'Unbowed' Young Quits U.N. Post

Black Leaders Outraged, Hint Young 'Fall Guy'

By The Associated Press

BLACK LEADERS and activists expressed outrage and disappointment Wednesday at the resignation of U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, warning that President Carter may have "sealed the coffin shut" on his chances for re-election.

Young, under fire for holding secret meetings with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said he was resigning "with no ill feeling ... but not many regrets."

He said his resignation, which was accepted by Carter, was his own idea. But black leaders said they wondered if Young acted under orders.

"I think the country has just lost one of its most competent and ablest civil servants," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson as he arrived in Norfolk, Va., for a convention of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. "There are a lot of questions that need to be answered. One of them is whether or not it was a forced resignation and also whether Andy was the fall guy."

In a statement, Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he regretted Young's decision and said Young should not be made a "sacrificial lamb for circumstances beyond his control."

Others wondered whether Carter, who depended heavily on votes of blacks in his election in 1976, may have broken his already fragile hold on those votes.

"I had seen Andrew Young as a symbol of hope in the administration," said Tyrone Brooks of Atlanta, a community organizer and former SCLC field director. "I felt he represented the only shred of hope Carter had of being elected in 1980 because he pretty much assured Carter another chance of getting the black vote, which is the only way he could possibly win.

"This is going to assure a Republican takeover in 1980 unless Teddy Kennedy is convinced to seek the Democratic nomination. Carter sealed the coffin shut on the black vote — his only hope for re-election," said Brooks.

Young's tendency to speak his mind was praised by friends and political enemies.

Resignation Stirred By PLO Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Andrew Young quit Wednesday as ambassador to the United Nations, saying he is unbowed, not at all bloodied — but "extremely impatient with the slow, plodding" process of diplomacy.

Under fire for holding an unauthorized discussion with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Young offered his resignation after meeting separately with President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance.

But Young said quitting was his own idea, adding "I really don't feel a bit sorry for a thing I have done."

White House press secretary Jody Powell, choking with emotion, said the president had accepted Young's resignation "with deep regret."

Stay Until Replaced

Asked how long it would take to find a successor, a White House official, asking not to be named, said he didn't know.

(Related Stories, Page 2, Sec. A)

"We'll move expeditiously on it, but with due care and deliberate consultation," the official said. He said Carter and Young "have had and still have a warm personal relationship."

Asked whether Carter would have fired Young if the ambassador hadn't offered to resign, the official said only, "That didn't arise."

Young's discussion with a PLO representative at the United Nations violated longstanding U.S. foreign policy. That policy has been to withhold recognition of the PLO and avoid substantive talks with its representatives until the PLO accepts the right of the state of Israel to exist.

No Recognition Implied

"Exploration of possibilities does not mean recognition," Young told reporters. "I don't think conversations imply recognition ... I find that it's very difficult to do the things that I think are in the interest of the country and also maintain the standards of protocol and diplomacy that you and many people in the nation make us adhere to ....

"And I guess, given the choice, I have felt that I could best serve the country by asking President Carter if he could accept my resignation.

"I do so with no ill feeling ... but not many regrets ... Given the same situation, I would do it again," Young asserted.

Young, a longtime political ally of Carter, said he would campaign for the president's re-election. He said he would "pursue my interests in foreign and domestic policies as a private citizen."

Young said he'd been a longtime supporter of the Israeli cause, but he refused to apologize for the June 26 meeting in New York with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO observer at the United Nations.

Miles Of Texas Coast Blanketed By Oil Slick

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Thick patches of runaway Mexican crude oil washed onto South Padre Island Wednesday night, streaking nearly three miles of the multi-million dollar resort beaches with the worst coating yet.

Earlier Wednesday, the gooey globs of brownish-black muck covered more than five miles of white sand beaches in the Padre Island National Seashore on the northern end of the 100-mile-long island.

Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jim Paskewich said late Wednesday night that the two-inch-thick patches of oil had covered an area of the beach nearly three feet wide. He said there was still oil in the surf and it appeared the damage might look worse in the morning.

"It appears right now that it will be north of the hotel beaches, but it will be close to them. It will be very noticeable, that is for sure."

Coast Guard officials said Wednesday night a virtually continuous patch of oil stretched 60 miles north from the southern tip of Padre Island. That oil slick, which was about 100 yards wide, loomed about a mile to three miles off the shoreline Wednesday evening.

Navy reconnaissance flights Tuesday found oil 360 miles east of Corpus Christi and about 120 miles south of Morgan City, La., which is about 60 miles southwest of New Orleans.

But Coast Guard spokesman Jim McGranachan said a surveillance flight Wednesday identified numerous sheens north of New Orleans that were associated with either sargassum seaweed or offshore oil wells.

Spill Questioned

"This observation has raised the question of whether Tuesday's report ... was actually associated with the Campeche oil spill. We will attempt to resolve this question Thursday by flying Tuesday's mission at a lower altitude.

"Before we can say for sure it is part of the Mexican oil, we have to show that it connects with the other oil," said McGranachan.

Despite the damage to the beach's appearance, government scientists said that without the natural barrier the islands offer, the entire Texas coast would be in "very big trouble right now."

Could Get Worse

The multimillion-dollar tourist industry on the beach has been spared most of the oily assault. But scientist John Robinson said thousands of square miles of the Gulf of Mexico south of Texas are covered by the oil and said the situation in Texas could get much worse.

"Without the barrier islands, we couldn't protect the very important areas behind them. We'd be in very big trouble right now," said Robinson, scientific coordinator of the oil slick task force.

Laguna Madre, which runs between Padre Island and the mainland, and the other lush bays and lagoons along the Texas coast harbor numerous species of rare birds and wildlife and are breeding grounds for shrimp and other key commercial marine species. There are only three entrances — the widest 1,550 feet — into the Laguna Madre.

Lancaster Challenges Road, Bridge Funding

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

STILL disgruntled with county road and bridge fund allocations, Commissioner Jim Lancaster has asked Criminal District Attorney John Montford to investigate the legality of the allocation procedures now used.

Montford said Wednesday that no criminal allegations are involved.

Lancaster voted against the 1979 budget because of what he said were inequities in road and bridge fund allocations among the four precincts in Lubbock County. He declined comment on the investigation Wednesday.

Montford, whose duties also include those normally assigned to a county attorney, said Wednesday that his attorney for civil law, Yvonne Faulks, had been assigned to matter.

Proposed allocations for 1980 are $181,192 for Precinct No. 1, which Commissioner Edgar Chance serves; $231,808 for Precinct No. 2, where Coy Biggs of Slaton is commissioner; $279,515 for Lancaster's Precinct No. 3; and $279,386 for Commissioner Alton Brazell's Precinct No. 4.

Protested Last Year

Lancaster protested the allocations last year and said he might go outside the commissioners court with his complaint because he felt the road and bridge funds should be divided according to the miles of county roads each precinct must maintain.

The money last year was divided about equally with each precinct getting about $250,000.

Lancaster has argued in commissioners court deliberatiions that he has 30 percent of county road mileage in Lubbock County and should have 30 percent of the funds while the other precincts are allocated money on the same basis.

Chance has 220 miles or 20 percent, Biggs 298 miles or 27 percent, Lancaster 338 miles or 30 percent and Brazell 251 miles or 23 percent.

Mrs. Faulks told The Avalanche-Journal the investigation should be completed by early next week.

She said the statutes apparently leave road and bridge fund allocations mostly to the discretion of the commissioners court.

"There's nothing in the law about it having to be tied to mileage," she said. "It's pretty much left to the commissioners as to what is allocated in each precinct with regard to the needs of roads and bridges in that particular precinct.

Gregory Continues Jail Hunger Strike

METTER, Ga. (AP) — Comedian Dick Gregory was in the fifth day of a hunger strike Wednesday in the Candler County jail after his arrest during a protest of conditions at the Georgia state prison near Reidsville.

Regular jail meals are being given to the civil rights activist but Gregory said he is not eating them, Sheriff T. J. Clifton said Wednesday.

"We're feeding him twice a day at 8 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Whether or not he's eating, I don't know. He says he's not eating but I can't verify that," the sheriff said.

Gregory, who was among seven persons arrested Saturday night when they made a second attempt to cross a bridge leading to the state prison, has said he will go without food or drink for his entire 20-day sentence.

Sixty-seven persons, including Gregory, had been arrested at the bridge that afternoon and were later released.

LIMIT RAISED

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with a possible September shutdown of the food stamp program, President Carter raised the spending limit for the federal assistance program Wednesday by $621 million.

Briefed City Lawyer Impressed By Carter Re-Election Chances

By PHILIP BRASHER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

ONLY THE nation's energy problem can stymie President Carter's 1980 re-election bid, a Lubbock attorney claims, following a briefing Tuesday at the White House.

"Any other president at any other time with (Carter's) accomplishments would have no problem being elected to another term," Harvey Morton said. "He's just got a real tough problem with the oil situation."

Morton, a member of the state Democratic Executive Committee, attended Tuesday's meeting along with about 200 other Texas Democrats invited by the White House.

The Democratic leaders, including Lt. Gov. William Hobby, Texas AFL-CIO President Harry Hubbard and former attorney general John Hill, attended several morning sessions with Cabinet members and White House aides before the hour-long afternoon visit with Carter.

"When you see in a compact way what the issues are, you feel impressed with what we've (the administration) done in three years," Morton said, after hearing from Zbigniew Brzezinski, Cyrus Vance, G. William Miller, Ray Marshall and Hamilton Jordan, all of whom defended and explained Carter's domestic and foreign policy.

In the opening half-hour session, Brzezinski told the Texans the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now before the Senate is vital to American defense, Morton said.

"The only cheating," Morton quoted Brzezinski as saying, "(the Soviet Union) can do that we won't know about is small cheating" — cheating not worth the gamble of getting caught.

Impressed By Aides

All of Carter's aides and advisers were impressive, Morton said.

"They were good people — intelligent people who can communicate," Morton said of the Cabinet members and White House aides, several of whom were involved in the recent Administration shake-up.

Carter later told the group he made the changes to rid the Cabinet and White House of disloyal members.

"There were problems with staff members in on decision-making who weren't sticking to the decision," Morton said Carter explained.

"He had to have people who would stick to decisions. Everyone likes to

Officials, Lawyers Mull Appeal Court's Ruling

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

PUBLIC school officials ended a 90-minute closed consultation Wednesday night with their attorneys only to say they still do not know what the district court will require of parties involved in Lubbock's desegregation case.

Trustees and administrators met with school district attorneys Tom Johnson and Charles Cobb in executive session to discuss a recent Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decision on the district's limited integration plan.

On Aug. 9, four months after oral arguments were heard in the case, the three-panel judge remanded the case back to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward for further findings.

The ruling instructed Woodward to determine whether the school district deliberately drew attendance zones — thus influencing housing patterns — to preserve segregated schools.

Board president Monte Hasie said following Wednesday's session that school officials "don't know yet what the court will require of us. We don't know yet if we'll go into court. We need to get some direction from the courts."

Johnson said some sort of trial may be ordered, but "probably not a full-blown trial. It would be more limited." He said he has not talked to Woodward since receiving his his copy of the appeals court ruling.

Woodward ruled in 1978 that only nine of the city's minority schools were identifiable racially because of deliberate segregative acts by the school board. He said the other 13 schools became minority-dominated because of racial housing patterns.

The appeals court judges, however, want to know whether those deliberate acts influenced the housing patterns to result in segregation in the 13 schools.

Johnson and Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said they believe the 1977 district court hearings addressed the question of the housing patterns. "But it may take some additional findings," Johnson added. Although he said he knows the direction the school district's arguments will take, he would not reveal any details.

Three California Firefighters Die

NIPOMO, Calif. (AP) — Three firefighters were killed and two others were injured Wednesday battling a 1,000-acre grass and brush fire on the Santa Barbara-San Luis Obispo county line, officials said.

"Three firefighters were killed fighting a fire," said Peggy Dewane of the California Department of Forestry in San Luis Obispo County. "We are not releasing their names until we notify their families."

Front, Moist Air Boost Rain Chances

TEMPERATURES will be warm again today, skies will be partly cloudy, and forecasters predict a slight chance for thundershowers today.

The chance for rain, which forecasters say is 20 percent today and 30 percent tonight, is enhanced by the combination of moist southerly air clashing with and a dissipating stationary front across the Panhandle.

The mercury will climb to near 90 for today's high and will drop to the upper 60s by tonight. Winds will be south-southeasterly at 10 to 15 mph.

In the extended outlook for West Texas, forecasters expect scattered showers and thunderstorms with no important temperature changes Saturday through Monday.

Skywatchers in Floydada, Muleshoe, Plainview and Matador reported traces of rainfall from Wednesday's widely scattered showers across the South Plains. Thunderstorms also roamed the Panhandle and across the eastern plains of New Mexico.

Across the state Wednesday, summertime showers and thunderstorms also were scattered over east and northeast Texas, in the Houston and San Antonio areas and near El Paso. Partly cloudy skies stretched in a band across much of the central portions of the state.

The 4 p.m. temperature extremes Wednesday ranged from a rainy 68 degrees at El Paso to 98 degrees at both Wichita Falls and McAllen.

Today's forecast is calling for scattered afternoon showers over southern, northeastern and eastern portions of Texas.

Young's Career In U.N. Punctuated By Heated Controversy, Statements

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Andrew Young, the United Nations has been a pulpit from which he has preached his often iconoclastic views about world affairs to the world.

This week's furor about Young's meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization is the latest in a series of storms which have raged around him since he became Jimmy Carter's ambassador to the world organization.

Even more damaging than the fact of Young's unauthorized meeting last month with the PLO representative is the fact that he did not tell the entire story about the meeting to the State Department, say officials there who are sympathetic to Young.

They feel believe Young's increasing amount of gaffes have begun to outweigh his major contribution to administration foreign policy: a greater appreciation of and sensitivity towards the ideas and aspirations of Third World countries, particularly in Africa.

Young, a former chief aide to the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., was a member of the House of Representatives from Georgia when Carter asked him to accept the U.N. job. He had been Carter's most prominent black supporter during the campaign.

Ironically, Young was credited during the campaign with saving Carter from the consequences of a verbal gaffe, when Carter said he saw nothing wrong with neighborhoods preserving their "ethnic purity."

Young assured black voters the statement did not indicate racism by Carter, and Carter won the election with overwhelming black support.

Young's own gaffes began soon after he became ambassador.

He accused former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of abandoning Great Britain in its efforts to achieve black majority rule in what is now Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

And he told the British Broadcasting Corp. the British "almost invented racism" and were "a little chicken" about accepting that fact.

That prompted a British demand for an apology, which Young tendered. In a brief while, however, he had accused four former presidents, the Soviet Union and Sweden of racism.

Young later explained that "as I use the term, I'm a racist. I don't think you can be born in the 20th century and not be contaminated by race." He said he meant the term to mean insensitivity to the problems of other races.

Perhaps, he said, "ethnocentricity" would be more accurate, "but no one would understand it."

Young caused headlines in another area when he said the Cuban troops in Angola were a "stabilizing influence," despite U.S. policy calling for their removal.

He counseled those who were upset not to be "paranoid about a few hundred, or even a few thousand communists" in Africa. Later, however, he said the Cuban presence might lead to a new type of colonialism.

Young's iconoclastic bent was demonstrated many other occasions.

He predicted the Ayatollah Khomeini would be considered a saint someday. He said the executions in Iran did not seem much different to him than the execution of a murderer in Florida. And when the Soviets were trying political prisoners like Anatoly Shcharansky, Young said he thought there were political prisoners in the United States as well.

His wife, Jean, once told an interviewer Young was first and always a minister. His calling led him into the civil rights movement, and then to the United Nations where he had an "international congregation," she said.

His outspoken candor won him some friends and respect, particularly in Africa. The Nigerian ambassador to the United Nations, Leslie Harriman, said Young was "singularly responsible for a new bridge between the United States and black Africa."

But Young's comments have increasingly disturbed professionals in the State Department and the White House where public statements are supposed to be delivered in deliberate, carefully chosen words.

At first, Young's remarks were greeted with cheerful tolerance. But as they continued, he was reprimanded several times by the White House for his remarks. In mid-July, the president reportedly chastized Young at a Cabinet meeting.

Nonetheless, Young has been valued for his political ties to the black community. As late as last October, Carter told the Congressional Black Caucus: "As long as I'm president and Andy Young is willing to be there, he'll be the U.N. ambassador."

'Dumb' Boston Terrier Named Ugliest Dog In New England

BOSTON (UPI) -You'll get no argument from Vera Mulvehill that Pudge, her sleweyed, crooked-toothed, bowlegged Boston terrier, is the ugliest dog in New England.

Pudge was accorded that dubious honor earlier this week by the Boston Sunday Globe, which selected Pudge from neaaly 100 entries in a contest to find the "undisputed ugliest dog of New England."

"This guy is as dumb as he looks," Mrs. Mulvehill, of Norwood, said. "He has been a pain in the neck ever since we got him. He's like a bull in a china shop, but the kids adore him. He's so ugly it's almost beautiful when he smiles. Actually, it's kind of a sideways sneer."

The dog's official owners are Mrs. Mulvehill's sons, Patrick, 12, and Christopher, 19.

She said the family, which already had a Boston Terrier named Buttons, acquired Pudge when the boys spotted an advertisement in their local newspaper for a new litter from the same breeder who sold them Buttons.

Although the dog was advertised as a pure-bred, Mrs. Mulvehill doesn't believe it.

"There was someone else in the woodpile on this one," she said. "The vet thinks he's part French Bulldog."

For winning the contest, Pudge received an almost life-sized red plastic fire hydrant and a T-shirt reading "I am New England's ugliest dog." Patrick Mulvehill received a matching shirt reading "I am New England's ugliest dog owner."

Large rubies of superior quality are among the most valuable of gems, exceeding even diamonds in price. The Etruscan Shrew, only 3 inches in length, is the smallest adult mammal.

Religious Conference Offers Position Before Resignation

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Southern Christian Leadership Conference offered Andrew Young a job Wednesday, even before he resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

In an address which officially began the 22nd annual meeting of the conference, its president, the Rev. Joseph Lowery, gave unqualified support to Young.

Then Lowery told a standing, cheering crowd, "All I have to say about Andy is that we have an opening and if he's tired of being hassled, I say, 'Come on home.'"

Later Wednesday, Young resigned.

The "opening" to which Lowery referred was created in March, when conference directors fired Hosea Williams as executive director of the civil rights organization founded by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Young, who was scheduled to address the convention Wednesday night, resigned while being criticized for an unauthorized meeting with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

President Carter has stated it is U.S. policy not to deal directly with the PLO until the Arab organization recognizes Israel's right to exist.

Lowery said that while it is true Israel has a problem, "we... recognize that the Palestinians also have a problem."

"If there is a controversy between the Israelis the PLO and the United States, how are we ever going to solve it if we don't talk?"

Addressing another subject, Lowery said the recent stepped-up activity by the Ku Klux Klan "is the worst symptom of an increased racism in the United States."

"We won many battles in the past two decades, but the war is not over.... We know now we cannot depend on presidents, Congress or state legislatures to initiate those programs we need. We must fight for them ourselves in the boardrooms of industry, in the halls of Congress and in the streets of the nation."

He also called for abolition of the death penalty, a moratorium on development of nuclear energy, involvement of minorities in alternative energy development, a black land reclamation program and nationalization of the oil industry.

Lowery warned the Democratic Party not to be complacent about black support, saying the Carter administration and Democratic-controlled Congress had not addressed the economic problems of blacks.

"The Republicans have a golden opportunity to add color to the elephant," he said. "The Democrats should not assume we'll always be here, and the Republicans should not write us off as being in or out of anybody's pocket."

Jackson Urges Sorority To Support Ambassador

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson urged an 80,000-member national sorority of black college women Wednesday to deluge President Carter with telegrams supporting U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young.

Later Wednesday, Young resigned.

"We must stand with Andrew Young as he engages in daring leadership," Jackson told about 6,000 delegates to the national convention of Delta Sigma Theta Inc.

"Andrew Young's integrity is beyond question — his intent is sound; his logic is clear," he said.

The plea drew a roar of approval from women who packed a hotel ballroom to hear the Chicago civil rights leader.

Young was criticized for secretly meeting with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization — despite the official Carter policy of refusing to deal with the organization unless it first agrees Israel has a right to exist.

Jackson said Jews would suffer a political backlash in the United States if Young were to be fired because of the meeting, because the action would free suppressed Arab support.

In a news conference just before his talk, Jackson said the ambassador, once the right-hand man to civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., was following Carter's overall policy of human rights when he met with the PLO.

"Andrew Young knows there can be no final peace in the Middle East that does not include all the people, and that also means three million Palestinians," he said.

"Any removal of Andrew Young would have world impact, not merely black impact.

"I would not want to tie this in with some threat to the president, because there has been no indication he will remove the ambassador."

Levelland Man Gets Life-Saving Award

But Stegall doesn't.

"I don't think it was coincidental at all," Stegall said. "A lot of credit goes to God."

But the American Red Cross presented Stegall with a Certificate of Merit in a ceremony Wednesday morning for his actions that November morning when he saved the life of 15-month-old Adam Morris, coincidence or no.

On Nov. 5, 1978, Stegall saw Mrs. Jack Morris run into the street carrying a baby boy who was not breathing. Stegall and his family were stopped at a signal light on College Avenue, en route to church.

Instinctively following instructions he had received in a Red Cross first aid training class in March 1977, Stegall hit the child in the back to dislodge any object in the respiratory system, before beginning the life saving technique.

"The first breath was hard, so there must have been some blockage. But I had to force it, or let the baby die," he said.

While a friend transported Stegall and the child to the hospital, resuscitation was continued.

"I worked with the baby about 5 minutes and finally, when we turned into the hospital parking lot, he started crying," reflected Stegall.

Upon learning the infant was safe, Stegall went to church almost 1 1/2 hours late.

"Everyone was praying, and I don't think there's such a thing as too much prayer," said Stegall, a member of the First Assembly of God Church in Levelland.

Two weeks later, Stegall and his wife, Anita, heard a broadcast Mrs. Morris had called in to a local radio station, telling of Stegall's action.

"That's where things started rolling," he said.

Charlie Miller, district foreman of AMCO, also heard the broadcast and told Red Cross officials of Stegall's action.

Nine months later, David Stegall was standing on stage as the recipient of a Certificate of Merit, an award only 30 people in the nation have received the last year.

Rep. Kent Hance presented the award, which was signed by President Jimmy Carter.

Along with the credit Mrs. Morris gives Stegall for saving her son's life, said master of ceremonies Buddy Moore during the presentation, "she gave Levelland, Texas, credit for her child's life."

Mrs. Moris, who is formerly of Michigan, said if she had run into the street there crying for help, she would have been ignored."

Despite their gratitude, the Morris family was unable to attend the presentation. The family moved to Cherokee several months ago.

Looking back to that morning, Stegall, a seven-year resident of Levelland,said, "What if I had come up and not known what to do? I would have had to let the baby die."

The AMCO employe received his initial training in a an eight-hour course more than two years ago. Stegall explained that a life-saving course is offered to all employees of the company and that they "pay us on company time."

AMCO also conducts safety meetings once a month for all of its employees, said Stegall, who explained the company "wants its workers to be able to help a fellow employee."

Orientation for students more than 25 years old who are returning to Texas Tech University this fall after a prolonged break from higher education will be from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Sunday in Building X-15 across from the Municipal Coliseum.

The orientation program will be presented by the Continuum, a service of the office of student life for students returning to the academic environment. The program is designed to facilitate reentry into college and includes instruction and help in library use, study skills, academic counseling and referrals, and career counseling. It also includes a special registration for "first-timers."

Those who attend the orientation, preferably, should have registration materials with them. The registration process will be outlined in detail, and a slide presentation will further explain the enrollment procedure. A question-and-answer period will explain academic information, including add-drop and parking procedures, and offered night courses.

TRUCK HITS EAGLE

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An injured female bald eagle was shipped by state Wildlife Division officials to the University of Minnesota Wednesday following a freak accident. Division official Dick Pierce said the eagle was injured Tuesday evening when struck by a truck on Ohio 37 near LaRue. Pierce said the eagle had been eating a groundhog carcass on the road when a truck driven by Don Williamson of LaRue frightened it into flight. Pierce said despite the driver's attempt to avoid the eagle, the bird, trying to carry the carcass, flew into a truck mirror. Williamson notified state officials, who picked up the eagle.

City Budget's Plus, Minus

IN TOTAL DOLLARS, the general fund budget prepared by City Manager Larry Cunningham and tentatively approved by the City Council shows commendable fiscal restraint.

In terms of things the budget will do, or leave undone, there is time for a shifting of priorities if public sentiment or further Council study so dictate before it is finally adopted.

Council members themselves split wide open in this week's debate over whether more money should be spent for such environmental concerns as weed mowing, brush pickup and park maintenance.

GENERAL FUND expenditures of $28.4 million are proposed. This is the part of the City budget that pays for day-to-day municipal operations and services.

This is an increase of $2.3 million, or 8.8 percent, over last year. While large, the increase is below the rate of inflation. No tax rate increase would be necessary, despite a $1.6 million revenue loss because of local and state-mandated tax reductions.

Neither does the budget call for the use of federal revenue sharing funds, whereas this year's used $1 million of such funds. Property reappraisals and increased sales tax revenues made increased spending possible without a tax rate boost.

Councilmen propose to give employes a 7 percent cost-of-living pay raise (Cunningham had proposed 9 percent) on top of the raises they will get under the merit pay plan.

Five more uniformed policemen at a cost of $106,845, improved park maintenance costing $95,000, four more data processing employes at a cost of $88,692 and increased transit system subsidies of $74,564 are among the budget increases.

COUNCILMAN Bill McAlister argued unsuccessfully for reinstatement of brush pickup, eliminated in an economy move last year.

Councilman Carolyn Jordan angrily killed suggestions that more money be budgeted to get weeds cut for citizens who are, in her words, "too lazy and don't give a damn."

Unfortunately, those people who aren't lazy and do care are the ones who suffer because neighbors don't cut their weeds or haul off their brush. The City is the only entity to whom citizens can turn for help and if it refuses to help there is no viable recourse.

With a little creative effort, City Hall could come up with a plan for improving the urban environment at minimum cost to the taxpayer and we urge it to do so.

The tentatively adopted City budget should not be viewed as a finished product, but only as the starting point for further study, discussion and alterations after a public hearing.

AN EDITORIAL:

Brutality--Time For The Facts

A FEDERAL LAWSUIT charging the City of Philadelphia with allowing its police to practice brutality and harassment may help bring to a head the volatile issue of police-community relations across the country.

Widespread allegations of police brutality, typically from minority groups, have been voiced. The typical reaction from police administrators has been something akin to that voiced by Philadelphia Mayor Frank L. Rizzo: "Hogwash."

Somewhere in between those poles of opinion probably rests the truth. And it is time that the truth were out.

"SYSTEMATIC citizen abuse and brutality" has been practiced by Philadelphia police, Assistant U.S. Atty. Gen. Drew S. Days III alleged in filing the unprecedented lawsuit against the city.

"We think we have ample evidence of intimidation of people by Philadelphia policemen and the cover-up of this intimidation by their superiors," he added.

"I've never seen any (brutality)," Rizzo responded. "Policemen overreact sometimes, yes. But so does a newspaper reporter overreact. So does the President. So does the Justice Department."

Long known for his tough stand against lawbreakers, and an advocate of strict law and order, Rizzo was not surprised by the federal allegations, which resulted from a year-long investigation.

An average of 1,100 brutality complaints are filed each year against the Philadelphia police, the lawsuit asserts. Similar investigations are underway in Houston, Memphis and Mobile, Ala.

IT IS DIFFICULT for the average citizen to have any inkling as to the legitimacy of most police brutality complaints.

Allegations usually are judged on the basis of (1) who is making them and (2) each person's own frame of reference or bias for or against the police.

Too often, such complaints appear to be registered more for their publicity value, or to incite racial unrest for political or social reform purposes, than for any other reason.

SUCH COMPLAINTS themselves, in other words, are a way to harass police, undermine public confidence in them and make their job more difficult.

This obscures the certainty that there are men and women in police uniforms who use more force than is necessary and who "hassle" police characters and/or minorities out of pure meanness.

The danger in the Philadelphia lawsuit is that it will "tilt" the pendulum too far toward the extremist policeman or the extremist police baiter rather than restore a needed balance to the system.

EXECUTION

If It Works, Uncle Sam Just Won't Support It

(Art Buchwald is being re-evaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.)

WASHINGTON—Despite everything you hear about the government, there still is plenty of money around for projects.

The only trouble is, you can't get the money if you have a plan that works. You must have one that no one is quite sure about.

A vice president of a university system in the Northeast told me about this the other day when he applied for money for a program to run a summer school for students who needed extra help to get into college.

He told me the meeting went something like this:

"NOW, MR. Haas, from our records it appears that you're applying for a grant of $500,000 to run a summer school project for students hoping to keep up in college this fall."

"That's correct. We did it last year, and it was tremendously successful. We only had a dropout rate of six percent."

"Oh, dear me. Then this is not a pilot project."

"No, it's not. We know it works."

"What do you mean what a shame?"

"WELL, IF this were a pilot project, the government would be happy to finance it. We'd be very interested in knowing what could come of it. But we can't very well give money to something that's been proven, can we?"

"Why the hell not?"

"Mr. Haas, we're very willing to fund any educational program, providing it's iffy. But we can't throw money away on things that work. Congress would have a fit."

"I still don't understand why."

"I'm trying to explain it to you. The government has no trouble getting money from Congress for study programs.

"It doesn't matter how much it costs to study a program, we can get the funds.

"But once we ask for money for a program that has been proven successful, Congress will be committed to it, and nobody wants that, do they?"

"SUPPOSE I request the money for a study project. Could I get it then?"

"But you already told me that it had worked last summer. There's no sense having a study of it if it works."

"I'm not trying to be difficult, but this is a very important project. We are taking in people this year who are going to find it tough sledding to keep up in the fall unless they have some remedial work."

"It's not our fault that your program worked last summer, Mr. Haas. Had it failed, we would have given you a blank check to try it a different way. But we're not here to dole out taxpayers' money for programs that have succeeded.

"JUST THE other day a superintendent of a public school system in the Midwest tried a visual reading program for his state which turned into a disaster.

"The machines didn't work, the teachers couldn't handle them, and the students lost interest after the first five minutes.

"Did we cut him off? We did not. We gave him another $10 million to find out why he failed. And we're ready to pour in another $10 million if he doesn't come up with answers. The whole department is excited by the failure."

"Is there any possible way of getting the $500,000, knowing what you know about my program?"

"I hardly think so, Mr. Haas. You've made a mess of things as it is. Our motto in the government is: Nothing fails like success."

Government officials are worried that gasahol will be converted to illegal whiskey. The slogan now is, "Drink Or Drive."

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

EVANS

WASHINGTON—A few hours before President Carter declared over prime time television July 24 that "I do not attribute at all the change in Nicaragua to Cuba," teletype wires into the Pentagon clattered out another link in the chain of evidence to the contrary.

The pilot of a U.S. Air Force C-130 in Managua that day transmitted to Washington this most interesting travel note: Members of the Sandinista junta governing Nicaragua were seen piling into a Cubana Airlines plane enroute to Havana.

A few days earlier, a U.S. intelligence report teletyped into Washington reported an even more fascinating detail. A ranking official of DGI—the Cuban secret police—played a key role in masterminding the Sandinista takeover.

Julian Lopez, DGI's chief of covert operations for Costa Rica, was present in the Sandinista command bunker (located over the border in Costa Rica) during the height of Nicaraguan fighting.

This buttressed a detailed CIA report of May 2 on Cuban military aid to the Sandinistas. It also fits another piece of intelligence that the Carter administration has not publicized: command elements of a Soviet brigade have been introduced into Cuba.

In addition, some 2,000 Soviet military personnel—brigade-sized, though there is no information they are formed into an organic military unit—are in Cuba.

While intensification of Soviet-Cuban interests in the Caribbean is either ignored or overlooked by Jimmy Carter, its meaning is well understood by his own professional analysts in national security and intelligence: Central America is going red.

ONLY THE time, not the eventual outcome, is in question, unless there is a reversal of U.S. policy.

Specifically, the President's more sophisticated advisers do not doubt that, sooner or later, the Sandinista regime will be overtly communist. Present cordiality from Managua is, like Fidel Castro's smiles in 1959, an effort to shake down Uncle Sam before the true colors are shown.

Nor is there any doubt about what's next on the agenda: extension of the Soviet-Cuban thrust into El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras over an undefined but probably protracted period.

However slowly, Central American dominos are falling.

Havana's aims were described July 20 by Ramon Sanchez, Cuba's top envoy to Washington in an exposition of chilling candor that has received too little attention.

HE TOLD a breakfast sponsored by Foreign Policy magazine that Cuba will send aid "of all sorts"—including weapons—to guerrillas in El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras just as it had in Nicaragua.

Sanchez issued no denials about Soviet military reinforcements in Cuba. Ties between Moscow and Havana, Castro's man in Washington proclaimed, "will continue to increase in all fields, including military collaboration."

Tomas Borges, interior minister and Marxist strongman of the Nicaraguan junta, has been similarly candid.

PANICKY LEADERS in the targeted Central American countries fix U.S. visitors with one question: will you help us?

One indirect reply came from Carter July 24 when he said "we worked as closely as we could without intervening in the internal affairs of Nicaraguans" to let them decide "what form of government they should have."

In that, Carter administration policy was decidedly interventionist against Anastasio Somoza's regime and for the Sandinistas. U.S. pressure stopped military aid for Somoza's national guard (NL) from Israel and Guatemala.

U.S. officials refused to supply weapons to the national guard even in return for Somoza's resignation. The national guard ultimately gave up, not for a lack of will but for a lack of arms.

The rationale for Carter's policy is the view, long cherished by revisionists, that Castro, Ho Chi Minh, Mao Tse-tung and maybe even Lenin would have been fond friends of the U.S. had not Washington rebuffed them.

THIS THEORY is now being put to the test in Nicaragua.

To a worried segment of U.S. officials, including some in senior positions, this is madness.

They believe the U.S. should have braved the propaganda barrage from the left at home and abroad, held its nose and supported the unsavory Somoza.

Nicaragua is gone, but there will be further demands for tough-mindedness in Washington as the Central American dominos slowly fall.

ANDREW TULLY:

A Second Convert

WASHINGTON—The news ticker reported that the Communist regime in Vietnam had cancelled —and then rescheduled—a visit by a nine-man delegation from the U.S. House of Representatives.

Ho-hum, I thought: Some Congressional conservative has insulted that collection of 20th Century Caligulas in Hanoi.

But stop! The world must be flat after all. Hanoi pulled in the welcome rug because Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., had slandered what passes for the Vietnamese government.

And Fr. Drinan was one of those folks who demanded that the U.S. and South Vietnam stop fighting so the sainted Reds could bring peace, prosperity and the pursuit of happiness to the Vietnamese people.

LIKE JOAN Baez, the folk singer, and assorted Nice Nellies of the antiwar movement, Fr. Drinan apparently has been born again. He joins the peace activists who—probably reluctantly—have decided to accommodate themselves to the cruel facts of life.

Stopping off in Hong Kong, Fr. Drinan described the "new economic zones" in the Vietnamese countryside as "concentration camps."

He charged that Vietnam's Red leaders are "engaged in one of the most fundamental violations of human rights that we have seen in this century."

My gracious, the latest born-again is really vicious in its attacks on its former Hanoi ally. In newspaper ads, on television and wherever more than two peace activists gather, these people denounce the Hanoi dictatorship's "grievous and systematic violations of human rights."

THEY WEEP copious tears over the Boat People, and want America to take them all in. They whimper over the suppression of "cultural and political expression."

A 15-cent postage stamp for only 14 cents to the first one who guesses what that uproar sounds like. Right! The way the peace activists used to talk about Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, and assorted South Vietnamese leaders.

Join the club, Fr. Drinan and other gentlemen and ladies of the Joan Baez stripe. Of course the atrocities were launched as soon as the Communists took over, but as the man says, better late than never.

Anyway, it takes some people time to admit they were wrong. So we have the ineffable Jane Fonda explaining:

"I DON'T think any of us are anything but shocked at conditions in Vietnam. I didn't expect it. We wanted to believe desperately—so desperately—the pledge and the promises of respect that would be shown (by the Reds) toward human beings and human rights."

Even before they took over all of Vietnam, the Communists had shown their contempt for human life by their executions of Vietnamese civilians, including babies.

Anyway, congratulations to the Drinan-Baez bloc. It came hard because fanatics of all persuasions change their minds only under long and protracted duress.

But the peaceniks finally have learned that a dictatorship doesn't have to be a fascist to be beastly.

JAY HARRIS:

A Mullah Nation...

THE LIGHTS are slowly going out in Tehran and across the strife-torn land that is Iran...

The nation that was to become a reincarnation of a new Islamic Republic now hangs on the abyss of disaster...

The staccato bursts of gunfire that has claimed almost 400 "enemies of Islam" still echoes in the midnight hours. Fear stalks the streets as the Four Horsemen lurk in the shadows.

The dream of the revolution which toppled the Shah, with ill-advised help from the Carter Administration and an assist from France, has become a nightmare. The agony of a cause gone wrong haunts the land.

NONE OF THIS should come as a surprise to those who followed the fortunes of the oil-rich nation the past year.

As has been the case in so many other noble experiments in selective human rights and liberation movements, the "saviors" have turned out to be worse than the "demons."

As a result, Iran is in the advanced stages of what may be a second bloodbath within a year. The Utopia that replaced a viable, even if faulty, regime under the Shah is coming apart at the seams.

Bloody clashes have erupted between the fanatic followers of the Ayatollah Khomeini's Mullahs and the Marxist left. In the background, a disenchanted middle-ground, out of work, with fading hopes and a straightjacket life, is not happy with either alternative.

THE GAG, AS well as the blindfold, has now shut out the last vestiges of freedom in Iran.

Strict censorship of the news, seizure of offending newspaper plants and threats of jail for outspoken newsmen has been ordered.

Foreign reporters have been told they, too, face close scrutiny and expulsion if what they write displeases Khomeini and the Iranian Revolutionary Council. This can include anything deemed detrimental to the new regime.

And while the press censorship is the latest shackle to be clamped on the New Iran, there are many more controls under which vast segments of the population chafe. The coast of the Caspian Sea was once known as "the Iranian Riviera." Today, it is a bulwark of puritanism. The beaches are partitioned with fences to enforce rules that men and women shall not swim together.

AND ON THE streets and in the parks, religious "vigilantes" order hand-holding couples to cease and desist, unless they can show a marriage license.

Women, many of whose counterparts in the U.S. berated the Shah, although he had given Iranian women more freedom and equality than they had ever known, now face the strictest of codes. They for all practical purposes have joined their fellow Moslem females in modern bondage.

They must wear the long veils or chador, which covers their heads, faces and bodies when in public. They are not allowed to wear western dress or other modern apparel, even at work. Recently, a ban on music in general and western music in particular, was issued. It and the press curbs have drawn the heaviest public protests.

And the Islamic edict against consumption of alcoholic beverages has brought a substitute, heavy drug use, even among the upper middle class, U.S. News & World Report says. It is estimated that as many as two million of Iran's 35 million citizens now are on hard drugs. It is a strange commentary in view of Khomeini's warning that music is "opium for the mind..."

TODAY, IRAN'S economy is in a shambles, another familiar scene in so-called liberated nations.

Oil production, which once topped 5 million barrels a day is now around 3 million. And only a 70 percent boost in the price of Iran's petroleum has kept the nation afloat. Foreign and domestic investments have ceased. The oil fields are threatened with inept help.

An estimated three million are out of work. Normal life and education has been disrupted. Tehran University again is the scene of violent protests.

Aligned openly against the Mullahs and members of the Iranian Revolutionary Council—the real rulers of Iran—are the Islamic-Marxist Mujeheddin and the Marxist Fedayeen guerrillas.

But the opposition also is appearing outside Iran. Former Prime Minister Shahpur Bakhtiar surfaced in Paris to denounce what Khomeini has done to his nation. It is an ironic twist, considering that Khomeini used a base just outside Paris to export his harrangues against the Shah.

"THE MULLAHS should go back to their mosques," the deposed Prime Minister says. "There is not a single religious figure who can put Iran on the march again..."

"Iran existed before Islam. If Iran has not become Islamic after 1,400 years, it is too late to start now," Bakhtiar says.

And he added: "What has been wasted in the last six months exceeds all that was wasted during 25 years under the Shah..."

So, there you have another classic example of a nation led down the primrose, and bloody, path by religious fanatics on the one hand and misguided people in the White House and State Department, on the other.

The man who UN Amb. Andrew Young said might well deserve sainthood—Khomeini—has now led Iran to the brink. Even "laughing is a crime," says a disgruntled Iranian student. And an American businessman, noting the billions in trade both nations have lost, says "As far as we are concerned, Iran is a cemetery."

It is an object lesson for those in the U.S., including certain church and academic groups, who are all too quick to back such movements, whether in the Mideast, Africa or Latin America.

It came as no surprise to those of us who warned against it.

THE MOST ardent kiss is said to burn up no more than 12 calories. So it's clear it would take about 250 ardent kisses to lose a pound.

To lose 10 pounds—and that's how many most overweight people want to lose—you'll have to undertake 2,500 hot and heavy kisses, at least.

Israelis Flay Young For PLO Contact

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel officials questioned the value of U.S. commitments Wednesday, criticizing U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young for "a clear violation" of an American promise to avoid contacts with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Young, under fire in Washington for holding an unauthorized discussion with a PLO representative, resigned his post Wednesday.

Young's encounter with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO observer at the United Nations, cast "doubt on the credibility of U.S. commitments and promises to Israel," a Foreign Ministry official said. One influential newspaper editor added: "The simple fact is we just don't believe what they (the Americans) tell us any more."

An Israeli commando unit, meanwhile, landed Tuesday night on a beach at Ut Adloun, on Lebanon's coastal highway between Tyre and Sidon, south of Beirut. The Israeli army said the unit ambushed two vehicles and killed several suspected Palestinian guerrillas.

In related Mideast developments:

—Witnesses said Israeli border artillery pounded Tyre, 15 miles north of the Lebanese border, and adjacent Palestinian refugee camps. "They are hitting the marketplace, the fishermen's quarter and one shell has just ravaged the telephone central," a Tyre telephone operator reported. The military command in Tel Aviv declined comment on the reports of shelling.

—Christian militiamen fought Lebanese and Syrian troops in the port of Beirut. State radio said "tension still gripped the eastern suburb." The army command said in a communique that a corporal was killed and four other soldiers and a lieutenant were injured during the 24-hour-clash. Panicked dock workers abandoned the area as mortar and rocket grenades were battering the sector.

Deputy Israeli Prime Minister Yigael Yadin, leaving for a U.S. speaking tour, called Young's meeting with Terzi last month "a clear violation" of American promises to avoid contacts with the PLO until it recognizes Israel's right to exist and accepts U.N. Security Council resolution 242, which defines Israel's status in the Mideast.

Growing concern that Washington is headed toward recognition of the PLO is expected to be a focal point in discussions this weekend between Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Carter's Mideast envoy Robert Strauss, scheduled to arrive here Friday.

The concern over U.S.-PLO contacts developed after reports earlier this week on a meeting between Young and Terzi.

Young admitted Tuesday he didn't exactly tell the truth in an original denial that he had substantive talks with the PLO representative. But, speaking to reporters in New York after being rebuked by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, he defended his talk with Terzi as being "what I thought was in the best interests of my country." He said the meeting was intended to head off a U.N. Security Council resolution detrimental to Israel.

Israeli officials also reacted to newspaper reports that the U.S. ambassador to Austria, Milton Wolf, held a "lengthy and detailed" meeting with a PLO official.

Football To Resolve Origin Question

LANCASTER, S.C. (AP) — Generations of historians have been unable to decide whether Andrew Jackson has born in North or South Carolina. Now a bunch of high school football players will meet in an effort to settle the issue — at least for a year.

Everyone agrees the nation's seventh president and Indian war general, popularly known as "Old Hickory", was born March 15, 1767, in the Waxhaws area of the Piedmont, which bridges the state line between the two Carolinas.

But historians have failed to agree about whether the birthplace was Waxhaw, N.C., or Waxhaw, S.C. So two newspapers, a television station and some high school officials have decided to provide an answer — three football games to be played Friday night.

Six teams will participate, three from each state. The side with the most yardage wins a 17-inch stoneware bust of Jackson which will be displayed in the courthouse of either Union County, N.C., or Lancaster County, S.C.

"I'm not aware of any other time in American history when the outcome of a football game has affected the accuracy of a historical event," said William Price, assistant director of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History.

Price said no one really knows for sure where Jackson was born.

But at the South Carolina Department of Archives and History they say it's not that vague. "Anyone who studies the evidence would have to say it shows beyond a reasonable doubt he (Jackson) was born in South Carolina," said Charles Lee, director of the department.

He said there is ample proof, including statements by Jackson, that he is the state's only native to become president.

"I would expect my friends down at the South Carolina Department of Archives and History to say just that," retorted Price.

In 1962, an attempt was made to settle the matter when Lancaster County Clerk of Court Lee Montgomery issued a birth certificate for Jackson. But North Carolina replied a year later with a report saying firmer evidence would be needed before the Tar Heel state would relinquish its claim.

Lee said the football game is simply another way for residents of both states to enjoy the old debate.

"It's too good a controversy to bury," he said. "I can't imagine either state conceding to the other."

The South Carolina teams playing this Friday in Lancaster County Memorial Stadium include Lancaster and Buford high schools of Lancaster County and Great Falls High School from Chester County. The North Carolina teams are Union County's Piedmont, Parkwood and Sun Valley high schools.

The games are sponsored by The Lancaster News; The Monroe, N.C., Enquirer-Journal; and WRET-TV of Charlotte, N.C.

NICARAGUAN GUARD SUED

MIAMI (AP) — The Miami-based All American Trading Corp. has filed suit against the National Guard of Nicaragua, claiming the organization owes more than $1 million on helicopter and aircraft parts. The suit, filed in Miami last week, cited a July 2 promissory note for $680,667 and an outstanding balance of $500,000 on another note. Because the guard has been out of business since President Anastasio Somoza fled Nicaragua four weeks ago.

Economist Says Carter Can Do Nothing To Change Voter Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can do virtually nothing in the next nine months to "significantly alter" the economy's direction in the eyes of voters, economist Alan Greenspan said Wednesday.

Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economicc Advisers under President Gerald R. Ford, said the Carter administration faces an "impossible tradeoff" between economic policy and political planning as the 1980 presidential campaign begins.

Carter may face pressures "so profound" he could support mandatory wage and price controls, but that would be disastrous, Greenspan claimed.

The president has steadfastly rebuffed calls for such controls.

Greenspan, now an economic consultant, predicts the recession will peak in mid-1980 during the presidential primary season while inflation will remain chronically high.

"I know of nothing the president can do at this stage to significantly alter perceptions in the political sense of where the economy is going," Greenspan told a press conference called by the American Statistical Association.

Instead, administration economists must look beyond 1980 for long-range answers, particularly to inflation, which is running above 13 percent annually, he suggested.

Along these lines, Greenspan renewed his call for an $18 billion to $20 billion tax cut, effective Jan. 1, weighted as heavily as possible toward business to expand investment and improve productivity.

At least half the tax cut should go to business, Greenspan said. But he predicted Congress would grant corporations only one-third of the total reduction.

Greenspan recommended Congress establish a five-year schedule to reduce corporate taxes from 46 percent to 40 percent.

He said such a schedule would allow businesses to invest now at the same rate they would if the total tax cut was immediate. At the same time, the government would not lose revenues all at once.

The administration continues to oppose any tax cut at this time.

Economist Otto Eckstein, president of Data Resources Inc., a Cambridge, Mass., forecasting firm, said the developing recession is "not sufficiently severe" to necessitate a tax cut.

Congress should assess the wisdom of a tax cut when it reconvenes next year, but no sooner, said Eckstein, who also appeared at the statistical conference.

Greenspan, while predicting a mild recession, warned the economic downturn could become far worse if a housing crash occurs.

He said there was a one-in-four possibility the sharp increases in real estate values will reverse. Should values lose 10 percent to 20 percent, he said, homeowners would be traumatized and the recession could become deeper and longer.

People who thought they had a lot of money invested in their homes would become disillusioned and choose not to purchase other consumer goods, he said.

Railroad Requests May End Chessie-Seaboard Merger

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chessie System, Inc. and Seaboard Coast Line Industries, Inc., whose merger plan is awaiting approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission, said the merger is off if demands by two other railroads are granted.

The officials made the statement in response to demands by the Norfolk & Western and the Southern railroads that 3,400 miles of the proposed Chessie-Seaboard line be transferred to them.

Chessie railroads include the Chesapeake and Ohio, the Baltimore and Ohio, the Western Maryland and smaller subsidiary lines. SCLI railroads, called the Family Line System, include the Seaboard Coast Line, the Louisville & Nashville, the Clinchfield and others.

John Collinson, president of the C&O and B&O, said if requests by Norfolk & Western and Southern are granted, "it would gut the new system and make the merger impossible."

Collinson said "granting (by the commission) of the conditions sought by these two railroads would quickly end our merger, and all our efforts to improve the nation's transportation system and service to our customers would be lost."

Seaboard officials said the two railroads have requested either the direct transfer or trackage rights to over 3,400 miles of the proposed line, and have asked for the ownership of the Clinchfield railroad; full trackage and service rights over the Western Maryland; one-half interest in L&N's Cumberland Valley subdivision; ownership of the Monon, now a part of L&N; ownership of the Seaboard main line from Jacksonsville to Tampa via Orlando, and a one-half interest in SCL lines serving the Florida phosphate district.

In 1975, an average of 11.2 cigarettes a day were produced for every person in the United States over the age of 18, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission reports.

Chase Manhattan Ups Prime Rate; Record High Matched

NEW YORK (AP) — Chase Manhattan Bank will raise its prime lending rate from 11¾ percent to 12 percent on Thursday, matching the record high rate for loans to banks' most creditworthy corporate borrowers.

The quarter-point boost announced Wednesday by Chase, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, indicates that credit-tightening moves by the Federal Reserve Board are taking effect.

The higher prime rate reflects strong demand for business loans and higher costs banks are encountering in acquiring funds they lend to borrowers. Banking industry analaysts said other banks can be expected to join in the move to a 12 percent prime, a level reached only once before, in 1974, since the prime rate was introduced in the 1930s.

Paul Smith, executive vice president and chief financial officer of Security Pacific Corp., said the 12 percent prime probably would spread to most major banks by the end of the week. Security Pacific, based in Los Angeles, is the holding company for the nation's 10th largest bank.

The prime rate does not affect interest rates on other borrowings such as mortgages and consumer loans, but it is viewed as an indicator of trends in interest rates generally.

The Federal Reserve Open Market Committee, which sets the central bank's monetary policy, met Tuesday and apparently decided to make credit more expensive. The committee's meetings are secret, but it became evident Wednesday that the Fed was active in the credit market, pushing the federal funds rate above 10¾ percent, perhaps as high as 11 percent.

The federal funds rate is the interest charged on overnight loans of surplus reserves between banks.

Under the Fed's new chairman, Paul A. Volcker, bankers and analysts expected monetary policy to reflect more concern about inflation. By making credit more costly, the Fed hopes to reduce the growth in the basic money supply. A rapidly growing money supply is believed to aggravate inflation by putting more money in circulation than can be absorbed by the economy's output of goods and services.

Banks recently have been issuing more negotiable certificates of deposit, large-denomination instruments that can be traded in the so-called secondary market. Interest rates have been rising on these CDs, which represent big deposits kept in banks for specific time periods, generally for one, three, six, nine or 12 months. The CDs are a major source of funds banks need for lending, and CDs outstanding at major New York banks have risen by almost $600 million in the past two weeks.

Interest rates on these certificates have jumped nearly half a percentage point in the past four weeks. Last Monday, six-month CDs were trading on the secondary market with interest rates of about 10.75 percent, and new issues were sold with yields of 10.65 percent.

When acquiring short-term funds at these rates, banks' profit margins on longer-term loans at 11¾ percent become uncomfortably tight.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By William A. Doyle

Q. I am a member of a commodity trading limited partnership. All of the trading for the partnership is done by an advisory service through our broker. Because commodity trading is mostly short term, the partnership makes literally hundreds of trades each year.

Why must I list each transaction the partnership makes on Schedule D of my income tax return? Our broker has an accountant who will make out just the Schedule Ds — at a cost of $400 for each partner. Surely, there must be an equitable way for me to escape such a burden.

A. The flat-out answer to your question is that you must list the sale of every commodity trading futures contract, stock, bond or any other "capital asset" and report the capital gain or loss resulting from each sale on Sohedule D. Those are the rules. Period.

You're in a partnership. So you must report your shares of the partnership's gains and losses each year, in order to report your net gain or loss.

For your sake, I hope you're showing net gains as your share of the partnership's efforts. All too often, commodity futures trading results in fat losses. When you roll dice in the commodity game, you're taking on mighty big risks. I'd recommend trips to Atlantic City or Las Vegas as more enjoyable alternatives.

You're unhappy with the $400 cost of reporting all your trades. Try making out your own schedule D or shop around for an accountant who might do it at a lower price.

Making out your schedule D will be no easy chore. The standard schedule which comes with your income tax return doesn't have room for all your trades. The accountant, no doubt, will list each of your trades on a separate sheet and attach that sheet to the schedule D, which will summarize your net gain or loss.

Q. I am 25 and earn $11,180 a year. I have $8,300 in savings accounts, $925 in U.S. Savings Bonds and $2,500 in an Individual Retirement Account (IRA).

I would like to invest about $3,000, as I feel I have too much money in savings accounts. I had considered putting the $3,000 in an 8 1/2 percent savings certificate but my father thinks I should concentrate on growth, rather than income. What is your option?

A. Let's call this a classic example of "Father knows best." At least, his reasoning is in line with mine. With a nice cash cushion put away for emergency purposes and a good start toward a retirement investment, you're in great shape to build for the future.

At your age, it's only natural to concentrate on things that, hopefully, will grow in value. Stocks which have done so in the past and are expected to do so in the future would be good choices. The self-addressed, stamped envelope you sent along is bringing you a list of such stocks.

Understand that there is risk in buying stocks. So if the stock market falls and NEVER recovers during your working life — an unlikely set of ciroumstances — you can blame both your Dad and Doyle.

Q. A broker tells me that — despite the $40,000 insurance — the savings certificates I have at various banks and savings and loan associations would be redeemed at no more than $1,000. Is he a scaremonger looking for additional brokerage fees or does he know something we don't?

A. "Scaremonger" is a kind description for that character. Drop him like a hot potato and do business with another broker. There are lots of good ones around.

No one has ever lost dime number one in an account covered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. at banks or the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. at S&Ls. Both FDIC and FSLIC cover each depositor's account up to $40,000.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Plane Crash Claims Slaton Man's Life

ROSWELL (Special) — A Slaton man and a Dexter, N.M., man who were hunting coyotes from the air near here were killed when their Piper Cub crashed Wednesday.

The dead men were identified as Robert Earl Evans, 35, of Slaton and Gary Lambert, 39, of Dexter.

The plane crash occurred at 7:15 a.m. Wednesday about seven miles south of Roswell, near state Highway 24.

New Mexico State Police said the two men were hunting coyotes from the air for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Division of the Department of the Interior.

The crash occurred when the plane, piloted by Evans, went over a ridge and the engine stalled, officials said. The plane then crashed into the ground nose first.

The plane crash was discovered by a Chaves County sheriff's deputy. Both men were found dead in the cockpit.

The bodies were taken to Ballard Funeral Home in Roswell and then transferred to Albuquerque, N.M., where autopsies will be performed by the state medical examiner at the request of the Federal Aviation Administration, officials said.

Services for Evans are pending with Franklin Bartley Funeral Home in Slaton.

A Paris native, Evans had lived in Slaton since 1972. He and his two brothers, Roger of Lubbock and Fred of Lake Ransom Canyon, operated the Slaton Flying Service.

Evans married Susie Dorsey on Feb. 12, 1972, in Lubbock. He was a member of the First Baptist Church in Slaton.

'Holdup' Loot Found In Truck; Police Arrest Store Employee

After reporting the theft of $5,000 from a Lubbock supermarket, the assistant manager of the store was arrested Wednesday when police doubted his story, and then found the stolen money in his pickup truck.

Investigating officers said the 23-year-old man told them he was robbed at gunpoint about 7 a.m. Wednesday as he was working on accounts of the previous night's business at the United Super Market, 3101 E. Fourth St.

The assistant manager described the robber as being a black male in his 20s and wearing a ski mask. He said the robber was armed with a small pistol when he entered the store, demanded money and then left with about $5,000 in a paper bag.

However, police said they were suspicous of the man's story, and a search of his pickup in the store's parking lot revealed $5,000 stashed under the seat.

Donald Brady, 36, of 4324 55th St. told police Wednesday that someone broke into his home and stole about $2,250 in jewelry and guns.

Brady said the burglary occurred when he was out of town Tuesday. The burglar reportedly entered the house by breaking a bathroom window. Items reported stolen include 80 gold-colored necklaces, three shotguns and a rifle.

In other activity, police arrested two Lubbock men about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday in a South Lubbock club for failure to show identification when they were being questioned in connection with the theft of a waitress's tips.

Reports show that officers arriving on the scene were told two men were seen by the waitress and another employee taking tip money from a waitress's tray. The waitress told police they had taken four $1 bills.

When questioned by police, one of the men took out his wallet, thumbed through it and showed the officers how much money he had, saying he didn't need the waitress's tips.

When police advised the men that failure to provide identification would mean they would be arrested, one of the men refused and reportedly said, "We'll see."

When both men failed to show identification, they were arrested.

Also, three Lubbock youths were questioned by the Juvenile Division Tuesday in connection with a fire and burglary at a house in the 6000-block of 38th St.

A police patrol spotted smoke coming from the residence about 1:50 p.m. When they arrived, a plumber who was working at a nearby house was dousing the flames with a garden hose and told police he saw two youths huddled next to the house by a fireplace.

Reports indicate police found three boxes of matches near the house, a calculator and a paper sack containing sewing articles stuffed in a patch of weeds near the back of the house.

A neighbor told police he earlier had seen two youths playing with matches near the house.

The youths were taken to the Juvenile Division, where they were counseled and released to the custody of their parents.

Church Loses $2 Million Defraud Suit

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A jury awarded more than $2 million in damages Wednesday to a 22-year-old woman who claimed the Church of Scientology defrauded her by failing to fulfill promises of improving her life.

The jury deliberated 18 hours over two days before reaching its unanimous decision.

In her suit, Julie C. Titchbourne, 21, of Portland, alleged she suffered emotional distress as a result of her experience with the church in 1975-76.

She had sought $2 million in punitive damages, $500,000 for alleged anguish and suffering and $3,000 reimbursement for course fees.

After the jury award, Mrs. Titchbourne said she planned to use part of the money to study engineering in college.

Named as defendants were the Church of Scientology of Portland; the Scientology Mission of Davis in Portland; and the Delphian Foundation, an organization the church says is separate although staffed by scientologists.

The jury ruled the defendants committed fraud, awarding Mrs. Titchbourne punitive damages of $1.9 million and compensatory damages of $153,000.

Lawyers for the church said they would contact their clients to discuss a possible appeal.

In a statement, the church criticized the decision, saying: "this decision is a blow to all of those who cherish the right to practice their religion free from the harassment of psychiatrists and deprogrammers who have appointed themselves self-styled inquisitors."

Earlier, Circuit Court Judge Robert P. Jones said nine jurors would have to agree to make an award.

He told the jurors that if they decided the church's promises were of a religious nature, and sincerely advertised as such, the church is protected by the state and federal constitutions. He said such protection prevents challenging the truth or falsity of a religious belief.

Mrs. Titchbourne claimed the church courses she took failed to live up to promises to help her with her college classwork, develop her creativity and raise her IQ test scores. She claims she suffers emotional distress as a result.

The Scientologists say Mrs. Titchbourne joined of her own free will and is just interested in persecuting the church. During the trial, a psychologist testified he could find no evidence of psychological damage.

The case was ordered to trial by the Oregon Supreme Court after it rejected a Scientologist claim that it is protected from such suits by the freedom of religion provisions of the state and federal Constitutions.

The Scientologist church was established in 1954 by science fiction writer L. Ron Hubbard of England and is based on a mix of Eastern and Western religious philosophy. It claims a membership of about 4 million with 22 churches and about 100 missions worldwide. The church is based in Los Angeles.

Texas Deepwater Port Gains Backing

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Department of Transportation tentatively gave the go-ahead Wednesday for a publicly owned deepwater port off the Texas coast.

Ernie Bauer, chief of the department's ports division, said the license granted the Texas Deepwater Port Authority stipulates that a satisfactory financial plan must be submitted before any bonds can be issued.

"There are a number of conditions in the license," Bauer said. "We're saying that they have got to submit a financial plan to meet all the requirements."

The proposed port would be about 26 miles south of Freeport. It would be designed to handle shipments of imported crude oil from tankers too large for conventional ports.

Bauer said the Texas attorney general would have to clarify the state's liability for any oil spills that might result.

Another condition would limit the number of members of the deepwater port authority's board of directors from oil companies to three, Bauer said.

"The Justice Department had recommended that no members of the board be from the oil industry, and we compromised at three," he said.

"The deepwater port authority, a state agency, applied for the license after a private consortium known as Seadock disbanded. The oil companies that made up the consortium said the restrictions placed on Seadock's license made it impossible to proceed.

Marijuana Middlemen Jobs 'Going To Pot'

HOUSTON (AP) — U.S. Atty. Tony Canales says he knows of a highly specialized business which is 'going to pot.'

Middlemen for marijuana deal, Canales said, are being eliminated as those who traffic in Mexico and other nations to the south are becoming bolder and more sophisticated.

Canales said such dealers are turning more and more to the use of planes and boats.

"They fly to Mexico or Colombia and make the contacts themselves," he said. "They don't need the middleman any more."

So, Canales said, the middlemen are joining the ranks of the unemployed.

The average middleman, Canales said, has been a U.S. citizen of Mexican-American extraction with family connections on both sides of the Rio Grande.

"He easily could mix in either location and could negotiate the sale and arrange for delivery across the river," he said.

With middlemen handling the contacts and arranging delivery at border points, the U.S. dealer did not have to go into Mexico.

"He just had to go to the river," Canales said.

And the quantities of marijuana seized in the border area have decreased signifigantly.

"We used to get 400-or 500-pound loads," Canales said. "Now it's 20 pounds."

In the past, federal agents have found large amounts of marijuana hidden in the brush on the U.S. side of the Rio Grande, but Canales said this no longer the case.

Davis' Claim Of 'Phantom' Tape Recorder Doubted

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — An FBI agent testified Wednesday he searched informant David McCrory before and after two pivotal meetings with Cullen Davis and found no trace of a "phantom" tape recorder.

The testimony of Special Agent Ron Jannings was designed to head off contention by the defendant Davis that he knew he was being recorded when he discussed mass murder with McCrory.

McCrory, 41, the state's key witness in Davis murder-for-hire trial, was wired for sound by the FBI for both parking lot encounters last Aug. 18 and 20.

However, Davis contends, McCrory also carried a hand-held Norelco recorder at the first meeting and produced two mini-cassettes at the second rendezvous.

"Did you find a Norelco tape recorder?" prosecutor John Bankston asked Jannings repeatedly.

"No, sir," he replied.

"Did you see any mini-cassettes?" Bankston continued, referring to searches of both McCrory and his car.

"No, sir."

Davis, a 45-year-old millionaire Fort Worth industrialist, is accused of inducing McCrory to hire a gunman to kill Davis' divorce judge, named on a purported "hit list."

The defense maintains Davis was duped by McCrory in a loosely organized conspiracy orchestrated by the defendant's ex-wife, Priscilla, 38.

The couple at the time was locked in a high-stakes divorce struggle.

Davis acknowleged in his first murder solicitation trial he freely discussed the murders of Judge Joe Eidson, Priscilla and others and debated the price tag on each slaying.

But he insisted he was tricked into thinking he was cooperating with the FBI and that, through McCrory, the tapes would be used to torpedo an attempt on his own life.

The jury in that trial, in Houston, deadlocked 8-4 for conviction last January and a mistrial was declared.

Anticipating similar defense strategy, prosecutors waged a continuing battle to cast doubts on the possibility that a second recorder existed.

The FBI tapes of the two meetings bloom again as the heart of the state's case and are expected to be introduced into evidence as early as next week.

Meanwhwile, Jannings traced the activities of the FBI and other law enforcement agencies through the four critical days before Davis' arrest Aug. 20.

Those activities included preparation of three identification cards and a posed and chemically treated snapshot of a "slain" Judge Eidson.

The state contends McCrory showed Davis the cards and photo Aug. 20 as "proof" that Eidson had been killed and that Davis then handed him $25,000 for the non-existent hit man.

Davis said McCrory showed him no such photo but instead opened a white envelope to reveal two mini-cassettes from the previous rendezvous.

"Okay," Davis said at the time. "What are you going to do with these?"

"I'm going to get rid of the (expletive)," McCrory replied.

Instead, lead defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes sowed the first early seeds of conspiracy, seeking to link McCrory with his alleged co-conspirators, Priscilla and karate instructor Pat Burleson.

Haynes implied through his questioning that Burleson, McCrory's go-between with the FBI, may have been with either McCrory or Priscilla when he first contacted Jannings Aug. 17.

"Did you know then, on the 17th day of August, 1978, that Pat Burleson had met that same day with Priscilla Lee Davis?" Haynes asked Jannings.

"No sir," Jannings responded.

Jannings did say he later learned that the two had met that same day and conceded that he did not know from where Burleson placed the telephone call that put the FBI investigation into motion.

Haynes was to resume his cross-examination Thursday morning.

DAR Members Protest Texas Civics Books

AUSTIN (AP) — America's founders set up a republic, not a democracy, and wrote the Bill of Rights to guard against majority rule, a Daughters of the American Revolution member said Wednesday.

"Majority rule was never meant by our founding fathers and is not what we want in this country," Drusilla Bearden told the State Textbook Committee at its annual public hearing.

Mrs. Bearden objected to several high school civics books proposed for use in Texas because she said they distorted American government.

She appeared on the third day of the textbook hearings that end Thursday. The committee is considering adoption of 44 new books, worth $6.8 million in publishing contracts.

"This country is definitely not a democracy," Mrs. Bearden said in protest of "Civics" by Follett Publishing Co. The United States is a republic with representational government, she said, as distinguished from a democracy ruled by a simple majority.

The Follett text also should have explained that Eugene Debs, Saul Alinsky and economist John Keynes were "Marxist socialists" in referring to the men, she added.

"Keynes was a notorious sexual deviate," Mrs. Bearden said.

"Why not use Samuel Gompers, known as the father of unions in America, intead of Debs?" she asked. "Gompers did believe in free enterprise and the capitalist system, which is what this text should be extolling."

In written response to Mrs. Bearden, Follett said Debs was a candidate for president several times and it would be wrong to leave him out of the text because of his views.

Harlan Ford, hearing examiner and deputy education commissioner, asked Mrs. Bearden if all references to Communists should be deleted from books.

"I don't think we've ever asked that anything be deleted, just that all the facts be presented," she answered.

She also objected to the portrayal of union leader Cesar Chavez in "American Government: Comparing Political Experiences" by Prentice-Hall Publishing Co.

"This should include documentation of his radical activities," she said, adding the Communist Party was interested in his organization of a strike against California grape growers.

Judy Gillespie, textbook author, said the passage on Chavez was objective.

"It is used in order to illustrate a concept," she said. "It is a factual account and is not designed to support the Communists or any other ideology."

The 15-member textbook committee recommends which books to approve in September. The State Board of Education makes final selections in November after protesters have a chance to appeal committee picks.

Adviser Says Russia Against Alterations

MOSCOW (AP) — One of President Leonid I. Brezhnev's closest advisers said Wednesday the Soviet Union considers any U.S. moves to alter the Salt II treaty "impermissible."

Speaking in Frunze, the capital of Soviet Kirghizia, Konstantin Chernenko said, "We are absolutely prepared to implement all the provisions of the treaty signed in Vienna as they were formulated.

"This was stressed definitely in Vienna by Leonid Brezhnev. We regard as impermissible the attempts to bring into question portions of the treaty under any pretext."

Chernenko became a full member of the Soviet Politburo last November.

OOZING THROUGH MEXICAN CRUDE — Anita Munoz of San Antonio found walking on Mustang Island, just south of Port Aransas, to be a very dirty business Wednesday. Young Quits U.N. Post Under Fire country some of the mood of the rest of the world ...," Young said. "By birth, I come from the ranks of those of who have known and identified with some level of oppression in the world, and by choice I continue to identify with what I say in Biblical terms are the least of the, these, my brothers."

"I found myself caught between two groups of people, both quite desperate in their own way," he said. "Palestinians, desperate for recognition. And Israelis, desperate for security."

Young said neither Carter nor Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance suggested that he resign.

"Jeopardize Administration"

But he added: "It is no longer just my risk ... I see myself in some ways contiuing to jopardize the administration."

In a handwritten letter accepting Young's resignation, Carter said:

"You have earned the gratitude of all Americans with your superb performance in a most difficult assignment. You have helped to prove, thanks to your dedication and sensitivity, that our country is sympathetic to the deepest social and political aspirations of increasingly awakened human beings throughout the world.

"You have proven that we are sensitive to the demands for world peace and racial justice and have earned for us the friendship, trust and respect of many nations which had previously considered the United States to be suspect and unworthy of such a relationship."

Powell Near Tears

As Powell read Carter's letter to reporters, he paused several times to keep from crying. His voice broke. The display of emotion was so uncharacteristic of Powell that stunned reporters let him leave immediately without asking a single question.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale said Young's decision to step down "was a courageous and selfless act." He praised Young for having "a positive and growing impact on the way this country is viewed in Africa and throughout the world."

Vance issued a statement saying Young "made exceptional contributions as our ambassador" and had a "unique capacity to speak effectively for the United States in its relationships with the developing countries."

Talk Unauthorized

According to State Department officials, Young was not authorized to talk to Terzi, did not report the meeting until last Saturday and then incorrectly described it as a purely social encounter.

Young, who had been rebuked by Vance for holding the discussions, met with the secretary of state earlier in the day and then went to the White House. The grim-faced ambassador emerged from his White House meeting around 3:30 p.m. CDT without talking to reporters.

Young had conceded Tuesday that he did not exactly tell the truth in giving his account of the meeting with Terzi, but also maintained he acted in the best interests of the United States.

Discussed Postponement

At the meeting, held at the home of Abdala Yaccoub Bishara, the Kuwaiti ambassador, Young and Terzi discussed postponing Security Council consideration of the Palestinian issue.

The Carter administration has acknowledged exploring the PLO's attitude toward Israel to see if it is willing to accept the Jewish state's right to exist. That could lead to U.S. negotiations with the PLO.

But administration officials have insisted that all such inquiries are conducted through Arab and other intermediaries.

Even as Young was summoned from New York, the State Department acknowledged that Milton Wolf, the U.S. ambassador to Vienna, met directly with a PLO official in the Austrian capital last month.

Negotiations Barred

At the meeting, spokesman Reston said, Wolf explained to Isa Sartawi, the PLO official, that U.S. policy bars negotiations with his organization.

The session was held shortly before PLO chief Yasser Arafat flew to Vienna for talks with Austrian Chancellor Bruno Kreisky and Willy Brandt, the former West German chancellor.

"We did not encourage it and we did not authorize it," Reston said. The spokesman also told reporters that Wolf had two "chance encounters" of a purely social nature with Sartawi, one of them aboard an airplane.

Details were said to be sketchy, but Wolf subsequently returned to Washington and reported all three meetings to department officials. He was not rebuked.

Young's resignation brought an expression of sadness from Yehuda Blum, the Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, who said he respected Young's courage and candor.

But Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said: "Andrew Young made the appropriate decision by resigning. If he was unwilling to abide by our government's policy respecting the PLO, he was no longer qualified to represent the United States in the United Nations."

The New York incident had touched off calls for Young's removal. They came from Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., and Republican presidential candidates Bob Dole and George Bush.

Black leaders rallied to the support of the embattled ambassador.

In Norfolk, Va., the Southern Christian Leadership Conference gave its unqualified support to Young.

"All I have to say about Andy is that we have an opening and if he's tired of being hassled, I say, 'Come on home,'" the Rev. Joseph Lowery told a cheering crowd.

Nudist Permits Urged To Keep Out 'Uglies'

MILAN (UPI) — Italian author Luigi Barzini, a former Liberal Party member of Parliament, proposed Wednesday having a commission of beauty experts issue permits to nudists to keep ugly men and women from baring their unsightly bodies.

Writing in the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera, Barzini, whose book in English, "The Italians," has been widely read, said that when nudism first became popular in Italy about 10 years ago, nudists on the beaches "seemed like Greek gods and goddesses."

Nowadays, he lamented, "You get the feeling you're at a huge open air medical inspection, with women who have gone all to pieces and paunchy and ill-formed men waiting to be inspected."

"The ugliness of these people is striking and they forget the effect they produce on their neighbors," he said.

Barzini said if he was a member of the Parliament he would propose a "short bill requiring a permit for those who want to go about naked."

"The permit ehould be issued by a commission of experts, including a painter, a sculptor, a motion picture director, a philanderer and other people knowledgeable about human beauty," he said.

Barzini said the permit should be renewable each year.

Area Democrats Chat With Carter, Aides

have people who are loyal," Morton added.

In addition to defending the staff shake-up, Corter urged the Texans to work with him in solving the nation's problems, Morton said.

Carter asked the delegation to form a "partnership where we'll work together and where we'll share the responsibility and where we'll share the accomplishments, if there are any," Morton said, reading from several pages of notes he took Tuesday.

The Lubbock lawyer was one of four area Democrats invited to Washington Tuesday. Sandra Davis of Littlefield, Carl King of Dimmitt and Sandra Barker of Morton, all Democratic committee members, joined Morton at the White House.

Rep. Kent Hance also was invited but instead sent an aide to the meeting, Morton said.

A state League of United Latin-American Citizens representative was Carter's only critic at the meeting, Morton said. The LULAC director chastised Carter for "ignoring Texans," he explained.

Carter replied that "25 percent of his staff is from Texas."

"If any state has a right to complain, it isn't Texas," Carter reportedly added.

During the session, the president reiterated his complaint that Americans have developed a negative attitude, a complaint he first expressed in a July televised speech. He also told the Texans he will continue to decontrol the American economy.

Despite criticism Carter may receive in West Texas, Morton said, Washingtonians and members of the Texas delegation complimented the president.

"I talked to a lot of people there on the streets of Washington," he said. "People up there think he's doing a good job."

Of his own reaction to the visit, Morton said, "I think everybody felt very good about it. It's difficult not to feel good when you're invited to the White House."

Russian Navy Operating In Caribbean

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Russian Navy guided warships and a tanker have sailed into the Caribbean sea under observation by a U.S. destroyer and Navy patrol planes, the Pentagon said Wednesday.

Navy officials expect the Kresta II-class cruiser and Krivak-class destroyer to exercise with ships of the expanded Cuban Navy.

While acknowledging the arrival of the Soviet Navy task group in the Caribbean, the Pentagon did not mention that it is accompanied by a nuclear-powered attack submarine. Sources said the Navy normally does not discuss Soviet submarine locations publicly because it does not want the Russians to be able to gauge American ability to keep track of submerged submarines.

Officials discounted speculation that the Soviet Navy task group would head for waters off Nicaragua in a show of support for the new Sandinista-led government there.

The Pentagon, suggesting it viewed the ship movements as routine, noted it is the 20th time in the past decade that the Russians have sent a naval group to operate in the Western Atlantic and the Caribbean. Usually such Russian naval forces drop anchor in Cuban ports such as Cienfuegos and Havana.

The new deployment of Soviet warships to the Caribbean is the first since last fall when five Soviet naval units stopped in Cuban ports and maneuvered in the Gulf of Mexico.

Such voyages historically have averaged about 45 days.

While the Navy described the latest Soviet operations as "a routine deployment," officials noted that since last year the Russians have given Cuba its first two diesel-powered submarines, as well as hydrofoil patrol craft and Osa-class boats armed with anti-ship missiles.

The expanded Cuban Navy has been under the tutelage of Russian advisers, officials said.

The Soviet task group is being followed at what was described as "visual distance" by the U.S. destroyer Forrest Sherman and is being observed by Navy P-3 patrol planes.

Black Leaders Praise Young

in that state, said he was proud of Young.

"There are quite a few of us who just can't take the slow way of getting things done. We speak out feelings. Andy is part of us and we are part of him. He did the right thing."

Asked if the resignation could damage Carter's re-election chances, Evers replied, "I don't think so. He can't get re-elected anyhow."

"You have to admire Andy Young. He is a man of his convictions," said Rep. Larry McDonald of Georgia, the only congressman to testify against Young during his confirmation hearings. "But in supposedly representing the United States, he does the county a disservice when he represents his views."

He said if Young "takes this personally," it could affect Carter's political chances.

Clements Revisiting Mexico

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Gov. Bill Clements, the state's first Republican governor in 104 years, is using his own shuttle diplomacy program to tackle U.S.-Mexico border problems.

The tough-talking Texan, founder of a worldwide oil drilling firm before turning to politics, visited Gov. Enrique Cardenas Gonzales of the Mexican state of Tamaulipas on Tuesday.

Today, he visits Nuevo Leon Gov. Martinez Dominguez in Monterrey, 148 miles south of Laredo. On Aug. 27 he has talks scheduled with the governor of Coahuila in Saltillo, and with the Chihuahua governor in Chihuahua City on Aug. 29.

Earlier, Clements held a June meeting in Brownsville for the governors of New Mexico, Arizona and California or their representatives.

Illegal aliens, border drug trafficking and exchange of energy are the main topics, but industrial growth and exchange of agriculture products have been added recently.

"We talked mostly about illegal drugs and undocumented workers," Clements said after his private talk Tuesday with Cardenas Gonzales.

There was only passing comment on the Mexican oil spill off the shores of both states. Cardenas Gonzales praised Clements for an earlier statement that Texas would not try to sue Mexico for any property damages from the spill.

Clements said he and the Tamaulipan governor are in accord on the handling of illegal aliens — "the discrimination, the receiving less than a fair wage, having living conditions less than desirable and no protection under the law.

"He (the Mexican governor) feels there is no question it should be rectified and controlled both by the United States and Mexico. Workers have to be documentd both ways."

Clements said Cardenas Gonzales offered to call the three other Mexican governors and tell them of the accord to clear the way for Clements' visits.

"We're still talking policy, not mechanics, and until we get a declaration from all four governors, I don't want to talk about details," Clements said.

At the June meeting of U.S. border governors, Clements' proposal to allow Mexican workers to legally enter the United States on temporary work permits drew opposition from Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt. Several Mexican-American groups in Texas also opposed it, fearing a return to the "bracero" program of the 1960s.

Clements said Cardenas Gonzales had "a keen sense of the drug problem," largely because he helped set up Mexican drug control efforts as an assistant to Jose Lopez Portillo when the Mexican president was secretary of the treasury.

Mexican news reporters asked Clements, who was deputy secretary of defense under both Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, if the U.S. energy crisis is real.

Threatened Federal Attorney Resigns

EL PASO (AP) — James Kerr, the crusading anti-drug prosecutor who survived an assassination attempt last year, has quit his job as assistant U.S. attorney.

U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd said Wednesday that Kerr will stay active in law enforcement "at a location that will not be disclosed for security reasons." He said Kerr was moving on to "substantially greater challenges."

Kerr could not be reached for comment.

Last November, Kerr dodged a round of automatic weapons fire on a San Antonio street by diving beneath the dashboard of his car. No arrests have been made in the attack and Kerr has been under 24-hour guard ever since.

The prosecutor has been directing a federal grand jury investigation into drug trafficking, concentrating on the El Paso area. In the most widely publicized case to emerge from the probe, Las Vegas gambler Jimmy Chagra was found guilty Wednesday of "continuing criminal enterprise" in drug trafficking.

The Chagra case drew national attention after the assassination of U.S. District Judge John Wood Jr., who was to have presided at the trial. Wood was gunned down in May at his San Antonio home.

Kerr and Jimmy Chagra's lawyer-brother Lee were frequent courtroom opponents, usually in drug-related cases. Lee Chagra was shot to death in his high-security El Paso law offices a little more than a month after the attempt on Kerr's life.

Kerr's vigorous prosecution efforts and his clashes with Lee Chagra did not make him popular with Chagra family members. The announcement of two other prosecutors to handle the Jimmy Chagra trial came as a surprise to many courtoom observers.

"We believe the terrorist-type attack on Kerr has served to have him and law enforcement at federal, state and local levels to redouble their efforts in combating crime," Boyd said in a statement Wednesday.

"We deeply regret losing his services to this district, but could not stand in his way when he was offered a new position within law enforcement with substantially greater challenges," Boyd said.

An assistant U.S. attorney at the Austin trial, who asked not to be identified, was asked why Kerr might have left the federal prosecutor's ranks.

"Still scared, I guess," he said.

In a related development Wednesday, a federal judge in El Paso declared a mistrial in the perjury trial of Ransom Patrick Cross, who prosecutors said first claimed — then denied — knowing who tried to kill Kerr.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Reavley declared the mistrial after a jury deadlocked on the verdict. Prosecutors say Cross lied when he told a grand jury he never heard members of a motorcycle gang discussing the attack.

Jet Collision Kills 154 In Ukraine

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet jetliners collided over the Ukraine, killing everyone on board, including members of a Tashkent soccer team, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported Wednesday.

Based on the capacity of the aircraft involved, the death toll could be as high as 154.

A civil aviation spokeswoman in Minsk said the two Aeroflot Tu-134s collided at about 2 p.m. Saturday over the Ukrainian city of Dneprodzerzhinsk, about 550 miles south of Moscow.

No casualty figures were given, but each Tu-134 is capable of carrying 72 passengers with a crew of five, the spokeswoman said. The national airline's planes normally fly filled to capacity.

Tass said one aircraft was en route from Tashkent, capital of Uzbekistan in Soviet Central Asia, to the far Western city of Minsk near the Polish border. The other was flying from Chelyabinsk, about 900 miles east of Moscow, to Kishinev, about 700 miles south of the capital.

Civil aviation authorities said the two flights normally would have crossed paths at Kuybyshev, about 845 miles northeast of the crash site. There was no explanation of whether either flight was off course.

First news of the crash came in Wednesday's Pravda Vostoka, the Tashkent newspaper, in a letter of condolence from members of the Uzbekistan Communist Party and government.

In addition to omitting casualty figures, none of the reports speculated about the cause of the crash.

An unconfirmed report said 17 members of the Tashkent soccer team were on one plane. The Soviet Sports Committee said it was aware of the crash but had no information on the number of team members aboard.

On Wednesday, the newspaper Sovietsky Sport, without mentioning the accident, reported tersely that, "The game between Dynamo (Minsk) and Pakhtakor (Tashkent) has been postponed until a later date."

Official reports of domestic air crashes in the Soviet Union are rare unless victims include foreigners or there were witnesses on the ground.

Tass said "A specal commission is investigating the causes of the accident."

PLO Says Young 'Pushed' Out As U.N. Ambassador

By The Associated Press

Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said Wednesday that Andrew Young was "pushed to resign his post" as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations "because he believed in the just cause of the Palestinian people."

Young resigned Wednesday, as a result of mounting criticism of an unauthorized discussion he held with a representative of the PLO in violation of long standing U.S. Foreign policy. He said he was "unbowed, not at all bloodied."

"Pushing Young to resign constitutes the ugliest signs of mental terrorism and Nazi oppression," the PLO said in a statement distributed in Beirut by the official Palestine News Agency WAFA.

"The PLO values Mr. Young's brave position regarding the just cause of the Palestinian people. The resignation is the price he paid as a result of serious pressures and dishonest methods applied against any objective dealing with the cause of the Palestinian people," the statement added.

"The PLO draws the attention of all the honest people in America and the world, especially the black force in the United States, to see how democracy is being assassinated because of pressures, terrorism and blackmail in the United States."

The PLO expressed its "hope that the time will soon come when the American citizen wakes up to see this bitter fact."

Reliable Palestinian sources said Arafat personally instructed his aides to issue the statement when he heared the report of Young's resignation.

Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO's observer at the United Nations with whom Young talked, said in New York that "Zionist pressure" forced the resignation.

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum, to whom Young first admitted the negotiations, expressed sadness but added, "This in no way detracts from the gravity of his act" — dealing with "the terrorist PLO."

In Tel Aviv, a high government official who declined to be identified, said, "I have no comment. Israel takes no interest in the internal hirings and firings in the American administration."

On Tuesday, the day after Young gave Blum a more complete account of the meeting than he had given the U.S. State Department, Israel protested to the United States both in Jerusalem and Washington that Young's contact with Terzi violated a U.S. pledge to Israel to have no dealings with the PLO.

Questioned by reporters Wednesday night, Terzi said, "I think it's tragic that the United States should succumb to blackmail — Israeli blackmail."

"That the representative of the United States should succumb to Zionist pressure means that the United States is not qualified to play any role in the Middle East," he said.

"That the United States shold compel its representative to the Security Council to resign shows that the United States should not even be on the Security Council," Terzi said.

Young has said it was because he was to be Security Council president this month that he talked with Terzi at a Kuwaiti diplomat's house in New York July 26 about postponement of a council meeting on Palestine set for July 31.

Terzi said Wednesday it was only later, after Assistant Secretary of State Harold Saunders appealed to Kuwait and Kuwait appealed to PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, that the postponement was arranged.

The Israeli government official in Tel Aviv was asked whether if Young's resignation would help ease strained relations between the United States and Israel. He replied:

"This won't necessarily clear the air. The test is what the Americans do in the Security Council debate. They did this for themselves. Carter has a responsibility to fire anybody who lies to him."

"It was a tragic thing that the United States allowed itself to be put in such a situtation," said Callistus Ndlovu, U.N. observer for the Zimbabwe African People's Union, one of the two Patriotic Front guerrilla groups fighting to overthrow the government of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

"We think Andrew Young understood southern Africa more astutely than anyone else (in U.S. diplomacy). Most African diplomats felt more at ease with Andrew Young than they did before, with anyone else.

"But as far as we're concerned, he was not a critical figure in southern Africa, as U.S. policy is not critical in southern Africa.

"I think the people who may have forced him out may find that in the long run it doesn't serve their interests at all."

PEOPLE PLACES THINGS

Carter To Attend Seminar

ATLANTA (AP) — President Carter will participate in an energy seminar at Georgia Tech Aug. 30 and then speak at a groundbreaking ceremony at Emory University, where he will receive an honorary degree.

Presidential science adviser Frank Press, acting at Carter's request, arranged a conference with Georgia Tech "to discuss the role of new energy technologies," a White House announcement said Wednesday.

After the conference, Carter will proceed to the surburban Emory campus at 2 p.m. for a groundbreaking at the Candler School of Theology for the William R. Cannon Chapel and Religious Center, a university spokesman said.

Bishop Cannon was dean of the theology school from 1953 to 1968, and is a longtime friend of Carter's. He gave a prayer at the presidential inauguration in 1977.

'Bandits' Stage Derbies

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — Authorities say six teen-aged boys, dubbed the "Bumper Car Bandits," stole rental cars and staged their own demolition derbies in isolated orange groves.

"They were having a great time driving around the groves," Detective John Pavlis said Wednesday. "They'd smash into each other, race, play chicken — just have a general good time with the cars."

Investigatorsfor the Orange County Sheriff's Department said the boys, aged 15-17, stole 13 cars between July 13 and August 3.

"These abandoned cars were turning up everywhere in the groves in various states of damage," Pavlis said. "They'd take them for a spin, get stuck in the dirt and just leave them."

He said the young bandits drove the cars out of the lots of the rental agencies after midnight.

One of the youths told police he wrecked a car when he leaned over to kiss his girlfriend while driving. Another car was found abandoned in the middle of a road after the thieves plowed it through a fence.

"One juvenile said his television was in the repair shop, so he didn't have anything else to do except steal cars," Pavlis said. "It was exciting to these kids. We called them Bumper Car Bandits."

Actor Wins Court Battle

ROBERTSON

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Actor Cliff Robertson has won a court battle about a 10-foot fence he built on his property in nearby La Jolla.

A year ago, Robertson was given approval by the San Diego Coast Regional Commission to erect an open-wood lattice wall.

Instead, he had a contractor build a solid wall, which was said to violate environmental considerations, and a neighbor asked that it be removed. The state commissioners, hearing the appeal Tuesday, said "no substantial issue" was involved.

500,000 Expected For Pope

BOSTON (AP) — Police officials estimate that as many as half a million people will come to Boston Oct. 1 for the expected visit of Pope John Paul II.

Hotel keepers add, however, there will not be rooms available for even the pope's traveling party.

Alan Tremain, president of the Greater Boston Hotel and Motel Inn Association, said the city's 3,500 rooms have been booked for months.

The pope will be staying with Cardinal Humberto Medeiros. But Tremain said he received a call last week from a member of the Vatican staff who wanted 400 rooms for the pope's entourage and the press corps. Tremain said he suggested the Vatican look for lodgings in nearby Providence, R.I.

Boston Not Quake Prone

WESTON, Mass. (AP) — Boston hasn't had a major earthquake since before the Revolutionary War, and scientists think it's about time to stop classifying the city as equal to San Francisco in quake potential.

The U.S. Geological Survey is reportedly changing its hazard estimates, on which building codes for Boston and other parts of New England are based.

Edward Chiburis, assistant director of Boston College's Weston Observatory, said there have been no recorded large earthquakes in New England since 1755, when a quake estimated at up to 5.8 on the Richter scale toppled chimneys and knocked down rock walls in eastern Massachusetts.

By comparison, the earthquake which hit San Francisco last week registered 5.9, and the great San Francisco earthquake of 1906 is estimated at close to 8 on the scale.

Neighbors Dislike Tank

WEST CARROLLTON, Ohio (AP) — For two years, Robert Sauerman has been restoring a 1943 Army halftrack, and it seems his hobby is grating on some of his neighbors' nerves.

The halftrack — a 19-foot armored vehicle — is a safety hazard, Sauerman's neighbors told the West Carrollton City Council when asking that he get rid of it. They say it is so striking that passing drivers pay more attention to it than to where they are going.

Sauerman argues that the immobile vehicle is not a threat to anyone's safety. It's just a collector's item, he said.

"Not once has anyone come to me and said they don't like it," he said. "I think this is just a matter of personal taste."

Dancer Achieves Record

NEW YORK (AP) — James Stare should have been resting his tired, battered feet Wednesday after setting a new world marathon dancing record of 330 hours, but the 22-year-old said instead that he planned to go to a disco.

The marathon began Aug. 1 to raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association and break the old mark of 329½ hours listed in the Guinness Book of World Records.

After 15 days, he had the new record and spectators had donated $2,000.

After his trip to the disco, Stare said he planned to sleep "for a month and just relax. I don't know if I'd do it again. I pushed myself in a lot of ways."

Wallace Announces Donation

WALLACE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace will donate his personal papers to the University of Alabama in Birmingham, a local radio station announced Wednesday.

Station WERC said Wallace's donation include papers from his three presidential campaigns, personal appearances and audio tapes from speeches covering the past two decades.

The station said those papers covering Wallace's 12 years as governor were not included, but instead went to the state archives in Montgomery.

It was not immediately known what tax breaks Wallace, now an administrator for the university, would reap from the donations.

Flyers Attempt Aviation Fame

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — It has been 76 years since the Wright brothers flew their simple airplane 120 feet into the history books.

Now two men plan to travel 160 miles from Jacksonville to Kitty Hawk to complete the final leg of a coast-to-coast trip they hope will earn them aviation fame.

As of Tuesday night all had gone well for Jack Peterson, Dan White and a motorized hang glider christened the "Pterodactyl Fledgling". They have apparently beaten three other teams in a race which began July 9 in Long Beach, Calif. Peterson last heard from the other contestants when in Texas.

Peterson, the pilot, has been accompanied by White, developer of the craft. White has stayed on the ground armed with spare parts. Thursday, Peterson hopes to touch down the snowmobile-engined glider at the site of the Wright Brothers Memorial at Kitty Hawk.

Just like the reaction the Wright brothers received, "Everybody was laughing at us when we left," Peterson said Tuesday.

Barber Approves Carson's Hair

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Johnny Carson's hair has won qualified approval from Florence Brower, 91, who says she's still the same barber she was before appearing on Carson's "Tonight" show.

Mrs. Brower, who still shaves her customer with a straight razor, said she was thrilled by the publicity and three-day trip to Burbank, Calif., which she described as her first vacation. Carson was a good judge of people and didn't need a haircut, Mrs. Brower said.

Mrs. Brower has been sought by newspapers and magazines since a story appeared last month chronicling her 54 years in barbering. Her newfound fame has not changed her price for haircuts — it's still $3.

Priest Rescued After Crash

NEW YORK (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest from Brooklyn was recuperating Wednesday after he was stranded for seven hours aboard his small homemade plane, which he was forced to ditch 12 miles out in the Atlantic Ocean.

"Sure I thought about dying," recalled the Rev. Richard Reder. "But I also thought, 'Whatever you want, God, that's it.' I did a lot of praying as I sat on the deck or in the cockpit trying to stay dry. I put myself in the hands of God."

The 46-year-old priest, a former Army chaplain, bought a kit for $2,500 and built the 17-foot single-engine plane with a 22-foot wing span in the garage of St. Francis Xavier Church in the Park Slope section of Brooklyn. It took him more than two years to build.

Reder took off Tuesday from Brookhaven Airport on Long Island en route to Fort Stewart, Ga. About noon, off the New Jersey coast, the plane's propellor apparently cracked.

"The plane was probably in the best shape it's ever been in," Reder, a pilot for nine years, recounted. "The Volkswagen engine was fine. I pushed it a little — a little too much."

Grand Jury Indicts District Attorney

AMARILLO (AP) — A Potter County grand jury returned a two-count official misconduct indictment Wednesday against District Attorney Tom Curtis.

Curtis was booked into the sheriff's office at Amarillo after the indictment.

Curtis and the grand jury recently have clashed about refusal by grand jurors to allow Curtis or any of his staff members to participate in grand jury deliberations.

Reagan Speeches Bring In $72,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, an unannounced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, was paid at least $72,840 for speaking to GOP organizations during the last year and a half.

The fees paid by clearly identifiable Republican groups, ranging from the Republican National Committee to the campaign organization of freshman Sen. Roger Jepsen of Iowa, were among $817,082 grossed by Reagan from speaking, writing, radio and television work during the 18 months that ended on June 30.

The figures were contained in documents that Reagan filed with the Federal Election Commission.

Regardless of whether a person has formally announced for the presidency, he or she becomes a legal candidate when a campaign committee is registered with the Federal Election Commission, and thus later is required to inform the government of financial activities. Reagan's committee registered March 5.

Included in the gross earnings were $30,187 from King Features Syndicate for his newspaper column and $137,938 for his radio commentary.

Reagan was paid for speaking to 22 Republican groups during the period. Veteran observors say Reagan's charging the GOP for so many speeches is unusual. Politicians generally are anxious to speak without charge to organizations in their own party, hoping to be rewarded with support in the future.

The list of his paid audiences also included chambers of commerce, colleges and an array of business groups, from the Pet Food Institute to the Distilled Spirits Institute.

The biggest fee, $10,572, was paid by the University of Southern California. Speeches before two Boy Scout groups earned Reagan $7,659. He was paid $2,551 for speaking at four meetings of Citizens for the Republic, which he heads.

Reagan's total wealth appears to be well over $1 million, although it is difficult to determine because government officials and candidates are required to list only an asset's value within a range, such as from $5,000 to $15,000.

The former California governor's largest holdings are his ranch in Santa Barbara County, Calif., which he bought in 1974 for $526,600; a real-property sales contract, worth more than $250,000; and his share of Continental Illinois Properties, also valued at more than $250,000.

Yacht Disaster Survivors Straggle Into Ports

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Storm-battered survivors of the world's worst yacht-racing disaster straggled into ports along England's southwestern coast Wednesday. The death toll was at least 17. All American craft were reported safe.

The Royal Ocean Racing Club, which sponsored the 670-mile Fastnet yacht race from southern Ireland to the English Channel, said 21 boats sank or were abandoned Tuesday when gale-force winds whipped up mountainous seas that tore through the 306-yacht, 19-nation fleet.

The racing club said 13 of the victims were British, one was Dutch and one was an American, Frank H. Ferris, who lived in London. The Coast Guard at Land's End, Cornwall, said Wednesday night it had found two more bodies, bringing the known death toll to 17.

A spokesman for the U.S. Yacht Racing Union in Newport, R.I., said, however, that another fatality on Ferris's yacht Ariadne was Robert Robie, who lived in London and was either American or Canadian.

"It was the heaviest going I've ever known," said Stephen Colgate, 43, of New York City, a veteran trans-Atlantic yachtsman whose 54-foot Sleuth reached Plymouth under sunny skies Wednesday morning.

"The waves were so steep that the boat was flying off the top before crashing down into the trough. It was frightening," said Sean Thrower, 30, a crewman on the British boat Festina Tertia. A fellow crewman, washed overboard, was one of the dead.

Lloyds of London, the international insurance firm, said it was unable to estimate the amount of the insurance bill. "We have never known a yachting disaster on this scale," a spokesman said.

Stretched to the limit, British rescue helicopter and lifeboat crews worked through the night and day picking up survivors and towing in stricken boats. Military rescue headquarters reported at least 136 persons had been taken to land.

Many yachts finished the race or reached havens in western England and Ireland on their own. At nightfall, searchers were looking for 25 boats still unaccounted for.

Best known of the American boats in the Fastnet race was Ted Turner's Tenacious. Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves baseball team, and his 19-member crew crossed the finish line fifth in the race, but unofficial weighted standings listed him as the winner.

Turner, who won the America's Cup race in 1977, said his boat faced 30-foot seas that could have swamped a smaller craft. He defended the decision to run the race, which began Saturday, despite reports of possibly high winds.

"This was the greatest sailing accomplishment in a long time," he said. "But we weren't really concerned with the conditions, we were concerned with winning.

"It would have been frightening for a lot of people. They didn't know the storm was coming before the race started. It's like in an automobile race when there's a big pile-up, or in a steeplechase, or when you go in an airplane.

"It was tragic so many people were lost, but we're not going to stop."

The Tenacious, Sleuth and 10 other American entries in the race were reported safe in harbor by Wednesday night.

Other crew members on the Adriadne were reported to be British. The boat was abandoned with one more dead, two missing and the rest rescued by a coastal vessel.

The other U.S. craft, their owners and captains: Williwaw, owned by Seymore Sinett, Raritan, N.J., Yacht Club, captained by Dennis Conner of San Diego, Calif.; Aries, owned and sailed by Mike Swerdlow of New York; Imp, owned and skippered by David Allen of Belvedere, Calif.; Boomerang, owned by George Comantaros of the New York Yacht Club; Alliance, U.S. Naval Academy; Toscana, owned by E. Swenson of New York; Carina, sailed by Richard Nye of Greenwich, Conn.; Andiamo Robin, owned by J. Harding, Buffalo, N.Y.; Acadia, skippered by Burt Keenan of New Orleans.

Race officials rejected contentions that the event — in which the vessels sailed from the Isle of Wight in the English Channel to Fastnet Light south of Ireland and back — should have been called off and that some entries were not fit for ocean conditions.

Many of the yachts were ultramodern craft with carbon fiber hulls and light alloy rigging, built for speed but overwhelmed by the brutal seas.

Alan Green, secretary of the Royal Ocean Racing Club, told a news conference: "What people don't understand is that once the race is started there is no means of communicating with the boats. There is no way a race committee can say, 'Stop, come home.'"

He said the Fastnest race, held every two years, has encountered no calamities since it was organized in 1925, and "this occasion was a freak."

"The type of yacht that suffered was spread over a very wide variety," he said. "Some extremely experienced yachtsmen have been casualties."

The race began in light winds Saturday, but race officials warned the skippers to expect some bad weather. The first warning of a gale was broadcast at midday Monday, the government meteorological office said. By midnight, the office was warning ships and yachts in the region that gale force winds were on the way.

Forecasters said the violent conditions were caused by warm air from the West Indies meeting cold air from Iceland.

Desegregation Seminars Set At Schools

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Court-ordered busing represents a fear of the unknown to those involved, say city public school administrators who are sponsoring a program they hope will assuage that fear in Lubbock.

For the second year, parents and students who will be participating in Lubbock's court-ordered desegregation plan can take advantage of "Information Day" scheduled for Friday at schools involved in the plan.

The parents and their children will have the opportunity to ride the bus route the student will follow this year to their assigned school. They will also be able to ask any questions they may have about the system and receive printed information.

The program, which administrators say proved highly successful last year, was sponsored at that time by LOOK (Lubbock's Opportunity for Our Kids), a community group formed to provide a smooth first year transition to desegregation.

Superintendent Ed Irons said, "We're encouraging parents to take advantage of the program if they haven't before." He said many students toured their receiving schools in May, but all parents did not get that opportunity.

Burn Unit For Health Sciences Hospital Sought

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

No formal protests were directed toward the construction of Health Sciences Center Hospital's proposed burn unit at Wednesday's hearing before the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin.

However, it will be late September before hospital officials are told whether their application for a certificate of need for the unit has been approved.

Administrator Robert Berryman and Dr. David Bessinger, who would head the proposed unit, testified for several hours on the economic feasibility of the unit. The hearing began at 9 a.m. and adjourned at 3 p.m., and hearing officer John Darrouzet said he will report his recommendations by Aug. 27.

A public meeting has been set for Sept. 20 in Austin, at which time the Texas Health Facilities Commission will approve or reject the application.

The local health planning agency, South Plains Health Systems, approved the construction June 21. However, the local board's approval was conditional, submitted with a request that Health Sciences officials make sure they could afford to run the unit before it was built.

That conditional request was made in light of the hospital's pressing financial problems. Administrator Berryman is part of a team of specialists sent in by Brookwood Management Services to run the hospital during a crisis period marked by mounting unpaid patient bills and a shrinking cash flow.

Both the commission and the local health service agencies are designed to prevent duplication of services and therefore keep rising medical costs down as much as possible.

The commission makes decisions based on advice from local agencies, but the group has made decisions adverse to the local group's recommendations on occasion.

The Board of Managers for the Lubbock County Hospital District Monday approved sending the team to Austin to ask for construction approval, with the understanding that construction would not have to begin immediately if approval is granted.

Board member Joe Stanley warned the South Plains Health Systems group when it voted local approval that financial problems at the hospital made construction of the unit questionable.

"Under the financial conditions we're in, I think the project should be deferred," Stanley said. He added that he was more concerned about the unit's long-range operational costs than the financing of its construction.

The unit is expected to cost about $182,000 for construction alone. In making their presentation to the South Plains Health Systems board, hospital representatives said that private corporations and granting institutions had expressed interest in funding the unit.

In addition to anticipated donations, the hospital indicates revenue necessary to finance the project will be obtained from the hospital's permanent available funds — amounting to $392,936.

Proponents of the burn unit stress that the facility will organize and formalize acute burn care for burn victims in Lubbock and the surrounding areas. At the present time, burn patients are either being treated in hospitals without burn programs or sent to burn centers in Dallas, San Antonio or Galveston.

The unit would be remodeled from the existing surgical, intensive-care unit and adjacent call rooms and offices. Facilities for hydrotherapy and some physical therapy will be available within the unit so that severely burned patients will not have to be removed from the unit — thus risking the contamination so dangerous to burn victims.

Surgical and specialized diagnostic procedures would still require removal from the unit. But the operating room is right across the hall, so traveling distance would be minimal.

In supporting the hospital's request for the unit, Bessinger submitted a survey indicating that approximately 475 burn patients were hospitalized in the area served by Health Sciences Center Hospital. That area include Amarillo, Abilene, the Permian Basin, El Paso and Eastern New Mexico.

Bessinger's projections indicate an increase to 529 burn patients per year by 1983.

Opening lead: ♠Q

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

East's opening bid was light, but he did have three quick tricks. South's two-spade bid is a popular conventional bid, called the weak jump overcall, used by tournament players. It has also spread to lots of rubber bridge games. It shows a good six or seven-card suit with very little additional outside strength.

After the opening lead and the club continuation, declarer ruffed. Trumps were drawn, and then South led the jack of hearts from his hand. West ducked, the eight of hearts was played from dummy, and East won with the ace. East led a high club and declarer realized he had made a serious error. He was forced to ruff with his next to last trump.

Declarer could no longer establish a second heart trick. He needed two entries to his hand, one so he could drive out the queen of hearts and the second so he could cash the remaining heart trick. Because the king of hearts was in dummy by itself, there was an unfortunate block that declarer could not hurdle.

Conservation of assets is very nice, but this was one time when South could not afford to conserve dummy's heart king.

It was declarer's own fault. When he played the jack of hearts, if he had played dummy's king losing to East's known ace (East opened the bidding), there would have been no defense. East would have played a club, forcing declarer to ruff, but declarer would then have forced out West's queen with his 10 and still would have had the trump needed to return to his hand to cash the two established heart tricks.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I hate to be a pig, but I need two things from you. First, your definition of "class," which my mother clipped out and pinned to the kitchen bulletin board. It stayed there for nearly six months.

I also need your definition of "love." I carried that one in my wallet for almost two years. Then somebody stole my purse.

I realize my chances for getting both requests granted are about one in a million, but I have nothing to lose except a 15-cent stamp. — Denver

Dear Den: Here are both definitions. I'm glad you asked. It made my day a lot easier.

Class never runs scared. It is surefooted and confident that it can handle whatever comes along.

Class bespeaks an aristocracy unrelated to ancestors or money. A blueblood can be totally without class, while the son of a Welsh miner may ooze class from every pore.

Class can "walk with kings and keep its virtue and talk with crowds and keep the common touch." Everyone is comfortable with the person who has class because he is comfortable with himself.

Love is friendship that has caught fire. It is quiet understanding, mutual confidence, sharing and forgiving. It is loyalty through good and bad times. It settles for less than perfection and makes allowances for human weaknesses.

Love is content with the present, it hopes for the future, and it doesn't brood over the past. It's the day-in and day-out chronicle of irritations, problems, compromises, small disappointments, big victories, and working toward common goals.

If you have love in your life, it can make up for a great many things you lack. If you don't have it, no matter what else there is, it's not enough.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 20-year-old girl who has had two years of college. I appear to be well-adjusted and outgoing, have many friends — both male and female — and most people think I'm terrific. The truth is, I have a terrible hang-up.

I just broke up with my third "serious" boyfriend because he began to talk about sex and marriage. The same thing happened with the previous two. Immediately, I started to date a homosexual — which is exactly what I did before.

My mother is furious with me. She says I am crazy. I'm embarrassed by the way she treats my homosexual friends — barely civil.

I am very depressed because I know I am running away from the kind of life I really want. What's the matter with me anyway? — Miserable "Mary"

Dear "Mary": You have defined your problem in the last 20 words of your letter. And now you must find out why you behave in a manner that is so self-destructive. You need to explore your past actions with a good therapist. If you can't afford a psychiatrist, get counseling through a mental health clinic. Look in the phone book. And good luck, dear.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please tell me what causes pleurisy and what can be done for it. — H.H.

Pleurisy is a greatly misunderstood medical term. Many readers mistakenly believe it to mean "pain in the chest" — any pain in the chest. The pain from pleurisy has a very definite origin, an inflammation of the "pleura" (PLOO-ruh), which is the thin sheet of tissue covering the lungs. This membrane rides smoothly on lung surfaces during breathing — as the lungs expand and contract-unless something interferes.

Disturbance of the pleura may arise from virus or bacterial infection, from clots, or from tumors. The end result is the friction from the irritation, which sends the stabbing pains through the chest. People who've had pleurisy can tell you of the agony of the deep breath.

I cannot tell from the rest of your letter whether you, indeed, do have pleurisy, or are using the term loosely. In any event, if you have pains when you breathe, it might be from pleurisy. That is treated by eliminating the infection, if present, or by treating other lung medical problems.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My daughter is 34 and has had the problem of trichomonas (vaginal). She's been treated with Flagyl, but it evidently doesn't help her. She is constantly itching and has an odorous discharge, which makes her miserable. Her husband has been checked, and he is OK. She cannot understand why she seems OK for a few days after (taking) the medicine only to have the problem come back. I know that Flagyl is effective in most cases, but there must be a lot of other women who get poor results. Is there something else she might be taking? — Mrs. E.L.

Flagyl (metronidazole) is effective against the trichomonas organism in 95 percent of cases. In some resistant cases treatment may be necessary for several months. However, a sensitivity can develop, and it may even encourage the growth of the candida (a fungus). If she has candida infection the Flagyl would make it worse. Other medicine may be needed after two or three months of use.

She should have a smear examination to determine exactly which organisms are present. Even if the husband is clear of infection, he should use a condom until both he and his wife are clear simultaneously. The husband is given Flagyl even if the organism is not found. For more on this, see the booklet, "Vaginitis: The Hidden Ailment." For a copy send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: This is not an urgent problem, but it has me worried. I have brown spots appearing on my face. I do not take the pill. I'm 36 years old. Do any foods cause this? Is there anything that can be done? — B.H.

You've eliminated a common cause of this — the pill. I presume a second cause can be eliminated, too — pregnancy. A third, aging, which can cause pigmentation changes, is not a factor for you. Foods will not cause this.

That leaves a number of other, not so common causes. Among them are thyroid gland, adrenal, or ovary disturbance.

Pernicious anemia and other absorption problems might be investigated.

If the spots persist you should be examined.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please comment on tension tremors. My hand shakes when I first start writing or when I am tense. I am 52 years old. Is this a form of Parkinson's disease? J.A.

You may mean "intention" tremor. Were you told this by a doctor? The tremor of Parkinson's disease occurs when the hands are at rest, as when lying in your lap. Intention tremor occurs during movement. It tends to subside when the arm is held outstretched. This tremor can be a part of other general nerve or muscle problems.

I cannot tell from your brief note what kind of tremor you have. It is difficult for patients to describe such things, and only firsthand observation by a doctor settles matters. There are distinct forms of tremors and each represents a different cause. A neurologist can tell quickly what kind a person has, which is treatable, and which is not. Distinguishing tremor tells whether surgery, medicine, or both will help.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can prostrate stones be removed or does the whole gland have to be taken out? — Mrs. T.S.

Usually the whole gland is removed. However, these stones rarely require surgery.

To learn about the major categories of prostate trouble-symptoms, treatment, how to speed recovery-read the booklet, "The Pesky Prostate." For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Just want to let you know we love you, can't do without you, don't know how we ever made it before your column started.

I wear knee-hi's under my slacks. When they get a hole in the toe, which they do about the second time you put them on, just go to the machine and sew across the toe above the hole. Cut off the piece and you have hose to wear around home with your "work" clothes.

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is a hint that I hope will help new mothers or mothers with babies in diapers.

I was packing my daughter's things to go for an overnight visit to my parents. It seemed so unreasonable to pack such a big suitcase for her for just one night. Then I got the idea of packing all her diapers and plastic pants in her diaper stacker. When we arrived and she needed a diaper change, there was no more lugging out big suitcases full of diapers.

The diaper stacker could be hung anywhere and it had everything she would need. Then I could use her diaper bag to carry the rest of her clothes.

When we got home, I just hung the diaper stacker back up and no more diapers to unpack and put away.

Wish I had thought of this when my son was in diapers. — Cheryl Mitchell

DEAR HELOISE:

If you empty the pan just as the popping stops, almost all the kernels will have popped and none will burn.

Also, this makes even cheaper brands of popcorn pop large and tender. — Dottie Uhlman

DEAR HELOISE:

You know those bulbs you often have left over when you dig up your tulips, daffodils, etc.?

When there are more than you can use, why not call the local elementary school to see if they can use them?

You might even offer to help the children plant them. They can have the fun of planting them and watching them come up and bloom next spring. — D.B.

Show Indicates Life May Exist In Outer Space

Nobody knows for sure, but there is evidence in the "Children of the Universe" program at the Moody Planetarium which suggests the universe may contain a hundred million billion additional worlds where other humans could exist.

The programs at the planetarium of The Museum of Texas Tech University takes the viewer back to Galileo's time, when the universe was thought to spin around the earth. Then the audience moves forward to present knowledge and scientific conjecture.

"It is currently believed that, as the universe unfolds, the formation of planets around stars is a natural process," the narrator explains. "Mathematically, there could be billions of suns which have spawned offspring with conditions unique enough for intelligent life to have evolved."

It happened on earth, and if here, why not elsewhere? And life other than earth's own may one day make itself known, the program suggests.

"Children of the Universe" reveals the latest scientific understanding of how the universe began and speaks of titanic explosions, trillion degree heat, the death of stars and the birth of our planet.

Shows are presented at 3 p.m. daily. The cost is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. Preschool children are not encouraged to attend.

PLANE, MARIJUANA FOUND

GREENEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A cargo plane loaded with about nine tons of marijuana worth an estimated $6 million was found early Wednesday abandoned at an airport, authorities said. Bobby Baird, an agent with the Tennessee Bureau of Criminal Identificattion, said three persons were picked up for questioning near the airport. Airport manager Walt Stone said the four-engine DC6 bore Nicaraguan registration. A resident who saw the plane land without its lights alerted authorities about 2:30 a.m., Baird said.

Pre-Trial Hearing Open Despite Ruling

DALLAS, Ore. (AP) — A Polk County judge has refused to close a pre-trial hearing to the press and public in what is believed to be the first Oregon case involving a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling allowing such proceedings to be closed.

District Judge Walter W. Foster on Aug. 10 rejected a motion by Monmouth attorney William Lovell, who sought to close a preliminary hearing involving his client, Falls City Councilman David A. Graham. Graham is charged with attempted assault and menacing.

whose last name begins with the letters A through L will be transported the first 4½ months of the school year. Those whose names begin with the letters M through Z will be bused the last 4½ months.

In minority schools, students whose last name begins with A through L will be transported during the first, third and fifth grades. The remaining students will be bused during the second, fourth and sixth grades.

On Information Day, parents and students should report at 9 a.m. to their sending school, where buses will take them to their respective receiving school.

Parents and students may tour the school and the principals will be available to answer any questions. Irons said that parents will also receive an information packet containing bus route maps, and a letter explaining the transportation system.

PTA representatives will have refreshments at each of the schools.

Administrators say the program is primarily aimed at parents who often have more apprehension than the students. "That's why this is so invaluable," said Mike Bennett, public information director for the schools. "It will relieve the apprehension of the parents who can come home and tell Johnny it's going to be okay."

Irons and Ed Stokes, director of elementary education, said they do not expect as great a turnout as last year. "Now that we've been through it a year, people are pretty well aware of the things going on," said Irons.

—Guadalupe to Stewart.
—Iles to Wheelock.
—Mahon to Hardwick.
—Martin to Maedgen.
—Posey to Stubbs.
—Wheatley to Overton.

Eye-Witness Claim Disputed At Trial

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A 46-year-old Lubbock man told a 72nd District Court jury Wednesday he watched Jerry Martin Ewings shoot at Sylvester Kilpatrick twice on March 17, wounding him once in the neck.

The 37-year-old Kilpatrick died three days later, and Miss Ewings was charged with murder in connection with his death.

Willie Curtis testified Wednesday that Miss Ewings and Kilpatrick entered a club in the 2200 block of East 37th Street together the afternoon of the shooting and, after staying about 10 minutes, Miss Ewings walked out and was followed by Kilpatrick.

Curtis said that when Kilpatrick reached the doorway, the 29-year-old defendant turned toward Kilpatrick and pointed a pistol at him. However, Curtis testified, Kilpatrick lunged at Miss Ewings and she fled.

She returned to the club about 10 minutes later and again confronted Kilpatrick, who was standing outside the establishment, Curtis told the four-woman, eight-man panel.

Without a word, Curtis said, Miss Ewing fired once at Kilpatrick and then said, "I'll kill you; you know I will," before firing a second time.

Curtis told the jury he took a .22-caliber rifle from his pickup truck after the shooting and told Miss Ewings, who was then crying over Kilpatrick's body, to give him the gun. Curtis said he removed four live rounds from the .22-caliber pistol and then returned it to the defendant.

However, on cross-examination, Miss Ewings's attorney, Mark Hall, noted contradictions between Curtis's testimony and a statement he gave police following the shooting.

Hall read a portion of Curtis's statement in which he told police he did not see the shooting because he was on the west side of the building. He told officers, according to the statement, that after hearing what sounded like two gunshots, he went around the corner and saw Kilpatrick on the ground.

El Pasoan Convicted Of Drug Trafficking

AUSTIN (AP) — Jamiel Alexander "Jimmy" Chagra, a high-rolling Las Vegas gambler, was convicted Wednesday of organizing and managing a "Colombian Connection" cocaine and marijuana smuggling venture.

Chagra, 34, faces a prison sentence of 10 years to life without parole, plus fine of up to $100,000 and confiscation of any profits he might have made from dope smuggling.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions said he would sentence Chagra in El Paso, where Chagra grew up, on Sept. 5.

The federal court jury of eight women and four men deliberated less than two hours before convicting Chagra of "continuing criminal enterprise" in the drug traffic.

Prosecutors said when the trial began two weeks ago that the continuing criminal enterprise law is known as the "kingpin statute."

In convicting Chagra, the jury found he directed at least five persons in a series of at least three violations of federal drug laws and made a "substantial income" from doing so.

Government witnesses said Chagra was "the boss" of an operation that smuggled 13.2 pounds of cocaine from Colombia to Florida and attempted to smuggle 30,000 pounds aboard the coastal freighter Dona Petra from Colombia to Florida in late 1977.

Federal witnesses said Chagra oversaw the unloading of several tons of marijuana from two other Colombian freighters, the Miss Connie and the Eco Pesca IV in December 1977 after their American connections failed to make a rendevous in the Bahamas.

The Dona Petra, Miss Connie and Eco Pesca IV all were seized by the Coast Guard between Christmas and New Year's Eve, 1977.

Witnesses also said Chagra claimed he directed an attempt to fly 17,000 pounds of marijuana from Colombia to Ardmore, Okla., in December 1976. The plane and its cargo and crew were seized by federal agents upon landing at Ardmore.

Chagra showed no signs of emotion but his sister, Pat De La Torre of El Paso, quietly wept in her seat on the second row of the courtroom after the verdict was announced.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Guyer of San Antonio, one of the prosecutors, said he thought the verdict should slow down the drug traffic in the El Paso area, at least for a time.

"We would expect a deterrent effect," Guyer said.

Pierce urged Sessions to jail Chagra after the verdict was announced or raise his $400,000 bond to $3 million cash "in light of the evidence ... regarding Mr. Chagra's financial condition, in view of the circumstances of the case and in view of the fact he faces up to life imprisonment without parole."

The section that meets on Tuesday nights will begin Sept. 4 and the Wednesday night section on Sept. 5.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

A STATEMENT BY JOE SHEELY of Tolleson, Ariz., chairman of the board of directors of Cotton Inc., charges that a letter which Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., sent to the secretary of agriculture demanding the resignation or firing of J. Dukes Wooters, president of CI, was both "unwarranted and regrettable."

"It would have been prudent for Mr. Findley to have taken the time to become more knowledgeable about the nature of the hate mail campaign which he now appears to be championing," Sheely said.

Sheely said Findley, "who represents no cotton growers," failed to disclose the "whole story" behind an investigation that prompted the letter to Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland.

Findley's letter called for the resignation or removal of Wooters as president of CI. The congressman said Wooters had hired private detectives to investigate and interrogate Cotton Inc. employees at the organization's Raleigh, N. C., office.

SHEELY SAID FINDLEY "HAS FOR MANY years been an outspoken critic of the cotton industry" and "has seemed determined in recent years to run the Cotton Inc. program himself rather than allow producers, through their duly elected board of directors, to manage their own program as required by law, in a manner they believe to be most beneficial to themselves."

Several months ago, Sheely said, plain brown paper envelopes were received by Cotton Inc. directors, Cotton Board members, and other cotton industry leaders across the country.

"The envelopes contained identical sets of copied newspaper articles carefully selected from a wide range of articles published during that time period in such a manner as to discredit the leadership and accomplishments of the Cotton Inc. program," he said.

"There was no identification of any sort as to why or by whom the material was sent. It was an example of pure hate mail.

"Special care had been taken, however, to obtain a clear original postmark — a city which has led to wide speculation that the sender was a particular individual well known within the cotton industry. It would appear that this was an attempt to create, maliciously, ill will toward that individual, who is not presently connected with Cotton Inc., and to further disrupt this industry.

"THIS MAILING WAS VIEWED BY MANY, including myself, as being vicious and disruptive to the entire Cotton Inc. program, and to producers themselves. The manner in which it was done was clearly underhanded, and its only final result would be to destroy the very program which has just in the past few years given cotton producers some hope for their future.

"A number of directors, myself included, turned the material over to Cotton Inc. for evaluation. When initial examination indicated that some Cotton Inc. staff members might themselves be possibly involved, I participated in a decision to retain competent, professional counsel to determine, in an objective manner, the truth of the matter.

"What has happened here represents a threat to far more than just the president of Cotton Inc. The cotton producer's struggle to compete effectively and survive in a very tough industry is going to remain difficult.

"IMPROVEMENTS IN THE PRODUCER'S position within the industry haven't come easily," Sheely said. "We have encountered many obstacles; and more will be placed in our way.

"Yet substantial progress has been made, and there is great promise for the 1980s. Given the obstacles facing cotton on the one hand, and the potential we have on the other, a strong, united effort is a must."

Sheely said the CI investigation has not been completed. However, he added: the investigation already has "proven" that some individuals originally implicated were not involved.

The statement described Wooters as "the one man who is perhaps more than any other responsible" for the success of Cotton Inc.'s programs.

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED 35 TO 20 POINTS lower Wednesday after fluctuating in a tight 55-point range.

Commission houses were net sellers. Prominent traders provided scattered support in October and December.

Floor brokers said cotton traders appeared to be looking for direction from the neighboring Comex silver and gold markets, which also closed on a flat note.

The USDA's supply-demand report this week generally was what had been expected. The lowering of the 1978-79 export estimate to 6.2 million bales from the 6.3 million projected in July was expected because of the difficulty late in the season in getting cotton shipped.

ENDING STOCKS IN 1978-79 ALSO were expected to be about 3.8 million bales. The USDA increased its estimate for ending stocks to 3.8 million bales from 3.7 million in July as a result of the reduced export estimate.

While the USDA's estimates for 1979-80 mill use and exports did raise some eyebrows, sources generally agreed it is too early to tell whether the department's projections are on target.

Many industry officials had said exports could increase in 1979-80 from the the 1978-79 level, but the USDA projected exports this season at 6.0 million bales, plus or minus 1 million bales, down 200,000 bales from last season.

At the same time, mill use in 1979-80 has been expected in some quarters to drop more than 100,000 bales from the 1978-79 level. The USDA estimated 1979-80 domestic consumption at 6.2 million bales, plus or minus 400,000 bales. This was down from the USDA's 1978-79 estimate of 6.3 million bales.

Food Prices Surrounded By Confusion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says consumers "may be confused about differences between prices farmers get for their products and what consumers pay for them at the retail store."

They may be especially confused after President Carter's meeting with food-industry executives.

He said "farm prices" declined "in the last three months" at an annual rate of 17 percent and said the spread between raw and retail prices was too high to be justified.

That spread includes both costs and profits for processing and marketing food. Industries have quarreled with USDA for years on the calculations, and more discussions of that were promised at the White House session.

But just two weeks ago, USDA reported the official monthly farm-price figures for July.

They averaged 0.75 percent higher than in June, back up to the record level set in March and repeated in May. Wheat, corn and soybean prices were at their highest levels in years.

That meant overall farm prices had increased, not decreased, by 18.3 percent since April — an annual rate of almost 55 percent — and stood at a level 14 percent higher than a year before.

Grocery prices in June, the latest month for which data is available, were up 9.4 percent from June 1978.

The next day, top USDA officials were excitedly talking about gains in farm income this year.

Recently, USDA issued a "briefing paper" for "confused consumers" on the subject of food price spreads, the difference between what farmers get and shoppers pay.

The paper used the same 17 percent Carter used the day before — with two key differences.

The comparisons were for April through June, rather than the May through July period implied by Carter. And, instead of farm "prices," it talked about the "farm value of domestic food."

Easily, said Jerry Ball of USDA's World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board.

The farm-price index includes two categories of commodities that make little difference in retail food costs, he said.

First, there are non-food items — cotton, soybeans, field corn, hay and tobacco, for example. Then there are food ingredients — such as wheat for flour — that account for only a tiny portion of the price of a processed food like bread.

The food-price index is weighted according to consumers' priorities, Ball said. That means heavy weight is given in the calculations to meats and fresh fruit and vegetables.

And what farmers receive for live meat animals — cattle, hogs and poultry — indeed has declined. Since April, for example, the meat-animal price index has dropped 11 percent — to a point 19 percent higher than July 1978.

Average prices for beef cattle alone have dropped 9.4 percent since April — to a point about 30 percent above a year ago.

Ball said some fruits also dropped, although oranges and grapefruit are bringing prices above parity.

In the end, he said, "It's quite possible for farm values of foods to drop without there being distress for farmers, although, if there is any today, it would be in the livestock sector."

The briefing paper pointed, as Carter had, to the spreads to explain food-price hikes since April, after farm values stopped a long rise of their own.

USDA last month reported the same figures, especially on beef and pork, to the White House and the administration's wage and price council after saying on its own that retailers were overcharging consumers for meat.

"The data ... indicates retailers followed an atypical pricing practice," of increasing charges when costs were rising but not decreasing when they fell, the new paper said.

But the 1979 averages will still be 11 percent above last year's averages, USDA said.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP — Wheat futures rose, soybeans fell and corn closed mixed Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices fluctuated in a general absence of major news to inspire buying or selling. A reassessment that this summer's cool temperatures may be unlikely to damage developing corn and soybean crops this early in the season encouraged some selling after the sharp price gains of Monday.

Soviet Union Contemplating Move Away From Grain Market

By JAMES VICINI

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The Soviet Union is expected to withdraw from the U.S. grain market for at least the next several months and possibly until early next year, government analysts and grain trade officials said.

They told Reuters that the U.S.S.R. probably has already covered most, if not all, of its grain import needs through early 1980, and that the Soviets may decide to wait for lower prices before making any additional large grain purchases.

One grain trade official, who has extensive dealings with the U.S.S.R., said the Soviets may wait on new purchases until they complete the movement of their own grain harvest in the fall.

He further believes that the Soviets have already bought at least 5 million metric tons of corn and 3 million metric tons of wheat for the fourth year of the U.S.—U.S.S.R. grain supply agreement.

The grain trade official and U.S. Department of Agriculture analysts agreed that the 8 million tons could easily cover the U.S.S.R. import needs from October through January.

One USDA official said the Soviet buying spree lasted from late April through mid-July, when strong concern existed about a possible tight world wheat and feed grain supply situation.

He expects the Soviets to be out of the market for the next several months due to sufficient world grain availability and in an attempt to pay lower prices than the current levels.

The USDA official also said the U.S.S.R. may want to wait before making any new big import commitments until it has a better idea about the size of the spring wheat and other crops in the new lands region, where good development has occurred.

He pointed out that the Soviets, under the grain supply agreement between the two nations, are required to spread out their purchases evenly over the 12-month period.

Another factor that could cut Soviet grain purchases is that the U.S.S.R. cannot handle as much grain during the cold winter months, the USDA official said.

He predicted that a series of USDA announcements may be made in September or the first half of October covering Soviet grain purchases for the last three months of 1979, but these most likely will not represent new sales.

Livestock Futures Close Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 150 points lower to 90 higher in active trade of 38,328 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

The market ran into aggressive profit taking with much of the bullish cattle on feed report already covered by the recent 9 percent upturn. Sharply higher cash cattle despite increased arrivals provided support for August.

Feeder cattle futures closed 150 lower to 90 higher on 6,279 lots. January through April fell the limit level with August leading nearby contracts higher.

August ran up the limit for the sixth day on the bullish cattle on feed report and sharply higher cash feeder cattle. Later months ran into profit taking that forced all contracts except the two nearbys for a limit loss for a time.

Hog futures closed 60 lower to 42 higher on sales of 7,033 contracts. October was the weakest while only August posted a gain.

Prices rose on strength in cash hogs despite increased arrivals. The discount of futures to cash was a factor along with early gains in cattle. Later months reacted when cattle futures fell and also reflected heavy hog kill.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 5 to 102 lower led by February on sales of 6,729 cars.

Selling carried over from last night as traders noted heavy hog runs and slaughter coupled with somewhat slower reduction in local belly stocks. Rallies on early strength in cattle futures ran into stiff opposition and lacked follow through.

Recent Votes Of Region's Congressmen Recorded

Roll Call Report Service

HOUSE

SENATE OFFICE BLDG. By a vote of 214 for and 184 against, the House approved $52.5 million to continue construction of a third Senate office building. The money is part of an appropriations bill (HR 4388) passed and sent to the Senate. The Senate wants to spend an additional $57.5 million on the Philip A. Hart Senate Office Building in fiscal 1980. To date, $85.1 million has been appropriated.

Rep. Adam Benjamin, D-Ind., a supporter, said: "If we objected to the construction of this new building we should have stopped it back in 1972" at its inception.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent, told an adversary that cost ceilings on the Hart building "will not be anything compared to the ceiling raised in the gentleman's district when he goes back and has to explain how he voted for this Taj Mahal."

Reps. James Collins, R-3, Bill Archer, R-7, Kent Hance, D-19, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Ron Paul, R-22, Manuel Lujan, R-1 (N.M.), and Harold Runnels, D-2, (N.M.) voted "nay."

Rep. Ray Roberts, D-4, did not vote.

BREEDER REACTOR — The House refused, 182 for and 237 against, to kill the government demonstration project aimed at developing nuclear fission as a source of electrical power. This vote preserved $183.8 million for the proposed Clinch River, Tenn., breeder reactor. The money, included in a still-pending energy bill (HR 3000) will pay for continued planning of the project.

In contrast to fusion reactors (those used in existing nuclear power plants), fission reactors breed more nuclear fuel than they consume. President Carter said he wants to kill the Clinch River project because, in part, its breeding of plutonium could lead to proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Rep. Don Fuqua, D-Fla., sponsor of the amendment, said Clinch River is already outdated. "We should have a decent funeral today and go on with a much more advanced program."

Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., R-Cal., an opponent, said it is time to "demonstrate the state of the art as it exists... to see if that technology is compatible with our needs.

Members voting "yea" wanted to end the Clinch River project.

Hall, Wilson, Collins, Roberts, Gramm, Archer, Brooks, Pickle, Leath, Wright, Hightower, Wyatt, de la Garza, White, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler, Kazen, Lujan and Runnels voted "nay."

FUEL FOR FARMERS — The House approved, 229 for and 191 against, an amendment allowing the president to set aside one percent of the nation's diesel fuel for the exclusive use of farmers.

The amendment was one of several benefiting individual groups or industries that were added to an emergency energy bill (S 1030). The bill later was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Douglas Bereuter, R-Neb., a supporter, said: "For whatever reason we may need diesel fuel, unless we have enough to grow the food we eat, all other uses are secondary."

Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., an opponent, said the amendment "could upset the balance and deprive (the farmer) of the ability to get his goods to market by taking diesel fuel that could go to truckers...."

SENATE

AUGUST RECESS — The Senate killed, 85 for and 13 against, a motion that it shorten its summer recess to the period Aug. 31 through Sept. 3. This vote thus was in favor of the ongoing 32-day recess that ends on Sept. 5.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., a supporter of the longer recess, said the Senate would be wasting its time, wasting the time of the members and possibly delaying final action on the energy legislation, if it stayed in session during the month of August. There would be little work for us to do on the floor."

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., an advocate of the shorter recess, said that "when I take a look at the calendar of unfinished business just on energy alone — and I will read it to you — senators might wish to reconsider as to whether or not this is an appropriate time to go on vacation."

Senators voting "yea" favored the full 32-day summer recess.

Sens. John Tower, R, Lloyd Bentsen, D, and Pete Domenici, R (N.M.), voted "yea."

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R (N.M.), voted "nay."

DAVIS-BACON ACT — The Senate voted, 68 for and 28 against, to make essentially no change in the application of the Davis-Bacon Act to new military construction projects funded in fiscal 1980. A favorite of organized labor, the 1931 act requires that workers on government contracts be paid the prevailing wage in the area.

This vote came during debate on S 1319, the military construction authorization bill for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. It helped to erase language to exempt military construction projects from Davis-Bacon.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., a supporter, said: "The Davis-Bacon Act means that when taxpayers are party to a contract, they do not want the workers on that project to be exploited. This was an enlightened public policy in 1931 and I do not believe that it is any less enlightened now than it was 48 years ago."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., an opponent, said: "If the Senate really wants to help the taxpayers of this nation, (it) ought to waive the Davis-Bacon Act here and save the taxpayers what the General Accounting Office and the Department of Defense have estimated — between $70 million and $210 million."

Americans Want Return Of Washington's Bible

BODMIN, England (AP) — An Anglo-American squabble left over from the Revolutionary War disrupted the quiet routine of a small military museum in this Cornish town on Tuesday. The Americans came to get George Washington's Bible back from the British.

The argument emerged at a press conference by the museum's curator, Col. Philip Trelawny, and Nathaniel Denman, a New Englander here to check on progress of an American attempt to win the Bible back.

Trelawny, 58, is curator of the museum of Cornwall's Light Infantry which, before an army reorganization 100 years ago, was the 46th Regiment of Foot. That was the regiment that burned down Bartholomew West's house in New Bedford, Mass., and made off with the West family Bible, believed to have belonged to George Washington at one time.

"The men obviously saw the signature of the commander of the enemy rebel forces and thought it was a worthwhile trophy," said Trelawny.

"Unfortunately, the flyleaf bearing Washington's signature was stolen by an American in 1909 and we've never seen it since," said Trelawny.

Trelawny said Denman brought a letter from David R. Nelson, a Massachusetts state representative and chairman of the committee to retrieve the Bible that once belonged to the first president of the United States. The letter authorized him to "file a petition" with the right authorities for its return.

The argument waxed warm between Trelawny and Denman, although both insisted it was good-humored.

At one point, however, Denman threatened to take Trelawny to court although he did not indicate which court he had in mind.

"I will take you to court," Denman said, wagging his finger at Trelawny.

The Englishman only smiled back at him, however.

"It was a most useful meeting," said Trelawny. "Mr. Denman brought with him detailed information he had culled from the New Bedford records about the regiment's action of which we had no knowledge, including the destruction of 70 privateers anchored in New Bedford harbor."

Trelawny said the Bible contained notations about the West family, and said it appeared "almost certain" it had belonged to them.

"But," said Trelawny, "I believe this is the Bible on which George Washington took his Masonic oath before Bartholomew West, master of the local lodge."

As to those "right authorities" Denman will have to petition for repossession of the book. "That's up to Denman to find out. I'm not going to help him," said Trelawny.

"As far as we in Bodmin are concerned, finders is keepers. I think that 200 years of possession is long enough to entitle us to hold it."

ELVIS BIRTHPLACE — Tourists stand outside the two-room "shotgun" shack in Tupelo, Miss. where Elvis Presley was born. Although Memphis, where the "King" of Rock 'n' Roll had his home and the town in which he died, has cashed in on the late singer's popularity, Tupelo has found the going much tougher. (AP Laserphoto)

Memphis Cashing In On Elvis While Birthplace Struggles

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — At the other end of the Elvis Aaron Presley Memorial Highway, up in Memphis, Tenn., a man plans to chop up the late singer's temporary tomb and sell 44,000 tiny pieces of marble.

The Orpheum Museum there is displaying a 9-foot fiberglass model of a proposed bronze statue of Presley.

Over in Nashville, shops in the big hotels sell all sorts of schlock memorializing Presley, who died two years ago Thursday at age 42.

But down here in Tupelo, where Presley was born in a two-room shack, people are having a harder time cashing in on the enormous popularity of the late king of rock 'n' roll.

The little house is still here, rebuilt and refurbished, and on Friday they will dedicate the Elvis Presley Memorial Chapel. Presley's longtime mentor, Col. Tom Parker, is expected to be there, along with Kathy Westmoreland, who will sing the songs she sang at the funeral two years ago.

But it doesn't take long to look at a two-room house, and it's unlikely a small chapel will attact tourists to a remote corner of Mississippi.

There's not much else to see in Tupelo. The other attractions are a fish hatchery — "one of the first in the South" — and the Natchez Trace Parkway, which is a nice road.

Near the intersection of Elvis Presley Boulevard — formerly Old Saltillo Road, where the Presley house stands — and the Elvis Aaron Presley Memorial Highway, actually U.S. Highway 78 running from Memphis to the Alabama line, Leston Marcy sat in a front booth at Coleman's Barbecue, drinking coffee from a foam cup.

Through the plate glass window he could see the huge red heart on the roof of Billie Boyd's souvenir shop, where one can find, among other things, 2,000 newspaper clippings about Presley dating back to 1957. A lone Cadillac was parked outside.

"I use to fish all up and down this creek with his daddy," Marcy said. "Elvis was just a little feller then. But even then all the other kids use to make fun of him, carrying that guitar around all the time.

"Now everybody thought they was going to make a lot of money out of this Elvis Presley birthplace thing. But didn't much come of that."

Some in this easy-going city of 25,000 had visions of an Elvis Presley theme park, an Elvis Presley museum and maybe a guitar-shaped swimming pool.

To get things started they renamed the roads. East Heights became Elvis Presley Heights. A restaurant, a supermarket and a liquor store adopted the name.

Blue and white signs sprouted, directing tourists to the tiny frame house, built for $108 by Presley's father, Vernon, and his uncle, Vester. It is now open to the public for a $1 contribution.

The modernistic memorial chapel is built behind the old homestead, alongside a youth recreation hall, a playground and the inevitable souvenir shop.

A leader behind the $150,000 project to refurbish the birthplace and build the chapel — all the money was raised by contributions — was Janelle McComb, a longtime friend of the Presley family.

She recalls asking Presley what he thought would be an appropriate memorial in his old hometown and he answered, "Well, don'tcha think a place to meditate would be nice?"

Some visitors complain the house doesn't look authentic. It has a new roof, a rebuilt porch and landscaped grounds. Few know that the ragged furniture inside, of the early Sears, Roebuck style, was rounded up by the women of the East Heights Garden Club.

Lois Kidd, a sometimes hostess at the house, says she doesn't tell the truth about the furnishings unless someone asks.

"A large number that come through here talk about the high chair in the kitchen as his and they get excited believing it was the one he used as a child," she said. "Unless they ask me, what right do I have to step on their dreams?"

The birthplace of Elvis Presley was virtually ignored when he was in his prime. He was only 13 when Vernon Presley loaded the family into a pickup one hot night in 1948 and headed up U.S. 78 to the better jobs of Memphis.

Presley's Graceland Mansion in Memphis is the true mecca for fans, who still stream through the place at a rate of 1,200 to 1,500 a day.

Presley was buried on the grounds of Graceland after a 45-day entombment in a local mausoleum. The Tennessee marble from that vault was bought by a dry cleaner named William Carwile, who plans to cut it into 1-by-2-inch pieces, mount them on walnut plaques with brass plates and sell them by mail-order for $80 each.

The mansion will be closed Thursday so family members can hold a private memorial service. Memphis State University is sponsoring a day-long memorial program featuring such country music stars as Chet Atkins, Floyd Cramer and Faron Young and songwriter Otis Blackwell, who wrote some of Presley's earlier hits, including "All Shook Up."

Hale Man Charged In Store Breakin

A-J Correspondent

PLAINVIEW — Francisco Cantu Ramirez, 18, of Plainview has been charged with burglarizing Howard's Discount Store Monday night.

Ramirez remained in county Jail Wednesday in lieu of $10,000 bond set by Justice of the Peace Glenn Stone.

Plainview police apprehended the duo about 11 p.m. Monday inside the store after an alarm sounded there. Reports show the pair apparently had hacked their way through the roof of the firm in the Village Shopping Center and had made their way into the store by a chain suspended from the roof.

Police said that more than $10,000 worth of merchandise, including guns, stereos, auto supplies and tires, were recovered as a result of the arrests. The stolen goods, police said, were taken in the break-in of 11 businesses in the city over the past year.

Argentina has been authorized a $116 million credit from the Inter-American Development Bank. The credit will be used to finance scientific and technical research and development and to improve rural education.

'Last Pioneer' Erecting Dream Fortress One Log At A Time

"That's him all right, like something out of the last century," said Butch Little at the bar. "There's a madness that drives that man, a pure madness. He lives in a world all his own."

The day they hung the portrait of J.J. Comer on the wall at the Candlewick tavern, J.J. himself drove in from the woods, from his world to theirs, to talk about the fort he was building.

It would be a magnificant frontier fort with massive stockade walls, two-story blockhouses, a log church, a clubhouse, stables and rugged outbuildings. It would cover the area of two football fields, a colossal undertaking.

"This is a pioneer dream," he said, and although everybody knew that a project of that size was impossible for one man, J.J. was resolute. He would complete it during his lifetime, he pledged.

So they hung a portrait of J.J. Comer by the bar as a kind of tribute to the frontier virtues of independence, pigheadedness and blind optimism.

That's J.J.

"I shoot black powder," he said. "I throw tomahawks and wear buckskins. My dad was a timberman and I'm an outdoorsman living the way I want, and what I want is that fort."

Five years ago, at age 46, Comer bought five acreas of land near the Mississippi River north of Oquawka and he began building his pioneer dream, one log at a time.

So far, he has completed one blockhouse and a section of stockade wall, dug a well and erected half of his church. Its not much, but it's a start.

"The average person doesn't understand how long it takes to cut a log, strip it and build something," he said, pointing to a section of pristine wilderness. "That's where the clubhouse will be. Here I've started my log church. It's going to be a working church, too, with services held regular."

J.J. is a lanky man with a long, ruddy face and enormous sideburns, and when he talks he throws his arms out in all directions, especially when he is talking about pioneer history, which is what he talks about best.

"The Sac and Fox Indians lived in this territory," he said. "Lincoln came here during the Black Hawk War when they wanted to run Chief Black Hawk out of Illinois. They finally did. The totem pole I carved over there is my version of saying the Sac and Fox don't live here anymore."

When he is not working on his fort, J.J. paints stripes on roads for the state highway department. He lives alone — he's divorced — in an aluminum mobile home, but is quick to say it will go after he constructs quarters fit enough at the fort.

He envisions weekend rendezvous with scores of muzzleloaders, antique gun fanciers like himself, gathering around roaring fires and swapping stories of a long-gone frontier. Even now, he says, he can smell the wood at night and see the buckskin and hear the thunk of tomahawks thrown at 30 paces, even though there's much to do. Too much.

But never mind. J.J. has a lifetime. "It's a crazy thing, but I Love it," he said. "It's a dream coming true."

Fireworks Bridge Artist Indicted

NEW YORK (AP) — Artist John Halpern said he placed a pail of fireworks atop the Brooklyn Bridge as an artistic statement, but a Manhattan grand jury was not convinced and indicted him Wednesday.

Halpern, 25, of Manhattan, could get up to seven years in prison if convicted on the single count of criminal possession of a weapon in the third degree.

He was arrested on Aug. 4, two days after the "fireworks-type explosives" were found in a bright yellow pail atop the bridge between Brooklyn and lower Manhattan.

Police said at the time that Halpern told them the fireworks were only a "sculpture" and was his statement about the county's economy.

However, police described the device as "very sophisticated." Officers said at the time that while the device was not strong enough to damage the bridge, it could have killed anyone near it.

Halpern remains free on $10,000 bail pending arraignment on the indictment next week.

NBC Miniseries Uses Packard Convertible As U.S. Symbol

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Perry King refuses to buy any automobile made after 1968, so it works out well that in the NBC miniseries "The Last Convertible", he travels in a 1939 Packard ragtop.

The convertible, which is nicknamed "The Empress", is the focal point of the six-hour series now being filmed. The major characters hand down the carto each other like a treasured heirloom.

"It's a symbol of the story and of the nation and its loss of innocence," said King, a car buff. In the series, he plays Russ Currier, the golden boy-leader of a group of young men who just may have been members of the last generation to march willingly to war.

"They find the world is no longer simple," King said. "The car is symbolic because it shows you can't own a convertible and not have its top slashed and the car robbed."

The series, adapted from the novel by Anton Myrer, also stars Deborah Raffin, Bruce Boxleitner, Edward Albert, John Shea and Michael Nouri. It follows the lives of five Harvard students from 1940 to 1969, when they travel in "The Empress" to their 25th class reunion.

King's blond hair is cut short for the period piece. He laughed and said, "I had trouble getting my barber to cut it this short. When I asked him to shave around my ears, he just couldn't bring himself to do it."

"This is a story about innocence and naivete and the loss of it. After the war, there was a loss of meaning and fulfillment in our lives. I see my character very specifically. In the beginning he's a demigod. He gets everything he wants. Everything comes down and sits in his lap. People like that frustrate the rest of us. Then one day he loses it."

"He wants to be a writer. Like Hemingway and Thomas Wolfe, everything he does is so that he can write about it. It becomes source material. It drives away his friends, especially Deborah Raffin. He finally becomes human. His humanity manifests itself and his writing becomes less successful. His sharp edges are rubbed off."

King arrived at an interview on his 1939 BMW motorcycle with sidecar. He has other cars, including a 1968 BMW for his wife, a former nun who recently completed law school. His hobby is rebuilding automobile engines.

He portrays a writer in the series, and a reference to his grandfather was dropped into the story. His maternal grandfather was Maxwell Perkins, the editor and mentor of Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Thomas Wolfe and others.

"I think Russ parallels the story and the fate of the nation," King said. "He starts out with great hope, then dissipates it. His goals fall by the wayside. What I like about the script is that it's about innocence and naivete. Most films now are about a lack of ideals, decadence and a lack of commitment. This is like the films of the 1930s, which were about pure things."

King said he did not think such a story could be made today as a theatrical feature. "One of the reasons I work more and more in television is because they make movies that are akin to the films of the 1930s. I've made 11 films and I only liked one, 'A Different Story'."

His films include "The Lords of Flatbush", "Mandingo" and "The Choirboys". In television, he's starred in the miniseries "Aspen" and "Captains and the Kings", and such movies as "The Cracker Factory", "Love's Savage Fury" and the upcoming "Panic on Page One".

King was born in Alliance, Ohio, the son of a doctor. He studied drama at Yale and Juilliard. Although he didn't follow his grandfather, his brother and two brothers-in-law are newspapermen.

Courts Panel Dismisses Authority Abuse Charge

CHICAGO (AP) — The Illinois Courts Commission has dismissed charges that a judge abused his authority in sentencing a woman to three days in jail for wearing an allegedly obscene T-shirt in court.

Judge Dexter A. Knowlton of Stephenson County had been accused of gross abuse of judicial authority for imposing the sentence on a contempt citation against Sue Watts, 19, on Aug. 15, 1977. The charge against the judge was brought by the Illinois Judicial Inquiry Board.

The Illinois Appellate Court later reversed the contempt conviction, but the woman had already served the three-day term.

Miss Watts had appeared in court with her mother to hear testimony in a case involving her brother. She was wearing blue jeans and a T-shirt bearing the words, "Bitch Bitch Bitch."

At Knowlton's request, Miss Watts left the courtroom and returned later wearing a jacket. Miss Watts and her mother said the jacket was buttoned to the top, but Knowlton said the lettering still was partially visible.

Knowlton said, "This is a court of law. We conduct these things with dignity. I am holding you in contempt of court, and you are sentenced to three days in the county jail."

The state courts commission, composed of an Illinois Supreme Court justice and five other judges, found that Knowlton's action did not constitute gross abuse of judicial power.

The commission pointed out that the appellate court, in reversing Knowlton, had said, "There have been very few decisions concerning the attire of courtroom spectators."

Boating Safety Tips Can Make Water Sports Fun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Boat buffs love this time of year and boating is lots of fun, but it also will pay to be aware of fire dangers according to the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

•Make sure you have a Coast Guard-approved fire extinguisher aboard and know how to use it.

•Always make sure that bilge fans are working to remove fuel fumes prior to starting your boat's engine. Those fumes could cause an explosion.

Expert Says Cartoon Politics Unimportant

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI) — Bobby Schmidt is 11. He loves cartoons on television. He spends every Saturday morning watching cartoons until Fat Albert comes on.

So do his brothers and one sister — Jeffrey, 4, Joanna, 6, Stephen, 8, and David, 9. There is another brother, Daniel, 2. But he doesn't watch the cartoons. He just runs around a lot while they're on.

We thought Bobby Schmidt might make a good interview about the strike called by the artists and animators who draw the cartoons. So we phoned his home and explained that the strikers were upset because the companies who make cartoons were sendig the work oveseas and cutting out American animators.

We asked him what he thought about that. He was silent. The interview was not going well. We decided to draw him out.

"What are your favorite cartoons, Bobby?" we asked.

"The Challenge of the Super Friends," he said.

"What is that about?"

"Well, these superheroes get together and, like, do battle against the super villains called the Legion of Doom."

"What else?"

"The Freedom Forre. There are these guys Merlin and Hercules and Isis. He's a Greek god and has power, like, over the elements and all that. And there is another guy called Super Samurai and when he says b"samurai" he turns into a gigantic Egyptian mummy wh comes to life."

"No kidding."

"Yeah, then there's Super Stretch and the Micro Woman. They can change shape and get real big or real tiny. They have a dog, a lady dog, and they can get in her ear and are carried round wherever they want to go. My mother says to tell you that sounds like a woman's job."

"Well, Bobby, how would you feel if they took off those cartoons?"

"I wouldn't like it. That's all we've got to do on Saturday mornings."

"What about reruns? What if they just put on reruns time after time."

"I wouldn't care. We like reruns. They have reruns all the time and we like to wait until our favorite comes on again and see the good parts over."

"Don't you and the other kid like movies?

"No we don't like movies much. We kinda like those Groucho Marx movies. And sometimes we watch baseball."

"Well, then, I take it you don't think it's too important who draws the cartoons — Americans, Koreans, Spaniards?"

"I don't really care who makes them as long as they are good cartoons. That's all we have to do on Saturday morning."

There was a pause.

"My mother says to tell you that's not all we do. We have to make our beds and help clean up and do some things but then we watch the cartoons."

"Well, thanks a lot."

"Okay."

U.S. Birth Rate Continues To Increase

The National Center for Health Statistics reported Wednesday that 285,000 babies were born in May, up 13,000, or 5 percent, from May 1978.

For the first five months of the year, births numbered 1,368,000, an increase of 39,000, or 3 percent, from the same period in 1978.

The birth rate in May was 15.3 births per 1,000 people, an increase of 4 percent. For the first five months of 1979, the rate was 15.1, a 2 percent increase.

The number of marriages and divorces in May also increased, while the death rate decreased slightly. There were 218,000 weddings, an increase of 8,000; 102,000 divorces, up 6,000; and 157,000 deaths, down 1,000, from May 1978.

Government Investigates Federally-Created Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office has been asked to investigate how often federal agencies create federal jobs by hiring private companies to perform federal work.

Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., cited published stories accusing federal agencies of giving work to private firms so the agencies can claim open payroll slots.

MINING GRANT RECEIVED

WASHINGTON (AP) — West Virginia has received a $722,152 grant to administer and enforce the federal strip mine control and reclamation act, the Interior Department has announced. The department said the grant will provide money for 72 positions in West Virginia's Department of Natural Resources, 38 of which are continued from last year.

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR AUG. 16, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals:	12, 23, 35, 46, 58, 69	Be cautious today
Highs:	13-22, 36-45, 59-68	Energy high today for you
Lows:	1-11, 24-34, 47-57, 70-75	All worn out feeling
EMOTIONAL
Criticals:	5, 19, 33, 47, 61, 75	Not at your best. Careful
Highs:	1-4, 20-32, 48-60, 76-85	Seize the moment
INTELLECTUAL
Criticals:	6, 22, 39, 55, 72, 88	Be on the defensive
Highs:	7-21, 40-54, 73-87	Memory reliable
Lows:	1-5, 23-38, 56-71, 89-95	Twice as hard to think

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

'Go-fer' Service Performs Odd Requests

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — During a stormy day last June, a woman in East Memphis didn't want to go out for a carton of cigarettes. For $12, she didn't have to. She called a "go-fer".

"That's about the most unusual call we've had so far," says Hugh Barton, a co-founder of Go-Fer Service Corp., the first professional service in Memphis which will perform almost any task. "It was a stormy day and she must have wanted a cigarette bad — without getting wet."

Barton and a friend, Diana Allen, founded Go-Fer last spring after Miss Allen viewed a television program about a similar service in California.

"You name it, and we'll come over there and do it. Nothing's too small or too big," Miss Allen, president of the company, said.

The company's slogan is: "If you're a loafer, call Go-fer. Then we Go-fer you."

With a go-fer staff of 12 women, Miss Allen organizes the errands, pet services, shopping and gift exchanges. "They live in different parts of the city and make 40 percent of what we charge. A lot of them work other jobs, some of them are housewives."

The standard rate for Go-fer services — in addition to the cost of any goods and/or services purchases — is $7.50 for the first hour and $5 for each additional hour, plus 20 cents per mile.

The service has a "Go-fer mobile" designed by Barton to hold 20 various size animals for tranportation to vets and groom shops.

He and three private contractors will buy construction materials and other supplies for customers, and if they want, refer them to skilled workers who can perform job duties.

Because of his construction experience, Barton also makes inspections for prospective home buyers. The service charges $25 for a visual, inside check and additional fees for more complicated inspections.

"What we're actually doing is cashing in on the fact that I've lived a long time and seen a lot," said the 63-year-old Barton.

Barton said the firm will not do anything illegal or anything which places anyone in danger.

But when you're involved in a business that offers to do anything for anybody anytime, there are problems.

"Ironically, we've lost business because we've been too high on some of it," Barton said. "But we've had nothing to base our price rates on but trial and error. We're still learning."

Water Management Could Save Millions Of Barrels Of Oil

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Installation of inexpensive devices to control the flow and temperature of water from faucets and shower heads could save the United States millions of barrels of oil, a conservation expert said Tuesday.

William E. Sharpe of Pennsylvania State University said studies show such water management could reduce energy expenses for the typical American family by $100 a year. He said if only 10 percent of all homeowners and 25 percent of apartment dwellers took this step, it could save the nation the equivalent of 200,000 barrels of oil each day.

"Studies at Penn State and elsewhere have shown that water flow controls are a painless way of saving water, energy and money and that even when people know the devices are there, most people are satisfied with the water supply and temperature," Sharpe said.

Sharpe, an expert in forest resources, said use of flow controls have been growing over the past decade but it hasn't been growing fast enough to cope with the energy crisis.

He said water controls in new buildings are now mandatory in eight states: New York, California, Florida, Wisconsin, Colorado, Illinois, Georgia and North Carolina.

"If we were to embark upon an energy conservation program as ambitous as our energy production program — Including extensive consumer education — we could easily save at least the equivalent of over 73 million barrels of oil each year," Sharpe said.

How to get a roomy, substantial, mid-size car with about the same price and mileage as a Ford Fairmont.

Plymouth Volaré
RIDE MORE COMFORTABLE MILES ANYWHERE

432 MILES ESTIMATED HWY CRUISING RANGE
24 MPG ESTIMATED HWY GAS EFFICIENCY

Remember: The EPA estimate is for comparison to other cars. Your mileage and range depend on your speed, weather, trip length and driving habits. Cruising range estimates are determined by multiplying the EPA mpg estimate by standard fuel tank capacities. Plymouth Volaré has 18 gallon capacity; Chrysler Cordoba has 21 gallon capacity.

4-DOOR SEDAN

Our Volare Value is equipped with TorqueFlite transmission, power steering and braking, 225 CID '6' engine, all tinted glass, digital clock, air conditioner, front and rear bumper guards, deluxe windshield wipers, AM radio with rear speaker, deluxe wheel covers, whitewall tires, Spinnaker White finish and Green interior. $5650

Significant differences	Volare 4 door	Fairmont 4 door
Seats six adults	✓
Longer length	✓
Wider width	✓
Longer wheelbase	✓
Wider track	✓
More hip, leg room front and rear	✓
More shoulder room		✓
Greater curb weight	✓

About the same: Sticker price; Mileage (24 / 18); Inside head room front and rear; Luggage capacity.

When you add it all up, we think you'll find Volaré is more car, more value. The solid, substantial Volaré. Come in and see for yourself.

5-YEAR/50,000 MILE PROTECTION and UP TO 48 MONTHS financing are available. INSURANCE coverage can be arranged here.

WANTED: Old cars,

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Murder defendant Charles Walter Hill took the witness stand Wednesday morning and denied any part in last year's slaying of Robert Rios Rivera, but a 137th District Court jury deliberated 90 minutes and decided Hill was guilty of aiding his half brother in the murder.

The panel of seven men and five women then took 35 minutes to sentence Hill to 40 years in prison.

In morning testimony, Hill had refuted the description given Tuesday by the only eyewitness to the April 1, 1978, murder, Rivera's 23-year-old female companion.

The obviously distraught woman had identified Hill as one of the assailants the night of the murder, saying he was the more slender of the pair and was cleanshaven the night of the murder.

Fighting tears several times throughout her testimony, the woman said the other, stockier attacker shot Rivera twice in the mouth before raping her. She said Hill did no shooting at the murder scene, a country road off Loop 289 and East 19th Street, but had urged his companion to "get rid of her" so she wouldn't talk to authorities.

Hill's half brother, Gary Don Vester, was convicted of the murder last April and assessed a 50-year prison term.

Prosecutors Mark McBride and David Nelson argued that although Hill did not actually shoot Rivera, he, too, criminally is responsible for the murder as a party to the incident.

The 29-year-old defendant testified Wednesday he has not weighed 150 pounds, the weight estimate given by Rivera's companion, since he played football at Dunbar High School. Hill also told the panel he has sported a goatee and mustache since his 1971 Air Force discharge.

McBride, in his final argument, countered the defense contention of mistaken identity by citing trial testimony which indicated the murder scene was well-lighted and the petite woman "stood within touching distance of this man on no less than five different occasions" the night of the murder.

"Can you consider that she (the rape victim) can miss one detail — his dark beard against the darkness of his neck and dark shirt?" McBride asked the panel.

"Are we going to cut that man loose because there's no videotape of the murder?"

Referring to earlier testimony that deputies had found footprints leading from Hill's 3604 Zenith Ave. neighborhood to the murder scene and back, defense attorney Sawyer acknowledged that "it's possible he (Hill) did it. But it's possible a lot of other people in his (Hill's) neighborhood did it."

The animated defense attorney said Hill's "problem is he's got a big mouth. He goes to these deputies, saying they've got the wrong man, and they say, 'A-ha, we got us somebody,' and they find them a suspect and say now let's get the evidence to fit."

Hill told the panel he was not on East 19th Street the morning Rivera was shot but that he could not remember his activities of more than a year ago. The soft-spoken defendant added he had no credit cards or checking account by which he could trace his actions that day.

During the punishment phase of the trial, prosecutors sought a 99-year sentence for Hill's participation in what they called the "brutal, unthinkable murder."

Defense attorneys asked the defendant be given a probated sentence because he had no other felony convictions.

Apartment Blaze In Wichita Claims Two Lives

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Fire raced through a three-story apartment house near downtown Wichita Wednesday, killing two occupants and critically injuring five, authorities said.

The blaze broke out in a brick structure just south of the downtown area about 10:30 a.m., sending smoke pouring from the upper windows.

Firemen were still fighting the blaze two hours after it was reported and there was no word whether other residents might have been trapped.

An occupant of the building, Vincent Roberts, said he was awakened by someone pounding on his door and yelling "Fire, Fire."

James Baldridge, another first-floor occupant, said he opened his door and saw the fire.

"I didn't hear anybody hollering fire so I hollered fire. I saw three jump from the third-story window," Baldridge said.

Parks Crew Chases Runaway Oil Globs

PADRE ISLAND NATIONAL SEASHORE (AP) — The parking lot is only an eighth full — not many people are on the white, sandy beaches southeast of Corpus Christi.

Later, a front-end loader will haul off the bits of runaway crude from an oil well 600 miles south, off Mexico's coast in the Bay of Campeche.

Myrl Brooks, superintendent of parks, estimated his crew worked an area of beach about seven miles long Wednesday afternoon where the strip of brownish-black goo ranged from five to 15 feet wide and covered about 30 percent to 80 percent of the beach.

Early Wednesday, the tourist beach was completely clean, and no oil was washing ashore there later in the day.

"If the sun was shining, it would melt out into a big slick," Brooks said, playing with one of the two-inch globs with his tennis shoes. "If it melted out, it would run more like 60 to 100 percent (covering the beach)."

"The birds now can step on this," Woods said. But when the oil melts, it's more likely they will get it on their feet or feathers and in trying to clean it off, poison themselves, he said.

Woods said one more temporary bird cleaning station has been established.

As of Tuesday, four offshore birds had been found covered wth oil. And white dots were spotted in one of the larger slicks in the Gulf of Mexico. Biologists were to fly out Wednesday to determine if the "dots" are birds, as they fear.

The park's beaches are less populated, but park officials blame another petroleum problem — the fuel crisis.

"My prime concern has been the effect of the gas shortage," said John Gerniottis, who has managed the park's concession area 10 years. "Also, the weather wasn't as ideal as it usually is."

He said tourists still will come to the beach if they want to, and some will come out of curiosity.

Jerry Elam of Houston also said people want to see for themselves.

"People are going to check out the scene themselves instead of blowing off plans based on what they've heard," Elam said.

Convicted Gas Rationing Violater Murdered

WESTMINSTER, Calif. (AP) — Gasoline station owner George Bice, the first Californian convicted of violating the odd-even gasoline plan for a scheme to sell gas by appointment only, was shot to death after an apparent gas theft, police said Wednesday.

Lt. Joe Woods said 22-year-old Lee M. Brazell and two juveniles were booked for investigation of murder in connection with the Tuesday evening shooting. Brazell was being held in the Orange County Jail, while the male and female juveniles were in custody at Juvenile Hall. Their names were not released.

Sgt. Phillip Martinez quoted witnesses as saying they saw three persons in a pickup truck pull into Bice's Texaco station in Garden Grove shortly before 5 p.m. Tuesday. After getting gas, the truck pulled away apparently without anyone paying for the gasoline.

Bice then jumped into the bed of the truck in an apparent effort to stop the three.

The truck was reportedly driven a short distance before it crossed into Westminster and pulled into a vacant lot. One of the three persons in the truck jumped out and fired a shotgun, hitting Bice in the face, police said.

The truck was driven away, but Huntington Beach police, acting on a description provided by witnesses, stopped a pickup truck about 35 minutes later and arrested Brazell and the two juveniles.

Bice was convicted July 24 by a West Orange County Municipal Court jury of two misdemeanor counts of violating the state's odd-even gasoline distribution plan by requiring customers to pay a $3 reservation fee to fill up with gasoline at the appointed time, thereby avoiding a wait in line.

Many of his regular customers said they were happy with the arrangement, but others who drove in off the street were enraged by the fee and his refusal to sell gas.

He faced a potential $500 fine and up to six months in county jail on each conviction. His sentencing hearing had been scheduled for Aug. 27.

Increased Need For Pipeline Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Northern Tier Pipeline Co. said Wednesday that President Carter's new energy policies increase the need for the company's proposed pipeline to carry Alaska oil inland from the West Coast.

The company issued a preliminary review of the effect of Carter's policy, prepared by The Pace Company, a petroleum consulting firm.

Gasoline Inventories On The Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite increased production, gasoline inventories continued to decline last week, the American Petroleum Institute reported Wednesday.

But supplies of distillate oil — used for diesel fuel and home heating oil — continued to increase substantially, even though output of this product was down slightly in the week, the report said.

For the week ended Aug. 10, gasoline production increased to 6.9 million barrels daily from 6.7 million barrels daily a week earlier, with supplies of the product falling to 232.7 million barrels from 236.1 million barrels in the previous week. Current inventories of gasoline, however, remained well ahead of last year's supplies at this time of 214.7 million barrels.

BORG SHINES AT OPEN — Bjorn Borg remained in top form Wednesday at the Canadian Open when he whipped Colombia's Ivan Molina 6-0, 6-3 in third round action. Also winning in the men's division was John McEroe while Evonne Goolagong Cawley had to withdraw from the tournament because of back problems. (AP Laserphoto)

Bjorn Borg Shines At Canadian Meet

TORONTO (AP) — Top-seeded Bjorn Borg easily advanced to the third round Wednesday, but the Canadian Open tennis championships lost its top women's seed, Evonne Goolagong Cawley, when the 28-year-old Australian had to withdraw because of a recurring back ailment.

"It's something that's been bothering her for two or three years," tournament director John Beddington said. "She's had some pain and has been receiving treatment since she arrived here. But she phoned me this morning and said she'd have to withdraw."

Borg advanced with a 6-0, 6-3 triumph over Ivan Molina of Colombia in a center-court match at the windy, cold York University Tennis center. For the second day in a row, the weather conditions left much to be desired — unpredictable gusts of wind meant most players had to forego their pinpoint passing game and baseline shots.

In other second-round men's singles play, second-seeded John McEnroe of the United States defeated Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia 7-5, 6-3; Tom Okker of The Netherlands upset fifth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-3, 7-5; Wojtek Fibak of Poland beat Paval Slozil of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-1, and Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia defeated Haroon Ismail of Rhodesia, 6-3, 6-4.

In women's second-round play, Brigitte Cuypers of South Africa upset fifth-seeded Janet Newberry of the United States 6-3, 3-6, 6-1; American Laura Dupont defeated countrywoman Rayni Fox 6-3, 6-3, and Mary Carillo of the United States beat Nina Bland of Canada 6-2, 6-2.

Cawley said clay surfaces seem to put more strain on Evonne's back. Cawley lost to Chris Evert in the final of the U.S. clay-court championships in a tough match last Saturday at Indianapolis.

Griffey's Operation Adds To Reds' Woes

CINCINNATI (AP) — An operation on Cincinnati Reds outfielder Ken Griffey's ailing left knee has been termed a success by Dr. Frank Jobe, who performed the surgery.

Griffey underwent surgery in Los Angeles Tuesday. An examination last week revealed that part of a bone had been chipped away, causing swelling in the knee joint.

Jobe, who has also operated on pitchers Bill Bonham, Tommy John and Don Gullett, reported 'no other findings' during surgery, according to a statement released by the National League club.

Griffey, who will be lost for the season, was hitting .316, eighth in the National League.

Foster was limping noticeably after reaching on an infield error in the second inning and left the game for a pinch runner after walking in the ninth. He had no hits in three official trips against Philadelphia's Steve Carlton.

"He just doesn't want to push it," said Reds' Manager John McNamara. "He was favoring it a little bit. He's just going to have to watch it when he plays."

Last weekend's trip to San Diego proved costly to the Reds, at least in the short run. Dan Driessen strained a tendon behind his left knee Sunday, the same day Harry Spilman suffered an arm bruise.

Joe Morgan missed Tuesday's game with a "tender thigh" and "sore ankle," the Reds said. Driessen, Spilman and Morgan weren't available to pinch hit, although Spilman took batting practice before the game.

Muhammad Ali U.S. Senator?

NEW YORK (AP) — Formation of an ad-hoc committee to draft Muhammad Ali to run for the the U.S. Senate was announced Wednesday.

According to former heavyweight fighter Jimmy Ellis, a long-time friend of the ex-heavyweight champion, Ali could run in any of six states. They are New York, Georgia, California, Kentucky, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

Committee co-chairman Lloyd Von Blaine said Ali has been told of the formation of the committee but has not commented.

"We feel that if a grass-roots movement is formed and begins to take hold, Ali will run," Von Blaine said.

One aim of the committee is to get "a $1 campaign contribution from the hundreds of thousands of little people to help finance a campaign in whatever state we decided Ali should run," Von Blaine added.

Formation of the committee which would allow Ali to run as an independent candidate was announced by Ellis and Hartford at a news conference.

'It Will Never Happen Again'

Cager Claims Self-Defense

HOUSTON (AP) — Kermit Washington, a central figure in the multimillion dollar damage suit against the Los Angeles Lakers, testified Wednesday that fighting "is not a part of professional basketball. It is not even a fact of living in our society. But it happens."

Washington, under probing questions from attorneys for the plantiffs, insisted that he was "only upset and I didn't get mean" on the night of Dec. 9, 1977 when he punched Houston Rockets' forward Rudy Tomjanovich in the face.

"I was upset, only upset. I was defending myself. But something like that would never happen again. I wouldn't do it this way again. Maybe if attacked I would just cover up and try not to get hit. I've learned through this experience," he said.

The former Lakers' forward, now a member of the San Diego Clippers, told the five-man, one-woman federal court jury the blow that hit Tomjanovich flush in the face "was only a reaction. I regret Rudy was hurt ... I never before had been involved in a fight when any player was hurt."

Tomjanovich is suing the Lakers for more than $1 million and the Rockets' organization is seeking $1.4 million for the loss of their team captain and top scorer during most of the 1977-1978 season.

Washington related the events leading up to the slugging of Tomjanovich, saying it began on a Houston fast break.

Kevin Kunnert, then a Rockets center and now a teammate of Washington's, was moving downcourt. Washington admitted he grabbed Kunnert's shorts to slow his progress.

Then, "Kevin hit me in the forehead with an elbow. He hit me with his fist. I had to defend myself or fall into a fetal position.

"I started swinging. Kareem (Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) grabbed Kevin and I continued to swing because I was angry," Washington continued.

"Then I stepped back and saw a blur coming at me ... The blur was coming directly at me. So, I turned and swung. I didn't know who it was. I had no idea who it was," he said.

Washington was asked if later, on the way to the dressing room, he had threatened the injured Tomjanovich. "No," he answered. "He shouted at me, asking why I took a cheap shot. I was upset because it was all Kunnert's fault."

Tomjanovich was in the courtroom during most of Washington's testimony. The two players never looked at each other.

Oilers Make Trade For Patriots' Gray

BOSTON (AP) — Claiming it is looking to the future, the New England Patriots Wednesday traded two-time All-Pro tackle Leon Gray to the Houston Oilers, in exchange for first and sixth-round draft choices in the 1980 draft.

"It is felt that with the outstanding performance of our starting offensive line, and the strong back-up depth...that the Patriots were able to complete such a deal," Patriots' general manager Bucko Kilroy, said.

"With the first-round draft choice secured from the Oilers, we subsequently feel that the club will be able to draft a top-rated player next year," Kilroy added.

The 6-3, 260-pound Gray was originally drafted in the third round of the 1973 draft by Miami. He was later claimed on waivers by the Patriots. After joining the Patriots, Gray was voted All-Pro in 1976 and 1978. He also was awarded the Golden Helmet award in 1976.

Gray, along with offensive guard John Hannah, walked out on the Patriots two years ago in a contract dispute, missing pre-season action and two games of the 1977 regular season.

In Smithfield, R.I., at the Patriots' Bryant College training camp, players expressed shock at the trade, and Hannah was bitter.

"He was traded to a team that wants to win," said Hannah. Asked if New England also wants to win, Hannah responded: "No it doesn't."

He added: "This is the last time I'll sign a contract here." Hannah, however, is tied to the team through 1981.

Coach Ron Erhardt also was apparently unhappy with the trade, saying simply: "The organization felt our strength was in the offensive line (but) I'm reluctant to see it (the trade) happen."

Second-year tackle Dwight Wheeler of Tennessee State has been tabbed as Gray's immediate replacement and the team has two No. 1 draft picks for the offensive line on the bench — Bob Cryder of Alabama, listed as a guard, and Pete Brock of Colorado, listed as a center.

Kilroy said the 1980 college draft is one of the deepest in years, with 55 to 60 top prospects. The Patriots will use at least one choice to secure a defensive line strength the team has been seeking for two seasons.

Gray — who was informed of the trade Wednesday morning — was unavailable for comment and was reported to be with his wife, who recently gave birth. The family recently bought a home in Westwood, Mass.

"It was the best deal we could make," said Kilroy. "Other teams were interested."

Yankees Slip Past Slumping Rangers

By The Associated Press

Bobby Murcer ignited two New York rallies with a first-inning double and a second-inning single Wednesday night, helping the Yankees beat the Texas Rangers 4-3 to give Tommy John his 16th victory of the season.

Murcer cracked his double off Jerry Don Gleaton, 0-1, then Lou Piniella doubled to score Murcer. Reggie Jackson followed with New York's third consecutive double — a drive to the base of the center field wall 430 feet away — to score Piniella.

John, 16-6, gave up two second-inning runs when Al Oliver and John Ellis singled around a strikeout. Eric Soderholm forced Ellis at second, but Bill Sample walked to load the bases and Jim Sundberg's single to short left scored two runs.

Orioles 2, White Sox 1

Eddie Murray stole home standing up with two out in the 12th inning Wednesday night, giving the Baltimore Orioles a 2-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Relief pitcher Guy Hoffman, 0-3, stepped off the rubber when Doug DeCinces broke from first base with a 1-2 count on pinch-hitter Danny Ayala. While Hoffman was looking at DeCinces, Murray broke from third and scored easily with the winning run.

Brewers 6, Royals 5

Gorman Thomas drew a two-out, bases-loaded walk in the ninth inning Wednesday night, forcing in Cecil Cooper with the run that gave the Milwaukee Brewers a 6-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Cooper and Sixto Lezcano singled in the ninth off Dan Quisenberry, 2-2, and reliever Al Hrabosky walked Ben Oglivie on a 3-2 pitch to fill the bases.

A's 3, Blue Jays 1

Dave Heaverlo pitched out of a tough ninth-inning jam to save the game for Brian Kingman as the Oakland A's broke a five-game losing streak with a 3-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Wednesday.

Expos 3, Astros 0

Dan Schatzeder and Scott Sanderson combined on a five-hitter to lead the Montreal Expos to a 3-0 victory over the Houston Astros Wednesday night.

Houston ace Joe Niekro, 16-7, was racked for nine hits in seven innings. Andre Dawson and Ellis Valentine led the Expos' attack with two hits apiece.

Errors by the Astros were instrumental on the first two Montreal runs. Houston third baseman Enos Cabell, who had not played that position for nine games as he substituted at first for the ailing Cesar Cedeno, bobbled a potential double-play grounder in the second inning. The Expos later loaded the bases and Gary Carter scored when Chris Speier hit into a double play.

Phillies 3, Reds 2

Nino Espinosa pitched a five-hitter and singled home the winning run in the second inning as the Philadelphia Phillies broke a four-game losing streak Wednesday night with a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Espinosa, 13-9, was touched for a run-scoring double by Harry Spilman in the second inning and an RBI base hit by Dave Collins in the eighth while pitching his eighth complete game as a member of the Phillies this season.

Pirates 5, Padres 1

Bert Blyleven pitched a four-hitter and was supported by home runs by Dave Parker and Bill Robinson as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the San Diego Padres 5-1 Wednesday night for their fifth straight victory.

The Pirates, winners in 16 of their last 22 games, took a 2-0 lead in the first inning on Parker's two-run homer off loser Randy Jones, 9-8. It was Parker's 21st homer this season.

Robinson tagged a solo home run in the third inning, his 23rd, and the Pirates scored twice more in the sixth on an RBI single by Blyleven and a run-scoring double by Omar Moreno.

Bill Almon homered for San Diego in the eighth, his first of the season.

Dodgers 6, Cardinals 5

Rookie Rick Sutcliffe pitched seven strong innings, singled home a run and doubled and scored, helping the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-5 triumph over the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday night.

The Dodger attack also included three singles and two RBIs by Bill Russell. Dusty Baker added a two-run single during a four-run rally in the seventh.

Blyleven singled Stennett home and moved Nicosia to third. Moreno's double to left scored Nicosia, but Moreno was thrown out at third base before Blyleven crossed the plate.

Mets 6, Braves 3

Doug Flynn had a two-run single and scored another run from second base on a wild pitch as the New York Mets downed the Atlanta Braves 6-3 Wednesday night.

Flynn's two-run single came in the seventh when the Mets took a 6-2 lead. The hit scored John Stearns, who had reached on Adrian Devine's throwing error, and Joel Youngblood, who was hit by a pitch.

Craig Swan, 12-9, worked into the seventh inning for the Mets before he was chased by four Atlanta singles that produced only one run. Neil Allen finished up, gaining his fourth save.

TOM WATSON
Slumping, But Favored

Slumping Watson Tourney Favorite

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Tom Watson, although owning the gaudiest credentials in golf, comes into the Westchester Classic in the throes of a mild slump.

"It'll come back. It always has. It just takes time, work and patience," Watson said after a practice session at the 6,603-yard, par-71 Westchester Country Club course, site of the 72-hole event that begins Thursday.

Although he's won four titles this season — twice as many as anyone else — Watson has had some difficulties the last couple of months. A particular problem has been poor last rounds, which has cost him two or three possible titles.

"I got myself in position to win a couple of times even when I wasn't playing that well, and I guess that's something," said Watson, in the title hunt at the Western Open and PGA before shooting himself out of them.

"I just haven't been swinging that well," he said. "The golf swing is a sometimes thing. It comes and goes. When you have it, you just try to hang on to it as long as you can. When you don't, you just try to get it back.

While he hasn't been at his peak in his last few starts, Watson appears to be well on his way to a third consecutive Player of the Year title and already has set a single-season money-winning record of almost $400,000.

He is expected to add to that total very appreciably in this rich event that offers a total purse of $400,000 including $72,000 to the winner.

Watson and most of the rest of the field got their first look at the hilly course in Wednesday's pro-am event. Many of the 156-man field were involved in the rain-delayed Greater Hartford Open, which didn't finish until Tuesday.

Although he's the favorite, he has to share the attention with 67-year-old Sam Snead, that incredible man who has played so well in his last two starts. Snead, who had rounds of 66 and 67 a month ago in the Quad Cities Open, drew huge galleries in his practice rounds and is the sentimental choice.

Among the other standouts were Jerry McGee, who scored his second victory of the year at Hartford, Hubert Green, J.C. Snead and Mark Hayes, all of whom have played very well in recent weeks.

Portions of the final two rounds will be telecast nationally by CBS.

49ers Waive Scott Bull

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers place Scott Bull on injured waivers Wednesday after the veteran quarterback failed to pass the National Football League team's physical examination.

Bull, who started several games over the past two s easons, underwent knee surgery after being injured in the final game of 1978.

The 49ers waived Bull before adding safety Eric Johnson, a third-year NFL player waived by Philadelphia this week, to their roster.

NFC Central Preview

Lions' Claws Sharp For Race

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — In the past seven years, a big difference between the Minnesota Vikings and the rest of the National Football Conference Central Division was quarterback Fran Tarkenton.

Chicago, Green Bay, Detroit and Tampa Bay simply did not have a signal-caller of Tarkenton's caliber. In close games he was often the difference between winning and losing.

This year Minnesota no longer has the Tarkenton edge.

"We'll be as competitive a division as there is in football," offers Minnesota Coach Bud Grant when asked for his assessment of the NFC Central in 1979. "The first thing all the other teams start out with is, 'Let's beat the Vikings.' Then they go on from there."

The Vikings have stumbled into division titles the last two seasons because of the tie-breaker rule. In 1977 a fake field goal helped them accumulate enough points to edge out Chicago. Last year Minnesota needed a last-second touchdown against Green Bay to escape with a 10-10 tie and the playoff nod.

"The experience of barely missing a playoff spot will provide a new plateau from which to seek a new championship," says Packer Coach Bart Starr, whose club tied Minnesota with an 8-7-1 record but missed postseason action due to the Vikings' better head-to-head record.

"I think any of the five teams can win it," adds Tampa Coach John McKay, whose Bucs knocked off the Vikings 16-10 last year in Minnesota.

"Minnesota again has to be the team to beat because they've been winning it regularly," cautions Chicago's Neill Armstrong. "All five teams have a chance to win it, but any of the five could be fifth, too."

Detroit, which won six of its final nine games last year, had the best second-half record of all NFC Central teams, including a 45-14 thrashing of Minnesota late in the season.

"We are eager to capitalize on the momentum we generated last season," says Coach Monte Clark. "There is a lot of optimism here and I like that. But, unfortunately, you don't win on just optimism. You win on preparation, effort and committment."

Another distinct advantage the Vikings have had since winning its first division championship back in 1968 is continuity. Since Grant took over in 1967, Detroit has had five head coaches, Chicago five, Green Bay four and Tampa Bay one.

That's NFC Central 15, Minnesota Vikings 1.

"Any time you change coaches you can practically mark off a year," says Grant. "I love to play teams with first-year coaches."

With Starr entering his fifth year, and Armstrong and Clark also battle-tested, Minnesota no longer has that edge, either.

The key to the Vikings' season could be how well third-year quarterback Tommy Kramer comes along, and if Chuck Foreman can come back from the knee injury which saddled him in 1978. The Vikings' receivers are first-rate, if Kramer can reach them. Rookie runner Ted Brown may surprise.

Much of the old guard is gone. Veteran Paul Krause has been relegated to backup duty, as has 41-year old marvel Jim Marshall.

Jake Scott has been added to the defensive secondary and the linebackers are superb, but the jury is still out on the rest of the defense.

Monte Clark may finally have the Lions headed in the right direction. Under his guidance, and the brash leadership of quarterback Gary Danielson, the Lions were the equal of nearly any team in the NFC over the last eight games.

Danielson threw 18 touchdowns and almost 2,300 yards. His best effort was a 26-for-33 performance against the Vikings, with five TD tosses.

Dexter Bussey is a premier runner and first-round draft pick Keith Dorney may open some holes for him. David Hill is also one of the better tight ends in the league.

The Pack was almost back last year, but faltered down the stretch with a 2-5-1 record in the last eight games. Terdell Middleton gained 1,116 yads rushing and Starr drafted two more prospects (Eddie Lee Ivery and Steve Atkins) for depth in the backfield.

David Whitehurst had a decent season and could be coming into his own under Starr's tutoring. James Lofton is a great target. The Packers defensive line of Carl Barzilauskas, Mike Butler, Ezra Johnson and Dave Roller is the equal of any in the NFC.

The Bears got off to a great start in 1978 but then lost eight straight before winning four of the last five. Their 14-0 victory over Green Bay knocked the Pack out of the playoffs.

Once again, the 1-2 punch of peerless Walter Payton and running mate Roland Harper carries the offense. Armstrong would like to get more production out of the passing game. Bob Avellini, Mike Phipps and Vince Evans are fighting for the quarterback spot, but whoever wins has one primary job — giving the ball to Payton.

Tampa Ba has a fine defense, centered around Lee Roy Selmon, and a tough young quarterback in Doug Williams. The Bucs won five games last year, three more than in 1977, and were beaten by more than 10 points only twice.

McKay is still waiting for Ricky Bell to emerge as a prime running threat. Bell gained 679 yards last year, including 105 yards against Los Angeles in a 26-23 loss. Second-round draft pick, guard Greg Roberts, may be just what Bell needs. Rookie receiver Gordon Jones will also help the offense.

Pete Rose Disgusted With Philadelphia Fans

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose thought he had seen everything, until he saw the behavior of the Philadelphia fans during the Phillies last series at home.

The Pittsburgh Pirates were wrapping up their eighth victory in nine starts. Relief pitcher Kent Tekulve was at bat and Doug Bird was pitching for the Phillies.

"He went to 3-and-0 on Tekulve and then he threw a strike and the people booed," the Phillies first baseman said. "They booed for a second strike. They were rooting for the other team to make us look worse. Then he grounded out and I took that ball and spiked it 30 feet into the air. I hope they got the message."

Greg Luzinski chuckled as Rose recounted his tale.

"The trouble with Pete is that he's never been exposed to the Philly fans at their best before," Luzinski said. "In fact, they really haven't gotten on him personally yet like they have me."

This should have been a happy homecoming for Rose, but he too is being plagued with questions.

"Everybody wants to talk to me, but not about baseball but about that Playboy article and now everybody wants to know if I really pop greenies," said Rose, referrring to amphetamine pills.

"I want to talk baseball. For myself, this is the kind of year I'd hoped for and was sure I could deliver. But some people are going to say it's my fault if the Phillies don't win. Tat's what they got me for," Rose continued.

Rose knows that he could be a convenient target if the Phillies continue to have problems in the National League East.

"You know I've always said that if I strike out four times, I expect to be booed," he said. "But still, people should take into account before they blast poor (Manager) Danny Ozark. There can be 49,000 people in the stadium and when he shows his face, 48,500 of them boo him."

Ozark stopped talking to sports writers for five days last week while the team was in Philadelphia. He explained why when the team travelled here Tuesday to play the Cincinnati Reds.

"If I say something, they say what they want to say anyhow," Ozark said. "How can they think what I'm thinking, and be entirely wrong about the whole situation? You got guys who don't know a thing about the game."

Ozark believes that the Phillies still can rally to win a fourth straight division title.

Slaton Has Winning Tradition

By JOHN EUBANKS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SLATON — A winning tradition has never actually tackled an opposing ball carrier or snagged a wobbly pass.

But Slaton head coach Ed Cooks believes past winning seasons could help his team prepare for its tough 5-AA district schedule this season.

The last four Slaton teams have amassed a record of 35-10, including last year's 8-4 bidistrict championship mark.

Cook is even more excited about the Tigers' running game. Lance Bounds and Michael Whatley head up the running attack along with '78 JV performer Manuel Fernandez.

The offensive line appears solid with three lettermen returning. Greg Johnson (190) will be at center, Craig Mayberry (200) will be at one tackle, and Darryl Heinrich (6-2 185) will be at tight end.

A talented secondary will have plenty of size, speed and experience in Bounds, Joe Mercer (6-1, 180) and Terry Cook.

The kicking game should also be solid, Cook said, with the return of all-district kicker Jessie Titus.

Cook's past four season records (8-4, 9-1, 9-1, 9-4) should also indicate that he does not do a bad job in preparing his teams for post-season play.

Or at least for the tough action of District 5-AA, labeled as the "Little Southwest Conference."

Experience Key For Nazareth

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

NAZARETH — It looks like the only thing in this area that's going to be better than Ernie's barbeque this fall is going to be the football team.

Coach Eddie Hooper says it's the seasoning that counts -for the team, not the ribs.

"I think experience will be our strong point," Hooper said. "Especially in our offensive line, we've got some people there with some pretty good experience."

Combine that with three returning starters in the offensive backfield and that makes for a pretty spicy recipe.

First, there's quarterback John Steffens, a senior with three letters to his credit. A second-team selection as a defensive end on the 3-B all-district team,

DALE WILHELM
Returns At Tackle

Steffens started the last three games of last season at quarterback for the Swifts. On his first at-bat he connected on a 45-yard touchdown pass.

As if they weren't already deep enough, Bryan Huseman fills the tailback slot. A 5-10, 180-pound junior, Husemen is expected to carry most of the Swifts' heavy running chores. He was a second-team all-district pick there last year.

Across that offensive front line are four returning starters. Tackles Dale Wilhelm (6-1, 200, Sr.) and Joe Hochstein (6-1, 180, Jr.) are joined by guard Norman Gerber (5-8, 150, Sr.) and end Jeff Schmucker (6-3, 195, Sr.).

Coach Hooper believes he couldn't have picked a better year to harvest this erop. According to him, the district race should be wide open this season.

"Really, what I believe, is that anybody can win it this year," Hooper said. "It's not going to be like last year when there's one super team (Valley).

"It's going to be pretty balanced this time. Of course Valley will be strong again — I have to think they'll be the ones to beat — but I don't think there's any doubt that we have a shot at it.

"We just can't have the injuries we had last year. We have to stay healthy and get good leadership from the seniors."

The Swifts have a well-balanced predistrict season ahead that should provide some good experience — without a lot of injuries. Nazareth plays always-tough Lubbock Christian in the opener and Class-A Hart in the third game but its other three pre-district games are against the Hereford sophomores, the Canyon junior varsity and Whiteface, a team that scored only one touchdown last year.

Chief Coach Optimistic About Season

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

CROSBYTON — Chief coach Tommy Davis says he's an eternal optimist, that's why he figures his team can stay in the thick of the District 4-A ratrace this fall.

His opponents feel the same way though — but they credit his program.

Crosbyton, despite losing 14 lettermen (including all-South Plains running back Kelly Ferree), is one of three teams expected to challenge for the conference title.

It's easy to see why the other two (New Deal and Petersburg) are considered — they're loaded with top hands. But the Chiefs are different. With only 10 starters returning, they're not loaded with experience; and with only four starters topping 190 pounds, they're not huge either.

What's the secret, coach?

"Well, we feel like we've had these kids for three years now," Davis says. "So we hope the carryover will help us out.

"I think our major strong point will be experience and enthusiasm. We don't have a lot of returning people, so we've got to have our people mesh."

The three players Davis expects the most from are big senior tackle Harvey Fink (6-1, 210); linebacker-end Rex Wall (6-1, 180, junior) and two-way senior back Paul Williams (5-9, 150).

Joining Williams in the backfield are backs Steve Flores (5-10, 175, Sr.) and Lavance Coppage (5-10, 175, Sr.).

In case you didn't notice, most of those guys aren't what you'd call huge, or even in the big category.

"I think size and depth are our major drawbacks," Davis said. "I think that's true — with the possible exceptions of New Deal and Petersburg — through the whole district, though.

"Really, we haven't ever had a lot of size, so we don't miss it now."

"Petersburg is loaded," he said. "Their young men are as fine a group as there is anywhere. They've got size, speed, experience and Coach (Ronnie) Rieger is back."

Crosbyton's new additions will get plenty of time to gain experience before they're tested by those powers, though. The Chiefs play Petersburg and New Deal back-to-back in their last games of the year.

Eagles' Mentor Refuses To Tip Winning Hand

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SEAGRAVES — Much like Kenny Rogers' "Gambler," Seagraves High School football coach Jim Eddins refuses to tip his hand.

The Eagles held all the cards in District 5-A last season, winning 10 consecutive games before their elimination by Iraan in a bidistrict playoff contest 10-0.

True, Seagraves has been an unimpeachable district champion for five straight years, but Eddins chooses to regard his 1979 squad with all the unpredictability of a faces-down poker hand.

"I hate to say," Eddins remarked, when asked whether the current edition of Eagles holds any aces. "Everybody in our district has improved. Last year, we won it but didn't dominate it. This year I see just about five teams that are real even," listing Stanton, Shallowater, Plains and O'Donnell alongside his squad.

Preferring to cite team strengths rather than individual talents, Eddins said, "Our defense carried us last year, but we lost some key people from that bunch."

Then, peeking at his first two cards, he added, "This bunch has the possibility to be good, even though we lost seven (defensive) starters off of that unit."

Mike McCormick, 6-2, 240-pound all-district tackle, dominates the interior line. Honorable mention all-district guard Ted Ward, 5-10 and 150 pounds, glues the offensive line.

"We have size and depth and experience in the line," Eddins said, "but, depth-wise, I don't know that we have enough in the offensive backfield. Injuries back there could hurt us pretty bad."

Four seniors will do most of the running and passing in the Eagles' wing-T offense. They are quarterback Dale Welch (5-10, 135); fullback Davis Morgan (5-11, 175), and halfbacks Johnny Castro (5-9, 151), and Ronnie Griffin (5-10, 150.). Morgan is the backfield's lone returning regular.

Eddins, whose seven-year record as Eagle head football coach is 72-12-1, acknowledged that Seagraves' opponents will be preoccupied with dethronement, saying, "Everybody kind of points to us. It's only natural. But I don't know that we feel any pressures."

And then, testing his sleeve for a possible hidden ace, Eddins added, "We do have tradition. Our kids always have the great attitude. That's the reason we win."

This gambler may have covered all bets.

Spur Bulldogs Must Overcome Many Weaknesses

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

SPUR — In filling out his football questionaire, first-year Spur High School coach Sam Parker was not overly optimistic: "Our weaknesses," he said, "are size, speed and depth."

Add a lack of experience to that and it looks like another slow year for the Bulldogs.

MIKE DUBOISE
Returns At Split End

Only seven starters return off last year's disastrous 0-10 team — a squad that many persons say could just as easily have gone 7-3.

And with only six seniors playing this year, there probably couldn't be a better time for a rebuilding year. Parker has installed the wishbone offense he coached as an assistant at Weatherford and says his goal for this year is to improve the team's self-image.

" We're trying to improve these boys we've got now, because they're the ones who are going to be playing for us next year," he said.

When asked what he thought his team's strongest point would be this season, Parker said "Surprise. People aren't going to be expecting us to be any good. We hope we might be able to sneak up on some folks."

Being stuck in the same district as talent-packed powers New Deal and Petersburg makes it highly unlikely the 'Dogs will be anything more than spoilers in the 4-A race this year. But with three members of the starting backfield coming back next season for their third year as starters, maybe Spur will be able to exact some revenge down the road.

But with the help of tackle brothers Ronald and Gene Todd (235 and 225,-respectively) and tight end Bobby Hamilton (165-pound junior), maybe Parker will be able to surprise a few folks this year.

Average Hits Yearly High

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's summer rally, fueled by heavy buying by institutional investors, reached a milestone Wednesday as the Dow Jones industrial average closed at its highest level of the year.

The widely-followed average of 30 industrial stocks jumped 9.13 points to close at 885.84. That was the highest close since Oct. 13, 1978 when the Dow index was at 897.09. The previous 1979 high was 878.72 on April 10.

A late buying surge Wednesday overcame initial weakness in the market. The Dow industrial index fell more than 3 points in the morning hours, but the sagging market reversed itself by afternoon and trading volume picked up as well.

Wednesday's rally brought the net gains in the index to more than 31 points in a week and a half. Like trading before it, the rally came against a background of what might be considered bad news in other times.

New York (AP) — Wed's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Utah Warehouse Manager Envisions Burials In Outer Space

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Joe Roberto envisions a great graveyard in the sky, the cremated remains of departed loved ones floating in eternal orbit.

Roberto, a 39-year-old warehouse manager for an East Coast publishing company, last month organized what he calls Astro Burial Ltd., an extra-terrestial undertaking service.

It is his plan "to transport beyond the atmosphere of the earth the last remains of those wishing to have as their last resting place the endless reaches of space."

To accomplish this, he plans to utilize the cargo hold of the space shuttle now being readied for launching from Cape Canaveral. But first he must obtain approval from NASA.

The down-to-earth cost for relatives or friends of the dearly departed will be $2,995, he said.

"More and more people are becoming aware that death can be as beautiful as life, and what would be more beautiful than to look up at the stars and say, 'Geez, what a hell of a nice way to go'?" Roberto said.

Roberto said he dreamed up the idea one night in the wilds of Wyoming.

"I was camping out and looked up at the stars," he said. "I had been reading about NASA's space shuttle and I thought that would be a lovely way to spend the last days, in the vastness of space."

In what it calls a "Getaway Special", NASA is offering room on any of 700 planned space shuttle flights scheduled to begin in 1980. Minimum cost for space in the shuttle is $3,000. Maximum is $10,000, based on 1975 dollar rates, said NASA spokesman Dick Young from his office in Florida. Young said the flights were intended for scientific research and development.

Roberto said he's contacted NASA with his idea and added, "Well, they think it's an unusual request.

"We have to work out some problems, such as the possibility of contaminating other experiments and getting the remains ejected from the shuttle."

Young's only comment was, "I cannot say it is an approved program."

Roberto said the project's appeal would reflect a growing acceptance of cremation "because of concerns of ecology, social awareness and technology."

Somewhere in space, according to Roberto's plan, up to 20 small canisters containing the ashes of cremated humans would be discharged from the shuttle and sent adrift.

On the ground below, Astro Burial will give the bereaved a "tastefully designed plaque" which might contain a summary of the timing of the launch, orbital parameters and other information based on NASA computer data.

Roberto envisions plenty of business. His figures point to 200,000 cremations in the United States last year costing about $700 each, 800,000 in Japan and about 450,000 in Great Britain.

He also plans to use the shuttle for his own remains when the time comes.

"My kids like the idea," he said. "They think it's crazy; real cool."

During a five-year period, more than two out of every five American families change their homes. The Conference Board notes. Although many only move down the street or around the clock, one out of five moves to a different state.
