LONDON (AP) — Nationalist guerrilla leaders met face to face Monday with the enemy—the Zimbabwe Rhodesian government—at the opening of British-sponsored constitutional talks widely billed as a last chance to avert widespread war in southern Africa.

Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington urged both sides to reach a compromise, saying "the price of failure would be further prolonged bloodshed." He asked them to focus on a new constitution for Zimbabwe Rhodesia that will decrease the power given to the white minority, which accounts for 230,000 persons out of a population of 7.2 million.

"I believe the people assembled in this room have it in their power to end the war," said Carrington, serving as conference chairman. "I do not believe the people of Rhodesia will readily forgive any party which deprives them of this opportunity to settle their future by peaceful means."

Britain Takes Lead
The conference, called by Britain, brought together Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo of the guerrilla Patriotic Front with members of Zimbabwe Rhodesia's government, led by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the breakaway British colony's first black prime minister—and including Ian Smith, his predecessor. Nkomo and Mugabe have waged a seven-year guerrilla war against the Salisbury regime from bases in Zambia and Mozambique. More than 18,000 persons have died in the fighting.

It was the first time that opposing parties in the war in Zimbabwe Rhodesia sat down together since a peace conference fizzled in Geneva in 1976.

Early Squabble Erupts
The talks opened on schedule, but there was an immediate squabble over seating arrangements and a refusal by guerrilla leaders to attend a British welcoming reception for the two sides.

Guards Strike At Amarillo Pantex Plant

AMARILLO (AP) — All 150 guards at the nation's only nuclear warhead assembly plant went on strike Monday, but officials said supervisors trained in security measures were protecting the complex.

"We have replaced striking guards on a one-for-one minimum," said plant manager Paul Wagner, an official in the federal Department of Energy.

"We have an auxiliary guard force in being all the time and they undergo the minimum annual training in guard operations," he added. "They're the ones we're relying on."

The plant is owned by the government but most of the work is contracted to a private company, Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co. Inc.

The guards, members of the International Guards Union of America, Local 38, set up picket lines at the plant northeast of this Texas Panhandle city after their contract with Pantex expired.

Neither side would discuss the dispute, but Charles Ratliff, the union's business manager, said the issue was not wages.

"It's kind of complicated. We're trying to keep this thing low key," he said.

Ratliff agreed with plant officials that there had been no loss of security.

"They have the plant protected. We wouldn't have left the plant unprotected. We want that known real well," Ratliff said.

He said all guards except probation-

Tight Lid Clamped On U.S.-Soviet Talks About Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union on Monday began what State Department officials say might be a protracted series of negotiations over Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

FBI Accused Of Executing Bank Robber

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio (AP) — A retired policeman who said he was the first to wound Charles Arthur "Pretty Boy" Floyd in Floyd's last showdown with the law claims the bank robber was executed by FBI agents after refusing to answer questions.

Floyd was shot and killed near this eastern Ohio city, and Chester C. Smith, 85, then a city policeman, said in a recent interview that Floyd was slain by machine gun fire while he lay wounded in a cornfield, his two pistols still loaded.

The retired officer's recollection differs from the popular account of the Oct. 22, 1935 incident, when Floyd was the FBI's "Public Enemy 1" and was being sought for the murders of 10 law enforcement officers and 30 bank robbers.

The agent who led the manhunt, Melvin Purvis, died in 1960. Purvis tersely reported shortly after the shooting that Floyd was seen running through a stubble cornfield toward a wood, trying to escape. He said Floyd was killed in a fusillade of shots.

FBI agents were drawn to the area about three days before the incident, when a man suspected in the robbery of a bank in nearby Wellsville was shot and killed in a gun battle. Fingerprints revealed the suspect to be Floyd's partner Adam Richetti.

Smith said he got involved in the search because he was asked to help so meagrements who got lost in the rural area in southeast Ohio.

Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin conferred for nearly two hours in their opening session. Afterwards, the State Department kept the meeting under unusually tight wraps, refusing even to offer the normal diplomatic characterization of meetings, such as "useful" or "candid."

Department spokesman Tom Reston said the two men would meet again today or Wednesday.

The talks began after Vance and CIA Director Stansfield Turner had spent the morning in a closed door session with members of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

Firm Stance Pledged
Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, emerged from the 3½-hour Senate committee meeting to say that Vance indicated he was "going to be quite firm and insistent on getting some direct answers" from Dobrynin.

Jepsen also said the committee received no assurances that there are no long-range nuclear weapons in Cuba.

Asked if the committee was given any explanation for the presence of the Soviet troops, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., replied that "Vance said that would be question No. 1" for Dobrynin.

Returns From Vacation
Dobrynin, who returned Sunday from a vacation in the Soviet Union, has not been in Washington since the announcement last month that the Soviet troops had been discovered in Cuba.

There was no official word about the bargaining positions Vance and Dobrynin would bring to the talks, but State Department officials said they did not expect anything to be settled in the first session.

Last week, Vance and President Carter both said the "status quo" in Cuba is not acceptable, but they have refused to say what changes would satisfy them.

Vance has said the administration realizes that the Soviets have had military advisers in Cuba for many years. It is the recent discovery that 2,000 to 3,000 of them were organized as a combat unit that is a matter of serious concern, he said.

Solons Insist On Pullout
Key members of the Senate have been less restrained. Many have said the Soviet troops must be removed if the new strategic arms limitation treaty is to be ratified.

That kind of pressure will make it more difficult to reach a satisfactory solution to the Cuban problem, administration sources say.

Sen. John Tower of Texas, the ranking Republican on the Armed Services Committee, said after the session with Vance that the Senate should put aside consideration of the SALT II treaty with the Soviets until the troops are withdrawn from Cuba.

He said the Soviet brigade on the island "represents a fundamental escalation of Soviet adventurism — heretofore limited to Africa, the Middle East and Indochina — into the Western Hemisphere."

But Warner and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the Carter administration should be given time to negotiate with the Russians. Nunn, who has said he will not vote to ratify the treaty without a commitment to increase defense spending, said he would not support a resolution blocking Senate consideration of the accord until the Soviet troops are withdrawn.

Assistance In Billings Requested By Hospital

By KIM COBB

Avalanche-Journal Staff
CASH COLLECTIONS are up at Health Sciences Center Hospital and administrators are predicting they'll keep on rising, but a backlog of bills totaling more than $1 million is a haunting reminder that the struggle isn't over yet.

Board members for the Lubbock County Hospital District are asking for help from local hospitals to clear up that backlog. Though the resolution passed by the group Monday indicates they'd take help in any form, board members would be delighted if neighboring hospitals would donate their billing staffs one day a week.

"We won't criticize them (area hospitals) any more for dumping on us if they'll help us," finance director Tom Kearney quipped.

Board members also began contract negotiations with a private Oregon ambulance firm in hopes of straightening out the financial troubles of Lubbock's Emergency Medical Services. The details of the proposed takeover are expected to be submitted to the board within 10 days.

Approximately $1 million in hospital bills are being stored in the basement billing offices, the financial director told the board, because the staff isn't big

"The best policy is to give the administration some time," Nunn said. "We can reserve the right to criticize."

The Soviets have largely kept quiet about the furor. Unofficially, Soviet diplomats have insisted that the troops are not a combat force but are advisers who See U.S.-SOVIET Page 16

Fellow Soviet Dancers Accuse Ballerina Of 'Selling Soul'

MOSCOW (AP) — Bolshoi ballerina Ludmilla Vlasova, center of a Soviet-U.S. confrontation last month when she left her defector husband in New York, is regretting her decision to come home, Bolshoi insiders say.

Miss Vlasova is being shunned and ridiculed by fellow dancers who will not talk to her because they think she "sold her soul" to Soviet officials in return for better roles, Bolshoi sources say.

Ambition is the explanation circulating in the famed Moscow dance troupe for the 36-year-old ballerina's decision to come home from the United States instead of defecting when her husband, Bolshoi star Alexander Godunov, did so.

Is she happy with her choice? Bolshoi insiders say no.

The picture that emerges is of a dancer scorned and insulted by past friends, commuting to and from ballet rehearsals from her elderly mother's Moscow apartment trailed by two Soviet security men.

Miss Vlasova has been accessible only to the Soviet media since her hero's homecoming almost two weeks ago. U.S. authorities had grounded for three days the Aeroflot plane she was on in New York while they determined whether she was returning to Russia by choice. She convinced them she did not want to stay. Attempts by Western correspondents here to contact her have met with no success.

Isolated From Friends

Sources say Soviet officials wanted the ballerina to meet with the foreign press soon after her return but that she refused. She has isolated herself from her friends, insiders reveal, and does not wish to return to the spacious apartment she shared with the 29-year-old ballet star Godunov on Nezhdanovoi Street here.

"I think there are too many memories there," a source said.

She has kept busy since her return rehearsing in the Bolshoi ballet, "Love for Love," a choreographic version of Shakespeare's play, "Much Ado About Nothing," to be performed this season.

The ballerina will play Beatrice, an important role but not the lead, consistent with her status in the troupe as a soloist who was not quite good enough to be singled out for demanding starring roles.

Prominent Parts Expected

But Bolshoi sources claim that to get Miss Vlasova to agree to return to Moscow, Soviet officials promised she soon would receive more prominent parts in ballets.

The bait worked, insiders say, because the ballerina reportedly feared that her own career would be eclipsed in the West alongside that of her younger, more famous and more talented husband.

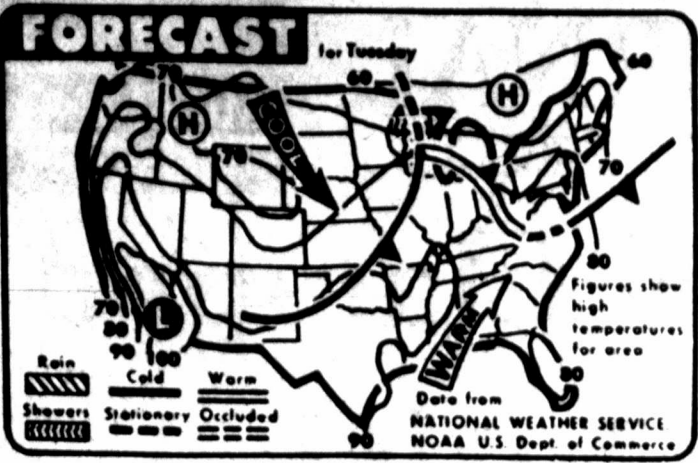

And at the Bolshoi now, angry troupe members treat her as a pariah.

"They think she is an oppor-

GSA Puts Chapel On Market

BIG SPRING, Texas (UPI) — For sale: a used chapel. The federal government, through the General Services Administration, has offered for sale a 7,319-square foot chapel and 1.33 acres of land at the former Webb Air Force Base in Big Spring.

The government says a minimum fair market value price of $70,000 will be asked for the chapel, land, personal property and furnishings within the facility.

An application to purchase the chapel must be submitted to the General Services Administration Service Center in Fort Worth, Room 1A03, before 12:30 p.m. Sept. 27.

Applications will be reviewed by the Air Force Chief of Chaplains who — upon the advice of representative church groups — will recommend a person or organization to whom the chapel should be sold.

But there is a catch, the GSA says. The chapel must be maintained as a shrine, memorial or religious building, and may not be used for commercial, industrial or other secular uses.

Prospective applicants who wish to inspect the chapel should telephone real estate officer Ray Baldwin at Reese Air Force Base in Lubbock.

'Outstanding Farmer' Named

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

SLATON — Longtime Slaton area farmer, Bill Alspaugh was named as "Outstanding Farmer of the Year" here Monday night at the 22nd annual Farmer-Merchant Barbeque.

Some 550 area farmers and businessmen looked on as master of ceremonies Coy Biggs presented the award.

Alspaugh is director of the Idalou Co-op Gin and the Lubbock Ag Club, and serves on the Lubbock County Water District Board. He also serves as president of the Mercy Hospital Board, holds an honorary membership in the Slaton Future Farmers of America chapter, and was named as "Outstanding Young Farmer of the Year" by the Slaton Jaycees several years ago.

Cash prizes awarded by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce each year for the first, second and third bales of cotton harvested in the Slaton area were not handed out at the banquet as planned, because no bales have been officially recorded as harvested, said Cleo Green of the chamber.

The chamber will award prizes of $150, $100 and $50 to the harvesters bringing in the first bales, he said.

The large group converged on the Slaton Babe Ruth Ballpark for the outdoor feast which was planned by 15 area groups, the Slaton Chamber of Commerce and area merchants as a gesture of appreciation to the farmers who trade in Slaton.

The merchants pay for the meals for the farmers and offer several different prizes.

Excellent Area Weather Expected To Continue

One of summer's prettiest stretches of weather is expected to continue its presence across the South Plains at least through the end of the week.

The only change in the making is that completely sunny skies of late will find themselves occupied by a smattering of light clouds this afternoon and for the next few days.

The afternoon highs are expected to drop a few degrees from the upper 80s to the middle 80s, while nighttime lows remain about the same, in the lower 60s.

Winds should remain southerly at 10 to 15 mph, and no precipitation is anticipated in the next two days.

Thunder showers are expected to develop today all along the Gulf Coast and up the Atlantic Seaboard into the Carolinas, and scattered rain showers will dot the Upper Great Lakes and upper Mississippi River Valley.

Seasonably warm temperature readings will rule much of the nation, with slightly cooler temperatures occurring in the northern Rocky Mountain states and New England.

Grain Trucks Get Aid

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission Monday issued an interim order aimed at speeding the movement of Panhandle wheat to market, despite shortages of railway grain cars.

The order establishes a trucking allowance of 11 cents per hundredweight from county grain elevators at Huttoon to primary elevators at Amarillo and Zita.

The order also increase the trucking allowance from 9 to 13 cents per hundredweight from Hereford to Tulsa.

The allowances were requested by Santa Fe Railway to offset increasing fuel costs to haul grain by truck.

The interim order was recommended to the RRC by hearing examiner Harold D. Bartz because of persistent shortages of railroad equipment.

The allowances are paid to grain shippers by deducting the prescribed trucking allowance from the through rail freight rate applicable from origin to final destination, a RRC spokesman said.

In his findings of fact, Bartz stated that large quantities of grain are currently being stored in county elevators in Huttoon and Hereford because Santa Fe has not been able to furnish enough rail cars to move all the grain.

The trucking allowances will provide an incentive to grain shippers to move the grain county elevators to primary elevators by truck, Bartz said.

Psychiatrist Consulted In Search

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Police searching for a missing young student consulted a psychiatrist and an astronomer, Monday, while private detectives hoped for word from a conscience-stricken upstater.

James Dallas Egbert III, a 16-year-old Michigan State University student from Ohio whose IQ is estimated at 145, was last seen on campus Aug. 15.

Egbert, a devotee of an elaborate intellectual game called "Dungeons and Dragons," told his parents that at MSU the game was not confined to paper — as the instructions say — but was played in an underground network of steam-pipe tunnels.

But investigators have searched all the tunnels, and haven't found him or anybody who played the game there with Egbert. His parents say he never named other players.

"It makes you wonder," said Capt. Ferman Badgley of the campus police. "I think some people do know something. But they aren't willing to tell us yet."

Minority Spokesman Makes Move For Representations

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Minority Spokesman Monday presented arguments and petitions to Lubbock County commissioners for minority representations to the South Plains Association of Governments.

The commissioners then told questioning Conference of Organizations member Bidal Agüero that they will continue to vote, as they have in the past, for the SPAG board to be made up of elected officials only.

Conference co-chairman Eliseo Solis and Shakir Mubye had proposed that the conference elect two representatives to serve on the board.

Asked by Solis if water conservation district representatives should not be excluded from SPAG, Commissioner Alton Brazell said he had voted to exclude them also, but had been out-voted by other SPAG board members.

County Judge Rodrick Shaw told the conference members, who said the new organization represents 32 Lubbock County minority organizations and groups, that he opposes a different method of choosing SPAG board members, not because of racial considerations but because of "my philosophy of government."

Asked by Agüero "if you're going to ignore" the petitions asking for minority SPAG board members, Shaw said, "No, I'm not going to ignore them, but I'm also not going to ignore the large number of people who call me and tell me on the street that my philosophy of government is right and to stick to it."

The commissioners rescinded preliminary approval of a SPAG-organized economic development district because it would call for minority board members who are not elected officials.

In other business in an eventful morning session, the commissioners heard County Treasurer Connie Nicholson renew her request for a 1980 salary increase more on the order of the 23-percent increase the commissioners have planned for themselves than the 8-percent raise planned for her.

Commissioner Jim Lancaster of Idalou said the 1980 salaries of all county employees should be re-evaluated, but found no immediate support from the other court members.

"It seems to me that that's what we've been doing the last 10 or 12 years," Brazell said.

Brazell added that the commissioners raised their own salaries to $22,000 for next year so that they would make the same as the county clerk and district clerk and that the percentage increase was not considered.

Lubbockite Charged In Murder

Nathaniel McDade, 25, of 1515 Ave. C, Apt. 34, Monday was charged with murder in connection with the Saturday shooting death of Arthur Lee Jones.

The Criminal District Attorney's office recommended a $40,000 bond for McDade, who remained in county jail late Monday.

When police responded to a shooting report at 400 17th St., they found Jones, 47, of 2204 Cedar St. lying on the ground with a bullet wound above his left eye.

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalock pronounced the man dead at 1:36 a.m. Saturday.

Reports show that an argument over possession of clothing apparently sparked the shooting.

AN EDITORIAL:

A New Tug At Trucking Knot

IT'S HARD to remember precisely when removing regulations—rather than piling on more—started to become respectable in Washington. For years, just the reverse was true.

One bureaucratic rule was stacked on top of another: an army of federal employees was marshaled to write and enforce them; while the costs, both measurable and hidden, climbed to more than $100 billion in public taxes a year.

Now the pendulum has begun to swing. Not far enough, maybe, but at least now it's well, politically tolerable to favor regulatory reform.

The message must have soaked in that tying down business with red tape in the name of social progress has a boomerang effect—in terms of higher prices for goods and services, lost jobs and opportunities, and a slower economy.

THE REFORM movement, if it can be so categorized, criss-crosses party and ideological barriers.

Consumers already are starting to witness some of the effects of landmark airline deregulation legislation enacted last year.

Claims by proponents seem to be paying off in some cases in lower fares and newer routes, thanks to the needed flexibility injected into the airline system.

This year, another closely regulated transportation industry, trucking, is the subject of a similar reform push.

The Trucking Competition and Safety

Act, like the airline measure, has the backing of groups that rarely join forces on anything, according to the current issue of Enterprise, monthly journal of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Supported by the Carter administration, it would start to unwind the complex frustrating skein of rules that makes truckers' lives miserable and controls the hauling of a good chunk of the nation's commodities from one place to another," the Enterprise said editorially.

THE BILL (S 1400) aims to shift from regulation to competition.

Its hoped-for results are lower rates, improved service, increased efficiency and more incentive for entrepreneurs to invest capital in the trucking industry.

The bill gives truckers, among other things, the freedom to raise or lower prices within a certain "zone of reasonableness" without approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which regulates trucking and, incidentally, is the granddaddy of all U.S. regulatory agencies.

A trio of reform bills targeted to the regulatory process itself would force a more careful examination of proposed and existing rules and programs.

All of these developments on the regulatory reform front are good first steps.

Whether they signal a trend or only a passing fad will determine how enthusiastically the business community will view them.

AN EDITORIAL:

Bush Sounds Clarion Tax Call

GEORGE BUSH nudged his Presidential campaign bus ahead of those of other contenders by spelling out a proposal for a tax cut that would help individuals and business alike.

His move in the still-early race for the Republican and Democratic nominations next year will force other hopefuls into greater specificity on the major domestic issue of inflation and the economy.

The Texas GOP candidate made a lot of sense in his call for a $20 billion tax cut and his promise to submit a plan to balance the budget.

come voters by promising them bigger hand-outs.

But this would kill the golden goose, discouraging business investments and keeping the poor in bondage forever by limiting an economic expansion that otherwise could provide them with more and better-paying jobs.

By giving more rapid depreciation on equipment bought to increase productivity, granting investment tax credits and offering tax incentives for creating more jobs, a well-conceived tax cut can actually result in higher tax revenues.

ROUGHLY ONE-HALF of the tax cut, Bush proposed, would benefit individual taxpayers. The rest would encourage business expansion, thus creating more jobs.

"Any candidate who promises instant relief is a fraud," Bush told the National Press Club luncheon at which he spoke.

In contrast to Jimmy Carter's 1976 promise to balance the budget and increase spending at the same time, Bush said he would balance outgo with income by putting limits on the growth of federal spending.

This is the correct approach. Theoretically, the budget could be balanced by raising taxes, making a whipping boy of big business and appealing to the masses of low-

THE IMPORTANCE of the Bush tax cut plan 14 months before the 1980 election and nearly a year before the nominating conventions is that it may encourage other candidates to try to out-do him.

If the idea of a tax cut appeals to Americans, Bush's early and specific endorsement of the idea should result in a perceptible boost to his as-yet crawling campaign.

A Bush rise in the popularity polls would get other hopefuls on the tax-cut bandwagon soon enough and thus influence the whole thrust of the campaign.

It's still far too early to begin making firm choices on the best candidates, but George Bush certainly hasn't hurt his chances with his tax cut theme.

ART BUCHWALD:

Facts Are Bit Fuzzy In Raging-Hare Tale

WASHINGTON—By now most people know the story about the President and the rabbit.

For those who don't, it seems the President of the United States was out in a fishing boat alone and was attacked by a ferocious rabbit. The President splashed his oar at the rabbit and drove it away.

When he got back to shore he told his White House staff about the incident but they wouldn't believe him.

Now if this was just the story of a President and a bunny it would be none of the public's business.

But the tale does have political implications and it says quite a bit about Carter's way of running the White House.

In previous administrations it is hard to imagine anybody on the President's staff doubting the word of his boss.

IF PRESIDENTS Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, or even Nixon had said they had been attacked by a rabbit on a pond a staffer's reaction would have been "Thank God you're safe, Mr. President."

Or in the case of President Johnson, Jack Valenti or Joe Califano would have said, "Please tell us about it, sir, and don't leave out one detail."

Even Jerry Ford's staff would have taken the Chief Executive at his word.

But such was not the case with President Carter. When he got back to shore with what he thought was a good tale to recount, his people refused to believe him.

AS FAR AS it could be learned not one person said, "Well done, Mr. President. That rabbit will think twice next time before he attacks the leader of the most powerful country in the world" or "If this doesn't show you can row and hit a rabbit at the same time, nothing will."

Instead he found nothing but skepticism when he related the story amongst his advisors and friends.

Some insisted that rabbits could not swim, others doubted that, even if they could swim, they would attack a person holding an oar in his hand.

Still others showed by their silence just how far morale in the administration had declined.

IT IS RUMORED that Ham Jordan had even considered giving everyone who worked for Carter a loyalty test to find out who believed the President's bunny story and who didn't.

President Carter, who never shows his emotions, was crestfallen. The credibility of the Presidency had reached such a low point that, even when Carter said he had been attacked by a swimming rabbit, no one would believe him.

Carter chalked it up to the malaise in the country that had now infected even his own staff.

Fortunately for Carter, a White House photographer, who was on a bluff overlooking the pond, had taken a picture of the battle. Carter showed the photo to his staff who studied it, but they were still skeptical.

SOMEONE SAID, "It's an animal but how do we know it is a rabbit?"

For the first time since he took office Carter stopped smiling. He ordered Jody Powell to blow up the part of the photo which highlighted the thing in the water. Then he called in the staff again. "Well, is it a rabbit or isn't it?"

They finally decided by a vote of 5 to 4 that it was a rabbit. Jody Powell, who voted with the majority, went ahead and released the story.

Thus the country was assured that a President who had promised Americans when he took office that he would never lie to them had once again kept his word.

But the real question that goes begging is: "Why wouldn't Carter's people believe him in the first place?"

"THIS POLL SHOWS: 52% 'DON'T KNOW,' 31% FOR THE RABBIT..."

Letters to the Editor

Volunteer Nursing Effort, Hospital Aid Is Praised

Editor, Avalanche-Journal
This letter to the Editor is two-fold. First, a letter of thanks to the people who are so cooperative and supportive of the volunteer effort. To them I would express thanks from each of us who believe in volunteering. We need all the publicity we can get, and you have never denied us!

Secondly, in June, at the Texas Association of Hospital Auxiliaries State Convention in Dallas, we were privileged to hear inspiring words from a hospital administrator from Arlington. His words fell as rain on arid ground!

He gave figures to prove the dollar value of the Texas Hospital Volunteers, but he also cited the value of each person who befriends patients or families at a time when needed.

Lubbock is a medical center now and gaining all the time. Many people are here from other towns and even out of state. The need of a friend is acute. The statements made by this administrator will be with me when needed, because they are so true. He said:

"Each of us should be so proud of our work. Most of the time we work so hard, but have so few accolades. Even if no one ever pats us on the back, from Administration, Auxiliary, Hospital Personnel, etc., feel very free to pat ourselves on the back, because it's one of the highest callings."

"We each one spend our own money on proper clothes, shoes, gasoline, and a car and much time to give of ourselves to others. That is what each person should attempt to do on this earth, and Volunteers do it!" What a nice accolade for Volunteers!

Thanks again Avalanche-Journal and I would like to close with these words: "To give pleasure to a single heart by a single kind act is better than a thousand head-bowings in prayer."

He Changes Mind About Lubbock, Lauds Paper

Editor, Avalanche-Journal
I'd like to comment on the August 23rd issue of The A-J.

As a preface, I lived in Lubbock in 1975-1976, stationed at Reese AFB. I involved myself in the local community for the specific purpose of deciding whether to settle there permanently. Ultimately I rejected Lubbock because I felt that interaction among citizens of varied backgrounds was not only negative, it did not have a bright outlook.

Press reaction to minorities plays a powerful role in shaping public opinion and I was not impressed with the wording of various articles which addressed issues and initiatives such as the "Minorities Seek SPAG Seats" piece in the Aug. 23rd edition.

After reading the article I reacted in a typical biased fashion, looking for the punch line or the hidden agenda. Convinced that the reporter was either committing professional suicide or the editor was on vacation, I contacted several friends who had attended the meeting.

They assured me that enough was said at the meeting to incite biased or distorted reporting. Because the article was not biased or distorted, I feel compelled to commend your reporter and let you know that I support this type of balanced reporting.

I am very familiar with SPAG and I am also familiar with the influence of the old guard in Lubbock. These facts amplify my appreciation beyond a simple thank you. Please pass this along to your reporter and accept my duly considered endorsement of The A-J editorial staff.

Lubbock is among my favorite places. I like the geography and the growth pattern. As a black person, I would dearly love to settle there and make positive contributions to a future worthy of the time expended. The article I speak of gives me a spark of hope that perhaps the ultimate, obvious solution is emerging—that is, we, the American Society, will either work and live together or we shall continue building walls, knowing not what is being walled in or walled out.

Thank you for removing a brick.

Federal Bureaucracy Eating Our Sack Lunch, He Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal
Most of our problems today are government-induced. Inflation, recession, lack of foreign respect, lost income due to regulations, etc.

If everyone would take the time to read the Declaration of Independence this week, you would see the U.S. government reflected in it. The federal government is eating out our substance, just like King George and his minions were doing in the 18th century.

Our constitution is a great instrument, but it is being misused today. Just one phrase, "the general welfare," has been taken out of context and used as a license to re-distribute the income of this nation, taking the income from the productive and giving it to the unproductive. Of course, the distributing of this income also reduces the productivity by about 40 percent in the process.

Government, of any sort, is not—and cannot be—productive. It can only derive income by taxation of production. Too bad we can only sit by and watch all this happen, instead of reverting back to the way it was intended originally: let the government see that no foreign powers intervene in our domestic affairs, and stay out of everything else.

Let the free enterprise system run, and it will put an end to all those problems I mentioned in the first part of the letter. It's a shame it won't ever come to pass that way!

Area Writer Says Hance Is Serving District Well

Editor, Avalanche-Journal
I am writing in reference to the letter in the Sunday Avalanche-Journal from Jo Ann Phinizy.

It is beyond my comprehension how anyone in the 19th Congressional District of Texas could possibly find fault with the job Kent Hance is doing in Washington.

Does anyone think that one man can move into his Washington office and in a matter of a few months, single-handedly balance the federal budget?

Does anyone think that he can serve the people of this area without staying in touch with them?

The poll the writer speaks of was simply a way of getting input from the people who put him in Washington to speak for them.

Would the writer have him sit in his office and never get in touch with us again? Has the writer even bothered to read how influential Mr. Hance has become during his brief stay in Washington?

Has the writer made note of the times he has returned home to help the people of this area with their problems? Has the writer talked to those unfortunate farmers who were hailed out about Mr. Hance's immediate concern and what he did for them?

I am a Democrat, but I do not support Jimmy Carter. Jimmy Carter is not doing a good job, but Kent Hance is and should be supported and applauded for the job he has done thus far.

As for Democratic politicians being a problem—I wonder about a certain Republican gentleman who scoffed at an oil slick problem along the Texas coast and then defended the country that is causing it, vetoed certain appropriations that we badly needed for our colleges and universities in Texas, and is likely to cause teachers to unionize before we can get him out of office.

There just doesn't seem to be a perfect party does there?

Campaign On Weeds Is Off Base, A-J Reader Says

Editor, Avalanche-Journal
In regard to the weed situation in Lubbock, the Mayor and his associates are trying to force the citizens to destroy Nature's vegetation that produces pure oxygen that insects don't damage, and protect the vegetation that produces impure oxygen that insects try to destroy.

They are headed in the wrong direction. Hope you will learn more about Nature that God caused to be here so we can survive.

JOSEPH SOBRAN:

Love One Another

WASHINGTON—"Nothing almost sees miracles but misery," wrote Shakespeare. The Poles today must have an shakesense of that truth. The last world war began—remember?—when the West decided to liberate Poland.

Our history books tell us we won that war, but if the Poles ever get to write their own texts the story may read somewhat differently.

Meanwhile they have been vouchsafed a joy beyond any privilege of the world's remaining free peoples.

And yet Pope John Paul II's return to his homeland has given us all a glimpse of glory.

The enormous crowds, the crested Slavic faces beaming with love and piety, the cheers, prayers, songs, so irresistibly reminding us of the moment of creation when all the sons of God shouted for joy—has any event of our time been so moving, so memorable?

ONLY 40 YEARS of brutal oppression made it possible, and never has mere worldly power seemed so superficial and downright puny.

Having come to the West less than a year ago, John Paul has spoken the words the West's tactical equivocators have forgotten how to say. Our leaders huddle with Poland's squalid captors and emerge babbling of fruitful negotiations, common aspirations, mutual interests.

The Pope stands before his people and speaks of human freedom. The contrast is almost too chastening to bear.

There is a danger that our own habits of perception will cause us to lose the point. CBS Dan Rather assured his audience that the lesson of John Paul's welcome is that Poland's most powerful force is "neither Communism nor Catholicism but nationalism."

I SUSPECT that this comment reflects nothing so much as the secularist impulse to translate all human concerns into mundane terms. Poland appears almost more Catholic than Polish.

And I know of no reason to presume that the people I saw on my TV screen—like the Slavs I myself know (including my family)—would put their country ahead of their faith.

Those who best know their country's weakness have most reason to rely on God's strength.

Patriotic though he is, the Pope spoke much more in the universal terms of God and man than of Poland herself.

He made it a special point to affirm the rights of believers within the Soviet Union itself, a gesture that caused nervous outrage in Moscow.

ONE UNNAMED Communist diplomat was quoted as charging him with violating the separation of church and state. The clumsy deceptions and obstructions of the Polish state, so self-defeating, revealed how a regime that exists by terrorizing its subjects lives in the isolation of its own fear.

And this Pope, who commands no divisions, has less dread of Soviet power than the Free World's commander-in-chief.

The Pope's visit was punctuated by startling realizations. One of them is that our President, a devout Christian, has failed to make religious freedom an audible theme in his sporadic campaign for human rights.

That is more than a personal failing. Even American Catholics have generally ceased taking any interest in their persecuted brothers within the Communist world.

AND OF course most Western liberals take religious freedom to mean freedom from, not for, religion. If the Helsinki accords made even perfunctory mention of the rights of worshippers, we didn't hear about it.

American Jews have probably done more for the beleaguered Christians than American Christians have. "A new commandment I give you that you love one another even as I have loved you."

Thanks to John Paul II, we may begin obeying that commandment again.

Poland remains a captive nation. The day when truth prevails there (or anywhere) is still remote.

But after all it is the mission of truth in this world not so much to rule as to oppose. As Samuel Johnson said, though we cannot outvote them, we can outargue them: there must be just enough right in the world to keep wrong behaving with minimal decency.

FROM NOW on, certain falsehoods, evasions and bündnesses will no longer be possible. Even tyrants feel some shame, and if he has achieved nothing else, John Paul at least somewhat circumscribed Leonid Brezhnev's power to lie. That in itself is a good week's work.

Perhaps there are some things our own leaders will not henceforth dare to say. Gerald Ford told us that Poland wasn't Soviet-dominated; Jimmy Carter said that Poland meets our standards of human freedom. What embarrassments. Yet they now seem less fatuous than unconsciously prophetic.

Ready or not, the West has at least one genuine leader.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

CONSIDER WHAT men play to do best. Go hunting. Fish. Eat dinner. Play ball. Break horses. Whatever. Only about 3 percent of going hunting is what you're doing. Likewise fishing. Also eating. And time on the playing field. Or in the saddle.

Ninety-seven percent of going hunting, et al. is preparing to go. To be any good at it, you've got to devote a considerable amount of time to getting ready. And to be happy, it's said, you've got to learn to enjoy the lengthy preparation and not be impatient with it. This item is from our Love and War man's file, incidentally.

Dogs and cats make their own vitamin C. It's not necessary to give them orange juice.

Client reports that certain parts of India have a women's language that men can't understand.

In only one sort of big-game hunting does the animal that gets caught have to pay for the license, and that, says our Love and War man, is husband hunting.

Mix plain old baking soda with cornstarch, half and half, and you've got a dandy deodorant that works as well as anything, according to some experts.

Sir, how would you rate yourself as a marksman? Possibly not up there with Adolph Topperwein, I'd guess. During 12 days in 1906, Topperwein fired at 72,500 targets. He missed only nine.

Japanese City Uncertain About Earthquake Survival Chances

TOKYO (AP) — The 11.7 million people of Tokyo are living with a geophysical time bomb that could explode at any moment. Despite elaborate planning for an emergency, nobody knows how the city would come through a major earthquake. "Disaster strikes when we least expect it," says Disaster Planning Director Yoshinobu Asakura, quoting a Japanese proverb. "There are too many unknowns to accurately predict what a major quake would do to this city. All we know for certain is that eventually a big one will hit us, and damage will be extensive."

Asakura's fatalistic prediction reflects something known to many Japanese — their nation rests atop an unstable archipelago where subterranean disturbances are a daily occurrence.

The National Meteorological Agency says Japan is shaken each year by about 1,000 jishin — earth tremors — strong enough to be felt by humans. Yet few Japanese have experienced a major quake.

The last such upheaval in Tokyo was the great Kanto earthquake — named for the coastal plain around Tokyo — on Sept. 1, 1923.

It hit a magnitude of 6 on Japan's 7-point earthquake scale that measures a quake's intensity. A 5 is considered "strong" on that scale, a 6 "disastrous." In the Kanto quake, collapsing buildings and wind-fanned fires killed 140,000 people in the Tokyo-Yokohama area and reduced cities to rubble.

On the Richter scale used in the United States, the Kanto quake would have reached 7.9, just short of an 8, or "great" quake. San Francisco's 1906 quake, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, also has been estimated at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

"Today, houses are much better built and the city is better prepared to handle a major disaster," Asakura said. On the other hand, he noted that Tokyo now has skyscrapers — some 50 stories tall — subways, underground shopping malls and many densely populated residential areas that didn't exist at the time of the 1923 quake.

Tokyo itself is four times the size of the city whose flimsy buildings were ravaged by the Kanto quake. And a government report last year concluded that if a quake of comparable size struck Tokyo on a winter evening, when heating equipment was in use, 36,000 people would die, 63,000 would be injured, and almost a third of the city would be destroyed by the jolt and ensuing fires.

The report noted these figures may even be conservative since there is no way to calculate the toll from panic in buildings and subways.

Tokyo's situation is different from other earthquake-prone cities. Unlike San Francisco — where a major tremor also is predicted — the Japanese capital is not perched precariously atop a major fault line. The epicenter of the great Kanto quake was many miles out at sea.

And Asakura said there is little comparison with Tangshan, China, where collapsing earthen walls caused most of the estimated 600,000 deaths in a July 1976 tremor. "Here, most houses are wooden and it is fire, rather than the vibrations of the quake, that is the real killer," he said.

In the 1923 quake, 40,000 people huddling in one city compound were trapped and burned to death by fires started from overturned stoves and oil heaters.

Tokyo has undertaken a huge effort to protect itself from another such conflagration. Television ads remind residents to shut off appliances and gas burners when not in use, and last April the city inaugurated a $30 million hotline linking a disaster control center with city offices, police, self-defense forces, hospitals and broadcasting stations.

In the event of a quake, 70,000 city workers and 43,000 police would report to predesignated places to supervise relief and keep order. Troops would be sent to Tokyo's Kasumigaseki area where most government offices are located.

City parks have been named refuge evacuation centers and on Sept. 1, the annual "Disaster Prevention Day," 300,000 schoolchildren and their parents took part in an evacuation training program.

More than 2 million servings of dried food, 58,000 bottles of milk, 96,000 blankets, clothing for 120,000 persons and medical supplies are stockpiled in 14 warehouses located near the parks, and the city has contracts with trucking companies to deliver the provisions.

It all looks fine on paper, but Asakura concedes the plan needs more work, particularly on getting emergency supplies to shelters.

In a quake of 5 on Japan's scale, "I am confident that we could handle the logistics," he said. "But I really cannot say how well we would be able to transport goods if a quake was on the scale of the 1923 earthquake. Improvements must be made to get the provisions closer to the evacuation centers."

Such improvements could come none too soon. A study by Dr. Hiroshi Kawamura of Tokyo University found that major quakes have occurred on an average of every 69 years, within a margin of 13 years, over the past millennium.

By that calculation, Tokyo entered the danger period this year, 56 years after the last big rumble.

Even if the city was not hit directly by a quake, seismologists say there is a strong chance it would suffer from a major tremor that has been long predicted in the Tokai coast, 100 miles to the southwest.

A law enacted last month named six states in the Tokai region as the sites of special measures to prepare for a quake measuring 6 on the Japanese scale would hit Tokyo with an intensity of 5.

"An earthquake of that size has not hit Tokyo in 50 years, and there is no reason to believe that it could not occur today," Asakura said.

Young Leaves For Nigeria

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Having been wine, dined and garbed with the cloak of an Ashanti chief, Ambassador Andrew Young leaves the Ivory Coast Tuesday for Nigeria, where he is expected to receive his most triumphant welcome in black Africa.

U.S. officials here said a massive reception was being planned in the Nigerian capital of Lagos for Young and the group of 24 American businessmen he is escorting to seven African nations.

The trade visit will provide the first contact between high-ranking American officials and businessmen and the man elected president to lead Nigeria's first civilian government in 13 years, Alhaji Shehu Shagari.

Shagari, due to take office Oct. 1, is regarded as a conservative and a champion of free enterprise and the visit could give an indication of America's future trade relations with its second largest source of imported oil.

Young's visit to Nigeria, Africa's richest and most populous nation in 1977 broke a long freeze in U.S.-Nigerian relations and paved the way for President Carter's official visit last year.

The U.S. group's three-day visit to the Ivory Coast, considered the best example of economic development of the African continent, was marked by a series of lavish banquets.

On Sunday night the outgoing U.N. ambassador was presented with the multicolored cloak of an Ashanti chief by Ivorian small business representatives.

"I am no longer an ambassador, just call me chief," said Young, joking with his colleagues.

In his speeches, Young paid tribute to the Ivory Coast policies of political moderation and economic laissez-faire, which have been criticized by more radical African leaders.

Many countries in Africa claimed to be "revolutionary," he said, but it is you Ivorians who have waged the real revolution in economic development.

Rush For Cheap Home Loans Shifts To Football Stadium

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — The Louisiana loan rush of 1979 shifted Monday from suburban New Orleans to a Shreveport football stadium, where nearly 1,500 persons faced a four-day wait for a chance at cheap home loans.

Twice that number of persons waited about one week for the same opportunity outside New Orleans in Jefferson Parish. The loans were made possible by bond issues authorized by cities and the state.

Shreveport citizens were waiting for a chance to borrow part of $5.2 million available at an interest rate of 7.6 percent. The rate for conventional home loans is running about 11 percent.

"We're calling it Camp Wannamorage," said C.W. Thompson, director of the 52,800-seat State Fair Stadium. "Anyone who is still here Thursday morning will get a certificate of attendance and achievement."

Thompson's certificate read: "This is to certify that (name) attended the 1979 session of Camp Wannamorage and that the above named exhibited those camping skills so required to survive in any wilderness located directly under a football stadium."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am retired but I am able to invest about $2,000 a year. About 45 percent of my investments are in common stocks and 55 percent in bonds.

A. I own bonds issued by seven major corporations and am concerned about rampant inflation. Most, if not all, of my bonds are "callable." If they are called and paid off at their call prices, the dollars I would receive would have much less buying power than the same number of dollars had at the time I bought the bonds.

Q. In the past few years I have received literature in the mail from three mutual funds but I have not acted because I am confused. Is a fund's "management fee" a one-shot thing or is it an annual charge? What does this amount to on $1,000 — not as a percentage but in dollars and cents?

A. That fee, technically called an "investment advisory fee," is the money a mutual fund pays to its investment advisor for recommending what securities to buy and sell. It's an on-going thing. The fund pays it year in and year out.

Q. I have a mutual fund that has a "management fee" of 1 percent. Is that a high fee?

A. Although the size of the fee varies from fund to fund, the typical fee is one-half of 1 percent of the fund's net assets up to a certain size — say $250 million — and is scaled down on larger amounts.

Q. If XYZ Mutual Fund has assets of $100 million, it would pay XYZ Advisory Corp. $500,000 a year. If you own $1,000 of XYZ Mutual Funds' shares, your share of the advisory fee would be $5.

A. The whole $500,000 would be listed as an expense item on the fund's income statement. You would never see your $5.

Q. With some funds, the advisory fee is the only expense item, because the advisory companies pick up all the funds' expenses. But with most funds, other expenses are also paid by the funds.

A. As a result, the total annual expenses of most funds run between six-tenths and nine-tenths of 1 percent of assets. The exact percentage — the "expense ratio" — is printed in the prospectus published by each fund.

Q. I have written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

A. For lists of growth and dividend stocks, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address your requests to William A. Doyle, 235 E. 4th St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Civics Book Bypassed

AUSTIN (AP) — If you took high school civics any time in the past 52 years, chances are about even that your textbook was "Magruder's American Government."

But as frowning representatives of the publisher watched, the State Textbook Committee bypassed Magruder's in recommending five civics books for use in public schools.

Allyn-Bacon, publisher of Magruder's, stands to lose almost $1 million in sales.

Magruder's lost out on the fourth ballot to a book written for students who read below high school level, Addison-Wesley's "American Citizenship."

Kennedy To Decide 'By Thanksgiving'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has indicated he will decide whether or not to challenge President Carter for the 1980 Democratic nomination in time to enter the primaries.

Kennedy told two New York Democrats, Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, and Gov. Hugh Carey, that "by Thanksgiving I'll have a pretty good idea" whether or not he will run, according to sources familiar with the conversation.

Tom Southwick, Kennedy's press aide, acknowledged that the conversation took place but refused to discuss the substance.

Southwick also said that "clearly, a number of people in the party have said he (Kennedy) ought to run."

The aide also refused to discuss a possible Kennedy timetable for deciding whether to enter the race.

If Kennedy decided in late November to challenge Carter, the Massachusetts senator would have time to get his name on the ballot in such early presidential primaries as New Hampshire and Massachusetts, where he would be heavily favored over Carter.

Meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., told reporters he thought Kennedy could have the nomination if he sought it. But the speaker added that "I don't have any reason to believe he's a candidate."

At the White House, Carter press secretary Jody Powell offered a "polite demurrer" when asked to comment on O'Neill's statement. He said Carter is concerned about the remaining weeks of the congressional session and "we're all going to do everything we can to prevent the premature injection of presidential politics" into issues before Congress.

Young Lubbockite Becomes Year's 18th Traffic Victim

Joe Bernal Jr., 19, of 2214 Third St. became the city's 18th traffic fatality when he died at a Dallas hospital, late Sunday, from injuries suffered Aug. 12 in an accident in the 4300 block of North Quirt Avenue.

Services for Bernal are pending with Henderson-Singleton Funeral Directors in Lubbock.

Since the mishap, Bernal had been listed in critical condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital's burn center in Dallas. A hospital spokesman said the Lubbock teen-ager died at 10:40 p.m.

Bernal sustained burns over 80 percent of his body in the fiery, early-morning crash. The victim was taken to Health Sciences Center Hospital before being transferred to Dallas.

Police said the man was driving north on Quirt Avenue at a high rate of speed when he apparently lost control of his 1977 Trans Am and struck a light pole in the center median.

A passenger in Bernal's car, Ray Travena, 19, of 218 David Ave. was treated and released at HSCH.

After the car's gas tank ignited on impact, the vehicle continued across the southbound traffic lane and came to rest west of the southbound lane, according to reports.

Firemen said the car was completely engulfed in flames when they arrived on the scene. They had the blaze under control within 16 minutes, reports show.

Tucson Food Burial Causes Reaction

TUCSON (AP) — The city has secretly buried 22 truckloads of radiation-exposed food, but a top Pima County official and residents opposed to the burial say they may take legal action to get it dug up and moved.

Last week a court had ordered burial of the $300,000 worth of food because it was exposed to tritium.

The making and collecting of miniatures has become increasingly popular during the last three or four years — making it the second largest hobby in the United States.

Doris Robison has contributed to its popularity in West Texas. What started out as a hobby 15 years ago has developed into a new career for the Littlefield woman. She will be teaching classes on miniature making at the House of Crafts and The Little Shoppe throughout the fall.

"I've always liked things that are small," said Mrs. Robison. "I originally started out dressing dolls, then making dolls and then I began making miniature room settings."

The scale for miniatures is usually one inch to one foot. Mrs. Robison says the key is to keep everything according to this scale. "If you have just one thing that is too big, it ruins the whole scene," she said.

The making of miniatures is a very delicate and time-consuming project. Mrs. Robison may spend an entire year in her spare time creating one vignette or room setting.

Most miniatures are 18th Century room settings and then there are the adult doll houses that have become so popular.

The fun is in creating the different objects from pieces of wood, cloth, even bread dough and bits and pieces of things around the house. Mrs. Robison added that she never throws anything away because she never knows when it might be needed.

Her favorite room setting is of a general store. She made the toy sacks from old towels, then stained them with tea. The bananas hanging on the wall were carved from tiny dowel sticks. She used pins for the keys on the cash register and the backs of ear screws for the door knobs. She has thought of everything to create an air of realism, from matches by the pot belly stove to a white mouse on the shelf peering down at cheese on the counter.

Mrs. Robison's hobby may seem tedious, working with tiny details, but the rewards are plentiful. She has had her designs of doll clothes on the cover of World Wide Doll News and has won many ribbons for her miniatures in art shows. Her work will be on display at the George Mahon Library in January.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was talking on the phone to a guy I like a lot when my mother picked up the extension downstairs and yelled, "You've been gabbing for 45 minutes! Get off! I have to make a call."

My friend asked, "Who was THAT?" I was so humiliated I could barely talk. I said, "That was my mother. She must have had a rough day. I'd better hang up."

Mom ran upstairs and screamed for 20 minutes. She said I shouldn't have said what I did — that it made her look bad. Mom is always doing something to embarrass me and I don't know how to deal with it. I'm 15, too young to leave home.

I know Mom has a miserable life. Dad drinks, and he's never around. Any advice for me? — Blue Betty

Dear Betty: You have an excellent understanding of the situation as indicated by your statement. I know Mom has a miserable life, etc. This is what causes most of the ugly behavior in the world. Psychiatrists call it displacement. It is commonly known as taking out our own unhappiness on somebody else.

You can reduce the friction by reacting as little as possible and avoiding situations that might provoke her. Easy? Of course not, but hang in there, honey. You'll live through it.

Dear Ann: As a counselor on alcohol and drug abuse for the military, I am able to reach many people who have a drinking problem, but not nearly as many as your column. Would it be asking too much to have this printed?

There seems to be a total lack of understanding of the word "alcohol." Most people believe it refers only to whiskey and wine — that beer-drinkers need not be concerned about becoming alcoholics.

Example: A local wife after many visits to the clinic, admitted she had been a heavy beer-drinker for 10 years, averaging three to four cases per week. She was surprised when the doctor told her she had cirrhosis of the liver. Her comment was, "I can't understand it. I never drank anything stronger than beer."

Webster defines alcohol as a poisonous, inflammable liquid formed by vinous fermentation and contained in wine, beer, whiskey, and the other fermented and distilled liquors of which it is the intoxicating principle.

Please Ann, pass the word. If it is in your column maybe they'll believe it. — Riverside, Calif.

Dear Cal: It's been in my column before, many times. Perhaps if they see it often enough, it will soak in.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a woman who works in an oil refinery. We are required to wear hard hats, just like the men.

I have heard it said that the constant wearing of hard hats will cause a loss of hair. I don't believe a woman would go bald from it, but I'd like to know how the hard hats affect both sexes. — Love My Job

Dear Love: A dermatologist in Washington, D.C., Dr. Robert Stolar, researched this one. He made it a point to personally examine the hard hats of the workmen at the building sites near his office.

According to Dr. Stolar, the inner surface that circles the hard hat is soft and pliable. There is no undue pressure on the scalp. Movement is frequent. The hats will not create hair loss among either men or women. So — keep the lid on.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I was wondering if you or any of your readers had any idea what you could use old venetian blind slats for.

I didn't know whether you had anything in the paper about them or if so maybe I just missed it.

I would appreciate hearing something about it. I read your articles everyday and save them for future use. I really enjoy them, thanks so much. — Ida D. Doffer

You can weave each slat in and out of your yard fence, especially on those wire mesh and chain-link fences.

They are very good to hold up tomato plants or in the flower bed.

If you all have any ideas on what to do with these send them into us, in care of this paper. — Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I have been married for 26 years, am the mother of ten and have found out that you can still learn something new every day.

I would like to add one of my most helpful hints that is especially great for new brides.

I always set my knives on the drain-board before washing any dishes. It is so easy to clear the table and toss everything in the dishwasher and under that flimsy suds you cannot see those sharp objects until it's too late.

It is a good practice to set them aside, and then they are readily seen.

I thought this might help to keep the injuries down, in the hectic and busy schedule that most housewives contend with these days.

Thanks for your column. — Mrs. J.F.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

A few months ago, our daughter had her first baby — our first grandchild.

I was over at her house the other day drinking coffee and, of course, we were discussing our baby — my daughter asked, "Mom, how long does it take before you get your figure back?" I said, "Well, let me see, you are 21." — A Proud New Grandmother

DEAR HELOISE:

The lock on my kitchen door is one of those which can be opened with a credit card.

The door has a hollow core so I can't put a dead-lock on it.

We had a rash of burglaries recently and I didn't feel very secure, but couldn't afford to replace the door. I bought a 2x4 and had them cut it the length of the distance between the door and the range. I have a narrow kitchen.

Now when I'm gone and at night I slip the 2x4 between the door and the range and feel much more secure.

In order to break in, a thief would have to break the door in. Hopefully he wouldn't stick around that long. — Sue Lovell

Pretty ingenious — Love Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep moths out of winter clothes — first have the clothes cleaned, then place them in a storage bag or a cedar chest. Put a camphor cake in with them.

When you take them out in the spring, hang them outside about 30 minutes and the smell will go away. The smell of camphor will not stay in clothes as the smell of mothballs does.

This is also good for storing linens. — Mrs. A.C. Radtke

DEAR HELOISE:

Want some hard-cooked eggs fast, like for potato salad?

Well, cook them in your egg poacher. It's one, then either chop them or mash them, whatever you prefer.

It's quick, easy, and you don't have to peel them. Saves a lot of time also. — Burnice

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE:

Here is an easy way to keep the fizz in soft drinks sold in glass bottles with reusable aluminum caps.

Simply stretch a few layers of plastic wrap over the bottle's top and glass threads before screwing the cap back on.

This makes a real snug, airtight seal. — Ron Powell

DEAR HELOISE:

I am the fisherman in our family and I have found another use for nylon net.

I had several wire frames from mannow nets. The kind with cotton net. These all had holes in them, and the mannows would slip right through the holes.

I removed the old net, laid it on the nylon net, using it for a pattern. Cut around it, leaving approximately an inch to fold around the wire frame. Stitch in place.

Lo and behold, new nets at practically no cost. — Mrs. Pat Simpson

Here is another Somerville hand from the early Thirties. The North-South bidding would probably be duplicated by modern bidders. East's two-diamond bid relieves South of the need to respond to the double. North repeats the takeout double and when West bids three diamonds North overbids a trifle with four spades. South worries some when he sees the dummy, but with clubs breaking 2-2 and spades 3-2 he can stand the loss of the trump finesse since the club finesse does succeed. A modern East-West pair would have made things difficult and probably impossible for North and South. East would surely make a preemptive jump to three diamonds. If West passed, North would repeat his double at the three level, but suppose West carried on the barricade by going to four diamonds. Would North double again? If he did double again would South decide to pass and hope that North could take four tricks against the diamond contract? Incidentally, four diamonds makes because South never gets on lead and eventually

NEW YORK — Okay, soap fans, hold onto your heartstrings and get ready to turn your afternoon TV dials. "Another World" has announced the biggest news to come down the soap opera tube in a coon's age. Executive producer Paul Rauch has signed William Gray Espy to appear on the NBC serial.

And if you don't know or remember who William Gray Espy is, you ought to turn in your "I Love Soaps" buttons. The Alabama-born, 6-foot-1, blue-eyed young actor was merely the "hottest property" to ever appear on a daytime drama. He originated the role of Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless" when the show debuted in 1973. Within a year, Espy had garnered such a fanatical fan following for his moody, sex-imbued portrayal of Snapper that he headed every fan magazine popularity list and had thousands of screaming Mimis pounding down the "Y & R" stage door daily. There were, of course, several soap "idols" before Bill Espy came on the scene. But none had ever attained the swift, intense adulation that Bill acquired. And no soap idol since has been able to match Bill's charismatic combination of vulnerability and volatility.

Bill exited "Y & R" three years ago, complaining of acting cramps and a loss of privacy and identity. And in those three years, every soap producer, including Rauch, has besieged the bachelor ac-

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. PAUL G. DONOHUE

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have been bothered by intestinal upset and I believe I am intolerant to cow's milk. How does one go about proving this? — Mrs. P.W.

The simplest way is to avoid all milk and milk products for a couple of weeks, then drink a glass or two of milk. If the symptoms subside while you are avoiding milk and return after resumption of it, you have a pretty good clue that you have an intolerance. It's estimated that about 33 million Americans have some problem with digesting the lactose (milk sugar) because of some degree of lactase deficiency. Lactase is the enzyme that helps digest the lactose.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am an elderly lady with a heart condition. My doctor thought it was angina pectoris at first. Then, after I wore one of the monitoring devices for 24 hours, he told me it was "supraventricular tachycardia." He didn't go into detail and didn't prescribe any medicine, but told me to relax when I had any pains and they would go away. Can you explain "supraventricular tachycardia?" — Mrs. M.C.

You need just a small anatomy lesson in order to understand. There are four chambers in the heart, two upper (atria) and two lower (ventricles). Tachycardia simply means fast heart beat. If the cause of the fast beat originates in the lower chamber it's called "ventricular tachycardia." Such a condition requires prompt treatment.

"Supra" ventricular tachycardia (which you have) refers to a fast beat that originates in the upper chamber. This is less serious, but not to be ignored. You have had proper attention and your doctor has looked for important and treatable causes for this condition. Perhaps you have the type of fast beat that requires no drug treatment.

There is no diet to follow, but sometimes carbonated beverages can cause an attack, as can stimulants such as caffeine. For a fuller discussion of such matters see the booklet "How to Take Care of Your Heart," which you can order by sending 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: A few years ago my doctor said I had a weak bladder. Nothing serious, and that I could live with it or have surgery to repair it. Later, I find I have to urinate every 30 minutes after drinking liquids in the morning. Is there anything I can do to help this problem other than surgery? — Mrs. A.E.K.

A "weak" bladder means that the support for it has "pooped" out. Because of this weakening, the bladder does not empty completely and often urine will leak out when a person laughs or coughs.

Your doctor noted the early stage of this problem a few years ago. Now you should return to get an update on your condition. Surgery is the only treatment to correct it. You may be a candidate for that now.

Frequent urination might be a sign of a fallen bladder, but it can also, as you may know, indicate diabetes. While your frequency is probably due to the bladder condition, diabetes has to be considered at your age.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Six years ago I had anorexia nervosa and almost died from it. So here's the question: Could a person like me, who once had this, ever have it again? It's very important to me to know. — Mrs. C.E.

Anorexia nervosa is a total lack of appetite that is not caused by any physical problem. It is a serious condition that can lead to emaciation. There are, as you are aware, psychological problems associated with it. You are to be congratulated on overcoming them and bringing yourself back to health. So long as you continue to keep active and get the nutrition you need there is no reason for you to lapse into your old problem.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Several years ago I had surgery for hemorrhoids and also for birth damage repair. Unfortunately scar tissue developed in the vaginal area.

Now this tissue isn't a bit elastic and causes pain on contact. Is there anything one can do to alleviate this condition? Is there any cure outside of surgery? This is very distressing. — Mrs. D.

Sometimes doctors can use a dilator to stretch the tissue. Often enough, however, surgical correction is necessary.

Hemorrhoids can be cured! If troubled with this or other rectal problems, write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for a copy of his booklet, "The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

COTTON BOLLWORM INFESTATIONS are described as heavy in a number of South Plains fields.

The crop continues along the lengthy road to maturity, having passed through a gauntlet of heavy hail storms recently, points out Dr. James Leser, area entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock.

"Some fields have a good crop of mature bolls and a few early planted survivors to the south of Lubbock should even have some bolls beginning to crack," Leser says. "But the 1979 growing season is far from over for many area farmers. We need at least 45-60 days of exceptional weather to make a decent yield on fields spared by the latest series of severe weather events."

Bollworm problems are far from over, Leser says, even though egg laying activity has fallen off since the previous week. He says farmers should look for another wave of activity which was expected to begin around Monday and peak about Saturday. It appears some fields may continue to experience bollworm problems late into the month, he says.

"WHILE THERE ARE TRULY FIELDS around that don't and won't need treatments, many need help immediately if all is not to be lost," Leser says. "Even the sorriest looking fields can have infestations exceeding economic threshold."

"Bollworms aren't reading the book which says eggs are laid on tender top terminals and small worms must have small squares and tender terminal growth to survive and develop... Throw the book away for 1979."

The pattern of cotton growth has been such that there has been no dominant terminal in some instances, Leser says. A cotton plant frequently has been taking on the appearance of a small bush, he says, with egg laying occurring all over the plant.

"Worms as small as one-sixteenth-inch have frequently succeeded in entering full sized bolls," the entomologist says. "Apparently, a boll won't be absolutely safe this year until it opens."

Infestations have been as high as 280 and more worms per 100 plants in some cases, Leser says, very little damage has been visible — yet. Farmers need to clean up these infestations, he says, "or they might as well plan on disastering out" these fields later.

FARMERS SHOULD ASK THEMSELVES whether they are growing cotton or beneficial insects, Leser says. "Some people are bound and determined to save their beneficials, regardless of the situation," he adds.

In many cases, Leser says, the beneficials are too few and too late to do any good. And the few beneficials that can be found are feeding on aphids, he adds. It should be remembered, he says, that it's September, not July or August.

If farmers are waiting on a beneficial buildup and it hasn't arrived, it's not going to at this late date, Leser says. Recalling the old saying, "Spare the rod and spoil the child," Leser adds that "some producers are sparing the rod to save beneficials and they may just spoil their crop."

Some of the infestations entomologists are finding, if untreated, could result in yield reductions of as high as 100 to 200 pounds per acre, Leser explains. And it's too late, he points out, for the cotton plant to compensate for yield reductions now.

IF PRODUCERS CLEAN UP BOLLWORM infestations where justified, Leser says, a maximum of one more application probably will be needed later in some instances. But he cautions not to treat fields unnecessarily and to use only enough "force" to manage the infestation.

"Scouting is a must if correct and timely decisions are to be made," Leser says. "When making whole plant counts, avoid taking several counts in one spot. Randomly select plants across the entire field. Size of the worm is important in making a decision, but probably more critical is whether or not the worm is buried in a boll, square or pink bloom. No currently available chemical will get these worms."

Magnitude of the infestation and size distribution of worms will determine material of choice and rate, Leser says. High rates, he adds, are reserved for "life saving instances," moderate rates for cleanup of infestations he has seen lately (large numbers of worms five-eighths-inch in length or smaller), and low rates once the situation is brought back under control and only moderate infestations follow.

Aphids continue to worry many area producers, especially as cotton approaches the time of open bolls, Leser says. The general trend for aphid populations is downward, he adds. Parasites, predators, weather and crowding are taking their toll. Some fields have aphid numbers which continue to increase unchecked. But these are becoming less frequent.

"Those light brown, swollen, aphid looking things on the undersides of aphid infested leaves are mummies — aphids that have been 'stung' by a minute wasp and are dead," Leser says. "This wasp parasite is the same one responsible for controlling our earlier greenbug problems in sorghum."

COTTON FUTURES CLOSED STRONGLY Monday with gains ranging from 83 to 102 points in the two nearby contracts on speculative local and commission house buying.

Floor brokers said Hurricane Frederic, now on a path that could take it over Cotton Belt areas, appeared to spark speculative buying interest, which also overcame trade selling and local profit taking at the day's highs. Volume was estimated at a fairly active 5,500 contracts.

Traders saw only limited reluctance to take positions ahead of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's September cotton production estimate to be released Wednesday.

A 5 p.m. bulletin from the National Weather Service at Miami, Fla., said small craft from Boca Raton, Fla., to Dry Tortugas should stay in port and those on the Florida west coast south of Tarpon Springs, Fla., should not venture far from harbor. Small craft from Tarpon Springs northward and westward to the mouth of the Mississippi should exercise caution, the bulletin said. Gale warnings were in effect for Dry Tortugas.

Field Day To Emphasize Grain Sorghum Research

Grain sorghum research, emphasizing drought tolerance and midge resistance, will be one of the several highlights of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station's (TAES) 70th annual field day here today.

The field tour will be from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center, north of Lubbock International Airport on Farm to Market 1294.

Dr. Jerry Johnson, TAES plant scientist, will present the latest research information about grain sorghum during the field tour.

"We are conducting research that is intended to improve grain sorghum as a crop for the Texas South Plains," Johnson said.

Field day visitors will be given an opportunity to observe grain sorghum performance tests containing 119 commercial entries from several seed companies.

These tests are grown on both dryland and irrigated plots and should be of interest to producers that anticipate planting grain sorghum in 1980, Johnson said.

Additional stops will include research on soil fertility, cotton breeding, water use efficiency, and weed control. Grape vineyard tours and soybean research will be among the added attractions.

The field day is a cooperative presentation of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, High Plains Research Foundation, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Texas Agriculture Extension Service, and the National Weather Service Agriculture Meteorology Office.

Professional staffs of these organizations, state and federal agencies will answer questions and discuss topics of interest with farmers, home owners and gardeners.

Chicago Market Livestock Futures Close Mixed

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 75 points lower to 20 higher on 24,228 contracts Monday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Distant December was the weakest at the day's low with nearby October at the best gain after rising 65.

The cash cattle connected commission house was an active early buyer and later took to the sell side. Early demand was prompted by strength in cash cattle which was partially offset by unsettled beef trade. Traders also note sharp reduction in placements on feed during August as a supporting factor.

Wholesale beef was up 1/2 to off 3/4 at 102 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up $1.50. Slaughter was 113,000 head. About 14-

200 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 47 lower to 5 higher on 3,968 contracts. October was the weakest after slipping 67.

The market turned lower on profit taking after climbing to new highs since May. The mixed trend of cash feeder cattle was also noted in later trade along with reaction in live cattle futures.

There have been 56 deliveries thus far. Cash feeder cattle were up $3 to off $5 with the best top $133 per hundredweight. About 1,600 head are expected today at the major markets.

Hog futures closed 65 lower to 20 higher on 7,633 lots.

Commission house buying paced the early upturn with much of the demand a spillover from cattle futures. The cash cattle connected commission house was an aggressive seller on the upturn, forcing the market to give ground.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 69 to 70 cents a pound. F.o.b. river. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the best top $40.25 per hundredweight, which is the cheapest in 3 1/2 weeks. Kill was 330,000 head. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 29,500 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 57 to 112 lower led by March after February fell 175. Volume was estimated at 7,765 cars.

They were lower from the start in an extension of Friday's weakness. Continued pressure on cash bellies and heavy hog kill weighed on futures as did lower trend to cash hogs.

Wholesale bacon was unchanged to off 4 to 4 1/2 cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

LABOR COSTS

A driver is responsible for getting a loaf of bread from the bakery onto the retail store shelf.

A farmer invests in land, buildings, machinery, fertilizer, pesticides, seed and other supplies, as well as labor, to grow the wheat for the bread.

But the labor cost of getting the bread from the bakery to the store shelf is twice what the farmer gets for the wheat that goes into the loaf.

Amarillo Folk To Protest Incest Movie

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — About 100 Panhandle pastors and church members plan to gather today for a pray-in to protest "the moral decay of television."

The pray-in, at local CBS-TV affiliate KFDA, was born when CBS announced it would air "Flesh and Blood," a movie about incest.

"I was involved in incest," said Judy Mamou, who is leading the pray-in movement with her husband, Jimmy. "And it is not funny if they are going to show the terrible trauma and how to survive incest, that would be different."

Television's Emmy Awards Offer Few Surprises

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's artistic community, commented resident sage Walter Cronkite, "has done a pretty fair job — not good enough, but pretty fair."

That's the way it was at the 31st Emmy awards, Sunday night, as Television Academy unloaded another carload of statuettes for best achievements. The results were surprising, but only for inconsistency.

"Roots II" won as limited series and for Marlon Brando's supporting performance, but not for its five other nominees.

"Lou Grant," with the highest number of nominations (10), scored only as outstanding dramatic series and for Michele Gallery's writing.

"Friendly Fire" captured Emmys as outstanding dramatic special and for director David Greene, but not for stars

Carol Burnett and Ned Beatty nor writer Fay Kanin.

The Emmys, which are voted by blue-ribbon juries and not industry-wide voters like the Oscars, are increasingly hard to figure.

Oscar seemed like an unseen guest at the Pasadena festivities. "Scared Straight," which won an Oscar last April, was named best informational program. The 51st Motion Picture Academy awards show won as special event program, prompting producer Jack Haley Jr. to suggest "maybe they should give an Oscar to the Emmy show."

Acting awards went to veteran Oscar winners Bette Davis ("Strangers: The Story of a Mother and Daughter"), Ruth Gordon ("Taxi") and Brando, who performed his role in one day for a reported $250,000.

The Emmy cast strove for a youthful look with emcees Henry Winkler and Cheryl Ladd, but flashbacks to early Emmy shows made the atmosphere heavily nostalgic. Significantly, the two standing ovations were given to veterans Milton Berle and Walter Cronkite. Another warm moment came with the appearance of Erik Estrada, the "CHIPS" star who almost died in a filming accident.

40,000 Teachers On Strike In U.S.

By The Associated Press
A STRIKE BY about 12,000 teachers virtually shut down Detroit's 300 public schools Monday, but 650 Oklahoma City teachers ended their three-week walk-out. In all, disputes involving 40,000 teachers in 12 states were interfering with the education of 800,000 students. There were rumblings that about 26,000 teachers would stage sickouts at various schools in Los Angeles, where classes began Tuesday, and 3,600 others were threatening to walk out in San Francisco, where school starts Wednesday.

Leaders of the Oklahoma City teachers implored their members to return to their classrooms "with dignity as victors." Smaller disputes were settled in Connecticut and New York. All told, 39,980 teachers were still off the job in 71 school districts with total enrollments of 801,100 students, according to an Associated Press count.

Detroit classrooms were vacant as the majority of the 12,000 teachers marched in picket lines. The strike idled about 213,000 students.

It brought to 25 the number of Michigan school districts crippled by strikes, encompassing more than 20,000 teachers and approximately 375,000 students.

In other states, 3,000 teachers were on strike in New Jersey, 2,700 in Pennsylvania, 2,600 in Indiana, 2,500 in Washington, 2,000 in Louisiana, 1,800 in Illinois, 1,600 in Ohio, 1,500 in Alaska, 1,100 in Oregon, 680 in California, and 190 in Rhode Island.

Few Come To School

According to Mary Ellen Riordan, president of the Detroit Teachers Federation, "very few children and very, very few teachers reported to school today."

For all practical purposes, the schools are closed. Mrs. Riordan said school officials had no immediate estimate of how many teachers or students showed up for classes.

Teachers voted to strike after rejecting a three-year contract offer by the school board, last week. The main issue was the teachers' demand for a cost-of-living allowance.

Detroit school officials opened schools Monday morning in hopes that teachers would report to work. By Monday afternoon, officials still had not officially closed schools, despite the picket lines and lack of students.

No Contract, No Work

Mrs. Riordan said the teachers would not return to work without a new contract.

"Detroit teachers do no work without a contract," she said. "This has been a policy for 15 years. We're hoping this will be a short strike."

In Los Angeles, where youngsters returned to classes with the city's year-old busing plan still in dispute, the district's 26,000 teachers threatened to stage sickouts at different schools each day and to picket to call attention to stalled contract talks.

In San Francisco, teachers union representatives and school district officials met to try to head off a strike by 3,600 teachers. The San Francisco Federation of Teachers scheduled a vote on a strike for Tuesday.

"If ever there was a situation ripe for a strike, this is it," said Barbara Holtman, president of the San Francisco P.T.A. "I think the teachers have justified claims, but I don't really feel the district has the money to give them all they want. And we're caught in the middle."

Both Sides Meet In Court

The Oklahoma City strike officially ended Sunday night when teachers represented by the American Federation of Teachers voted to return to class.

Both sides met in Oklahoma County District Court Monday in an attempt by the federation to be reinstated as the bargaining agent for the teachers. The school board wanted a ruling confirmed that it cannot negotiate with the union.

In Anchorage, Alaska, Superior Court Judge Victor Carlson issued a temporary restraining order Monday, demanding that the Anchorage school teachers go back to work Tuesday.

About 80 percent of the district's 1,900 teachers have been on strike for better wages since school began Wednesday. The strike affects 38,000 students in 80 schools.

THREE KILLED

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Three persons, including a 6-year-old girl, died and 16 others were wounded when a man threw a hand grenade at a crowd in front of a Roman Catholic church, the government-owned Philippine News Agency reported Monday. The assailant escaped after hurling the grenade at Sunday churchgoers in Capas, 65 miles northeast of Manila, the agency reported.

Wagner said the weapons are "not detonatable" when they leave the plant. "Additional components have to be added to the fusing and firing systems, and these are added by the Department of Defense," he said.

Department of Energy spokesman Jim Cannon said Pantex, an ordnance plant since World War II, was converted to a nuclear bomb factory in 1951 and puts together all nuclear warheads for the United States.

Snail Darter Threat Ignored By Solons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Monday to authorize completion of the multi-million-dollar Tellico Dam, despite the threat it poses to the tiny snail darter.

On a vote of 48-44, senators followed the lead of the House of Representatives and agreed to grant the $119 million dam an exemption from the Endangered Species Act and any other law that might prohibit its completion.

Work on the dam was halted when it was discovered that its completion would lead to the extinction of the snail darter, a tiny fish.

The vote represented a reversal of the Senate's previous position, and may have set the stage for a veto by President Carter of a key appropriations bill. Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus has said previously he would urge Carter to veto any legislation calling for completion of the dam.

Rekindling Hurricane Threatens U.S. Coast

MIAMI (AP) — Revived Tropical Storm Frederic gained strength as it hovered over the southwestern tip of Cuba on Monday, threatening to rekindle its hurricane force, forecasters said.

Boating precautions were urged from the Florida Keys to the Mississippi Delta.

Meanwhile, Hurricane Gloria remained far out in the Atlantic and posed no threat to land.

As Frederic picked up renewed strength from the warm Gulf waters, gale warnings were posted for the Dry Tortugas. Small boats were urged to stay in port from Boca Raton, just north of Miami, down through the Florida Keys and on out to the isolated Dry Tortugas.

Small Craft Warned
The National Hurricane Center at Miami said small craft should not go far from port on Florida's southwest coast. And boaters from Fort Myers, Fla. to the mouth of the Mississippi River were advised to exercise caution.

At noon EDT, Frederic was hovering over the southwest tip of Cuba, about 180 miles southwest of Key West, at latitude 22.5 north and longitude 83.5 west. Its maximum winds had increased to 65 mph — nine mph below minimum hurricane strength. The storm was drifting northwest at five mph and was expected to reach the southeastern edge of the Gulf of Mexico by afternoon, the hurricane center said.

"Frederic could strengthen and become a hurricane this afternoon or evening," said Dr. Neil Frank, center director. He said there was a threat of heavy rain over much of Cuba.

Any Direction Possible
Frank said there was no way to predict which way the storm might turn once it reached open water.

The swirling edges of the storm buffeted Key West with gusts up to 46 mph, and residents of the lower Florida Keys were warned of probable high tides and some flooding of roads.

Once a minimal hurricane, Frederic dissipated to tropical depression status then rebuilt to 39 mph winds Sunday to once again become a tropical storm.

In Key West, the Monroe County Sheriff's office advised residents to monitor broadcast reports closely. "We expect some flooding today because of rain and high tides," said Deputy Neal Chancelor.

He said wind gusts up to 50 mph did minor damage late Sunday. "But a lot of people were still prepared from Hurricane David — they haven't taken down their boards," Chancelor added. David, a forerunner of Frederic, bypassed the Keys and Miami-Fort Lauderdale last week and battered Florida's east-central coast before heading north for Georgia and South Carolina.

Gloria's noon position was near latitude 31.3 north and longitude 46.9 west or about 1,000 miles west southwest of the westernmost Azores.

Highest sustained winds were 75 mph but there were indications Gloria might soon weaken and drop below hurricane force, forecasters John Hope said.

He said Gloria was expected to drift erratically through Monday night then begin moving northeast on Tuesday.

U.S.-Soviet Talks Kept Under Wraps have been in Cuba for many years. They say the Cubans have a right to invite the Soviets to their island, and that there is nothing in U.S.-Soviet understandings of 1962 and 1970 that bars them.

The State Department conceded the latter point last week, saying the agreements that settled the 1962 Cuban missile crisis and the 1970 Cienfuegos submarine base crisis covered only offensive weapons systems and not combat troops.

A hint about the possible Soviet position emerged over the weekend when an official Soviet radio commentator made mention of the American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba.

The commentator noted that the United States has persistently refused to discuss abandoning the base, which it has held since 1903 on an indefinite lease.

The commentator did not say whether the Soviets would offer to withdraw their troops in return for American withdrawal from Guantanamo.

But in slightly similar circumstances during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, then-Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev raised the issue of American missiles in Turkey and asked for their removal.

State Department spokesman Gooding Carter said the U.S. base at Guantanamo is "not negotiable."

Meanwhile, the Soviets gave the first public exposition of their policy in a front-page editorial in Tuesday's edition of Pravda, the communist party organ, which is often used by the Soviets to issue official policy statements.

Propaganda Campaign Charged
The editorial accused the United States of waging a hostile propaganda campaign aimed at embarrassing Cuba during the recent non-aligned nations' meeting in Havana. It said the campaign was being used by opponents of SALT II.

It also said a Soviet training center has existed in Cuba for 17 years without change in the number of personnel or their function. The arrangement "comprises an inalienable right of two sovereign states. Any attempts to restrict this right are absolutely unfounded," the editorial said.

Dancers Say Ballerina 'Sold Soul'

tunist," one source said. "They think she sold her soul for her career."

As punishment, the dancers are giving Miss Vlasova the silent treatment — refusing to greet her, ignoring her at rehearsals, sources say. Some male dancers have said privately that they will refuse to be Miss Vlasova's partner if she is given leading roles, it is said.

The atmosphere is so tense, insiders say, that one group of dancers told anti-Semitic jokes which Miss Vlasova, who is Jewish, could easily overhear at a rehearsal break recently.

In an interview broadcast on Soviet television Sept. 1, Miss Vlasova declared she was "happy that now I am within the walls of the Bolshoi theater again" following her New York ordeal.

Robbery, Murder Suspect Recaptured After Escape

WATERBURY, Conn. (AP) — Lawrence Pelletier was recaptured Monday night at gunpoint inside a bar, less than 24 hours after he escaped from a jail while awaiting trial in the killings of three private security guards, police said.

"We have him," said Sgt. Thomas Brown, one of the two officers who made the arrest at 6:25 p.m.

He was taken at gunpoint. He had a long weapon, with a sharp point," Brown said. The weapon was described as a sharpened metal rod with its handle taped.

At The Trepid Fox
Police were tipped off that Pelletier, one of four persons charged in an $1.8 million heist, was at the Trepid Fox on Chase Avenue, a bar featuring exotic dancers, Brown said.

The burly Pelletier was cornered after he ran into a "dark passageway" toward the back of the bar, Brown said, and then began to struggle with police.

"I put a gun to his head and told him if he moved it was all over," Brown said.

Brown and police Detective Robert Little heard the radio call while they were cruising and sped to the bar.

Pelletier, described earlier as "extremely dangerous," said nothing to the arresting officers, Brown said.

He was expected to be held overnight at Waterbury police headquarters before being returned to the New Haven jail, 20 miles to the south of Waterbury, a west-central Connecticut city.

Self-Identified
A bartender said Pelletier identified himself to patrons shortly before his arrest, after he had been drinking at the bar for more than three hours. The bartender asked not to be identified by name.

Pelletier, 36, considered by police as one of Connecticut's most dangerous prisoners, escaped from the New Haven State Jail late Sunday by squeezing into an air duct and descending through a jail ceiling and out an unguarded door, officers said.

Pelletier was awaiting trial on a murder charge that could result in a death sentence.

"Under the circumstances, he should be considered very dangerous," said Warden Francis T. Moore.

Pelletier and the three others were charged with murdering three security guards during a $1.8 million robbery at Purolator's Waterbury office on April 16. The loot was recovered and the four were arrested in two separate raids.

Reported In Car
Earlier, Southington police said Pelletier had been seen driving a car reported stolen from Woodbridge, a New Haven suburb.

State and local police searched New Haven with bloodhounds for about five hours early Monday, then focused on areas where he might have gone.

State police said they were providing continuous protection for Evelyn Vega, 26, who was arrested with Pelletier a day after the holdup in a Waterbury apartment they shared.

During a court appearance on Monday, she said news of his escape was "very shocking." Her lawyer said she was "terrified" of Pelletier.

She and Donna Couture of Wallingford testified against Pelletier and Mrs. Couture's husband, Donald, during grand jury hearings in which the two men were charged with capital murder and first-degree robbery.

Donald Couture is being held in the Hartford Correctional Center.

The women, both free on bond, face noncapital murder and robbery charges.

monthly basis. Kearney speculated.

"We're proud of it but we're not satisfied yet," administrator Berryman said.

Kearney also reported on the board's new cash-only policy for the hospital's ancillary (clinical and lab) services, saying cash collections have jumped sharply.

"We're collecting over $1,000 a day," Kearney said, adding that prior to adopting the new policy, collections averaged about $200 to $380 a day.

In a later administrative committee meeting, Bill Leonard of Medical Services Inc. met with LCHD officials to discuss his private ambulance firm's bid to take over Lubbock's EMS. The group immediately went into an hour-long executive session, saying they would be involved in contract negotiations.

Written Proposal Slated
Emerging at 4:30 p.m., committee chairman Don McInturff told reporters that MSI would submit a written proposal outlining the specifics of the proposed operation within 10 days of Monday's meeting.

Board members have been communicating with MSI to possibly take over EMS in light of the local ambulance system's mounting financial problems. Board members voted to turn the study of the problem over to the Blue Ribbon advisory committee, hoping its members would approach the city for help in supporting the operation.

McInturff said the committee also is planning to talk with the local Aid Ambulance operation about their interest in assuming the EMS system. All of the proposals still are in the discussion stage and no action has been taken yet.

McInturff didn't elaborate on specifics of the conversation with Leonard, but he did say that MSI apparently can provide all the services now provided by EMS. McInturff said specific rates for Lubbock service have not been determined, nor have they discussed whether the private ambulance firm would continue out-of-city runs.

Board members will meet again today at 3 p.m. for a budget preparation workshop which is expected to last for several hours. Finance committee members will meet Friday at noon.

ary trainees were represented by the union.

Both sides said they were willing to resume negotiations, but no talks were scheduled.

Plant officials said operations were normal at the plant, where 1,800 people assemble components of nuclear weapons for the Defense Department. The warheads are then shipped to military bases for storage.

Wagner said the weapons are "not detonatable" when they leave the plant. "Additional components have to be added to the fusing and firing systems, and these are added by the Department of Defense," he said.

Department of Energy spokesman Jim Cannon said Pantex, an ordnance plant since World War II, was converted to a nuclear bomb factory in 1951 and puts together all nuclear warheads for the United States.

"He dropped one .45 and I rolled him over and took the other. He told me who he was and then Purvis came up and killed. "Back away from that man. I want to talk to him." He said, "Floyd, were you in that Kansas City massacre?"

Smith said Floyd sat up, cursed at Purvis and vowed not to say anything.

"And Purvis said, 'Fire into him.' One of the other agents gave him a burst with his machine gun."

Smith said Purvis then asked where he could find a telephone. "I told him to call at Clarkson. I thought he was going to call an ambulance."

"When he came back, I asked where the ambulance was," Smith said, and then found out that Purvis had called FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to report killing Floyd.

In the Kansas City incident, known there as the Union Station massacre of 1933, four policemen and one FBI agent, along with one of their prisoners, were killed in an attack. Floyd was believed to have been wounded in the shoulder in that shootout.

Lubbock Man Booked After Club Burglary

A 31-year-old Lubbock man was booked into county jail for burglary and possession of a controlled substance after police answered an alarm Monday morning at the C'll Do club, 1708 Fourth St.

When police arrived at the club, they found the back door had been pried open. They arrested the suspect who was standing near the door.

Reports show the suspect had a pillow case around his neck which contained $1, had a large quantity of change in his pockets and was carrying a plastic syringe which contained a small amount of a clear liquid substance in his pants pocket.

When officers entered the club, they found an office door and three gratings on the roof had been pried open, discovered a jukebox and a pay pool table that were pried and found a hole through the ceiling. George Eddie Seale, owner of the club, said damage to the club would reach $1,500.

The incident occurred about 5:54 a.m.

Police entered a Fourth Street club shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday and found three persons suffering from minor cuts and the man who allegedly did the cutting.

While officers were questioning the victims, a man ran out of the club and police began chasing him after they were told he was the one with the knife. Reports indicate the assault was the result of an altercation which broke out between the victim and her visitors.

Esther Garza of 2711 Erskine St. said she lost $5,000 in furniture when her house was burglarized between Friday and Sunday.

Death Of Lubbock County Man Ruled Homicide By Official

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack has ruled homicide in the death of an elderly Lubbock County man who sheriff's deputies said apparently committed suicide.

Blalack said he ruled in the early August death of Elias Rodriguez, 79, after receiving reports Friday from the Department of Public Safety in Austin.

The reports did not indicate Rodriguez had been holding a .22-caliber pistol, which was found next to his head when he was found lying in a pool of blood at his house Aug. 5 on FM 2641 about two miles south of Shallowater.

However, sheriff's Capt. Alton Hobbs said tests on the dead man were run too late for results to be conclusive. Rodriguez was estimated to have been dead about 15 hours before several of his relatives found him.

"There are too many contradictions in the (sheriff's deputy) report," Blalack said Monday. Blalack, who pronounced the man dead at the scene, said it also appeared to him that Rodriguez' body had been removed after he was shot.

He said he also questioned how the pistol found at the scene was lying on the left side of Rodriguez' head when the man suffered a single gunshot wound in the right temple.

Hobbs and other investigating deputies said they based their conclusion that the man killed himself partly on the fact that about $1,000 cash was found in the house and that the residence apparently had been locked from the inside when Rodriguez was shot.

"Our investigation showed it was suicide," Hobbs said. "There was nothing to indicate anything but suicide," he added.

The captain said, however, that if Blalack leaves his ruling as homicide the sheriff's department would submit the case to Criminal District Attorney John Montford's office and leave it up to Montford on whether to present it to a grand jury.

Grave May Contain Early Explorer

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet expedition has found what is believed to be the grave of 18th century Dutch explorer Willem Barents on the island of Novaya Zemlya in the Arctic waters that bear his name. Tass said Sunday.

The Soviet news agency said an expedition headed by Moscow scientist Dmitry Kravchenko found traces of a burial mound on the coast of Ivanov Bay and a pole on which the letters "BAR" were clearly visible. "Scholars believe this to be the grave of the famous explorer," Tass said.

Barents died in 1597 after a two-ship expedition he commanded got stuck in Arctic ice after rounding the Cape of Desire on Novaya Zemlya. He died while searching for a northern sea route from Europe to China and India.

Family Feud Ends In Death

A 26-year-old Lubbock County man was charged Monday with murder in connection with the Sunday shooting death of his father, Chester D. Burks, 63, of 1122 96th St.

Davey R. Burks of Route 9, Box 101, was charged about 11:30 a.m. Monday and the district attorney's office recommended bond at $25,000. He was released on the bond Monday afternoon.

Sheriff's deputies found the elder Burks lying in a pool of blood outside his residence about 6:55 p.m. Sunday. Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack pronounced the man dead at the scene and ruled the death homicide — the county's 10th of the year.

Deputies said they arrested the dead man's son at the scene after seeing the suspect sitting on a couch about 15 feet from the body. A .30-caliber rifle also was confiscated at the house.

Preliminary reports indicate Burks suffered multiple gunshot wounds in the back, chest and hand. An autopsy report was to be performed today at St. Mary's Hospital.

Deputy Lonnie Bright said that an argument had erupted between the two men Saturday night over a car that Burks had accused the suspect of damaging.

Bright said the suspect was arrested for public intoxication Saturday and taken to jail.

Opposition Sought To N-Waste Project

Austin — A Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate from New Mexico has called on Texans to oppose plans by the Department of Energy to locate a high-level nuclear waste storage facility near Carlsbad, N.M.

Stephen William Fox told a Capitol press conference DOE's plans to locate the Waste Isolation Pilot Project near Carlsbad pose an "incredible danger to Texas," since the wastes would be transported through the state.

Fox, chairman of the No Nuclear Wastes Defense Fund and publisher of the 21st Century No Nuclear Wastes Express in Santa Fe, urged Texans to write Federal and State officials — including those at the Department of the Interior, DOE and Texas Railroad Commission, as well as legislators and congressmen — expressing their opposition.

Fox said he favors an end to nuclear power — because "we don't know what we're doing" — and production of military and industrial nuclear wastes.

If wastes are produced, they should be stored where they are produced, without some "crazy scheme of shipping it across the country," he said.

He also attacked the "cover-up and ostrich-like leadership" of state and Federal officials over the recent breaching of an earthen tailings dam owned by United Nuclear in northwestern New Mexico, which result in the spill of some 100 million gallons of radioactive water to the Rio Puerco.

Traces of the spill have been reported downstream in Arizona, and it is thought the spill could eventually reach California.

Seberg Autopsy Inconclusive

PARIS (AP) — An autopsy on the body of American actress Jean Seberg, who was found dead Saturday night, revealed no indication of violence, police said Monday.

However, because of the advanced state of decomposition in which the body was found, special toxicological tests must be made to determine whether or not she died of an overdose of barbiturates, as police believe. Those results will not be known for several days, police said. Miss Seberg was reported missing from her Paris apartment Aug. 30.

Police revealed the contents of a note the 40-year-old actress left for her teen-age son, Alexandre Diego, who is believed to be living in the United States. The boy is the child of Miss Seberg's marriage to writer Romain Gary.

"Diego, my dear son, pardon me. I can't live any longer," the note said. "Understand me. I know that you can, and you know that I love you. Be strong. Your mother who loves you, Jean."

The note, scribbled on a crumpled piece of paper, was found in Miss Seberg's white Renault car along with several empty barbiturate packages and a half-empty bottle of mineral water, police said.

Lewis Rips Henderson, Dallas Defense

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas linebacker D.D. Lewis said Monday the Cowboys have a defensive leadership gap caused by the departures of injured strong safety Charlie Waters and retired end Ed "Too Tall" Jones. He added that controversial Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson's mouth wasn't helping things.

"Our defense is in a confused state," Lewis told the Dallas-Fort Worth media meeting. "We need someone to step forward in a leadership role."

Asked if linebacker Henderson could fulfill such a role, Lewis shot back: "He missed his leading role in 'North Dallas Forty.' I've had enough of him."

The Cowboys staggered to a 21-13 victory Sunday over San Francisco with Lewis' fourth quarter interception helping prevent a 49er upset.

Henderson was replaced as a starter by Mike Hegman and played only on specialty teams and in prevent-defense passing situations.

Asked if Henderson was being punished for giving an interview to a national magazine critical of the Cowboy organization, Coach Tom Landry said: "He couldn't work early in the week because of a bad back and then Thursday he didn't feel good. If he can't work, he can't play."

Henderson has apologized to Landry for the magazine remarks and said after the 49er game he had "no quarrel" with Landry's decision not to start him.

Lewis said Monday, "We have lost two great players on the strong side of our defense. That's why Thomas Henderson has got to come in and play good, solid, decent football. That's what it is, going to take."

Lewis said, "We're not getting much of a pass rush. It may be the worst I've seen a Dallas defense in quite a while. I'm just wondering what we are going to look like when we start playing contenders."

"We really depended on Charlie. He was our signal caller and a stable influence. He would study other defenses and unbelievable amount of time. We had a lot of confidence when he was in the game."

Lewis added, "Ed Jones was just coming into his own. Larry Cole does a good job but he just can't cover the ground that Ed did."

Lewis concluded, "We know we have a better team. We know we're not perfect but we've got to get better — much better."

Lewis, 33, is a 10-year veteran from Mississippi State. He made his remarks as the Cowboys, 2-0, prepared to meet the undefeated Chicago Bears Sunday in Dallas.

Red Raiders Alert To Lobos

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

For the Texas Tech Red Raiders, it's time to forget the past and look ahead to the future. And for the Red Raiders, the future is now.

There was plenty of disappointment in the Tech locker room following Saturday's 21-7 loss to the University of Southern California, the nation's top-ranked college football team.

But that contest is now firmly notched in history and all the talk in the world isn't going to change the outcome of that close, physical battle. Just as coaches prepare "one game at a time," every contest — win or lose — must be forgotten, or at least put aside so total concentration can be directed toward the next opponent.

Tech's next opponent is the University of New Mexico, an old rival. The Red Raiders and Lobos have been knocking heads since 1931. Tech has dominated the series — winning 20 times and tying twice in 24 meetings. The Red Raiders are currently on a four-game winning streak against UNM. The Lobos last won in 1971 when they defeated Tech in Lubbock 13-10.

The Lobos will be watering at the mouths when they invade Jones Stadium at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. New Mexico is off to its best start since the 1966 season. The Lobos are 2-0 after a 34-0 mauling of Louisiana Tech and a 35-16 drubbing of Oregon State. Both victories came in Albuquerque.

The Texas Tech clash is always an important contest for the Lobos and there is nothing sixth-year head coach Bill Mondt would like better than to dispose of the Red Raiders in front of the home fans. Mondt has never beaten a Tech team. The closest a Mondt-coached UNM squad came to upending the Red Raiders was in 1974 when the two regional foes battled to a 21-21 standoff.

Tech coach Rex Dockery expects a whale of a game from the Lobos and knows the Red Raiders will have to have their heads in the game if they expect to win.

This is undoubtedly the best New Mexico team we have seen since I've been at Tech," Dockery admitted. "They became a good team last season and they have a lot of good people back from that team."

It seems like New Mexico always has some people at the skill positions who can give you a lot of trouble. I don't have to say too much about (quarterback) Brad Wright. All you have to do is look at his stats from the game last season and you can see we respect him."

In 1978, the Red Raiders jumped ahead 14-0 in Albuquerque before Wright, who is in his junior season, led the Wolfpack back and made a game of it.

Wright completed 28 of 49 passes for 452 yards and three touchdowns to set a UNM single-game passing record. Tech recorded a 36-23 win, but only after UNM pulled within seven points in the fourth quarter.

Tech's outstanding fullback James Hadnot had his best performance of the '78 season against New Mexico a year ago. Hadnot carried the pigskin 26 times and totalled a neat 268 yards and one touchdown. Together, the two squads amassed 1,100 yards in total offense — a statistician's nightmare.

Wright and the Lobo offensive unit are off to a good start in 1979, but New Mexico's early strength has been a vastly improved defense. The Lobos scored on an 82-yard interception return against Louisiana Tech and also turned a blocked punt into six points against the Bulldogs.

A 57-yard interception return set up a touchdown last Saturday against Oregon State.

Defense is a concern of Dockery's at the present time. The Red Raiders lost two defensive starters in the USC contest. Sophomore cornerback Alan Swann had to leave the contest after he reinjured his right knee and senior safety Larry Flowers suffered a badly twisted ankle.

X-rays of Flowers' ankle were negative Monday and he is questionable for Saturday's clash. There is still no final report on Swann, but he is doubtful for Saturday.

"I look for this to be a very tough and exciting game," Dockery added. "I know New Mexico will be ready to play and we will have to be ready to win the game."

Phillips Chides Oilers' Undoing

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Bum Phillips, given time to think about Sunday's numbing 38-7 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers, decided tongue-in-cheek Monday that the Oilers would play the remaining 15 games on their schedule.

"This was only the end of a game, not the end of the season," Phillips told his weekly news conference. "We didn't play the caliber of football that Houston is used to playing."

Pittsburgh is a great football team and they played a great game and when you're not up for a game like that, you're in for a very long afternoon.

The Oilers had a very long afternoon, one in which they lost two starters to injuries, quarterback Dan Pastorini, and wide receiver and kick-return specialist Billy Johnson.

But Phillips isn't conceding the American Football Conference Central Division race to the defending Super Bowl champion Steelers.

"The race isn't over yet," Phillips said. "I think everybody is going to lose, three, four or five games before it's over."

Phillips said the Oilers' poor showing was a big surprise to him because all signs during the week pointed to a good performance.

"There have been two times in the past five years when I really felt we were ready to play," Phillips said. "One was when we played Pittsburgh in 1975 (and lost 32-9) and the other was Sunday. We played hard but we didn't play good."

Except for Pittsburgh, we were our own worst enemies.

The Steelers held Earl Campbell to a career-low 38 yards on 16 carries, and 124 yards in total offense. Pastorini hit only four of 16 passes for 16 yards and had three intercepted before his injury.

Oiler cornerback Willie Alexander said the Oilers played with an inexplicable lack of aggressiveness.

"Our defense played what was called," Alexander said. "But there was no above-and-beyond-the-call-of-duty going on out there. That's what normally happens when the Oilers play."

The Oilers try to regroup this week for their first home game Sunday against the Kansas City Chiefs.

A Secret Revealed: Tech CC Debuts

By ERIC GALE
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Cross-country runners are the economy cars of the collegiate sports thoroughfare: unassuming, durable, no-frills, inconspicuous, fuel-efficient.

Each fall, they are eclipsed in the public viewfinder by area football teams — no matter how inept they may be — and their meets, all too often, are no better-attended than Miami Beach during hurricane season.

"Distance running can be a lonely thing for those people," said Corky Oglesby, Texas Tech University cross-country coach.

"Except for the bigger meets, we don't have the crowds," he said. "Our runners get all their encouragement from teammates, parents and coaches. They spend a lot of hours and put on a lot of mileage running by themselves; 100 to 130 miles a week, easily.

"These are some of sport's most fanatical trainers. They get guilty consciences and have withdrawal pains whenever they miss a day of running. It can be lonely, but they get their inner-pleasure from knowing they've accomplished something."

Team-accomplishment was minimal for the Red Raiders in 1978. After amassing thousands of training-miles, Tech went nowhere in the Southwest Conference meet, finishing sixth. Oglesby's three previous Raider teams had claimed third, fourth and third, respectively.

"We were disappointed in our conference finish," Oglesby said, "because we thought we'd run at least as well as the year before. We just had several injuries and a bad day. It was the most disappointing day of the season for me."

There may be times this season when the obscurity of the cross-country program works to Oglesby's advantage in that he expects the 1979 Raiders to be the weakest of his five squads.

Greg Lautenslager, senior from Mesquite, and junior Bert Torres, of North Worth and a transfer from South Plains Junior College, will be counted on, from meet to meet, as the first two Raiders to dot the home-stretch horizon.

Lautenslager, in particular, is responsible for an upswing in the tone of Oglesby's voice. He was 48th in the '78 NCAA meet. He will be ranked among the very best in the SWC.

"He missed making All-American by eight seconds last year," Oglesby said, "and it is our objective for Greg to be at the top of the conference and back in the NCAA. With that experience at the national level, he is one of the finest runners in this part of the country."

Lautenslager and Torres will be augmented by James Mays and Robert Leppard, stars of the Tech track team, plus scholarship freshman Steve Tidrow, of Tulsa, who was second in his state's prep cross-country meet last year.

Mays, a junior from Hereford, was the SWC's indoor 800-meter champion last year, while both he and Leppard, a senior from Brownfield, participated on Tech's two-mile relay team that was ranked fourth in the nation.

Oglesby stressed that both runners will be making a difficult transition to the rigors of six-mile distance competition, and that their early attempts are largely experimental.

The remainder of Oglesby's prospects are freshmen Andy Smith, of Honolulu, who was third in the '78 Hawaii state meet, and Glenn Morris, of San Diego, who has promise.

Fellow walk-ons Shawn Stovall, Johnny Navarro, Jose San Miguel, Joe Duncan, Bill Brash and Gary Rash will attempt to fill any vacancies in Tech's seven-man complement for meets.

The most impressive barrier for the Raider freshmen, according to Oglesby, is the increase in distance from prep two-mile races to the collegiate six.

Letterman Randy Yates, who has foregone his senior year to concentrate on medical school requirements, and junior-to-be Robert Wilson, who has left Tech entirely, have added to Oglesby's concern.

"We don't look as strong as we have in the past," he said. "I would like to see some of the young guys, the unproven frosh, really improve, and help Lautenslager and Torres carry the load."

"I, personally, want to have a lot of people that can do well in conference. We'll do all that we can to achieve this end."

Oglesby admits that this season may boil down to the Year of Lautenslager, but that has not diminished his ambition.

"The football and basketball people feel a great deal more pressure than those of us in the non-revenue sports," he said, "but no one in the non-revenue sports wants to do any less than those in the 'money' sports. We all put pressure on ourselves. I want to win as badly as anybody."

Win or lose, Oglesby's strategy, with the relative obscurity of cross-country never ends.

"We get pretty good support from the administration and athletic department," he said. "They increased our budget a little this year."

"But I think a coach is responsible for encouraging and promoting his program. The more he can say about it, the better. Of course, there's no better promotion than having a national champion or a world-class athlete to bring visibility."

The Red Raiders will be visible for the first time this fall when they host the University of New Mexico, Wayland Baptist and Abilene Christian at 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

And if, at the end of the five-mile course, they are not greeted by riotous applause, no one need feel guilty. By now, these runners are accustomed to being a blind spot in the public's sporting-eye.

Bob Stanley wanted Carl Yastrzemski to get his 3,000th hit, but even more, the Boston Red Sox right-hander wanted to prove a point to the Baltimore Orioles.

"Martinez psyched me up," Stanley said Monday night, alluding to Dennis Martinez, the loser in the 3-2 Red Sox victory. "He was quoted as saying the Red Sox have only two pitchers, Mike Torres and Dennis Eckersley."

Stanley, however, with one inning of relief help from Dick Drago, recorded his 15th victory — scattering four singles.

Martinez enjoyed a measure of revenge, however, by holding Yastrzemski hitless in four at-bats, leaving the veteran an one hit shy of 3,000.

"There's always tomorrow and if not tomorrow, the next day," said Yastrzemski, speaking of his quest.

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver told Martinez what to expect and despite the loss the Oriole right-hander apparently

Atlanta Snuffs Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Quarterback Steve Bartkowski sneaked 1 yard for a touchdown and threw 13 yards to Wallace Francis for another as the Atlanta Falcons beat the Philadelphia Eagles 14-10 in the National Football League's weekly Monday night television game.

Atlanta's winning touchdown was set up in the fourth period when free safety Tom Pridemore intercepted a pass and returned it 20 yards to the Eagles' 17-yard line.

Bubba Bean ran for 3 yards and Atlanta picked up a first down at the 9 on a 5-yard penalty against Philadelphia for an illegal chuck against a pass receiver.

The Philadelphia defense then sacked Bartkowski for a 6-yard loss, but the veteran Falcons quarterback tossed a 13-yard strike to Francis in the end zone. Tim Mazzetti kicked his second conversion for a 14-10 lead with 11:22 remaining in the game.

It was the second victory of the 2-week-old season for the Falcons, who opened last week with a 40-34 overtime victory over New Orleans. The Eagles had started with a 23-17 triumph over the Giants and were trying for the first time in 10 years to put together consecutive victories at the start of the season.

The Eagles took a 3-0 lead in the first period on a 35-yard field goal by rookie barefoot kicker Tony Franklin, a third-round draft choice out of Texas A&M.

They fell behind, however, in the second quarter when Bartkowski completed a 13-play, 79-yard drive with his quarterback sneak. Mazzetti's conversion made it 7-3.

The Eagles came right back after the ensuing kickoff with a 14-play, 69-yard drive, capped by a 3-yard touchdown run on a play-action move by quarterback Ron Jaworski. Jaworski completed five of six passes in the drive for a total of 79 yards. Franklin kicked the point to make it 10-7 with 5:37 left in the half.

Late in the final period, Atlanta drove from its own 25 to the Eagles' 24, where the Falcons finally had to settle for a 41-yard field goal attempt by Mazzetti, which sailed wide left.

The Eagles took possession with 1:34 on the clock and advanced to midfield on pass completions of 10 and 12 yards from Jaworski to tight end Harold Carmichael.

With less than a minute left, Jaworski threw two incomplete passes and a third was batted down. On fourth-down-and-10, he connected for 12 yards to rookie wide receiver Scott Fitzke of Penn State for a first down at the Atlanta 38 with 28 seconds still to play.

The Eagles' last-ditch attempt to pull the game out went down the drain when Jaworski was sacked for a 5-yard loss.

Mustangs, Motley County Surprise Class A Foes

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
For at least two South Plains Class B football teams, the 1979 season got off to a surprisingly good start, with the accent on surprising.

Let's start with the smaller surprise and work up.
Wilson, one of the favorites in District 3-B's Western Zone, dumped O'Donnell 6-0. Big deal, you say, what's 6-0? But that's 6-0 against a Class A team that has some pretty good talent, particularly returning all-South Plains running back Tony Acosta.

"I don't know if 6-0 is a whip-up, but we won," said Wilson coach Danny Chisum. Last year he led the Mustangs to a zone championship with a 9-2 record in his first season as boss man.

"We didn't score like we should have scored," Chisum said. "We don't have the passing attack this year. We've got to grind it out. We had four good drives Friday night and only scored on one."

"We'd get down there and have a penalty or get thrown for a loss and, well, we just can't handle long-yardage situations."

What did the trick for Chisum and his boys Friday night was the same thing that carried them through much of 1978. Wilson only allowed 22 points during the district season last year, 28 points altogether.

"Our defense really came through for us," Chisum said, of the win over O'Donnell. "Those kids really know how to play that defense. As long as they can play like that, we can stay in pretty good shape."

"That's the first time we've beaten O'Donnell since I've been here. That's a good start for us. If we can play well against Ropes we'll be alright. Then we've got Amherst."

"We've got a chance to have a pretty good ballclub if we can play those two," Chisum said. "Well, let me put it this way: if we play those people, we've got a good ballclub."

The big surprise of the night was Motley County jumping on Class A Paducah 26-0. This summer, Coach Gene Griffin wasn't overly optimistic about his troops' chances.

"I think what's really helped us more than anything else has been our seniors," Griffin said. "They have done a great job leading the others."

"And we've had some surprises too. Charlie Ray Campbell, our little 135-pound tailback, he's developing into a pretty fair running back. I don't know how good he's going to be, but he's really coming around."

"And there's Joe Don Warren (a 245-pound tackle). I didn't know how much he'd play for us, but he came out and worked real hard and it's really paid off."

Despite winning the first game of his coaching career, Griffin isn't about to get carried away about his Matadors' chances.

"We haven't proven ourselves yet," he said. "We've had one good ball game, let's see what happens from here out."

"I don't know if we can put eight or nine more of those games together. I do feel like the district is still wide open. After one week, it's really too early to tell. It's too early to say 'So and so is out of it and so and so isn't'."

Astros, Reds To Duel For Lead

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros, back on top in the National League Western Division, sail into Cincinnati today for one of the most important series in the club's history, trying to leave the impression they'll play with ice water in their veins.

The two-game set could help send the Astros into the playoffs for the first time in the team's 18-year history and yet the players are trying to keep up the same one-game-at-a-time reserve that has kept them atop of the division for much of the season.

"I see no reason to be nervous," first baseman Cesar Cedeno said. "You have to go out and play your best whether you are in a pennant race or not."

Player-coach Jesus Alou, whose two-run double lifted the Astros back into first place with a 4-1 victory over San Francisco Sunday, is serene going into the series because he's got it all figured out.

"Everybody has spent the whole season trying to put together the puzzle of why Houston is winning," Alou said. "I believe God helps people who patiently wait for Him to help them."

"It is time that He looked down here at Houston and I think that's why I got the hit (Sunday) and that's why the Astros are winning."

About the only way to ripple the Astros' outward calm is to mention a mid-season comment by Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver, quoted as saying the Astros would drop through the division like a lead pipe when they stopped getting breaks.

And the stage is definitely set for a pressure-packed series opener tonight when Richard, 16-12, who has won nine of his last 10 decisions, goes against Seaver, who is 14-5 and has won 12 of his last 13 decisions.

Gabelich, Breedlove Dispute Speed Mark

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gary Gabelich, holder of the FIA-USAC official land speed record, has protested the method used by Stan Barrett in his claimed record-breaking run Sunday.

Barrett, of Bishop, Calif., steered his 48,000-horsepower, 39-foot Budweiser Rocket, a three-wheel motorcycle, to a top speed of 638.637 miles-per-hour at the Bonneville Salt Flats.

This exceeded the land speed record of 622.407 mph two-way average by Gabelich in 1970 and also Gabelich's fastest one-way average run of 631.367 mph the same year.

Records are made to be broken as long as you abide by the rules," said Gabelich, of Long Beach, Calif., on Monday. "I just feel rules should not be changed to accommodate a vehicle. Barrett's speed was an average over 52.8 feet, which is 0.1 of a mile.

"That short distance was used to accommodate the vehicle's top speed and is not an average over a measured mile like has been done in the past since 1910," added Gabelich. "Guys like Craig Breedlove, Art and Walt Arlons, John Cobb, Donald and Malcolm Campbell, Barney Oldfield and Henry Ford spent a lot of money and a lot of heartaches to establish the official world land-speed record."

"They did this over the authorized official recognized distance. A lot of guys have died trying to establish the official record. It's just like any other sport, you shouldn't change the rules in the middle of the game to score."

Breedlove, a former world land-speed record-holder, agreed with Gabelich.

"It always has been a two-way average over a measured mile," said Breedlove. "I don't believe that the rules should be modified just to accommodate one's inability to construct a vehicle to meet the requirements."

Gabelich pointed out that in the past, these records have been established over two runs that were made within one hour of each other. And he also emphasized that inaccuracies are highly possible over a 52.8-foot distance.

Moncrief Signs With Bucks

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sidney Moncrief, the leading scorer and rebounder in the history of the University of Arkansas, was signed Monday by the Milwaukee Bucks of the National Basketball Association.

The 6-foot-4 guard was the Bucks' first round draft choice.

Terms of the multi-year contract were not revealed.

"Sidney will add a lot to our team," Don Nelson, head coach and director of player personnel, told a news conference. "He's a total team player with great physical abilities both offensively and defensively."

Moncrief was named by the Associated Press as the Southwest Conference player of the year in 1979. In his senior year he averaged an even 22 points a game along with 9.6 rebounds, 2.7 assists and 1.5 steals.

LCC Wins Matches

ABILENE (Special) — The Lubbock Christian College volleyball team won a pair of matches Monday night with Tarleton State and Hardin-Simmons.

The Chaparrals whipped Tarleton first, 15-1 and 15-4, with Bridget Biggers scoring 17 points, and then knocked off Hardin-Simmons 6-14, 15-10, 15-9.

LCC hosts Angelo State and Eastern New Mexico Thursday night.

V-ball Teams Tune

Monterey and Estacado, two teams that face off at tonight, won high school volleyball games Monday night.

Monterey defeated Brownfield 15-8 and 15-6, while Estacado, which hosts the 7:30 game, beat Lubbock High 5-15, 15-9, 16-14. Both winning teams evened their records at 1-1.

Urban Earns Open Crown

Craig Urban won the men's open title in the First Lubbock Invitational Racquetball Tournament Sunday at the Supreme Court Racquetball Club.

Winners in five other classes were Jack Hood, men's open B; John Francis, men's open C; Jim Bruton, men's novice.

Lisa Lynch won the women's open championship, and Teresa Moore captured the women's novice crown.

All of the winners are from Lubbock.

Miss Meyers Joins Workout

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The first day of practice, held before 10 television cameras, convinced Ann Meyers that becoming the first woman to play in the National Basketball Association will be more difficult than she thought earlier.

"I'm a lot slower than the other guys," Meyers said after her first two-hour workout at the Indiana Pacers rookie-free agent camp Monday. "They're a lot more physical than the women I've played against. And I can't do a lot of the things against the men as I've done against women."

Bergland May View Hail Damage

By KIM COBB
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland personally may inspect West Texas farmland at the request of Rep. Kent Hance to view crops destroyed by a recent violent hailstorm, Hance said Monday.

Hance told the Avalanche-Journal that in addition to approaching Bergland with a request for reductions of out- standing loans owed by affected farmers, he asked Bergland to examine the damage himself.

"I would say there's a good chance he'll come," Hance said. Bergland is currently examining damage estimates and other information submitted by the Farm and Home Administration before making a decision to come, he added.

Nine counties in Hance's 19th Congressional District have been declared disaster areas as a result of the Aug. 24 hailstorm. Affected counties are Deaf Smith, Castro, Parmer, Lamb, Hockley,

Painting Of Guadalupe Called Inexplicable

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — The 16th century painting of the Virgin of Guadalupe, revered by millions of Latin American Catholics, may indeed be of miraculous origin, a University of Florida biophysicist said Monday.

In the U.S. Guadalupe Project Report, soon to be sent to Mexican authorities, Philip Callahan, one of two scientists who analyzed the painting in Mexico City, said he could find no scientific explanation for it.

"The whole gist of the story, as far as I am concerned, is the original painting is miraculous," Callahan said.

According to tradition, the Virgin Mary appeared to a poor Indian named Juan Diego on Dec. 9, 1531, and told him to go to the bishop of Mexico City and ask that he build a shrine to her on a hill just north of the city.

The bishop balked and Mary, who appeared again, had Juan Diego deliver flowers to the bishop. The Indian wrapped the flowers in a tilma, an Indian cloak made from cactus fibers and tied around one shoulder.

When the bishop untied the tilma, according to the story, the image of the Virgin Mary was on the tilma. It is preserved to this day in a bullet-proof glass case in a shrine in north Mexico City.

Callahan, using special film, made "near infrared" photos of the painting in Mexico City in February. Joining Callahan in the investigation was Dr. Jody Smith, a professor of philosophy at Pensacola Junior College in Florida.

Callahan said the painting has no underdrawing, a prerequisite for nearly all paintings, and some fading, touch-up work had been done to the original in the Spanish Gothic style.

Furthermore, Callahan said, the cactus fibers supporting the painting have not been sized. Sizing, done by flour, varnish and other materials, fills pores in rough material to prevent rot.

"The tilma should have rotted 20 years after it was painted," he said.

Referring to the touch-up work and the addition of a sunburst of metallic gold around the Virgin, yellow stars and mantle trim, Callahan said, "the photographs show clearly it has been touched up. Originally, it was a very simple painting."

In the report, Callahan and other scientists who analyzed the painting said the original, a basic scene of Mary, hands folded in prayer, is still surprisingly fresh with no signs of deterioration.

They said the basic blue and pink pigment should have faded and cracked away centuries ago. Pollution from the votive candles alone should have darkened and damaged the painting long ago while it was unprotected.

"This is totally impossible," Callahan said. "How could it maintain its color without fading for 400 years?"

New Tape Surfaces In Trial Of Davis

FORT WORTH (UPI) — A secretly made recording of a conversation between a T. Cullen Davis defense attorney and the state's star witness, surfaced Monday in Davis' trial on murder solicitation charges, and both sides promptly claimed it would aid their case.

The recording, made by defense attorney Steve Sumner and witness David McCrory, was secretly made by Sumner on Aug. 7, 1978, less than two weeks before Davis was arrested as he drove away from a meeting with McCrory in which he allegedly paid for the murder of his step-daughter.

Davis is being tried for soliciting the death of Judge Joe Eidson, McCrory, who supposedly secured the gunman for Davis, was actually working for the FBI and no one was injured in the scheme.

The tape introduced by the defense Monday was never mentioned in Davis' first trial on the charge, which ended in a hung jury earlier this year in Houston.

Although Sumner's tape does not mention the plot Davis is charged with, it does discuss Davis' fiery divorce from his wife Priscilla and shootings at the Davis mansion in 1976 in which Davis was charged and acquitted of killing Mrs. Davis' step-daughter.

The tape was introduced outside the presence of the jury and the state's at-

British Firm Buys Howard Johnson's

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Howard Johnson's Co., whose 28 flavors of ice cream and orange-tiled roofs have been an American tradition for 50 years, announced Monday it is being bought by Imperial Group Ltd., a British food giant.

The two companies announced that Imperial will pay $630 million for the U.S. restaurant and motel empire, which will continue to operate under its present management, headed by Howard B. Johnson, son of the company's founder.

Under the agreement, Johnson would take a seat on Imperial's board of directors.

The preliminary agreement, still subject to final approval of directors, shareholders and various regulatory boards, calls for payment of $28 a share in cash for Howard Johnson stock.

Trading in Howard Johnson stock was halted Friday on the New York Stock Exchange at $15.25 each and had not resumed by mid-afternoon Monday.

Imperial Group Ltd., the sixth largest corporation in the United Kingdom, reported sales of 3.4 billion pounds, or about $7.6 billion, last year with profits of 123 million pounds, or about $277 million. The London-based firm has interests in hotels, restaurants, canned and prepared foods, tobacco, wine and beer and paper and packaging products.

Sir John Pile, chairman of Imperial, said Howard Johnson's was picked for overseas expansion because it is involved in fields related to Imperial's overall structure.

The acquisition is part of a trend that saw foreign investment in U.S. firms jump to $40.8 billion in 1978, according to U.S. Commerce Department estimates.

Johnson said he felt the sale was in the best interest of company shareholders, and would provide for "growth in the scope of Howard Johnson's personnel."

Johnson is believed to own about six percent of the stock. The company will not say how many shares other family members hold.

Howard Johnson's has about 1,000 restaurants and 500 motor lodges in 40 states. It also runs operations in Canada, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico.

The sale follows several weeks of rumors that Howard Johnson's was looking for a buyer. Although HoJo's has had four years of record sales and earnings, sales are off this year following this summer's gas lines.

Johnson, president of the company since 1959, had predicted 1979 sales of $610 million, but later revised the estimate to $585 million with earnings close to last year's $33.5 million. Sales last year were $555 million.

Howard Johnson's was founded in 1925 by Howard Dearing Johnson, who started by cranking out homemade ice cream in the basement of a Quincy, Mass., drug store.

He went on to pioneer the concept of franchising, selling the Howard Johnson name and products to other restaurateurs, first in Massachusetts, and then expanding into other states. He died in 1972.

Introduced Legislation Could Lessen Federal Regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four congressmen introduced legislation Monday that would sharply lessen federal regulations on the sale and possession of guns and ammunition.

Rep. Harold L. Volkmer, D-Mo., said the changes were necessary to cut bureaucratic red tape now hampering gun collectors and to concentrate federal law enforcement efforts on making certain that criminals do not have access to guns.

And Rep. Michael Synar, D-Okla., said the legislation was necessary because gun legislation passed in 1968 had "turned into a bureaucratic nightmare that has wasted government time and money hounding lawful gun collectors."

The sponsors acknowledged they face an uphill battle in getting the legislation passed. Most attempts to amend the 1968 legislation have been aimed at strengthening the gun control provisions instead of cutting back on the provisions.

And they noted that Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., chairman of the key Judiciary subcommittee that must pass on the legislation, is generally considered a supporter of tighter controls.

But Synar said he believed Conyers "will be reasonable and allow hearings" on the proposal.

The legislation would exempt gun collectors from the reporting requirements imposed on licensed gun dealers. It also would eliminate any requirement that ammunition dealers be licensed. And it would allow gun collectors to collect any type of firearm.

It also would require that Treasury agents have reason to believe a violation has occurred before they could inspect a gun dealer's records or inventories. It would allow Treasury agents to seize only firearms involved in a violation by prohibiting the seizure of all firearms from a dealer convicted of a violation.

And it would allow residents of one state to purchase firearms in another state so long as the purchase would have been legal in the citizen's home state.

The legislation also would prohibit parole or probation for persons convicted of a crime in which a firearm is involved.

President Attracts Gospel Music Fans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter was the main attraction for many of the guests who relaxed and listened to three hours of gospel music on the White House lawn.

Carter told a crowd of 1,000 at the Sunday afternoon program that gospel music is "derived from deep within the heart of human beings. It's a music of pain, a music of longing, a music of searching, a music of hope and a music of faith." He and his wife Rosalynn then settled back to listen to the music — from rock to country to big band sounds. Shyly at first, many listeners approached one at a time to shake hands.
