The association expresses its sincere thanks to all for supporting this money-raising project.

Saturday, October 7 is Lions Club Cleanup Day for Quitaque.

Local citizens are asked to keep that date in mind, which will be a week from Saturday, and to cooperate with the Lions Club in cleaning up the town, especially the alleys and vacant lots.

Bob Ham, who is president of the club this year, states that there will be two shredders available for use in the town, and the Boy Scouts are going to help out in the drive.

Residents who will need help of any kind in clearing their lots or alleys of weeds or other debris, or in getting weeds or grass cut, can get help by calling Bob Ham, James Brunson or any member of the Lions Club.

In addition to the shredders, trucks will be available to haul off the trash and debris that will be gathered up. The Boy Scouts have volunteered to help anyone who needs help in getting their place cleaned up. Residents are requested that their trash be put in the alleys to be picked up. LATE PLANTING ADVISED TO PREVENT WHEAT STREAK MOSAIC

Wheat producers in Briscoe County are advised to plant wheat at a late date to avoid damage from wheat streak mosaic virus.

The virus and microscopic wheat curl mite which transmit the disease build up in volunteer wheat in the summer. When there is no live wheat, only a limited number of the mites and virus survive in weedy grasses to infect early planted wheat in the fall.

Three practices which can reduce losses in areas where the disease is a problem are (1) destroy volunteer wheat, (2) delay planting until the latest possible date, and (3) plant disease resistant varieties.

All volunteer wheat in the field to be seeded should be destroyed two to three weeks before planting time.

As a further aid in controlling the disease, growers should wait to plant as late as practical—until the first frost or the latest recommended date in the area (September 15-October 15). If wheat is not up until October or later, it usually escapes severe infection by the mites and virus.

50 percent of the seeded wheat serious economic losses to Texas wheat growers since 1962. Up to of the Federal Land Bank Association has either been lost or severely damaged in some counties since that time. Losses in yield can range up to 100 per cent when the mosaic infects early-seeded fall plants.

Late planting of wheat will naturally result in less grazing, points out the agent, but this method of controlling the disease will pay dividends at harvest time next year.

Field Day To Feature Mesquite Control

A field day on mesquite control will be held at the Pitchfork and Four-Sixes Ranches on October 4.

Tours will start at 9 a. m. at the Pitchfork Ranch headquarters about 15 miles west of here on U. S. 82. announces Garlyn O. Hoffman, range brush and weed control specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Purpose of the field day is to observe long term results from carrying out a complete mesquite control system, Hoffman points out. Mesquite control has been in progress at these ranches since 1940 and both chemicals and mechanical methods or a combination of these have been used.

Long time benefits, costs and problems of controlling mesquite by aerial spraying, chaining, root plowing, reseeding and basal application of chemicals will be discussed.

An afternoon program arranged by the Texas Experimental Ranch Committee will include discussions by ranchmen, brush and range specialists and officials of Texas A&M University.

Featured speakers will include Dr. John Hutchison, director, Texas Agricultural Extension Service; Dr. H. O. Kunkel, acting dean of agriculture, Texas A&M University; C. E. Fisher, superintendent for research, South Plains Research and Extension Center; Jim Barron, Mgr. Spur Headquarters Ranch; Jim Humphries, Mgr. Pitchfork Ranch; and John Matthews, Dodge Jones Foundation, Abilene.

FIRST BALE NETS TIDY SUM
The season's first bale of cotton, brought in by Juriel Hamilton almost two weeks ago, brought him a total of $368.69.

The bale itself brought $162.00, the seed sold for $22.00, and the premium given by merchants and friends amounted to $174.00 plus $10.00 worth of merchandise. In addition, the cotton was processed free of charge by Farmers Co-op.

SEASON'S FIRST BALE OF COTTON

Ronnie Rogers of Flomot brought in the season's first bale of cotton for that area this year, the cotton being brought in Wednesday of last week, September 20.

The cotton was ginned by H & H Gin of Flomot, and was processed free of charge.

Wayne Hunter of H & H Gin said that the bale, which weighed 488 pounds, was produced from 2000 pounds of seed cotton. There were 800 pounds of seed caught from the first bale. Ronnie planted the Lankart 611 cottonseed in early May.

A premium for producing the season's first bale is being made up for Ronnie.

The Rev. and Mrs. Clarence Wainscott of Plainview visited friends in Quitaque Tuesday morning and afternoon. They stopped by The Tribune for a visit with the Gaston Owens.

PLEASE NOTICE!

Beginning Monday, October 2, The Tribune must begin observing a deadline for news items to be in the office which will appear in each week's issue of the newspaper. That deadline will be at 10:30 a. m. on Wednesday of each week. This must be done in order that we can get the papers in the mail on time, which will benefit our advertisers and subscribers alike. All newspapers have deadlines for news reporting but The Tribune has been very lax in adhering to its own.

Most weeklies have a Tuesday evening deadline but we at The Tribune feel that by 10:30 Wednesday morning we can have all the news reports in that ordinarily appear in each week's edition.

The Basketball season will be starting in a little over a month now and Tuesday night's game reports can be gotten in by Wednesday at 10:30.

There will instances, of course, when news of an emergency nature must be reported past the deadline, such as a funeral notice or an emergency nature. We will appreciate your cooperation in this matter for it is for our readers and advertiser benefit only. It simply means getting the paper in the mails earlier.

F.F.A. NOTES

PRECISION ALFALFA HAY HARVEST

Before each cutting, the farmer should check the maturity. This is determined by a ten per cent bloom cover, and a sufficient amount of regrowth.

It is best to cut each individual field as quickly as possible so that all hay in that field will be uniform in maturity and quality.

Today we have the most modern and efficient hay-harvesting equipment available and don't use hand labor.

Poorly adjusted machines can lose a lot of hay, damage the stand and reduce regrowth. It pays for the farmer to keep his equipment in good shape.

The best way to keep time down to a minimum, is to do the repairs before going to the field.

When you bale alfalfa you need to bale at optimum moisture. The best way to bale it is to wait for the hay to be dry enough to keep from heating or discoloring the inside of the bales. Top dairy hay in spring is baled at 20 percent moisture. It's best to bale at night when days are hot and dry.

The best thing to do with hay after it is baled is to remove it from the field immediately after baling. Immediately after baling alfalfa hay it is stacked and fields are irrigated.

COUNTY AGENT AIRS HIGHLIGHTS OF FIELD DAY

About 950 farmers, businessmen and others interested in agriculture attended the annual field day at the South Plains Research Extension Center on Tuesday, September 12.

General Theme for the event was "Better Management for Greater Profits."

Cotton, grain sorghum, soybeans, alternative crops and herbicides research received most emphasis during the field day.

Visitors were shown new storm-proof cotton strains which have better than one-inch staple and high fiber strength. Test plots showing skip-row planting and irrigating techniques were also reviewed. Objective of these tests is to evaluate planting and irrigating practices that make maximum utilization of rainfall and the ever decreasing irrigation potential.

Other cotton research discussed included close-row and double-row planting and breeding techniques. Research to date on close-row cotton has shown that this method of production can potentially reduce production costs, increase yields and improve fiber quality. Double-row tests averaged 10 per cent more yield than single rows on irrigated land. The tests were planted at 30 pounds per acre in rows 10 inches apart on beds spaced at 40 inches.

Cotton breeding research, as viewed by those attending the field day, continues with the aim of providing better varieties for High Plains cotton growers, mainly through development of breeding strains, breeding techniques and background information. Emphasis is being placed at present on fiber quality earliness, disease and insect resistance and adaption to machine harvest.

Turning to grain sorghum, visitors were shown a breeding nursery consisting of advanced generations of short, early maturing, fine stemmed sorghums called grain grasses. These can be used as a late planted catch crop since they are very early maturing. Soybeans, a major alternative crop on the High Plains, were demonstrated on a number of plots at the Center's field day. Soybeans planted in late June, after cotton was destroyed, yielded about 30 bushels per acre. After production expenses, net operating in-

PINKEYE PREVENTION TIPS

Pinkeye can be one of the toughest disease problem a cattleman has to face.

It's a double problem—there is no effective way of preventing pinkeye and the best treatment varies from year to year and from area to area. According to three veterinarians, pinkeye goes through two stages in the animal. The first stage involves a secondary bacterial infection.

There are many causes for the initial eye damage, including ultraviolet light contained in ordinary sunlight, viral infection, mechanical irritation from dust, wind and insects and other factors that scientists may not have tied down at present.

Only the IBR virus has ever been shown as a factor in causing the initial eye damage and it is not involved in all pinkeye outbreaks. But in some sections of the country and in some years, IBR virus is a big factor.

During the initial stage of pinkeye, any one of the factors, or a combination, damage the eye tissue. The eye becomes red, waters and is painful. Once the eye tissue is damaged the secondary bacterial infection moves in. Frequently there is a bacteria called Moraxella bovis, but other bacteria have been isolated in the pinkeye infections. During the bacterial stage, the eye discharge becomes yellow and thick. The clear cornea of the eye becomes cloudy or milky, often with a red ring of blood vessels around the edge. Ulceration may develop in severe cases, which sometimes leads to rupture of the cornea. In such cases, infection may extend into the brain.

The Nebraskans offered these tips for eliminating some of the pinkeye problems:

GOOD HERD MANAGEMENT

Good herd management is the only preventive measure. Flies and other insects should be controlled to eliminate some of the irritation.

TREATMENT

The scientists note, "Herd treatment may not be practical, but where individual animals can be treated early, the treatment can be gratifying."

They continue: "The most effective treatment varies from year to year and from area to area. Such treatments in a given area at any given time should be prescribed by a veterinarian and applied as recommended."

Keep infected animals in darkened or shaded areas. Dye preparations to darken the eyelids are available from veterinarians and may be useful.

Cattle should have daily attention to be sure they get feed and water and are kept out of ditches, wire, water and other places where they may be injured.

TAX MAN SAM SEZ:

A Message for Brides
Last year thousands of brides filed a joint return with their husband for the first time and eagerly looked forward to getting their first joint tax refund check. However, when Internal Revenue checked the young wife's name against the Social Security Number computer file, the computer said, "I don't know Mrs. Jones." She forgot to tell Social Security that she had a new name—so Internal Revenue wrote the young wife a letter and eventually got her new name and her old Social Security Number together, but she had to wait for her refund check. Young wives—tell the computer about your new name.

The assembly program is arranged on the family basis. Tiffin said they worked on the proverbial principle, "Train up a boy according to the way for him; even when he grows old he will not turn
