CONVERTIBLE LINENS

Here are some colorful household accessories you can create yourself with stock from your own linen closet. You can take them with you—to the beach, on a picnic, or onto the patio. Appearing in a towel is no longer a joke. Handmade towel cover-ups will enliven any informal party and they are perfect for a quiet evening at home, or working about the house. These attractive costumes are inexpensively and simply made from bath towels with hand-towel sleeves and washcloth pockets. They can be trimmed with a variety of equally colorful cotton braids and fringes.

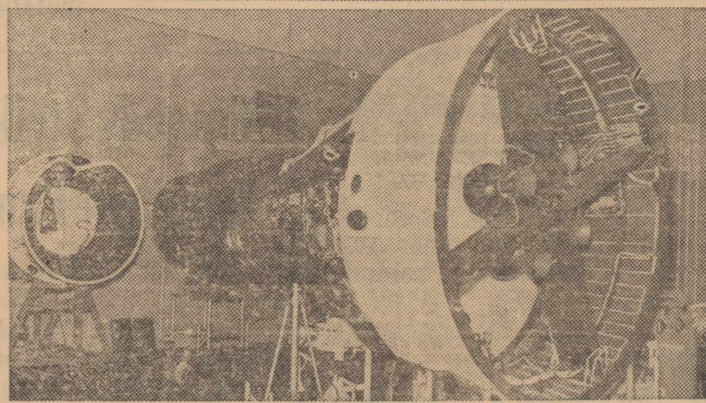

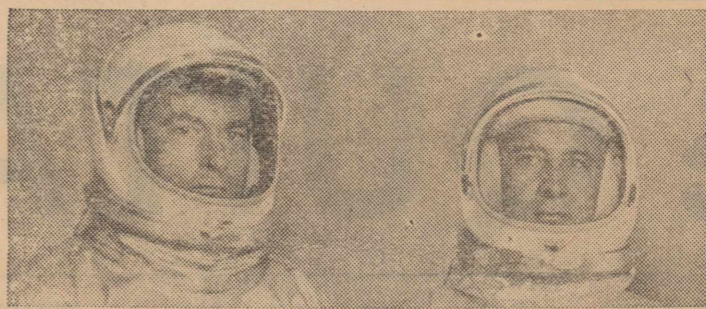

A reversible towel makes an attractive apron by turning one-third back and sewing the selvages together. Sew in about two inches from the selvage on each side to form a useful pocket all along the bottom. Make a casing at the top for a cotton ribbon or cord tie.

Terry-cloth towels have left the privacy of the bath and have blossomed forth in brilliant array to cover the waterfront, the house—as well as you. All sizes come in vat dyed patterns and colors which make them as practical as they are versatile. Try terry hand towels, in matched or coordinated colors, as slip-cover pillows for the beach or pool chairs. A big, bright beach towel will cover a lounge chair; make a practical informal table cloth; or can be used as a picnic wind-breaker, canopy, or as a bedspread. And a towel bag, made with plastic lining and cotton draw string, will carry these colorful covers to the party or laundry.

Bed linens have come out in the open, too. Deep-bordered colorfast patterned sheets make lovely draperies and combination blanketcover-spreads for summer.

Good quality household linens are vat dyed so they are colorfast in the sun and wash season after season. They make a game of turning your linen closet into a decorating treasure trove!

CONGRESSMAN WALTER ROGERS' WASHINGTON REPORT

New Push on Saline Water Conversion

I was privileged to be at the White House on August 11 as President Johnson signed into law a bill we had passed in the House and Senate to step up research efforts in water desalination. As the Nation faces twin prospects of declining water reserves and growing population, it is essential that we find new, efficient, and economical ways to remove salt and minerals from sea water along our coasts and from brackish water inland.

During the Rose Garden ceremony, President Johnson expressed the hope that by 1970 a research breakthrough would be achieved making possible desalting plants capable of producing 100 million gallons per day of potable water. This is a goal long-dreamed of; the country would benefit immeasurably were we able to provide desalinated municipal and industrial water supplies in quantity at low cost. However, there is no firm prospect that the goal is technologically obtainable.

In the past five years, approximately $80 million has been spent on what amounts to refinement of the ages-old distillation process of purifying salt water. I helped to originate the saline water conversion program in 1952, and I have been proud that its extension has come over the years only after our House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs was satisfied that research and development funds would be spent on concrete, worthwhile projects. This year, as legislative recommendations came before the Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation, of which I am chairman, I was deeply disturbed that desalination "experts" in and out of Government were seeking a $200 million blank check to pursue ill-defined goals by means and methods not adequately explained. Our Subcommittee gave its approval to a $10 million program extension whose costs were spelled out in detailed objectives. Our view prevailed as the bill passed the House. The Senate boosted the total. In the final, enacted version of the measure, Congress is to have the opportunity to approve research and development plans to be proposed during the five-year program extension period.

There are now five pilot or demonstration plants each testing a separate conversion system — at Freeport, Texas; Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba; Wrightsville Beach, N. C.; Webster, S. D., and Roswell, N. M.

The pilot plants built at Webster and Roswell were designed to find a means of providing pure water for smaller U. S. cities now faced with brackish supplies. Small plants are going to be needed because a survey by the American Water Works Association indicates that more than 1,000 U. S. communities are using brackish water. In addition, attaining the ability to build small plants would greatly aid local communities now forced to import water supplies by pipeline from long distances. Many of these communities do have water sources near at hand; the problem is that the nearby water is not fit to drink and can be made so only after a desalination process. Research will be pushed in this important aspect of the problem.

The dramatic focus in saline conversion is on such population centers as New York City which face catastrophe if water problems are not solved. The Northeastern drought is now four years old. A fifth year of drought could bankrupt water supplies for New York and many other cities of the Northeast. It is possible that a combination nuclear power-desalting plant will be constructed to serve the New York area along lines similar to a plan developed recently for Los Angeles area interests.

We need to discover new and revolutionary processes. Unless this is done, the cost of fuel in the operation of present methods could prevent reduction of cost to the point that such water could be used for irrigation purposes. The crying need for the water-scarce areas throughout the world not only for water for human consumption but also for water to grow much-needed food.

FLOMOT'S PROJECT HEAD START NEARS END OF EIGHTH WEEK

Flomot's Project Head Start began on July 5 with ten on the roll and will end on August 27 with 23 enrolled. The average daily attendance for the eight-week period will be slightly over 16.

According to Supt. Barron the Head Start program is a new concept of pre-school child development for this area of the state. For years in large cities, individuals and organizations have concerned themselves with the care and preparation of young children and their families with a public pre-school program. The Flomot School System participated in a nationwide program of professional and citizens in setting up an imaginative and practical program for young children who will enter the first grade.

Walt Disney Productions has designed a Certificate of Completion which will be presented to each child on August 30 at the first school assembly.
