Planning for nuclear accidents 'inadequate'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emergency planning for coping with nuclear accidents is chaotic and 'inadequate' at all levels, despite lessons learned from the Three Mile Island accident, a new congressional report concludes. A preliminary draft of a report, scheduled to be released next week by the House Government Operations Committee, puts much of the blame on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. 'Where chaos reigns, poor leadership is usually to blame,' the report said. 'Rather than leading, the NRC has misled the American people as to the need for planning for nuclear accidents and lulled utilities and state and local governments into complacency,' the report said. A copy of the report was obtained by The Associated Press. The study claims the NRC 'has given only minimal attention and resources to emergency planning and has allowed plants to be built in areas where the feasibility of evacuation is in grave doubt.' NRC spokesman John Kopeck said the commission did not wish to comment on the report since it had not yet received a copy. But, Kopeck said, 'the staff is now doing a complete review of all aspects of emergency planning.' The report is based on an investigation conducted by the environment, energy and natural resources subcommittee in the aftermath of the March 28 accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear generating station near Harrisburg, Pa. The study included a detailed look at two nuclear plants — Oconee in South Carolina and Indian Point in New York — and concluded that emergency plans were lacking at both sites. Indian Point is located 40 miles

Talmadge aide claims responsibility

ATLANTA (AP) — An aide to Sen. Herman Talmadge claimed responsibility after a car registered to the Georgia Democrat was involved in a hit-and-run accident, but a judge later dismissed the charges, a newspaper reported. According to Georgia State Patrol reports, the accident occurred last Dec. 18 about three miles south of Griffin, Ga., on U.S. 41, a four-lane highway, the Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported in a copyright story in Saturday's editions. The reports indicated the car was traveling north in the southbound lane toward Jonesboro, where Talmadge was visiting his son, Gene, at the time of the accident, the Journal-Constitution said. A car traveling south was forced off the road, police reports show. The driver was not injured and her car suffered only minor damage. The license plate was traced and, after police failed to reach Talmadge for questioning, Talmadge's personal aide, Paul R. Slappey, called authorities and claimed responsibility, the newspaper said. Slappey, 25, was charged with driving the wrong way in a one-way lane and with hit-and-run, the records show. But the charges were later dropped without explanation on the orders of Griffin State Court Judge John H. Goddard Jr., who served as an assistant state attorney general while Talmadge was governor. Goddard committed suicide on March 15, 1979. A spokesman for Talmadge said Friday that Slappey would 'not be available for questioning on the matter.' Slappey 'is very sorry it happened. The matter was settled in court. The matter is closed,' said Talmadge spokesman Gordon Roberts.

Warm days predicted A beautiful weekend — for those who enjoy the heat — is in store for Midlanders today and Sunday, the weatherman said Friday night. Clear to partly cloudy skies with highs in the mid-90s are expected today and Sunday, according to the National Weather Service office at Midland Regional Airport. Low tonight should be in the upper 60s, and light southerly winds are expected at 5 to 10 mph, the weatherman said. Friday's recorded high of 94 degrees was well below the record for the date of 106 set in 1954. The overnight low was measured at 68. Record low for the time period is an unseasonable 33 degrees recorded in 1961. No rain is mentioned to mar the monthly total of 2.73 inches of moisture or the annual accumulation of 9.71. Area towns were enjoying the same pleasantly warm weather Midlanders had Friday, with most reporting clear skies and cool evenings late Friday. More heavy rains drenched East and Central Texas Friday, causing widespread flooding from Tyler southwestward to San Antonio. Floodwaters that forced more than 5,000 persons from their homes in Southeast Texas receded only slightly Friday, held in place by high tides and continued rain in the six counties hit hardest by the high water. The heavy rains were remnants of Tropical Storm Claudette that killed two persons in the Beaumont area. Five other persons died Friday morning near Centerville when a truck knocked a church bus into a rain-swollen creek. The rain tapered off some later Friday as the storm moved northeastward across Texas. Granger Dam, between Temple and Austin, recorded more than 7 inches of rain Friday and Lake Palestine, just south of Tyler, logged 6.80 inches. The downpour washed out at least one bridge in Tyler, and early in the day, some roads were covered with more than 5 feet of water. Rain fell most of the day along a line from Texarkana east to Palestine and south to San Antonio. But skies in the western part of the state were mostly clear. The National Weather Service issued flash flood warnings throughout Friday as some areas of the Hill Country recorded rain falling in excess of 2 inches per hour.

Deaths William C. Snow

CHILDRESS — William Chester Snow, 89, father of Ruby Goodgame of Midland, died Friday in a Childress nursing home. Services will be at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Newberry Funeral Home chapel in Childress with the Rev. Joe S. Allen of the First Baptist Church officiating. Graveside services will be in Electra Memorial Cemetery with the Rev. Joe Ainsworth of the First Baptist Church in Electra officiating. Snow was born Feb. 19, 1890, in Snowball, Ark. He had lived in Childress since 1914 and was a truck driver. He resided at the Snow Hotel. Other survivors include his wife, a daughter, six grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Man blinded by gunshot testifies in trial his of accused assailant

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A South Texan blinded by a gunshot earlier this year was led to the witness stand Friday to testify in the trial of the man accused of shooting him. John W. Hensley of South Padre Island, was the final prosecution witness in the attempted murder trial of S.J. Wilburn, 56, of Pasadena. Wilburn is charged with being hired to kill Hensley, 34. The prosecution rested its case after Hensley's testimony, and defense also rested without presenting any witnesses. 'I just lost my vision suddenly,' Hensley said after his wife and a deputy slowly guided him to the witness stand. 'I thought for some reason when I put my keys in (the car) lock, I had received a high voltage shock,' he testified. 'I put my hand up to my face and could feel the damage.' The prosecution claims that Wilburn fired at Hensley from the trunk of a specially equipped 'hit car' as Hensley left his island apartment on Feb. 15. Wilburn allegedly was hired by Dr. Archie Herman Burkhalter of Pasadena. Hensley is a prospective witness in a kidnapping case against the physician. Burkhalter is charged with abducting his ex-wife last year. Hensley is now married to Burkhalter's former wife. Burkhalter and a third man also have been charged in the Hensley shooting. After prosecutor Joe K. Hendley described the courtroom to Hensley, the witness was asked if he remembered the morning of Feb. 15. 'I probably won't ever forget,' the witness said. Hensley said he has had both eyes removed and doctors have told him he will never see again. He also testified that he has no sense of smell and has trouble with one ear. The witness told jurors that the shot entered under his right eye and exited near the left eye. 'There's going to be a lot of things I'm going to have problems with,' he said. Prior to Hensley's testimony, the prosecution read excerpts from letters allegedly written by Wilburn to a Houston girlfriend. The letters, bearing a return address at the Cameron County jail, discussed the alleged hit car — a 1968 red Cadillac. The letter-writer spoke of a 'dream' concerning Cadillac. The letters were seized by authorities from Emma Montano's apartment. 'The only evidence against me, for 90 percent anyway, is an old, red Cadillac sedan,' the letter stated, adding that the car was being held at the South Padre Island police department. 'Two persons in a car could cruise past...one jump off...then one would set an open can half full of gasoline under each tire,' the letter read by Hendley said. It further stated that burning newspaper could be used to quickly ignite the car. 'The red Cadillac will be burned completely in six minutes...90 percent of the evidence gone,' the letter stated. The letter-writer also warned Mrs. Montano to destroy the letters but only after 'pertinent' portions were copied and forwarded to 'the doctor.'

Panel approves formation of proposed energy board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Interior Committee gave overwhelming approval Friday to legislation establishing a powerful energy mobilization board, a principal part of President Carter's energy program. The committee voted 40-1 in favor of setting up a board with authority to speed development of up to two dozen specially designated, high priority energy projects. The proposal, outlined by Carter in a speech less than two weeks ago, picked up added momentum in Congress when a House commerce subcommittee gave its approval to a different version of the legislation. The subcommittee's measure places no limit on the number of projects that could receive the special high priority designation. On the other side of Congress, meanwhile, the Senate Energy Committee arranged to meet to continue its work on yet a third version of the same proposal. Carter proposed giving the board authority to cut through red tape and help along plans for construction of non-nuclear energy projects such as pipelines and gasification plants, designed to reduce U.S. oil imports. Administration officials have said they envision about 75 such projects receiving the special treatment at any one time. The lone dissenting vote in the Interior Committee came from Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., who said a massive energy program such as the one Congress is working on would worsen inflation at a time when the country can least afford it. 'We are headed for economic oblivion and a depression. We must cut our excesses,' Weaver said. House Democratic leaders earlier had hoped to get a final vote on the proposed board before Congress begins its month-long recess on Aug. 3. But they have dropped those plans and a final vote on the House floor is not expected until after Labor Day. A Senate vote also is expected next month. While the proposed mobilization board has wide appeal among House members, a top-ranking congressional Democrat said Thursday he has noticed the 'buildup of a fight' over how broad such a panel's authority should be. Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., House Democratic Whip, said some House members believe the board should have authority only to speed up the timetable that precedes a decision on whether to build a project. Other House members say the board's power should extend much farther to substantive laws that often are used to hinder construction, he noted.

Book describes top sea disaster

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE

LONDON (AP) — What was the greatest sea disaster in history?

The Titanic? Lusitania? Andrea Doria? None of these, but rather a German cruise liner named Wilhelm Gustloff.

The death toll of more than 7,000 when the ship was torpedoed by the Soviet submarine S 13 near the end of World War II was five times greater than the number lost in the Titanic.

Perhaps it rates only a footnote in some war histories because its doom was just one small part of the chaos, as millions of panic-stricken refugees struggled westward to get away from the revenge-hungry Soviet soldiers of the Red Army.

Three British writers now have told the story in a new book, "The Cruellest Night" (Hodder and Stoughton).

They were helped, they say, by many Germans and by Soviet officials of the Leningrad Naval Museum, Central Naval Archives, War Veterans' Committee and the Writers' Union.

The authors, Christopher Dobson, John Miller and Ronald Payne, relate how panic set in throughout East Prussia when the German authorities publicized what happened in the first German town overrun by the Red Army.

Nemmersdorf, just inside the wartime border with Poland, was taken by Gen. Galitsky's 11th Guards Army on Oct. 22, 1944. The Soviets were driven out by a counterattack five days later.

"Hardly a single inhabitant remained alive," say the authors, who detail "indiscriminate" killing.

When this became known, tens of thousands of people began fleeing from their homes. As the Red Army drove toward Berlin the refugees were forced northward, piling up in the Baltic ports where they hoped to find ships to carry them to safety.

A colossal rescue operation was begun. In four months from Jan. 23 to the end of the war on May 8, 1945, a total of 2,022,602 people were transported by the navy and merchant navy to the West, according to Admiral Karl Doenitz.

The 25,000-ton Wilhelm Gustloff, named by Hitler after the leader of the German Nazis in Switzerland, assassinated in 1936, was built for cheap cruising, carrying in normal times 1,465 passengers and 400 crew.

The liner spent the war tied up in captured Gdynia, Poland, as a floating Navy barracks. It was finally ordered to evacuate more than 6,000 people, including 1,500 submariners and their families, wounded soldiers, women naval auxiliaries and civilian refugees.

As the liner pulled away on Jan. 30, 1945, hundreds more refugees, imploring a passage, were helped from small boats up gangways and scrambling nets.

That same night the liner was hit by three torpedoes fired by Soviet submarine Alexander Marinetsko, commander of the S 13.

The Wilhelm Gustloff took just over 70 minutes to sink.

Barber provides music along with haircuts

LAND O' LAKES, Fla. (AP) — A simple haircut can be like going to a hoedown at Chuck Howard's tiny two-chair barbershop.

It's not that the one-man place in this small Gulf Coast community 25 miles north of Tampa is fancy. In fact, it looks much like any other small-town barbershop with hair piled in one corner, a wheezing coffee pot in the other, a plastic red and white barber's pole out front.

But when business is slow, Howard's friends drop by to pluck away at guitars and banjos and bellow out the bluegrass strains of "Rollin' in My Sweet Baby's Arms," "Rocky Top," "Foggy Mountain Breakdown" and "Turkey in the Straw."

There's cowboy Jesse Smith, a mustachioed man wearing a 10-gallon hat. He's a heavy equipment operator turned professional country musician and singer. Then John Pardu, a three-finger banjo picker who once gave it up for 41 years straight before deciding music was too good to give up forever, and Luther "Scope" Brown, an auto mechanic and the man who plays rhythm guitar and harmonizes.

Howard himself, when he isn't clipping hair, is blistering his finger on a five-string.

Pardu usually picks out the tune. Smith comes in with guitar and vocals, then swaps singing with Brown, who has that almost-off-key country voice. Howard hums and strums.

They started using the barbershop as a place to play their music about a year ago. Pardu was teaching Howard the rudiments of the five-string, and the shop, up the street from a truck stop and next to the volunteer firehouse, seemed a convenient location.

All four men live in the community. Besides, it was a good way to pass a few hours in the afternoon.

For Smith it is a way to practice. His group "Country Vibration," has area bookings almost every night. Pardu is retired. Brown plays during lunch. And Howard is at the shop anyway.

"We keep them happy while they're getting their hair cut" said Pardu. "There's no place around here that furnishes entertainment, coffee and a good trimming for $2.50."

Attorney general changes consumer protection plans

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White said Friday that beginning Sept. 1, consumers should send their complaints to Better Business Bureaus, not his office.

White said that until consumers get used to the change, his Consumer Protection and Antitrust Division will provide forms and instructions for complaining to the Better Business Bureaus.

"Because of budget reductions, we had to identify some division activities where cutbacks could be made," White said.

He said the move should be seen "as a recognition of budget realities and not a lessening of our desire or commitment to work for and on behalf of the consumers of Texas."

White said the division and its Economic Crime Unit will continue to investigate and prosecute deceptive trade practices and white collar crime.

"By allowing us to focus our attention on investigations and prosecutions, I expect the division to perform even more effectively and efficiently than it has in the past," he said.

Maine still getting herbicide 'fallout'

By PETER JACKSON

DENNYSVILLE, Maine (AP) — Neil and Nellie MacLauchlan put half a century of work into their garden patch, weathering drought, fire, and even a Depression. So they're not about to let any wayward chemical pollutants keep fresh vegetables off their table this summer.

"We might just as well try them, and if they make us sick, we'll know enough not to eat them again," Mrs. MacLauchlan said this week in her big yellow house in rural eastern Maine.

"What harm would it do?" she said. "We might be guinea pigs for someone else."

Outside, a state biologist rummaged through her garden. His diagnosis: pollution by herbicides sprayed from a helicopter over a commercial forest four miles away.

The compound — called Tordon 101, a mix of 2,4-D and Picloram manufactured by the Dow Chemical Co. — has been linked to birth defects and cancer in animals. But the MacLauchlans, retired teachers well into their 80s, say they have nothing to lose by eating the tainted produce.

Few of their neighbors on the easternmost elbow of the United States are as fatalistic, vowing protests and legal action to halt future chemical intrusions. Some say they'll go even further.

"I'll shot down the helicopter if it comes across my 346 acres," John Leighton boomed at a recent meeting of angry Washington County residents and state agricultural officials.

Gov. Joseph Brennan, who once said pesticide spraying was a trade-off between health concerns and the need for wood pulp, announced creation of a cabinet-level task force to study the problem.

Up to 150 gardens were contaminated by wind-drifting herbicides sprayed last month on 360 clear-cut acres of St. Regis Paper Co. land to speed the growth of new trees by killing other vegetation.

For some, the gardens are an inexpensive source of food; for others they are a livelihood. All have seen their crops wracked by the blistered and deformed leaves that are the tell-tale signs of pollution.

Nancy and Richard Miller were proud of owning the county's only certified chemical-free farm. But now they say it will be five years before the soil is purged and the farm's certification restored.

"A lot of people don't understand that this isn't like a pesticide that stays on the outside of the leaves," said Miller, a high school teacher. "This stuff goes inside the plant."

A team of experts dispatched to Dennyville this week by Brennan conceded the long-term health risks posed by the herbicide won't be known for decades. High doses have caused cancer and birth defects in laboratory animals, and most residents already have turned their gardens over to the weeds.

"We've been put in a position of anxiety," said Dr. Daniel Chubbuck, 70, a retired university professor who runs an antique business in his barn behind the MacLauchlans' property.

Chubbuck yanked the few remaining bags of last year's peas from his freezer and shook his head in disgust. "We would have had these things in good supply," he told a visiting reporter.

Last week the state suspended the license of the helicopter pilot hired to do the spraying. But Maine law offers no recourse against St. Regis; landowners cannot be held responsible as long as the chemicals are federally approved and are applied by a licensed pilot.

St. Regis, the nation's biggest newsprint manufacturer, ended 26 days of silence on the issue Wednesday with a terse statement that carefully avoided accepting any responsibility.

Meanwhile, residents around Dennyville are looking hard at their options. There is talk about bringing hefty lawsuits. Some residents want the federal government to declare her land a disaster area and to funnel in relief money.

A squad of demonstrators stands ready to try to thwart any future spray projects and one woman has converted her telephone into an action hotline to coordinate protests.

Ten people were charged with criminal trespass July 7 when they blockaded a helicopter to prevent it from spraying pesticides on nearby blueberry fields. A court injunction issued two days later allowed the spraying to continue.

A budworm spray program was canceled when officials determined high ground water levels might transmit the chemicals into nearby lakes and rivers.

Washington County residents are still hoping the state or the paper company will reimburse them for their damaged crops. But they say all the money in the world cannot make up for the heartache.

"This is so much work to get it planted and all, and then to have it go like this," Mrs. MacLauchlan said. "So much work..."

Letter-writing campaign urged

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas Democratic Party leaders are being asked to sponsor a letter-writing campaign among Texas voters in support of President Carter's energy program.

"I call on Democrats in all parts of the state to write to the president, at the White House, and tell him what you and your family will do before the end of the year to conserve energy — whether it involves leaving your car home one day a week, car pooling, insulation, use of less energy in your home and canceling a trip which is not a must," said State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg in a Capitol news conference Friday.

Goldberg said he will present his plan to the 62-member State Democratic Executive Committee meeting in Corpus Christi Saturday morning.

Another part of the Goldberg plan would call on the Democratic committee to put pressure on Texas congressmen and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to support the objectives of the president's program. "I think the main thing we should try to do is create a sense of urgency and full support," said Goldberg.

He said he did not think the SDEC in Corpus Christi would take direct action on Bentsen's congressional proposal to exempt part of the windfall profits tax for independent oil producers or other specific terms of the windfall profits tax.

Goldberg also said he expected the committee on Saturday to delay action on a non-binding presidential primary to be held in connection with the May 1980 primary elections.

"I think it is the sentiment of the majority of the committee that we have a statewide referendum (on 1980 Democratic presidential prospects) only if there is competition to President Carter," Goldberg said. "If Kennedy should decide to run, then I will recommend and I'm sure the committee will approve a non-binding primary.... My own judgment is that Senator Kennedy will not be a candidate," he said.

Goldberg said the state committee could wait until March to call a presidential primary for the May elections.

Three sentenced in district court

One man who pleaded guilty to a felony charge in Midland's 238th District Court this week was sentenced to a term in the Texas Department of Corrections and two others received probated sentences.

John Earl Williams pleaded guilty to a charge of theft by exercising control and was assessed a two-year prison term by District Judge Vann Culp.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney Charles Seltzer and Williams was represented by attorney Harold B. Jones.

Lynn Duane Neighbors pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of burglary of a building. He was given a four-year probated sentence by Judge Culp.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney David Joers and Neighbors was represented by attorney Jones.

On Thursday, Alfred K. Coleman was given a two-year probated sentence and ordered to pay $662.70 restitution after he pleaded guilty to a charge of theft over $200.

The sentence was handed down by Judge Culp.

The case was prosecuted by Seltzer. Coleman was represented by defense attorney Edward T. Garza.

Unitas will join elite group in Hall of Fame

BALTIMORE (AP) — Johnny Unitas, the crew cut Pied Piper in high-topped shoes who led pro football into its glory years, joins the game's elite Saturday in the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

The honor was a foregone conclusion for the spindly legged quarterback rescued from the $9-a-game semipro ranks after being released by the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1955.

In 17 seasons with the Baltimore Colts and with the San Diego Chargers Unitas completed 2,830 passes for 40,239 yards and 290 touchdowns. During one stretch, he threw at least one TD pass in 47 consecutive games.

NFL pay scale draws close look

By BOB OATES The Los Angeles Times

The National Football League Players Association estimates the following average annual wages for professional athletes: basketball $130,000, baseball $92,000, football $63,000.

Inspecting those figures, most fans might agree on two points: —The athletes are all overpaid. —Football players are comparatively underpaid. Although their sport draws the largest crowds and gets the biggest television ratings — reaping millions of dollars more annually than any other sport collects from TV — those who play pro football earn proportionately less.

Why should this be? The NFL says the explanation is simply that football teams play fewer games with more athletes: 45 on each roster to baseball's 25 and basketball's 11.

The players association said the key is something else, namely that the NFL allots less than one-fourth of gross revenue to player payroll. By comparison, it said, 65 percent of basketball's gross goes to the athletes and "at least 40 percent" of baseball's.

To correct this disparity, the football players association wants two things: — A boost in player payroll allotment to 45 percent of gross revenue. — A revolutionary (for sports) new salary concept that would pay every player in the league the same salary regardless of position. Automatic annual raises would be based exclusively on years of service.

As a starting point in its financial computations, the association is considering $50,000 for a rookie, with $10,000 raises in each of his next four years and $20,000 raises thereafter. This would give five-year NFL veteran who get $90,000 irrespective of his position — quarterback, linebacker or substitute offensive guard — and nine-year veterans would make a uniform $170,000.

Such a salary scale would fit comfortably within 45 percent of the NFL's gross, the association said, leaving the owners a nice profit. The plan would allow existing player contracts to remain in effect until their termination. Thereafter, salaries would be determined by the scale, except in cases where an owner chooses to pay over scale. Such instances, an owners source said, would be few.

The association hasn't had serious talks on the subject with owners, because the present collective bargaining agreement doesn't end until 1981. But the association's proposal for a uniform salary scale is expected to be a major issue in the next negotiations.

At the requests of the Los Angeles Times, an association man and a management man discussed all this recently in separate interviews. They are Ed Garvey, executive director of the players association, and Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm.

Asked first to explain the disparity between wages in football and other pro sports, Schramm said: "It's obvious. The NFL plays less games with more people. We have a 16-game schedule. Basketball's is 82 games and baseball's 162. The NBA has 11-man squads, baseball has 25. Pro football teams pay full salaries to 52 or 53 players a year, including the injured. Although we have the fewest games, we have the most injuries. Everything is more costly in football from travel to training camp. Every NBA team has a coach or two. We have nine or 10."

GARVEY: "Squad size and number of games have a bearing, but two other things have done more to cause the gap in sports salaries today — the competition the NBA had until lately and the free agent system in baseball. Before the ABA came along to give the NBA a battle, basketball players were among the lowest paid guys in sports. (Old pro Bill Sharman, for example, says the largest NBA playing salary he ever drew was $22,000.) In baseball, the free-agent draft has pushed all salaries up. Everything is seen in a different light there now. Utility infielders make a lot more than they used to. On the other hand, the NFL has never had much competition. They do have a free-agent system — but the owners have refused for two years to make bids for free agents."

Shine ashes out at AAU schedule

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Veteran hurdler Mike Shine lashed out at the Amateur Athletic Union Friday for helping create a scheduling conflict with Russia's Spartacade and the National Sports Festival II.

"They're bucking themselves, trying to run two shows at once and not getting quality in either one," the 25-year-old Montreal Olympic silver medalist charged.

"They pull stunts like this all the time," the former Penn State University star said of the AAU.

Spartacade started July 20 and extends through Aug. 3. The Festival, the United States' answer to the Russian pve-Olympic national meet, runs head-to-head with Spartacade for six days. The American meet began Friday.

Russia really is, said Glance, a prime contender in the Festival 100 meters Saturday.

Shine's specialty, the 400 hurdles, also is scheduled Saturday on the opening day of the track and field competition.

Baron Pittinger, director of the Festival, said the sponsoring U.S. Olympic Committee had no choice on its 1979 meet dates.

"It was a problem of timing. The U.S. Air Force Academy (where most of the athletes are housed) was only available this week. And Colorado Springs was the only city committed to the Festival."

"The Russians asked us to change our dates. We couldn't. We were locked in."

Shine also charged America's amateur athletic officials issued directives that U.S. track competitors had to go to Spartacade to be eligible for the prestigious World Cup Aug. 24-26 in Montreal.

Gerulaitis gains Grand Prix finals

KITZBUHEL, Austria (AP) — Top-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States defeated Yugoslavia's Zeljko Franulovic 7-5, 6-2 Friday to gain the semifinals of a $75,000 Grand Prix tournament here.

Gerulaitis' opponent in the semifinals will be Switzerland's Heinz Guenthardt, who beat Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-1, 4-6, 6-3.

The other semifinalists are Frenchman Christopher Freyss and Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil, both of whom advanced Thursday.

Gerulaitis had problems with Franulovic only in the first set and went on to win handily in the second.

Gerulaitis' opponent in the semifinals will be Switzerland's Heinz Guenthardt, who beat Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-1, 4-6, 6-3.

Trip to Portugal may be only bargain in Europe

By JOHN CUMMINGS Newsday

LISBON - During World War II, the narrow winding alleys that pass for streets provided the backdrop for international intrigue.

It is still an intriguing capital. It has, says one guidebook, the look of San Francisco and the ambiance of Rome, with tiny restaurants featuring vintage wine and seafood cooked delicately in olive oil.

WHILE INFLATION is rising at 35 percent throughout the continent, it is still possible to order a four-course dinner for two with wine and dessert for as little as $10 in Portugal.

With the possible exception of Greece, Portugal is the last bargain left in Western Europe. Yet, even by Portuguese standards, prices are 20 percent higher than just a year ago.

The country still is recovering from the revolution of April 1974, when the last vestiges of the Salazar regime were overthrown. And then there is a geographic dilemma that squeezes the tiny country of 10 million into the corner of the Iberian peninsula.

AS A RESULT, Portugal is trying hard to please. There are tours that offer a rental car and stays throughout the country in state-run "pousadas" (the Portuguese equivalent of the Spanish "parado").

These tours, ranging from as little as $175 per person for one week, $350 per person for two weeks plus air fare, can be arranged through TAP, the Portuguese airline, or most travel agents.

Rates for rental cars are equally attractive, but be advised that, while the tab is low for almost everything else, gasoline costs about $2.30 per gallon - and is going up daily.

Consider, for example, the cost of jewelry. Earrings and bracelets, made of 19-carat gold (not 14-carat, as in most other countries), can be purchased for as little as $40 to $50.

THE STREETS HERE are wide enough only for a horse and wagon, and many are even more narrow. One shop, the Rel'jaria Central on Rua San Miguel, offers unique bargains.

Lisbon, it is often said, is not the biggest capital of Europe nor the most beautiful. But one need only tour the Tagus River and visit the San Jeronimo Monastery, to savor vest-pocket beauty that would match anything Spain has to offer.

And for only about $1 round trip, you can travel by commuter train to the nearby Costa do Sol and the resorts of Cascais and Estoril (the Las Vegas of Portugal). And high above both sits Sintra, where the kings spent their summers in a hilltop palace that dominates the surrounding countryside.

BUT ONE OF the most unforgettable moments in Sintra is dining in the Palacio Seteais, a one-time palace converted into a hotel and what may be the best restaurant in Portugal.

A look at any map will tell you that driving the length and breadth of Portugal would not take a great deal of time. The favorite spot of the vacationers in almost every season, is the Algarve, in the south.

Only two hours by car from Lisbon is the walled city of Obidos, a mini-Toledo with a "pousada" and a fine restaurant, as well as tiny shops that offer fishermen's all-wool sweaters for as little as $15.

IT IS A short distance from the ocean (just about everything in Portugal is) and at the foot of pine-covered mountains, the type that cover much of the interior of Portugal.

Obidos does not have the grandeur of Toledo, but it would be an understatement to say that to miss it is to miss the true Portugal.

Geishas continue Japanese cultural tradition

By CHIKAKO YATABE TOKYO (AP) — Rieko Mochida's day begins at 10 o'clock each morning when she sets out from her Tokyo home for a music lesson. It ends after midnight when the last customers have left the traditional Japanese-style restaurant to which she was assigned for the evening.

At 33 years of age, Rieko is at the top of her profession as a Japanese geisha. She began the role at 16, after deciding a year earlier that she wanted to become a geisha "to sweep away the twisted notions against us."

These notions include the idea that geishas are women of the night whose physical favors are readily available to the affluent customer along with their music, dancing and conversation. The word geisha itself comes from "gei," meaning arts, and "sha," meaning a person. Thus, the geisha considers herself a person of the arts with a private life and a lifestyle of her own choice.

"My life is a very busy one," the jeans-clad Rieko said in an interview. "It has to be if I am to keep up my art skills." The skills include the daily music lesson on the samisen, a three-stringed Japanese instrument that is one of the trademarks of the geisha. She began learning to play it when she was little more than 3 years old. She also practices singing — the songs in strange tones called tokiwazu out of a distant past. In the afternoon, she goes through her dance routines, also highly stylized in forms compatible with the close-fitting kimono.

Back home by 3 p.m., she begins the long, tedious task of bathing, making up and dressing for her night's work. At nightfall, she is on her way to the restaurant where she will spend the evening providing entertainment for the pleasure of male customers, often well-connected business executives or successful politicians.

The entertainment will consist of music and dance, light-hearted banter and the Japanese version of what used to be called parlor games in the West. While kneeling beside the men — the meal is always served on low tables with guests seated on tatami straw mat floors — she may not eat, but probably will be invited to exchange many toasts of sake, the traditional Japanese rice wine.

The geisha is booked by the hour, but Rieko, like most of the popular ones, usually is engaged for the entire evening. At a rate of 2,850 yen (about $13) for each hour, she may make as much as $2,000 a month. That is far more than the average office girl could hope to earn, but for a geisha there are heavy expenses.

There they prodded music and song, but were forbidden by government decree to engage in prostitution.

They are diminishing now and there are no official statistics on the total number of true geishas in Japan. One authority said he would guess there are about 2,000, while another said there are "no more than 400 or 500 real geishas" in the entire country.

SHEINWOLD ON BRIDGE

Don't Kid Yourself

By Alfred Sheinwold
 It's all right for other people to kid themselves, but as a bridge fan and a faithful reader of this column you must avoid self-deception. Admit that you would play dummy's jack of hearts at the first trick.

East wins and returns a heart. Now, with your luck, you will probably misguess the clubs at the 11th trick. Down one — on a hand you should have made with a little skill and a little low cunning.

TAKE ACE
 Take the ace of hearts at the first trick. How often does an unbid suit against a slam when he has the king of the suit?

Draw three rounds of trumps and give up the heart trick. But don't lead the low heart. Lead the queen of hearts.

East will take the king of hearts and will feel sure that you started with the doubton queen. Since he can't afford (in his opinion) to lead another heart, he will switch to clubs or diamonds. Either switch will give you the 12th trick.

DAILY QUESTION
 Partner bids one club, you respond one heart, and he jumps to three hearts. The opponents pass. You hold ♠6 ♥K 10 6 5 2 ♦Q 9 7 3 ♣9 8 6. What do you say?
ANSWER: Pass. You may have a play for four hearts if partner has no wasted strength in spades, but you may have trouble at three hearts if partner has the king or queen of spades. You might bid four hearts if the opponents were busy bidding spades, but their silence hints at holes in their spade strength.

Cash food

BARING, England (AP) — Mechanic Andy Potter couldn't understand how money was vanishing from his wallet when he left it at home.

He finally discovered that his dog, Pide, was eating the cash.

Said Potter, "I know we all have a taste for money, but this is ridiculous."

THE BIKE SALE

KZ1000 CHAIN

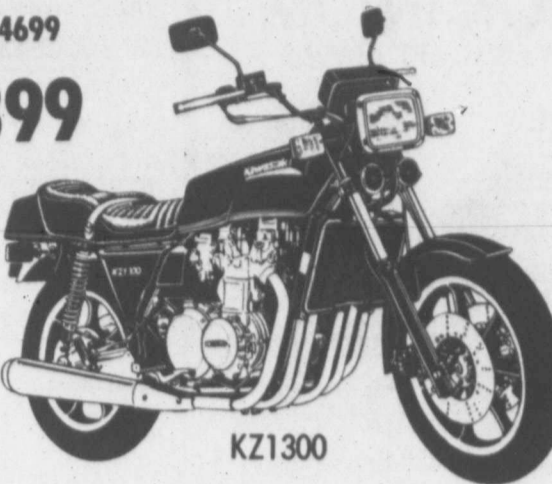

The KZ1000 is a street legend. 20hp Mikuni carbs and a vacuum-operated accelerator pump that works all four of them at once. Endless transmission gears, a self-adjusting automatic chain tensioner and exclusive air injection system for better emission control without loss of power. Drilled disc brakes and cast alloy wheels. It'll take you as fast and as far as you want to go, easy.

This 6 cylinder DOHC 4-stroke engine has the power to go anywhere at all, the farther the better. It's liquid cooled. Hot weather or stop and go city riding won't ruffle it. And when you ask for some action, three two barrel Mikuni carbs carry your message through. The KZ1300 is what you always dreamed a touring bike could be. With shaft-drive, there's no chain to adjust. Break - - - synchronized ignition puts an end to points. Touring is a guaranteed good time with features like a quartz halogen headlight, dual horns and full instrument panel. It can take a man beyond his wildest dreams. And take him back again, in style.

KZ1000 SHAFT

The marriage of a shaft drive to the legendary KZ has given birth to a whole new machine dedicated to smoothness and performance. The kind you can get only from the 1000cc, 4-cylinder, DOHC KZ engine. Transmission, controlled breakaway lights, automatic chain tensioner, a new air cleaner pump carburetor, drilled disc brakes and a combination parking and ignition lock with complete instrumentation, even a fuel gauge.
