, I bought five $5,000 face value municipal bonds at a net cost of $21,588.96. The bonds matured and were redeemed on Dec. 15, 1979.

I know that the interest I received every six months while I held the bonds was not subject to federal income tax. But what about the $3,411.04 difference between the $21,588.96 I paid for the bonds and the $25,000 I received when the bonds matured? Is that $3,411.04 subject to capital gains tax?

A. Indeed it is. As in the sale of any other capital asset the difference between the lower price you paid and the higher price you received when you disposed of those bonds is your profit — a capital gain.

It should be reported as such on Schedule D of your federal income tax return. Because you held those bonds for more than one year, your profit was a long-term capital gain. Under the present tax rules, only 40 percent of a long-term gain is subject to tax. So, the tax bite won't be too severe.

Q. I have owned American depository receipts (ADRs) of a South African platinum mine since April, 1971. I paid 15 3/8 — $15.37 1/2 a share. In February, 1977, there was a three-for-one split.

With precious metal prices at an all-time high, I thought I was "sitting on a gold mine." Scratch that and make it a platinum mine. But I find out these ADRs are now trading at only $2.80 each.

How can this be, for a platinum mining company in these times?

A. Let's hope you put your money into those ADRs as an out-and-out speculation — a high risk, in search of high financial rewards. Almost all mining ventures have to be counted as very risky. The risk multiplies for South African mines because of the potential political problems there.

Despite the sky-rocketing prices of precious metals, the company in which you invested just isn't mining enough to make its shares more valuable.

Administrators Operating Oil Refinery While Strike Drags On

TEXAS CITY (AP) — The research engineer left his graphs and charts in Chicago. Now he's in overalls and boots, working at an oil refinery.

So is the chemical engineer, who traded his three-piece suit for oil-stained pants, hard hat and goggles. Wrench in hand, he checks pumps and valves.

Elsewhere, a secretary runs lab tests, a supervisor sweeps up the black dust of coke and an executive handles a computer board.

These professionals, supervisors, and administrators, 525 of them, are operating Amoco Oil Co.'s refinery here while hourly employees — members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union — continue a strike now almost six weeks long.

Almost 80,000 members of the union walked off their jobs Jan. 8 in a dispute over pay and fringe benefits. Since then, supervisory and administrative employees have been running many of the struck refineries.

This facility, with a daily capacity of 415,000 barrels, is one of the largest in the nation.

Larry Durland, a tall gangly man who looks more like a basketball player than a refinery manager, insisted during a tour of the refinery that operations were smoother now than before the strike.

"You now have crews made up of shift foremen — workers who were promoted because they were the top operators," he said. "You have crews of men who trained the hourly workers and crews of men who actually designed this equipment."

"These people have the know-how and are highly skilled. Before the strike we were operating at 80 percent capacity," Durland said.

"Today," he continued, "we are operating at 80 percent capacity. Each day we produce 210,000 barrels of gasoline."

As a morale booster, Amoco uses a private caterer to provide meals for workers. The food is hard to beat: lobster, shrimp, steaks, king crab, fancy salads and desserts.

Outside the plant, pickets walked with signs whipping in the cold wind. "Maybe they can keep the plant going, but I don't know how safe it is without us. If there is a major breakdown in there, those people are going to be in trouble," said one of the pickets.

"There's a lot of danger because those operating the plant are working such long hours," said Billy Jones, an official of a union local in Texas City.

"When we are on the job and getting overtime, the bosses say we have to cut back on the hours because we could get tired and make a dangerous mistake."

Jones added: "The company likes to talk about using the men who designed some of the equipment to handle it during the strike. There is a lot of difference between designing and working it day after day, month after month. There just isn't the experience. And if a major breakdown happens, the knowledge to fix it won't be found in the refinery today."

Inside the refinery, Durland said the supervisors and professionals are putting in 72-hour work weeks — 12 hours a day, six days a week. He said the long hours were not affecting performance and "we could go on indefinitely."

Asked about breakdowns, a mechanical engineer, who now spends his days among hundreds of valves and pumps, said, "To be honest, we have had fewer maintenance problems since the strike than before. I think there is more personal interest. The men who designed some of the equipment are taking care of it. It's a personal touch — a personal pride."

A young chemical engineer said, "It is a real pleasure to work with something I designed. It is a bigger pleasure to know something works the way I designed it."

Durland was asked how a mechanical engineer could suddenly become a firefighter, or a secretary a lab assistant.

"We planned ahead as we always have when a contract is to expire. We started training these people Nov. 1, just in case there was a strike," he replied.

Brown Says Economy Near Collapse

WASHINGTON (AP) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., declaring that the American economy is on "the verge of collapse," said Sunday the salaries of the president and the Congress should be frozen until inflation is reduced to below 5 percent.

"They cause inflation," Brown said. "The managers should not be rewarded for their abject failures."

The Democratic presidential candidate, appearing on ABC's "Issues and Answers," said the kinds of fiscal policies favored by his rivals for the nomination, President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, will only lead to more inflation.

But he reserved his sharpest criticism for Kennedy, depicting the Massachusetts senator as an advocate of more government spending to end the nation's economic ills.

This, Brown said, "would bankrupt the country and lead to the progressive dismantling of our democratic form of government."

"We as a nation have to develop the maturity and the wisdom to recognize that we cannot create income and purchasing power beyond what we are able to produce by our work and our effort."

Brown reaffirmed his support for a constitutional amendment mandating a balanced budget and also said credit terms for productive investment should be more favorable than they are for non-productive consumption.

"Right now," he said, "you can take your Master Charge card and pay the same amount of interest for going to Las Vegas that a small businessman would have to pay to expand his own particular business."

Brown, who finished a surprisingly strong third with 13 percent of the vote in last week's Democratic caucuses in Maine, conceded his campaign has money problems. But he vowed to stay in the race until the end even if he has to walk or hitchhike around the country.

"I think the issues in America are sufficiently important and that my alternative to what I call the Kennedy-Carter wing of the Democratic party is sufficiently important that I'm going to carry on right to the end even if it has to be on a very modest basis," he said.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions and solve problems — fast. HEARTLINE: I am 68 years old and my husband is 66. Our daughter and her husband have asked us to move in with them permanently. I am very close to my daughter and son-in-law and so is my husband. We worship our grandchildren, of course.

As close as we are, I have been very reluctant and my husband thinks I am being silly, but I am afraid that all of us being around each other all of the time might cause friction and problems. As much as we love each other, our lifestyles differ drastically. What do you think? — K.L.

ANSWER: We think that you, your husband, your daughter and son-in-law should think this over carefully. In the final analysis, only you and your family can make this decision.

In most cases, according to statistics available, it seems that two separate households cannot be merged into one without considerable friction. No matter how well many couples get along with their children or grandchildren, it seems that very great adjustments have to be made in a permanent family merger.

Of course, there are many family mergers such as this that do work out and greatly enrich the lives of all concerned. Our intent here is not to discourage the nearly obsolete family lifestyle on which our nation was built, but to encourage careful consideration and planning.

There was a time when it was traditional for the children to make room for their parents, or vice versa, and families grew large and strong together in unity and love. Now, with the economy as it is, and inflation tearing at the seams of all our homes, it makes more sense than ever for families to re-group in the old, traditional manner.

But, we do urge caution and planning ahead. Open discussion on all problems that can be imagined is best for everyone. For example — if you decide to move in with your daughter, you will probably be much happier if a definite part of the house, including a room other than a bedroom, is set aside for you and your husband. Such an arrangement will assure you and your husband a degree of peace and privacy, where you can arrange your possessions your own way. The ideal arrangement (if room permits) is a private entrance to this special room or section of the house.

Discuss in detail and in advance all financial aspects and obligations of each family member. And ask questions like: Can you let your daughter and her husband raise your grandchildren as they see fit, without intentional or un-intentional interference; can your daughter and her husband find the privacy they need in this arrangement; in the event that it does not work out, can you all be honest with one another and part without crushed feelings?

There are many other more personal questions that should be discussed, including the possible death of any of the four of you and what you can all expect in any other future happenings.

HEARTLINE: My father is recovering from a stroke and the doctor has ordered a private duty nurse to stay at their home for two weeks. Will Medicare cover the costs of a private duty nurse? — D.M.

ANSWER: No, Medicare will not cover the costs of a live-in private duty nurse.

California Inmates Riot After Power Failure In Dorm

CHINO, Calif. (UPI) — Nearly 400 inmates, angered by a lightning-caused power failure that left them without television or hot food, set fires, broke furniture and threw soap in their dormitories, prison officials said Sunday.

A lightning bolt knocked out electricity at the medium security California Institution for Men twice in one day, prompting 375 inmates in five open dormitories to vandalize the units late Friday, said prison spokesman Marvin Ryer.

No one was injured. There were no immediate damage estimates.

"They tore up plumbing, busted windows. It was vandalism, like kids who go in and bust schools," said Ryer.

"Lightning had caused the electricity to go out at 10 a.m., and it was out all day until about 5 p.m. Then it went out again at 6:30. They were fed sack lunches at dinner time instead of a hot meal. And they had no TV. You don't turn off people's TV nowadays."

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN
AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠852 ♦Q65 ♣AKQ10952
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
4 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The auction has revealed that partner has at least ten cards—perhaps eleven—in the red suits. If his strength is concentrated in those suits, slam prospects are excellent. However, the opponents' failure to compete with their massive spade fit suggests that partner has strength in spades, so you must be careful in making your slam try. Cue bid four spades—that cannot be a natural bid, for you would have shown a real suit on the previous round.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ854 ♠AQ104 ♦73
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—There seems to be a belief that you mustn't make a jump shift with a void in partner's suit. Nothing could be further from the truth.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

If I had known the '80s were going to give birth to a youth cult, I'd have taken better care of my body.

It's a little scary the way things are going. First, Bert Parks was let go because the Miss America pageant officials wanted a "younger" image, like John Davidson.

Then Mike Douglas' contract was not renewed and someone suggested his audience was growing older with him and perhaps a younger host was needed, like John Davidson.

I even heard someone say recently (who had just returned from a Ronald Reagan rally) "The Republicans could use a younger man, someone like John Davidson."

The way things are going I predict that by 1985, every public official, every talk show host, every sports figure, yea, every man over 50 will be replaced by a John Davidson clone.

It's only a matter of time before Big John Davidson walks to the microphone of the Tonight show and introduces his look-alike, "Hereeeeeee's John!"

And how about the dean of CBS News saying "This is John Davidson, and that's the way it is."

Can you imagine John Davidson replacing George Burns and saying, "At my age, I get excited when my soup is hot," and no one laughs?

Can you honestly see Santa Claus as a bearded John Davidson? Would you have the same feeling for finger-lickin' food if you saw Col. John Davidson spinning around in a bucket full of chicken?

I for one cannot imagine a world without the silver-haired set: the Henry Fondas, the Cary Grants, the Walter Cronkites, the Leonard Bernsteins, the Joe DiMaggios, the Robert Penn Warrens, and the Fred Astaires.

Every time an older man or woman dies, part of our past dies with them. They all own a piece of our lives which can never again be created. When they are gone, we are at the mercy of our memories.

When I look back and try to remember the most impressive human being I ever saw, it has to be a night in Kentucky when I saw an award being given to Gen. Omar Bradley. He was confined to a wheelchair, but as the flag was unfurled, with some difficulty, he pulled his body to sitting attention.

He was the most beautiful 85-year-old John Davidson I had ever seen.

Copyright 1980 Field Enterprises, Inc.

You can jump shift with nothing in partner's suit if you have a self-sufficient suit of your own. Here, it's most unlikely that you will lose a spade trick, even if partner is void, so in all respects, your hand is worth a jump shift. Slam will depend on the location of partner's cards, not his trump holding.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J762 ♠842 ♣AQ863 ♦6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Don't pass simply because you feel that you have done your bit. Even though partner's auction suggests that he has hearts and clubs well covered, your hand won't produce many tricks at a no trump contract. In view of your distributional values, it is your duty to correct to four spades.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠QJ3 ♠84 ♠976 ♣AK1052
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The auction has developed rather pleasantly. You have an excellent fit, and partner surely has a five-card suit. Still, there is no need to do anything rash. A preference to two spades will do—you already showed your values when you made a two-over-one response.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠764 ♠KJ5 ♠73 ♣AKJ62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—With your strength in hearts, no trump is a standout bid. Again, however, it isn't necessary to jump—three no trump is an overstatement of your values. In view of your two-over-one response, a bid of two no trump is adequate. Partner will only pass if he is sub-minimum, and in that case, you probably won't want to be in game.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠87 ♠962 ♠854 ♣AK842
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you respond?
A.—The fact that you are a passed hand does not give you license to respond at the two-level on fewer points than would be necessary if you had not passed. The requirements for a two-over-one response remain unchanged, and you do not have enough for that action. Take a demerit if you bid two clubs. One no trump is the only sensible choice.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

My son, a policeman, gave my little grandson an old police hat he no longer uses.

My grandson was so proud of it, but I accidentally spilled candle wax on it. Can you tell me how to remove the wax? — Ruth Mc.

Have no fear, Ruth. I think I can help you get back into the good graces of your grandson.

The procedure is the same one you would use on carpet, a tablecloth, or any fabric item that gets in the path of a dripping candle.

Assuming the wax is on the cloth part of the hat, get several white napkins or paper towels and, using them as a blotter, put one at a time over the wax and press with a warm iron.

As the napkin absorbs the wax, replace it with a clean one. Continue this way until all the wax has been removed.

If the wax is on the plastic or leather part of the hat, put the hat into the freezer for a spell and you should be able to just flick off the wax with your finger. Good luck! — Heloise

If the cords are tied side to side, there won't be any space for baby to stick his head through. Be sure to tie it securely to the top and bottom though.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann: You were not fair when you responded to "It Happened in Boston." I refer to the woman who felt sorry for the bride when her husband shoved the wedding cake into her face at the cutting ceremony.

Apparently you are not hip to this generation's customs, Miss Landers. Let me fill you in. I have seen this happen at practically every wedding I've attended in the past 10 years. Each time I cringe, but everyone else laughs. "Cake-shoving" seems to be a great crowd-pleaser. Usually the bride pushes the cake into the groom's face.

Last week I attended a very elegant wedding in Beverly Hills. The flowers were perfect, the attendants beautiful and the buffet table magnificent. When they cut the cake, I prayed there would be no rough-housing.

The bride fed her groom the first piece daintily. I was relieved. Then it was his turn. She saw what he was going to do, so she grabbed his wrist. They fought like a couple of ten-year-olds while his male friends egged him on, screaming, "DO IT." The couple struggled for what seemed like an eternity. Finally he won and shoved the cake into the bride's face, ruining her make-up and splattering her gown.

Although I deplore this antic, I think you should know it's considered cool by the younger generation. — A Witness

Dear Witness: I've gone to a good many weddings these past few years and have yet to see a single cake shoved into the face of either a bride or a groom. Maybe I don't travel in trendy circles and if this is what they're into, it's just as well. Such tacky behavior would ruin my day.

CONFIDENTIAL TO A Dramatic Example, Please: Who would have thought 20 years ago that a couple would have a daughter at West Point and a son at Vassar? I'd say this is a dramatic example of how attitudes about sexual equality have changed in the '70s.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 22-year-old woman who has been seeing a 25-year-old man for nearly three years. We love each other a lot and neither one goes with anyone else.

For my birthday last year I thought he might surprise me with an engagement ring, but instead he bought me a lovely dress I had admired in a shop window. I am hoping he will buy me a ring this year, but so far he hasn't said anything about it. I have a hunch money is the problem, and he is embarrassed to admit it.

I have a good job and a nice nest egg. Should I offer to help him buy the ring? — The Itch To Hitch In Pendleton, Ore.

Dear Itch: An engagement ring needn't be an expensive rock. Your friend could have bought you a modest stone last year for what he paid for the lovely dress. Don't offer to "help him out." The ring will be much more meaningful if he buys what he can afford on his own.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: In a column that discussed migraine headache, you noted that allergies do not cause migraines. But it is certainly true that many foods do trigger them, some of the more common ones being chocolate, salt, monosodium glutamate and chemicals in cheese. I think you would do migraine sufferers a service by pointing out this fact. I realize that diet is only one factor contributing to migraine, but it is an important one, I think. — Mrs. L.P.H.

You are absolutely correct. Sometimes if one bends over backwards to be correct one falls flat on one's fanny.

Strictly speaking, an allergic reaction is due to the formation of certain proteins in the body in response to the presence of a foreign substance. When the foreign substance (antigen) meets the body substance (antibody) symptoms appear, an asthmatic attack, for example. That's allergy.

Strictly speaking, a migraine headache is thought to be due to a more dramatic event, a sudden narrowing of blood vessels in the head. The narrowing is followed by expansion — and there's your migraine headache. There is no evidence that this sequence of events is due to allergy as defined above. Yet, many foods can trigger headaches because of a peculiar action of some substances in them, even though there is no antibody produced. The foods you mentioned are common triggers, and avoiding them has helped many migraine sufferers.

The difference between an allergic reaction and some other kind may be important to the medically precise. It means exactly nothing to the migraine headache sufferer. I apologize to those who may have misunderstood my previous comments. A great difficulty in discussing medical problems is medical terminology itself. It is not, one learns, used with great precision in daily language. Stick with me folks. I'm learning. Later this week I'll discuss cluster headaches.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can gall bladder stones cause upper back pain and chest pain sometimes around the heart without necessarily hurting where the gall bladder is? — A.R.

Yes, pain can be felt elsewhere than where the gallbladder is. Doctors call this "referred pain," and there are many other examples of it. Even appendicitis is felt at points other than at the site of the appendix at first.

The gall bladder gets its nerve supply from the chest area, so pain is often felt in the chest and not in the abdomen. The same is true of appendicitis. Often a doctor suspects appendicitis only to find the patient has pneumonia.

Conversely, often a doctor will immediately trace severe chest pain to a problem with one of the abdominal organs.

This is how diagnosticians earn their money.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have written you two times before with no answer in the paper. Please tell me if when you have a laminectomy the pain ever goes away afterward. I get no direct answer from my doctor. Also, do you ever get well enough to go back to work? — J.H.

I regret that you had to write three times. I probably didn't respond because it is always difficult to be helpful about things such as recovery time in such matters or about the degree of recovery in any specific case. I can comment generally.

A laminectomy (for the benefit of other readers) is the surgical removal of one of the soft, spongy cushions that lie between the bones of the spinal column (vertebrae). If a portion of that cushion (disc) protrudes and presses on the nerves leaving the spinal cord at that point, pain results.

Usually, when the disc is removed the

McDOWELL—ELLIOTT

Kathy McDowell became the bride of Gary Elliott Saturday in a 1 p.m. ceremony in the home of Carl Ballard. The Rev. Bill White officiated.

Debbie Hallmon, sister of the bride, and Darryll Perry were honor attendants.

Parents of the bride are Kathy McDowell and the late Mr. John McDowell. Mr. and Mrs. Gary Elliott of Hurliwood are parents of the bridegroom.

The bride attends Western Hills Baptist Academy. The bridegroom attended Frenship High School.

The couple plans to live in Lubbock.

TEA FOR TWO

In England, in the late 1890's, "tea for two" did not mean a romantic tete-a-tete, but a bargain. The success of the Lyon's catering shops was built by offering "tea for two" — two-pence for a good pot of tea — instead of the prevailing price of three-pence a cup.

How long, as I indicated, can vary. Unfortunately for you, it has been a long time, indeed. Usually, too, the patient is restored to full function and is able to do his work. Nothing in medicine is 100 percent, but I do hope and expect that your symptoms will go away in time. If the pain persists return to your doctor for a re-examination.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My daughter began her menstrual periods. She is only nine, and, of course, we are concerned about what this holds for her future. Can you comment? — Mrs. A.F.

It is a bit young, of course, but you could not call it abnormal.

Designers Promote Belts In Trendy, New Styles

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
NEW YORK (NEA) — A foggy night on the docks. Hulking figure in a trenchcoat slowly makes his way towards the river.

He pauses to light a cigarette under the light of a broken streetlamp and, without looking at the gorilla leaning against it, addresses him from the corner of his mouth.

"They tell me The Waist is back in town."

"Whattis to me?" rasps Gorilla.

"Seein' as youse two had a thing goin, I thought ya might be interested."

Gorilla shrugs. Trenchcoat inhales on his cigarette and studies it.

"They also tells me they'd seen her with Three-Finger Gonzo, down in the Village. She was all dolled up in a suit, for holiday, ya know, and she was wearin' one of them new contoured leather belts that buckles in the back. It was lemme see, yeah, the spectator look.

Two colors, like red piped with black or black piped with white. They say hers 'was by Anne Klein or Calderon, $8."

The Gorilla began to fidget nervously. "Oh, yeah? Well, I never known The Waist to go in for belts."

"That was them," snapped Trenchcoat. "This is now, pussy, and belts are big. They also tells me The Waist went to one of them fancy cocktail parties and she was wearin' a cummerbund on a jacket. But not your every day cummerbund; not for The Waist. This one had two loops of soft leather at, well, looped in front and then snapped so's you could see the snaps. They says it was a gift from Cheech the Trigger, $20, in hot pink, by Dimensions."

The Trenchcoat chuckled, dropped his cigarette and rubbed it out with the heel of his shoe.

"So, The Waist is back and she's wearin' belts. I ain't seen her and I ain't gonna," said the Gorilla weakly.

"Oh, ya should see her," the Trenchcoat taunted him. "Especially when she's got on her baggy jeans and a snazzy sweatshirt and she wraps one of them new western look belts over it, like Dame makes for $10, in narrow cowhide embossed with stitches, with a silver buckle and stuff. That's somethin' else." He grinned and shook his head.

The Gorilla fixed his cap. "I got a date," he said and started to move off.

"The Trenchcoat grabbed him by the lapels.

"You ain't goin' nowhere, pussy-cat. Not yet. I ain't told you about the black crocheted sash The Waist wrapped around her — a couple of times — when she visited the senator."

"Very elegant, on a pleated jacket with..."

The Gorilla broke away and ran into the fog.

Trenchcoat laughed and called after him. "Give The Waist my best and tell her we're lookin' forward to seein' her down at headquarters!"

East played the ten and South was in with the queen. He promptly led and finessed the jack of hearts. East took his king and cleared the club. South could take eight tricks but that was all.

Oswald: "South had no reason to take that heart finesse right away. He should have gone to dummy with a spade led a diamond and gone up with his king if East ducked. Then he could take and lose the heart finesse, but that diamond would have been his ninth trick."

Alan: "If East rose with the ace of diamonds and cleared the clubs, South would lead a second diamond from dummy and let it ride to West's queen. Then there would be no need to finesse in hearts. The diamond suit would give South all the tricks he needed."

Oswald: "North's two-club bid was typical of modern bidding style. He wasn't trying for a slam, but merely forcing the bidding and showing a good hand."

SPELLING BEE: Local Schools Announce Bee Winners

Lubbock County school continue to hold school spelling bees and announce those winners. These school winners and their alternates will represent the following schools in the Lubbock County Spelling Bee March 1. They are:

Roosevelt Junior High: — Susan Warner, seventh grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reid Warner of 22 Foothill Drive, Lake Ransom Canyon; alternate — Jennifer Rudkins, seventh grade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rudkins, Rt. 10 Box 843, Lubbock. Bee director David Baker said the last two words spelled were "ahead" and "airbrush."

A.C. Jackson Elementary: — Anthony Flores, sixth grade, son of Porfirio and Esperanza Flores, 104 Ave. W; alternate — Dora Marin, fifth grade, daughter of Eufemio and Mary Marin, 115 Waco Ave. The final words of the contest were "ordinary" and "platinum."

Hardwick Elementary: — John Clark, fifth grade son of Capt. and Mrs. John A.

Clark, 5408 8th St.; alternate — Darren Keesee, sixth grade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dayton Keesee, 5433 12th St. "Illegal" and "illustrate" were the final words.

Mackenzie Junior High: — Children of Dr. and Mrs. Arfin Lodhi, 5421 7th St., tied up this contest. Seventh-grader Saima Lodhi was school winner, with Asra, eighth grade, placing as alternate of the contest. The final words of the 25 round contest were "occurrence" and "opal."

St. Joseph School: — Tammy Schilling, fifth grade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Schilling, Rt. 1, Box 23, Slaton; alternate — Crystal Kitten, fifth grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kitten of Rt. 1, Box 120, Slaton. The final words were "lean" and "knothole."

Tubbs Elementary: — "Jackpot" and "watermelon" were the final words of this contest, directed by Rodney W. Cates. Winner was Diane Cristan, sixth grade daughter of Johnny and Martha Cristan, 3007 2nd St.; alternate is Lupita Alvarze, fifth grade, daughter of Frank and Patsy Hernandez, 3104 Bates Ave.

Lubbock Christian Junior High: — Jeff Taylor, seventh grade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Taylor, 5419 29th St.; alternate — Lora Hoffman, eighth grade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hoffman of 5206 9th St. Winning words were "lozenge" and "microscope."

Sam Arnett Elementary: — Sammy Burk, fourth grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Burk, 719 E. Quinn St.; alternate — Elsa Diego, fifth grade, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Diego, 115 E. Tulane St. "Beginner" and "behead" were the winning words.

Wester Elementary: — Principal and bee director Albert Jones announced that Shannon Gooch, sixth grade daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gary T. Gooch, 5202 43rd St., was winner of that contest. Alternate is Amy Colmer, fifth grade, daughter of Mary L. Colmer, 5417 48th St. The final words were "nonsense" and "obvious."

Scientists Study Chronobiology

NEW YORK (Special) — Without the science of chronobiology, a test-tube baby Louise Joy Brown, probably could not have been born, and the same science can help air travelers overcome jet lag, reports Medical World News.

Louise Brown's mother became pregnant after the embryo, conceived in a test tube, was inserted into the uterus between 10 p.m. and midnight; her gynecologist thinks circadian rhythms, the bodily cycles of temperature, blood sugar, and other factors that wax and wane every 24 hours or so, were the key factor. Circadian rhythms are what chronobiologists study.

Researchers learned years ago that some people are "owls," who are at their best and brightest late in the day and far into the night, and that others are "larks," who rise and shine early but wilt at sundown. Owls' and larks' temperature, blood sugar, and other body rhythms are different, too, and studies are now showing that these rhythms can make a great deal of difference in medical diagnosis and treatment.

Research has shown, for example, that some drugs used to treat high blood pressure work far better if given between 6 p.m. and midnight than at any other time, the same pattern is found for some cancer drugs.

One way circadian rhythms show themselves is in "jet lag," the tiredness and lack of effectiveness people feel after a long airline trip across several time zones. Chronobiologists are trying to overcome jet lag by altering the time and content of meals eaten just before, during, and just after long trips. A recent test of the technique on U.S. troops airlifted from Fort Hood, Texas to Nuremberg, Germany, showed "very positive" results, reports U.S. Army research psychologist R. Curtis Graeber. A similar technique is showing promise in helping some insomniacs correct their sleep cycles, reports the magazine.

But researchers warn that circadian rhythms should not be confused with "biorhythms," the supposed 23-, 28-, and 33-day cycles that their promoters claim begin at birth. There is no scientific evidence biorhythms exist. In fact, one chronobiologist, who has been measuring his own physical, emotional and intellectual rhythms, along with a number of other body cycles, for the past 10 years, found that a computer-prepared "biorhythm" chart based on his birth date had no relation whatever to his actual rhythms.

Howard County Sets Date For Contest

Howard College Auditorium will be the site of the Howard County Spelling Bee, to be held Tuesday at 4 p.m. Mrs. Janice Rossion will be pronouncer for the event.

Among the schools participating will be Big Spring Runnels Junior High, Big Spring Goliad Middle School, Moss Elementary, Marcy Elementary, College Heights Elementary, Forsan Junior High, Coahoma Junior High, Immaculate Heart of Mary, Washington Elementary, Bauer Elementary, Kentwood Elementary and Big Spring Christian Academy.

The winner of this contest will represent Howard County in the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal's Regional Spelling Bee. Approximately 18 counties in the Lubbock area are expected to participate.

Firefighters Given Fines For Walkout

CHICAGO (AP) — A judge slapped fines ranging up to $25,000 a day on the firefighters union and seven of its leaders Sunday night until they comply with a back-to-work order and end a four-day strike.

Circuit Court Judge John F. Hechinger did not jail any of the strike leaders but issued a preliminary injunction. It ordered all members of the Chicago Firefighters Union back to work immediately and forbade them from encouraging further strike action and from picketing.

In handing down sentences, Hechinger said he sympathized with the strikers, especially since an agreement on a contract seemed imminent, but "I'm sitting in the decision-maker's chair."

Meanwhile, the city weathered its worst fire yet in the strike while later in the day a last-minute try for a settlement failed.

For several hours Hechinger kept negotiators in separate rooms in the courthouse and tried to break the impasse by shuttling back and forth. But that effort collapsed in the early afternoon.

Many of the 4,350 firefighters picketed at stationhouses throughout the city again Sunday. Before the court session.

Canadians To Vote On Prime Minister

TORONTO (UPI) — Joe Clark, stubbornly refusing to believe polls that say his term as Canadian prime minister is ending after only nine months, Sunday began a last-ditch drive for votes in today's general election.

Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the man whose 11-year term at the nation's helm was abruptly ended by the little-known Conservative last May, wound down his campaign with skating party in front of Toronto's City Hall.

Two major opinion polls conducted in the last week of the campaign left little doubt Canadians were prepared to turn back in large numbers to Trudeau, the Liberal party leader whom they drove in to retirement last year.

Gallup Poll released Saturday showed the 60-year-old Trudeau leading Clark by 20 percentage points and on the verge of forming a stable majority government, despite strong gains by the left-leaning New Democratic Party.

A second poll, released by the CTV television network, had Trudeau 10 points ahead and left open some possibility that Clark's Conservative party could squeak in with the barest of parliamentary majorities.

The Liberals actually outpolled the Conservatives by four percentage points in the 1979 election, but many of those votes fattened overwhelming margins in French-speaking Quebec, where their strength is overwhelming. They wound up with fewer members elected to the House of Commons.

Despite the evidence of the pollsters' feisty, 40-year-old prime minister continued Sunday to predict his Conservative party will be re-elected with a majority of the seats in the House.

The party "is on the edge of that majority," he told local candidates and party workers over breakfast at Toronto's CN Tower, 1,150 feet above the snowy, sun-baked city where the election may well be decided.

Clark brushed off deep-seated public concern about his plans to sell off the state-owned oil company Petro-Canada and a series of foreign policy gaffes — an image that is overwhelming approval for the Canadian rescue of six American hostages in Iran failed to dispel.

People trust this party, and trust this government, and if I may say so, trust this leader," he said.

Clark's hectic final day of campaigning was to include rallies in two western cities on his way to his mountain retreat at Jasper, Alberta, where he will settle in to wait for Monday night's results.

The leaders of the other major parties wound down their campaigns at a more leisurely pace.

Trudeau made only the one public appearance at the outdoor skating rink before flying home to Ottawa.

And Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democratic Party, spent most of the day flying to Toronto from Vancouver where he capped his campaign Saturday night with a triumphant rally that attracted 4,000 supporters.

Broadbent's left-leaning party has benefitted from public antipathy toward Clark and Trudeau's lackluster campaigns.

The polls show the NDP with 22 to 23 percent of the vote, enough for the best election result in the party's history and the probable balance of power if neither of the major parties is able to win a clear majority.

At a news conference Sunday, the construction union presidents praised Carter's record on labor issues, his energy program and his call for increased defense spending.

John Lyons, president of the Iron Workers, said Carter's record on behalf of unions in the construction industry has been "absolutely outstanding."

Andrew Haas, president of the Asbestos Workers, said Carter is "the most electable candidate."

The union presidents also said they are strongly opposed to Kennedy's stand on nuclear power. The Massachusetts senator has called for a moratorium on new nuclear power plant construction until the facilities can be proved safe.

Many of the construction unions contend such a stand will cost their members jobs and also make it impossible for the United States to become independent of foreign oil producers.

Several Kennedy campaign officials met Sunday with a group of union leaders already backing the senator as well as with a few uncommitted union officials, but the meetings produced no new endorsements.

James G. O'Hara, a former congressman from Michigan who is Kennedy's chief contact with labor, said at least one union is prepared to announce its backing of Kennedy in the near future, but he declined to identify which one.

union president Frank Muscare told a rally of about 500 strikers at the downtown Civic Center to stick with their strike.

"Nobody goes back until we get a written contract," Muscare said.

Mayor Uses Threats
Mayor Jane Byrne has said she would fire strikers if they were found to be illegally off their jobs.

On Saturday night, Hechinger urged the strikers to return to work and ordered both sides to court Sunday morning. He threatened then to find union leaders in contempt unless firefighters returned to work.

When negotiators showed up in court, the strike was still on, but instead of going into a hearing, Hechinger sent union and city officials into separate rooms for another try at a settlement.

"I won't suggest we failed, only that we didn't succeed," Hechinger said.

J. Dale Barry, a lawyer for the union, said there appeared to be no hope for further negotiations.

Several fires were reported overnight, including the most serious one to date — a blaze that forced 60 residents to flee the three-story Crlye Hotel on the South Side. The building was badly damaged but no serious injuries were reported.

There were conflicting reports on whether strikers helped during that fire. Fire Commissioner Richard G. Albrecht said 75 firefighters were at the scene but he knew of no strikers among them. But strikers Matt Birsa and Jim McPhillips said they and two others took a pumper from a nearby firehouse and rushed to the scene. They said they put up a ladder and ran through the burning building to make sure everyone had escaped.

First Walkout Ever
Firefighters staged their first walkout ever Thursday after the city refused to drop demands for a no-strike clause in any written contract that would replace previous handshake agreements.

The strike has left the 3.5 million residents of the nation's second-largest city dependent on makeshift protection, including fire officials, other city employees and suburban fire departments.

Hechinger's ultimatum Saturday came as court-mediated negotiations broke off after a day in which they produced no progress.

"Right now what you're doing is wrong," Hechinger told union leaders. "You must first correct that wrong."

"I implore you to go back. I do this almost with a stuttering voice. Muscare, are you listening to me? We can do an awful lot with you on the job."

"If one human life is lost tonight," the judge said, "we are all responsible. I ask you to go back."

Afterward, Muscare said he was willing to go to jail for the firefighters and said he would not order his men back to work without "a signed, written contract." He said he mistrusted Hechinger's public return-to-work plea saying, "I believe (he) owed a political tab and he's paying it back."

Also on Saturday, Mrs. Byrne said the first notices of disciplinary hearings against strikers were "already in the mail."

"No fix, no clout, nothing will put them back" should the men be "found to have walked off the job illegally," she said. "Never again will these men put on the blue shirt of the Chicago Fire Department."

Negotiations had been under way for weeks to give the firefighters their first contract. The firefighters walked out early Thursday morning after the talks broke down.

Besides the no-strike clause, other issues dividing negotiators included the number of men needed to handle certain pieces of equipment and whether officers could be members of the union. Money was not a major issue.

High Court To Hear Public-Trial Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court will hear arguments Tuesday on the controversial question of how far a judge may go in barring the press and public from his courtroom.

Virginia Attorney General Marshall Coleman will defend a state supreme court ruling which upheld the closing of a 1978 murder trial on grounds that news accounts might have prejudiced the jury.

El Paso into central Texas. El Paso reported some 21 inches of rain — the most the state — Sunday, but the snow and sleet in lesser amounts caused the most problems for travelers in the basin. No injuries were reported, though.

While the northern and western parts of Texas should begin clearing and warming up today, the front that caused the chill is expected to continue doing its damage across Texas Hill Country today. Travelers' advisories are in effect for most of central Texas as far south as San Antonio, where freezing rain is expected.

Elsewhere Today
Across the nation today, the National Weather Service predicts that rain will cover most of the Pacific Coast and spread across the intermountain region, while cloudy skies will dominate the skies above the Great Plains and the upper Mississippi Valley.

Sunny skies should prevail over the eastern third of the country, though temperatures will remain quite chilly. Highs across New England and into the Valley Forge area will reach only into the 20s, while highs in the 30s and 40s will prevail overmost of the Atlantic Coast.

The cold front that is freezing central Texas today stretches north all the way into Oklahoma, Nebraska and South Dakota, while another cold front is draped across Ontario across North Dakota, Montana and back into Vancouver.

Afghan Regime Suffers Casualties

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghan rebels recently killed more than 100 government troops and members of the ruling Khalq Party in fighting northeast of the capital city of Kabul, according to a report from Afghanistan received here.

The Moslem rebels, who have been fighting a succession of Marxist regimes in Kabul, successfully resisted an attack last Monday by Soviet-backed government forces on Dahana-i-Guri, an insurgent stronghold 105 miles from the capital, according to the source.

There have been unverifiable but persistent rumors in Kabul over the past two weeks that members of the Khalq Politburo had engaged in a shootout inside the heavily guarded People's Palace.

Aspin said the original version of the Selective Service report concluded that a registration system is not necessary.

The White House simply went against the advice of the experts in both the Pentagon and the Selective Service System when it called for an immediate resumption of registration," Aspin said.

Selective Services officials acknowledged last week that they could develop a mobilization plan that did not require registration. However, they said it would take at least 18 months to put in place.

The no-registration plan was described as one of several options outlined for the president.

The overall report was prepared in response to an amendment sponsored by Miss Schroeder last year. Both she and Aspin are members of the House Armed Services Committee.

Aspin said that before Congress gives Carter money for registration, "Every member of Congress ought to have a right to see just what the specialists who have been working on this for months think is needed to be able to mobilize fighting power should we ever find ourselves in a major war again."

Meanwhile, the Senate returns from a week-long holiday Monday to hear George Washington's farewell address and to work on legislation to establish the Channel Islands National Park off the southern California coast.

The House returns to work Tuesday. The House Judiciary Committee plans to vote Wednesday on whether to launch its own rival investigation to the FBI's "Abscam" bribery probe. A pending resolution would direct the Justice Department to turn over in 30 days its video tapes and other evidence against congressmen implicated in the FBI's probe.

Sniff Of Death

ing in a part of the English Channel where many earn their livelihood.

British officials have in hand a copy of the Greek freighter's manifesto. The cargo on board is an environmentalist's nightmare.

The list includes 10 one-ton drums of liquid chlorine — which gives off a lethal gas used in World War I trenches; dozens of crates of amino methyl propanol — reputedly a cancer-inducing chemical, and 50 half-ton cylinders of a powerful ammonia solution.

Next Sunday, a team of divers is scheduled to inspect the wreck of the 16,000-ton Aeolian Sky to see how much of the dangerous chemical cargo is still on board, officials said.

Bush Takes 14 Delegates In Puerto Rico Primary

cans ran their own primary and supervised it themselves. They asked voters for donations, and voters were dropping dollar bills into coffee cans after marking ballots.

Ramos said time was too short and the party did not have the money to provide private voting booths after the court ruling.

The Republicans voted under brilliant blue skies with temperatures in the 80s, a stark contrast to the snows in which New Hampshire has traditionally started the primaries.

Nearly 2 million voters are registered in Puerto Rico, but officials were prepared for a far lower turnout, 250,000 at most, with some Republicans saying they expected only 100,000. Puerto Ricans do not register by party, and may vote in either primary or both.

The 3.3 million Puerto Ricans here are U.S. citizens but they have no vote in the presidential election because the island is not a state. The biggest political issue is whether Puerto Rico should seek statehood, remain a largely self-governing commonwealth in association with the United States, or seek independence.

Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo and his New Progressive Party are statehood advocates, and he has promised a referendum on the island's status if he is re-elected in November. The NPP viewed the primaries as a demonstration of support for statehood.

The island's Republicans have always been a bulwark in the NPP — which includes pro-statehood Democrats — and each GOP candidate has pledged to fight for statehood if it is approved in a referendum.

Beyond that, few major issues were discussed here, raised the possibility of admitting Puerto Rico to the federal revenue sharing program even though its citizens pay no federal income taxes.

Bush campaigned as "the only candidate who really has a chance to win." His son, Jeb, characterized that message as "don't throw your vote away."

Romero remained officially neutral despite a spate of reports that he privately favored Baker. Bush had a cadre of NPP supporters directing his campaign.

The campaign had a special flavor, with Bush shouting "statehood now" in Spanish, Baker telling street corner crowds their Spanish culture could survive statehood, and Connally mounting a high-stepping Puerto Rican horse to be photographed.

Meanwhile, the Puerto Rican Independence Party convinced a San Juan judge that use of public funds for national party primaries violates the island's constitution. She barred use of government money or facilities, and Republicans wound up running their primary while they appeal.

STILL ON STRIKE — Striking firefighters gather after a rally in Chicago's Daley Center Plaza Sunday, prior to resumption of negotiations between the Fire Fighters Union and city mediators. The firefighters' walkout was in its fourth day. Many of the city's 4,350 firefighters picketed stationhouses Sunday and vowed not to go back to work until they have a contract. A spokesman for the firefighters said there seemed to be no hope for early settlement. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagans Joke, Slip During Campaign

By DIANE CURTIS

KEENE, N.H. (UPI) — "There goes Connecticut," quipped an aide after Ronald Reagan told an ethnic joke Saturday and his wife Nancy, campaigning separately, made a racial slip of the tongue.

Late Saturday, the former California governor — in good spirits after a spirited question-and-answer session at a Keene high school, regaled New Hampshire Sen. Gordon Humphrey, former Gov. Lane Dwinell and a couple of aides with a joke he later repeated to reporters aboard the campaign bus.

It was:
"How do you tell who the Polish fellow is at a cock fight? He's the one with the duck."

"How do you tell who the Italian is at the cock fight? He's the one who bets on the duck."

"How do you know the mafia was there? The duck wins."
One aide quipped, laughingly afterward: "There goes Connecticut."

Mrs. Reagan, meantime, attended a Chicago fund-raiser for her husband who was grounded in New Hampshire by a snowstorm. But Reagan arranged a telephone hookup to his wife and 200 supporters at the reception.

According to a report by the City News Bureau of Chicago, Mrs. Reagan, in speaking to her husband, said she wished he could be there to "see all these beautiful white people."

"She hesitated a moment, paled slightly, and amended: 'beautiful black and white people.'"

"I'm so sorry, I didn't mean it," Mrs. Reagan was quoted as telling a reporter later.

Donald Totten, a state representative who is managing Reagan's Illinois campaign, defended her.

"Well she didn't mean that, she was talking to her husband about the white snow and that's how she got mixed up," he was quoted as saying in the City News Bureau report.

Reagan started a full day of campaigning Sunday with a trip to the First Parish Congregational Church in Dover, built in 1638.

The candidate stopped briefly at Dot's coffee shop in New Gorham, then traveled to Wolliboro for a speech to some 300 supporters at a regional high school.

At one point, Reagan was asked if he supported the full list of questions asked by U.S. Census takers. He replied that it was his "instinct" just to answer questions about how many people live in the house and refuse to respond to the others.

Two Arkansas Delegates Leaning Toward Baker

NORTH LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — With two of Arkansas' uncommitted national Republican delegates leaning toward Sen. Howard Baker for the presidential nomination, Baker and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan have almost an even hold on the state's delegation.

The Arkansas GOP completed delegate selection Saturday, adding seven at-large delegates to the 12 chosen at district caucuses Feb. 2. It was the first state to choose national delegates for the GOP convention this summer in Detroit.

In the final tally, Reagan had seven delegates and Baker four. But of the five uncommitted, at least two were leaning toward Baker.

Former UN ambassador and CIA director George Bush picked up two delegates, and former Texas Gov. John Connally, who came up emptyhanded in the first round of voting, left the state with one delegate committed to him.

Delia Combs, the GOP Executive director, had predicted the second round of voting would even up the score in distributing delegates to the various candidates, as well as equalize the number of blacks and women going to Detroit.

The Rev. Daniel Bowman, minority representative in the GOP, warned against sending an all-white delegation to Detroit, telling the committee "the eyes of the nation are on Arkansas." Elijah Coleman of Pine Bluff was elected to fill the last of the delegate positions. A black alternate was also chosen.

Two more women were chosen as delegates, making a total of five in the 19-member delegation.

Kennedy Calls Economic Controls Bid Last Hope

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy said Sunday his proposal for mandatory economic controls is the country's "last hope" for regaining control over an inflation-wracked economy.

Campaigning for votes in New Hampshire's Feb. 26 Democratic presidential primary, Kennedy conceded that his call for a six-month wage-price freeze is "a tough program."

But, he added, "it is our last hope if the American people are going to regain control over their own destiny in the area of the economy."

Kennedy has been stressing in recent days that last month's sharp increase in wholesale prices translates into an annual inflation rate of "some 20 percent." And at every stop he makes, he reminds voters that he favors a six-month across-the-board freeze to be followed by mandatory controls for as long as necessary to control inflation.

The wholesale price increase in January was 1.6 percent, the biggest monthly jump in more than five years.

Kennedy is campaigning from house to house as he goes through New Hampshire. On Sunday, for example, he started his day by attending Mass at St. Joseph's Church, then stopped in downstairs for coffee with members of the parish.

Then he scheduled stops at small coffees at five private homes in Manchester.

At each stop, he emphasizes the issues of energy, the economy and foreign policy, shakes the hands of everyone who attends and patiently signs autographs and poses for pictures.

Kennedy also repeatedly reminds voters that Carter has refused to debate him thus far in the campaign.

"He's asking you to cast a proxy vote" for the next four years, he said at one coffee.

Carter says he cannot campaign personally for re-election as long as American hostages are being held in Iran.

Senator Muskie Predicts Carter To Begin Campaign After Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie predicted Sunday President Carter will take to the stump and debate the issues in his campaign for re-election once the question of the U.S. hostages held in Iran is settled.

Muskie said Carter knows that he has been hurt politically by not taking to the campaign trail but to a certain extent he has become "a prisoner behind the negotiations in which he has been involved."

"I don't think he's hiding in the sense that he's afraid to debate or afraid to get out in the campaign trail," Muskie said.

A Maine Democrat, Muskie said Carter's margin over Sen. Edward M. Kennedy in the Maine caucuses a week ago would have been greater but for Kennedy's emphasis on Carter's absence from the state to debate the issues.

Still, Muskie said on the CBS News program "Face the Nation," Carter was the Maine winner although Kennedy's showing gives him momentum going into the New Hampshire primary.

Muskie said he did not believe Kennedy's charges concerning the Iranian negotiations to free the hostages had damaged U.S. interests. He said that he thought both Carter and Kennedy have been over-reacting as the campaign heats up but this is not unusual.

Whether this divisiveness hurts the Democratic party or not, Muskie said, "depends upon how long the personal slams continue... Once the hostage situation is behind us, you'll find a more open kind of debate and I think the president will get out on the stump and will debate. That will be more a kind of situation in which the rhetoric still could be hard hitting but need not be as personality oriented."

Muskie, himself a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1972, said that now that an election year is here, "it is appropriate for the president to have challengers within his own party or outside..."

Muskie declined to say which candidate he eventually will support.

On the question of getting Iran to release the hostages, Muskie said he can not imagine the president saying in so many words that the United States was to blame or that the country had done something wrong.

But he said the origins of the Iranian crisis and the reason the deposed Shah of Iran was allowed to come to this country would be interesting questions to investigate.

"I am sure that, without casting any reflection at all upon either Senator Kennedy or President Carter or their motivations that the Senate, being what it is, would try to get the full story in appropriate hearings of what happened during this whole period," Muskie declared.

Muskie said he still had mixed feelings about Carter's proposal to resume draft registration. Although he is convinced there is a military manpower problem now, Muskie said, he still questions whether registration is the answer to that problem.

He said registration "may have some utility as a signal to the Russians that we are serious about the invasion of Afghanistan..."

Texas Barber Spends Years Carving Wooden Miniature Circus

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Like other kids, Fred Wagenfuehr carries a circus in his imagination. But this kid is 63 years old. And he tediously recreated the magical big top of his imagination — in elaborate balsawood miniatures.

Wagenfuehr, a New Braunfels barber for 40 years, spent nearly 10 years painstakingly carving and painting balsawood pieces that he fitted together to become the stunning "Francis Waggie" miniature circus. The 17 colorful circus wagons are each only about 12 inches long. The dozens of elephants, lions, tigers, clowns, lion tamers, trained horses and ringmasters were carved in perfect proportion. Although Wagenfuehr is self taught, the circus is intricately accurate in detail. So intricate and accurate, in fact, that it caught the attention of historians at the Institute of Texan Cultures in nearby San Antonio. "The Francis Waggie 3-Ring Circus and Wild Animal Show" — named for Wagenfuehr's deceased mother — went on temporary display there recently as an outstanding example of Texas folk art. "He did a spectacular job," said Dr. Phil Hewitt, an institute historian and exhibits manager. "It is as authentic a job as I've ever seen. It is accurate down to the nuts and bolts on the wagons. It is really good." The circus was fueled by Wagenfuehr's childhood memories of the circus' annual visit to New Braunfels. Wagenfuehr would sneak off to the railroad yard to watch the circus unload. Then he'd pester the roustabouts as they set up the big top and fed the elephants. And he never missed a show.

"How I did love that circus," he recalled. "It used to be really something when the circus came to town," he said.

"When I became an adult, I kept going to the big circuses when they started coming to the coliseums in San Antonio."

Special Olympics Assisted In Very Practical Way By Rainbo

Harry Hoopes, president of Rainbo Baking Co. of Lubbock, has announced that Rainbo Bakery will donate 5 cents to the Special Olympics for every Roman Meal bread item purchased from today, Monday, Feb. 18, through Sunday, April 27, throughout all of the Rainbo Bakery of Lubbock marketing area.

Area grocers have been particularly cooperative in agreeing they will allow special displays and signs in their stores, reminding customers of the program.

Special Olympics Explained
Special Olympics is the world's largest program of sports training and competition for the mentally handicapped. More than one million athletes are involved in year-round activities in all 50 states and 40 foreign countries and territories.

Local Special Olympics will be on Saturday, March 29, with Kerry Baker, head of physical education at the Lubbock State School as area coordinator for the local Special Olympics involving 20 South Plains counties.

Watch For Features
(Watch for special feature stories presented by Rainbo on these pages in future weeks outlining local achievements, activities and specific plans for the South Plains Special Olympics.)

There are 17,000 athletes and 4,000 volunteers in the Texas program. Dennis Poulos, Texas chapter director, said "the generosity of the Rainbo Bakeries will allow us to greatly expand our program of activities to the mentally retarded."

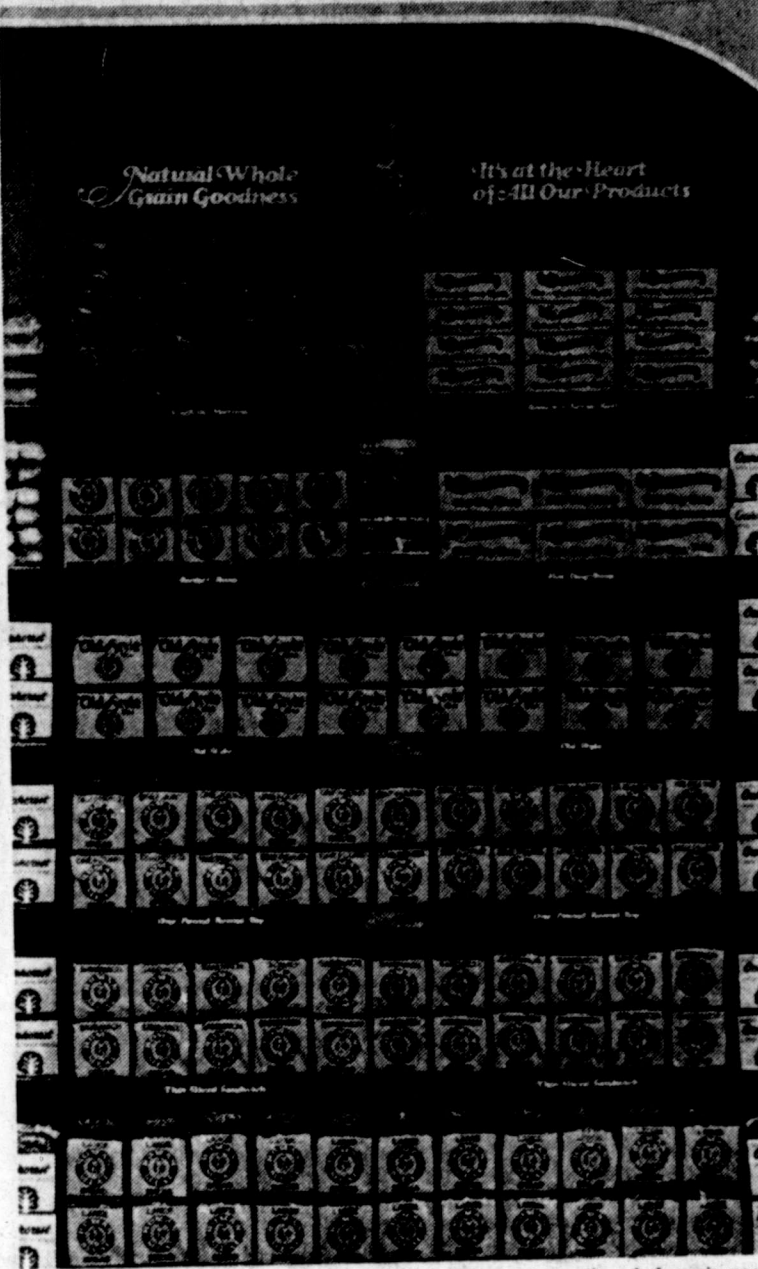

Hoopes adds further: "Our minds and bodies have limits, but Special Olympics proves there are no limits to the human spirit."

Since 1968, Special Olympics has given more than two million mentally handicapped people the chance to grow through service. The program has enjoyed Lubbock participation since '69, and over 500 participants are expected at the impending March 29 event to be conducted at Coronado High School in Lubbock, with no charge involved and with the public invited. Details will be given in future articles, remember.

"Your Roman Meal baker believes the Special Olympics deserves support, and Rainbo certainly making a big contribution, with 5 cents for every Roman Meal item purchased during the announced dates going to the Special Olympics."

So . . . Buy Roman Meal bakery products from Rainbo; support the Special Olympics in this very practical way.

Business & Industrial Review

Jack Faulks Auctioneers Conducting Sales: 'Heavy Equipment To Apparel'

"Selling the 'auction way' is the quickest, easiest way to liquidate business or personal property." Jack Faulks Auctioneers, at 2414 Oberlin (just off North University) in Lubbock, can save one the hassle of selling business inventory, estate, farm equipment or other items on the open market.

Besides assuring the highest market price through competitive bidding, Jack Faulks Auctioneers also assumes responsibility for advertising the sale, for book-keeping, sales tax collection and check-out.

Jack Faulks Auctioneers is bonded and takes pride in the fact it has four licensed auctioneers in its employ, thereby assuring the seller of well organized and professionally conducted auction.

"The set up of an auction is a very important part of a well conducted sale."

Jack Faulks Auctioneers' experienced staff organizes, cleans, tags and displays each item to be sold in a pleasing manner, therefore benefitting the seller and buyer alike.

Jack Faulks Auctioneers holds a sales tax number issued by the Office of the State Comptroller of Texas. Its clerking and cashiering staffs are familiar with state sales tax laws and are experienced in making the proper reports to the state.

Jack Faulks Auctioneers uses a reliable and professional clerking and cashiering system. Because the pace of an auction is fast and furious, Faulks employs a consistent system to keep up with the price and buyer of each item.

Sale Files Maintained
Jack Faulks Auctioneers also maintains a complete file on each auction for reference by the selling party if the need arises.

The Print Shoppe, a commercial printing plant at 1606-B N. University, handles all brochures and advertising for Jack Faulks Auctioneers. The able staff has an excellent knowledge of design, printing and advertising layout. All advertising, including brochures and catalogs for Jack Faulks Auctioneers is handled through the Print Shoppe, with the advertising department maintaining a file on all area newspapers and many large area dailies. A continuously growing mailing list of several hundred proven buyers also is maintained by the Print Shoppe for Jack Faulks Auctioneers. The list is constantly updated.

Serves Wide Area
The mobile staff of Jack Faulks Auctioneers can conduct an auction anywhere in the West Texas area. Some of the area towns in which Jack Faulks Auctioneers has conducted auctions include Abilene, Odessa, Colorado City, Muleshoe, Sundown, Rotan, Littlefield, Morton, Roby, Slaton, Springlake, Westbrook, Plainview, Big Springs, Tahoka, Clarendon, Crosbyton; and of course Lubbock.

Impending Sales Told
Jack Faulks Auctioneers has an auction scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 27, in El Paso. This will be a complete liquidation of the Garco Manufacturing plant, manufacturers of Wrangler off-road vehicles. This auction consists of approximately 30 new off-road vehicles and parts to manufacture about 60 more. Also, all office and manufacturing equipment will be sold.

Jack Faulks Auctioneers also has a jewelry store auction scheduled at Crescent Jewelers, 315 S. Eddy, Pecos, Tex., for Feb. 19. This auction consists of fine jewelry, crystal, pottery, silverware and brass, copper and pewter items.

Jack Faulks Auctioneers can conduct auctions for any type business from heavy equipment to women's apparel.

All inquiries are held in the strictest confidence. For more information, contact Jack Faulks Auctioneers at (806) 763-4919, or write P.O. Box 5700, Lubbock, Texas 79417.

Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies Store Tells Specials

"For all your hardware needs, give us a call" is the invitation of Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies, 2255 34th St., successor to the Mike Stephenson Hardware.

A lot of contractors, do-it-yourself handymen and other Lubbock residents have expressed appreciation of the type hardware store afforded by Danny Fowler, lifelong Lubbock resident associated in the construction field for some eight years. Danny purchased the hardware firm about two months ago, has added stock and has announced key specials including:

Caulking is marked at a 30 per cent reduction in case lots to contractors.
Skil Saw blades are just $2.98.
One should check the Fowler ads and come into the store for still other specials on power tools, etc.

Stocked to Serve
Indicative of the selection and the completeness of the store, the following are among items stocked:

Hiite drills and other heavy duty items for the contractor.
Energy-saving supplies including weather strips, storm windows and doors, etc.;
Amerock decorator hardware. Skil and Rockwell power tools;
Ames quality yard tools, Schrade cutlery, Flecto stains, Black & Decker tools, Vermont American tools, Disston saws, Rockwell washerless kitchen faucets, shop equipment by Vermont American, Greenbrier lawn mowers, Stanley tools and more.
Keys are made.

And there is veneer Luan mahogany shelving, lawn mower blades, lawn care needs such as sprinklers;
Custom Screens
Custom making and repair of screens is an appreciated and specialized service;
Of course there are ladders, step stools, a wide range in pipe fittings, and scads of other items one would expect to find in a better hardware store.

Fowler points out that he saw the need of such an establishment in the 34th Street vicinity, and reception to his type store has been most gratifying.

Fowler's Hardware & Building Supplies, successor to Mike Stephenson Hardware, remember, is open long hours, from 8 a.m. until 7 p.m., Monday through Saturdays.

PRACTICAL, EXTENSIVE STOCK — Danny Fowler, owner of the hardware store bearing his name, at 2255 34th St., is shown in one of the store areas correctly hinting of an inventory serving contractors and the handyman alike. The store before Fowler's purchase was known as the Mike Stephenson Hardware, with the name change now in process.

BARTON'S PUMP SERVICE

TEAMED FOR TOP SERVICE — Barton's Pump Service has a record of successfully meeting irrigation and domestic pump sale and service needs on the South Plains. Pictured, from left, is owner Dale Barton and wife Linda; and experienced staff-members Sam Rojas and Gordon Nealy, the latter a son-in-law of the Bartons. Other help is placed on the job as needed.

Barton Pump Service Meeting Multiple Needs In Wide Area

Experience counts — and this certainly is true in the business of sales and repairs on all makes of domestic and irrigation pumps.

Barton Pump Service, located four miles east of the Lubbock city limits on the Idalou Highway, has this experience, with a record of service and achievement.

The firm is owned and actively operated by Dale Barton, in the business for 19 years.

Barton Pump Service is dealer for Fairbanks-Morse, Tate AC, Reda, Pioneer and Simmons pumps.

As further service, Barton Pump Service has a ditcher machine, providing ditching and backhoe service.

Acidizing, Also

Baling and acidizing services also are part of the business receiving expert attention.

The firm not only installs and services the pumps it sells, but also repairs all makes of pumps, whether submersibles, centrifugal or turbines, in its clean, well-equipped shop.

Pressure Tanks

Barton Pump Service offers a complete line of pressure tanks, too, in both glass and Well-X-Trol captive air balloon within the tank models, in addition to the latest models of pumps.

Every employee is well experienced.

Four well-equipped mobile units are utilized in the company's service extending even beyond a 100-mile range of Lubbock. All are equipped with two-way radio for greater speed and efficiency.

"For the best in repairs on all makes of domestic and irrigation pumps, turn to Barton Pump Service. Visit the shop or call for all your pump, baling and acidizing, ditching and backhoe needs.

Remodeling, Adding a Room, Custom Homebuilding Among Sanders Services

"Do you need added space in your home? Do you need another room but just didn't know how to go about the planning and construction? Then let Melvin Sanders assist!"

For remodeling, for room additions, for custom homes, one deserves and desires finest workmanship. Right?

Then, the wise thing might well be to entrust these tasks to Melvin Sanders Construction & Remodeling, phone 797-9779 in Lubbock.

Sanders, a lifelong Lubbock resident, literally "grew up" in the building business, following in the footsteps of his carpenter father. Melvin has spent years putting together a qualified team of hands and subcontractors with ability that cannot be questioned.

From the smallest job to the largest, integrity and know-how are key considerations.

Turnkey Capabilities

Turnkey jobs, building just anything one can imagine, are Sanders specialties.

Whether the need is kitchen cabinets, repainting, porches, patios, carpeting, sheds, storage houses, plumbing, formica, ceramic work, painting, trim, electrical work or adding a room, reliance upon Sanders results in a job well done, more than a few area residents can testify. Sanders seems to do it all, when the customer desires, from drawing plans right down to assistance in financing!

(Sanders reports that there is more money now locally available for remodeling, and that assistance in financing is gladly given.)

Something else about a Sanders job of any size: Melvin Sanders personally works on "every job we sell"! Furthermore, the crews "stay after the job", not deserting it to start another. Isn't this a refreshing assurance?

Consider also, that references are gladly given; examples of Sanders' work can be pointed out throughout the area; and ordinarily there is no long wait before a Sanders crew gets on the job.

It would seem that whatever the remodeling need, or custom homebuilding project, anywhere in Lubbock and immediate area, a call to Sanders seems in order.

A native of Lubbock, Sanders is a '66 Monterey High School graduate, then majoring in architectural engineering at Texas Tech.

For full information on how Sanders can work for you, how free estimates are available, etc., simply call 797-9779, day or night, most likely Mrs. Sanders (Carla) will be able to speed your request, should Sanders not be at the phone.

It may be old fashioned... but Sanders believes that "know-how, dedication to customer service, liking folks and treating them right" is the best way of doing business.

"Melvin Sanders' Construction & Remodeling merits your consideration."

BY MELVIN SANDERS — New beauty and utility for the home can come with remodeling or additions, and Melvin Sanders Construction & Remodeling invites consideration, no matter size of the job.

Lubbock's Own Chimney Sweep Assisting Throughout Region

"As you light those logs in the fireplace for both comfort and atmosphere in the cool or even cold weather that has been the norm recently, have you the assurance that your chimney is clean, safe and fully functional?"

"A lot of you have been using the fireplace more than usual, what with the frigid weather, the energy shortage, etc. To be sure, then the wise suggestion is to involve the services of Al the Chimney Sweep!"

Let Al clean the chimney, simply call 795-1789. The cost is modest and the inconvenience minimal.

Widely Used
Al the Chimney Sweep had cleaned more than 400 chimneys in a wide South Plains region, and he can schedule your own job, either evenings or Saturdays depending upon distance from Lubbock. Al has served customers in Clarendon, Lamesa, Memphis, Hereford, Bovina, Paducah, Tulia, Plainview, Levelland, Brownfield, Lubbock and other South Plains points.

Debris Unbelievable
And the things he has found in chimneys! A dead owl, birds, footballs, tennis balls, newspapers, paper cups, cans, even a pair of pants with 16 cents in the pocket! Countless such hazards can be found in fireplace chimneys, together with the soot that is saturated with creosote.

The solution is to let Al take over. "Contrary to popular belief, the chimney sweep goes up" rather than "down" in cleaning most chimneys, operating from inside the building but with minimum inconvenience to the owner."

See Al also for glass screens, chimney caps and other accessories associated with fireplace safety and best operation. Chimneys Checked

It one thinks a chimney needs cleaning but is not sure, Al is glad to make an inspection, promising an "entirely honest, straightforward report" if or if not cleaning is warranted. A low inspection fee can be applied at any time within 18 months on an actual cleaning operation.

No undue mess is involved in the cleaning, Al emphasizes. And the time, most usually less than an hour.

The cleaning of the chimney should be a vital part of one's home maintenance and housecleaning schedule. Al the Chimney Sweep, a longtime Lubbock resident and professional man, makes the job easy for you.

In the insurance business for almost two decades, Al has seen the effects and costly lessons of unclean chimneys that resulted in fire damage. In fact, he points to 31 fires in chimneys and flues reported in Lubbock in a recent year, drawing his figures from an annual Lubbock Fire Department report.

For full details of chimney cleaning in your own situation, call for information and appointment, to Al the Chimney Sweep, phone (806) 795-1789, Lubbock.

Master Cleaners, In Two Locations, Meeting Suede, Leather Care Needs

"It's that time of year when your suede and leather garments come in for increased use... and for special care including special cleaning."

Most leather and suede garments will clean beautifully when processed by a professional suede and leather cleaner, with some exceptions due to condition and quality of the garment purchased.

Professional attention and long experience in suede and leather cleaning is just one of the certainties at Master Cleaners, in business for over a quarter century, proven time after time and relied upon by generations within a single family.

Two Locations
Many Lubbock residents have long depended on Master Cleaners, patronizing the still-existing and very popular business at 2301 34th St. An added and newer facility also serves at 3420 82nd St., opened in August of 1977.

So... take a combination of location convenience, professional care, long experience and capability... and there you have Master Cleaners!

R. D. Barnett, president, serves at the 34th Street facility, with Dan Barnett, vice president, managing the newer establishment just a block west of Indiana on 82nd Street.

Check these among the Master Cleaners advantages:
- The same service is available from either location; simply patronize the one offering greatest convenience in your own situation.

Pick-up and delivery service still is afforded by the 34th Street plant.

One of the finest cold storage vaults in the industry is maintained.

Drapery service is unexcelled, as are alterations.

As members of the IFI (International Fabricare Institute) the Barnetts add to their expertise and experience with latest findings, trends, etc., assuring the customer the ultimate in attention and "know how."

'Know Their Leathers'
More about the suede and leather cleaning.

Your drycleaner, to whom such garments are entrusted, should be fully equipped for this special type of cleaning.
Care labels should accompany the garment when possible when taken to the cleaner.

Unless all pieces of a multi-piece outfit are processed at the same time there cannot be certainty that they will match after cleaning.

The cleaner should be advised of stains or spots so that he can more intelligently handle the particular problem.

It is pointed out that leathers and suedes that have been processed and refinished sometimes vary in color and finish from the original condition. This may be brought about by such situations as properties of the basic dye, oxidation and sunfading, sometimes sprayed-on leather finishes, and antiqued leathers that will not be exactly the same after cleaning.

The wise advice, then, would logically be to entrust your suedes and leathers only to the real professional in the business, a drycleaner who knows and understands suede and leather care, and who has facilities designed for such processing.

For such assurance, for new convenience, for knowing that your clothing or drapes will receive the ultimate in care, and for knowledge that your business is appreciated, patronage of either of the two Master Cleaners in Lubbock is heartily invited and recommended."

Business & Industrial Review

Cactus Alley 'Little Shoppe' Adds To Impressive Inventory

Norma Bartley, owner-operator of The Little Shoppe in Cactus Alley, has recently returned from her greatest buying trip ever, securing miniatures never before seen or stocked locally, adding to an already-extensive stock unique in all the Southwest.

Attending the HIA (Hobby Industry of America) show in Anaheim, Calif., the Lubbock shop owner bought extensively from items at the show displayed for the first time anywhere.

And many of these items already have been placed in stock at The Little Shoppe, 2610 Salem Ave., with more arriving daily.

New Arrivals Told
Check these among the goodies:
There are Magic Pleater kits enabling one to pleat curtains for the miniature houses, with fabric stocked to match the wallpaper.

There is a really colorful selection of trim for furniture, curtains, and all. Everything is miniature, remember!
And Decotiques in miniature (decals for furniture, bath, etc.) that provide decorative artwork that applies instantly.

The complete line of lighted light fixtures from Clair-Bell brassworks has been purchased, including chandeliers, table lamps, sconces, etc.

Persian Rug Reproductions
Even new Persian rug reproductions to scale, from the Cashmere Collection.

There is the new Millie August upholstered furniture kits, also, with fabrics and wallpaper to match!

Lots of new furniture pieces have been secured, as well as gazebo kits and cutter sets for making bread dough flowers, as advertised in miniature publications.

"The Chopper" heavy duty strip wood cutter is stocked, and this utility tool will even miter at 45, 60 and 90 degree angles.

There are new books galore.
Watch, also, for the new Holly Hobby House to arrive soon, completely finished.

Limited-edition miniatures by Olszewski (marketed by Hummel) are soon to arrive.

There are shadow boxes for memory boxes, etc., including a really unique stock at The Little Shoppe where not only miniatures are provided but also a very good selection of sorority items.

And note this:

Classes Offered

The Little Shoppe is now offering classes in (1) bread dough flowers, (2) how to wallpaper, (3) how to light the miniature homes, and (4) building of miniature furniture! Check for details.

Miniatures by the thousands, delightful new arrivals, darling creations, clever kits for one's own construction enjoyment... all contribute to the provocative picture at The Little Shoppe in Cactus Alley, with a stock that shadows anything ever before presented even at this outstanding store.

For the hobbyist, for the amateur and avid miniature collector alike, for folks who simply appreciate the unusual, the pretty and the intriguing, The Little Shoppe comes through!

"May we have the pleasure of your early visit at The Little Shoppe, 2610 Salem Ave., just south off the Brownfield Highway in Lubbock? We know you'll like what you find!"

Optical Store & Boutique Includes Sports Goggles In Stylish Selection

"If your eye doctor does not provide your glasses, then we invite you to bring your prescription to us and let us fill it professionally, affording quality and style second to none."

This is one of the sincere invitations from The Optical Store and Boutique, now serving with new convenience afforded by a move into a new but adjacent home late last year. Formerly familiar at 5202 Slide Road, this "Our Boutique Is Unique" firm is now just one door south, at 5204 Slide Road, with larger and easier departmentalized quarters, with a drive-up window for convenience in many transactions. Easy, ample off-street parking is another convenience.

Sports Goggles
Sports goggles are one of the popular offerings at this time, with these especially suited for tennis, racquet ball, scuba diving, football, etc. The Optical Store and Boutique can put your prescription in scuba diving goggles, too.

These are just some of the several factors that place The Optical Store and Boutique at the forefront in its field. With its own lab, the firm can act most speedily and efficiently. One-day service on many prescriptions is enabled.

Probably best known for its fashion frames, The Optical Store and Boutique serves in many other ways, each of which has met with gratifying response.

There is the video that is utilized in frame selection.

And another department enables purchase of live houseplants that are stocked!

It all is a part of the firm's appreciation of its friends and customers and its dedication to finest service possible.

New video tape equipment has been installed to enable one to be photographed with the various frames, then the tape is played back through a color television set to enable one to see exactly how the frames look upon him or her!

Doesn't this make sense?

"We at The Optical Store & Boutique think so, and we believe we are the first optical company in Lubbock to offer this brand new innovation to optical dispensing."

"We believe it is general knowledge that quality lines in frames and glasses are just as near as The Optical Store & Boutique.

Suggestions Given

Thoroughly in keeping with the firm's consideration of the customer's welfare, the folks there emphasize:

(1) Children should have an eye examination annually.

(2) Adults should take the same step every two years.

(3) Even if one does not wear glasses, eye examination on a systematic schedule is recommended.

(4) See your eye doctor and then when glasses are advised, bring his prescription to us at The Optical Store & Boutique, and we'll prove our uniqueness and capabilities, with you benefitting.

(We want to see you keep your frames in good repair; and we'll help if you simply give us the chance!)

Enviably Frame Selection

"And did you realize that The Optical Store & Boutique stocks the complete spectrum in frames, including a utility selection combining style with surprisingly low price?"

A departmentalized arrangement of rooms and areas provides four distinct categories in our service: (1) utility selection, (2) another where quality is the sole consideration, (3) designer frames, and finally (4) The Boutique.

So, whether the attractively priced lines in frames and glasses for the student, as example, or the very finest in choices from the Designer collection or the unusual and expensive lines within the Boutique are preferred, this Lubbock facility is outstanding, in a class by itself.

BOTH PROCESSING. PURCHASE AVAILABLE — Ted Meiner, owner of The Silver Company in Metro Tower, displays here some 1,000 ounces of silver with a $40,000 approximate value, representing items often forgotten or neglected or un-

'The Silver Company' Affords Out-of-the-Ordinary Benefits

"Our main business is to process your silver for you, but this is just one of the several in-demand and qualified services that can mean immediate cash for you when dealing with The Silver Company, off the lobby of Metro Tower, 1220 Broadway, phone 747-0200 in Lubbock."

"These multiple services may not be widely known, but we can truthfully say, and with pride, that we have been able to assist in the financial well-being of customers throughout the area, helping some in a major way, assisting others in turning into cash items around the house with value one might not have fully realized."

Services Outlined

"In brief, we list the following for your consideration, reasons contributing to The Silver Company's prestige and acceptance in the field:

"We buy silver, we buy gold, with highest prices paid for Sterling and silver coins, with a special price for Franklin Mint bars."

The Silver Company not only makes outright purchases, in cash transactions, but also accepts Sterling to be processed into 999 pure or fine silver bars for resale in industrial or investment use, even ultimately enabling conversion back into jewelry or silverware.

Get the picture... we are not merely traders or purchasers... we at The Silver Company offer services that can be to your exceptional benefit.

The Silver Company suggests gold class rings, dental fixtures, platinum denture items, even x-ray film among the things one can turn into hard cash with one of the plans at The Silver Company.

Open from 9:30 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays, no appointment is necessary at The Silver Company, but inquiries by phone are welcome.

simply call 747-0200 or come by the offices at south end of the lobby in the Metro Tower. Owner Ted Meiner of Lubbock is on hand to assist in a professional, honest, and speedy manner to your profit!

"Let us explain the advantages to you, whether in outright purchase or in processing for a professional fee. We are more than just buyers... we like to see you get the top dollar for your efforts and

ABC Sewing Center Excels

For White, Elna, and now Necchi sales and service, it is the ABC Sewing Center, 3104 34th St.

The ABC Sewing Center buys, sells and trades, servicing all brands of machines, also maintaining a rental service.

New Models Excel

Specific attention is called to some of the great new machine models stocked, such as the Elna Model 69. It is advertised as the only free arm sewing machine that fits most standard sewing machine cabinets. And this is a big item. Likely it is the last sewing machine you'll ever need!

The "new dimension" Elna Air Electronic is available in three models, with the Air Electronic Portable machines also in three models. It is a new generation of sewing machines!

Check such features as the most-wanted stitches are built into each. It is a multiple sewing program extended via interchangeable Elna discs supplied as standard equipment with every Elna Super model.

These are exciting new machines! And one year free instruction is given with purchase of every new machine at the ABC Sewing Center.

we know that our professionalism and our business concept can result in your benefit. May we have the pleasure of your business? It could well be that now is the best time for you to check around the home or business for Sterling coins or forgotten items (even electrical contacts and many types of industrial silver) that can be converted into hard cash during an advantageous market. We know we can help."

Business & Industrial Review

BEFORE AND AFTER — The antique Hoosier cabinet is shown here at Finish-Off Stripping Center before and after stripping for an area customer. Speed, quality and convenience mark this new service.

Finish-Off Stripping Center Eases Refinishing 'Headache'

It is quite a service that is performed by the Finish-Off Stripping Center, 1922 Ave. E!

The do-it-yourselfer no longer need endure the fumes, mess and time-consuming labor of stripping down articles for refinishing.

Finish-Off Stripping Center has introduced to the Lubbock area the unique and proven Houck process that quickly and thoroughly removes layers of paint, stain and varnish. The process is effective and safe for wood, metal and other materials, and does not damage the original surface like harsh commercial products and related methods can, the Lubbock firm points out.

Open Saturdays, Too
(Finish-Off Stripping Center is now open on Saturdays, 9 a.m. until 1 p.m., for increased customer convenience, in addition to the 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. hours Mondays through Fridays.)

Not only is a superior and in-demand service afforded, but Finish-Off Stripping Center stocks a line of refinishing materials including stains, wood dough, polishers, etc.

Finish-Off Stripping Center is relatively new to Lubbock, established by long-time Lubbock businessman L.K. Lankford. Operating businesses here for about 20 years, Lankford is still associated with House Clinic. He was the founding owner of Arcadia Stone Manufacturing. Long involved in the home improvement field Lankford has secured for Lubbock and Finish-Off Stripping Center, the exclusive rights to the Houck's process for professional stripping. The nearest comparable facility specializing in this unique process is located in Dallas.

Explains Need
Lankford commented that he "felt there was a definite need in this area, since many people enjoy refinishing but don't like the messy part." Now at a reasonable cost, Finish-Off Stripping Center can accomplish the hard part, leaving the do-it-yourselfer the fun part.

Even the largest furniture pieces can be completely stripped without having to be dismantled. Glued joints, formica insets or thin wood veneers are not damaged. The process is safe for even marble or stained glass.

Advantages Cited
Antique dealers and other individuals involved with restoration of treasured heirlooms have already discovered the advantages of the service offered by Finish-Off Stripping Center. Pieces with ornately carved designs, curved spindles or other hard-to-reach places can be the at-home refinisher's nightmare. At Finish-Off Stripping Center, the most unreachable cracks and crevices are cleared of the old finish or stain. The most delicate of details is safely preserved, and valuable antiques protected from stripping hazards.

Grease, grime and rust are dissolved away, making the process useful for cleaning tools and equipment. A rust preventative coating is applied to protect any metal surface until the item can be refinished. Among articles already processed by the recently opened business have been antique car parts for restoring and a Mercedes trunk lid in need of repainting. Other interesting collector's items and decorative pieces received at the Center have included old milk cans, kitchen scales and a hand drill press, in addition to an assortment of chairs, tables, cabinets and unique wardrobes.

Know-How Assured
Owner-operator Lankford and his wife, Barbara, who assists in the business, attended sessions last May in Atlanta, Georgia, to receive their specialized training in the exclusive stripping process. Since then, they have been setting up equipment and assembling materials for the Finish-Off Stripping Center. A representative from the company's home office in Stamford, New York, joined them initially when they began operating on Aug. 9 to oversee the beginning and to train personnel.

"What have you got that you've been 'intending' to refinish but have put off because of the dreaded mess and hassle of stripping? Call customer relations director Kenan Curry at 747-3938 or bring your articles to be stripped by Finish-Off Stripping Center at 1922 Avenue E. Achieve completely professional results for your refinishing work by using the quick, thorough and safe process offered exclusively in Lubbock by Finish-Off Stripping Center."

Its location in Briercroft Center enables easy-in, easy-out driving and parking convenience, and the location just south of the 50th Street-Avenue Q intersection makes for easy access from Avenue Q, Loop 289 and other key traffic arteries.

More and more students throughout Lubbock and the entire area are learning the advantages of "trading up" to a better instrument at Earl Ray Music Co. . . . and whether or not you purchased your present band instrument from Earl Ray, they will be glad to give you a price you are sure to appreciate with trade on a better one.

Remember, Earl Ray Music Co. represents the leading band instrument manufacturers. At Earl Ray's, one always has a great choice in quality brand names.

Earl Ray Music Enabling Easy Solution In Instrument Needs

"Why settle for less than Earl Ray Music Co., in Briercroft Center, phone 762-0468, in Lubbock!"

"Name" lines, layaway plans, rentals, purchase plans, "trading up" and more are among assistance considerations at Earl Ray Music Co., "Mr. Music" on the South Plains for over 30 years.

Selection from Earl Ray Music Co. makes sense in any season of the year; after all, the student's musical progress and needs are not limited to Christmas time or any other specific holiday! (But musical gifts are great for birthdays, right!)

Selling, servicing and trade-rent-lease of fine instrument lines is the whole business of Earl Ray Music Co. Whether selection is from Conn, LeBlanc, Bach, Artley, Selmer, Bundy, Gemeinhardt or Getzen band instruments, Conn or Gibson guitars, or Premier or Ludwig drums, quality is assured.

"If you are the parent or other near relative of a band student, most likely you know first hand, already, of the valued services and products of the Earl Ray Music Co.

For over three decades, Earl Ray has served as a firm sincerely interested in your welfare, in seeing that the student or other musically-inclined person is set with the best in instruments . . . whether purchase, rentals, trading up, or repairs are involved.

For 'Trading Up'
"Trading up" is a very popular program presented by Earl Ray, making for ease in securing a quality instrument to best serve in the progress one has made in any musical pursuit.

Service does not end with the rental or sale at this leading band house. Earl Ray maintains the largest band instrument repair department on the South Plains, with fulltime specialists on the job, Ray emphasizes.

Specials, New Tree Shipments Greeting Season At A-1 Nursery

New shipments by the truckloads could well be sufficient incentive to make a bee-line to A-1 Nursery, 7500 82nd St., phone 794-3614.

But add to this that early-season specials are posted, and one learns further why A-1 traditionally is a favorite within the area.

Quality, quality, selection and advantageous prices are a fact at A-1 Nursery, serving for more than two decades.

Check these among the values for immediate attention:

Stepping Stone Sale

And a very special sale on 12-inch and 16-inch stepping stones, both round and square.

Fruit trees, fertilizers, Ferti-Lome Weed & Feed Special and other needs for the season are in abundance and at a price to appeal.

All 10' tropicals, regular $29.95, are just $9.99 while the supply lasts!

And papershell pecan trees, just arrived, are priced at $11.88, $16.88 and $24.88, all down from expected prices.

The small clusters red oaks are all at 35 per cent off list!

A new shipment of shade and ornamental trees, up to 12 ft. height, regular $39.95, are A-1 priced at $12.88 or 2 for $25.

All one-gallon and five-gallon shrubs are 35 per cent off list.

Red and white onion plants are just 57 cents a bunch.

It is pointed out that now is the time to control the wild rye and weeds in the lawn, and the Ferti-Lome Weed & Feed Special is marked at $8.95.

Fifty pounds of Zipp 16-8-8, with iron and zinc, is just $7.88, covering 2,500 square feet.

On and on the values could be listed, but one should visit the big A-1 facility to fully realize how this long-established firm can meet your lawn and landscape needs.

A-1 is open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., weekdays, on Sundays from 1:30 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Area residents long have benefited from the landscape design, installation and maintenance services of A-1, plus such benefits as the new shipments and unique sale right here at beginning of the season.

For more than 20 years, folks throughout the region have been assisted by the services of Winfred Self, owner and operator of A-1 Nursery, since 1973 at its present expanded quarters.

Everything at the modern nursery is coordinated for the very best in service. A complete line is stocked including trees, shrubs, vines, fertilizers, insecticides and numerous other nursery supplies.

The "know how" of Self and his experienced staff possibly is the biggest asset of A-1, however, as hundreds of customers can attest to the superior help there throughout the years.

B & R Floor Covering Continues Reduced Prices On Quality Carpet

"Are you among those profiting from recognition that B & R Floor Covering, 2516 34th St., phone 795-4361, has one of the largest (and possibly the largest) selections of carpet inventory and samples in Lubbock?"

"Whether as a customer making acquaintance with the B & R advantages for the first time, or as a customer of longstanding who has purchased from us and has enjoyed carpet value in every transaction, we call attention to the present stock that can be of special benefit."

From this stock on hand, some very good buys are enabled, including some high-quality nylon shag from a special purchase at recent market made available at $8.95 per yard installed. (Suggested regular price is $10.95.)

(All prices at B & R Floor Covering include installation and pad, and the firm has its own crews for expert attention.)

Another very good buy at this time are some Bigelow plushes, at $10.95 rather than the $12.95 one could rightfully expect to pay.

Carpet prices are escalating, along with other items, so if in need of carpeting, early purchase can save, it is aptly pointed out by B & R owners Gerald Pierce and Eddie Parker.

"Always low prices" is the rule at B & R.

Check these other advantages:

"Known, Respected Lines"

B & R Floor Covering features Bigelow and World lines of carpeting, while also stocking others, providing carpet from utility grade to the very finest.

Vinyl, Formica, Too

Vinyl flooring and formica cabinet tops also are part of the product and service picture at B & R, with custom jobs welcomed.

"B & R crews go anywhere in the area, with recent jobs noted as far off as Dallas.

Financing is available. Free estimates are given in home or business.

B & R is open Mondays through Saturdays.

The firm is locally owned and operated by Pierce and Parker, each marking long experience in the field. Both are area natives. Eddie was reared in Levelland and has been in carpeting since back in '54, and Gerald, reared in Lubbock, marks carpet service since '62.

The firm has been at its present location, with the attractive and spacious facilities, for the past five years.

"In planning Spring remodeling, housecleaning, etc., now would be a very good time to consider new carpeting, and B & R can help, we hope you'll give us the opportunity of presenting for your consideration our wide selection, the proven quality, the evident savings and our service capabilities.

Remember the location, 2516 34th St.

California Storms Take Seven Lives

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Authorities pulled bodies from drain sewers and submerged cars Sunday and residents braced for a third weekend storm that threatened to hit a saturated Southern California and again send mud and homes sliding down hillsides.

Flood waters and mud claimed at least seven lives Saturday and thousands of people were evacuated from their homes. Dozens of houses were pushed down Los Angeles hillsides by tons of mud and debris. Others were under several feet of water.

Weather forecasters were not optimistic that the worst was over. Home owners continued to dig out, tunnel and sandbag in hopes of saving their houses from the next wall of mud to slide down hillsides denuded by brush fires last fall.

Forecasters said a complex system of storms in the eastern Pacific threatened Southern California with even more rain. The first showers were predicted to hit coastal areas by afternoon.

A second, more intense storm system, however, was about 900 miles west of Los Angeles and was expected to turn north, hitting Central California with its full impact but still dropping enough rain on the southern part of the state to cause problems.

Slightly more than 3 inches of rain fell in downtown Los Angeles during a 24-hour period ending Sunday morning. Flash-flood warnings were temporarily suspended Sunday, but forecasters said any additional rain could cause more flooding and slides.

In Rancho Cucamonga, about 45 miles east of Los Angeles, authorities recovered the body of an 8-year-old boy from a storm sewer. He was playing near a flooded street Saturday when he was swept away. The body of a 25-year-old man, who had attempted to drive through a flooded area, was pulled from his submerged car a few miles from where the child was located.

In the desert communities south of Los Angeles, about 650 persons near Palm Springs were evacuated from their expensive homes and condominiums early Sunday morning when the Araby Flood Channel swelled to dangerous levels and authorities airlifted medical supplies to the city of Desert Hot Springs, which was cut off by flooded access roads.

More than 500 residents were evacuated from their Los Angeles area homes Saturday, after driving rains flooded streets and freeways, filled debris basins and flood control dams and turned many hillside canyons into cascades of rushing water, mud and rocks.

A 60-year-old woman suffocated and her husband was seriously injured when they were deluged with mud and water Saturday in their West Los Angeles canyon home.

Newspaper Reports Corruption Among Mexican Federal Police

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Some federal police in northwestern Mexico extort money from smugglers, take bribes to keep major drug dealers out of jail, and sell drugs that they seize during raids, the San Diego Union said Sunday.

One federal agent told the newspaper that helicopters supplied by the United States for use in eradication of poppy fields were used by Mexican government officials for pleasure trips.

Another agent said that the U.S. choppers were inadvertently "making millions in mordida (bribes) for Mexican federal police who use helicopters to locate poppy fields and then shake down the owners," the Union reported.

Jon Standefer and Alex Drehsler, Union reporters who conducted a year-long investigation of alleged corruption among Mexican police, said they were told during a meeting with three Mexican officials that they would be killed if their probe continued.

The newspaper said that U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration files in San Diego show that 19 of 25 major drug dealers arrested in the 1970s had charges dismissed or were released after filing appeals with federal magistrates in Hermosillo. Three Hermosillo magistrates have been removed from the bench for receiving more than $100,000 in bribes from drug dealers, the newspaper said.

A widely publicized crackdown on smugglers of illegal aliens into California netted 136 arrests in mid-1979, as a Mexican task force acted on information supplied by the U.S. Border Patrol. Baja California Gov. Roberto de la Madrid assured U.S. Attorney Michael Walsh in San Diego that all 136 would be prosecuted, probably in Mexico City.

But only seven of those arrested remain in custody, the Union said it was told by a Mexican government source. Half were released almost immediately.

"The big smugglers are on your side of the border," Roman Cardenas, chief of the Office of Immigration in Tijuana, was quoted as telling the Union reporters. "The ones here do their errands."

Acting Commandante Jorge Rosette of the Federal Judicial Police in Tijuana was shot to death last Dec. 16. Criminal elements were blamed, but the newspaper said law enforcement agencies on both sides of the border believe Rosette was killed by his own colleagues.

"One of the Federal Judicial Police officials was afraid that Rosette was going to cut him out from sharing in the pie," the Union said a member of the murder investigation team reported.

"I've made arrests and confiscated packets of heroin only to have both my prisoners and the drugs disappear the next day," said one Mexican federal police agent. "I was told that what I had seized wasn't heroin. But that's wrong because I tested it in the field and it was heroin."

As their probe came to a close last month, Standefer and Drehsler said they had a 12-hour interview with Aguilar-Garza and two assistant federal district attorneys at a Tijuana restaurant. During the meeting, one of the assistant district attorneys told them the reporters would be killed if the probe continued, the Union said.

Astronomers Observe Eclipse — 'Century's Biggest Power Cut'

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Astronomers packed up their telescopes and headed home Sunday, a day after a total eclipse of the sun over Africa, India and China.

The astronomical phenomenon gave some a holiday, others a chance to wash away their sins and nearly everyone a few moments of awesome beauty in the sky.

The U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration launched seven study rockets from the Italian-operated San Marco rocket range off the Kenyan coast at Malindi.

The payloads included devices to measure the temperature of the sun's gaseous corona, which envelops the earth, and to record atmospheric changes during the eclipse.

The total solar eclipse began shortly after sunrise Saturday when the moon passed between the earth and the sun, blocking the sun's rays and casting a lunar shadow over the south Atlantic Ocean.

In 3 1/2 hours, the moon's shadow, some 94 miles wide, raced 7,000 miles across Africa, the Indian Ocean, India and into China.

Because of the difference in time zones, the sun was setting when the eclipse occurred in China. A partial eclipse was seen over an area in which half the world's 4.4 billion people live.

Night came early in places where the eclipse was total.

Motorists turned on headlights, birds went back to sleep, flower petals closed and the temperature dropped.

Kenyan authorities warned householders to beware of break-ins during the darkness, which lasted less than four minutes in most places.

"It's the biggest power cut of the century," a Kenyan commented.

In India, more than 1 million Hindus assembled in the northern town of Kurukshetra to chant hymns and bathe away their sins in holy lagoons. Some Hindus believe the eclipse is caused by a demon who swallows the sun god. Applause broke out when the eclipse ended.

The Indian government declared a holiday. Local trains and bus service stopped. The country played host to nearly 1,000 European and American scientific eclipse-watchers.

In China, a cloud covered the sun when the total eclipse occurred near the horizon. It was New Year's Day in China, and an eclipse that day is unlucky, according to superstition.

In this eastern African country, a different breed of sun-worshippers — German tourists escaping winter-crowded hotels along the Indian Ocean coast.

While scientists roughed it in tents in Tsavo National Park, fighting off ticks, snakes and the possibility of prowling lions, bikini-clad tourists observed the eclipse from cushions beside swimming pools.

After the eclipse, thousands rushed back to Nairobi, causing heavy traffic on the 300-mile road from the coast. By evening, it was impossible to buy gasoline at stations on the last half of the trip back to the Kenyan capital.

The eclipse was partial in Nairobi, but the sky darkened and activities halted. Despite a government publicity campaign to dispel fear of the eclipse, not everyone got the message.

A Nairobi doctor visited an elderly woman who complained of mysterious pain. The woman's daughter told the doctor, "I warned her that the eclipse was coming but she forgot. When it became dark, she thought she was going blind, and she hasn't been well since."

Number Of Women Targeted Lowered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The number of young women secretly photographed as possible targets for torture and murder in a case linked to the deaths of at least five teen-age girls is about 400, not the 500 first announced, it was reported Sunday.

"In some cases we have six or eight photographs of the same girl. And there are probably 10 or 12 girls with more than one photograph," the Los Angeles Herald Examiner quoted an investigator as saying. The investigator asked not to be quoted by name.

Sixty of the young women have been identified and are alive and well, the investigator said. Deputies were checking to see if 30 to 40 women reported as missing matched any of the hundreds of photographs, which were originally color slides.

Roy Lewis Norris, 32, of Redondo Beach, and Lawrence Sigmond Bittaker, 39, who was living in a Burbank motel, originally had been arrested on unrelated kidnap and rape charges which were dropped. They were still being held on unrelated assault charges.

But while the men were in jail, evidence was developed linking them to the five killings, Sheriff Peter Pitchess said Friday.

"We will bring charges immediately in the five killings if they try to make bail," Pitchess said.

The hundreds of photographs were found when deputies searched the property of the two men.

The Torrance Daily Breeze reported that Norris was declared a mentally disordered sex offender in 1970, spending 4 1/2 years at Atascadero Mental Hospital.

In 1975, doctors reportedly said Norris would not benefit from further care. Three months later he was imprisoned after being convicted of sexual assault in Torrance.

Bittaker's parole from a California prison expired five days before he was arrested with Norris on rape-kidnap charges, which were dropped when the victim was unable positively to identify the suspects.

The Torrance paper said Bittaker had once asked a judge to allow him to stay in prison so that he would not cause anyone's death.

Bittaker and Norris served time together in 1978 at the California Men's Colony at San Luis Obispo before they were paroled about one year ago.

Oil Shortage Not Likely, Official Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If U.S. oil imports continue without interruption, Energy Secretary Charles Duncan doubts there will be any gasoline or heating oil shortages this year.

Barring any disruption in world oil production, there should be a "reasonable balance" of fuel supplies in 1980, Duncan said in an interview in this week's U.S. News and World Report.

"If there is any disruption," he said, "we could have problems."

Gasoline rationing is not needed at this time, Duncan said, but "if an environmental situation where rationing might be necessary — a major supply disruption, for example."

Given today's conditions — With oil inventories at a high level and with no supply disruption in sight — if we can keep consumption down, rationing is not necessary," he said.

Duncan said rationing would cost $2 billion a year, require a "huge bureaucracy" and "would be virtually impossible to administer with complete equity."

He said prices would continue to rise, despite rationing, but declined to predict just how high prices will go.

"Prices are going to rise no matter which system is used," he said.

If the United States lost all oil imports, about 8 million barrels a day, Duncan said about 1 million barrels of oil a day could be pumped from the strategic petroleum reserve. The reserve, stored in salt domes in Louisiana and Texas, now amounts to 92 million barrels.

He said no oil is presently being added to the stockpile, but the Energy Department is requesting $2.3 billion in the 1981 budget to resume storage operations.

"We hope to buy oil at a rate of 100,000 barrels per day in 1980 and 1981 and 250,000 barrels a day thereafter," he said.

DENIES REQUEST

DALLAS (AP) — A federal judge has denied a request by a private homosexual health club to prevent police from raiding it. U.S. District Judge Barefoot Sanders said Friday he will not consider the case until a similar one is decided by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Syrian Troops Battle With Christians

DOUMA, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops traded artillery fire with Christian militias Sunday in a battle for control of a village north of Beirut, and Syrian commanders later said their forces had driven out the militiamen after six days of fighting.

However, Christian Phalangist militia sources said they were bringing in reinforcements to try to hold the foothills village of Knat, some 50 miles north of the capital of Beirut and the key to controlling an important mountain pass.

Lebanese military sources said at least 28 soldiers and 50 civilians have been killed carrying only blankets and a few belongings on their backs, trudged through the snow from Knat and nearby towns to escape the shelling. But the peace-keeping command said in a broadcast on state television Sunday night that villagers should return to their homes because Knat and adjacent Mazraat Bani Saab were "free of Phalangist presence."

The latest fighting was sparked by Syrian President Hafez Assad's Feb. 4 announcement that he was withdrawing the 5,000 Syrian troops in Beirut, some 38 months after they helped quell Lebanon's bloody civil war between the Israeli-backed Christians and the Syrian-backed Moslems.

Assad later delayed transferring the troops to the Beqaa Valley in eastern Lebanon, a buffer zone between Syria and Israel, but a ceasefire agreement failed to take hold in the north. The Phalangist Party rejects the Syrian presence in Lebanon.

Phalangist soldiers returning from the battle said Knat was ravaged by artillery fire from both Christian and Syrian troops.

"There are many corpses and many more wounded there. Any one badly injured in Knat is as good as dead because we cannot get them out. Several are still under the rubble," a 16-year-old Phalangist soldier told reporters in the village of Douma, six miles south of Knat.

Syrian troops and Phalangist forces began the artillery duel last Tuesday after former President Suleiman Franjeh's forces, allies of the Syrians and bitter foes of the Phalangists, tangled with the Phalangists in Knat and a neighboring village.

Counterfeit $100 Bills Seized By IRS Agents

DALLAS (UPI) — Counterfeit $100 bills totaling $105,000 that were seized by the Internal Revenue Service from an alleged bookmaking operation were printed from the same plates as bills confiscated in two other states, it was reported Sunday.

Federal officials in Oklahoma and Louisiana said Secret Service agents in those two states, along with agents in Dallas, have been attempting to trace the source of the $100 bogus bills, the Dallas Morning News said in a report published Sunday.

The bills have been seized during arrests in Fort Worth, Shreveport, La., and Idabel and Guymon, Okla. But the largest quantity was discovered in Dallas in late December during a search of an office suite believed by authorities to be used in a bookmaking operation.

The search was performed based on information from the Internal Revenue Service and ultimately yielded anticipated gambling records and the $105,000 worth of counterfeit $100 bills as well as take Canadian and Mexican money.

Officials have made several arrests in the alleged counterfeiting operation, including two men, Vernon Arterburn and Robert Lumpkins, accused in Fort Worth of having $47,500 in bogus $100 bills.

Last week a federal judge in Oklahoma City gave Edward L. Rodgers, 54, a Guymon restaurant owner, a probated sentence for possession and sale of $10,000 to $12,000 worth of counterfeit $100 bills made by the same press as the Dallas counterfeit money, said John Green, assistant U.S. attorney for the Western District of Oklahoma.

A similar group of $100 bills surfaced in Idabel, said Julian Fite, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Oklahoma. Earlier this month, state and federal officials arrested four men in that alleged operation.

Judge In Gacy Trial Began Career Early

CHICAGO (AP) — Judge Louis B. Garippo first sat on the bench at age 9 when he accompanied his bailiff father to court. Now he is presiding over John W. Gacy Jr.'s mass murder trial, and colleagues say his firm hand is helping keep a sensational case under control.

"Everything is style," the 48-year-old Cook County Circuit Court judge said in an interview. "In most instances, I have a pretty good idea of what I want to do, and I suppose I get there. As time goes on, these things work themselves out."

Garippo, an 11-year veteran of the bench, is meeting his toughest challenge to date in the case of Gacy, who has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the sex-related murders of 33 young men and boys. Jury selection in the trial began Jan. 28, and the prosecution continues its case today.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys describe Garippo as the most respected and popular criminal-court trial judge in the system — with a mixture of humor and pragmatism that can defuse courtroom tensions and deflate problems that give other judges fits.

The Chicago Bar Association gave him its second-highest rating, and the Chicago Council of Lawyers has rated him "outstanding."

"When things in the courtroom flow, when you don't have the lawyers constantly at each other's throats, there is a guiding hand, a movement behind those things," said one lawyer in the state's attorney's office.

An example came Jan. 26, when Garippo conducted the last of several "house-cleaning" sessions before shifting the Gacy trial to Rockford for jury selection.

The session took place in Garippo's sixth-floor chambers — cluttered with tennis trophies, photographs and other memorabilia — where many issues were argued off the record and out of view of the media.

After meeting for little more than an hour, the judge and lawyers called in the official court reporter and Garippo was able to record rulings on at least seven important points.

He ruled the state may seek the death penalty if Gacy is convicted despite the prosecution's contention that all the killings were the result of a course of conduct begun in 1972 — before Illinois' current death penalty law was in effect.

He refused to read 33 separate indictments to the jury, as the prosecution had asked, and instead ordered the state's team of attorneys to summarize the indictments for him in three days.

Garippo has had previous experience with mass-murder trials. In 1967, when he worked in the state's attorneys office, he supervised administrative details during the trial of Richard Speck, convicted by a jury of the murder of eight student nurses.

His experience has convinced him that the clamor surrounding the Gacy case will subside as the trial progresses.

"The first few days you had reporters fighting for seats and all kinds of other problems," he said of the Speck trial. "You couldn't keep all the seats for the press, because that would mean that you wouldn't have a public trial."

"By the time the trial was halfway over," he added, "there were empty seats in the courtroom nearly every day."

Garippo, who graduated from DePaul University Law School in 1955, laughed as he recalled his first ventures into the courtroom with his father — in whose footsteps he was to follow as a Democratic Party precinct captain.

"The judge used to let me sit in his chair and next to the bench during hearings," he said. "I guess you could call it early training."

Garippo has had a strong working relationship with the press since 1970, when he issued a ruling that proscribed the handing down of subpoenas for testimony from reporters without prior judicial approval.

The criteria he established as a test of the worthiness of such subpoenas — probable cause that the media had the information sought; the possibility of obtaining that information elsewhere; and whether without that information, "a grave miscarriage of justice" would occur — became known as the "Garippo guidelines."

"I made the guidelines off the top of my head while sitting on the bench late one afternoon," he recalled, "and suddenly I was the hero of the editorial page for months."

Strange Illness Causes Heart Attacks In Young

ATLANTA (AP) — A puzzling illness that causes heart attacks among infants and children under 5 is beginning to concern pediatricians throughout the United States, according to the national Center for Disease Control.

First reported in Japan more than 10 years ago, the malady — called Kawasaki disease — is being reported in increasing numbers in this nation and in other countries, the CDC said.

Although most cases have been scattered, there have been clustered illnesses, the most recent at Rochester, N. Y., where 23 cases were reported from Oct. 1 through Dec. 30.

The disease, formerly known as mucocutaneous lymph node syndrome, first was reported by Dr. Tomisaku Kawasaki in Tokyo in 1967.

"It's a very strange disease," said Dr. David Bell of the CDC's Bureau of Epidemiology. "We don't know if it's contagious. We don't know if it's caused by a virus or a bacterium."

The startling thing about the disease, said Bell, is that between 1 percent and 2 percent of the children who suffer the disease develop some kind of heart damage. And in Japan, those who develop heart trouble die within six months.

There is no way to treat the disease, because its cause is unknown, and doctors say they can only try to minimize cardiac complications.

Since the illness first was reported in Japan, there have been about 15,000 cases in that country, said Bell.

In the United States, 261 cases were reported from July 1976 through July 1978. In Rochester, no deaths were reported. In 1977, an outbreak in New York City affected 26 children, one of whom died. Later that year, 20 additional cases were reported in the city.

"If it is contagious, it cannot be very contagious, because these children who were stricken in Rochester lived all over the city in varying circumstances," Bell said in an interview Friday. "It's not like measles or flu, when everybody in the block gets it."

Bell said doctors do not believe there is any danger of epidemics of the disease in this country.

One of the problems, he said, is that the disease at first appears to be scarlet fever. It is characterized by prolonged fever, inflamed eyes, sore throat and a rash on the body. A child's feet will swell and become red.

However, scarlet fever reacts to penicillin treatment, while Kawasaki disease does not, said Bell.

He said one of the strange things about the disease is that it seems to have a higher attack rate among Asian children.

Excluding some cases in Hawaii, where most of the victims were Asian, 62 percent of the victims in the United States have been white, 27 percent black and 11 percent were Asian, Bell said.

"Adjusted to the U.S. racial composition, it definitely has a higher attack rate among Asian children," he said.

Reports of the disease also have come from Greece, Europe and Africa, but Japan is the only nation where outbreaks are widespread, he said.

El Paso Shootings Bring Back Memories Of Town's Wild Past

EL PASO (AP) — Whiskey, saloons and violence were travelling companions in this West Texas town's wild past. Things haven't changed much.

Murder and mayhem still frequent the bars and booze palaces of El Paso and have taken a deadly toll during the first days of the still-young year.

Liquor or taverns were involved in 11 of El Paso's dozen killings since the first of the year.

Eight persons were shot in a north-side lounge a week ago when a gunman walked in and sprayed the room with bullets. Five died.

Around the turn of the century there were plenty of saloon shoot-outs.

"There were a lot of them," says Police Lt. Ed Agan, "and this kind of takes you back to the old days."

"It seems like we are trying to live up to our reputation," adds Agan, the police department's unofficial historian.

"I don't think any town in the early days was as wild or wilder than El Paso. Shootings were so commonplace in the early days that they didn't go down in history because there were so many of them."

The policeman says El Paso had only five murders in January 1979. The murder total for the year was 33. All cases have been cleared, Agan says.

Sometimes the alcohol-violence mixture only turns up injuries.

A day before the quintuple slaying, 13 persons were injured in a barroom brawl at an El Paso lounge. Patrons were injured by knives and flying tables, pool sticks and numbered balls. The victims did not press charges.

BATTLE OVER AGE

EL PASO (UPI) — Nacogdoches may advertise that it is the oldest town in Texas, but those in El Paso who claim to know say their town should actually take that historical honor.

The Beef Referendum

Don't be misled

It's not a government program. This is a producer program. Producers wrote the law. Producers are paying for the referendum through voluntary donations. And producers will run the program from day one, once the referendum passes. The government's involvement is limited: The Secretary of Agriculture formally appoints the Beef Board members, who are nominated by producer organizations; he is also responsible for seeing that the money is spent according to producer wishes, as set out in the law.

It's not a tax. The program is voluntary. The collection is automatic. But if anyone, for any reason, doesn't want to participate, he can ask for a refund and get it promptly. With no red tape. That's the law.

It's not just an advertising program. The program is comprehensive. Some of the money will go for consumer education. Some for foreign market development. Some for production research. Some for new product development. Some for improving marketing and distribution. And some for advertising and promotion — whatever producers, through the Beef Board, decide they need.

It's not just for the big guy. Beef Board members will be both big producers and small, from all across the country. Cow-calf operators. Farmer-feeders. Stocker operators. Feedlot people. Dairymen (dairy cattle account for 20% of beef production). This program will help everybody.

It's a self-help program. If the beef business is going to get more profitable, producers themselves are going to have to make it more profitable. The beef referendum provides the tools — promotion, research, foreign market development, marketing information — to do the job.

It's producer-controlled. The plan will be run by a Beef Board made up of cattlemen who have been recommended by their fellow cattlemen. Every state or region will be represented in proportion to its beef production.

It's fair. The investment needed for the program is provided by a collection of just 2 10's of 1¢ on the sale of each animal. It's based on a "value added" system that guarantees each person pays only his fair share.

It's needed. The beef industry's present research and information effort is inadequate by any standard. We spend a small fraction of what many other, smaller commodity groups spend (e.g. cotton, citrus, dairy, soybeans). The referendum will generate the $30 to $40 million a year needed to solve our problems and strengthen our markets.

More "Ifs" And "Thens"

HALFWAY THROUGH THE FIRST HALF, the small man dozed off. I mean the guy just conked out. This one, he said, is booooring. Boring.

Maybe he was right. That Texas A&M-Texas clash, Saturday's Southwest Conference regionally televised game, didn't rate high in the suspense department. A&M opened up a 15-point lead midway through the first half and cruised on to a 84-61 whipping over the 'Horns.

"That'll teach 'em for putting it on television," said Texas coach Abe Lemons afterwards. "That must have been some thriller at the end. People must have been turning over to watch Bambi or Walt Disney or something."

But there was probably at least one local viewer who wasn't switching dials frantically searching for Bambi, Cinderella or even a Three Stooges classic. I'm willing to bet a stack of 7-11 baseball trading cups that Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers watched every second of the A&M-Texas tilt — and loved it!

Because with the Texas loss to the Aggies and the Raiders ensuing win over SMU Saturday night, the Raiders moved back into a tie for third place with the 'Horns and Houston. All three teams are logjammed at 8-6 in the conference standings.

AND NOW THE STAGE is set for a Tech-Texas shootout Tuesday night in the Municipal Coliseum. In the opening SWC game of the season, the Raiders clipped the 'Horns 57-54 — a contest that now seems light years ago — on Jan. 3.

Since then, both teams have struggled at times and been awesome at others. Prior to their 84-61 loss to the Aggies, the 'Horns had manhandled Baylor 99-63. (Remember, that's the same Baylor squad that humiliated the Raiders by 23 points only a couple of games back).

I tried explaining all this to the very small fellow during Saturday's TV game but he just wasn't interested. Maybe it's his age (seven weeks) or maybe — and this is a problem a lot of people are apparently having — it's just because things have gotten so darn confusing.

I mean, this SWC race is downright crazy. You've got two teams that are dominating — A&M and Arkansas — and a whole bunch of squads that play like night and day on any given night and day. Consider the Houston Cougars. Here's a team that defeated Arkansas in triple overtime but somehow managed to lose to the TCU Horned Frogs.

Or try on the Texas Longhorns. Credits include a 12-point loss to Baylor as well as a 33-point win over the Bears. And of course, there is the well-documented unpredictability of the Raiders.

ANYHOW, ONE OF THESE three teams is going to wind up third in the final conference standings — and draw that coveted bye to San Antonio for the post-season tournament. Obviously, the winner of the Tech-Texas game will be in the driver's seat.

Houston must host Texas A&M on Saturday, while Texas faces a young and capable Rice squad. The Raiders have a real toughie on the final day of the regular season. Tech must travel to Fayetteville to play the Hogs.

Really, the possibilities at this state are still limitless — so I'm not even going to hazard a guess. It is safe to say though, that a two-or three-way tie for third place could easily occur.

Oh, what the heck, I'll take a stab at it. Tech, Texas and Houston are all going to wind up 9-7. What the conference office will do from there is out of my hands. Maybe they could throw all three teams out on the court and let 'em play 21.

IF THEY DID THAT THOUGH, you could probably get all three coaches to agree on one thing. Let's not play the game in Fayetteville — because nobody wins up in the hills except the Hogs — even when they're not playing.

More than one SWC coach has whispered, off the record of course, that no one can intimidate an officiating crew the way Eddie Sutton and the Hog crowd can. Down in Houston, they're still talking about the way rotten fruit flew out of the stands when the Cougs owned a 14-point lead with nine minutes left in a game with Arkansas earlier this year.

Not surprisingly, the calls started going the Razorbacks' way after that and they came back to win. And then there was a charging call against A&M's Dave Goff with no time showing on the clock that provided the Hogs with their 45-44 win over the Aggies last Tuesday.

Needless to say, that one isn't sitting too well with folks in College Station. And at least one coach isn't afraid to talk about the apparent love affair between Arkansas and the zebras.

"If they played again, (the Aggies and A&M) I'd pick Arkansas every time," said the always outspoken Lemons. "Because Arkansas hasn't gotten a bad call all year. It all goes according to which crew calls the game."

Oh yeah, among the Hogs' last-second wins this year is a 60-59 victory over Texas in Fayetteville. U.S. Reed hit the winning bucket in that game with no time showing on the clock — and claimed The Lord guided his shot.

THE CROWD, THE OFFICIALS, Eddie Sutton, The Hogs and The Lord — that's a tough bunch to beat. And just guess where the Raiders wind up conference play come Saturday?

The lovely hill country of Arkansas — and I hate fruit salad.

Atkins Junior High Cage Squads Dominate Meet

Atkins Junior High School captured three of four championships Saturday afternoon during the annual Lubbock Independent School District's junior high championship playoffs.

Jill Marshall canned 16 points and Tracy Golden added 14 tallies as the Atkins ninth-grade girls outgunned Matthews 52-34 to claim the title and finish the season with a perfect 15-0 record.

Lupe Mata paced Matthews, which finished the season with a record of 3-12.

In the girls' eighth-grade title tilt, Tina Chavez hit 11 points and teammate April Meems added 10 as Atkins rolled to a 32-19 decision over the Hutchinson eighth-grade girls.

Atkins finished the year with a perfect

15-0 mark, while Hutchinson wound up 6-9. Hutchinson's leading scorer was Debbie Velasquez with six points.

Kevin Short and Curt Hall connected for 13 and eight points, respectively, to lead the Atkins eighth-grade boys to a 45-34 victory over Matthews in the battle for first-place honors.

The win for the Cyclones was the 14th this year against only one defeat. Matthews, which was led by Larry Rodriguez' 13 counters, ended the year 5-10.

In the only championship game not involving a team from Atkins, the Hutchinson ninth-grade boys took a hard-fought 45-39 win over Evans to claim the winners' trophy.

Tyrone Young scored 17 points to pace the Hutchinson attack. Danny Davidson hit a game-high 20 points for the losers.

The win pushed the Rangers' season mark to 14-1, while Evans finished the year with a 11-4 slate. The tournament title was the second straight for the Hutchinson ninth graders as they won the eighth-grade boys' championship last year.

Inclement Weather Alters Chaps' Plans

Lubbock Christian College's scheduled basketball game against Jarvis Christian College Sunday afternoon in the fieldhouse was cancelled due to poor driving conditions.

The Chaps' final regular-season mark is 17-16 as they await a possible berth in the District VIII playoffs.

Meanwhile, today's scheduled double-header between the LCC and Jarvis Christian baseball teams in Hawkins has been postponed to Feb. 27-28 due to inclement weather.

Steinbrenner Delays Martin's Signing

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner met with his controversial former manager Billy Martin Sunday to smooth over details that could free Martin to manage the Oakland A's.

Charlie Finley, owner of the Oakland A's, offered Martin a three-year contract to manage the team. The Star-Ledger of Newark, N.J., reported in its Sunday editions.

The only roadblock may be Steinbrenner, who fired Martin last Oct. 28 but who still owes Martin two years salary — an estimated $250,000, the newspaper reported.

Finley, who failed once again in recent months in an attempt to sell the A's to a group headed by Denver oilman Marvin Davis, is counting on Martin to revitalize the last-place team and boost the dismal attendance.

U.S. Claims Skate Medal

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Annette Moser-Proell of Austria finally won the Olympic downhill gold medal that had eluded her Sunday and Leah Mueller picked up another silver medal for the U.S. in speed skating in the XIII Winter Olympic Games.

Natalia Petrusheva of the Soviet Union led a parade of 11 record-breakers in the women's 1,000-meter speed skating event in which Miss Mueller placed second. Miss Mueller also won a silver medal in the 500-meter race last Friday, and she said the 1,000 Sunday was her last Olympic race before retirement.

Her Sunday medal brought to four the number won by the U.S. speed skating team in these Games. Eric Heiden, the American superstar who hopes to win an unprecedented five golds, already has won two races and competes Tuesday in the 1,000 meters.

Thomas Wassberg of Sweden braved zero-degree weather and high winds Sunday to edge Finland's Juha Mieto by one-hundredth of a second for the gold medal in the men's 15 kilometer cross country ski race. It was a closest winning margin in the history of the Olympics.

Their times were 41:57.63 and 41:57.64. Ove Aunli of Norway won the bronze medal in 42:28.62.

"There should be two gold medals, one for me and one for Mieto," said Wassberg. "My first thought was I was a winner. Secondly, I thought it was a little too little." Of Mieto, Wassberg said, "I pitied him."

Anton Innauer of Austria won the gold medal in the 70-meter special ski jump Sunday. Hirokazu Yagi of Japan and Manfred Deckert of East Germany tied for the silver medal. Innauer jumped 89 meters on his first attempt for 131.6 points and cleared 90 meters for 134.7 on his second jump for a total of 266.3. Yagi and Deckert both totalled 249.2.

Jeff Davis of Steamboat Springs, Colo., thrilled the crowd with a 90-meter jump on his first try but judges decided he made his run from the wrong starting position and after a long conference they ruled that the whole competition must start over. Davis failed to better 80 meters after that and finished 17th.

Jim Denney of Duluth, Minn., cleared 70 and 75 meters for a points total of 192.9, good for only 36th place among the 48 jumpers. Chris McNeill of Polaris,

The fastest American in the downhill ski event was Heidi Preuss of Lakeport, N.H., who placed fourth in 1:39.51. Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., who won the bronze downhill medal in 1976, was seventh in 1:39.69. Holly Flanders of Manchester, N.H., was 14th in 1:40.96.

Miss Preuss, 18, who has just begun to excel in downhill racing, said "When I crossed the finish line and saw that I was fourth on the scoreboard, I was very disappointed. I've been fourth four times and it really burns me."

Speed-skater Miss Mueller, who missed a gold medal by 1.3 seconds, said she was a lot calmer than when she won a silver in the 500 last Friday. "The 1,000 has not been my most consistent race so I just tried to maintain a relatively cool attitude and skate the way I know how to skate. I really didn't think about it being my last race. I just tried to give it everything I had."

Miss Mueller, 28, said she would finish out the rest of this season and then retire.

Miss Petrusheva won the event in 1:24.10 to Miss Mueller's 1:25.41. Silvia Albrecht of East Germany was third in 1:26.46 and Beth Heiden of Madison, Wis., finished fifth. She had been seventh in the 500 and 1,500-meter races.

Bill Koch, the leading American in cross-country skiing, finished 16th in the 15 kilometer race Sunday. The 24-year-old from Guilford, Vt., who won a silver medal at 30 kilometers at the Innsbruck Olympics, had dropped out of the 30-kilometer race last week after 25 kilometers, saying he wanted to save his energy for Sunday's event.

"The level of competition is forever rising," Koch said, pointing out that he finished only 1:41 seconds behind the winner Sunday. In the 1976 Olympics, he took sixth place.

Tom Henderson Voices Protest

By EARL SCUDDAY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson, the Pro Bowl linebacker fired from the Dallas Cowboys at midseason, told The Avalanche-Journal Sunday that he will not play for a team that doesn't think he is worth a No. 1 draft choice.

Henderson recently asked Dallas coach Tom Landry to arrange to trade him to the New Orleans Saints after Landry refused the grider's plea to return to the Cowboys. Henderson said he would like to go to New Orleans because it is only an hour's flight from his Dallas home and because the Saints use the Flex defense developed by Landry.

A few days ago, however, New Orleans coach Dick Nolan reportedly balked at giving up a No. 1 draft pick for Henderson. The coach's comment, allegedly made during a television interview, irritated the talented but controversial Henderson.

"If they don't think that I'm worth a No. 1 draft pick, then I'm not going to play for them," Henderson told The Avalanche-Journal Sunday in a telephone interview.

The Dallas organization hopes to get a high draft pick in return for Henderson, since the Cowboys traded away their top two choices to Baltimore for John Dutton at midseason. Unless they receive a high pick for Henderson, the Pokes will not get a pick in the upcoming draft until the third round.

Gardner, Wharton Give Hope To Chaps

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It is difficult enough to change with the times, to risk transition for the opportunity of growth. Not only are most persons resentful of changing times, an even greater number are oblivious to its possibilities.

Keith Gardner and Kevin Wharton, senior stars of the Lubbock Christian College basketball team, more than made the commitment to change WITH the times. They, themselves, decided to CHANGE the times.

Gardner and Wharton cast their fate to the same wind when, two years ago at Hillsboro Junior College, they voted to continue their partnership at LCC.

Prior to their arrival, the Chaps had been a forlorn 4-22 and Coach Larry Hays was on the prowl for rebounding strength, players who could pit their size and leaping ability against the neighborhood bullies of District VIII.

"I could see the program wasn't going to get any worse," Gardner said. "The tradition was bad and LCC had a reputation as an easy team to beat."

"Tree" (Wharton) was thinking about going to Cameron State, at first, but then we decided we had the chance to build a program together, so we came to the same school—LCC."

Wharton had been offered a scholarship to attend the basketball factory at Cameron State, and also was promised a partial scholarship by Washington State. It was the influence of Hays and a visit to the LCC campus that shifted his interest.

"Keith and I visited here together and that was the turning point," Wharton said. "Coach Hays was straight up and honest. He didn't try to pull my leg; he said this was not a school where they handed out money."

"Keith and I liked him from the first time we talked to him. Even though Cameron State was third in the NAIA the year before, I came here. The small campus made me feel better, because I might get away from studying at a larger school. You know, partying around."

Suddenly, Hays had what he considered to be the first two cards in a winning hand. As the deal continued, he knew he was right.

The Chaps improved their record to 14-16 in Gardner and Wharton's first season and broke a 35-game losing streak on the road. This year's Chaps, 17-16, have accumulated almost half of their victories—eight—away from the fieldhouse.

That, to Hays, is progress.

"We've been a different team with those two," Hays said. "They've turned around a losing situation—and that's tough. You can bring in five outstanding players who should win big but, if you put them in a losing situation, there may be too many psychological things for them to overcome. You have to be strong to do that, and that's what these two guys have done."

Gardner and Wharton have been the heart and soul of the Chaps for two seasons now, with Gardner, 6-4 and a graduate of Houston Furr High School, holding six school records. Wharton, 6-7 product of Denver Northwest, has claimed five, and was the Chaps' most valuable player last year.

Due to the relentless inside work of Gardner and Wharton, the Chaps ranked as the eighth best rebounding team in the nation, according to last year's NAIA statistics. They also finished atop District VIII in that department.

"When we first got here, everyone told me we needed rebounding," Gardner said, "but I've broken some scoring records, too. So they got a two-for-one deal. 'Tree' and I have scored well."

Gardner scored well enough to break the Chaps' single-season record last year while averaging 19.4 ppg., and 11.2 rebounds per game. Wharton chipped in 12.5 points, 10.7 rebounds and 55 blocked shots.

This year, Gardner's per game point production has dropped two points, while Wharton's has increased by that same figure. In addition, Wharton has set a school records with 122 blocked shots and 321 rebounds, and has shot 60 percent from the floor. Gardner, who during one stretch had 40 consecutive double-figure performances, shoots 59 percent from the field.

"This year, I'm more satisfied with my game than last year," Wharton said. "Lately, I've been getting about 16 points and 16 rebounds a game, and there's nothing wrong with that. I've been told I'm a good rebounder; this is something I should really do every game if I put my head into it."

The Chaps, of late, have tried to put themselves into the District VIII post-season playoffs which are scheduled to begin Mar. 1. In order to do so, however, they needed to impress the minds behind the weekly Dunkel ratings.

Currently, the Chaps are listed sixth in the poll—and only the top six teams qualify for the tourney. LCC, inactive this week while other contenders see action, must wait until ratings are released early next week before knowing if the season is to continue.

"We started slow this year," Gardner said, "but now we're coming on pretty good and we're fighting for the playoffs. I think we peaked during our six-game winning streak a couple weeks ago, and we hope to continue that kind of play."

Whether or not the Chaparrals crack the playoffs, Gardner and Wharton's days as basketball players at LCC are numbered.

Hays expresses both gratitude for their efforts, and melancholy at the thought of losing his keystone.

"Thanks to them, we now have a winning attitude even in defeat," Hays said, "and I just don't know how I'm going to replace them. They've meant such a great deal because of the people they are: they're both going to graduate, and it means a lot to a program to have two seniors about to get degrees... They've done such a good job."

Once graduated, Gardner and Wharton expect to miss each other as much as they will their playing days at LCC. Gardner's plans may send him to the University of Houston, where he will seek his master's in business; Wharton, a sociology major, has been offered a position with a Lubbock firm and is inclined to accept.

"We've been talking about going our own separate ways when it's over," Wharton said, "but we'll keep in touch. It'll be fun to talk about the good, old days. Keith's a good guy and I know he'll miss LCC, too. I know I'm going to miss it a lot. I knew this would come and I've accepted it, but I still hate it."

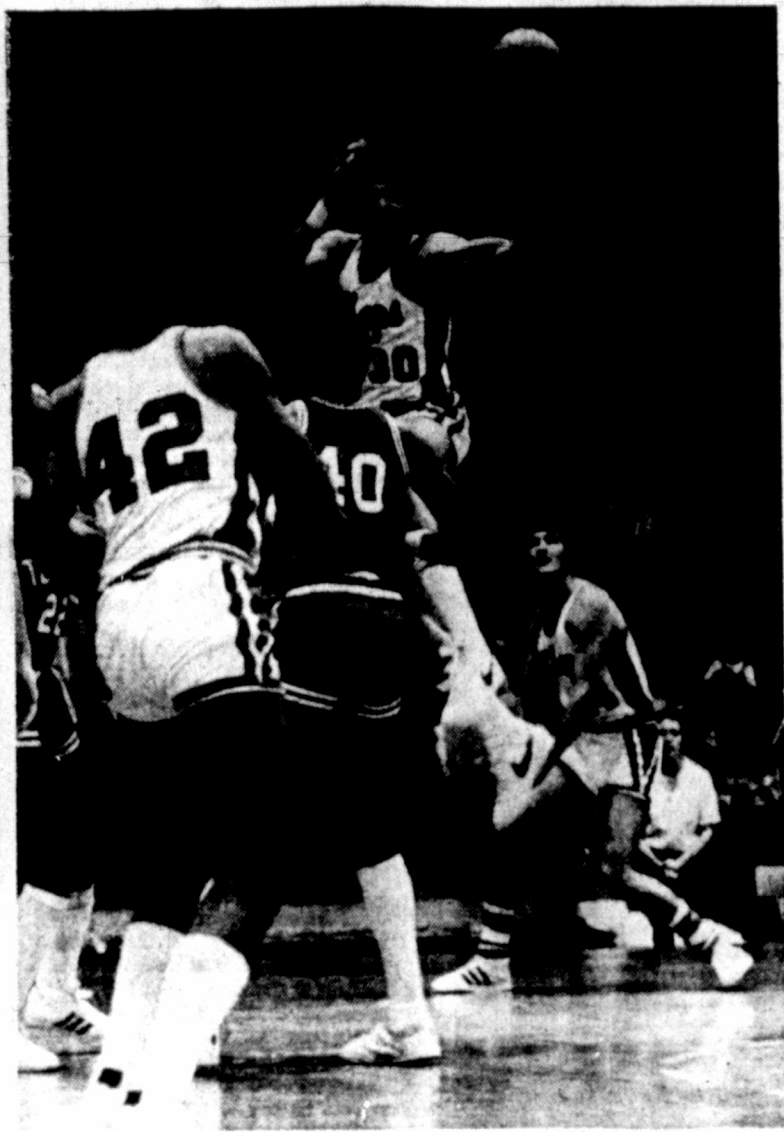

"I'm going to always remember how good an experience this has been... all the down-to-earth, nice people I've met."

Gardner will concentrate on recollection of his and Wharton's accomplishments at LCC. "Kevin and I are best of friends and we've talked a lot about our personal aspirations and how much we'll miss this," Gardner said.

"But the main thing is that we've started a tradition. I think that our two years here have been a success. We've conformed to the Christian atmosphere here and yet we've still been able to be competitive."

"Before we got here," Gardner said, "LCC was basically a baseball school. Before we leave, we've added identity to the basketball program."

The times... they've been a changing.

Midland Braces For Title Run

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

For most of the season, Jack Stephenson must have felt like he was walking down that one-way street with a black hearse on his tail.

Things just weren't going right for the Midland High coach.

He'd seen the Bulldogs roll up one of the top won-loss records in the state and hold down the number five spot in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's Class AAAA basketball poll, earlier in the year. But a strange thing happened on MHS' way to the state tournament. It seems Stephenson's crew was ambushed by San Angelo Central in the first round of conference play and ended up tying Odessa Permian for the half title with a 6-1 record.

"It's going to be interesting," commented Stephenson, a couple of weeks ago.

He's not far from wrong.

After suffering a second-round loss to the Panthers, it appeared Midland was about to play the part of the bridesmaid. It didn't seem likely that anyone could stop the Permian roll.

Stephenson's only answer was prayer. And, apparently, somebody was listening.

Because Friday night, Central popped up out of the blue and knocked Permian off the 5-AAAA throne and into a first-place tie with Midland. Both teams are 5-1 in conference play with only a couple of games left on the schedule.

So if both Midland and Permian and avoid the upset bug for another week, then it appears the two will meet Saturday night to determine the conference title once and for all.

And it should be interesting.

- Also facing a post-season playoff are Palo Duro and Pampa. The Dons captured District 3-AAAA's first-half title, but lost the second round to the Harvesters. The contest is set for Friday night at a site to be determined, probably either the Amarillo Civic Center or at the Coliseum in Canyon. The winner of that game goes on to meet 4-AAAA champion, Monterey, the following Tuesday night.

- Monterey, which assured itself of representing the conference in bi-district play by knocking off Plainview 53-47, could go 13 days without a ball game.

"It's really hard to find anybody to play," said MHS' head coach Joe Michalka. According to UIL rules, a district champion must play another district winner in a practice game. "It's tough in this part of the country," continued Michalka. "We can't play any (Class AAAA schools) up north or south either. I guess we could go to El Paso. We'd probably get back in about a week, though."

Smartly-Attired Ags Stay Tied

By The Associated Press

Vernon Smith and Dave Britton dressed like it was New Year's Eve, then did their celebrating on the basketball court Saturday.

Forward Smith and guard Britton wore maroon tuxedos into G. Rollie White Coliseum, traded them in for game-uniform work clothes, then went out and scored 21 and 20 points, respectively, as the Texas Aggies whipped Texas 84-61.

The victory kept Texas A&M tied with Arkansas for the Southwest Conference basketball leadership.

It was the first time in three years the Aggies had beaten Texas in friendly G. Rollie White.

Student trainer Jay Harris and manager Mike Owen joined Smith and Britton in the flashy threads department, wearing white tuxes on the bench.

"We wore them over from the dorm," said Smith. "We were trying to do something different to loosen up the team."

The Aggies played so well Coach Shelby Metcalf may make pre-game tuxes mandatory dress.

In other games, Arkansas tied A&M with 12-2 SWC records thanks to a hard-earned 77-73 victory over Rice. Texas Tech downed SMU 62-59, and Houston survived Baylor 60-58.

If A&M and Arkansas remain tied after the final week of play, then a coin toss will determine who gets the No. 1 seed in the SWC Tournament in San Antonio Feb. 28-March 1. Both teams have clinched byes to the semifinals.

Arkansas is at SMU tonight, then hosts Texas Tech Saturday afternoon in a regionally-televised game.

A&M hosts TCU Tuesday night then travels to Houston Friday night.

Bowie, 'Cats Break Vegas' Bank

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Kyle Macy's long-range shooting for Kentucky unlocked a tie game in the final minutes as the fifth-ranked Wildcats overcame the tight defense of Nevada-Las Vegas in a nationally-televised college basketball game Sunday.

Senior Macy, who finished with 14 points, made two consecutive jump shots from about 23 feet with 9:00 and 8:19 remaining to give Kentucky a 69-65 lead.

Coming out of the zone with 3½ minutes remaining and still behind by four points, the unranked Rebels tried to get back into the game by fouling freshman center Sam Bowie of Kentucky. The 7-foot-1 Bowie, who led all scorers with 23 points, made just one of three foul shots but his defense kept the Rebels from taking advantage when they got the ball.

Bowie finally ended the suspense when he banked in a layup with 1:16 remaining. He crashed to the floor after the shot, apparently injuring an ankle. He was able to walk off the court, but sat out the rest of game.

Kentucky, the Southeast Conference leader, improved its record to 25-3. Independent Nevada-Las Vegas, 19-5, was led by 6-foot-9 freshman center Sidney Green with 17 points and a game-high 11 rebounds.

Richard Box and 16 points and Michael Burns 13 for the Rebels.

Kentucky led 42-40 at halftime. Nevada Las Vegas took over at 51-50 with 16:34 to play on a layup by Burns, but Kentucky scored the next six points.

As the game wound down, turnovers and tenacious Kentucky defense kept Nevada-Las Vegas scoreless from the 8:06 mark until Flintie Ray Williams was fouled by Bowie and made a free throw with 1:57 remaining.

Playmaker Jay Shidler came off the bench midway in the second half to score two baskets of his own, before and after Macy's pair of long-range jumpers. Shidler also had assists on the Macy baskets, whipping passes to his teammate in the split second before the Rebels' zone could shift.

Kentucky outrebounded Nevada-Las Vegas 37-29. Bowie led the Wildcats with eight rebounds, and forward LaVon Williams added seven rebounds.

Kentucky made 54.4 percent of his floor shots, with Bowie making 10 of 14 mostly on layups or slam dunks. Macy had a rough first half, making just one of six shots, but he recovered to make three out of four after halftime.

Nevada-Las Vegas shot 52.7 percent. Box made six of eight shots, mostly medium-range jumpers from the baseline.

Bice, Andrews Expect Tough Go Against Bulldogs

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
 When Andrews coach Frank Bice says his club relies on speed rather than height, he's not joking.
 Bice's Mustangs have only one starter over six-foot tall, yet stand 26-4 on the season, have won the District 2-AAA championship and are ranked sixth in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram's ranking of state high school teams.
 "We're pretty small," conceded Bice, "but I'll tell you something. They've been a very rewarding group to be around. They've relied on courage and hustle and determination all year.
 "We've been behind before and the kids just kept going and kept fighting back. That's one thing — they're not going to beat themselves. They hang together and play real well as a team.
 "Somebody who beats us is going to be one fine team."
 So far the only ones fine enough have been New Mexico Class AAAA powers Hobbs and Clovis, Seminole (in overtime early in the season) and Ft. Stockton (in the last game, after the District 2-AAA title was already sealed).
 In fact, until the last two games of the season, the Mustangs rolled through the 2-AAA season almost untouched.

Their closest win had been by nine points. Tuesday they edged Odessa Ector 77-74 at home to clinch the district title and Friday night they fell 72-68 to Fort Stockton.
 But Bice isn't interested in past heroics. Looming on the horizon is the spectre of Borger. And the Bulldogs are big and strong as befits their 28-3 season mark.
 "I watched Borger beat Dunbar the other night and they're not only big, but they're talented and they've got an excellent ball club," Bice said. "I was very impressed with the way they played. I'd heard they were a two-man squad, but that (Doug) Sullivan is real good and (Greg) Belton is a heckuva ballplayer too. He's as good as anybody we've seen down here.
 "They're good inside and good outside. They're tall and they're quick. I don't know what else you need. I guess they have to be considered the premier team in Triple-A in this area."
 Despite Bice's respect for the Bulldogs, he's got quite a team himself. Van Eisenbach, 6-2, mans the post position flanked by 5-11 sophomore Keith Brooks and 5-11 senior Brian Templeton. Playing the guard spots are 5-8 junior Jerry Alaniz and 5-9 Robbie Jones.
 Templeton is averaging 19.3 points and 9.0 rebounds a game and two other Mustangs are scoring in double figures. Alaniz is getting 16.0 and Brooks is hitting 13.4.

 "We rely a great deal on running offensively," said Bice. "We fast break a lot. On defense we try and mix it up. We run as much of a man-to-man as possible but we mix it up.
 "I'll be honest with you. We'll watch Borger one more time but, I believe that to a large extent, we prepare for our different opponents but we mostly do what we do best.
 "We might make one or two small adjustments but basically we follow the same game plan every time.
 "I've got no doubt (Brett) Smith will pose a big problem. Nobody has stopped him all year. I'm sure he's going to get his points. What we have to do is hold him to that because we don't want to do something that will weaken the rest of our defense."
 Should the rest of the region's district champion coaches decide to follow a tournament format, it's likely the games will be played in Levelland. Pairings would then be decided by the luck of the draw.
 Elsewhere on the South Plains, Borger, of course, won District 1-AAA, beating Estacado and Dunbar. If the Bulldogs lose to Canyon Tuesday night, the second-half would be tied, but Borger would represent anyway, having earned a share of the first-half crown as well.

 In 3-AAA, Snyder still has two games to play, but the first-half champs knocked off Lamesa Friday night to put themselves a step ahead of everybody else.

 In girls' action, all three South Plains districts ended with playoffs. Thursday night Monahans beat Ector for the second time in three meetings to win 2-AAA. Saturday night Dumas beat Canyon 63-58 in overtime to win District 1-AAA and Snyder beat Lake View 46-44 in overtime to represent 3-AAA.

Mrs. Moser-Proell Turns Olympic Trip To Gold

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The Olympic were the farthest thing from Annemarie Moser-Proell's mind four years ago.
 Her victory Sunday in the downhill at the 1980 Winter Games, the fabulous Austrian finally has that Olympic gold medal to add to her treasure chest. But in 1976 she could have cared less.

 "During the 1976 Olympic downhill, I was with my father all the time. He was ill, and he died only a few weeks after the Olympics," Mrs. Moser-Proell said at a post-victory news conference. "I had to care for my father, and I didn't think about the race. I had no regrets."

 Favored to win her first gold medal at the 1972 Games at Sapporo, Japan, Mrs. Moser-Proell had to settle for two silvers behind double gold medalist Marie-Theres Nadig of Switzerland.
 Before the Innsbruck Games in 1976, Mrs. Moser-Proell went into retirement. She thought she had hung up her skis for good. She managed to sit around for 1 1/2 years before the lure of gold drew her back. Last season she won her sixth World Cup title. This year she aimed her sights at the only major ski racing title she had not claimed — an Olympic gold medal.

 "I was injured in the fall, and I couldn't train," said Mrs. Moser-Proell, 26. "I had to change my program and concentrate on the Olympics because I didn't have the physical potential to lead the World Cup early."
 Will Annemarie ski another year now? "I don't know yet," she said. She said she probably would not decide to continue her 10-year career until the World Cup final at Saalbach, Austria in mid-March.
 While admitting she was more or less "obliged" to win the downhill here to cap off her career, Mrs. Moser-Proell said she has had equally important victories.

 "The World Cup last year was very important to me because it went down to the last race," Annemarie said. She did not clinch her World Cup victory over Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein until March 19 by finishing second in a giant slalom at Furano, Japan.
 Equally important, she said, was her downhill victory in February, 1978 at the world championships in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, West Germany "because I had just come out of 20 months' retirement."

 This time around, Mrs. Moser-Proell made sure of her medal. She had the fastest time in four days of training. She beat silver medalist Miss Wenzel by seven-tenths of a second and whipped bronze medalist Miss Nadig by nearly a full second.
 "I was confident at the start," Mrs. Moser-Proell said. "When I got on the course, I really thought I could win. I trained so well. I never thought I could lose."

Dawkins, 76'ers Rattle Cavaliers

By The Associated Press
 Darryl Dawkins scored 27 points and pulled down 18 rebounds to lead six double-figure scorers as the Philadelphia 76ers outdueled the Cleveland Cavaliers, 115-100, in a National Basketball Association game Sunday.
 Dawkins scored 17 of his points in the second half to lead Philadelphia to its fifth straight victory.
 Mike Mitchell led Cleveland with 28, four more than teammate Randy Smith. Julius Erving collected 20 points and Maurice Cheeks handed off 13 assists to go with 12 points.
Suns 128, Nets 98
 Truck Robinson and Paul Westphal led a third-quarter explosion with eight points apiece as the Phoenix Suns ran away from the New Jersey Nets, 128-98.
 The Suns took the game out of sight with a 34-23 third quarter that gave them an 89-65 lead.
 The Suns outrebounded their Nets 18-6 in the third quarter and 52-42 for the ball game, an unusual statistic for the Suns. Phoenix usually prefers the run-and-shoot game and leaves the board mulling to the opposition.
 Seven-foot center Rich Kelley made his debut for Phoenix, played sparingly but scored six points against his old teammates.
Nuggets 112, Rockets 99
 George Johnson hit four of Denver's first five baskets in the fourth quarter to trigger a furious outburst by Denver that lifted the Nuggets to a 112-99 victory over Houston.
 Johnson, a second-year forward from St. John's, had his career high of 28 points as the Nuggets battled back from deficits in the first half that were as high as 10 points.
 Denver trailed 53-48 at halftime but managed to pull ahead of the Rockets after three periods at 78-78 on Gary Garland's short jumper at the gun. Then Johnson ignited the fourth period outburst.
 Alex English contributed 24 points and Dan Issel 20 to the Denver cause.

Moses Malone of Houston was the game's leading scorer with 29 points.
Kings 108, Clippers 107
 Otis Birdsong fired in 30 points to lead the Kansas City Kings to a 108-107 triumph over the slumping San Diego Clippers.
 The Kings thwarted a last-second Clippers comeback attempt when Lloyd Free's jumper at the buzzer went off the side of the backboard.
 Free finished the game with 24 points, while Bill Walton, in his finest effort since returning to the San Diego lineup, contributed 22 points.
 The Clippers lost their third consecutive game and the 10th in their last 12 contests.
 Phil Ford, held to a single basket through the first three quarters, contributed nine of his 11 points in the final stanza for Kansas City.
Lakers 111, Bullets 107
 Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon each scored two points in the final 72 seconds to preserve the Los Angeles Lakers' 111-107 victory over the Washington Bullets.
 The Lakers overcame a furious fourth quarter challenge by the Bullets. Trailing 85-71, Washington closed to within two points on Kevin Porter's layup with 1:20 remaining.
 Four Lakers had 20 points or more. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 25, Wilkes 23, Nixon 21 and Magic Johnson 20.
 Elvin Hayes was Washington's scoring leader with 31 points, 13 in the first period. Kevin Grevey had 16 and John Williamson 14. Twelve of Williamson's points came in the final quarter.
Spurs 135, Bucks 134
 James Silas' 15-foot jump shot with 28 seconds to play lifted the San Antonio Spurs to a 135-134 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.
 George Gervin scored 42 points, half of them in the third quarter, to pace the San Antonio scoring.

 Four other Spurs were in double figures, including 22 from Larry Kenon, as San Antonio snapped a six-game Milwaukee winning streak and stayed within four games of the Atlanta Hawks in the Central Division race.
 The Bucks got balanced scoring as Brian Winters hit 22 points and Bob Lanier canned 19 to lead a gang of eight Milwaukee players in double figures.
Sonics 109, Celtics 108
 Dennis Johnson's baseline jumper over M.L. Carr with 11 seconds to play lifted the Seattle SuperSonics past the Boston Celtics, 109-108, in a nationally televised showdown between the league's top two teams.
Hawks 108, Pistons 99
 John Drew scored eight of his 18 points in the last quarter Sunday to protect Atlanta from a comeback scare and help the Hawks to a 108-99 victory over Detroit.
Pacers 108, Bulls 100
 The Indiana Pacers raced to a 24-point lead in the second quarter Sunday and coasted behind Billy Knight's 26 points to a 108-100 victory over the Chicago Bulls.

The Pacers led virtually the entire game, although the Bulls slowly whittled the lead down to 10 points.

Buddy Baker Earns Daytona 500 Victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Buddy Baker, uncertain whether to laugh or cry, luxuriated in the feeling Sunday after shaking off years of frustration to grab a record-shattering victory in the Daytona 500 Grand National stock car race.
 The 39-year-old NASCAR veteran, always denied victory at the Daytona International Speedway since the first 500 in 1959, was afraid it was going to happen again.
 He led the race for 143 of its 200 laps, but began to gaze fearfully at his gas gauge as victory came clearly into view in the final laps.
 "The gas gauge fell to two pounds and I said, 'Oh, no, I know what's going to happen now.'
 "They kept telling me to slow down," he said of his pit crewmen. "and I said, 'You're crazy. Somebody will pass me.'"

"I'm just so proud. I've got a lot of things to say and I can't get 'em out," Baker added in a choked voice. "I'm caught up in myself right now."
 The race finished under the fifth yellow of the day as Baker was assured of his 17th Grand National victory when a blown engine brought out the caution flag with just two laps to go.
 Baker set a new race speed record for the Daytona 500 in winning the nationally-televised event. His team also won a record $102,275 out of the total purse of $660,000.
 Donnie Allison, who started in the second position, jumped into the lead at the end of the first lap, but saw pole-sitter Baker go whizzing by two laps later.
 The lead changed hands several more times during the early going, with the average speed on the 2.5-mile, high-banked track hovering above 193 mph.
 That quickly slowed to 160 mph after 50 laps due to a fast trio of yellow lights, beginning on the 37th lap when Chuck Bown and Kevin Housby, well behind the leaders, tangled on turn two.
 The other two early cautions resulted from a blown engine and a stalled car.
 Darrell Waltrip, who finished second here a year ago and went on to win seven Grand National races, was the first major dropout. The engine in his Oldsmobile blew on the 20th lap and the car was quickly wheeled into the garage area.
 Foyt, a former Daytona 500 winner who blew five engines while qualifying for the race, also went to the garage area with mechanical problems midway in the race.

Raider Women Travel To ORU

The Texas Tech women's basketball team, 21-9, will be in Tulsa, Okla., to meet Oral Roberts University today at 5:15 p.m.
 ORU is ranked first among women's teams in the state and is 19-6 this season.
 Tech upset the Lady Titans 65-55 last year in the Municipal Coliseum.
 The Raiders will start center Pam Stone, who leads the team with 14.8 points and 10 rebounds per game; forwards Gwen McCray and Lynn Webb, and guards Louise Davis and Vicki Lee.
 The game has additional significance in that it helps determine the Raiders' seeding in the Regional Championships Mar. 5-8 in Baton Rouge, La.

WHITE OFF TO JAPAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran outfielder Roy White, who played out his option last year after 13 full seasons with the New York Yankees, has signed to play with the Yomiuri Giants of the Japanese Baseball League, his agent, Jerry Kapstein, said Sunday night. The 36-year-old White who appeared in only 81 games for the Yankees last season and batted just .215 as a part-time player.

Colbert Leaps To Head Of Tucson Tourney Class

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Jim Colbert, trying to end a long winless skein, fired a 5-under-par 68 Sunday to take a 1-stroke lead over Tom Purtzer in the rain-delayed second round of the $300,000 Tucson Open.

Colbert, whose last PGA victory came in 1974, had opened the tournament with a 67 and stands at 12-under-par 134 after 36 holes over the 7,095-yard, par-73 Tucson National course. After being tied with Purtzer for most of the final round, Colbert rolled in a 15-foot birdie putt on the final hole to take the lead.

Purtzer, whose only tour triumph came in the Los Angeles Open in 1977, shot a second-round 67 to go with an opening 68. Buddy Allin, making a comeback after spending almost two years as a club pro, was another two strokes back with a second-round 69 that put him at 137.

Rex Caldwell, the first-round leader with a 65, had to settle for a 73 Sunday that put him in a group of six at 138. In that group were Dan Haldorson, Dave Barr, Bob Eastwood, Keith Fergus and Stan Lee. Haldorson carded a second-round 71. Barr and Fergus had 69s, and Eastwood and Lee 71s.

Rain, which had washed out all of Thursday's opening round, then more than half the round the next day, fell briefly Sunday. But play continued and the showers stopped by early afternoon. The third round will be played today with the 18-hole finale of the 72-hole event on Tuesday.

Colbert, who had Saturday off since he was among the early starting groups Friday who completed the first round before rain halted play, said a couple of scrambling pars, a few long birdie putts and one 25-foot chip into the hole were the keys to his round.

Randy Gardner Feels 'Withdrawal' Pains

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Two days after withdrawing from the Olympic Games pairs figure skating competition because of a groin injury, Randy Gardner was "hemorrhaging badly" his mother said Sunday.

In addition, she said, he was beginning to be "more and more depressed" about the event which caused him and his partner Tai Babilonia to withdraw from competition. With that withdrawal, the United States lost the best shot it has ever had at winning a gold medal in the Pairs competition.

Gardner, 21, of Los Angeles, and Miss Babilonia, 19, of Mission Hills, Calif., tearfully withdrew Friday night after Randy fell three times during a warm-up immediately preceding the short program, attempting routine jumps which his coach John Nicks said he "never misses."

Randy said that right after the withdrawal he "felt nothing. I didn't know whether to cry or laugh it off, or feel sorry for myself or Tai. I just didn't know what was happening."

As the reality sank in, and as the finals of Pairs competition approached, Randy was "becoming more and more depressed" according to his mother, Jan Gardner.

Fifteen minutes before trying to perform Friday, Gardner was injected with a local anesthetic — approved by the IOC Medical Commission — because he said "I couldn't do two of the elements because of extreme pain."

U.S. Skaters Collect Coach's Quotations

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — It is a 14-page volume, hand-written with a black felt-tip pen on a spiral notebook by right wing John Harrington. Its title is "Brookisms," and it's a best seller among the members of the United States Olympic hockey team.

It is named for Coach Herb Brooks, whose truisms, philosophies, platitudes and foldover have been a constant source of learning — and amusement — for the players he has coached since August. Over the months they have listened and listened some more to Brooks' string of patter: the lines most constantly repeated become "Brookisms."

Sometimes we'll be in the locker room and a guy will start with a Brookism, and then every other guy will do one, and we'll go around the room and it'll be 15 minutes before we're done," says right wing Dave Silk. "But if you can analyze what he says and understand, he makes a lot of sense."

"Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me." That's one of the many Brookisms in the volume that will be signed by the team and presented to the coach once the Games are over.

U.S. Skiers Slope Downward

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — It was her first Olympics, and when 18-year-old Heidi Preuss crossed the finish line of the women's downhill in fourth place Sunday, one might have thought her to be jubilant.

Not so, said the normally ebullient skier from Lakeport, N.H. "I was very disappointed when I saw my time and when I saw that '4' on the scoreboard," she said. "That's the fourth time I've placed fourth (at World Cup level). It really burns me."

U.S. Skiers Slope Downward

from Liechtenstein. "She's a great skier, but she hasn't been doing that well this week."

Miss Preuss finished right behind a veteran lineup. Winner Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria is 26. Wenzel is 23 and bronze medalist Marie-Theres Nadig of Switzerland is 25. There are suggestions all three might be ready to retire soon.

Miss Preuss was asked if she thought their retirement would leave her as the top women's downhill. "Yes, I do," she said. "I feel my arrival is sort of their departure."

It was in general a disappointing day for the rest of the American women.

Mary Decker Beats World Mark

HOUSTON (AP) — Most world track records are established when an athlete is pushed to the limit by world class competition, but Mary Decker has to rely on crowds for inspiration — there seems to be no available impetus from the competition.

It was a similar situation two weeks ago in the Milrose Games at New York when Miss Decker ran away from the field but responded to the ovation from the crowd for a world indoor best of 4:00.8 in the 1,500 meters.

Tech Women Divers Attempt To Qualify

The Texas Tech women's diving team is in Columbia, S.C., today to compete in the Pre-National Qualifiers Meet.

Tech's Laura Viera, Melanie Halpin and Renee Cox will be among divers fighting for berths in the final national meet in Las Vegas Mar. 19-22.

Miss Viera and Miss Cox will participate in the 1-meter event, with all three Raiders scheduled to compete in the 3-meter diving.

U.S. Skaters Collect Coach's Quotations

Another is, "You're playing worse every day, and right now, you're playing like next month."

And how about, "You've got to take your hard hat and lunch pail to work with you every day," or "Let's go out and get a couple, three goals."

These are lines the players have been hearing day in and day out. There are many others, all totally unprintable.

But one of Herb's biggest Brookisms is, "Don't let the other team score on you in the first or last five minutes of a period, and play them all-out in the middle!" says Silk. "And he has a point. It's really tough to go into the locker room like that, play a team hard for 19 minutes, then get beat with a goal in the last minute."

In fact, the unbeaten American squad has done a remarkable job of scoring in the first or last five minutes. On Saturday, for example, after Mike Eruzione had scored at 41 seconds of the second period and Mark Johnson tallied at 4:51, the U.S. team had scored 11 Olympic goals and nine of them had come during that five-minute time span. All told,

'Best Of Brazilian Television' To Be Subject Of PBS Special

By TOM JORY
NEW YORK (AP) — Most Americans have never heard of "Malu Mulher," "Carga Pesada" and "Planta de Policia," but they're replacing dubbed segments of "Kojak" and "Charlie's Angels" as favorites of TV-watchers in Brazil.

And viewers in this country will get a chance to sample the three dramatic series, as well as other aspects of television in the South American land, when the Public Broadcasting Service offers "The Best of Brazilian Television" tonight at 9 p.m. CST.

As with most PBS programs, air date and time may vary, so check local listings.

Actress Candace Bergen is host for the 90-minute special, which includes taped material as well as a live report on the world-famous Carnival celebration in Rio de Janeiro.

"The Best of Brazilian Television" is a joint production of WPBT, the public TV station in Miami, and the Rede Globo television network in Brazil.

In addition to the dramatic series, the special includes clips of singer Roberto Carlos, composer Antonio Carlos Jobim and Sergio Mendes and his orchestra, and comedy segments from Chico Anisio's "Chico City," "O Planeta dos Homens" — "The Planet of Man" series and "Os Trapalhoes," a sort of Keystone Kops-Three Stooges takeoff.

There are samplings from Brazilians' favorite "telenovelas" — Soap operas — including "My Father, My Hero" and "The Giants." And there is a slice of "Fantastico, The Show of Life," a Sunday night institution in Brazil that includes news, sports and variety acts.

It's not intended to be a social documentary on the Brazilian people," says Shep Morgan, the program's producer in Miami, "but really a sampling of their television that demonstrates their lifestyle and personality as American television mirrors ours."

Morgan says the design was to compile a cross-section of some of the country's best prime-time programs, "a good many of which we felt did capture the vibrancy of Brazilian life."

Miss Bergen is as much a tour-guide as she is host for the special, sampling Brazil's culture and food as well as the country's renowned climate and beaches.

Television in Brazil reaches 15 million households, with an estimated 75 million viewers. Rede Globo reaches about 75 percent of that audience.

Rede Globo has its roots in the newspaper O Globo, founded in 1925. The network went on the air in Rio 40 years later, with coverage confined to a portion of the country. It began a national news program in 1969, and, at the same time, initiated satellite transmission to and from the United States, Europe and Japan.

Morgan describes television production in Brazil as "first-rate."

"They have far more experience than the American commercial networks, for example, with video tape on location for both musicals and drama," he says.

Morgan says he hopes "The Best of Brazilian Television" will lead to further cooperative efforts.

"We are very aware of the fact that Miami is becoming more and more a gateway to Latin America, and would like to bring television from that part of the world to the United States, such as PBS has brought Britain to this country for years."

He says discussions are underway with broadcasters in Venezuela and Mexico for possible future programs.

Sculptor Uses Odd Materials

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPD) — Artist Richard Fleischner doesn't use canvas stretched on a frame. His art can be an open field, an empty room, or a gash of earth torn up by a strip mine.

An open field is exactly what Fleischner chose for his contribution to the art program planned in connection with the current Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Fleischner is an environmental sculptor, a leader of an artistic school that has slapped up fences along California's winding coastline, carved geometric patterns in the desert and built chain-link mazes in open fields. The Providence resident wants people to look at their surroundings in new ways.

His latest projects are the fenced-in field at Lake Placid, commissioned for the Olympics, and "Wood Interior," a four-sided fence inside an otherwise empty gallery at the Rhode Island School of Design Museum.

Fleischner hopes his next work will be a reclamation project at a Seattle strip mine, where he proposes constructing a sod pyramid or a high-rise building on the side of a ruined cliff.

Not everyone thinks of these as art.

Fleischner, 35, an intense man who speaks slowly and deliberately, does not duck controversy.

"It's not unusual for us to get a very hostile reaction," he said. "That's what happened at Lake Placid. I don't pay attention to it. I do what I do because it's what I want to be doing."

Fleischner visited the Lake Placid site four times. He listened to the noises, watched the shadows, the twilight, and the trees rippling in the wind. The site was a 340-by-120-foot field hemmed in on two sides by cedar trees. On one open side, Fleischner built a 14-foot tall covered fence on stilts to balance the height of the cedar trees and "create an enclosure."

Perpendicular to the first fence he built a short railing on stilts to "allow for visual access."

"It has to do with weight and volume and very traditional sculptural elements," said Fleischner who describes his work as using classic elements of traditional sculpture in new forms and surroundings. But he insists it's not as simple as it looks.

"It's not something a 6-year-old could do," Fleischner said. "It's taking the most basic gestures to articulate a space. Because something is simple doesn't mean it's not being considered. Just look at Shaker furniture."

Fleischner created his first environmental sculpture in 1971, lining up bales of hay in a friend's two-acre field "to see how putting things in different places changed those places."

Ski-Related Sales Decline Blamed On Lack Of Snow In New England

By FRED BAYLES
BOSTON (AP) — Besides disappointing skiers in the Northeast, New England's nearly snowless winter is blamed for a 15 percent decline in sales for thousands of companies nationwide that outfit skiers.

In some New England areas, the lack of snowfall has broken records that go back to the beginnings of the National Weather Service. And as the record of snowless days piles up, so do the inventories of skis, parkas and boots.

Estimates of a billion-dollar year for the ski industry have melted with unusually warm and sunny weather, says Dave Ingemie, director of marketing for Ski Industries America, a trade group with 285 members. As a result, some of the estimated 300 manufacturers and distributors and 8,000 retailers of ski equipment and snow wear are in trouble.

"This weather has created a tremendous inventory in the retail operations, which means they don't buy so much next year," says Ingemie. "Retailers cut their margins and try to sell the equipment at reduced rates, which reduces profitability."

It will weed out some of the business. There will be companies that can't handle it."

The snow drought is having effects nationwide. Manufacturers and distributors in the West are feeling the lack of sales in New England, which accounts for nearly half the U.S. market.

Ingemie says sales were off 15 percent nationally in December, and he expects an even gloomier report in January's figures.

"Business is basically way off," says Bill Haugen, whose Haugen Nordic Products of Hanover, N.H., markets Scandinavian-made cross-country ski equipment. "Through September it was running 40 percent ahead of last year. But when the September weather continued through December, business died."

Haugen, one of an estimated 65 ski marketers in New England, says he can survive the drought by cutting "internal expenses" through the season. But he feels the weather will have a long-term effect on the industry.

If there are a few good seasons in a row, people reach a threshold where they are ready to start buying equipment," he says. "But with two bad seasons the growth of cross-country is going to be set back one or two years."

People in the ski equipment industry say the real casualties will be small retailers, who suffered through a season last year that had only five to eight days of natural snow skiing.

"Everybody's asking who is going to make it and who isn't," says Betsy Smith, a regional sales representative for Beconta, a major ski and boot distributor that makes its own line of apparel.

"This season is going to strengthen the large companies and kill the smaller ones that are hanging on by a thread," she says.

"Sales have been down, but I'm not at liberty to say how much," says Bill McKissock, a vice president with Ski Market, a chain of ski shops in Massachusetts and New York.

"We've put a hold on our advertising, realizing that pretty much any kind of promotion was not enticing the customer," he says. "We've also brought down the payroll."

Actor Dividing Time Between Simon Film, Director's Role

James Caan Strays From 'Best Actor' Ambition

By FRED YAGER

NEW YORK (AP) — "I want to be the best actor in the world," proclaimed James Caan, here to promote the Neil Simon comedy "Chapter Two" and the film "Hide In Plain Sight," in which Caan not only stars but directs.

"I've sort of strayed away from that goal," admitted the 42-year-old actor. "Things got too easy. I don't feel I've worked hard in a long time. I made a lot of pictures that if I had the chance I'd never do them."

"Chapter Two" and "Hide In Plain Sight," however, do not fall into that category. Caan is proud of both of them. "I did some good work in 'Chapter Two.' And 'Hide In Plain Sight' is a nice picture with universal themes about a father who's taken away from his children."

For several weeks, Caan had two jobs, working on the Simon film during the day and editing "Hide In Plain Sight" at night. "It was rough for awhile, but the ex-wife expected a check every month," he said, smiling.

Once "Hide In Plain Sight" was in the can, Caan still had to battle with the backers who doubted his directorial skills. "We had a paid screening and took a poll. Ninety-three percent said they liked it. That's a pretty healthy collection."

But the producers, who had nothing better to do, wanted to make arbitrary changes. I said, "What the hell was the reason for this preview?"

"It turned out OK," recalled Caan. "But I had to fight. I had to make them understand we weren't walking around on our knuckles. It's really hard to hang on to integrity in this business. You sound like some kook because you want to do good work."

"You can see why great actors like (Marlon) Brando don't care any more. They made him that way. They cut him up. They made a great actor like that come to the point where he doesn't give a damn. He's doing this movie now and he hasn't even read the script. What are the numbers, man?"

Caan said his biggest problem as far as the movie business is concerned was that he couldn't say no. "I didn't want to be thought of as a bad guy," he said. "Now, there isn't enough money in the world to make me work with people I don't like. It's terrible to get up at 6 and go into work and spend the day with an idiot."

Another of his big peeves is people telling him what to do. "Take this women's lib thing," Caan said. "Women like to get on me for no reason. They think I'm a big macho thing. I don't care what they do in their personal lives, but they shouldn't dictate to me."

"I don't want to get into a philosophical thing or sound like I'm into Zen or anything," he added, "but, I'm the only one who closes my eyes at night. As long as I haven't hurt anybody or lost self respect, I think I should do what I want. I just don't want to be messed over."

"I like to be honest, but some people can't relate to that," Caan stressed. "I don't lie to anybody."

"Maybe it's all come about with my son. He's everything in my life to me," he said. "Since I want him to be honest, I have to be honest. I also want him to understand that life is for laughs, that he should enjoy himself and not hurt anybody."

CAAN — Actor James Caan places a late night phone call in this scene from "Chapter Two." Recently Caan has strayed from his avowed goal of being the best actor in the world, working two jobs, days on "Chapter Two" and nights editing "Hide In Plain Sight," which he directed. (AP Laserphoto)

Stern Chinese Court Refuses To Grant Divorce To Battered Wife

PEKING (AP) — The husband and the wife sat about six feet apart, never looking at each other as the divorce case proceeded — the husband represented by a co-worker at a construction company and the wife by a woman who works with her in a bank.

There were no lawyers. Nobody used any legal language. It was the second round in the wife's attempt to dissolve their 31/2-year-old marriage, a union torn by beatings and mistreatment but one which this court was to find still viable in a China where the vows of marriage are not taken lightly.

The hearing was opened to Western journalists. Besides the 10 news correspondents, representatives of China's Women's Federation were in the gallery of 100, all of whom had to have tickets.

The wife, Zhou Huixian, 30, and the husband, Han Fali, 35, a truck driver, sat in wooden chairs facing the judges' bench, about 20 feet away.

"I insist on divorce," the wife said at every chance during the proceedings. "I can't take it anymore."

The husband was opposed to the divorce. The wife accused the husband of beating and mistreating her over a question of financial support for her mother, and of drinking and gambling. She sobbed as she spoke of two miscarriages, which she claimed were the result of beatings. The couple have no children.

Her representative, a 25-year-old woman, accused the husband of male chauvinism and a feudal mentality.

There is a Chinese saying about "a broken mirror joined together" — a reunion of husband and wife — but in this case, it is wishful thinking, the wife's advocate said. She acknowledged that divorce in China still is considered ugly and shameful, but added that the wife had no alternative.

Judge Liu Guomao, the court secretary and two "lay assessors," a kind of cross between a juror and a judge, already were seated at the bench when the couple was called into court. The couple's representatives sat at desks at the side and in front of the judges' bench, facing the spectators. All had microphones and remained in their seats when they spoke.

The secretary already had announced court rules — no photographs, no recordings, no note-taking, no spitting.

Although the court already had investigated the case thoroughly — talking to neighbors and others — the judge and assessors brought out the whole case again by questioning the pair.

The story that emerged was that the two were long-time neighbors and even before their marriage in June 1976, Han had helped Zhou Huixian with 6 yuan ($4) a month for two years while she went to school. When they were married, he was making 40 yuan ($27) a month and she 32 yuan ($21).

The wife said they had agreed to give 10 yuan ($6.70) a month to her mother and 5 yuan ($3.35) a month to his, but he said that since he had spent 1,000 yuan ($670) to prepare for their wedding and was 160 yuan ($107) in debt, they should give less to her mother.

The quarreling started three days after the wedding, and the wife said she felt she had been deceived by her husband's attitude before marriage.

Asked about his wife's charges of beatings, Han denied them. Then he admitted to three incidents along these lines, but said they were so minor they couldn't really be called beatings. The marriage still could be patched up, as it had been several times previously, he said.

When the husband was in a hospital last spring with lung and liver diseases, she dutifully cared for him, but one day there was a quarrel in which the husband's younger brother struck her. She then filed for divorce.

The man's representative, Tan Ping-zhao, 45, accused the wife of being inhospitable to her husband by filing for divorce while he still was weak from his illness. She replied that she had known of his ill health even before they were married.

After 2 1/2 hours, the Peking People's Intermediate Court still was not inclined to grant the wife a divorce, already denied by a lower court. It scolded the husband but urged the couple to try for a reconciliation.

The husband promised to control his temper and make the effort.

Woman assessor Li Zhiqing told the wife, "Your love has been through a three-year test and the marriage basis is sound." She cited the wife's concern when her husband was hospitalized and added: "I hope you will treasure your long good relations. He helped you in difficulty. Don't get upset over small matters."

Male assessor Li Hewang told the husband he must admit to the beatings. "It's wrong not to admit them," Li said. "They are immoral conduct, not condoned by the law."

Court workers were told to keep trying to bring the couple back together.

Police Strike, Shaky Economy Blamed For Empty Rooms During Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — As many as 500 of this city's 20,000 hotel rooms may be vacant for Mardi Gras — an unheard of situation in this city where tourism is the second-biggest industry, a hotel association spokesman says.

"Normally, we would have filled up four weeks ago," said Richard Benson, president of the Greater New Orleans Hotel-Motel Association.

"There are more hotel rooms, but I don't think that's the end of it," he said. "There are also other industries competing for the shrinking dollar."

The holiday this Tuesday marks the end of a festive Carnival season and is the last chance for public revelry before the onset of Lent.

Tourism is second only to the port as a source of income in this city, and it is estimated that visitors spend more than $6 million on Mardi Gras.

Benson said the city may be experiencing a hangover from last year's police strike. During that labor trouble, the New Orleans area experienced a 25 percent dropoff in tourist registrations because of the strike. For the midtown hotels, it was more like 40 percent.

Up until a month ago, there were rumblings that police might again walk out this season.

"Mardi Gras is on Tuesday, which is almost like a mid-week situation for anyone planning to visit," Benson said. "It's a total commitment when you decide to come to Mardi Gras. If there's some doubt that the parades may be canceled, you make other plans."

Uneasiness about the economy could be part of the reason for the empty rooms, and the Winter Olympics might also be siphoning off some of the business that Mardi Gras has enjoyed in the past, he said.

"Probably, the meaning to us is that we're going to have to hustle Mardi Gras, where we never had to do that in the past," he said.

Actor Wins Male Comedy Role

NEW YORK (Special) — Dabney Coleman, perhaps best known as the Mayor of Fernwood on TV's "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," has won the crucial, coveted starring male role opposite Jane Fonda, Lily Tomlin and Dolly Parton in "Nine to Five."

The actor will play the cause of the trio's discontent in the comedy-fantasy about three office workers who would like to kill their boss. Bruce Gilbert is producing and Colin Higgins is directing the IPC film, written by Higgins and Patricia Resnick, for release by 20th Century-Fox.

Coleman first created the character of the pompous Merle Jeeter for "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman," the satirical soap which became a cult classic and is currently in late night syndicate rerun. Coleman's Jeeter was also a prominent figure in the Norman Lear spin offs,

"Forever Fernwood" and "Fernwood 2Night."

The starring role in "Nine to Five" marks a major breakthrough in Coleman's film career. Previously he has appeared in such films as "North Dallas Forty," "Cinderella Liberty," "The Other Side of the Mountain" and its sequel. Coleman will also be seen in the upcoming "Nothing Personal" and "Melvin and Howard."

Britain Labors Under Corruption, Violence

LONDON (AP) — Police corruption, army torture, street rioting, government phone tapping, widespread public dishonesty, soaring inflation. That's what Britain is suffering today.

The British used to boast that none of this ever happened here. It does now, and it hurts.

For example:

- Scotland Yard is undergoing its biggest corruption probe into charges that police officers helped criminals plan holdups, framed other criminals to take the rap and took kickbacks from dope rings.
- Some 245 people died in police custody in Britain in the last 10 years. Lawmakers want an inquiry into why not one policeman has been prosecuted.
- A British judicial committee last year found that some detectives in Northern Ireland had beaten up suspects.
- The European Commission of Human Rights ruled four years ago that interrogation techniques previously used by British soldiers against Roman Catholic prisoners in Northern Ireland constituted torture.
- Traditionally, Britain's 56 million people prided themselves on being honest, hardworking, upright, humane and a cut above foreigners. Foreigners might not agree but that's the way the British saw it.
- But the cherished self-image is taking hard knocks in a time of malaise over falling standards of living. As more mud flies, and sticks, the fact that the situation is nowhere near as bad as in many other countries is no compensation for the British.

Inflation at 17.2 percent a year, one of the highest rates in the West, 1.4 million unemployed, representing 6.1 percent of the working population, and falling industrial productivity do nothing to boost decency and honesty.

Nor do falling living standards. Industry Secretary Sir Keith Joseph said last month Britain was around 20th in the living standards league "and going down fast."

Evidence of what newspaper often call the "decay" or "decline" of Britain can be found in all walks of life, public and private. Here are a few.

- Central government: Disclosure that Scotland Yard and intelligence services eavesdrop on thousand of telephone lines each day shocked Britons this month. Electronics expert Duncan Campbell wrote in the weekly New Statesman that "Operation Tinkerbell" took in even friendly embassies, trade unions, journalists, shipping companies, lawmakers and visiting foreign politicians and extended to break-ins to install bugging devices. British authorities didn't deny the charges. They simply clammed up.
- Campbell told The Associated Press

in an interview last week: "A number of intelligence sources concur that all embassies are phone-tap targets, including the Americans. I know someone who has seen intercepted American traffic, someone I believe. The Iraqi ambassador has six telephones, all bugged as well as tapped."

- Violent crime: Armed robberies in England and Wales jumped in five years from 539 a year to 1,234. Robbery and violent crimes in London have almost trebled in a year and London with 7,282 offenses for every 100,000 residents is the crime capital of the country.
- Strikes lost 26 million working days last year, the most since the general strike of 1926. Strikers are becoming more hardened. Members of the National Union of Public Employees last winter left the dead unburied and turned away patients from hospitals.
- Public dishonesty: Railroad stations have notices that read: "Fare dodging costs a staggering 13 million pounds ($30 million) a year," and "Watch your luggage all the time." London Transport says fare dodging on the subway costs 6 million pounds ($13.8 million) a year.
- Shoplifting costs an estimated 500 million pounds ($1.15 billion) a year. The Oxford Street Traders Association representing stores on London's main shopping street put their own shoplifting losses each year at 25 million pounds ($57.5

Glasgow University lecturer Jason Ditton estimates that milkmen and other deliverymen, waiters, barmen and other service workers bilk customers of 1.5 billion pounds ($3.45 billion) a year through overcharging, short-changing and other rackets.

- Fraud losses on the 19 billion pounds (nearly $44 billion) the state hands out in social security payments each year officially are estimated at 50 million pounds ($117 million). Critics say it's closer to 400 million pounds ($920 million). Inspectors found that one man drawing benefits had a Rolls Royce, two other cars, a building firm and a house.
- Tax evasion has reached a stage where economists speak of a multi-million pound "black economy" unknown to the taxman. It covers building, transport and many other industries and always involves payment in cash or kind.
- Drinking: Britons drink almost twice as much alcohol as they did 30 years ago. The Royal College of Psychiatrists called the resulting surge in alcoholism as "an appalling insult to the nation's health." Teen-age drunkenness has almost doubled in 12 years to 4,805 convictions a year.
- Divorce: Britons have one of the highest divorce rates in the world — one divorce for every two weddings. Princess Margaret and her husband Lord Snowdon divorced in 1978.

Tito's Condition Unimproved, Doctors Report

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito, gravely ill with heart and kidney problems, spent a restless night in the hospital and asked a visitor Sunday, "What's new in the world?" a source said.

Doctors said, however, there was no improvement in the 87-year-old Tito's condition. He is hospitalized in critical condition and his chances of recovery are regarded as slim.

Round-the-clock construction work continued at a location that well-informed Yugoslav sources said might be used as a temporary burial site. The site, a Belgrade museum, contains mementos collected by Tito during his 35 years as Yugoslavia's unchallenged leader.

The sources said Tito could be buried at the museum until a more permanent resting place could be built. One spot might be a Danube River park where Tito invited visiting dignitaries to plant trees as a mark of friendship, one source said.

In parks surrounding the museum, women in headscarves raked leaves and hoed the streets.

War-time songs celebrating Tito's communist partisans were played on television Sunday, and editors of the Belgrade daily Politika Kspres dropped a humor section from the Sunday edition.

Tito spent a peaceful night, according to a report issued by the eight doctors treating him, and the official news agen-

JOSIP BROZ TITO Gravely ill

It was not immediately clear whether Slovenian President Viktor Abelj or Slovenian Communist Party chief France Popit, Tito's latest visitors, had the conversation with him. Four other top Communist Party and government officials were reported to have visited Tito on Saturday.

Usually reliable sources reported Tito was conscious Saturday, but doctors not involved in his case said the aged leader most likely was alert only part of the time.

Doctors have been treating, apparently with little success, the heart and kidney problems that developed after Tito's left leg was amputated Jan. 20.

The latest medical bulletin said: "The general state of health of the President of the Republic Josip Broz Tito is without change. Comrade President spent the night peacefully. Intensive measures of treatment are being continued."

Terse bulletins have been issued regularly from the medical center where the fiercely independent Communist leader was originally hospitalized Jan. 12 with circulatory problems.

Physicians have issued a short report once daily since Tito's condition began to deteriorate a week ago, but have not gone into detail about the medication or "intensive medical treatments" they are using to try to the Yugoslav leader's life.

Rumors have circulated for days that doctors have been using a kidney dialysis machine to cleanse Tito's blood.

In a development apparently related to Tito's condition, Yugoslav officials reminded Western reporters of a Serbian flag, never invoked before Tito's illness, banning man-on-the-street interviews.

Photographers were required to get written permission to go about their work, and sites permitted to be photographed were restricted to normal tourist areas in the capital.

Israel To Raise Flag At First Arab Embassy

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — A nine-member Israeli delegation led by Charge d'Affaires Yosef Hadass arrived in Cairo Sunday to raise the Star of David atop the Jewish state's first embassy in the Arab world.

The flag will be hoisted over a two-story villa in the plush Dokki district at 10:30 a. m. today, thus opening a new era of relations between the two former Middle East antagonists.

Hadass, a Syrian-born career diplomat with a doctor's degree in international relations, led a nine-member team, made up of two diplomats and seven administrative personnel.

The Israeli military C-130 transport which brought the Israeli mission also carried 20 Israeli journalists, who will be covering today's embassy opening ceremony.

Before his departure from Tel Aviv, Hadass said the Israeli diplomats should work to forge a new relationship, based on daily contact, between the Egyptian and Israeli peoples.

Strict security measures have been enforced around the nine-room embassy, located at 23 Mohieddin Abul-Ez Street, near a swank shooting club.

Monday's 15-minute ceremony will consist of two events: The raising of the flag on the second floor balcony of the embassy, and the unveiling of the sign at the gate.

Streets around the embassy will be cordoned off for security reasons, while the ceremony is underway. Police snipers reportedly have been posted on rooftops. A closed circuit television network is being installed to reveal to guards inside what is happening outside the embassy.

The Israelis are paying about $4,500 in monthly rent for the white-painted villa, which includes three small rooms on the ground floor and six rooms on the second floor.

The Egyptian mission to Tel Aviv, led by charge d'affaires Mohammed El-Khazendar, will travel to Israel Wednesday.

The exchange of ambassadors — Israel's Eliahu Ben-Elissar and Egypt's Saad Mortada — will take place next Sunday, Feb. 24.

Credentials will be presented to President Anwar Sdat in Cairo and President Yitzak Navon in Jerusalem Feb. 26.

But, in presenting his credentials to Navon, Mortada will include a document stating that Cairo does not recognize Jerusalem as Israel's capital.
