Both Iraq, Iran claim military advantages

BASRA, Iraq (AP) — Iraqi MIGs pounded Tehran's oil storage tanks today and Iranian warplanes bombed Baghdad and other Iraqi cities, the Iraqi command reported. Iran claimed it forced Iraqi troops to retreat in the Abadan area.

Iraq said it cut off Iran's refinery city of Abadan at the southern end of the war front. Iran said it pushed the Iraqis back six miles from the eastern and northern outskirts of the city, forcing the Iraqis to regroup 12 miles from the city. Iran said the people of Abadan had taken to trenches and were prepared for hand-to-hand combat.

The Iraqi command, in a communique broadcast by Baghdad Radio, said the oil reservoirs of the Iranian capital were set ablaze by raiding Iraqi jets that also struck at two army camps near Iran's western city of Kermanshah, 250 miles southwest of Tehran and 70 miles east of the Iraqi border.

Iranian jets also bombed the Kurdish populated town of Suleimanieh, in northern Iraq, and Basra, this southern port, the communique said.

The command claimed 203 Iranian soldiers killed and 20 taken prisoner in the last 12 hours of ground action that completed an Iraqi siege of the burning oil city of Abadan and the neighboring port of Khorramshahr. It said 15 Iraqi soldiers were killed and 21 wounded.

The highway, railway and pipeline links of the two cities on the eastern coast of the embattled Shatt el-Arab waterway with Tehran, the Iranian capital, and the rest of Iran have been severed and the radio station in Abadan has been captured, the Iraqis said.

Action also was reported in the center and in the northern sector of Iraq's 300-mile invasion front as its war to win full control of the Shatt al-Arab estuary, its waterway to the Persian Gulf, went into its 25th day.

Iran claimed that its army killed 1,000 Iraqi troops in airborne assaults in the Ilam sector, 250 miles northwest of Abadan.

Iraq reported "fierce battles" on the outskirts of Dezful, a military headquarters city and oilfield center 140 miles north of Abadan. Tehran Radio reported Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, Prime Minister Mohammad Ali Rajai and other members of Iran's Supreme National Defense Council visited Dezful Wednesday and "spent three hours inspecting the battle fronts under the barrage of enemy artillery fire."

Rajai was expected in New York today to argue Iran's case before the U.N. Security Council. The council opened debate on the war Wednesday, and Foreign Minister Saddoun Hammadi of Iraq told it Iran provoked the conflict by violating its 1975 treaty with Iraq and by trying to export Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution to Iraq and the other Persian Gulf states.

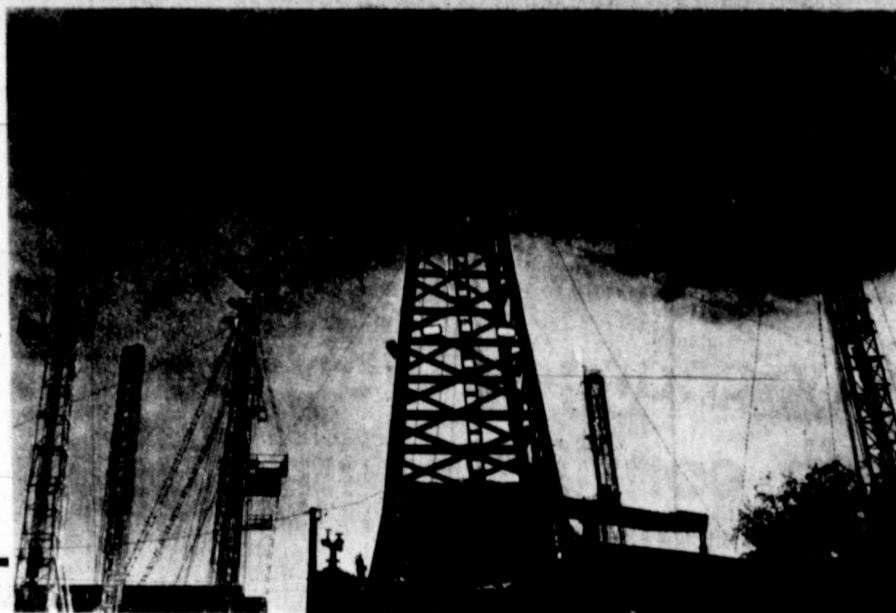

No confirmation of any of the military claims was available, but both Iranian and Iraqi communiqués and the reports of their official news agencies agreed that there was hard fighting around Abadan and Dezful. Iraq made no mention of the Ilam sector.

Abadan, 30 miles up the Shatt al-Arab from the Persian Gulf, and the oil port of Khorramshahr, 10 miles to the northwest, were the two Iranian strongpoints on the estuary that forms the southern end of the border between Iran and Iraq and has been a major territorial issue between them for centuries.

Iraqi troops and tanks that advanced eastward above Khorramshahr and Abadan and then turned south toward the gulf on Wednesday cut the highway between Abadan and the oil fields to the east.

Throng jam oil show

ODESSA — Scores of thousands of oil industry personnel thronged to the Permian Basin Oil Show grounds Wednesday as the gigantic four-day exposition of petroleum industry equipment and know-how got under way.

For the first time, the turnstiles were removed from the gates and there was no way to get a count on the number of people moving through the grounds, but Jay Alvey, executive director of the show, said "it is obvious that this is the largest first-day attendance we have ever had."

No official count is being taken, he explained, because the figures get larger and larger for every show, and the total is not that important. This show is known throughout the industry as a top quality exposition and the exhibitors and visitors will always be here in great numbers, Alvey said.

Although Alvey would not give an estimate of the first day's attendance at the Ector County Coliseum, veteran showgoers and exhibitors said the figure had to be somewhere between 100,000 and 200,000. "It's anybody's guess," one exhibitor said, but I have never seen this much humanity in one spot."

The show continues today, with the grounds open only to those persons who work in the petroleum industry or in allied fields.

The grounds will be open to the public Friday and Saturday. The gates will swing open at 10 a.m. Friday and Saturday. The annual oil show parade will begin moving from downtown Odessa at 10 a.m. Friday.

Formal opening will be at 1 p.m. Friday, at which time Alex H. Massad, with Mobil Oil Corp. in New York City, will be presented as the 1980 Oil Show Honoree. Massad is a former Midlander.

The show will end at 5 p.m. Saturday. After the gates close, the Odessa Chuck Wagon Gang will serve a barbecue to the public. Tickets will be available at the show grounds.

Bank's assets reach $1 billion

The First National Bank of Midland reached more than $1 billion in total assets Wednesday, according to Charles Fraser, president.

The value of the bank's assets hit $1,016,737,000 which is a 34 percent increase over 1979 total assets and 58 percent over the same date last year.

"This is another indicator of the Permian Basin's strong economy," Fraser commented.

"We are very proud of this success, particularly since it occurred during the year of our 90th anniversary of banking in Midland," he added.

"It is reflective of the diligent work of our personnel and the tremendous support of our customers over the years."

First National Bank is Texas' largest independent bank and was recently ranked as the 179th largest among the nation's top 4,000 banks.

Deposits as of Oct. 14 were $851 million, up 30 percent from 1979 year-end deposits of $657 million, while loans and discounts at $660 million were up 44 percent from 1979's year-end $459 million.

Hospital to borrow funds to equip cancer center

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

Midland Memorial Hospital board of trustees voted to recommend application for a $520,000 loan from Midland National Bank for remaining cost of equipment for the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center Wednesday in its regular monthly meeting. The trustees' recommendation will go to directors today.

Trustee John Grimland, who presented the matter to the board, reminded board members of the plans for the center. "Mrs. (Helen Y.) Allison agreed to pay for the building. The equipment money was something we were going to raise in the community."

Grimland said although the hospital already had $218,000 "in hand" and several pledges to pay the equipment cost of $1.325 million, other funds had to be raised. He said until the existing pledge payments are collected and the remaining money raised, the hospital would take out a loan to pay the full amount.

Trustees also approved the transfer of $750,000 in funds left over from the 1979-80 fiscal year general fund to the building fund to help defray additional costs in the hospital's expansion program.

Grimland said because of change orders and additional expenses, an additional $1,571,875 is needed to cover the construction costs for the coming year. "I think with safety we can apply these (leftover tax funds) for the $1,571,875," Grimland said, adding the money would be paid back to the district during the 1982-83 fiscal budget.

Grimland also reported the indigent and bad debt accounts for the month of September totaled $100,859. Some $18,680 went to indigent patients and $82,179 went to 278 bad debt accounts.

Trustees also approved a new policy for fund transfers from the tax-collected accounts. Since the taxes pay for indigents and equipment budgets, the hospital will now "submit directly to the district for reimbursement," rather than ask for a transfer of funds each month at both board meetings.

Although the year-end financial statements were not available yet, assistant administrator of finance Robert Abernethy did report the revenues for September as being $1,315,

000. Abernethy also said the average number of patients per day rose to 134.8 in September, compared to a budgeted 116 for that month. He said the year to date average for 1979-80 months was 127.3, compared to a budgeted average of 120.9.

Acting administrator Robert Bash announced the addition of a controller position in the administrative financial department. He said the position was the compilation of a vacant assistant controller slot and a vacant chief accountant position.

Bash said the new man, whose name he did not want to release, had "very good experience in collecting on the front-end" of accounts.

Bash said he believed "by December's meeting, we'll have some (collecting) procedures for consideration."

In other board news, the trustees: —Heard an operational report on the implementation of Tribrook recommendations in the food services department.

—Learned the City Council accepted the hospital's offer to purchase city land for parking in the area behind the hospital and that the council agreed to direct traffic as one-way going west on Garfield Street to Ohio Avenue.

—Voted to commend Bash in their minutes for his work during the interim administration phase at the hospital. Bash will be leaving by the first week in November when new administrator Ray Branson will take over.

—Heard a report on the progress of the certificates of need.

White might sue over windfall tax

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements again has asked Attorney General Mark White to file a suit attacking the Windfall Profits Tax, and White says he just might.

For the first time, White said he is looking at the possibility of legal action to challenge the tax.

White said his staff met Wednesday with assistant attorneys general from Louisiana and Oklahoma to discuss various legal strategies to fight the tax.

Oklahoma already has challenged the tax's validity in federal court. White said Texas' action will depend in part on whether the courts grant standing to oil-producing states to contest the tax.

"If Oklahoma prevails (on the standing issue), we'll probably join in Oklahoma's litigation. We are going to exhaust every legal possibility in objecting to the Windfall Profits Tax," the attorney general said.

Clements released copies of a letter he sent White on Tuesday, urging White to join a suit filed in Wyoming federal court by the Independent Producers Association of America.

White said he was glad Clements had the letter hand-delivered so "we didn't waste any money on stamps. He is swatting at gnats and I am fighting nighthawks."

White also said the issue was too important for "shooting from the lip."

Clements said his insistence that Texas sue to knock down the tax was "by no means associated with any type of partisan politics."

But White indicated he saw plenty of politics in it.

He said the whole issue of oil price decontrol, including the Windfall Profits Tax, never would have arisen had it not been for the controls imposed by President Nixon and left in place by President Ford.

"The issue would not be here but for the Republicans who interfered with the market place and put the controls on. The Republicans have not contributed one solution when they have had the opportunity of leadership," White said.

He praised President Carter for getting behind a proposed $1,000 tax credit for small royalty owners who must pay the Windfall Profits Tax and said he had urged Carter to take that position.

White said state government is affected only indirectly by the tax because royalties from oil production on state-owned lands were specifically exempted.

Ray charges Garwood with conflict of interest

Democratic Supreme Court candidate C.L. Ray has charged his Republican opponent, Will Garwood, with conflict of interest while sitting on the state's highest court.

During a Wednesday afternoon press conference at Midland Regional Airport, Ray told reporters that Garwood should have dismissed himself from a case where a customer was suing the Riverside National Bank of Houston under the state's consumer protection law.

The democratic candidate claims that Garwood went back on his word by sitting on the court during the case.

"Judge Garwood has said in the past he would disqualify himself from cases in which he has a conflict of interest," Ray said.

"He owns at least 1,500 shares in three bank holding companies and his decision took banks out from under the consumer protection act."

At one time, Ray said he has held some stock shares but sold them at a loss to himself before he accepted any judicial positions.

"I have asked Garwood to divest himself of stock holdings and he won't do it," he said.

In Dallas, the mercury climbed over 100 degrees each day from June 23 to Aug. 3. And in one day, July 13, temperature records were set in three cities: Augusta, Ga., had 107 degrees, Atlanta 105 and Memphis, Tenn., 108.

NOAA officials said their analysis was based on information collected from federal agencies, private organizations and the 26 states most affected by the unusual weather between June and September.

Besides the fatalities, the weather agency's Environmental Data and Information Service reported that: —Electrical energy use was 5.5 percent above normal, a record which cost Americans some $1.3 billion more than they would otherwise have spent.

—Crops and livestock suffered significant damage. —Hundreds of miles of major highways buckled.

Oral Roberts reassured by vision

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oral Roberts' vision of a 900-foot-tall Jesus Christ has assured him that the huge City of Faith project will be completed, he said in a fund-raising letter.

Roberts' letter says that on May 25 he spoke to Jesus, who said: "I told you that I would speak to your partners and, through them, I would build it!" Partners is Roberts' term for the donors who have given millions for the Tulsa hospital complex, the tallest building in the city.

The hospital has been criticized as under-cited in the area. Dr. C.T. Thompson, a Tulsa physician who openly opposes the project,

Europe fears new cold war

By LARRY GERBER Associated Press Writer BONN, West Germany (AP) — New restrictions and tough talk from Poland's Warsaw Pact neighbors have chilled the political climate in Central Europe this fall, giving rise to fears of a new cold war.

East Germany and Czechoslovakia, the geographical barriers between Poland and the West, are trying to bar any spread of liberalism into the East bloc from Poland, where workers won unprecedented political and economic concessions in a summer of strikes, according to politicians and analysts here.

As a result, relations between East and West Germany, a traditional barometer of European political weather, have taken a sharp drop.

Cross-border travel and political dissent also are likely to be among the casualties, judging by new travel restrictions imposed by East Germany and tough speeches by Communist Party leaders of East Germany and Czechoslovakia, who seldom fail to take their cues from Moscow.

"So-called dissidents, charter signers or whatever the different enemies of our socialist system are called cannot expect to gain free scope for anti-socialist activity," said Vasil Bilak, secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party Central Committee in a speech this week.

Bilak likened Czechoslovakia's brief liberal "Prague Spring" in 1968 to the present situation in Poland, where workers are trying to implement government promises of independent trade unions and a loosening of censorship.

Bilak claimed that the unions would be turned into a "legal base for opposition activity and a main channel for permanent interference from abroad in the affairs of the Polish People's Republic."

Bilak was one of the Communist leaders who called on the Soviet Union for "assistance" in 1968. The Soviets and other Warsaw Pact governments responded with tanks and troops, installing a more orthodox regime in Prague to replace that of Alexander Dubcek.

There also are unsettling reports, unconfirmed but persistent, of unusual Soviet and East German military activity along East Germany's border with Poland.

Western military experts who declined to be identified said that after the Warsaw Pact maneuvers in East Germany in September, some of the troops that were sent from the Soviet Union for the exercises may have remained.

The West German tabloid Bild reported this week that "Western intelligence services" told it Soviet tanks were concentrated in eastern areas of East Germany.

The government of East Germany, where most citizens can follow developments in Poland on West German television and radio, has been among the most vocal in denouncing Poland's "anti-socialist elements."

This week it introduced restrictive new currency requirements for Western visitors. Most Westerners visiting East Germany must now pay the equivalent of about $14 for each day of their stay — double, and in some cases four times, the old rate.

The West German government, which has been working for more and easier travel between East and West Germany for a more than a decade, denounced the move as an attempt to choke off the flow of visitors.

If the East German aim is to keep Westerners out, it seems to be successful, at least initially. Seven million to 8 million Westerners a year have been visiting East Germany, most of them West Germans seeing friends and relatives. But, West German border authorities reported a 60 percent drop in visitors during the first two days of the higher fees.

Erich Honecker, the East German leader, demanded on Monday that West Germany recognize East German citizenship as a precondition to removing the restrictions.

The West German government refused. West Germany informally recognizes the border with East Germany but still considers all Germans citizens of the Federal Republic and provides them with passports and all rights if they wish to live in the West.

United Way collects 37 percent of goal

At the first of a series of weekly report meetings Wednesday at Midland Center, United Way campaign chairman Donald Evans reported that the organization has already collected $429,406.

That figure, he said, represents 37.3 percent of the 1981 goal of $1,150,000. The objective for the first report meeting had been 35 percent of the campaign total and Evans was visibly pleased that the first objective had been surpassed.

"Keep the momentum going. Keep the enthusiasm up," he urged the volunteers on hand for the meeting.

"Our campaign volunteers are doing an excellent job and I am confident we will reach our campaign goal," Evans told volunteers.

The 1981 goal represents a 12.3 percent increase over the 1980 total, Evans said. He said that last year at this point, the United Way drive had raised only $396,060.

Midland, Evans said, is a community that responds to challenges. An objective of 55 percent has been set for the next report meeting, which will be held at noon next Wednesday at Midland Center. The Midland United Way campaign is scheduled to end Nov. 13.

Car, train crash kills Midlanders

ODESSA — Two Midland men died and another man is listed in stable condition in an Odessa hospital from injuries sustained when their car crashed into a train in south Odessa Tuesday night.

Albert Ray Prince, 24, and Ricky Lee Williams, 21, were pronounced dead at the scene by Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee.

Listed in stable condition at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital is James Johnson, 31, another passenger in the 1974 Volkswagen.

According to police reports, the accident occurred at about 8:30 p.m. near the 1800 block of East Pool Road when the car driven by Prince failed to stop.

The car hit the Missouri-Pacific train's locomotive and tank car, police said. The train was stopped, reports said.

Officers said the front of the car was demolished. Both Prince and Williams suffered major internal and head injuries, police said.

Odessa trucker dies in crash

An Odessa man died early Wednesday morning when his truck-tractor semi-trailer overturned on Interstate 20 seven miles west of Midland.

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said Elmer William Marland Jr., 23, was eastbound on I-20 in a construction area about 4:20 a.m. The truck ran off the roadway on the south side into a ditch. Marland attempted to drive back on to the roadway, but the truck struck a high shoulder and overturned on its side. It then ran on to the top, the spokesman said.

Marland was pinned in the cab. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Midland County Peace Justice John Biggs.

The accident was investigated by Trooper Woody Jackson.

China detonates nuclear device

WASHINGTON (AP) — The People's Republic of China detonated a nuclear explosion in the atmosphere early Thursday, the Energy Department announced.

The department said the blast was detonated at the Chinese nuclear test site at Lop Nor in northwest China at 12:30 a.m. EDT. The test was in the yield range of 200 kilotons to one megaton, the announcement said.

The last Chinese nuclear test in the atmosphere was in 1978 and left radioactive material circling the globe for months.

Laundromat reports theft

Jim Dixon reported to police Wednesday the theft of $500 from the R.J. Laundromat, 1105 N. Midkiff Road. Dixon told police that on Oct. 13 he checked the money from the machines and then compared it to the money from the dryers. The totals did not tally.

Dixon said he had been missing money all month. After the check Oct. 13, Dixon contacted all the key shops in Midland and discovered that one had an order for two keys.

Following a description by the employee who made the keys, police recovered the keys and are now working on restitution.

John Quintero, 2300 N. A St. No. 1006, received minor injuries in an assault Wednesday night. Quintero said he and a woman were driving east on Florida Avenue about 7:52 p.m. The woman's ex-husband forced the car to stop, pulled Quintero out of and reference books may sell for $1 to $2 or so, while autographed books will be sold in a "blind auction" Friday night at the Midland County Exhibit Building. The sale will continue Saturday and Sunday. (Staff Photo by Edward McCain)

Benefit book sale is set

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Book browsers seeking a rare find for a quarter, or a dollar or two, or who are just looking for "something of interest" to put on the home bookshelf may be in luck this weekend.

That's when the Friends of the Midland County Library holds its 13th annual benefit book sale in the Midland County Exhibit Building off U.S. Highway 80 East.

Approximately 20,000 books, including novels, non-fiction books, textbooks, technical books, a few tomes, and books in the arts and sciences and Reader's Digest Condensed Books, will be selling for 25 cents each. Also in the offering will be first-edition and autographed books by the likes of Herbert Hoover and Larry L. King and untold periodicals and fewer records and garage-sale odds-and-ends will be in the offering.

"Yeah," said Friends helper DeLores Gunner, who was assisting in sorting and lining up books in the building. "There's everything. There's a lot of good stuff."

Much of that "good stuff" is generously laden with tons of donated and sundry periodicals, particularly the National Geographic Magazine.

Friends member Nancy Jordan was assigned the task of sorting the National Geographic periodicals, which number "150,000, give or take three," she quipped amid her chores.

"They've got 'junk' magazines over there," she said in referring to stacks of more general and even specialized periodicals. "We're special," she said in the drudgery and all the while wishing that someone else had beaten her to the task.

"We've got a National Geographic on countries that don't exist anymore," observed sorter Adele McDaniel.

Members of the Friends of the Library will put on the sale from 6 to 9 p.m. Friday, when the "Early-Bird" browsers will be admitted to the sale for $2 each. No admission will be charged at the sale from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday. Last year, a $1 fee was charged on the Saturday and Sunday sale days.

All books, magazines and records outside the Better Books Section will be going for 25 cents per volume. Volumes, including encyclopedias, other reference works, first-edition books of late and early dates and books bearing autographs of authors will be offered for sale at various prices.

Some, including the 1922 essay of Herbert Hoover's "American Individualism," published when he was Secretary of Commerce under Warren G. Harding, and Mary Roberts Rinehart's "The Spiral Staircase," and Larry L. King's "The One-Eyed Man" will be sold in a "blind auction," according to Jerry Hickman, who, as president of the Friends board of directors, is overseeing the book sale.

Friends board member Mary Hughes has the self-imposed job of searching for first-edition books and books bearing signed autographs, and librarian Rose M. Stortz has been evaluating the so-deemed better books.

The Midland Genealogical Society will hold a benefit garage sale, while the Friends are selling books and journals.

"We've got honest-to-goodness dyed-in-the-wool junk," honestly volunteered Margaret Suddath, who's looking after the junk-treasure sale.

Oilman lashes out at windfall profits

The government's lack of consistency in word definitions has led to some bungling in interpreting the Windfall Profits Tax, Glenn Redmond, operations analyst for ARCO Oil and Gas Co. in Midland, told members of the Midland Downtown Lions Club at Wednesday noon.

"Two separate bureaucracies use the same terminology and have different definitions," he said in referring to the U.S. Department of Energy and the Internal Revenue Service.

The lack of coordination between the IRS and DOE is giving attorneys and petroleum engineers much stress and much to argue about, he suggested.

"Our people are still trying to find out what the IRS will allow," said Redmond, a petroleum engineer.

Redmond outlined the IRS three-tier tax system, which allows for $40-a-barrel oil under the free-market system, stripper oil and "old" oil at lower regulated prices.

Under the system, the independent oil producers get a better "break" than major oil companies. The majors are taxed from 70 to 60 to 30 percent, while the independent are taxed from 50 to 30 to 30 percent on oil placed in Tier I, II and III levels, respectively. Tier I includes free-market-priced oil and lower- and upper-level oil; Tier II, stripper oil; and Tier III, newly-discovered oil from wells not in production before 1978.

The tax on Tier I oil, selling for $40 a barrel, is $17, Redmond noted. The tax on Tier II drops to $13, and on Tier

III, $6.

"We're seeing some potential for a refund," even so, he said.

But after petroleum is totally deregulated on Oct. 1, 1981, oil producers should be better off in the exploration, production and profit areas.

"After next year," he said, "your income will be up."

Redmond switched from oil to gas and again lashed out at the federal regulations.

"The gas rules are more screwed up than the oil rules," he allowed.

MMH to expand

AUSTIN — The Texas Health Facilities Commission will meet at 9:30 a.m. Friday to consider an application by Midland Memorial Hospital to renovate part of its facilities.

The hospital is seeking to renovate the basement area of its building to expand physical therapy and occupational therapy areas, and provide space for the existing Sara Woolridge Multiple Sclerosis Clinic.

The hospital also plans to acquire additional equipment.

Earlier this week, the Commission voted to waive a hearing scheduled on the specifications of the change. Friday's meeting will be to give formal approval of the hospital's application.

The meeting will be held at the THFC offices at 1600 W. 38th St. in Austin.

Astronomers discover atmosphere on Pluto

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Scientists have detected a thin atmosphere of methane on the distant planet Pluto, and they say the discovery discredits the theory that Pluto is not really a planet at all, but some other type of body, such as a comet.

"We feel that the recent discovery of (Pluto's) satellite and the present detection of an atmosphere will do much to enhance its image and establish Pluto as a more regular and respectable member of the planetary community," said Uwe Fink of the University of Arizona.

Pluto's moon was discovered in 1978.

Some scientists have speculated that Pluto was a comet or an asteroid, or even a runaway satellite of Neptune.

Fink, an associate professor with the university's Lunar and Planetary Laboratory, disclosed the discovery of an atmosphere Wednesday during the annual meeting of the Division for Planetary Sciences of the American Astronomical Society in Tucson.

"Pluto is the last planet for which the presence or absence of an atmosphere was in question," Fink said.

The tiny planet's atmosphere is composed of methane gas and is about 1-300th as dense as the total Earth atmosphere, he said. Current data suggests the presence of no other gases in Pluto's atmosphere.

"It is the least dense atmosphere in the solar system, but it's not too different from the atmosphere of Mars," Fink said.

Researchers discovered the atmosphere after observations in May with a special light detector attached to a spectrometer designed and built by the lab. The spectrometer, which measures light waves, was mounted on the university's 61-inch telescope.

Scientists were looking for methane on Pluto because atmospheres of "all the major planets contain a lot of methane. So if there was an atmosphere on Pluto, then methane was a likely candidate.

A shared responsibility

Newspapers constitute one of the most misunderstood enterprises in the United States. A newspaper is a public service agency. It provides information to vast numbers of people at a minimal cost. And yet newspapers cannot exist without the support of advertisers. It is a business. Not every reader is always pleased with everything he or she reads in the newspaper. Some would like to see more of one particular type of story, sports news, for example. But newspapers continue to print a mixture of articles, thus ensuring that there'll be "something for everyone" in the newspaper each day. Neither is every reader always pleased with the editorial positions of this or any other newspaper. The editorial positions of the newspaper appear only on the editorial page except in special cases when they are published on the front page and are appropriately identified. They represent the "opinion" of the collective minds of the organization, determined by an editorial board. You as a reader aren't always expected to agree with the newspaper's position on any particular issue. A newspaper's individuality is as important as a person's individuality. Difference is what makes life interesting. The newspaper editorializes because it takes its role in the community seriously, because the editorial page is the only page on which writers can state their opinions and because it has a constitutionally-protected right to do so.

Newspapers make mistakes, of course. They make mistakes in editorials, in the ads and in the general news columns. Newspapers make those mistakes because they are the products of human effort. The newspaper is a human product. People collect the news. They write it and package it. Other people paste-up the pages and work in the various processes of getting the pages transferred from flat sheets to printing presses. People print the newspaper and, when the trucks have delivered The Reporter-Telegram throughout Midland, yet other people deliver the newspaper to your doorstep. One can only begin to comprehend the complexities of this product when he or she realizes that the newspaper is publishing the equivalence of a paperback novel every single day of the year — mostly "from scratch." We do it because you have a right to know the news whether it's good, bad or indifferent. An informed citizenry has the ability to remain free and to grow and prosper. "Our Freedom Safeguards Your Freedom" is the slogan of National Newspaper Week this year, the celebration of which began Sunday and will continue through Saturday. Nothing could be more true and we join you in saluting and embracing the responsibility we all share.

Records show Vesco plot had Libyan help

WASHINGTON — A federal undercover operation that had unraveled an international bribery plot masterminded by fugitive financier Robert Vesco was abruptly quashed last year by the Justice Department. Sealed court records reveal that the plotters intended to penetrate the White House and the Democratic National Committee. The undercover operation lasted from February 1979 until December 1979, at which time the New York U.S. Attorney's office ran out of money for the probe and asked for more. Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti rejected the request. Such promising information was being turned up that the Justice Department's Public Integrity Section recommended the appointment of a Watergate-style special prosecutor to pursue it. That request was also turned down by Civiletti. The secret investigative files, containing taped conversations, interview notes and surveillance reports, have been reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar. All information gathered in the probe, the documents indicate, was regularly delivered to Philip Heymann, head of the Justice Department's Criminal Division. A key player in the operation was a convicted con man named James Feeney, who was awaiting sentencing for business fraud in New York. In a bid for leniency, he claimed to be a confidant of Robert Vesco and volunteered to lure him into a Justice Department trap. Feeney proved his credentials as a Vesco insider by returning from a Bahamas visit with the financier's personal coffee cup which, the FBI determined, bore Vesco's fingerprints. Feeney was promptly recruited as an undercover agent, and plans were hatched to entice Vesco to London, where U.S. agents would nab him and haul him to New York, where he had been indicted on various fraud charges. In the meantime, Feeney was to gather all the information he could on the bribery scheme. As he described it, the plot was designed to secure the delivery of American-built planes which had been purchased by the Libyan government but had been held up by the United States. The Libyans had established a special bank account of $30 million to pay off the conspirators. From the secret logs kept by the federal investigators who routinely debriefed Feeney, here are the details of the elaborate plan: — Vesco operatives recruited Feeney to raise $50,000 in seed money to pay the expenses of James Day, a Texas wheeler-dealer who was a friend of Democratic National Committee Chairman John White. The scenario called for Day to give White a down payment of $15,000, in return for which co-conspirator White was to use his influence with the Carter administration on behalf of the Libyans. — The conspirators in the Vesco ring were given secret code names to conceal their identities. Vesco was known as "Vicar," White as "Blanco." Day was "the white-haired one," and the Libyan paymasters were "Sandbox." The ultimate payoff was referred to as "Ice Bucket," which had its genesis in a Vesco remark that an ice bucket full of money would be spread around in the deal. — On several occasions, the participants discussed proposed payoffs to White. The Democratic chairman also had many meetings with Day and at least one meeting with Libya's United Nations ambassador, Mansur Kikkia. — In addition to securing the release of the planes purchased by Libya, White was expected to use his influence to get Vesco's U.S. citizenship revoked, thus preventing the financier's extradition. In exchange, Vesco would surrender a number of compromising letters allegedly written to him by Hamilton Jordan, the president's friend and righthand man. — The conspirators were supposed to gather at the Moscow Narod Bank in London, where they were to receive their Libyan booty. Present at the settlement were to be Vesco, his assistant Norman LaBlanc, Day, his confidant James Wohlenshaus, Feeney, "and another associate of JD (Day) representing Carter group — possibly JW (John White)." As the weeks passed, the planes were not released and the payoff was postponed several times. When the Justice Department called off the investigation in December, the deal still had not been consummated. Footnote: White's lawyer, Stu Pierson, denied his client was ever involved in the Vesco scheme. The attorney acknowledged that White had met with Day on four occasions during a six-month period last year but claimed it was a "political courtesy for a home state acquaintance." White has never met Vesco, the lawyer said, and had met with Ambassador Kikkia only to arrange a protocol meeting for the Libyan with President Carter.

GIFTS GALORE: More than $50,000 in gifts were bestowed on President Carter, his wife, and his daughter Amy last year by foreign chiefs of state and other donors. As required by law, the First Family reported the gifts and turned the bulk of them over to the National Archives. They are now the property of the United States. Some of the presents, however, were perishable or personalized. These were designated for "official use" and retained at the White House. Among them were two jogging suits from Mexico, a kimono and make-up kit from Japan, two bolts of silk from Korea, a large artificial floral arrangement from Mexico, a silver necklace from Egypt, 24 bottles of vintage Australian wine and seven decanters of vodka, gin, cognac and other spirits from the Soviet Union. Most gifts are accepted, according to the official White House reports, because "non-acceptance would have caused embarrassment to the donor."

A CHANGING WORLD

Japan, United States can't stop Kim's death sentence

TOKYO — The death sentence South Korea has ordered for dissident Kim Dae Jung is a sad episode in continuing repression imposed by the new Seoul government — and it poses a sticky dilemma for both the United States and Japan. The chances are that Kim never will be hanged, as ordered by the kangaroo military court that convicted him on flimsy charges of sedition. With two appeal courts' review ahead and final judgment by President Chun Doo Hwan, chances for sentence commutation are better than even. Meanwhile, neither the United States nor Japan, despite intense distaste for the course South Korea is taking away from democracy, is likely to raise much in the way of public protest over the death sentence. Japan has more reason than Washington to talk tough but it also has what a government official said privately are "pragmatic reasons" for keeping its temper under control. President Carter, of course, has political campaign reasons among others for low-key reaction to what amounts to Chun's savage abuses of all South Koreans' rights. This is so despite Mr. Carter's lofty "born again" preachings regarding human rights in many other parts of the world. Insofar as Japan is concerned, the Kim tragedy is particularly embarrassing. Kim was a refugee in Tokyo, presumably under Japanese protection, when he was kidnapped by South Korean secret agents, then returned to Seoul, jailed and held for trial. This still galls the Japanese, who are proud of a long tradition of law and order, plus police efficiency. With the background of the snatching of Kim from under their noses, Japan's leaders, particularly now, have a great urge to denounce Chun in the strongest terms and to issue demands and threats. However, Japan will remain relatively silent. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki has merely said, in effect, "We are disturbed." He also added a mild admonition that "serious restraints" might be considered on Japan's economic aid package to South Korea if Kim was sent to the gallows. But, what a Japanese official described to me as the "pragmatic reasons" for silence are no more honorable in this specific case than are those that have muted the usual "human rights" outcries of Mr. Carter. Japan cannot risk the loss of trade with South Korea, the Japanese official said, "and at this time of economic uncertainty trade is more important than the life of one South Korean." South Korea is one of Japan's major buyers, and exports are vital to the nation's survival. Also, Japan is seeking a way to overcome the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars in shipbuilding contracts to South Korea — plus the Republic of China on Taiwan and Yugoslavia. Overtures have been made to Seoul in the interests of a bilateral agreement that would recover some of the lost shipbuilding contracts. Thus, this is no time to upset dictator Chun, regardless of the moral principle involved in the Kim case. As for Mr. Carter, personal politics always dictates his decisions, and this is so more than ever in the current close and bitter presidential election campaign. He has had one failure in the botched and aborted U.S. hostage rescue attempt in Iran. This hurt him politically. He obviously will not risk a demand that Kim be freed — then find that Chun has rebuked and insulted him by hanging the dissident. There also is the touchy matter of 39,000 U.S. troops in Korea.

Too strong a U.S. protest to the unstable Chun regime could bring violent retribution against the uniformed Americans, regardless of the major role they have in protecting South Korea from another invasion by the Communists of North Korea. The best that can be hoped for is that Chun eventually will commute Kim's sentence. He will do so only as a result of his own uneasy feelings about free world disgust with his regime. And, despite what President Carter says he stands for and despite Japanese feelings of guilt for letting South Korean agents kidnap Kim from under their very noses, neither nation will do anything dramatic in the condemned man's behalf.

Voting against a candidate gets tougher

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — What makes this election year different from all other years is that no one seems to be discussing which candidate he's supporting, only which candidate he's not voting for.

I went into a bar the other night, and the stranger on my left said, "Who are you going to vote against this year?" "I haven't made up my mind yet," I said honestly. "All the candidates have given me a reason to vote against them, but I still have to wait until I see what they do in their last week."

"That makes sense. If you decide now you're going to vote against one of the three, you get committed. And if the other two say something, you might want to vote against them instead." "Can I buy you a drink?" I said. "That would be nice. This election really gives you a thirst. You know I was against Carter a long time ago, and I was certain that I would not vote for him. But then the Republicans nominated Ronald Reagan and I said, 'Wait a minute, Lester. Reagan looks like a guy you could vote against just as easily as Carter.'"

"You can say that again. Personally, I didn't have anything against Reagan until he started campaigning for office. But after hearing some of the things he said, I thought to myself, 'This guy bears watching. He could get us into more trouble than Carter — and that's saying a lot.'"

Lester warmed up to our conversation. "You know I've never had anything against John Anderson because I didn't know who he was. I thought he'd fade away in New Hampshire. But now that he's a third-party candidate, I'm thinking about voting against him."

"If you do that," I said, "you'll be wasting your vote. Voting against Anderson will only get you Carter or Reagan."

"That's what my wife said," Lester told me. "A vote against Anderson is like no vote at all."

"Besides, it would endanger the two-party system. An American should either vote against a Republican or a Democrat in the upcoming election. At least we know where their parties stand on the issues."

Lester said, "It's my turn to buy you a drink. Now the way I see it, if we vote against Carter, we won't have four more years of what we've got now."

"But that doesn't mean we'll get anything better with Reagan. He's promising everything, but that doesn't mean he can deliver on any of it. A vote against Reagan could keep us out of a war."

"That's what Carter says, but Reagan says he isn't telling the truth. If I find out Carter is lying I'm going to vote against him."

Lester said, "It's your turn to buy me a drink."

I replied, "Sorry about that. It's too bad we can't split our vote."

"How's that?" "I'd like to vote against Carter's economic policies and Reagan's foreign policies."

"That would solve it for us," Lester agreed. "But we have to vote against the man and not his policies."

"I'm afraid so. They sure put us in a heck of a spot this year. Remember how easy it was to vote against someone in a previous election?"

"Do I? I could decide who I was against right after the conventions and never waver until Election Day. Now I'm afraid to wake up in the morning, because I never know what the candidate I'm against at the moment has done the night before."

Longo was born at Fubine Monferato, a small town near Turin in northwestern Italy, on March 15, 1900.

Mideast summit unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Mideast peace summit by the end of the year now appears unlikely, even though U.S. officials say the latest round of formal talks between Egypt and Israel produced some progress on a Palestinian autonomy agreement.

According to these officials, who asked not to be identified, several issues that stood in the way of a five-year plan for the Israeli-held West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip are now closer to resolution.

Details were withheld, but Israel's willingness to share authority with the Palestinians over some day-to-day living arrangements could be pivotal in devising an autonomy plan, the officials said.

Although there was apparently movement on both sides, officials agree that a lot of work needs to be done before a summit session can be held among President Carter, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Officials had said several times that Carter hoped to hold a three-way summit after next month's U.S. elections. Prospects for such a meeting appear to have dimmed, although it is still a possibility.

Joseph Burg, the chief Israeli negotiator, said, "I am sure that the summit will take place, but I am sure we will have to make many, many talks, meetings, negotiations, in order to make it fruitful."

Earlier, Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak said a summit that would solve the Palestinian issue would be a "complete disaster."

The Israeli move at the two-day session, which encouraged American mediators, may make it easier to define the powers of the council that will be elected by the Palestinians, sources said.

Winding up the negotiations Wednesday, U.S. mediator Sol M. Linowitz claimed progress and credited both sides with a serious attitude and determination to reach agreement.

Linowitz said both Israel and Egypt took some new positions, but he refused to be specific.

Linowitz said a new American memorandum incorporating the Israeli and Egyptian proposals will be prepared and another negotiating session will be held Nov. 17 in the Middle East — in either Egypt or Israel, according to U.S. officials.

Even then, Linowitz acknowledged, there probably will have to be more pre-summit meetings. "There is considerable work yet to be done, considerable preparation to be achieved and therefore I would think that further discussions and negotiations might have to take place," he told reporters at a State Department news conference.

Burg, Israel's Interior minister, agreed with that assessment. "You never parachute onto Everest, you can only climb," he said.

He called for thorough preparation and said it might not be possible for Carter to meet with Sadat and Begin before January.

"It is my impression that the summit should have very good preparation," Mubarak said. "A summit, whenever it is held, should be well prepared. Otherwise it will be a failure and when such a summit comes to a failure it would be a complete disaster."

For that reason, the Egyptian said, it may not be held before January, although a summit before the end of this year has not been entirely ruled out.

Doubts raised about Army's defense abilities in Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. military commander says he's concerned about the ability of what he called an "obsolescent Army" to sustain a defense of Western Europe in the event of an invasion by Soviet Bloc forces.

Gen. Frederick Kroesen, Army commander in Europe, said Wednesday the 223,000 U.S. troops under his command could "initiate" such a defense, but "it's the sustaining of that defense that gives rise to concern."

In a related development, the U.S. commander of the 180,000-man combined American-South Korean field army says his troops would be able to repel an invasion by the North Koreans.

"If we go to war tomorrow morning, we go with an obsolescent Army," the top U.S. soldier in Europe said in assessing his troops' capabilities against an invasion by Warsaw Pact nations.

Kroesen said the Army has been plagued by outmoded equipment, some of which "is not much improved over what we had in World War II." He claimed the Army plans to rely too heavily on reserve forces in the event of an emergency.

He also told the Army Association convention that about 24,000 Army families live in what he called "disreputable" quarters in Europe.

Meanwhile, Lt. Gen. Eugene P. Forrester expressed a "high sense of confidence" that his U.S. and South Korean troops could beat back any North Korean attack.

Reagan, Carter meet tonight

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, still mum on whether he will finally debate President Carter, comes face to face with his Democratic opponent tonight for the first time in the presidential race.

The meeting is not a debate, but a bipartisan political affair on neutral ground in New York City — the annual Al Smith charity fund-raising dinner.

By tradition, politicians poke a little fun at themselves but not at their opponents and say something nice about

Smith, the longtime Democratic governor of New York who was defeated by Herbert Hoover for the presidency in 1928.

Reagan teams up with running mate George Bush and former President Gerald Ford today for a rally in a Detroit suburb before heading for New York. He also will meet with black ministers in Birmingham, Mich.

Still unresolved, with 19 days remaining before the election, was the question of whether Reagan and Carter will ever debate. Reagan left the possibility open Wednesday, saying he wanted to see if the League of Women Voters still deemed independent John Anderson a viable candidate and would insist on including him.

Reagan and his staff made it clear they would not be bound by the league's judgment about Anderson.

Suggesting that the league might drop Anderson in the interest of having a Reagan-Carter debate, Reagan said, "I wouldn't want them to, maybe, just get carried away because they want to sponsor a debate."

However, his campaign manager, William J. Casey, replied to an urgent request from the Carter camp for a debate by saying Reagan had accepted an invitation to a three-man debate including Anderson and suggesting Carter do the same.

Reagan's press secretary, Lyn Nofziger, indicated a final decision about debating Carter was imminent. "I think you'll see some movement within the next two or three days," Nofziger said Wednesday night.

He said he did not know what the decision might be. Reagan has been insistent that any debate include Anderson or that Anderson and Carter debate before Reagan and the president meet. The thinking behind this is that Anderson draws more votes from Carter than he does from Reagan, and that Reagan's campaign profits politically from Anderson's continued candidacy.

Questions about a presidential debate dogged Reagan during stops Wednesday in Lima and Akron, Ohio, and Flint, Mich.

Reagan aides have dubbed his campaign in the industrial heartland as the "Blue Woo" — a courting of blue-collar voters. "It's out there for us to win," said James Brady, a high-ranking Reagan aide. "We'll push the economic issues."

Reagan did just that at each stop during the day. "Catch your breath, hold onto your hats and grab your wallets because Jimmy Carter's analysis of the economy means that his answer is higher taxes," Reagan declared.

"It's just that simple," he added. "He thinks the cause of inflation is not enough taxes, and he'll raise those taxes."

With unemployment running at 20.7 percent, Flint has the worst jobless rate of any major community in the United States. Reagan for weeks has talked about the unemployment in Flint as an example of the failure of Carter's policies.

In an area that has lost thousands of jobs in the auto industry, Reagan said he opposed the so-called "gas guzzler tax," which he said ranges from $200 to $550 on big cars with poor gasoline mileage.

Carter reminding workers of issue

SECAUCUS, N.J. (AP) — President Carter, facing difficulties in normally Democratic areas of the Northeast, is appealing to traditional Democratic constituents by reminding them about Ronald Reagan's history on blue-collar issues.

He is campaigning today in Connecticut and New York, after searching for votes Wednesday in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Reagan is showing strength in Connecticut, but the president is believed secure in New York.

At the end of the road today, Carter will share a dinner with his Republican opponent. Both accepted invitations to the Al Smith dinner in New York, which honors the 1928 Democratic presidential nominee.

Reagan has sought to overcome the Democrats' edge in registered voters by appealing to blue-collar workers normally counted in the Democratic column.

"Reagan's doing everything but playing 'Happy Days Are Here Again,' the Democrats' theme song, said Robert Newman, the Democratic National Committee official who accompanied the president Wednesday.

To counter that, the president, at each stop on his 14-hour trip Wednesday, told his audiences that Reagan had once opposed the minimum wage and called unemployment insurance "a prepaid vacation for freeloaders."

The president said that Democrats had proposed a minimum wage of 25 cents an hour during the Great Depression and "the Republicans opposed it."

Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum said the president's comments were intended "to remind people of the traditions of the Democratic Party."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Carter's primary campaign opponent, introduced the president at his stop in Boston and two of his three campaign events in New Jersey. Carter returned to the White House after the day's campaigning.

Meeting with New Jersey labor leaders at a hotel in the newly developed New Jersey Meadows complex, Kennedy said the president was "a real friend of organized labor."

At the next stop — the second of two fund-raising events that grossed about $450,000 for the Democratic Party — Carter portrayed himself as "an integral part" of the Democratic tradition associated with Woodrow Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt, Harry Truman, John Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson.

With Reagan appearing secure west of the Mississippi, although the Carter campaign maintains it will continue its effort in California because it believes it can be successful there, the president is forced to focus on the arc of industrial states stretching from the Northeast to Illinois.

In addition, Reagan is trying to make inroads in Carter's native South, an area the president will visit again next week with stops, announced Wednesday, in Florida, Louisiana and Texas.

In Connecticut, the president's first stop today, the race is considered very close. It is a state Carter lost four years ago to Gerald R. Ford.

The Carter campaign is counting on New York, which has 41 electoral votes, to anchor its effort against Reagan on Nov. 4. Several different surveys have found the president taking a lead there in recent weeks, but Carter is expected to campaign there at a fund-raising event Monday night, also with Kennedy.

First Lady busy

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Rosalynn Carter, the year will be remembered as almost constant campaigning.

In this general election campaign, the first lady is out on the hustings two or three days a week — the same pace she maintained during the primary election season when her husband stayed home in the White House.

But, like President Carter, the first lady normally travels just one day at a time to avoid the expense of staying overnight on the road.

While Carter concentrates his energies on the large, industrial states where the race is very close, his wife's efforts are more scattered.

She, too, appears in the vote-rich Northeast, but she also makes appearances in such other areas as Virginia, which was the only southern state to vote Republican in 1976.

Mrs. Carter has scheduled three appearances tonight in northern Virginia at receptions.

Healey favored for Labor Party

LONDON (AP) — Moderate Denis Healey is favored to be elected leader of Britain's Labor Party following the resignation of former Prime Minister James Callaghan.

Callaghan quit Wednesday, saying a new leader was needed to deal with tough fighting between the left and right wings of Britain's opposition party, but that he would continue as a member of the House of Commons.

Most political observers said the new Labor leader would be Healey, a former defense and treasury minister and a devastating debater feared by weaker political opponents.

Like many others among the brightest students at Oxford University in the 1930s, Healey joined the Communist Party during the depression and the rise of Hitler in Germany. He quit after about a year, saying he found communist politics arid, and switched to the Labor Party.

In addition to Healey, those in the running for party leader are Peter Shore, the second favorite, then Michael Foot, John Silkin and Tony Benn. All are former Cabinet ministers.

The leadership choice will be made in a ballot of the 268 Labor Party members of the House of Commons. Most of them are on the center and right of the party, where Healey's support lies. Nominations close Oct. 29. If no one gets the required 51 percent or more on the first ballot, there will be other ballots through Nov. 13.

But next month's leadership ballot won't end the row over choosing the leader. By decision of the party convention earlier this month, a conference Jan. 24 will discuss plans to turn the process over to an electoral college of representatives of the whole party, including the unions and constituencies, where the left is strong. By that time, however, Healey — if successful in the November ballot — would be in the driver's seat with everything going for him to appeal for unity to defeat Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives.

The Conservatives returned to power in May 1979, riding a wave of widespread public resentment over strikes by public service workers rebelling against anti-inflationary curbs on pay hikes.

The task of the new Labor Party leader will be to bridge the gap between the party's left and right wings. The center and right opts for gradual change. The left wants more state control of big business, heavier taxes on the rich, abolition of the House of Lords, and an end to Britain's nuclear armament and membership in the NATO alliance.

Clements, Hobby in celebration

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby and several other state officials will take part in the 25th Fiesta Amistad celebration beginning today in Del Rio and neighboring Ciudad Acuna, Mexico.

Clements was scheduled to address a Saturday luncheon and radio audience at an event honoring Del Rio Mayor Herb Shitis.

Hobby was to join Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials Sunday in dedicating Seminole Canyon State Park, 40 miles west of Del Rio in the Lower Pecos River Region. The state's newest park was the home base of the Paleo-Indian, a prehistoric tribe dating back to 12,000 B.C.

Chris Alderete, federal co-chairman of the Southwest Border Regional Commission, was to be the featured speaker at Friday's 53rd general assembly of the International Good Neighbor Commission.

Ousted lawyer sues network

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jennifer Martin, a former ABC lawyer who accused the network and Spelling-Goldberg Productions of improperly diverting profits from "Charlie's Angels" to another TV series, has sued ABC and Spelling-Goldberg for $6 million.

In a Superior Court suit filed Wednesday, Ms. Martin alleged she was improperly fired last Nov. 1 from her job as director of contracts for the network.

ABC has said it dismissed her because of poor job performance and attendance.

But Ms. Martin's suit contended the real reasons were "that she had brought to light the conspiracy to defraud the 'Charlie's Angels' profit participants," Natalie Wood and Robert Wagner, who own 50 percent of the popular series — and that she refused to assist in the alleged conspiracy.

The suit also accuses ABC of slandering Ms. Martin by telling TV Guide she was "an intensely neurotic woman" and "semicrazed."

Claiming the episode has made her "effectively unemployable," Ms. Martin was seeking $1 million in special damages and $5 million in punitive damages.

Officials at ABC and Spelling-Goldberg could not be reached immediately for comment, and Ms. Martin and her attorney, Stuart A. Simke, also were unavailable.

The district attorney's office, the FBI and the Securities and Exchange Commission are investigating the alleged diversion of up to $1.5 million in profits from "Charlie's Angels" to "Starsky and Hutch," another Spelling-Goldberg series in which Miss Wood and Wagner have no interest.

Firemen battle a fire at the Hill & Griffith Foundry Supply Co. after an explosion leveled the four-story building in Cincinnati Wednesday. Eight people were injured in the blast which was caused when particles of coal dust ignited. (AP Laserphoto)

Explosion flattens factory

CINCINNATI (AP) — Exploding coal dust leveled a four-story factory into a mass of glowing, fiery rubble, and the flames hampered efforts today to find a man believed trapped in the debris. Eight people were injured by the blast, four critically.

"There's coal and everything burning underneath the roof, and they can't get through it to dig for him," Fire Marshal John Meyers said Wednesday night. "The more it burns, the more air it gets and then it burns more intensely."

Firefighters were at the scene overnight, hosing down stacks of bags containing coal dust. Fire Chief Norman Wells ordered a crane to pull away debris today if the fire dies down.

Paul Wilke & Son Sheet Metal and Roofing Co. said James Wilke, a father of two, had not been heard from since the blast, according to Meyers.

Michael Connors of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration said his agency was checking on the coal pulverizing section of the plant.

"The impact of the blast was awful," said Grote, adding the force of the explosion buckled a wall at the Myers Manufacturing Co. where he works, hurling office workers from their desks.

Workers admitted to General Hospital in critical condition with burns were Paul Gangloff, 33;

Roger McGuffy, 26; Floyd Coldiron Jr., 46; and Ray Bruney, 50. Monroe Hargrove, 44, and Arthur Williams, 51, were hospitalized in fair condition.

Marsha and Paul Walls, residents of a nearby home, were treated for cuts from a broken window.

Sting operation had comic quirks

VALHALLA, N.Y. (AP) — Undercover cops ran a successful "sting" here despite some comic quirks in their year-long operation. They had to dispose of a truck of hijacked bananas, evade fellow policemen as they drove stolen cars and turn down an invitation to join the Chamber of Commerce.

"Operation Yellow-jacket" netted $1.25 million in stolen goods that the agents bought for a mere $83,000 while posing as fences at a Pelham storefront. Dozens of people were arrested in pre-dawn raids Wednesday.

As suspects were being processed at Westchester County police headquarters, Inspector Salvatore D'Iorio described the hazards and hilarity his men encountered in the streets.

Once, an officer bought a stolen car, slid into the driver's seat and casually shook a folded towel lying next to him, D'Iorio said. A grenade rolled out onto the floor.

The startled agent dove out of the car, which rolled down the street without a driver. The grenade did not explode.

Most of the fenced items were stolen cars, checks, jewelry and furs, but police also were offered 11 women from a pimp's stable and the services of a group of women whose specialty was pilfering meat from supermarkets.

"We could have bought anything," said Police Commissioner Thomas Delaney.

The sting, funded by $300,000 in federal money, also required the acting talents of the officers. On one occasion, agents were offered a stolen electronic organ and demanded to see how it worked. As one suspect played the organ, three others danced and sang on the sidewalk and the cops joined in.

D'Iorio said one unhappy agent had to tell a man that his dog had died because it was tossed out a car window by car thieves as they made their getaway.

The agents had no trouble finding suspects willing to sell them stolen property, and news of the fencing spread "by word of mouth," D'Iorio said. But the agents ran into trouble from other cops who didn't know about the operation, he said.

When they purchased a hijacked truck with a load of bananas, the agents wanted to return the fruit but couldn't tell local police without blowing their cover. So they settled for an anonymous call reporting that the bananas had been found. The agents also were chased by other policemen and by people who had their cars stolen and later spotted the agents driving them, D'Iorio said.

Once, while visiting a suspect in a local hospital, two undercover agents were chased out of the intensive care unit by a busy nurse. And "D.A.N.'s Distributing Co.," the storefront where the illegal transactions were videotaped, was even asked to join the local Chamber of Commerce.

In all, 43 people were indicted on charges of criminal possession of stolen property. Most of them had prior criminal records, and all but two were from Westchester County, just north of New York City, police said.

Among the recovered stolen items were 78 cars, two tractor-trailer trucks, two computer terminals, assorted government checks, credit cards, television sets, guns, coins and jewelry. "We could have opened up a major department store," D'Iorio said.

The explosion came just one day after a coal dust blast wrecked an electric generating plant in Pekin, Ill., causing more than $100 million damage and injuring 15 people.

The explosion at the Hill & Griffith Foundry Supply Co. on the city's near west side sent flames 300 feet into the air Wednesday afternoon.

Assistant Fire Chief Robert Rathman said all the walls were blown out of the factory and the roof collapsed. "It's hard to believe anybody got out of there," he said.

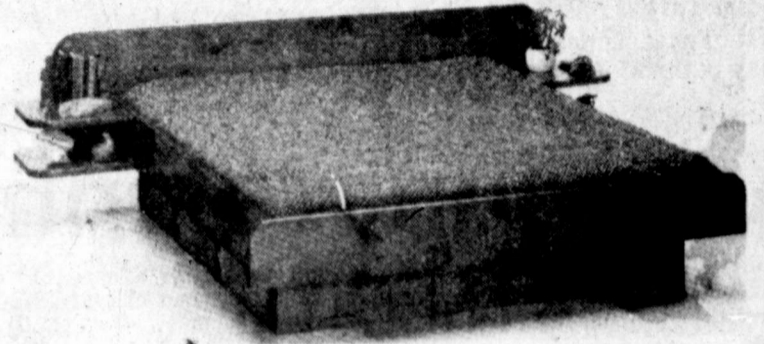

"People came running out with their clothes burning and smoking," said Skip Grote, an accountant at a nearby company. "One man had most of his clothes blown off."

Company president David Greek said all 12 employees working in the coal pulverizing operation were accounted for.

Greek said particles of coal dust in the air apparently ignited, causing the explosion. The plant pulverizes coal and bags the dust for sale to foundries for use in making molds.

The missing man was identified by Meyers as James Wilke, 34, a sheet metal worker assigned to repair work at the foundry supply company. He said Wilke's truck was found in the debris. The

Feds probing State Fair rides

DALLAS (AP) — Although State Fair of Texas officials label the Midway ride accidents this year as minor, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission says it will continue to investigate the four incidents.

A federal court order bars the commission from actually inspecting the rides, but the agency will interview the people involved in the accidents for a report expected within a month, said Larry Blend, acting regional director of the commission.

A court order was issued after a legal battle with fair officials after the Swiss Skyride accident last year that killed one Dallas man and injured 17 people, he said.

The consumer agency charged six weeks ago that fair officials and the operator supervising the Skyway attraction knew the ride was unsafe.

The following accidents have occurred since the fair opened Oct. 4:

A ride operator broke his leg when his pants leg was caught in the machinery of the midway roller coaster; a man fell from the Zyklon attraction after he stood up in his seat, police said; a woman was thrown from the Himalayan ride; and 32 people were trapped on the Enterprise for eight minutes when it malfunctioned.

No other public agency is investigating the accidents and fair officials have exonerated the operators of any blame. Ride operators inspect the midway attractions daily and an engineer checks them on a regular basis, fair officials said.

The officials said they will not release copies of this year's ride inspection reports without consulting the fair's attorney, who was out of town.

They said accident figures, comparing 1980 to other years, would not be available until after the fair closes Oct. 19.

Mafia assassin gives testimony

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Aladena "Jimmy the Weasel" Fratianno, a confessed Mafia assassin ranked as the most important mob informer since Joseph Valachi, was being called to federal court today to testify against five old friends.

Fratianno, 66, was said to be ready to tell who killed Frank "The Bomb" Bompensiero, a mobster-turned-informer shot down in San Diego in February 1977. Fratianno is under heavy government protection.

The Organized Crime Strike Force was counting on Fratianno to link the five reputed Mafia figures on trial to extortion, racketeering and conspiracy as members of La Cosa Nostra.

Defense lawyers have called Fratianno "a desperate killer" and "a creative liar" who would say anything to save himself.

Strike force chief James Henderson says Fratianno is a mob historian who can describe three decades of Mafia migration to Southern California, a tale of extortion, murder and terrorism that led to underworld control of the West Coast pornography industry.

Prosecutors rate his information with that of Valachi, a long-time Mafia member who turned informant and testified before the McClellan Rackets Committee on national television in 1963.

Defendants are Dominic Phillip Brooklier, 66; Samuel Orlando Sicortino, 61; Louis Tom Dragna, 59; Michael Rizzitello, 52 and Jack LoCicero, 68.

In preparation for Fratianno's testimony, Henderson on Wednesday called to the stand two policemen and an FBI agent who kept the defendants and Fratianno under surveillance, and a reputed pornography distributor.

Theodore Gaswirth, under indictment on pornography charges, told of a shakedown effort by Jack LoCicero, and a deceased defendant in the case, Thomas Ricciardi, who demanded $20,000.

Gaswirth, testifying under immunity, said the two men came to his adult film business, TGA Inc., in Northridge in August 1976.

"Thomas Ricciardi stated that he wanted to introduce me to Jack, and Jack had something to say. At that point, LoCicero said... California was his and he wanted $20,000 and he would be back the following Friday to get it."

Gaswirth admitted telling a grand jury that LoCicero spoke with such a heavy Italian accent that it was hard to understand him.

"You told the grand jury you didn't know what the hell he said, didn't you?" asked LoCicero's lawyer, Terry Amdur.

"That's true," said Gaswirth. But Henderson asked: "As you sit here now, Mr. Gaswirth, is there any doubt in your mind this was an attempted shakedown?"

Gaswirth paused, then answered, "No."

Earlier Wednesday, another government witness, underworld informer Harry "the Greek" Coloduros, ended two days of testimony by saying he had lied to the FBI at times.

Winners of the Midland Arts Association's fall exhibition were announced Tuesday night at a reception at the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College.

Awards of excellence, $250 each, were presented to Midlanders Steve Luttrell and Sara Gilstrap, Pam Price of Odessa and Candace Burnside of Plainview.

Awards of merit, $100 each, went to Sara Waters, Bill Bagley and Francis Stephen, all of Lubbock; Terry Bumpass of Hobbs, N.M.; Marilyn Pritchett, Jack Hickman, Timothy Huchton, Kim McLaren, Tommy Grace and Pat Bailey, all of Midland; and Gary Bain of Odessa.

The First Savings and Loan Award of $40 went to Kim Kreyenbuhl of Midland. Honorable mentions went to Syl Hampton, Mana Ratanasanetavadhana, Marjorie Scull, Ruth Hill-Radcliffe, Stuart Chase, Michele Bahr, all of Midland, and Paula Cox of Odessa.

The juror was Caroline Bozzini of San Antonio. "While the assortment of entries is greatly varied in quality, I found interesting pieces in all media," she said of the exhibit. "The lack of abstract work is surprising, considering the fact that abstraction is one of the major movements in art today. Much of the fiber work could gain a great deal by limiting materials. Among the award winners there are the promises of new directions."

The exhibit will be on display through Nov. 1 in the McCormick Gallery, Allison Fine Arts Building.

'Really Rosie'—musical opens, with nine-kid cast

NEW YORK (AP) — Musicals with and for kids aren't easy to pull off, not even when pop composer Carole King writes the songs and Patricia Birch, who choreographed "Grease," both directs and choreographs.

These talented two try hard with "Really Rosie," a new off-Broadway musical that bowed Tuesday with a nine-kid cast and two adults, the elders playing off-stage mothers who shout a lot.

But this tyke tableau only fitfully sparkles. It never really takes off. It's a shame, because Miss King's 10-song score is as sprightly as the show's book is not.

The book is by the famed Maurice Sendak (the show's lyricist) and is adapted from his best-selling "The Sign on Rosie's Door" and "Nutshell Library," his collection of children's stories.

First done in 1975 as an animated CBS special, the musical concerns the plans of Rosie (Tisha Campbell), the brash, bossy ruler of all the kids on her New York block, to make a Hollywood movie.

The epic, of course, is about her. "A star is born — me," says our heroine, clad in her familiar floppy hat, baggy red gown, boq feathers and furry blue slippers.

She starts by making clear she has no use for her kid brother, Chicken Soup (Miss Campbell's kid brother, Jermaine, plays him). It's not clear what this has to do with her make-believe movie, but she finally starts the project with the usual auditions.

All the neighborhood kids, up to and including a tyke named Alligator, eventually get drawn in. Some occasionally jeer at her, but invariably they wind up bossed around by her.

They do their respective song-and-dance turns, scamper about, hide in a cellar during a thunderstorm and hear Rosie's tall tale about the fate of Chicken Soup, who has crawled off early in the show.

In due course, they film their fantasy flick — it includes a funny Old West mime bit — and wrap things up with a ragged, high-kicking grand finale, a peeve version of those lavish MGM musicals.

Unfortunately, the proceedings wander to and fro. They lack focus. At times you wonder exactly what is afoot here, a plot or just a series of vaguely related moments of childlike song, dance and dialogue.

Indeed, it so wanders that at a preview I caught, one kid sitting behind me inquired, and not sarcastically:

"What time does the movie start, Mom?"

There are pluses in the show — Douglas W. Schmidt's low-budget but well-drawn cartoon settings, the playful dance bits that are Miss Birch's trademark and, of course, Miss King's tunes, the best being a goofy little nonsense number called "Alligators All Around."

On the performing side, Miss Campbell, who is properly sassy as Rosie, displays a fine, sweet voice.

ENTERTAINMENT

But the show is all but stolen by a tiny, red-haired lad, Wade Riley, cast as the local bookworm.

He wears horn-rimmed glasses, a rust-colored corduroy suit, sounds somewhat like Mr. Bill and is very, very funny, not because he mugs, but because he's so painfully earnest in everything he does.

Alas, he and the other pluses just aren't enough. "Really Rosie" is really a bunch of nice kids in need of a good book.

What other critics said:

Frank Rich, The New York Times: "Something has gone wildly wrong with 'Really Rosie'... (it) seems to stand for almost everything that its author is against. While Mr. Sendak's books explode with fantastic unsentimental visions of children's deepest emotional anxieties, 'Really Rosie' is cute, silly and harmless to a fault. It's exactly the kind of bland kiddies' entertainment that Mr. Sendak has rightfully devoted a lifetime to wiping out."

Douglas Watt, The New York Daily News: "'Really Rosie'... turns out to be an hour-long kiddie show based on an animated cartoon TV special... Very likely the screen figures were more animated and entertaining than the live ones, for I discovered my attention span put to almost as severe a test as that of the youngsters in the audience who showed signs of restlessness."

'Baby Comes Home' airs tonight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Baby Comes Home," tonight on CBS, is a lovely little surprise — a pre-fab, made-for-TV entertainment that comes alive with rich characters and dialogue.

It doesn't vanish from your mind during the commercial breaks.

"Baby Comes Home" is the sequel to a TV movie from last year, "And Baby Makes Six," about a man and wife whose smooth middle-age is disrupted by the birth of a baby. The makings of Movie-of-the-Week mediocrity are there.

But the wife is one Colleen Dewhurst, the husband Warren Oates. You've got to like these folks.

Miss Dewhurst projects a husky elegance as the menopausal "new" mother suddenly (and uncharacteristically) gripped by a fear of age. She is driven first to beauty treatments, then finally to seclusion and near-agoraphobia.

"When you get a little older, my dear," she explains to a concerned young lovely, "and every one in that great magazine-television land out there is telling you to pick up your breasts, lift up your buttocks, be as perfect as those underwear ad ladies — then what happens? What happens is you begin to feel invisible... and I don't like it."

The sight of that Earth-mother Dewhurst persona — so large and steady — swirling in change-of-life craziness carries an impact that couldn't be written into the script. She is perfect.

Warren Oates is just fine as the steady-guy husband who was ready for a little adventure but gets a white-knuckle roller-coaster ride. And Mildred Dunnock as Dewhurst's peppery mother is a wholly satisfying entertainment unto herself.

The resolution is a heavy-handed contrivance unworthy of the unfolding it concludes. But you'll just be so taken by the characters you'll be willing to indulge a weak story.

Carson's gift is ancient HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Johnny Carson's gift from NBC commemorating his 18th anniversary as host of the "Tonight" show weighs 18 pounds, 10 ounces, and is 4.6 billion years old.

It's a specimen of an iron meteorite found on a farm in Southwest Africa in the 1930s. The date of the fall is unknown but is estimated to have been in the 18th or early 19th century.

Carson, an astronomy buff, said, "Just looking at it and knowing its age is like looking at the history of the world."

'Somewhere in Time' appeals more than 'Coast to Coast'

By the Associated Press

SOMEWHERE IN TIME is an appealing romantic fantasy about a young playwright who falls in love with an actress who starred in the theater 60 years before his time. He transports himself by self-hypnosis from the present to 1922, and they become lovers until time overtakes them. The plot is riddled with illogic, but it works much of the time. Credit is due to Jeannot Szwarc's attentive direction and the casting of Christopher Reeve as the young romantic and the exquisite Jane Seymour as the object of his ardor. The filmmakers obviously struggled with how to end the story; they didn't quite solve it. Although rated PG, the language and action are decorous throughout.

COAST TO COAST must have looked good on paper; it doesn't on film. The premise: Rich lady is stuck in loony-bin by scheming husband; she escapes and crosses country with on-the-lam truckdriver to wreak revenge on husband. The formula worked in "It Happened One Night"; it fails here because of the total lack of chemistry between Dyan Cannon and Robert Blake. She is too wiggy, he is too charmless.

BOSTON (AP) — Some people try to stay ahead of the economy by investing in precious metal. The rock music business is trying to beat a recession in record and concert sales by pouring its bucks into heavy metal.

The music industry has found that as mellow rock, disco and punk have come and gone, hard rock — or heavy metal — has remained a constant seller. At a time when record and concert ticket sales are down, the business is looking for a sure thing — and heavy metal seems to be it.

"Record companies didn't know where to invest their money," says Jane Berk, a publicist for CBS Records in New York. "Now, they're looking at sales and deciding to go with what's been selling consistently."

"Economically," says Ms. Berk, "heavy metal is the most feasible way to go." Mercury Records publicist Sherry Ring agrees, saying hard rock concerts "are just about the only ones that are selling."

Heavy metal is rock 'n' roll at its most primitive. It is booming jungle rhythms, screaming vocals, guitars distorted by electronic gadgetry — all amplified at Richter scale level.

The lyrics often carry a strong scent of male domination — rock's version of the jingle. "a man wants to smell like a man."

Led Zeppelin can be considered the granddaddy of the genre, which includes such stalwarts as Van Halen, Ted Nugent and Aerosmith.

A new hard rock movement in England, inspired by punk rockers to write shorter, more tightly constructed songs, has produced newcomers such as Def Leppard.

The typical audience at a heavy metal concert is made up mostly of males 16 to 25, who enjoy their music, like their cars, loud and fast.

"It sells best in the Southwest and Midwest, where kids work in factories and go to bars at night and mess up cars," says Ms. Berk of CBS. "They're not morally or politically issue-oriented... and this kind of music is liberating for them."

One radio programmer, John Sebastian of WCOZ-FM in Boston, says the fan has spoken — and the music business finally is listening.

In a bid for a larger share of the city's young audience, WCOZ hired Sebastian last spring and included more heavy metal in its format at the expense of new wave and other progressive music.

It worked. Over the summer, WCOZ registered one of the biggest jumps in popularity in Boston radio history, leaping from eighth to third place in the local radio ratings.

"The music business tends to be a little behind where the people are," says Sebastian. "I think they (the record companies) are finally realizing this is where the populace is."

'That's Incredible!' sparks human trait

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man's fingers are charred to blackened nubs. Another man's leg is grotesquely mangled by a speeding car. Ah, that's entertainment!

Viewers of ABC's "That's Incredible!" — and there are many, many of them — have been treated to above spectacles, and would have been able to see a fellow crashing into a concrete wall (puncturing his aorta and breaking his pelvis, thigh and lower leg) if only the "That's Incredible!" camera hadn't missed it.

Oh well, those fun-loving folks will cook up something else.

It comes as no great revelation that people are disposed to leering at the calamities that befall others. So what's wrong with capitalizing on that human trait?

"That's Incredible!" makes a mockery of television's lost promise to uplift, to broaden, even enlighten its viewers, a promise implying the acceptance of a certain responsibility that comes with commanding the public airwaves for the purpose of making a profit.

When "That's Incredible!" paid stuntman Stan Kruml to dash through a fiery tunnel or Steve Lewis to jump over two speeding cars (both ending tragically), ABC and the show's producers were appealing to that same ugly instinct that causes crowds to jeer a leaper on a ledge. That's exploitation.

In the very first show, there was an unintended self-parody that spoke directly to the heart of this sort of "entertainment":

"That's Incredible!" hired a child actor and let him loose on the streets of New York with instructions to look pitiful and pretend he was lost. New Yorker after New Yorker coldly passed the lost and tearful child, ignoring his simple plea for help. In the studio, the hosts lowered their voices and whispered sadly, "That's incredible!"

It didn't likely dawn on them that that same cruel capacity to countenance another's misery — or risk of misery — is precisely the trait for which this show aims. Or maybe it did dawn on them.

Certainly, not all of this show's segments end in tragedy. There was the lady who covered her face with bees, and the fellow who poured acid on his hand. What was the hook? Of course, the possibility of disaster.

When Kruml's tunnel run failed, the cameras zoomed in for a closeup of his gory hands. Why? So that children won't be tempted to try the stunt. Hmm.

Fran Tarkenton, who hosts this weekly weirdfest with Cathy Lee Crosby and John Davidson, whines about criticism of the show and defends it in a recent magazine article with this wild rationale: "Human triumph means risk; this show celebrates human triumph on all levels."

Incredible, no?

Your horoscope

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: There should be plenty of excitement in the year ahead, and you wouldn't have it any other way! Energetic and indomitable, you dread nothing except boredom and complacency. Responsibility may weigh heavily at times, but the decisions you make will increase the happiness of loved ones and associates alike. A money situation shows steady improvement, and career could get an unexpected boost following a colleague's retirement. Romance takes a dramatic turn in early summer of '81.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Noisy distractions could be part of the day's events. Agree to undertake only projects that you are capable of handling alone. Try to discover the underlying causes of mate's mood swings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Concentrate on routine assignments, and refuse to become involved in an office tug-of-war. New financial resolutions are apt to be successful.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An encounter with a former romantic partner could leave you thinking of what might have been. Avoid being drawn into a sentimental exchange.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A commitment to duty prevails although romance and pleasure may be uppermost in your thoughts. Someone you suspected of being dull turns out to be quite witty.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid controversial subjects at work or a relationship could be damaged. Love turns up when and where you least expect it!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Work becomes more challenging, and there is a possibility of a pay raise or promotion. A feeling of irritability will disappear by early afternoon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Collective enterprises will yield excellent returns. A domestic matter requires prompt attention. Too much partying or entertaining will leave loved ones feeling irritable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.

21): Avoid choosing sides in a family argument. Time will show who is right. Trust your intuition regarding an unusual offer, invitation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Those who adopt a mature, realistic approach today will make solid gains. It might be necessary to go outside of conventional channels to find extra cash. Check to be sure source is legal!

to see that would have been disastrous. East would win and cash three more heart tricks for a two-trick set.

Fortunately, declarer realized that a finesse would be foolish. If East held the king of diamonds guarded, the contract was doomed. But if diamonds were no worse than 3-1 and West held the king, the contract was safe without a finesse.

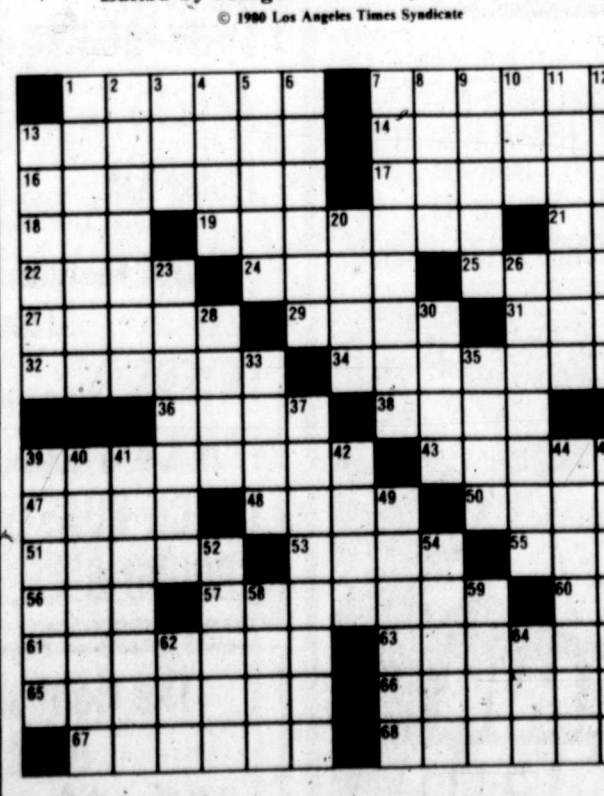

East was the danger hand, and he had to be kept off lead, if possible. So a trick four declarer led a diamond to the ace. He was pleasantly surprised to see the king drop from East. It was a simple matter to come back to his hand with the ace of spades and finesse for the jack of diamonds, thus scoring eleven tricks.

What if East followed to the ace of diamonds with a low card in the suit? Declarer simply returns to his hand with the ace of spades and leads another diamond. If West has the king, the suit will come home since the king of spades is in dummy as an entry. If East has the king, the contract could not have been made no matter how declarer played.

Harvest of dread, doubt

By the Associated Press

The autumn harvest is under way in most parts of the nation's breadbasket, but many Southwestern and Midwestern farmers are reaping little but dread and doubt.

The summer's drought — which caused 1,265 deaths and an overall damage figure of almost $20 billion, according to federal figures — will have a long-lasting effect on farmers, ranchers and foresters.

Specific figures on crop and livestock losses will not be available for several weeks, but individual state estimates total in the billions of dollars.

And in some states, the drought continues, threatening next year's crop and the farmers already being crushed by debt and high operating costs.

"It's going to be an extremely difficult year for farmers," said Sam Johnson, director of the Oklahoma State University Extension Service. "How many of them go out of business is going to depend on how friendly the bankers are."

Oklahoma's summer brought the worst combination of heat and drought there since the Dust Bowl of 1936. Oklahoma City had only 3.54 inches of rain in June, July and August; temperatures averaged 98.2 degrees, breaking the previous record average of 97.5 — set in 1936. Analysts say it will take farmers two to three productive years to offset 1980 losses. Jim Plaxico, Oklahoma director of the federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said 1980 losses were the worst in 10 years, with cotton and peanuts hit hardest and next year's grazing wheat "a total loss."

Cattle ranchers will suffer because the killing drought has "put the price of hay out of sight," said Wendell Bowers of the extension service.

In Texas, where 190 of 254 counties were declared drought disaster areas and crop and livestock losses are estimated at $1.5 billion, experts say any coming rains will be too late to help the 1980 crop.

"It's real easy to assume the drought's over, but it doesn't end the minute you get your first rain," said Pat Sultenfuss of the Farmers Home Administration. "We're going to need more rain — a lot more rain really — to save the state and break the drought."

Winter crops and forage are dying in the ground or refusing to sprout, but he said Texas could "still make a 1981 crop if we get the right amount of rain."

Crop losses are nearing $750 million in Kansas, with corn, sorghum and soybeans hardest hit. In mid-August, state officials estimated losses at 85 percent from lack of rain alone, excluding damage from disease or insects.

In neighboring Missouri, where 8-

227 farmers had requested aid by the end of August, the drought did an estimated $1.5 billion damage.

"This has always been next-year country, but we're running out of next years," said George Stensland, a northeastern Montana farmer whose wheat crop yielded only four bushels per acre this year.

The drought battered eastern Montana's wheat belt, damaging the crops of 95 percent of the farmers and wiping many of them out financially. State officials estimate losses around $200 million.

The drought cut North Dakota grain production by 30 percent, an estimated loss of $1.3 billion. Then, in July and August, portions of the state got 30 inches of rain — twice the average — that made the soil so soggy that 30 percent of what crop is left can't be harvested.

"It's getting kind of tough," said Munich, N.D., farmer Norman Wirth. "Prices are up, but if you don't have anything to sell it doesn't matter if it's $100 a bushel."

Nebraska officials said 90 of the state's 93 counties were affected by the drought, and losses could total $1.5 billion. Corn suffered most and hay was severely reduced, forcing some stockmen to use up their reserves instead of saving it for the coming winter.

Losses to poultry and agriculture in Arkansas are estimated at $1 billion.

The carcass of a Texas Longhorn, a victim of the summer's drought, lies on parched ground on the Light Cattle Co. Ranch in South Texas. The summer's drought caused 1,265 human deaths and overall damage of nearly $20 billion, according to federal figures. (AP Laserphoto)

Grain talks may lead to accord with as many as 15 countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is considering launching international trade talks that could lead to grain agreements with as many as 15 countries.

Whether the talks go ahead, however, may depend on whether the United States renews an agreement with the Soviet Union.

"We have to have them (the Russians) involved in these discussions," Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Wednesday. "They're the world's largest wheat producer."

He told reporters that it may be in the national interest to renew the agreement with the Soviets in order "to keep a bridge" on their import practices.

Bergland said the Soviets have been "predators" in world markets, following an erratic course that deprives grain farmers of assurances there will be purchasers for their crops.

He said the five-year U.S. grain trade agreement with the Soviets, which is about to expire, was signed as a steadying influence on the Russians.

The United States is supplying 8 million metric tons of grain to the Soviets this year under the agreement. That is apart from the 17 million tons in grain sales that were suspended by President Carter last January after the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

Bergland said he was not worried that the possible international agreements would deprive U.S. cattlemen of adequate feed.

But he said he is concerned that renewing the grain agreement with Russia, and making arrangements with other countries, might deprive poor nations of grain when there are shortages.

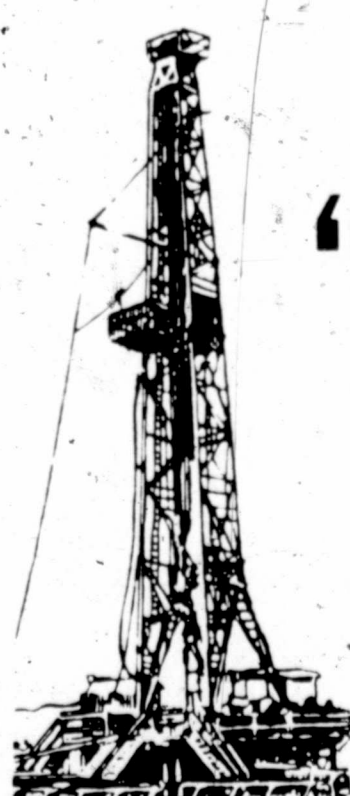

Bergland also said he expects a grain trade agreement soon will be signed with China, possibly this week or next. Agriculture Department negotiators are in Peking working out the details.

Bergland said he hoped the agreement would be a forerunner of major expansion of trade with the Chinese that could make them the United States' leading trading partner.

The United States and China are on the verge of signing a three-year agreement that American officials say would commit China to buy between 6 million and 9 million metric tons of U.S. grain a year through 1983.

The negotiations reportedly have been snagged over Chinese concerns that the United States might set up new official ties with Taiwan.

China has purchased an average of between 4 million and 6 million metric tons of U.S. grain annually in recent years. The pending agreement would assure there would be added sales to China and could help blunt the impact on U.S. farmers of the partial embargo on Soviet sales. A metric ton is 2,204 pounds.

Ex-DPS captain awarded damages in 'conspiracy'

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin federal jury has awarded $989,887 in damages to a Department of Public Safety captain who claims he was a victim of a department conspiracy.

After seven hours of deliberation Wednesday night, jurors awarded DPS Capt. Bill Bessent the $14,000 he had asked for, plus an additional $475,887 in punitive damages.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton said he will enter judgement the first week of November. The judge may adjust the amount of the award at his own discretion.

An attorney for Bessent says the officer's lawsuit gives a glimpse of "the seamy side" of the state police force.

"Something's been happening out there (at DPS) for years... Now the cover's been peeled back," said Broadus Spivey. "We have seen the seamy side that never should have existed in a department in this state."

Assistant Attorney General Greg Wilson, representing the defendants, said damages ordered by the jury will come out of the defendants' pockets. He said there is no insurance or state funds to cover officials whom a jury decides acted in bad faith.

Bessent, fired in 1975 but later re-hired for another job, filed a civil rights suit against 11 current and former DPS officials and employees.

Bessent had a top-level narcotics investigation job when he was fired after DPS officials decided he covered up a 1972 Dallas incident. A Dallas man allegedly was harassed, beaten and robbed by four drunken undercover agents who worked under Bessent's supervision.

Former DPS Director Wilson Speir, a defendant in the suit, re-hired Bessent about 10 months after he was fired. However, Bessent testified he was assigned to a job for which he was untrained.

The defendants claimed Bessent was fired for covering up the 1972 Dallas incident. The assistant attorney general said Bessent "really was a bad guy" and had a drinking problem.

Bessent claimed he did not cover up the incident. He also alleged he was denied a proper hearing before his dismissal. Spivey argued Bessent's career as a narcotics investigator was ruined by the "rivalry, jealousy and individual pettiness" within the DPS power structure.

"I've never seen such misuse of authority and power," Spivey said.

Wilson, however, said Bessent "covered up the incident and now he's suing the people who found out and got rid of him because he was a bad apple," Wilson said. He said Bessent met with the four agents involved in the alleged beating and helped them work up a "cover story."

The jurors also heard conflicting versions of Bessent's reputation. Several witnesses portrayed him as a top-notch investigator with a solid record for getting convictions.

According to testimony in the trial, four drunken state undercover narcotics agents beat up a hitchhiker and used a dull knife to cut his hair.

Speir testified Tuesday he believed Bessent did not handle the Dallas incident properly.

"I felt he had not made a complete or factual report," Speir said. Several witnesses testified that Bessent had a bad record, aside from the 1972 incident.

"His reputation was that he let his people run wild while he stayed drunk all the time," said Dallas Deputy Police Chief Jack Davis, who met with Bessent the day after the four agents were arrested by Dallas police. Bessent was then in charge of DPS narcotics investigations in Dallas.

The details of the alleged assault and robbery were in a deposition from Terry Davis, one of the agents in the car where the incident began. None of the four is now with DPS. Davis' deposition was read into the record.

He said Bessent orchestrated an effort to cover up the incident by having all four men file similar reports. Davis said the hitchhiker was picked up around 1 a.m. on a Dallas street. The agents, who had been drinking, asked the man if he knew where they could buy drugs.

The hitchhiker said he had mescaline with him, the deposition said. A scuffle broke out in the car, with one of the agents "straddling" the hitchhiker and using a knife to cut his hair, Davis said.

The hitchhiker filed a complaint against the men, who were later stopped by a Dallas policeman. Dave Clark, a Dallas police investigator, and Leland Cooley, a DPS trooper in Dallas, both testified the agents cursed the Dallas officers and appeared drunk.

Human hair was found in the agents' car, according to the testimony.

However, earlier in the trial, Bessent's lawyer read a later deposition from Terry Davis. It said his initial statements were coerced by DPS officials.

Policemen liable in teen's death

Court orders former Houston officers to pay $1.4 million

HOUSTON (AP) — The City of Houston and two former police officers have been held liable in the 1977 shooting death of a Louisiana teenager and ordered to pay $1.4 million in punitive damages.

A federal court jury returned the verdict Wednesday in the civil suit filed by the parents of Randall Alan Webster, John and Billie Webster, of Shreveport, had asked for $2 million.

"It was not the money," said the victim's father after the jury's decision was announced. "We are just happy that the truth has been brought to light. I knew it was murder — cold-blooded murder. It could not have been an accident."

Webster, 17, was shot as he climbed from a stolen van following a high-speed chase with police in February 1977. Officers at the scene testified they placed a "throw-down gun" next to Webster's body to make it appear the victim was armed.

An investigation later traced the weapon to the Houston Police Department property room.

In awarding the damages, the jury ordered former officer Danny H. Mays to pay $1 million, the city and former officer John Thomas Olin to pay $200,000 each.

The jury also ruled the city and the two officers must pay the victim's parents $2,548 in funeral and medical expenses.

Mays, who was accused of shooting Webster, and Olin were convicted in 1978 on federal charges of perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice in the alleged cover-up.

Another former officer named in the suit, Norval Wayne Holloway Jr., was exonerated by the jury.

Attorney James Gardner of the Houston Legal Department said the city probably would appeal the judgment to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, claiming municipalities cannot be held liable for punitive damages.

Raymond J. Barone, foreman of the six-member panel, argued the city was responsible for the actions of its employees.

"We wanted to make an award of some kind against the city," Barone said. "We wanted the city to look into the police department."

He said jurors were "amazed" at testimony from officers who said at least 75 percent of the city's police officers in 1977 had throw-down guns or knew where they could get them.

"We are citizens too," Barone said. "We were amazed by the numbers. The officers do have a rules manual they have to sign for at the academy. But, on the other hand, we understand that the city can't go out there and look in every car."

Official labeled 'disruptive'

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County judge has labeled County Auditor S. Grady Fullerton as "uncooperative" and "irrational" and claimed the official's behavior could "disrupt all of county government from street repairs to the courts."

Judge Jon Lindsay's comments came in a three-page letter mailed Oct. 9 to the County's 48 state district judges who appointed Fullerton to the post.

Fullerton is not working "toward... an efficient county government. His primary goal seems to be increased power and authority over the administration policies of Commissioners' Court," the judge said.

Houston policeman indicted in shooting of gay activist

HOUSTON (AP) — A 25-year-old Houston police officer who allegedly acted while under the influence of alcohol has been charged with negligent homicide in the June 28 shooting death of a Gay Political Caucus leader.

Kevin McCoy, 25, was indicted Wednesday on a misdemeanor charge alleging he acted negligently while arresting Fred Paez during Gay Pride Week here.

Grand jurors alleged

McCoy was under the influence of alcohol when he "placed a loaded, cocked pistol against the head of Paez and as a result the pistol discharged, killing Paez."

The shooting occurred during Gay Pride Week and inspired a candlelight march to protest alleged police injustices to the homosexual community.

The charge against McCoy, which carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine, automatically is tried as a felony when a public official is involved.

Police Chief B.K. Johnson said he would not make a decision on McCoy's duty status until he sees a copy of the indictment.

Velma Lee Copeland-Barnett of Midland, left, presents a certificate of appreciation to Cal White of Aquila Aero Aviation at a meeting of the Ninety-Nines, an international organization of licensed women pilots. In photo at right, Lt. James Rhoades of the Texas Dept. of Public Safety addressed the group on landing aircraft on public highways and private property.

Women's pilot group presents award

Lt. James Rhoades of the Texas Department of Public Safety in Midland discussed the state law as related to the aviation pilot at a meeting of the High Sky Chapter of The Ninety-Nines Inc, an international organization of licensed women pilots.

Rhoades explained that when an aircraft lands on a road, it becomes a 'vehicle' and under the laws of 'vehicles' as defined in the civil statutes.

He added that other laws say no person may take off, land or maneuver an aircraft, including heavier and air and lighter than air, on a public highway, road or street except when it is necessary to prevent serious injury to a person or property. However, nothing herein shall prohibit any operation of said aircraft on a public highway, road, or street during or within a reasonable time after an emergency.

"In regards to landing on a public highway, it's not even safe for cars," Rhoades commented, "and landing on private property without prior permission is trespassing."

He emphasized the Department's code of safety, "Courtesy, Service and Protection."

Velma Lee Copeland Barnett, chairwoman of the High Sky Chapter, presented a chapter certificate of appreciation to Cal White of Aquila Aero Aviation in Midland.

He received the award for his interest in aviation and participation in the organization's activities.

Little changes in boots

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Boots, a cowboy's best friend besides his horse and six-shooter, have stridden in a century from the high-plains drifter to high-stepping fashion.

Except for changes in manufacturing, the Western boot is about the same as it was a hundred years ago — pointed toes that gave the cowboy a better foothold in his stirrup, the high heel to keep it in place and the calf-high upper to prevent chafing against the saddle.

The popularity of the Urban Cowboy, coupled with increased acceptance of country music and Western dress have made the cowboy boot a big seller throughout the world.

Ironically, about three-fourths of the Western boots sold throughout the world come from plants within a hundred miles of the country-music capital of Nashville.

Five of the world's eight largest boot producers are in the area. Employing 6,500 workers, these companies last year made about 11 million pairs of Western boots in all sizes, shapes and colors, ranging in price from $75 up to hand-tooled boots with fancy stitching and designs for $2,500.

The most conservative estimates by industry insiders put Western boot sales last year between $750 million and $1 billion.

"It's an evolution, not revolution," says Harry Vise, president of Texas Boot Co., of Lebanon. Last year, the company produced 2.5 million boots, making it the world's second largest manufacturer of Western boots.

The leader in the Western boot business is Acem, based in Clarksville, Tenn., which last year sold about 6 million pairs of boots.

Robert Turrentine, who heads Acem, says Western boots are in large measure an outgrowth of country music and the boots have become a part of the casual life style that includes jeans and wide-brimmed cowboy hats.

"The Western boot has a unique history. It's one of the few truly American claims and it is part of the Western tradition," Turrentine said.

He said a massive advertising campaign had created an awareness of the rugged image which goes with the boots.

Turrentine said demand for Western boots had risen at a time when 52 percent of all footwear purchased in the U.S. is imported. Western boots now grace the shelves of such high-fashion stores as Saks Fifth Avenue and Neiman-Marcus.

Motherhood turning point in feminist author's life

By CAROL DEEGAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Novelist Erica Jong says motherhood has been a turning point in her life, just as it was for the female hero of her latest book, "Fanny."

"Fanny" is the story of Fanny Hackabout-Jones, a young 18th-century woman — in a sense, the female equivalent of Tom Jones — who writes of her adventures as a highway robber, initiated witch, female pirate and strumpet, for her daughter, Belinda.

"I wanted 'Fanny' very much to be a book about how a woman can become a hero of her own life and how a woman can become courageous. That was what I was really dealing with, and motherhood as a turning point in a woman's life, in terms of her own courage to seize her own life," Ms. Jong said.

"What matters to me most about 'Fanny' is the female hero. That idea seems to me the most important thing about the book ... because I think that's what makes the book different and new. I mean, all the other stuff aside, that's what's important to me, sword in hand, baby on hip, she ventured into the world."

Ms. Jong, the author of the best-selling "Fear of Flying," is married to writer Jonathan Fast. They are the parents of a daughter, Molly Miranda Jong-Fast, who was born while Ms. Jong was writing "Fanny."

"I began work on Fanny in 1976 in the form of a book of advice from a mother to a daughter," Ms. Jong said. "By December 1977 I had written about 250 pages and that was when I discovered that I myself was pregnant. By then the novel had clearly taken shape as a memoir written by Fanny for her daughter, Belinda."

Ms. Jong said she had perceived motherhood with some anxieties.

"But, in fact, I think it is a tremendously strengthening thing for a woman to become a mother, and to become the mother of a daughter is very exciting for a feminist," she said.

"I found it very affirming ... and I found it so strengthening. I feel that if I get a vicious review now, I go home now and say, 'I've produced this wonderful baby, this daughter.'"

Ms. Jong said she feared her pregnancy would hinder her creative drive, but, instead, discovered it made her feel extremely productive.

"I was very driven when I was writing this book. I was doing the book and having Molly and taking care of Molly, but I felt, on some level with 'Fanny,' that it was the book I was born to write," she said.

"I had such a strong belief in it, even all the crazy, I mean, risks that I took in writing a novel in this kind of language. I was afraid for a long time I would turn it in to my publisher and they would say, rewrite it in modern English, but, to their credit, they never did."

Ms. Jong wrote the book in the style of the 18th century, capitalizing nouns, catch-phrases and certain words for emphasis. A sentence from "Fanny" reads, for example: "Like most Young Girls, when I look at myself in the Glass, I saw nought but my own grievous faults; yet I was call'd a beauty so oft' that I came to understand the World regarded me thus."

Ms. Jong said she worried about her readers' reaction to this 18th-century style.

"I just want people to know when they pick it up in the bookstore, I don't want them to be scared off by it, but I made this decision many years back to write the book that way. When I read historical novels, it always seemed incongruous to me that the characters were speaking modern English, because part of the joy for me was the pleasure of the language and the richness of the language," she said.

Ms. Jong said she became interested in 18th-century literature as an graduate at Barnard College. She received a master's degree in 18th-century literature from Columbia University.

Currently, Ms. Jong is working on an illustrated book about witchcraft. She's not certain what her next novel will be — perhaps about the music business or maybe mystery, written from "a woman's point of view."

"I want to be like Agatha Christie or Graham Greene or somebody like that who goes on writing and when I'm 80, I want to have 80 books after my name," Ms. Jong said. She added, "Well, not 80, but 40, and that, to me, is class."

"Fanny" is published by New American Library.

Women earning less, says study

Although women earned nearly 64 cents for every dollar earned by men in 1955, today they earn just 59 cents for every dollar men earn, according to a current Family Circle magazine article.

The magazine points out that the median pay for full-time women workers in the United States is $9.39 a year; for full-time men, it's $15,730.

HINTS FROM HELOISE
She wouldn't take no for answer

DEAR HELOISE:
 When my refrigerator stopped freezing and food and milk began to spoil in the refrigerator part, I frantically called several repair places describing the symptoms. They all told me, since my refrigerator was 6 years old, it would have to be replaced, not repaired. Ever hear that line before?

Well, this gal's been around awhile, and I remember the days when appliances worked for years with no problems. So, with nothing to lose and everything to gain (the price of a new refrigerator!), I unplugged the refrigerator, pulled it out from the wall, thoroughly vacuumed every inch I could get to, being sure to get around the motor, the condenser and any other exposed parts that could collect dust.

Would you believe my refrigerator is humming a beautiful tune and cooling to beat the band!

When I defrost it now, I allow it to completely defrost—at least 24 hours. Ice can build up between the walls of the refrigerator, and allowing only the visible ice to melt was causing the motor to work overtime. Ever had to replace a motor? Ouch!

Just wanted to let you know this in hopes of saving someone else some hard-earned money. — Mrs. S.S.

DEAR ABBY

'First-class brat' needs first-class love

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old son recently married a girl who was previously married and has a 4-year-old girl. Abby, the little girl is a first-class brat!

We realize that part of the reason for the child's behavior stems from the fact that she has been dumped here, there and everywhere and has had no consistent discipline. Since she is only 4, we hope that with some effort this can be remedied.

DEAR LOOKING: Please have her call you "Grandma and Grandpa." A child who has been dumped here, there and everywhere must be starved for love, acceptance, kindness and understanding.

* You have a perfect opportunity to make her feel loved and wanted. Please don't blow it by labeling her a "brat" and conditioning your love on her behavior. Smother her with love and kindness, and you will never have to worry about being "embarrassed."

DEAR ABBY: Last May you printed the poem titled, "Heaven's Very Special Child," stating that it had been sent to you by a Tucson reader, and the author was unknown.

Abby, My wife is the author of that poem. She had it copyrighted in 1956. I feel that a correction is in order as several people are now claiming ownership.

We are the parents of five daughters—one is retarded. We will be pleased to send a copy of the poem to anyone who requests it and sends return postage to us at Box 21, Hatboro, Pa. 19040.

Thank you.—THE REV. JOHN A. MASSIMILLA

DEAR REV. MASSIMILLA: It is with apologies and pleasure that I reprint the lovely poem together with your kind letter:

HEAVEN'S VERY SPECIAL CHILD
 By EDNA MASSIMILLA

A meeting was held quite far from earth
 "It's time again for another birth,"
 Said the Angels to the Lord above,
 "This special child will need much love."
 His progress may seem very slow
 Accomplishments he may not show
 And he'll require extra care

From the folks he meets way down there.
 He may not run or laugh or play
 His thoughts may seem quite far away
 In many ways he won't adapt

And he'll be known as handicapped.
 So let's be careful where he's sent
 We want his life to be content
 Please, Lord, find the parents who Will do a special job for You.
 They will not realize right away
 The leading role they're asked to play
 But with this child sent from above
 Come stronger faith and richer love.
 And soon they'll know the privilege given
 In caring for this gift from heaven.
 Their precious charge, so meek and mild,
 Is heaven's very special child.

Videotape has become useful in surgery

ELMWOOD PARK, N.J. (AP) — "Sponge, scalpel, videotape" may become a familiar doctor's phrase of the 1980s as video continues to expand its role in training medical students and communicating information to patients.

From Massachusetts to California, videotape has become an established time and money saver in a variety of health-care facilities, reports Dan Roberts, national sales manager of professional video for a major manufacturer of video products.

"Video is a perfect tool for health care, where time is precious, the training function is almost constant and budgets are always tight," says Roberts, of the US JVC Corp. in Elmwood Park.

At the Kaiser Permanente non-profit "health maintenance" organization in Oakland, Calif., the Audio Visual Center services many separate facilities in northern California. Corporate communications and professional training programs are made with an Electronic News Gathering videotape system. A tape gives the board of directors an up-to-the-minute tour of 20 medical facility sites scattered across 4,500 square miles.

Ring Nursing Homes in Springfield, Mass., uses video cameras, players and editing systems for training personnel. Taping staff lectures makes them available any time, instead of just once.

At Tucson General Hospital in Arizona, video equipment is used to play back medical programs for patients. With an automated system, patients can watch a tape of an operation they are about to undergo or choose a musical program for relaxation before surgery.

The University of Pittsburgh's Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic has an audio-visual department that produces more than 500 hours of videotape. Video crews routinely tape faculty presentations, edit them and show them to students the following day.

What's cooking?

Mrs. Max Levin has been involved in many groups and activities during her 27 years in Midland and is known for her gracious entertaining, and delicious cooking.

Among the groups she belongs to are the Temple Beth-el and Sisterhood, Duplicate Bridge Club, Midland Symphony Guild, Midland Women's Tennis Association and Heritage Study Group.

In addition, she has served as president of several of these organizations.

She has worked for Action Line Fish and was the driver for the State Blind Representative. She is also an artist.

She and her husband, Max, a geologist, have four grown sons. Mrs. Levin said that her sons were the reason she became involved in gourmet cooking. She loves to entertain.

Below are several of her favorite recipes.

Slice thin 4 medium potatoes, arrange half the slices over the onions; salt and pepper and cover with 2 tablespoons melted butter. Slice 2 green peppers, cut in 1/4 inch strips and arrange over the potatoes. Sprinkle 1/2 cup raw rice. Continue to layer prepared vegetables with salt, pepper, garlic salt and butter, finishing with tomatoes. Pour 1/2 cup water in pan, cover with foil and bake for 1 hour at 350 F. Remove foil and take one egg slightly beaten with one cup light cream and pour over vegetables. Sprinkle vegetables with 2 cups grated cheese (cheddar) and bread crumbs mixed (tossed with 1/3 cup butter). Bake until the cheese is melted, 20 minutes. This can be made in advance except for the last 20 minutes. It is a vegetable and starch combined and cuts in squares. It is lovely to serve.

Anyone mind being called Sweetie Pie?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE AP Food Editor

If you have always thought of desserts as merely something good to eat, you may be interested to know that a couple of scholarly authors recently disclosed that the names of a number of them are used in a special way.

I learned of this discovery from a quarterly publication called Verbatim, devoted to articles, anecdotes, squibs, letters and other materials concerned with the history and use of language.

In the summer 1980 issue of Verbatim there is a short article by Joan Sill Cummins and Mark Sill Cummins called "Edible Endearments."

When I came on it, I expected the subject would be treated rather lightly, but I was wrong.

The Cummins' introduction to "Edible Endearments" is written in dead serious style: "A curious feature of the English language is the frequent utilization of edible terms as endearments. The idiom supports this pattern in its use of variations of 'I'm going to eat you up.'"

When the authors asked their students and friends to list food terms used as affectionate words the compilation contained the names of a good many desserts plus words signifying sweets:

Angel Cake; Cupcake; Gumdrops; Honey Bunch; Muffin; Plumdrop; Sugar Dumpling; Sweets; Sweetie Pie; Sweetums; Baby Cakes; Cookie; Cutie Pie; Honey; Honey Child; Sugar; Sugar Plum; Sweet Cakes; Sweet Potato; Bon Bon; Cream Puff; Dumpling; Honey Bun; Hun (Honey); Marshmallow; Peaches; Sugar Bear; Sweeties, and Sweet Thing.

The non-sweet food terms listed as "edible endearments" are: Cabbage; Lamb Chop; Lambie Pie; Munchkin; Pumpkin; and Punkin.

In explanation of this amusing phenomenon the Cummins write:

"It is ... difficult to account for the paramount frequency of food-related endearments. Although nutrients are an essential human need, it is quite startling to note that almost none of these food terms refers to foods which are, in fact, essential: words in the food category are associated with desserts or culinary treats — chiefly luxuries. Indeed, one of the most frequent grammatical forms used affectionately — pie — transforms almost any word into an edible endearment. Thus are dearest ones reduced to sugary carbohydrates."

Make treat with happy faces

Individual pineapple turnovers with "happy faces" make a special Halloween treat, whether enjoyed at breakfast, lunch, supper or as a party snack.

"Pineapple Happy Faces" can be eaten out of hand, or topped with a bit of whipped cream or ice cream as dessert. Youngsters love their bright, cut-out faces and surprise filling.

Start with a whole wheat pastry, cut into rounds. Top half the rounds with well drained slices of canned pineapple and streusel crumbs. Cover with second pastry round with face cut-out. Seal and bake until golden. Delicious warm or cold.

Pour apple cider over crushed ice for a frosty drink to go with these pastries and watch the "happy faces" at your house this Halloween.

PINEAPPLE HAPPY FACES

- 1 (1 lb., 4 oz.) can sliced pineapple
- Streusel Crumbs
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup milk

Drain pineapple well. Prepare Streusel Crumbs. Combine flours and salt. Cut in shortening until particles are size of peas. Sprinkle with milk, adding just enough to make a stiff dough. Divide dough in half, then each half into 10 equal size pieces. Round each up, and roll to 4 inch circles. Cut faces from 10 rounds. Place remaining rounds on ungreased baking sheet. Top each with a pineapple slice and sprinkle with Streusel Crumbs. Moisten edges of pastry and top with remaining rounds. Seal edges with tines of fork. Bake below center of hot oven (400 degrees F) 20 minutes; or until golden brown. Remove to wire rack to cool. Makes 10 pastries.

Streusel Crumbs: Combine 1/3 cup each sifted all purpose flour and brown sugar, packed, and 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon. Cut in 3 tablespoons butter or margarine until particles are size of peas. Makes 1 cup.

Cooking with eggplant economical

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

As appealing to look at as it is to savor, the deep purple, glossy eggplant was first cultivated in this country as an ornamental. A star-shaped flower amidst verdant greens gives way to a voluptuous purple "berry," as it is botanically escried.

The recipes to follow are some of my favorites.

SESAME EGGPLANT GRATIN

- 1 large eggplant
- 1 clove garlic, put through a press
- Three-fourths tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 3 tbs. sour cream
- Three-fourths cup milk or light cream
- 2 eggs
- Pinch of cayenne pepper
- Lots of freshly-ground black pepper

- 2 and one-half tbs. toasted sesame seeds
- One-half cup fresh wholewheat bread crumbs
- One-half cup cheddar cheese

Wipe the eggplant and prick it with a fork in several places. Place it on the rack in a 375 degree oven for 45 minutes to an hour, until the eggplant is soft and "pooped." Cool enough to handle, then scrape out all the pulp and discard the skin. Puree the pulp and all but the last three ingredients in a blender or food processor. Stir in half the toasted sesame seeds. Pour the mixture into a long and shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with the crumbs, the remaining sesame seeds, and then the cheese. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes in a 350-degree oven and serve hot.

STUFFED BAKED EGGPLANT

- 3 small eggplants

- 5 tbs. olive oil
- 2 cloves minced garlic
- 2 onions
- 2 red bell peppers
- One-fourth cup chopped fresh parsley
- 1 tsp. basil
- One-fourth tsp. tarragon
- One-fourth tsp. oregano
- 3 to 4 tomatoes
- Salt and freshly-ground black pepper and dice into small chunks. Heat the oil in a large skillet. Sauté onions, garlic, chopped bell peppers and spices until onions are clear. Add eggplant cubes and saute a few minutes longer, then add parsley, tomatoes, salt and pepper, and continue to cook for a few minutes. Remove from heat. Mix in one-fourth cup Parmesan cheese, and stuff the shells with the mixture. For the topping, combine walnuts, wheat germ, and grated Parmesan and moisten with the melted butter and enough milk to make a soft paste. Spread a thin layer of the mixture on top of each well-stuffed eggplant. Bake the eggplants in an oiled dish for about 40 minutes at 350 degrees, and serve hot.

Slice each eggplant in half lengthwise. Bake them face-down on an oiled tray for 15 minutes in a 400-degree oven. Remove and cool slightly; scoop out pulp to within one-fourth inch of skin

LEE YOUTH CENTER CHATTER MHS homecoming weekend here

By KATHY WOOD, VICKI MADDEN and JULIE GUYTON

Homecoming weekend finally has arrived. The excitement hopefully will reach a peak in a victory over the Abilene Eagles Friday night.

The game will be at Memorial Stadium at 8 p.m. At halftime, there will be a parade of the sweethearts and what everyone has been waiting for — the crowning of the 1980-81 Homecoming Queen.

The five girls who anxiously await the announcement are Beth Black, Gerri Gilliland, Laura Hickey, Jana Jons and Amy Raney. Good luck!

On Saturday night, the Youth Center will be the setting for the homecoming dance. The dance will be from 8 p.m. to midnight and the charge is $5 per couple or $3 for stags. The dress is semi-formal. That means coat and tie for guys and a dress for girls. The band "Shade Tree," of Dallas, will provide the tunes.

A reminder to all Student Council, Junior Council and 100 Club members, please be at the Youth Center at 9 a.m. Saturday to help put up decorations for the dance. The dance can really be pretty with your help.

The JV is making its own way with an undefeated record. The players are worth watching and need your support, so come out and cheer them on. They play Abilene in Abilene on Saturday.

The Student Council would like to thank all those who voted on the voting machines in the last two elections. It is a great experience for high school students who will soon be voting on even greater decisions. Remember 18-year-olds can vote in the presidential election this year.

Rasco's News: The Junior Council homecoming sweetheart for this year is Julie Guyton. Her escort will be Daniel Tighe. The 100 Club sweetheart is Tammy Freitage and Kelly Brooks is her escort.

The new Youth Center 100 Club officers for 1980-81 are Kelly Brooks, president, and Rebecca Caton, vice president. The 100 Club should really be fun with such great leaders.

Junior Rotarians for this week are Wally Kleine and Patricia Murphey. Congratulations.

For any juniors interested in being an AFS foreign exchange student this summer, there will be a meeting at 4 p.m. Sunday.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

No two children are exactly alike

Dear Dr. Solomon: My 3-year-old granddaughter was able to speak when she was only 10 months old. However, my 1-year-old grandson doesn't seem to be trying to speak at all. The other day, I called his name and he did not respond, and I'm beginning to wonder if he may be having trouble hearing. What would you recommend? There's no history of hearing problems on either side of the family. — Mrs. A. L.

Dear Mrs. L.: While the possibility of some hearing loss cannot be ruled out without further evaluation, it is important to bear in mind that no two children are alike. Not every child is able to speak at one year of age, and it is not unusual for brothers and sisters to develop at completely different rates of speed. Moreover, the one who walks and talks and generally seems to develop more quickly is not necessarily the one who will be superior once the children are fully grown and matured. Children cannot be programmed to follow a specific schedule; they must be permitted to grow at their own pace.

On the other hand, the possibility of a hearing loss in a child who does not respond when his name is called should not be ignored. This is particularly true when the youngster gives other evidence of defective hearing, such as slowness and inattention. The lack of hearing problems does not rule out the possibility of some defect.

Hearing difficulties can stem from a variety of causes. A conductive impairment may be caused by a blockage of the passage or air or injury to the mechanical movement of the outer or middle ear. If the condition is subject to treatment — as, for example, in the case of infection, wax buildup, physical blockage or rupture of the eardrum — the person should eventually be able to hear normally once more.

In the case of nerve impairment, however, treatment usually has no value; the hearing loss stays the same or worsens, but seldom improves. The usual causes of nerve impairment are birth defects, high fever, exposure to high levels of noise, drugs, head injuries and tumors. Of course, the natural aging process also may result in impaired hearing.

If a child does have a hearing problem, it is important that he or she receive help as soon as possible. Early detection and treatment can help even very young children through the use of hearing aids and speech therapy devices. It is not unusual for a child who is believed to be retarded simply to be suffering from a hearing loss.

What I have discussed are only possibilities and may not apply in your grandson's case. The person best equipped to make a determination of the existence of a hearing loss is a physician who specializes in such problems. I suggest that your grandson be seen by his pediatrician and then, if it is considered advisable, by a qualified ear specialist. If there is a problem, the doctor will be able to advise whether its correction requires surgery, medication or simply the use of a hearing aid.

Oklahoman says he knows where to find Santa Maria

DRUMRIGHT, Okla. (AP) — An Oklahoma man says he can provide the answers to two long-puzzling questions: where was Columbus' first settlement after he landed in the New World and what happened to his ship, the Santa Maria.

Bill DeGeer, executive director for the Central Tech Foundation, on Monday said he has spent 10 or 12 years researching Columbus' trip in 1492 and hopes to launch an expedition to Haiti by 1992 — the 500th anniversary of the landing.

"I do feel I know where the Santa Maria is and where the first settlement was, and why it was not found (in an earlier exploration)," DeGeer said.

DEGEER, a retired employer of The Williams Cos., said the last major "serious" research was in 1939, and there is more information available now. "I believe an excellent case could be made as to where they went wrong," he said in an interview. DeGeer hopes to finance a $1 million expedition to Haiti, through Navidad Project, Ltd., an Oklahoma corporation. Twenty-five tax shelter plans costing $40,000 each will be offered for sale.

Joining DeGeer in the proposal are Warren Osborne and his wife, of Norman. They would produce at least 100 pieces of art from the exploration as their part of the proposal, DeGeer said.

His organization would include interests of the Roman Catholic Church, the Jewish community and Indian tribes. Catholics would be included because they have important records in Spain and Italy. He said many people believe Columbus was a converted Jew.

MOVIE AND book rights would be held by the corporation.

DeGeer said the agreement would be with the governments of Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Indian tribes involved in Haiti trace back to the Arawaks and Caribes who lived in the islands in 1492.

DeGeer's research includes considerable time in Europe, which is the only place original records can be found.

DeGeer says the landing site of Columbus is near Cape Haiten along the northern coast of Haiti.

The Santa Maria, Columbus' ship, was sunk by cannon fire after its timbers were used to build the first settlement structures, he says.

The location is about 700 miles from the Bahama Islands where two divers say they may have found remains of the Pinta, another of Columbus' three ships.

DeGeer, while not challenging their statements, questioned two bits of evidence — an iron cannonball that is supposed to be vintage 15th-century and iron ballast from the ship.

Laura Klaus, instructor, will be teaching three classes of belly dancing with beginners on Tuesday evening, 6:30-7:30; intermediates on Wednesday evening, 6:45-7:45; and advanced Wednesday evening, 7:45-8:45. Belly dancing is a mid-Eastern dance which is an effective and highly acclaimed means of losing weight and toning muscles. Classes begin the week of Oct. 27. Emelia Arnevas, a participant in the Casa de Amigos home work program, assembles key chains for Teraco. Casa de Amigos is one of 18 agencies supported by the United Way.

Casa de Amigos provides income

Having a family to feed, house and clothe and being unable to work can be quite frightening. For Emelia Arenivas, the answer to providing an income for herself and her children after her divorce did not come easily.

Emelia is disabled and speaks very little English, but she takes care of her family and their needs from her wheelchair.

She does have a job. Her income is not enough to totally provide for her family's needs, but it does help.

Emelia participates in a home work program provided through Casa de Amigos, a United Way agency. The program is designed to supplement the income of community residents who are unable to work outside the home due to various limiting factors.

"There are many people who cannot leave home to work, but have talents and abilities that are useful to companies and individuals in our community," says Mary Hinkle, executive director of Casa de Amigos, an ecumenical neighborhood center. "This program is important not only to the people participating, but also to our community."

The majority of the home work provided through the Casa program is supplied by Teraco, a local advertising specialties firm.

Teraco provides Casa with about four different seasonal items which must be assembled. Casa delivers the items to the participants, provides necessary instructions and handles any paperwork involved. The program is equally beneficial to Teraco. "Most of the assembly work done by the Casa program participants is quite time consuming and is work we only require seasonally," says Jim Hillhouse, materials manager at Teraco. "Without this program, two to three of our employees would have to assemble these items when they could be working on something else."

He added, "The program works two ways: We are helping provide a valuable community service and we are saving time and therefore money by using people in the Casa program."

Unfortunately though, Teraco can only provide the Casa program with work during certain parts of the year.

"We try to provide Casa with assembly work whenever they need it, but sometimes that just isn't feasible," Hillhouse said.

Mary Hinkle added, "We would like to find more organizations who have work which can be done by our program participants. Our participants are willing to do just about any type of work which does not require specialized skills and can be done at home."

Emelia echoes the desire of the Casa staff to have more work and therefore make enough money to be independent.

A Casa staff member translates for her, "I enjoy what I am doing. It is beneficial to my family and helps me provide for them."

The home work program is just one part of Casa's informal job placement service.

In addition, Casa refers community residents who are seeking employment to the Texas Employment Commission and maintains a bulletin board at the agency featuring current newspaper "help wanted" ads.

Casa also operates a Crafts Guild which helps participants supplement their income by making and selling quilts and other craft items.

Other Casa programs and services include: transportation, informal education, tutoring, emergency relief funds, clothing and household goods and a lunch and recreation program for senior citizens.

Casa is funded through the United Way of Midland, local churches and a grant from the Department of Agriculture.

Casa de Amigos is just one of 18 agencies supported by the United Way which provide services to people in our community.

Other United Way agencies include: Midland Chapter of the American Red Cross, Family Services, Boy Scouts, Boys' Club, Salvation Army, La Florencia Day Nursery, Community Day Nursery, Tape Lending Library, U.S.O., Midland/Lee Youth Centers, Camp Fire, Inc., Girl Scouts, Metropolitan YMCA, Park Center YMCA, Alamo YMCA, Washington YMCA and Council on Alcoholism.

Students from foreign countries, particularly Iran, are coming to Texas in record numbers surpassed only by California, the Institute of International Education says.

A survey of Texas colleges and universities for the 1979-80 academic year reflects a nationwide increase in the number of foreign students, the New York-based institute reported.

There are about 286,000 foreign students on campuses across the country, the survey said.

Foreign students numbered 24,416 in Texas schools, compared with 47,621 in California. For the first time in the 26-year history of the poll, Texas' enrollment passed that of New York, which totaled 23,569.

The survey estimated 60 percent of the students come from Asian nations, with Iran contributing the highest number — 51,870 this year.

Taiwan, Nigeria, Canada, Japan, Saudi Arabia, Hong-Kong, India and Thailand also export large numbers of students, and most major in engineering, business and management.

"Mainly, they're the ones that have the money to send their kids to school in the United States," said Judy Young, director of the International Office at the University of Texas at Arlington. UTA has the fourth-largest number of foreign students in Texas with 1,339 enrolled this semester, she said.

Texas Southern University in Houston tops the list with 2,544 students registered in September, said Chuck Smith of TSU's university relations department.

The University of Texas at Austin ranks next with 2,354 foreign students, the central campus of the University of Houston third with 1,813, UTA fourth, and North Texas State University fifth with 1,322.

Only the figures cited for TSU and UTA refer to this year.

Law enforcement officials search through the shattered wreckage of a single-engine light plane that crashed in a wooded area near Cedar Hill. Both occupants were killed. Officials believe high winds may have blown the plane into the wires of a television transmitter tower. (AP Laserphoto)

Abilene pharmacist dies in plane crash

CEDAR HILL, Texas (AP) — The impact of the single-engine plane crash here threw the two passengers from the plane and "scattered and mangled" the bodies making identification difficult, officials say. The two men were finally identified by driver's licenses found on the bodies, said Sgt. Randy Coffey of the Cedar Hill Police Department Wednesday. Killed in the crash were Ed Templeton Jr., a prominent Abilene pharmacist, and Raymond Wray, of Seagoville, a former Abilene Christian University basketball star. The single-engine Bonanza went down sometime Wednesday morning, and Cedar Hill police found the wreckage 20 feet from a house in this suburb, about 15 miles southwest of Dallas. The light plane, co-owned by Templeton, veered too close to a television tower, clipped a wire and crashed, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said. One witness said the plane hit the KTVT-TV tower, but two people inside the station when the plane crashed said they did not hear anything, said Nick Melton, an FAA spokesman at Redbird Airport. Other witnesses, including a group of construction workers and several schoolchildren, told authorities the plane hit a wire and lost a wing. A wing was found on the opposite side of U.S. 69 from the body of the plane. Melton said 10 to 20 knot winds probably blew the plane into the tower wire. He said the small plane was never in contact with the Redbird tower. "As far as we know, he (the pilot) was not on an instrument flight plan. He was not receiving air traffic control service," he said. Melton described the accident scene as "extremely gruesome." One area resident said he was working outside when he heard a sputtering engine. "I ran around to the backyard and saw the tail end dropping," Stanley Younger said. "About that time, there sounded like an explosion. We searched the woods for about an hour and couldn't find it."

Defendants say tapes prove innocence

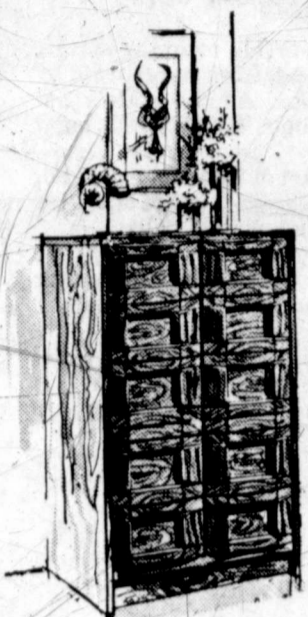

HOUSTON (AP) — Two Austin attorneys indicted in the Brillab scandal say the FBI's secretly-recorded tapes of an alleged insurance kick-back scheme are "embarrassing" but prove their innocence. Donald Ray and Randall Wood, on trial with Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton, testified Wednesday it would have been useless to try to bribe state officials to reopen bidding on an $82-million-a-year state insurance contract. "All state officials would be glad to save the state $1 million and that was the proposal made to us by what we thought were Prudential Insurance Co. representatives," Randall said shortly before he completed two days of testimony. The three men and Deer Park labor leader L.G. Moore were indicted June 12 on charges of extortion, racketeering, bribery, and fraud. Moore, regional director of the International Operating Engineers Union, is to be tried later. Clayton is accused of accepting $5,000 from Moore with promises of another $500,000 he reopened bidding on the lucrative contract. A 20-year member of the Texas Legislature who is seeking an unprecedented fourth term as speaker, Clayton said he thought the money was a campaign contribution and planned to return it. The government's case centers on secret recordings made by FBI informant Joseph Hauser and two undercover agents during a 10-month investigation of labor corruption in the Southwest. Shortly after the Wednesday morning session, U.S. District Judge Robert O'Connor denied a request by attorney for Dallas television station WFAA to allow the Brillab tapes to be copied for eventual broadcasting. Stephen Philbin, attorney for Belo Broadcasting Corp., said the station would decide what further action to take but hinted he would probably request a hearing before the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Portions of the tapes were replayed to the jury Wednesday as Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Woods asked by lawyers about comments each made to Moore and Hauser, who posed during the investigation as an representative of Prudential Insurance Co. Both attorneys, accused of using the friendships with state officials to try to reopen contract bidding, called the tapes "embarrassing" but insisted the recordings failed to show they suggested Moore or Hauser try to bribe Clayton. Woods reminded Ray that "the tapes are the evidence." Ray replied, "I'm glad they are." "If you have anything on tape to say I ever mentioned a bribe or took a bribe, I wish you would play it for the jury," he said.

Chicago police voting on union

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's 10,000 policemen are facing the option of unionization for the first time in the city's history amid allegations of a "sweetheart deal" between Mayor Jane Byrne and the Teamsters union. With five organizations battling in an election today to represent police below the rank of sergeant, squabbling between the groups and the police department erupted into angry name-calling and picketing this week. The Teamsters, angered about what they called anti-labor "propaganda" passed out by police officials, picketed the city's Navy Pier on Tuesday in an attempt to close down preparations for a trade show. Mrs. Byrne met with Teamsters the same day and announced she had persuaded them to pull the pickets. But that angered members of the other organizations in the election, who said the mayor was being partial to the Teamsters. "They (the Teamsters) are the ones who made the big political donation to her campaign so maybe that's why she met with them," complained John Dineen, president of the Fraternal Order of Police. "A lot of officers on the street are wondering, 'Hey, has she cut some deal with the Teamsters?'" said Joseph Meccall, head of Chicago Police Officers Local 1975. Carl Champagne, co-chairman of the Teamsters Law Enforcement Division of the Teamsters' Joint Council 25, dismissed such charges as nonsense and referred disparagingly to the other four organizations vying for representation as "social clubs." The other unions in the election were the Chicago Patrolmen's Association and the Confederation of Police. Police officers also had the option of voting for no union. Under state law, public employees do not have the right to collective bargaining, but city officials can voluntarily allow them to organize. Mrs. Byrne agreed to an election, but said a collective bargaining ordinance would have to pass city council before bargaining could begin.

Lions maul, eat man in zoo cage

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A 35-year-old man who climbed or fell into a lion's compound at the Los Angeles Zoo in Griffith Park was mauled to death and then partially eaten by a male lion, police said. A man police identified as Eugene Raymond Leduc of Baldwin Park apparently climbed a tree and scaled a 12-foot wall Wednesday, either falling or jumping into the lion compound. He was mauled to death by a 250-pound male lion, then was dragged from the scene and partially eaten, police explained. The victim was discovered at around 4 p.m. by zoo employee Michael Mallory when he entered the area to lock up the male lion and two lionesses. Zoo veterinarians had to drain the moat in the pit and tranquilize the lions. Coroner's officials removed the remains. Authorities were trying to determine whether the victim may have been under the influence of drugs at the time. A coroner's autopsy was scheduled.

Some don't want salesmen in high court

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Six years ago, a fire extinguisher salesman ran for chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court. He finished second.

On Nov. 4, North Carolina voters will decide whether to bar fire extinguisher salesmen — and all other nonlawyers — from running for judge in the future.

"So far as I know this is the only state in the union where a layman can hold any judicial office," said Bert Montague, director of the state administrative office of the courts. "If he can win election, there's no requirement for legal learning."

Seven of the state's 136 district judges who preside over the state's lowest courts do not have law degrees; some rose from magistrate or justice of the peace, others from unrelated jobs. All the state's Supreme Court justices and other upper court judges have formal legal training.

"I'm not in favor of it," Judge L. Frank Faggart of Kannapolis said of the nonlawyer ban. He was a Kannapolis policeman for 28 years and later a magistrate and justice of the peace before being elected judge.

"When the North Carolina Constitution was established in 1868, it gave every qualified elector in the state of North Carolina the right to run for any office. I don't think that right should be taken away from anybody," he said.

The amendment would allow Faggart and other laymen judges to remain on the district bench, where they earn the same $38,412 salary as judges who are lawyers, and to seek re-election. But other nonlawyers would be barred from the bench.

The North Carolina Bar Association and many judges have backed the proposal, which finally won legislative approval last year after being rejected repeatedly in previous years.

Supporters have argued that as the law has become more complex, legal training has become a must — even in the lowest court, where judges try traffic, misdemeanor criminal and civil cases with or without a jury.

"If I were to be tried and I had a qualified lawyer representing me, I'd want the judge who is charging the jury to have as good a knowledge of the law as the lawyer," said Rep. Mary Seymour, D-Greensboro, who sponsored the amendment. "A person can be deprived of life, liberty or property by a judge."

No laymen currently serve in higher judicial offices, though William fire equipment salesman James Newcomb defeated a Superior Court judge for the Republican nomination for chief justice in 1974.

Statehood a new issue in DC

By IRA ROSENFELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Voters here will decide Nov. 4 whether to begin the process of moving the District of Columbia toward statehood.

While debates over statehood have been common in recent years in various sections of the continental United States and Puerto Rico, it's a relatively new issue for the nation's capital, which has basically been under federal rule since 1790.

The 1980 statehood initiative is the work of an ad hoc group of citizens under the banner of the Statehood Initiative Committee. Committee officials, some members of the district's small Statehood Party, say they will spend $25,000 to convince D.C. voters to back statehood.

With a population of about 750,000, the district would be among the smallest states. Now represented by one non-voting congressman, the district would have two senators and one congressman with full voting rights under statehood.

Supporters, including most of the city's elected officials, say statehood would afford budgetary control over their city. They contend the limited home rule granted to the district by Congress in 1974 is a sham because the federal government still controls the local pursestrings.

Among the most vocal opponents is the district's congressional representative, Walter E. Fauntroy. An aide said that Fauntroy fears the referendum will harm chances of state legislatures approving the D.C. Voting Rights Amendment, which would give the district the same Congressional representation as statehood.

Supporters of statehood, however, argue that the voting rights amendment has stalled with ratification by only 10 of the 38 required states, and that it would not provide statehood's local fiscal controls.

At the same time, they concede they have little idea how many years it may take to accomplish statehood.

They assure U.S. officials that the proposal would leave a small enclave of the district, including the Capitol and the White House, under federal jurisdiction.

If passed next month, a lengthy process with many roadblocks would be put in motion to make the district the first state to gain admission to the Union since Hawaii in 1959.

Congress would have two opportunities to kill the plan, and the president would have one, and there remains a constitutional question over whether Maryland, which originally deeded the land to the new U.S. government in 1790, also has a veto.

Byrd's support should help Reagan campaign

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)

— U.S. Sen. Harry S. Byrd Jr.'s announcement of support for Ronald Reagan will help the Republican presidential nominee's chances of winning Virginia in the Nov. 4 election, Reagan supporters say.

say the independent Virginia senator's decision will have little impact on the outcome in the state.

"None of our plans were predicated on Byrd doing anything other than voting for Reagan," said George Gilliam of Charlottesville, Virginia campaign chairman for President Carter.

Iowa voters testing state's referendum power, ERA stand

By ROGER MUNNS

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Political newcomers are testing Iowa's established powers in a referendum to decide whether the state constitution will include its own Equal Rights Amendment.

Organized labor, teachers groups, churches and party leaders supporting the amendment have all organized under one umbrella, the Iowa ERA Coalition.

The newcomers, a loose alliance of conservatives and religious fundamentalists, have formed numerous groups to keep Iowa, one of the first states to ratify the federal ERA, from joining six other states which have enacted similar amendments.

The other six are Colorado, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Washington, Hawaii and New Mexico, whose 1973 enactment was the most recent state ERA approval. State ERAs have no effect on national ratification, which remains three short of the 38 states necessary by 1982.

"The only valid reason for voting against the ERA," according to the pro-ERA coalition's favorite slogan, "is if you sincerely believe that women are not entitled to equal protection of the law."

But opponents say national and state laws already protect women adequately.

Carnegie Fund rewards heroes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Kenneth Smith, who drives an 18-wheel truck for a living, always pulls over to help a stranded motorist change a tire.

So it wasn't unusual that he stopped to help two Michigan state troopers pinned inside the wreckage of their burning patrol car.

"It's the old story of getting involved," he said. "I more or less get myself into these things." Smith pulled one man through a broken window and with the aid of another trucker freed the second trooper. The vehicle was engulfed in flames minutes later and the sound of exploding ammunition punctuated the night air.

Both troopers recovered from their injuries. Smith, 31, of Troy, Mich., was given numerous awards for the brave deed and stands them all in his living room. But one medal displays above the rest.

"I think more of the Carnegie Medal than any of the others," he said in a recent telephone interview. "It's a national award. It's a big deal to me."

Smith is one of 6,500 men and women in the United States and Canada honored by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for risking their lives to help save others. The Pittsburgh-based commission gave a bronze medal and $1,500 to 68 heroes last year.

Last year's winners included a prison inmate, a sanitation worker, a plumber, a tavern manager, an oceanographer, and a cattle rancher.

"Better love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," the medal reads on one side. On the other side is the profile of Andrew Carnegie, the industrialist who started the fund in 1904.

Carnegie was so impressed with the daring of rescuers in a mine disaster that he set aside $5 million to reward heroes or their survivors. So far, the commission has handed out $13.5 million in awards and benefits.

This year, about 600 people will be recommended for medals and about 85 will be chosen.

Reagan's views inflict some 'political pollution'

By TERENCE HUNT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The way Ronald Reagan tells it, Mother Nature is a far worse polluter than man. And what's more, he almost makes it sound like pollution is good for you. Warming up to an attack against the pollution regulators in Washington, Reagan said recently he had a suspicion that Mount St. Helens had spewed more sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere than all the cars in the world over the last 10 years.

He went on to declare that nature is responsible for two-thirds of the world's sulphur dioxide pollutants and that man is responsible for only a third.

This was not a carefully packaged Reagan speaking from a prepared speech or his trusty three-by-five note cards. It was an end-of-the-day campaigned stop where he spoke off the cuff and wasn't supposed to make any news except by listening to the complaints of steel and coal industry leaders in Steubenville, Ohio. But that's not the way it worked out.

After listening to the industry's views, Reagan weighed in with his own opinion. He said Americans have spent billions of dollars on anti-pollution devices for automobiles to reduce oxides of nitrogen, but that 93 percent of the oxides of nitrogen are produced by trees and decaying vegetation — not by man and his car.

He said that these oxides cause the haze hovering the Smoky Mountains, and that some doctors actually believe the smoke might be good for tubercular patients.

That led him to recall that there are 16 permanent oil slicks in the Santa Barbara Channel, and he said it was believed back at the turn of the century that fumes from the slick purified the air and prevented the spread of disease.

Reagan concluded his talk by assuring the industry leaders he would turn to them, as president, for help in drafting "reasonable rules" for environmental standards.

A presidential candidate's views on the environment are never taken lightly. After all, the man in the White House appoints the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, which polices industry for compliance with clean air and water standards.

Reagan's speech began to set off alarms in environmental circles.

The next day, he visited a rusting and aged steel mill in Youngstown, Ohio, and blamed EPA regulations and foreign steel imports for the plant's closing. He also issued a statement saying that air pollution was substantially under control.

Ironically, Reagan's hometown of Los Angeles was suffering its worst smog attack in years and he started getting peppered with questions about his statements.

At first Reagan told reporters they were "nit-picky." He proclaimed himself an environmentalist, but added that EPA proposed unreasonable, untried standards on industry at the expense of productivity, and said industry should be given more leeway.

There was confusion when he later denied he had ever said pollution was substantially under control. Someone must have reminded him of his written statement because Reagan, a little later, repeated his contention that pollution was largely under control.

By week's end, Reagan was under heavy attack from environmentalists from around the country and he was forced to soften his pro-industry stand.

Arriving back in smog-choked Los Angeles, Reagan lamented the poor air quality there and said he never intended to suggest a lessening of clean air compliance requirements. Nevertheless, he was confronted by pickets carrying signs reading, "Mount St. Reagan Blows Again," and "Trees Don't Pollute, Reagan Does."

The San Jose, Calif., Mercury printed an editorial suggesting a way to settle the trees vs. man dispute.

"Put the president of the Sierra Club in a sealed garage with a tree," the newspaper said. "Put Ronald Reagan in another sealed garage with a running automobile. Then wait to see which of them yells to get out first."

JIMMY'S WHITE HOUSE

Carter's biggest dreams may have all come true

By MAUREEN SANTINI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has always said he first became interested in running for president when he was governor of Georgia. But recently he hinted that the idea may have occurred to him much earlier.

During a town meeting at the Grand Old Opry House in Tennessee, the president talked about his boyhood and said:

"I had two ambitions then. My daddy said, 'Forget it.' One was to be president of the United States and the other one was to stand on the stage at the Grand Old Opry."

The day after Carter announced his intention to stop making personal assaults on Ronald Reagan, reporters traveling with him were mystified when the public address system that normally carries his remarks to the press plane temporarily stopped.

"That's the ejector system," one White House aide cracked. "Whenever we think the president is about to start taking the low-road, the button goes on and the system stops."

The sound resumed momentarily. The next day, Carter said Reagan's election would be "bad" for the country.

reduced. And he gave an uncharacteristically modest assessment of his abilities.

"This year I've cut that about half because of the extra duties that I have to perform during an election year," he said. "I generally run three or four miles. Not very fast."

He said he can do three miles in about 20 minutes "if I want to really try. That's the best I can do. I'm 56 years old and I'm not getting any younger."

On two occasions during his campaign forays, Carter was asked about the rivalry between Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, and Edmund S. Muskie, the secretary of state.

"That report is false," Carter said. "It's an error.... I make the foreign policy."

In Florida a day later, he was asked if they will remain in their positions if he wins re-election. "Well, it's too early for me to say about what's going to happen for the next four or 4½ years," he said. "My present intention is to keep them on. Yes."

Newest state park to be dedicated

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Dedication of Texas' newest state park and a meeting of the International Good Neighbor Council highlight the 25th Fiesta Amistad celebration which begins Thursday in Del Rio and neighboring Ciudad Acuna, Mexico.

Gov. Bill Clements; Lt. Gov. William P. Hobby; Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas; Chris Aldrete, federal co-chairman of the Southwest Border Regional Commission, and numerous other officials will participate in the four days of international pageantry.

Clements was scheduled to address a Saturday luncheon and radio audience at an event honoring Del Rio Mayor Herb Shitis.

Hobby was to join Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials Sunday in dedicating Seminole Canyon State Park, 40 miles west of Del Rio in the Lower Pecos River Region. The park was the home base of the Paleo-Indian, a prehistoric people dating back to 12,000 B.C.

Aldrete was to be the featured speaker at Friday's 53rd general assembly of the International Good Neighbor Commission.

Other events include a carnival, golf tournament, Miss Del Rio Pageant, style show, barbecue, Queen's Ball, street dances, a flag-draped parade beginning in Ciudad Acuna and ending in Del Rio, and the traditional Abrazo de Amistad (embrace of friendship) between Mexico and Texas officials at the center of the international bridge.

Carter needs black vote in South

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — President Carter's chances for victory over confident Republican forces in this crucial Deep South state hinge on whether enough black voters turn out to vote again this year.

Black leaders say that enthusiasm for Carter is down from four years ago, when their support was the key to the 14,436-vote margin that gave him Mississippi's seven electoral votes and assured him enough to win nationally.

"But against Ronald Reagan he'll get 90 percent of the black vote that turns out," said Aaron Henry of Clarksdale, state president of the NAACP and a former Democratic state chairman. "The outcome will hinge on the turnout."

His assessment agreed with the views of other black leaders, political analysts and most campaign activists in this traditionally conservative state where Reagan probably holds a modest lead. Reagan forces have predicted a close victory.

The consensus puts Reagan ahead in the southern half, where two congressional districts have sent Republicans to Congress for the past eight years; makes the predominantly white northeastern corner a tossup; and splits the northwest, with its heavily black Delta area along the Mississippi River, along racial lines.

Secretary of State Ed Pittman said Mississippi has 1,431,193 registered voters, and he said he expected a turnout of 700,000-720,000 for the Nov. 4 presidential election. The 1976 turnout was 768,370 voters.

However, there was no breakdown by race, either in registration or turnout.

Even though no real issues have emerged in the campaign, both the Carter and Reagan camps are devoting more attention than usual to a contest for only seven electoral votes because they regard Mississippi as a swing state.

Both candidates have sent surrogates trekking across the state to shake hands and renew friendships, and Reagan and running mate George Bush have made personal appearances. The target areas include the northeastern corner, a traditional Democratic stronghold where Republicans made big inroads in the 1978 Senate race.

Henry said the Democrats are working hard among blacks but "the turnout is still problematical. It will depend on the number of foot soldiers we put on the field, knocking on doors to get people out."

Although Carter is not as popular among blacks as he was four years ago, Henry said, "when it comes to a decision between Carter and Reagan, I find people have no trouble supporting Carter. When it is Carter and nobody else, you have to deal with some things Carter has not done that they wish he had done, or some things that he has done which they wish he hadn't."

For Reagan to make major inroads among blacks, Henry said, "he'd have to overcome his name. His name is an anathema, like Hitler's."

Black attorney Wilbur Colom of Columbus, a Republican who declined to say whether he would vote for Reagan, said he felt Reagan was trying to woo black votes but added:

"The Carter people are saying, 'If Ronald Reagan wins he will take you back to pre-Civil War days.' It is not pro-Carter but fear about Reagan."

However, he said, "Carter's going to win the black vote and Reagan is going to win the white vote. The question is how big Reagan will carry the white and how big Carter will carry the black. If Reagan gets 65 percent of the white votes and Carter 95 percent of the black, you've got a close election. Everybody's vote will count."

He said the outcome would depend on the turnout and "the turnout depends on the campaign intensity."

Mike Schmidt leads 'Comeback Gang' victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt stood at home plate, his bat over his shoulder and his body twisting. A little English might have kept that ball in fair territory, he thought.

They had to come back from a 4-0 deficit to win the World Series opener. They trailed at one time or another in all five of their National League Championship Series games with Houston.

his last inning, he said he didn't feel he had his fastball anymore." Frey said. Enter Dan Quisenberry, 33 saves during the season and considered the AL's top relief pitcher. If the game had gone according to script, that should have been the end of it.

4-4. That brought Schmidt to the plate. Schmidt, who led the majors with 48 homers in the regular season, had hit a dismal .208 in the playoffs. In the final game of the league championship, he went 0-for-5, striking out three times.

foul, before grounding out again. In the sixth, he hit a harmless single, and then, in the eighth, it was all on the line. Schmidt sent Quisenberry's first pitch to the wall in right-center on one short hop for double and a 5-4 Philadelphia lead.

the ninth inning. He struck out pinch hitter Darrell Porter, who did not start against the lefty Carlton and was hitting in the spot that would have been occupied by Brett. Reed then yielded Hal McRae's third single of the game, but retired the side by getting Otis to hit into a fielder's choice grounder and striking out Wathan.

WHEN SCHMIDT, the Philadelphia Phillies' slugging third baseman, got going, he sent the Kansas City Royals home with a handful of woes. Schmidt's eighth-inning double drove in the winning run, and the Phillies downed the Royals 6-4 Wednesday night for a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven 1980 World Series.

The Series moves to Kansas City for games on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, if necessary. The Royals face the unenviable task of rebounding against a team that has scored 13 runs in the first two games of the Series, having won 7-6 on Tuesday, and they may have to face it without All-Star third baseman George Brett.

Brett had to be removed from the game in the sixth inning when an inflammation of his hemorrhoids, a problem that began only a week ago, started to bother him too severely. Royals Manager Jim Frey said he was not certain of Brett's status for Friday.

"We'll have to wait," Frey said. "He has two days and it's a day-to-day thing. We hope he's better."

THE PHILLIES started left-hander Steve Carlton in Game 2. A 24-game winner during the regular season, "Lefty" had struggled in the playoffs against Houston. In the fourth game, his second start, he went only 5 1/2 innings, his shortest stint of the season. He couldn't keep his pitches around the plate.

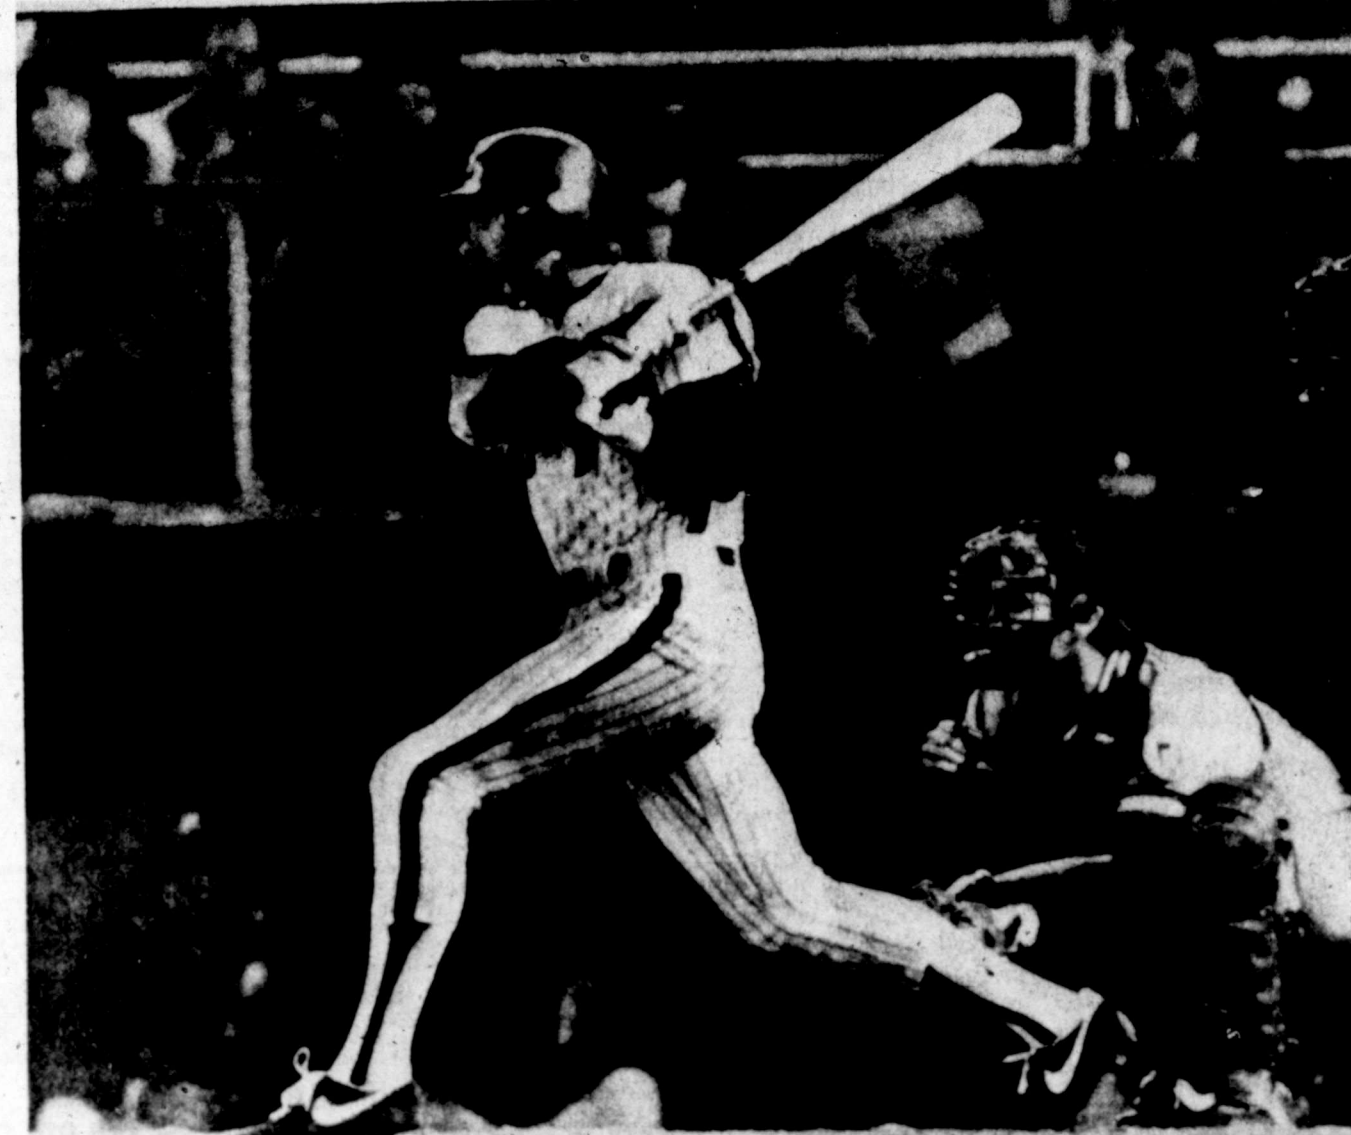

Wednesday night, the silent left-hander was in trouble again. In eight innings, he gave up 10 hits, six walks and three earned runs with 10 strikeouts.

"He's done a lot of pitching in the last six months," Schmidt said. "But that shows you that Steve, even at his worst, can keep us in any game."

The Phillies got off to a 2-0 lead in the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Manny Trillo and a run-scoring single by Larry Bowa.

KANSAS CITY got one run back in the sixth when Amos Otis singled, advanced to second when John Wathan walked and scored on a throwing error by Trillo on a high chopper by Willie Aikens.

The Royals scored three times in the seventh. Carlton walked the bases full, and Otis slugged a two-run double, followed by a sacrifice fly by Wathan. The score was 4-2 and Philadelphia's "Comeback Gang" went to work again.

Sluggo Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies drives a double to the wall in right field in the eighth inning Wednesday to score Bake McBride from first base with the winning run in Game Two of the World Series. The Phillies now lead Kansas City by a 2-0 margin heading into Friday's game in K.C. (AP Laserphoto)

Denver gets Kyle for $100

DENVER (AP) — Their hopes for obtaining a cornerback quashed in last April's draft, the Denver Broncos fanned one for the $100 waiver price Wednesday by signing free agent Aaron Kyle, formerly of the Dallas Cowboys.

"We don't know yet how he'll fit in," said Miller. "It would be premature for us to say now what we'll do with him."

"I don't know why they didn't protect me," said the 5-foot-11, 185-pound Detroit native who played collegiately at Wyoming. "Coach (Tom) Landry evidently wanted to keep me on injured reserve all year. But I asked him for the opportunity to play this year. I was being paid, but I had no chance for the incentive clauses which were a big part of my contract."

"This guy was a No. 1 draft choice, and anytime you can get a player of this caliber without giving up a draft choice, you'd better make the attempt," said Denver Coach Red Miller.

Kyle, the only cornerback ever drafted in the first round by Dallas, was a three-year starter for the Cowboys despite playing with bone spurs in his left knee during the 1979 season.

The Cowboys haven't commented on their action, but the surprising play of young Dallas cornerbacks Aaron Mitchell and Steve Wilson, perhaps making Kyle expendable, could be one factor. There also were questions about Kyle's recovery from the injury, and the fact that he hasn't performed consistently up to the standards expected of a top draft choice.

He's a good athlete and we're happy to have him. We've always considered him to be a pretty good cornerback. He's got speed, he can cover one-on-one and he's a hitter."

He underwent surgery on the knee last May and wasn't fully recovered when the Cowboys opened camp. He was placed on injured reserve, but the Cowboys failed to include him in their final 45-man roster when the NFL regular season began. As a result, Dallas was forced to put Kyle through the league's procedural recall system before they could reactivate him, but he was claimed by 11 teams.

Kyle feels he's able to play at cornerback Sunday if needed, but acknowledged that "the leg isn't quite as strong as it could be. I do have arthritis in the knee after two operations." And Miller noted that Kyle hasn't played in a game since last season, although he participated in Dallas practice sessions.

It has been suggested that the Broncos might move Kyle into the starting spot at right cornerback, switching Steve Foley to safety, which is believed to be a more suitable position for Foley.

MHS football is zany, but not dull

The world of Midland High football is a zany affair from week to pulsating week. The Bulldogs are sometimes awesome, sometimes inept, always unpredictable and highly colorful.

There never seems to be a lax minute in the world of the Purple Pack. MHS fans can be frustrated one minute and on a roller coaster high the next, much like the team itself. But make no mistake about it — they are never dull.

The 1980 Bulldogs may become district champions, may lose the rest of their games or finish somewhere in between, but they have already given us a season full of memories, which range from nightmare losses to pinnacle victories. It will be a hard team to forget, regardless of how the season turns out from here on in.

It all started when new coach Pat Culpepper predicted that his Pack would "kick their tails" prior to a game with Andrews, and then failed to back the statement up in an 18-14 loss.

Then quarterback Michael Feldt gave us a game that will never be forgotten when he rushed for 178 yards and passed for 140 more in a 33-21 victory over Lubbock Monterey.

That was followed by a 31-0 loss to Odessa Permian, which put a crimp in the new "Gold Rush" slogan adopted by the school's fans. But if past history has anything to do with the present, then that might have been the only predictable thing the 'Dogs have done this year. It seems that some things never change.

Then last Friday, the Bulldogs once found themselves trailing to Big Spring by a 6-0 score at the end of the third quarter. And this was to a team that had lost 38 straight District 5-5A outings. But in typical 1980 style, the Bulldogs then erupted for 25 unanswered points to win going away. It was as if someone had turned on a light under all those Bulldog helmets.

And if you are a casual reader of scoring summaries in the Saturday morning paper, you probably thought it was a rehash of some game 20 or 30 years ago. The names weren't too familiar.

Mark Hewitt helped tie the score in the fourth period when he recovered a fumble in the end zone. Hewitt, who has had a bad back, was playing in his first game for the Bulldogs.

Tight end Wade Johnson then caught a 13-yard scoring pass to give the Bulldogs the lead. It was his first score of the season and he had started at that position from Game 1. However, he did not start there Friday and was supposed to play only on defense.

Then tailback Johnny Garza scored a touchdown and this was his first start of the year. Garza rushed for 110 yards and most MHS fans didn't even know who he was.

Allen Chick, who has lived in total obscurity as a backup to Feldt at quarterback, came off the bench to direct two TD assaults after Feldt went down with an injury. He drove the Bulldogs 79 yards for a TD, which Garza ended with his 3-yard run, and he tossed a 36-yard pass to Kyle Ford for the other. And Ford's name is not one that rings bells in every quarter of town.

So it was a night that unknowns became known, but that isn't unusual in the land of MHS. And there are still five games to play this year.

No one knows what the Bulldogs have in store this Friday when they host Abilene High. But one thing is for sure — Homecoming fans will be treated to a brand of football that they have probably never seen before. Just don't make any predictions.

Trying to get a line on the Bulldogs is like fishing without any bait. But you will never forget them.

Lee Rebels to test unbeaten Cougars

By TERRY WILLIAMSON Sports Writer

ABILENE — The Midland Lee Rebels, with high ambitions of staying in the thick of the District 5-5A race, will ride into P.E. Shotwell Stadium here Friday at 8 p.m., pointing their muskets at the undefeated and brutal Abilene Cooper Cougars, the defending 5-5A champions who have battle plans of their own.

The matchup, which will be broadcast by KCRS radio, has all the makings of a classic Little Southwest Conference struggle. Cooper is favored, but the Rebels will be playing like a wounded bear, knowing that a defeat here would just about end all title hopes for 1980.

"If we are going to be district contenders, we will have to win this one," is the way Lee coach Spike Dykes puts it. "Two losses and you're out in this league. We are going to have to play our best game to win this one, so we need to be ready to play 48 minutes of football."

Cooper is fresh off of a 35-7 victory over Odessa High, a team that defeated Lee by a 28-21 count with a touchdown in the last 10 seconds two weeks ago.

"I guess that should make Cooper about a 35-point favorite in the game if you use comparable scores," Dykes said. "But I feel that our kids will be ready to play. This is the type of win that we really need. I really feel we can make a run at the title by beating Cooper. It would give our kids the type of confidence they need to carry through."

However, Cooper coach Ray Overton doesn't think it will be a 35-point spread. "I really don't think you can compare scores like that. Lee will be ready to play us. They always are. Lee moved the ball very well against Odessa and should have won the game. They threatened to put the game away several times."

"Lee worries us a great deal because they run at you and they can really control the ball. I just can't see this game being a runaway either way. Lee plays great defense and we are going to have to work to score points."

But score points is one thing Cooper is good at. And they should be with the attack they can put on the field. And the Cougars' defense has not given up a touchdown in two district games: OHS scored on Cooper with a 90-yard kickoff return.

Quarterback Lanny Dycus is one of the best around and he is running away with passing honors in the loop this year. Dycus has completed 50 of 89 passes for 708 yards this year and has thrown five touchdown passes while having only two aeriels intercepted. Dycus can beat you in a hurry.

Add fullback Oscar Riggins to the attack and it can become awesome. Riggins, a junior, ranks third in the district in rushing with 403 yards for a 6.7 per carry average. Tailback Scott Reedy has rushed for 208 more yards this year.

Offensively, however, Lee's attack has come from unimpressive to winning form over the last two weeks with a powerful running attack. Fullback Calvin Riggs has moved up to be the second leading rusher in the district with 469 yards for a 5.8 per carry average. Tailback Rodney Hemphill has moved to fourth position with 396 yards and a 6.0 per carry average. Quarterback Barry Corley, who had 134 yards rushing against OHS, has 223 yards to add to the Lee attack.

"Calvin (Riggs) is now comfortable with what he is doing on the field," Dykes said this week, "and he is beginning to run like we knew he could all along. And our offensive line is becoming comfortable with our system. Tackle Rob Watson, for instance, has come a long way and his blocking has been outstanding the last two weeks."

Even with Lee's rejuvenated offense becoming more prolific each week, it will be the ability of the Rebels' stingy defensive unit that will probably make the difference in this one.

Dykes announced this week that Kevin Bradshaw, who had a big game against San Angelo last week, will move into a starting safety position, and either Chris Parker or Jesse Fennell will carry out a starting cornerback assignment.

The Lee defense has been a solid rock this season, but did give up some big plays to Odessa High two weeks ago. Last week, however, Rebels didn't let San Angelo even come up for air. San Angelo had only a net 10 yards in their first eight possessions as shown by Dykes' drive charts in the game.

Cooper is 5-0 on the year while Lee has a 3-2 reading. From Lee's standpoint, it is easy to see why the Rebels now need to make their charge if there is to be one. Lee has not faced a more important game this season than this one. With five games of experience under the Rebel belts, the young Lee team will now have to make its move.

A Lee upset could turn the district race upside down. Cooper must take this one seriously too because they have to face undefeated Permian next week. They better not be looking too far ahead.

Greenwood hopes to stay on heels of Rankin Red Devils

By MIKE CRUVER
Sports Writer

Greenwood, 4-1 on the season and 2-0 in District 6-A action, travels to Iraan, 3-2, 1-1, for a key gridiron clash Friday and neither club can afford a loss if they hope to challenge Rankin for the district crown.

Earlier in the season, Iraan had Rankin down 12-0 before the Red Devils rallied for 13 second half points to post a 20-13 triumph.

The Braves, averaging 27 points per contest, should offer a stern test for a young Greenwood defense that has surrendered only 31 tallies all year.

Both clubs depend on the infantry route for most of their scoring. Mickey Somers is the key Ranger ball totter. Iraan will need to contain Somers and not allow the Rangers to control the ball if they hope to win. It looks to be an evenly matched contest, perhaps an edge to Iraan because of the little thing called experience.

WHEN ONE speaks of Rankin, the name of Dennis Black instantly pops into your head. He is an exceptional ball player, and only a sophomore.

Last Friday Black had the kind of night that many players only dream about. All he did was run 45 and 65 yards for TDs; throw a 26-yard scoring pass to Jerry Don Turner; returned an interception 45 yards to pay dirt; and finally hauled a punt back 64 yards for a touchdown.

It appears Balmorhea, 1-4, could be in for a long evening when it entertains the 6-0, state-ranked Red Devils. Of course if Black can be stopped...? An interesting idea but not likely to happen.

Multi-talented Andrews will be seeking its seventh win of the season when it entertains Monahans, 3-2, 2-1, in District 2-AAAA.

As usual, Van Percy, shaken up in the 34-0 win over Odessa Ector Saturday, and Keith Brooks head the Mustang contingent. Not to be overlooked is a Mustang defense that seems to be getting better as the season rolls along.

ANDREWS NEEDS the win to hold off the surprising Sweetwater bunch. Sweetwater goes into weekend play with a 5-1 mark, 4-0 in district, and tied for the top spot with Andrews.

Reagan County, having a tough season so far, will try to pick up its second victory of the year when Junction comes to visit. Junction is 0-5-1 on the season. Junction has dropped both its district games while the Owls are 0-1 in District 9-AA.

Both squads have had trouble putting the pigskin in the end zone. In five games Reagan County has notched 20 points while Junction has scored 35 points in six trips to the gridiron.

Defensively, the Owls have been tougher. Reagan County has been giving up 18 points per outing. Junction's defense has been generous to the tune of 23 points per game.

Overall, it looks like a close game with a slight edge going to the Owls with a tougher defense.

A District 5-AA encounter finds Stanton hosting Morton. The Buffs are 6-0, and stand on top of the district with a 2-0 mark. Morton is 2-4 overall, 1-1 in district, following last week's 25-7 drubbing of O'Donnell.

MORTON AVERAGES slightly over 17 points a game while its defense gives up 18 points per contest. Stingy is the word for Stanton's defense. In their six wins, the Buffs have allowed only 46 points.

Offensively, Stanton averages 23 points per contest. But, it is the versatility of the Buffaloes that poses headaches to opponents.

Each week it seems a new hero thunders out for the Buffs. Last week Louis Henry tallied two fourth quarter TDs to help lift the Buffs to a 36-0 trampling of Forsan.

The week before, quarterback Curtis Williams tossed three touchdown passes as Stanton shocked Seagraves 27-21. Earlier Kevin Newman had carried the mail 32 times for 171 yards in a 9-0 whitewashing of Reagan County.

The list of Buff heroes goes on and on. It makes it difficult for a foe to key on any one player for Stanton.

LAMESA HOPES to get back on the winning track when the Golden Tornados tackle the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs in a District 2-AAAA game in San Angelo.

After jumping from the starting gate with a 7-0 win over Lubbock and shocking Fort Stockton 14-2 in the district opener, things have soured for the Tors. In their last three outings, the Tors have been stopped by Andrews, Sweetwater and Snyder.

Tony Maxwell and Bernard Williams head Lamesa's running game. Maxwell, 5-9 and 195 pounds, is used mostly as a blocking back while Williams, 5-9, 165, being the main ball carrier in the Tors' Power-I formation.

In six games Williams has over 500 yards rushing. He has gone over the 100 yard mark twice this season.

Sam Hansard to flanker Mark Ray head up the aerial attack for Lamesa.

It looks to be a close game in San Angelo but the nod goes to Lamesa. Crane is another club attempting to get going. The Golden Cranes have gone down to defeat five times without a win this season. Prospects for that first win look bleak this weekend. Crane will travel to McCamey, 4-2.

THE KEY for Crane will be finding more scoring punch. In five games Crane has managed only 14 points. They had been shut out three games in a row before Darrell Burton and Kevin Putty teamed up for a 13-yard scoring pass in the 27-7 setback at the hands of Sonora Friday night.

McCamey will face Crane with a balanced offense that has produced 154 points in six contests.

Last Friday the Badgers netted 216 yards on the ground and tacked on 141 yards through the passing lanes to floor Eunice, N.M. 35-0.

Friday's Games
District 6-A: Rankin at Balmorhea, Buena Vista at Grandfalls-Royalty, Greenwood at Iraan, Wink at Sanderson.
District 5-AA: Morton at Stanton, Forsan at Ropes, Plains at O'Donnell, Seagraves open.
District 6-AA: Crane at McCamey, Marfa at Alpine, Clint at Lubbock Christian, Van Horn open.

V-ball games slated

Midland High and Midland Lee seek to stay alive in the second half District 5-5A volleyball race tonight with two key games against Abilene schools.

Midland High hosts Abilene High today at the MHS gym, with the junior varsities beginning action at 6 p.m. MHS is 1-1 in the second half and another loss would all but eliminate the Bulldogs from the race.

Lee, much in the same boat as the Bulldogs, will travel to Abilene Cooper. Lee is 1-1 in the second half also.

Local units face games

The Midland High and Midland Lee junior varsity and sophomore teams are in action this week as they move into the sixth week of the 1980 season.

Midland High's sophomores entertain the Odessa High sophs at 4 p.m. today at the MHS practice field while the Midland Bullpup junior varsity waits until 1 p.m. Saturday to take on the Abilene JVs in Abilene.

The Lee sophomores were scheduled to play the Coahoma JVs at 7 p.m. today in Coahoma, but that game has been cancelled. The Midland Lee Stonewall Brigade JV takes on the Abilene Cooper JVs at 7 p.m. today in Memorial Stadium.

The Brigade sports a season record of 2-1-0 into tonight's game while Cooper, after going unbeaten for three years and 33 straight games, brings a 0-4-0 mark to Midland.

Lee's sophs are 3-2-0 on the year.

The MHS Bullpups are rolling along with a 4-0-0 record and Abilene is now 3-2-0 on the year after losing to Odessa Permian, 17-0, last weekend in Odessa.

Odessa entertains the San Angelo Central JV at 7 p.m. today at Joe Coleman Field on the OHS campus. OHS is 3-1-0 while Central sports an identical 3-1-0 mark. Permian plays in Big Spring tonight. Mojo's JV is 3-1-0 and Big Spring stands 0-4-1 after a 41-8 thumping at the hands of Midland last week. OHS beat Cooper, 21-7, in Abilene last Saturday.

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "Don't call it the World Series," pleaded the Philly club's manager, Tom Finley, as the Phillies' youngster buried in a cluster of question-popping newsmen. "I get all nervous. I like to think of it as just a sandlot game."

The reaction was totally understandable for a 26-year-old rookie thrust into a Hollywood scenario with a Hollywood ending.

Young Keith Moreland, a "Hook 'em Horns" disciple who grew up in the mad football atmosphere of the University of Texas campus, didn't know until an hour before gametime that he was to substitute for slugger Greg Luzinski in the Philadelphia Phillies lineup against the Kansas City Royals.

"Dallas (Manager Dallas Green) told me to go out and take batting practice," he explained. "He said Greg had a sore throat or the flu or something and he wanted to use me for the DH."

"No, I can't say I was scared — excited yes but scared no. After all, I'd been through some Texas-Oklahoma football games and you can't get much more pressure than that."

Moreland proceeded to lash out two hits, score a run in the fifth inning and knock in the final run in the wild eighth inning Philly rally that beat the Royals 6-4 for a 2-1 lead in the series.

hind team. No matter how big the lead the other guys have, we always feel we can overtake it."

Moreland said this confidence is inspired by a bench which literally explodes when the Phillies come into the late innings with their backs to the wall.

"John Vukovich (reserve infielder) is our cheerleader," he related. "The subs, the guys who don't get to play much, join in. Then Dallas, Pete (Rose) and all the others are caught up in it. Everybody screaming and hollering their lungs out."

"It's wild."

Moreland, a sturdy six-foot, 200-pounder, was a three-sport athlete (football, baseball and basketball) at R.L. Turner High School outside Dallas and entered the university on a football scholarship.

"I was a defensive back and strong safety," he said. "But I wasn't good enough a football player to go in the pros. So I laid out of football my senior year and concentrated on baseball."

The Phillies' seventh selection in the college draft, he was signed in June, 1975, and was put through the minor league wringer — Spartanburg, Peninsula, Reading and finally Oklahoma City in the American Association.

Hailed by Oklahoma City manager as "the best clutch hitter in the league," he was called up at the end of the 1979 season. This year, playing behind Boone, he appeared in 62 games, batted .314 and hit four home runs.

"Boone is the best catcher in baseball," the youngster acknowledged. "I can't get mad or upset because I don't play more. Some day maybe I will. Right now, I am thinking only of the World Series."

"If we win, I may retire."

Quickly, lest he be taken seriously, he added: "Gosh, you know I'm just kidding."

Moreland's second hit, which scored Mike Schmidt following the latter's double, was off Kansas City's ace reliever, Dan Quisenberry, who led the Yankees' Rich Gossage with 33 season saves this season.

"I had played against Quisenberry two years ago when I was at Oklahoma City and he was at Omaha," he said. "I knew pretty well what he threw. "He throws that deceptive sidearm — or submarine — sinker ball. It comes in on a righthand hitter and away on a left-hander. I tried to explain it to the other guys. Maybe it helped."

Morgan sorry for statement

HOUSTON (AP) — Second baseman Joe Morgan has apologized for saying he would not play another season with the Houston Astros and agreed to meet with General Manager Tal Smith to discuss his future with the National League baseball team.

Morgan, disappointed when manager Bill Virdon replaced him with Rafael Landestoy in the eighth inning of the deciding playoff game with Philadelphia, told a Houston sportscaster Sunday he would not play for Astros next season.

The pack is back.

Casper closer to music idol

OAKLAND (AP) — Dave Casper, upon leaving the Oakland Raiders to join the Houston Oilers, remarked, "It puts me a little bit closer to Willie Nelson."

Casper, the All-Pro tight end, is a big fan of Nelson, the country-western music star from Texas. He's even been invited onstage during Nelson concerts.

The Raiders traded Casper to the Oilers Tuesday in exchange for future National Football League draft choices, and Casper said, "It's a business, you know. I'm like a piece of the equipment being sent to another job site."

He noted that the Oilers "have some guy playing quarterback that I've heard of before."

That quarterback is Ken Stabler, who threw passes to Casper for six seasons before being traded to Houston this year.

"Being back with 'Snake' only means that when the ball is in the air it came from his hand. It doesn't make my job as a receiver any different. I still have to catch it."

Casper was the Raiders' top pass receiver when he left, with 22 catches this season.

Collins leads 76ers over New Jersey

By The Associated Press

Doug Collins isn't playing with reckless abandon, but he is playing. And that is something of a minor medical miracle.

The veteran Philadelphia guard popped in 18 points Wednesday night to help the 76ers to a 119-111 National Basketball Association victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Collins, who tore ligaments in his left knee just before the 1979-80 playoffs, got back into the Philadelphia lineup about half a season sooner than the doctors who diagnosed his injury and operated on him had predicted.

The 76ers, coming back from a 20-point loss to the New York Knicks a night earlier, got 27 points from Julius Erving.

Lakers 112, Kings 107

Jim Chones, filling in for injured Kareem Abdul-Jabbar at center, scored six points in overtime to lift the Lakers to the road victory. The 6-foot-11 Chones hit the Lakers' first three baskets of the overtime and Jamaal Wilkes and Earvin "Magic" Johnson each scored baskets as the Lakers outscored the Kings 10-5 in the overtime period to secure the victory.

Rockets 103, SuperSonics 100

Calvin Murphy and Moses Malone combined for 50 points to lead the Rockets to a narrow victory. Houston trailed 98-97 with less than a minute to play when Robert Reid dropped in a jump shot to put the Rockets ahead to stay.

Murphy finished the game with 27 points. Malone had 23 and Reid 19. Seattle's Paul Westphal got 30 points.

Nuggets 133, Mavericks 98

Veteran guard John Roche connected on five field goals and six free throws without a miss in the first half to spark Denver to its first victory of the season. Roche helped the Nuggets build a 70-47 halftime lead against the new expansion franchise. The Mavericks, playing only their third game, fell to 1-2 with the lopsided loss.

Suns 107, Jazz 93

Center Alvan Adams pumped in 31 points and power forward Len Robinson added 29 and 16 rebounds, 15 in the second half, to help the Suns remain unbeaten in three games.

Utah forward Adrian Dantley was high for the game with 32, but was held to four during the third period, and 12 in the second half. Ron Boone added 15 and Allan Bristow 14 for the Jazz.

Bulls 108, Pacers 97

Indiana suffered a second-half sag as Chicago came from behind to win its first game of the season. Larry Kenon topped the Bulls with 22 points and Reggie Theus added 19 for the winners.

Artis Gilmore added 18 points and Bobby Wilkerson had 16. Indiana, which lost for the first time in three starts, was paced by guard Johnny Davis with 22 points and 11 assists.

Warriors 95, Trail Blazers 92

Bernard King scored all nine Warriors' points in the final 2½ minutes as they overcame a 19-point deficit in the second half.

King had only four points in the game before his late spurt. Guard Lloyd Free led Golden State with 23 points and forward Purvis Short added 18. Portland's top scorer was guard Jim Paxson, with 19.

Philadelphia fans confident of winning World Series title

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "We're gonna win it all," screamed Kieran Cannon, 22, with a look of almost disbelief on his face.

"We're gonna do it," he yelled as the scoreboard flashed the final score of the Philadelphia Phillies' 6-4 defeat of the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night at Veterans Stadium.

The win gave the Phils a 2-0 edge in the best-of-seven championship series, which now moves to Kansas City.

And fans — still savoring the heady feeling they got when their heroes clinched the National League pennant — are preparing for another possible jolt — the world championship crown.

"They are the comeback kids, the cardiac kids. They've been doing it in the eighth inning (as they did Wednesday). We're gonna take it," said a jubilant Cheryl Spielvogel, 29, after watching the Phils bounce back from a two-run deficit.

"This place will be ripped apart," she said of the Vet if, indeed, the Phillies become the World Series champs.

"This city will go nuts." Philadelphia could clinch the Series by winning two of an upcoming three-game weekend stand in Kansas City. But winning it at the south Philadelphia stadium "would be the icing on the cake," said Spielvogel.

"Broad Street will be nuts. They'll be dancing in the streets," said Joe Panikowski, 21, a hot dog vendor.

"People will think the parade we had for the Flyers (when they won the Stanley Cup in 1974) was a church service compared to what it'll be like if the Phillies win," he said. And since it's been 30 years since the Phillies last competed in a World Series, fans aren't wasting time buying commemorative items to commemorate this one.

As of Wednesday night there wasn't a program or momento badge to be found in the stadium. Some concession stands that sold pennants, caps, T-shirts, and badges had buyers bunching up at the counter at least 50 deep.

"They're buying it off display. They're buying things with staples and holes in them. I don't have a thing left that says 1980," said vendor Penny DiMuzio.

GIVE GINGER SNAP.

Ginger ale? Sounds tame. But spruce it up with a splash of Smirnoff and it's one lively drink. Don't let ginger ale just fizzle when Smirnoff can make it pop.

Have you ever stopped to think about hunting in Texas? Have you ever wondered about the various game birds and animals Texas harbors for the hunter? And how to get a place to hunt, what to hunt and how much it will cost?

As major hunting seasons rapidly approach, there's many a Texas hunter who still doesn't have the foggiest idea of what he will hunt or where he will hunt. What we will try to do is give the prospective hunter an idea of what birds and animals that can be legally hunted in Texas, list an approximate game harvest of the species and an estimated population of the game animal as it stands in 1980 in Texas.

Wildlife Department for more information on elk hunting.

Javelina: The estimated population of this wild little pig is now 200,000, probably more than 100,000 off the accurate scale. It's estimated that more than 22,000 are harvested annually. Most all javelina hunting takes place in the Southwest regions of Texas. They are legal game for all residents and non-residents. In some regions, the javelina are so thick that they are doing tremendous damage to land. They are very competitive with other game and domestic animals for food and can dominate the region if conditions are right.

Texa's probably offers the outdoor sportsman a better chance of bagging a larger variety of game birds and animals than any other state in the union. We know that we have no large elk herds, nor does Texas boast a moose or bighorn sheep population, but state for state, Texas has variety. Here are some:

Bighorn Sheep: There is a population of the Bighorn or Desert Bighorn in Texas, however, there is no current open season on the curled-horned sheep. The estimated population now stands at 50 and they inhabit the rugged regions in Big Bend National Park.

Black Bear: This large game animal, which roamed throughout much of Texas in the early 1900s, now have dwindled in numbers and the current estimated population of bear in Texas is 50. There is a season on the large predator, but it is restricted to only a few counties in East and South Texas. We suggest going to New Mexico, Colorado or other northern states for bagging a black bear.

Whitetail Deer: Texas harbors the largest whitetail deer herd in the nation. Current population estimates now stand at 3,207,000. They are legal game for both resident and non-resident hunters. Best places to bag a doe or buck is in the Texas Hill Country, but generally the deer run smaller in this heavily populated region. Best chances to bag a good buck, one to mount, are counties in deep South Texas and there is a good possibility of bagging a trophy buck along the Texas-Oklahoma border on the Canadian River watershed. More than 326,000 whitetails are bagged annually in Texas.

Mule Deer: Not as abundant as the native whitetail, the mule deer is a highly sought after game in Texas. Populations of mules in Texas are now at an all-time high, 180,000. The largest concentration of mule deer in Texas are centered near the town of Alpine, the Trans-Pecos and Big Bend regions. Bucks are legal game only for both residents and non-residents. Last year's estimated mule deer harvest in Texas was 7,555.

Elk: We think of this magnificent creature as inhabiting only the Rocky Mountain regions, but Texas does have a stable population of elk, numbering about 700. Elk hunting in Texas is mostly confined to Big Bend by permit only and shooting can also be done on several private game ranches. Contact the Texas Parks and Pheasant: Within the last 10 years, pheasant populations in Texas have grown to extreme proportions. Pheasant hunting, which is generally centered around the Panhandle and South Plains, is probably the fastest growing hunting sport in Texas. The population now ranges from 36,000 to 75,000. Plainview, Hereford and Friona are the best areas. Hunters can bag a limit of two cocks per day. The annual harvest now stands at 22,000.

Wild Turkey: The most sought after big bird in Texas, the wild turkey, a native to Texas, is now thriving in large numbers. Many regions now boast a huntable turkey population, with the Hill Country being prime hunting grounds. The wild turkey, the smartest of all game birds, is open game for everyone. The estimated population is 500,000 with an estimated annual harvest of more than 50,000, including the winter and spring seasons.

Cougar: Although the Texas cougar population is confined to Big Bend, there is a season on the predator, but is usually by permit only or through a licensed outfitter service. The population exceeds 300. Most cougars are not taken by hunters as a game animal since numbers are so small.

Ducks and Geese: Texas is home for many species of ducks and geese in the winter. There's no way to tell of the estimated wintering population, but the annual harvest of geese is more than 135,000 while Texas waterfowlers bag more than one million ducks per season. The coastal regions are best for geese while ducks can be bagged religiously throughout Texas. A federal duck stamp is required before shooting.

Sandhill Cranes: This rare bird, which numbers over 400,000 during the winter months, is probably the easiest of all waterfowl to bag. The region around Muleshoe National Refuge is the best to hunt the long-legged migratory game bird.

Holtz owes IRS money

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is alleging that University of Arkansas football Coach Lou Holtz and his wife owe the federal government $9,345 in federal income taxes for 1976, the Memphis Commercial Appeal reported Wednesday.

The IRS finding has been challenged on behalf of Holtz and the appeal asks that the case be tried in New York.

Records on file with the U.S. Tax Court show that the IRS notified Holtz April 14 of a "deficiency" in his 1976 income tax filings.

The IRS is challenging Holtz' claim of a partnership loss in Travador Associates, a company renting and operating residential apartments in Omaha, Neb. and commercial property in Southfield, Mich.

"It is determined that your distributive share of the loss from Travador Associate is zero in lieu of $18,754 loss reported in your income tax return," the IRS told Holtz. "Accordingly, your taxable income is increased in the amount of $18,754."

The new assessment jumped Holtz' total taxable income to $43,001 for 1976, when he was coach of the New York Jets of the National Football League.

A New York certified public accountant filed Holtz' 1976 taxes.

J.R. surgery termed success

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pitcher J.R. Richard, who suffered a massive stroke last summer, has undergone surgery to correct circulation problems in his right shoulder, and doctors said the outlook was good for the Houston Astros' star's return to baseball.

Vascular surgeons at the University of California Medical Center Tuesday performed an 18-hour operation to replace an obstructed artery in Richard's right shoulder, hospital spokeswoman Jane Ginsburg said Wednesday.

"The operation appears to have been successful, and the outlook for his return to baseball appears to be good," she said.

Richard, a 30-year-old right-hander, checked into the hospital Sunday for tests on his shoulder. They were not forced by any complications following his stroke on July 30, according to his agent, Tom Reich.

Tents become big hit

Exit the era of conspicuous consumption.

The great American tradition that "if big is good, bigger is better" is dead. The energy shortage and the cost of energy has put an end to it.

No longer is a small economical car the butt of jokes. No longer is walking or riding a bicycle considered demeaning. No longer is camping in tents instead of large recreational vehicles prima facie evidence of poverty.

The nation's makers of tents are, after many years, having their day. Tents and tent camping are "in" again. It is more than a passing fad though. It makes good sense.

There are few kinds of recreation that are less expensive and less wasteful of energy than tent camping. There are few pursuits of any kind more fun.

Saving energy by saving weight is what makers of tents have been doing for years. People who make and use tents have always been weight conscious, and now they are finding new ways to trim off an ounce here, several ounces there and a pound another place. For instance, one of the biggest breakthroughs in tent design in recent years was the development of lightweight aluminum tubing. It was such a remarkable advance that the manufacturers could have been content. They weren't.

They all fiddled and studied and experimented with support designs until one came up with a totally new structure for cabin-style tents. Instead of three support units, it uses two.

Another big reduction in tent weight and bulk was achieved by makers when some of them started using nylon in strategic areas. Nylon, as every camper knows, is amazingly light, strong and packable. A few years ago, the camping industry seemed prepared to start making everything out of nylon and then somebody found out that as a tent fabric, it has a serious deficiency. It doesn't breathe.

Cotton does breathe. It allows vapors and moisture to escape from the spaces between fibers. Yet, when the rain falls, these fibers swell and make the tent water resistant.

So, cotton duck tents were comfortable and nylon tents weren't. Then someone hit upon the idea of using nylon in the walls of a tent and cotton duck in the roof. The result is a tent that weighs 30 per cent less and takes up 25 per cent less space when rolled.

Yet, it is every bit as comfortable as an all cotton tent.

Use of some space age chemicals has helped tent makers produce tent floors that are just as tough as the old ones, yet a lot lighter. One of the new fabrics is called Armor-tough. It is highly resistant to punctures and tears and it is 100 per cent waterproof.

Tent makers have made another significant contribution to overcoming the energy shortage, and it doesn't necessarily restrict its use to camping. Lightweight, inexpensive shelters, known as dining shelters or dining flies, will enable people to shut off their air conditioners and enjoy the cool breezes outdoors.

Dining flies are important in several locations. The beautiful beaches near Corpus Christi are wonderful this time of year, but are notoriously devoid of natural shade. The flies have a canvas roof and are fully enclosed by airy nylon screening, eliminating the glare of the sun and invasions of the Texas State Bird at one fell swoop. They are literally instant screen porches.

Who knows, they might make backyard dining and outdoor eating fashionable and tolerable.

George Brett enters hospital; surgery is distinct possibility

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Wincing in pain, George Brett hobbled out of hostile Veterans Stadium and headed straight for a Kansas City hospital.

Dr. Paul Meyer, Kansas City Royals' team physician said Brett would be examined in the wee hours today, and surgery was a distinct possibility.

However, Meyer added, even if surgery is performed on the painful hemorrhoidal condition, Brett may still see action in the 1980 World Series, in which his team now trails the Philadelphia Phillies, 0-2.

Brett's status for Wednesday's game in Philadelphia was in question until a decision was made to let him play two hours before the opening pitch. He walked and lashed two singles in three plate appearances, but was obviously running in pain. He was replaced by Dave Chalk in the sixth inning.

"George made the decision himself," said Meyer. "That was our agreement — that he would tell us if the pain was real bad."

Meyer refused to speculate on what action might be taken after Brett was examined in Kansas City's St. Luke's Hospital this morning.

"I'm anticipating they will make incisions on the hemorrhoids. From here on it's going to be a day-by-day thing."

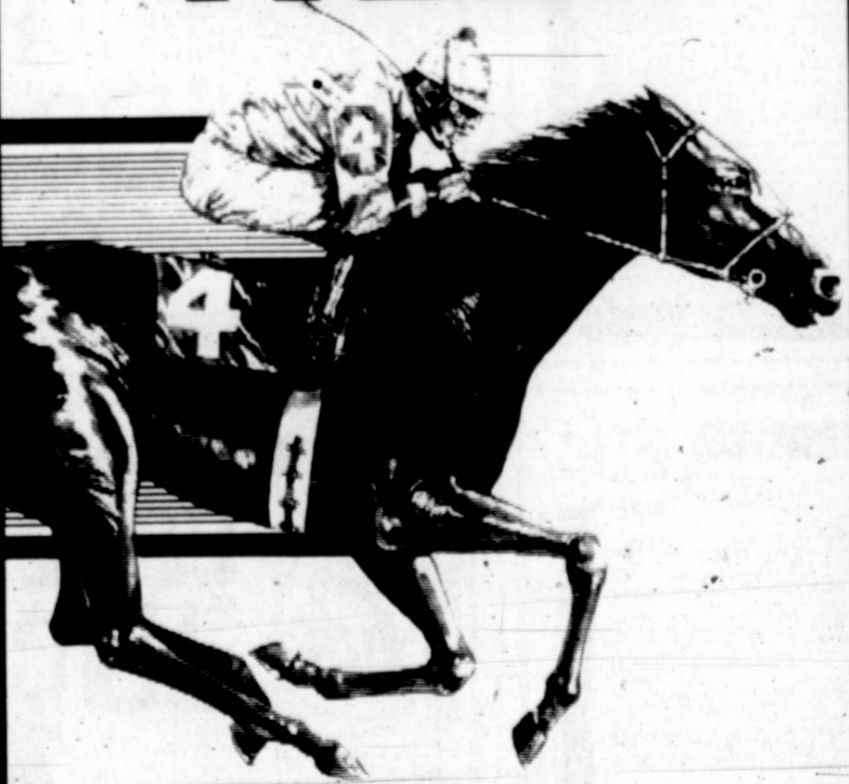

"It's the worst pain I ever felt," said Brett. "I never felt so much discomfort. The more you move, the more it hurts."

Carter-Reagan campaigns narrow focus to 10 states

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the 10 states that will tip the balance in the 1980 presidential election, Republican challenger Ronald Reagan is entering the final three weeks of the campaign with an uneasy edge that President Carter's political staff claims is rapidly eroding.

Both camps express confidence, but neither sounds totally convincing. Malcolm Dade, a Carter political aide responsible for the critical upper Midwest states, said the president is steadily gaining throughout the area and that Reagan's support is "very soft."

BUT HE ALSO conceded that "there is no place outside of Minnesota where we are ahead."

Richard Wirthlin, pollster and political strategist for Reagan, says his data shows the Republican nominee maintaining his lead; but he also talks about "the return of the native phenomenon," the Democrats who now claim they will vote for Reagan but then shift to Carter at the last minute.

Talk to the strategists at the Washington campaign headquarters or to the political workers in the states and the strongest impression that emerges is that there are too many imponderables for either side to be certain about the outcome.

THE IMPOUNDERABLES:
—The impact of the independent candidacy of John B. Anderson.
—The voter turnout, particularly among blacks and Hispanics.
—The success of Reagan's efforts to blame Carter for the economic and energy problems of the nation and his appeals to traditionally Democratic blue-collar and ethnic voters.

The impact of Carter's personal attacks on Reagan and the similar attacks being used by Carter campaigners at the local level.

—Any unpredictable event, particularly a foreign crisis, or what the Reagan campaign refers to as the "October surprise," their concern that Iran or Carter will make some dramatic move to resolve the hostage crisis.

The 10 battleground states have a total of 256 electoral votes. A total of 270 is the number required to win the White House.

Of those 10, Carter has a clear lead in only one, New York with 41 electoral votes. Entering the last three weeks of the campaign, Reagan leads — tenuously in some cases — in the other nine with 215 electoral votes.

Those nine are California, 45 electoral votes; Pennsylvania 27; Illinois and Texas, 26 each; Ohio, 25; Michigan 21; New Jersey and Florida, 17 each, and Wisconsin 11.

CARTER AND REAGAN should split the two biggest states, California and New York. If Reagan can't carry California, he might as well cancel his plans to move into the White House. If Carter doesn't carry New York, he might as well plan to move out of 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

Here is the campaign status in each of the battleground states:

CALIFORNIA
Few expect Reagan to lose here, but Carter has allocated $2.1 million for the state and campaign coordinator Mickey Kantor says, "We are campaigning to win. This is a Democratic state."

Kantor contends that Anderson is fading and his support moving to helping steel companies. After Carter announced his, Reagan labeled it "follow-the-leader politics" and said it was nearly identical to one he proposed two weeks earlier.

ILLINOIS
"A tossup situation, if there's a slight edge, it's ours," say Carter aides. Don Totten, the state legislator who runs the Reagan campaign, has the "edge" going to the Republican candidate.

WIRTHLIN SAYS Illinois is where Anderson "is hurting us more than he's hurting Carter." The Rockford native is running well in affluent suburbs that normally turn out a heavy vote for GOP candidates.

Carter depends upon big majorities among blacks and Jews in Chicago to offset Reagan's strength downstate and Anderson's in the suburbs — and the Carter organization is expected to hammer away in black neighborhoods at the argument that Reagan was a late convert to civil rights legislation.

TEXAS
The volatility of the Texas electorate is best demonstrated by widely differing-polling results.

A New York Times-CBS News poll showed the race dead even with Reagan getting only 6 percent of the Mexican-American vote that both sides claim is the key to carrying Texas.

Wirthlin says his data on Texas gives Reagan a 13- to 14-point lead with close to 20 percent among Hispanic voters. "If we get 30 percent of the Hispanic vote, we'll win handily," said Wirthlin.

Four years ago, Carter captured 87 percent of the Hispanic vote and carried the state by 109,000 votes out of 4 million cast.

NEW YORK
The president gave this assessment: "It is impossible to figure out how to win re-election without New York." Carter should take the state, unless Anderson cuts deep into his Democratic base.

Part of the Carter strategy for carrying New York is summed up by the advertisements prominent in city subway cars. They show Carter signing the legislation giving aid to the city and also quote Reagan as saying, "I have included in my morning and evening prayers every day, the prayer that the federal government not bail out New York City." Reagan has since recanted.

PENNSYLVANIA
Recent polls indicate Reagan is scoring well with his economic proposals and is making inroads into the state's large ethnic vote.

The Pennsylvania Poll, published last week, gave Reagan 40 percent, Carter 33 and Anderson 18. Carter carried the state in 1976.

Steel and coal mining, major industries here, both are in trouble. Carter and Reagan have similar plans for

OHIO
"We are still five to eight points behind, but we are closing," says Jerry Austin, Carter campaign coordinator in this economically troubled state.

One of Austin's problems is convincing people, as he put it, that "you can't blame Jimmy Carter for everything."

Cleveland has a large ethnic vote and Austin said it "is up for grabs." Reagan has campaigned hard for that vote. If he gets it, he should carry the state.

MICHIGAN
Strong unions led by the United Auto Workers and a large black vote in Detroit usually tilt this state Democratic. In addition, Reagan was soundly beaten by George Bush in the Republican presidential primary.

But recent polls show Reagan about eight points ahead.

Curt Wiley, Carter's coordinator, believes Reagan's one time opposition to loan guarantees for Chrysler Corp. will hurt the GOP candidate, as will strong opposition by union leaders who view him as anti-labor.

NEW JERSEY
Economic problems and a history of voting Republican in presidential elections give Reagan a slight edge. The key could be the Anderson vote, which runs as high as 20 percent in some surveys.

FLORIDA
Jay Hakes, Carter campaign coordinator, insists "Dade County now looks good." It had better, if Carter is to repeat his 1976 victory in this state.

That southern Florida county includes Miami with its large Jewish and Cuban populations, which make it the focus for dissatisfaction over Carter policies the Middle East and on Cuban refugees.

WISCONSIN
Anderson, unemployment and a surprisingly strong Republican challenge to Sen. Gaylord Nelson, a Democrat, spell trouble for Carter.

Anderson draws 20 percent or more in public opinion polls. But there is some dispute whether that strength comes more from potential Carter or Reagan voters.

More women discovering use of sea sponges, retailers say

DENVER (AP)—Women concerned about toxic shock syndrome are switching from paper tampons to sea sponges in increasing numbers, retail spokesmen say.

But the finely pored sponges, which must be removed, cleansed and reinserted every three to five hours, have not received the approval of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

"Sea sponges have been selling for about five years, but usually to young women interested in using natural products," said Margaret Norton, nurse practitioner at Womenwise Health Care in Denver. "Now we're seeing all kinds and ages of women."

She said the sponges, which discourage bacteria from developing because they must be removed regularly, are becoming more popular among women who believe they will reduce the chances of developing toxic shock syndrome.

Doctors say tampons, particularly the super absorbent variety, could have caused toxic shock syndrome, resulting in the deaths of about 40 women. The disease is thought to occur when waste products from certain bacteria enter the bloodstream. When tampons are left in the body longer than four hours an environment may be created that helps the bacteria flourish, doctors say. The Food and Drug Administration and the Center for Disease Control are investigating tampons, particularly Rely brand, which is manufactured by Procter & Gamble Co.

The safety of the sea sponge as a menstrual product has not been substantiated, said Dr. Walter Scott, Food and Drug Administration spokesman. He said one sea sponge manufacturer applied for and was denied approval by the government agency.

He said the Food and Drug Administration is not saying that sea sponges are unsafe but that they have not been tested thoroughly by the federal agency.

Ms. Norton said the sponges are comfortable and reusable and sell for about $1.75 to $2.25 each. She recommends the sponges because they are made of natural fibers instead of chemically treated paper. Because they are softer, there is less possibility for damage to internal tissues, she said.

The women's health care center has been selling about 10 sea sponges a day since the publicity about toxic shock syndrome developed a few months ago, Ms. Norton said. And sea sponges at the Woman to Woman Feminist Bookcenter have been sold out for several weeks, a spokeswoman said.

Miss Lillian getting many cards

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP)—Lillian Carter, President Carter's 82-year-old mother, continues to receive a steady stream of cards, letters and telegrams during her recovery from hip surgery at Americus-Sumter County Hospital, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

"She gets a particular delight from the thoughtfulness of her friends and admirers," Jo Collins, director of nursing services at the hospital, said Tuesday. Mrs. Carter has asked that no more flowers be sent to her, but flowers and gifts continue to arrive at the hospital, Ms. Collins said.

Private schools claim students, official says

AUSTIN (AP) — School Superintendent John Ellis estimates more than half of the 2,000 students missing from Austin public schools this year are going to private schools.

Ellis told the board of trustees Monday night that 1,400 students apparently went to private schools, 700 moved out of Austin to suburban districts, 200 were lost to a nationwide drop in the birth rate and 300 left the district for reasons not related to desegregation, such as transfer of parents' employment.

The district began a court-ordered desegregation plan this fall that called for busing about 13,000 students to schools outside their neighborhoods. Total district enrollment is 55,369.

Ellis said 54 percent of the students are Anglo, 27 percent Hispanic and 19 percent black.

'Jogging bandit' may have influenced Dallas bank robber

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas police say a man that may have been reading about the infamous "jogging bandit" held up a Dallas bank early Tuesday and escaped with $3,500 in cash.

The man jaunted into the Trinity Savings and Loan of Dallas about 9:40 a.m., armed with a revolver, and demanded that bank employees fill an attaché case with money.

Witnesses said the man was wearing a raincoat, was about 35 years old, and had a moustache, police said.

Police said the man matches the description of the "jogging bandit," right down to the fact he handled the hold-up — except for one major problem. The man that robbed the savings and loan Tuesday was about 50 pounds lighter than the man police have dubbed, the "jogging bandit," because he conducts his business in a jogging suit.

Over the past six or seven months, the "jogging bandit" has robbed at least five Dallas-area banks.

County may pay legal fees, AG says

AUSTIN (AP) — Potter County has authority to pay court costs and filing fees levied against its district attorney in connection with a lawsuit against him if he was acting in the county's interests, the attorney general said Tuesday.

The opinion was asked by Amarillo District Attorney Tom Curtis in connection with a suit that arose out of the district attorney's decision to deny reporters of Southwestern Newspapers Corp access to official news sources in his office without appointment.

"We believe the county may pay the costs you inquire about if it reasonably believes its interest is at stake and if the district attorney sued was acting within the scope of his authority in the performance of public duties," said the opinion.

The opinion said that whether the action giving rise to the lawsuit was within the scope of the district attorney's authority was a fact question which could not be resolved by the attorney general.

Surface mining hearing scheduled in Rockdale

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission has scheduled an Oct. 31 hearing in Rockdale on an application by Aluminum Co. of America to conduct a surface mining operation in Milam and Lee counties.

The proposed mining area of 8,539 acres is about six miles southwest of Rockdale and west of U.S. 77, east of Farm 2116 and south of Alcoa Lake.

Gas company directed to refund $634,000

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission directed Texas Southeastern Gas Co. on Tuesday to refund more than $634,000 in service charges to 610 customers in Austin, Colorado, Grimes, Harris, Waller and Washington counties.

The money represents collections between Sept. 10, 1979, and Oct. 14, 1980, under temporary rates approved by the commission.

The commission order allows Texas Southeastern, a subsidiary of Coastal States Gas Producing Co., to make refunds through a five cents-per-thousand cubic credit on monthly bills.

State to ask for funds to help regulate mining

AUSTIN (AP) — The Railroad Commission agreed Tuesday to apply for approximately $338,000 in federal funds to help regulate surface coal mining in Texas.

The money would reimburse the commission for 60 percent of the first 2½ month's expenses and 50 percent of the remaining 9½ month's expenses.

Wild burro roundup resuming in Arizona

GRAND CANYON, Ariz. (AP) — The second phase in the roundup of wild burros in Grand Canyon was set to resume Tuesday, according to officials with the Fund for Animals, the agency sponsoring the operation.

Cowboys moved into camp near here Tuesday, said Richard Negus, the fund's southwest director. Wranglers captured 50 of the sure-footed, stubborn animals in August and hoisted them out of the mile-deep canyon by helicopter.

The goal for the latest roundup is to bring out 200 burros in the next 50 days. The National Park Service has said the animals have damaged an estimated 45,000 acres of park land.

First question to ask reported

WASHINGTON (AP) — The growing popularity of fireplaces and wood-burning stoves has more Americans shopping for wood, and one of the first questions to ask is whether the wood is green or seasoned.

Generally you will want seasoned wood — that is wood that has been dried. It will give off more heat and will start burning more easily.

Green, or wet, wood produces less heat because some of the energy has to be used to evaporate the moisture before the wood will burn.

Seasoned is a vague term, though, so ask how long it has been since the wood was cut. It should be at least six months.

Indeed, next year it might be wise to consider buying wood in the spring or early summer, if you have a place to store it.

That way you can be sure it will season properly before winter, and you may even get a lower price for buying in the off season.

Preparing wood for burning generally means cutting and splitting it, and that is hard work.

The more preparation that is done for you, the more the wood will cost. So you can save money by doing the work yourself.

If you are willing to do some of this work you increase the potential sources of wood, too. For example, you can often get wood from the local tree dump, buying broken pallets at a local mill or warehouse, purchasing ends, slabs and other waste from a sawmill, buying cutting rights from a private landowner or cutting wood on state and federal land.

To find out about such opportunities in your area call your local state forester's office. It should be listed under the state government in your telephone book.

The price of purchased wood will vary considerably depending on labor and transportation costs and supply and demand. Shop around.

If you are new on the wood burning scene, or just want learn more about it, the Department of Energy has put together a helpful booklet entitled "Heating With Wood."

It tells about buying and using wood, choosing and operating wood-burning stoves, furnaces and fireplaces and safety considerations.

"Heating with Wood" is available at no charge from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 678H, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

COMMENT DEADLINE — The deadline has been extended for folks who want to give the government a piece of their mind about certain credit practices.

The Federal Trade Commission is conducting the inquiry. What the agency is looking into, is the impact of certain clauses often found in consumer credit agreements.

These include such things as requiring people to waive their rights to notice and hearing in the event of a suit, waiving state property exemptions that protect necessities from seizure in the event of a judgment and creditors assessments for their legal fees.

If you have an opinion about these practices, or others, send your thoughts to Henry B. Cabell, presiding officer, Federal Trade Commission, Washington, D.C., 20580. The comment deadline has been extended to Dec. 21.

RV REMINDER — If you're putting your recreational vehicle in mothballs for the winter, the Tire Industry Safety Council recommends taking the weight off the tires.

Put the vehicle up on blocks. If possible, remove the wheel assemblies and store them in a cool, dry place away from sunlight, and reduce the air pressure by 10 pounds.

Saboteurs blow lines in Africa

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

SOWETO, South Africa (AP) — Saboteurs blew up rail lines linking this black township to Johannesburg, and police used dogs against rioters protesting a ceremony honoring the white Cabinet minister in charge of black affairs.

Police also shot tear gas into the crowd of about 3,000 chanting and jeering blacks as members of the white-sanctioned town council — weeping from gas seeping through the windows of their chambers — gave the symbolic keys to the city to Cooperation and Development Minister Piet Koornhof.

At least 15 protesters were arrested, police said, and three officers and an undetermined number of demonstrators were injured.

A military helicopter chuffed overhead, drowning out the council speakers on several occasions as they praised Koornhof, the minister responsible for the affairs of this white-ruled nation's black majority of some 20 million.

Most blacks in the community of more than 1 million — the scene of a black rampage against education policy four years ago in which nearly 600 non-whites were killed — do not recognize the white-sanctioned Soweto Community Council or Mayor David Thebali. The mayor was elected in white-sponsored balloting with a turnout of less than 10 percent.

Black militants surrounded buses at Soweto depot urging people to stay home to protest the ceremony and a rent increase imposed by the council. At least three buses were dented and windows were smashed by rock throwers. Passengers escaped through the windows.

Early Wednesday saboteurs blew up four rail lines, temporarily stranding up to 200,000 black commuters en route to nearby Johannesburg. The line was partially restored and a survey of employers found most workers showed up eventually. However, several businessmen said black shoppers apparently stayed home.

Koornhof arrived in a Puma helicopter as another camouflaged helicopter circled over the demonstrators. He was greeted through clouds of tear gas by Thebali.

Crowds of chanting protesters thronged towards the council chambers carrying signs saying "Thebali is a traitor," "Thebali thrives on blacks' poverty" and "Koornhof, return to your country."

Police using nightsticks, automatic pistols, attack dogs and tear gas drove them back about 100 yards.

"I'm convinced the majority of Soweto will identify with our decision to honor Minister Koornhof," Thebali said after the ceremony. He called the demonstrators outside the council chambers "meddling dissidents."

Bands of blacks moving through the dusty streets set several vehicles afire during the day.

The blasts along the rail occurred around 4 a.m., and temporarily stranded an estimated 150,000 to 200,000 black commuters who travel daily to Johannesburg to perform menial jobs.

Police reports showed two explosive charges went off in the rail around 4 a.m., temporarily stranding the estimated 150,000 to 200,000 black commuters who travel daily to Johannesburg to perform menial jobs. But service was partially restored by 7 a.m.

Secretary of labor out campaigning

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the past six weeks, the Labor Department has been going about its work just like it usually does. That the boss has been out of town more than half the time hasn't made much difference.

The secretary of labor, Ray Marshall, has been out campaigning for his boss, President Carter, leaving his agency to run itself — as it is used to doing every time a presidential election rolls around.

Carter, following the tradition of past incumbents, has sent Cabinet officers around the country to stump for his re-election. But their frequent absences from Washington do not seem to disrupt the government machinery.

Cynics say the bureaucracy runs under its own steam all the time, even when the appointed bosses are in their offices.

Marshall is among the busiest Cabinet campaigners because his constituency — unionized workers — could go to Republican nominee Ronald Reagan, who is using high unemployment to try to gain traditionally Democratic blue-collar votes.

At a time when unemployment is 7.5 percent, the highest since Carter took office, Marshall is on the road depicting Reagan as an enemy of workers and declaring that the president has the best labor record since Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Marshall defends his extended out-of-town campaigning, saying that his top staff keeps agency programs functioning smoothly and that he is on the telephone several times a day to handle major problems.

Marshall adds that he has given just one special instruction to program directors: "We're in a political year when everything is magnified... Don't let it influence your decision but let it influence how you disclose it."

One appointed aide, who did not want to be named, said Marshall's absences haven't affected how the department operates. "The secretary always traveled a lot and was never involved in the nitty-gritty meetings anyway," he said.

John Leslie, director of the department's public information office, where he has worked since the Truman administration, says the bureaucracy operates on its own momentum with little trouble from presidential campaigns. Marshall and the department are following a script written every four years, he said.

In the course of the campaign, Marshall has fine-tuned the use of his office to an advantage that Reagan's team cannot offset. He announces grants, makes local news and attracts large audiences who will sit through an uninspiring speech for a chance to see a Cabinet secretary in the flesh.

Carter holds an additional advantage over his challenger: part of Marshall's campaign costs can be paid with tax dollars.

Under White House guidelines, Marshall's travel expenses are picked up entirely by the Carter campaign. But he continues to draw his $69,630-a-year government salary no matter how political his activities, and he is always accompanied by an aide whose salary and expense are paid by the government.

The secretary has campaigned mainly in a dozen large industrial states, such as Pennsylvania, Ohio, Missouri and California. He appears at union meetings, party functions and campaign stops with local politicians. His mission is to stop unionists from voting for Reagan out of frustration over unemployment and inflation and concern that the United States is becoming militarily weaker than the Soviet Union.

He also tries to fire up unions that have endorsed Carter but may not be enthusiastic about campaigning for him.

His standard speech to union officials is more anti-Reagan than pro-Carter. He attacks Reagan as a man with a long anti-union record.

But he is not a dynamic speaker. A former economics professor, the low-keyed secretary generates warm, but not avid, responses.

Wherever possible, he distributes government money along his stops. In Boston recently, he announced a $250,000 grant to train Massachusetts women as construction workers.

"If there is a grant going to be made anyway, we arrange to announce it," he said, even if it means speeding up the paperwork. "But," he adds, "to dream something up just to announce it, we would never do that."

Marshall is sure to leave time for news conferences, and if a political question is not raised, he finds a way to interject politics in his answers.

Marshall meets as frequently as he can with rank-and-file union members to deliver his "the-president-is-helping-you" speech. One major job is to defend Carter to angry unemployed workers who say they are going to vote for Reagan.

"I say to them, 'Ronald Reagan doesn't have any unemployed friends. They all have comfortable jobs.' I tell them that I understand the frustration, the fear, the loss of dignity, the strain on the family that unemployment causes."

Then he tells them how Carter is trying to fight unemployment, and he believes he is convincing. "I think," he says, "you will see workers vote overwhelmingly for Jimmy Carter."

Workers clean up thousands of gallons of spilled gas

BROKEN ARROW, Okla. (AP) — Workmen labored through the night to soak up thousands of gallons of gasoline that gushed from a ruptured pipeline and flowed into a creekbed in this Tulsa suburb.

About 200 residents were forced to leave their homes after the spill Wednesday because of explosive fumes.

They took refuge with friends and relatives or in shelters set up in a school and a church. They were expected to return home today.

No injuries were reported.

There was no immediate indication as to the cause of the break in the line, owned by Continental Pipe Line Co.

"Good golly, it was pretty hairy there for a while," said Bill Deatherage, fire marshal in Broken Arrow.

"The ground is saturated with gasoline," said Deatherage, who estimated 40,000 gallons of raw fuel gushed from the line.

"We've still got a hazardous situation," he said Wednesday night. "It's not as bad as it was earlier, but we've still got pockets of gasoline fumes around."

Earlier Wednesday, a thunderstorm moved through the area, raising fear among cleanup workers that lightning bolts could ignite the fumes.

Is there life beyond?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Is there life beyond a column deadline?

Perhaps. Authorities disagree, but in my own experience something seems to be out there.

At most, a vague, spectral shimmering subworld that may constitute afterlife. Shadowy, wraith-like figures come and go in a gooey globular landscape like the gurgling setting for one of those charming Muppet dances where syrupy figures charmingly cavort to oboe or harpsichord music.

The deadline gone; time seems suspended.

Yet an odd fact hovers here and occurring that's hard.

The late Gene Fowler was of the same opinion: "Writing is easy. All you do is sit staring at a blank sheet of paper until the drops of blood form on your forehead."

People used to ask Hal Boyle, who presided over this journalistic monastery garden for a quarter of a century, how he managed to turn out columns, week after week, year after year, decade after, etc.

"Nothing to it," the Master tut-tutted. "Just put a cold chisel to your head and start quarrying."

Most readers who take the trouble to write ask the same two questions: "Where do you get your ideas?"

there trying to form itself into an idea.

Whistler's father, in case anyone is interested, is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery in Stonington, Conn. He directed the building of the state's first railroad line, and later the line from Moscow to St. Petersburg.

Hmmm. Might be a cognate idea there.

Son Jamie, whose hang-up on mom hangs in the Louvre (over the title "An Arrangement in Grey and Black"), flunked chemistry and got kicked out of West Point. "If silicon had been a gas," he is alleged to have said, "I'd be a major general."

Silicon, as anyone who didn't flunk chemistry knows, constitutes one-quarter of the earth's crust. It is a non-metallic element having amorphous and crystalline forms, occurring in a combined state in minerals and rocks and is widely used in making steel. Here we have another of those cheerful facts that columnists file away against a cheerless, idealless day. But where are they when you need them?

Speaking of nothing apropos, whatever became of Mellors, the gamey gamekeeper who had his way with the willing Lady Chatterley? When last we tuned them out Mellors was awaiting his divorce from the uncouth Bertha Coutts; Sir Clifford had refused to divorce Connie, who was pregnant but not by the baronet, and the two lovers had decided to live together anyway, once things quieted down. Did the affair work out as a marriage?

Probably not, if the plot lines of the TV soaps and the sexual advice articles in the fashionable feminist magazines are an indication of the course true love takes these days.

We know from Shaw's prologues that Liza Doolittle did not marry Professor Henry Higgins, so there never was much chance for Connie and Mellors in a sequel. She probably wound up sharing a flat, platonically or whatever they call such arrangements now, with Duncan Forbes, the artist chap who was willing to say the baby was his in exchange for free modeling services. These days he would have settled for half the rent.

Or all of it since the Lady was loaded; had an income of her own.

There must be a column there someplace. Perhaps Mellors, a macho outdoor type, encounters Lady Chatterley one night outside the Albert Hall where she has gone to address a feminist rally in opposition to a nuclear reactor at the Battersea power station. She guns him down after heated debate, etc.

All sorts of ideas suggest themselves when the column deadline is past.

And yet there is nothing very difficult about writing. All authorities are in agreement there.

"Writing is not hard," The Canadian humorist Stephen Leacock assured us. "Just get paper and pencil, sit down and write it as it occurs to you. The writing is easy — it's the

"Why don't you get some ideas?" Writing is all pretty much formula, as the novelist Peter DeVries has pointed out: "Every story has a beginning, a middle and an end."

Speaking of which — the middle, I mean, the telephone is ringing. A coroner's jury is convening on the death of a deadline, unless that's redundant, in which case their will undoubtedly be an autopsy.

My only recourse is to pray to the patron saint of editors.

Air fares up, discounts to be thing of past

NEW YORK (AP) — If you want to fly this winter, be prepared to pay a lot more.

Airlines are raising fares rapidly, whittling away at discounts and making them harder to get.

"We hope it will cut down the use of discount fares by people who would fly full fare anyway," said David Frailey, a vice president of American Airlines.

American said Wednesday it notified the Civil Aeronautics Board of plans to reduce discounts offered on most routes to a maximum of 35 percent off regular coach fares, down from the current 55 percent.

And tickets for round trip discounts will have to be bought 30 days in advance for a trip lasting at least seven days. Current rules call for purchases only seven to 14 days in advance, depending on the route, and require a traveler to stay until the next Saturday. The new rules take effect Dec. 1.

Whether discounts actually are reduced depends largely on whether other airlines go along. Delta and Braniff say they will, and United says it will match them in part. Other airlines said they are studying the issue.

Basic airline fares have been rising rapidly all year.

"We're well aware that airline prices are running ahead of the cost of living," said Chuck Novak, a spokesman for United Airlines. Coach fares are up an average of 43 percent since Jan. 1, and he added that another 6 percent hike was planned for Nov. 18.

This year's increases had been offset, however, by large and widely applicable discounts. The lowest round-trip discount fare offered by American Airlines, between Dallas-Fort Worth and New York had fallen from $255 to $237 since Jan. 1, for example, while the basic round-trip fare was rising from $392 to $526.

You might call museum's owner 'potato head...'

By ROBERT WIELAARD

MARANSART, Belgium (AP) — Did the CIA sprinkle insects over East Germany to destroy the potato crops? Did potatoes make the Industrial Revolution possible?

Is it true Adirondack Indian Chief George Crum invented potato chips? And if he did, does anyone give a spud? It's all crucial to Tom Hughes, a 35-year-old Haddonfield, N.J., native who is bananas over potatoes. In this hamlet on the southern fringe of the lush, lazy hills that formed the Waterloo battlefield where Napoleon finally lost, Hughes runs the world's only potato museum.

Ask him why and he'll explode with reasons like: "Potatoes are fun" and "Do you know potatoes offer more food value per acre than any other crop?" Few people know these things, because potatoes have an image problem, Hughes says, adding: "The humble spud should not be ridiculed. It's the world's most undervalued plant."

Hughes heard a few years ago that someone who had compiled a world directory of museums noted there was no potato museum.

"Why should the potato deserve a museum?" Hughes recalls thinking. At the time, he taught fifth grade at the International School of Brussels, about 14 miles north of here, and potatoes quickly became a class project.

The project prospered, and when Hughes quit in 1979 for freelance writing, he turned the second floor of his house into a potato museum.

Visits are free, by appointment, to his unmarked museum cluttered with potato bags, sacks, mashers, bashers and peelers. He even has photographs of the potato mashers of some famous people's mothers — including Andy Warhol's.

There are also jars with Colorado beetles — the potato farmer's Enemy No. 1 — and specimens of some of the world's 10,000 potato varieties. The museum contains posters (one dating to World War II urges Britons to eat potatoes), cookbooks, postcards, farming tools and a copy of Liam O'Flaherty's "Famine."

On one wall hangs an Idaho license plate boasting "Famous Potatoes" donated by U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, a former Idaho governor. "He heard about this place and sent me the plate," said Hughes.

Hughes also shows potato movies. And visitors hear Louis Armstrong toot "Potato Head Blues" and are treated to tunes like the song about "po-tay-toes" and "po-tah-toes."

Most interesting, Hughes says, is the potato's impact on social conditions. "The potato famine in Ireland was caused by late blight, a relatively harmless fungus if detected early on" he says. No one did, and the Irish population was depleted by the millions who died or emigrated.

The potato's introduction to Europe from the New World, he says, meant better diets and, consequently, a lower mortality rate "which eventually yielded the manpower for the Industrial Revolution."

Hughes' head is filled with tuber trivia. A favorite story is that of Chief Crum, who worked as a cook at the Moon Lake House Hotel in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

"One night, in 1853, Cornelius Vanderbilt, the industrialist, came to dinner and ordered french fried potatoes, but sliced as thinly as he once had them in France," says Hughes.

"Insulted, the chief peeled wafer-thin potato slices which he fried and served. For years they would be called 'Saratoga Chips.' Today we call them potato chips."

And Hughes says that in 1950, the Soviets accused the United States of dropping Colorado beetles on East German potato fields in a Cold War ploy. The U.S. government called the allegation "extraordinary," saying the insect had reached Europe long before.

Hughes also hopes to collect potato jokes. He has one already. "Do you know the one about the American who runs a potato museum...?"

He favors law of the Old West

Constable thinks horse thieves should be hung

DALLAS (AP) — Constable Forrest Keene says he is ready to return to the law of the Old West when horse thieves were summarily strung up from the nearest tree.

The Dallas County lawman says he didn't give horse stealing much thought until someone snatched Skip, his light dun quarterhorse.

"It's like losing a member of the family," he said. "I wouldn't have thought a whole lot about it if they'd stolen my automobile."

Now Keene is a man with a cause. He put bumper stickers that say "Hang Horse Thieves" on his station wagon and he's organizing with other owners to stop the alarming increase in horse stealing from urban areas.

An investigator for the Texas Southwest Cattle Raisers Association, which investigates livestock thefts, said nearly 50 horses are stolen each month from pastures in Dallas, Houston and Fort Worth.

"It's up 30 percent from over last year in these three metropolitan areas," said Cullen Robinson, head of livestock investigations for the association.

"It's not like machinery or televisions, where they only get a few cents on the dollar of the true value," said Steve Munday, spokesman for the association. "That's one of the reasons for so many thefts."

Slaughterhouses pay about 50 cents a pound for horses.

"Any old horse will weigh at least 1,000 pounds so he is bound to bring $500 to $600," Munday said.

Robinson said the increase of horses in urban areas is a big attraction to thieves. And when horse thieves get caught, they usually walk away with a probated sentence, he said.

"Now days, you catch a horse thief, they carry him before the judge, he makes bond and he's back stealing horses to pay his lawyer," Robinson said. "We got one in the Dallas area that we've caught three times."

"If we could get two- to 10-year sentences instead of two to five years probation, we could stop a lot of it."

Keene, who celebrated his 39th anniversary as a Texas lawman on July 28 — the day Skip was stolen — says he feels partly to blame for the light treatment.

"Law enforcement looks at the theft of a horse like the theft of two hubcaps off a Cadillac, which is deplorable," he said. "I am guilty as a law enforcement officer of 39 years."

Keene's wife circulated leaflets to lawmen within 100 miles, offered a reward and has scoured area horse sales trying to find Skip. But his efforts have been futile.

Mary Wilson was luckier.

Her daughter's horse was stolen from a pasture in suburban Mesquite three years ago along with seven other mounts. The owners — seven women — traveled to horse sales all over the area.

"We got five of them back," she said.

But they were too late to save the three that were sent to a packing house.

The man convicted of stealing the eight horses got 10 years' probation, "a pat on the back," Mrs. Wilson said.

"If there was no market for horse meat in Europe, there would not be so many horse thefts," she said.

But Robinson said packing plants here are not to blame for the increased thefts.

"The Texas plants are legitimate," he said. "And they cooperate with us fully when we're looking for a stolen horse. Their buyers go to horse sales and they buy horses."

"There's no way to tell if it is stolen."

A spokesman for Beltex packing plant in Fort Worth said the plants have a bad reputation they don't deserve.

"It's always the packing plants that get accused of cooperating with the thieves," said the spokesman, who asked that his name not be used. "We not only cooperate with the cattle raisers association, but all the police departments, law enforcement agencies and livestock associations in the United States."

He refused to discuss the subject further, saying, "Whatever we say, we still have a bad reputation. It's an emotional issue."

Robinson said horse owners may be able to stop a theft by branding their animals.

Oregon Journal makes a 'negative' decision

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The Oregon Journal daily newspaper says it has concluded a "largely negative" process by deciding to endorse the re-election of President Carter.

An editorial in Tuesday editions said Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan is "narrow, shallow and simplistic" and "sounds like a man to quick with the trigger to be president."

It said the independent campaign of U.S. Rep. John Anderson "has not drawn the high quality support across the political spectrum that he had envisioned... So the realistic choice is between Reagan and Carter, and between them Carter is the better choice even though his first term has been disappointing in many ways."

Good forage promised

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent-Agriculture

A week of excellent growing weather has turned West Texas green. Native grassland has "turned a flip" with grasses growing and maturing at a rate that will assure ranchers some good forage reserve going into the winter.

Cotton has made profuse vegetative growth which is not particularly advantageous to the grower at this point. In fact, cotton that is open enough to harvest will be extremely difficult and expensive to desiccate and defoliate with chemicals due to the immature leaves. Many producers will probably opt to just wait for killing frost before harvest, depending on the individual prospect for yield.

Small grain grown in West Texas is used mostly as a winter cover crop and for grazing. In some years, depending upon growing conditions and market price, some growers may go for grain production. Whatever the use, forage or grain, or both, fertilization is fundamental, but with today's costs, efficient use is essential.

The major nutrients generally required are nitrogen and phosphorus. Many Midland soils have ample phosphorus. The only way to know for sure is to have a soil test made. Micronutrient problems are rare, but iron deficiencies occasionally occur on alkaline soils.

Phosphorus is very important in seedling development. The number of tillers (stems) produced by the plant relates directly to the number of adventitious roots produced.

Without adequate phosphorus, fewer of these roots are produced. Increased grain yields and more winter grazing are produced by the greater tillering rate.

However, if the soil is high in phosphorus already, one should not add additional phosphorus because of risk of causing phosphate induced iron deficiency. Thus, applying phosphorus without knowing for sure what the soil status is could cause more problems than being on the low side.

Phosphorus, if needed, should be applied before or at seeding since it is assimilated by the plant in the early growth stage.

Nitrogen is probably the key element needed in most sandy loam soils. Small grains need nitrogen at planting or shortly after emergence to provide early grazing and for top grain production. On sandy soils where leaching may cause nitrogen loss, part of the nitrogen should be applied preplant with one or more applications applied as topdressing later in the season.

The rate of fertilizer application should be based on the amount of nitrogen already present in the soil (as determined by soil test), grazing practices, and on yield potential as determined by water availability and cultural practices.

A general guide is 2 pounds of N and 1 pound of phosphorus per bushel of grain expected. If the small grain is grazed, the amount of N should be doubled. The removal of nitrogen by grazing animals must be replaced by topdressing if good grain yields are to be achieved.

With the price of fertilizer increasing relative to grain price, fertilization must be done efficiently. A soil test is the best guide available at this time for fertilization. Growers should only use those nutrients needed as efficiently as possible to assure the best chance for a profitable crop.

are a special case when it comes to handling and storage.

Immediately after harvest, the sweet potato should be cured. The curing process allows a thick, secondary skin known as the periderm to form beneath the thin, outer skin. The most rapid curing takes place at 85 degrees and 85 percent humidity.

This curing process should last about one week. The curing is completed when the skin no longer slips under finger pressure to expose the wet, raw interior of the potato.

After the curing period is finished, the sweet potatoes should be stored at 60 degrees F. with a relative humidity of 75 to 80 percent. There is danger in letting the sweet potatoes stay in the soil during the fall. When the soil temperature drops below 55 degrees, the sweet potato roots will be chilled and the surface skin will begin to break down and be more susceptible to rot.

Soviet grain supply 'precarious'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The grain supply in the Soviet Union, suffering from the partial U.S. embargo and an expected poor harvest, is in a precarious position, the Agriculture Department said.

"With the decline in Soviet crop prospects, a tightened world supply situation and the sales suspension, Soviet grain balances are at a precarious level," the department said.

In its regular report on Soviet grain production, the department predicted that the USSR will have to seek extra grain from Argentina and "minor and non-traditional grain supplying countries" to try and make up the shortage.

Last week, the the department estimated that the 1980 Soviet grain harvest will be 205 million metric tons.

On Sunday, there were reports out of Moscow that recent statements by Soviet Agricultural Minister Valentin Mesyats suggested the Russian grain harvest might even be worse than expected.

The Agriculture Department estimate of 205 million metric tons is 30 million tons below the Soviets' announced goal of 235 million tons. A metric ton equals 2,204 pounds.

The latest reports from Moscow prompted speculation that Russian production might even go below 200 million tons.

In 1978, the Soviets had a record grain harvest of 238 million metric tons and last year it fell sharply to 179 million.

The Carter administration has said its partial embargo, which halted shipment of 17 million metric tons of grain and soybeans, has had a telling impact.

The department's current projection of 205 million metric tons for the Soviet harvest is down 5 million from its September estimate. Wheat production was put at 101 million, down from 103 million the previous month.

The department estimated that 4 million metric tons from the 1980 Russian crop is unusable because of moisture from rain during harvesting.

The department estimated that the Russians will use 2 million tons less for animal feed than previously anticipated.

The agency also forecast that Russian grain stocks will be depleted again this year rather than increased as previously expected.

"Stocks are already at too low a level to cushion a further deterioration in useable grain output," the department said. "Also, a continued delay in the sowing of winter grains could adversely affect the outlook for the 1981 crop."

The USSR is expected to import 30 million metric tons of grain in 1980-81, an increase of 2 million tons from the Agriculture Department's September estimate.

The department said the Soviets "almost certainly would seek larger imports" if it is possible. But the department said tighter world supplies and problems with shipping the grain due to congestion in world ports could limit supplies.

Utes get first language textbook

IGNACIO, Colo. (AP) — The elders of the Southern Ute Tribe stood holding what many considered a "miracle" in their hands — a textbook setting down for the first time in tribal history the rules of word and sentence structure of their language.

Linguist Tom Givon, the author of the Southern Ute Grammar, presented the volume to the tribal elders recently and said he could not have performed the task without their help.

"What I think I've learned, I've learned from you," Givon said. "When you come from the outside, you need the close contact with community people who will cushion you."

Givon, who alternates between his teaching duties at the University of California at Los Angeles and the reservation near Ignacio in southwest Colorado, previously wrote a Southern Ute dictionary that was published in 1979. He began working with the Ute language in 1976.

The dictionary includes 2,500 Ute words and their meanings. That was not very comprehensive, Givon admitted, but there was not time to finish a more complete dictionary in the time allowed him. And, he said, neither the dictionary nor the book is without error.

"We have to build as we go along," said Givon, explaining that the reference grammar book is not intended for children, but for the teachers of children to develop classroom materials.

Printed curriculums would be another step in putting the Ute language into comprehensive printed form, Givon said, but tribal elders have not yet authorized such a project.

The 396-page grammar book is expected to be distributed to each household belonging to the tribe without cost, Givon said.

The publication was funded through a series of grants from the Office of Indian Education, the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Albuquerque, the Tribal Council, the Ignacio School District and the American Indian Studies Center at UCLA. Givon said the natural way for a language to be taught was orally, from generation-to-generation. But he said that chain had been broken with the Southern Utes.

"There is a whole generation who, even though they want to, cannot teach their children Ute," he said. "That chain of transmission can be reinstated through the classroom..."

Carrier reports 'nonsense'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Secretary of the Navy Edward Hidalgo Tuesday branded as "sheer sophomoric nonsense" published reports that seven U.S. Navy aircraft carriers are not combat ready.

In a speech here, Hidalgo said five aircraft carriers are being overhauled. "If we didn't do that," he said, "we wouldn't be ready. I suppose what they want is for us to have unready ships."

Hidalgo admitted the Soviet Union has more military machinery, but said the U.S. Navy is second to none because of its technical superiority.

Tough speeches highlight East Bloc concern over situation in Poland

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Recent tough speeches by leaders of East Germany and Czechoslovakia highlight a deep concern within the Soviet bloc that the situation in Poland may get out of hand, according to Western diplomats in East Berlin.

The speeches, delivered Tuesday by Chairman Erich Honecker of East Germany and President Gustav Husak of Czechoslovakia, reiterated the charge that foreign elements were behind Poland's labor unrest in August and early September.

Some of Western diplomats in East Berlin, who asked not to be identified, said they felt certain neither Honecker nor Husak would have delivered such speeches without Soviet approval.

"If they (the Soviets) were looking for an excuse to go in, the technique would be to get their senior partners to suggest that the system was being threatened," said one diplomat.

He added that the speeches may have served a second purpose:

An Analysis

to warn East German and Czechoslovak workers that such concessions as independent trade unions, relaxation of censorship and open defiance of authority as occurred in Poland would not be tolerated here.

The Polish strikes also resulted in the replacement of Edward Gierek as the Communist Party leader and a wholesale shuffling of the Cabinet.

Honecker used East Germany's 31st anniversary festivities as the occasion for his speech, his toughest and most extensive of the Polish crisis.

"We cannot look indifferently at the fate of Poland," he said in remarks widely publicized in East Germany. "The German Democratic Republic stands as a friend and ally of Poland forever on the side of the Polish people, which under the leadership of the Polish Communist Party is there to bolster the forces of the people against the subversive activity of anti-socialist elements financed abroad."

East Germany, he said, "will resist all efforts at interference with which foreign reactionaries are striving to exploit the current difficult situation in the Peoples Republic of Poland for their own sinister goals."

On the same day, Husak was telling the Central Committee of the Czechoslovak Communist Party that the "dangerous policy of interference in the internal affairs and the incitement and support of anti-socialist forces have been particularly distinct in connection with events in Poland."

tion with events in Poland."

"It's the kind of thing one could interpret ominously," said one Western diplomat of the Honecker speech. "It's somewhat similar in tone and argument to what the Poles and the East Germans were saying to (Czechoslovak leader Alexander) Dubcek in the spring of '68 before the (Warsaw Pact) invasion in August."

"We interpret it as two pronged. First, he's offering assurances it couldn't happen here, and secondly he's telling the Poles, 'Look, we know you are in an upheaval, but you'd better watch that things don't get out of hand.'"

Dubcek sought to liberalize the Communist Party and its policies in Czechoslovakia in 1968, only to be ousted by the Soviet-led invasion.

The Soviet press has been restrained recently in its coverage of Polish events since a Sept. 27 commentary in Pravda which repeated the accusation of foreign meddling.

East Germany's official media have also had little to say about events in Poland, although East Germans themselves are well informed through West German television and radio reports.

Westerners who work or visit frequently in East Germany say it is difficult to judge what impact the events in Poland have had on East German workers and intellectuals.

East Germany's living standard falls short of that of West Germany and the United States, but it is far higher than those of Poland, the Soviet Union and other East bloc countries.

Despite three decades of official propaganda about friendship between socialist peoples, anti-Polish feelings run deep among East Germany's 17 million people.

Many East Germans resent the fact that Poles cross the Oder River border and buy large quantities of food and consumer goods not available in their country. Many also resent the fact that parts of Germany were given to Poland after World War II.

The last major worker uprising took place in East Germany on June 17, 1953, when workers rioted for more food and pay. Soviet tanks crushed the disturbances swiftly.

But reporters at the Lenin Shipyards in Gdansk, Poland, said during the August strikes that they saw several East Germans who had come to observe. The strikes were centered along the Baltic coast, a favorite summer vacation spot for East Germans.

Many may have returned home with stories of the strikes and successful defiance of government authority.

"Above all in a socialist state, the party has to keep control," said one Western diplomat. "I don't know for sure, but I'll bet the party leadership here is watching what's happening in Poland and is worried as hell."

Mayors return to appeal explosions

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Two Palestinian mayors returned to the occupied West Bank Tuesday after 5 1/2 months of exile to appeal against their deportations.

The two were taken immediately to a heavily guarded room in the terminal building near the Allenby Bridge linking Jordan and Israeli-held territory, where they will be held while an appeals board of three army officers hears their arguments.

Mayors Fahd Qawasmeh of Hebron and Mohammed Milhem of Halhoul walked smiling across the wooden-floored bridge over the Jordan River with their wives and one of Qawasmeh's sons. "I am very glad to be returning to my homeland," Qawasmeh told reporters.

"I believe I shall be returning soon to my town," said Milhem.

Qawasmeh and Milhem were swept out of the country by order of then-Defense Minister Ezer Weizman on May 2, a few hours after Palestinian terrorists killed six Jewish settlers in Hebron in an ambush. The Israeli Supreme Court later ruled that their civil rights had been violated because they were given no opportunity to appeal the expulsion order.

The appeal board's ruling, however, is not binding, and final decision rests with Brig. Gen. Binyamin Ben-Eliezer, commander of the West Bank military government, who approved their expulsion originally. If their appeal is turned down, they will be permitted to remain in Israeli territory to petition the Supreme Court.

Qawasmeh asked if he could stop and pray when he reached the Israeli-held side of the bridge, but soldiers ordered him and Milhem into two white cars which drove to the terminal building nearby. Ben-Eliezer directed the operation.

Although Milhem was optimistic he would be permitted to remain in the West Bank, a military source said, "Nothing has changed since their deportation. They were expelled because of the encouragement they gave to disruption, and the quiet that has prevailed recently in the West Bank has justified their expulsion."

The two men were leading figures in the Palestinian nationalist movement who frequently spoke out against the Israeli occupation. A third Palestinian, Hebron religious leader Rajib Bayud al-Tamimi, also was expelled but was not permitted to return to present an appeal.

The Palestinians' expulsion was part of a crackdown throughout the West Bank to suppress dissent. Curfews were imposed, mass punishments handed out in towns where demonstrations broke out, and a massive dragnet mounted to catch the terrorists who attacked the Hebron settlers.

The arrests of four alleged members of the ambush squad were announced Sept. 15.

On June 2, assailants believed to be Jewish rightists seeking revenge for the Hebron attack bombed the cars of two other Palestinian leaders, seriously maiming them.

Qawasmeh and Milhem presented affidavits that they did not approve of terrorism before Israeli authorities agreed to readmit them to present their appeal.

California court won't put marijuana initiative on ballot

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court, refused on Wednesday to place on the Nov. 4 ballot an initiative which would have removed criminal penalties for the private use, possession and cultivation of marijuana.

The high court rejected a bid by a pro-marijuana coalition called the Libertarian Law Council which sought to force Secretary of State March Fong Eu to certify the marijuana measure as having enough valid signatures to be placed before voters.

The measure, while blocking criminal penalties for private possession, transportation and cultivation of marijuana by adults for their own use, would not have affected felony penalties for the sale or cultivation of pot or a fine for its public use.

The group claimed to have enough signatures to meet the 346,119 required for a 1980 initiative measure.

Petitions carrying 397,023 signatures were submitted May 27 by the California Marijuana Initiative group and the National Organization for Reform of Marijuana Laws. But Mrs. Eu rejected 100,000 of the signatures, saying they were not those of registered voters and that the addresses on some were incorrect. She refused to certify the measure.

In its arguments before the courts, the pro-marijuana group cited a 1966 amendment to the state constitution which requires signatures on an initiative to merely represent persons "entitled to vote as opposed to persons registered to vote." The group argued that Ms. Eu made a mistake in throwing out the 100,000 signatures.

Smokers again fighting ordinance

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County voters on Nov. 4 will consider an anti-smoking ordinance similar to one narrowly defeated last year. And once again the anti-smoking forces are badly outgunned financially because of contributions from the tobacco industry.

Floridians Against Increased Regulation (FAIR), the local group opposing the proposal, has received $270,000 from tobacco companies, a spokeswoman said. In 1979, tobacco firms and Florida restaurant owners pooled $1 million to defeat an anti-smoking ordinance.

By contrast, the pro-ordinance organization, Group Against Smokers' Pollution (GASP), has spent about $1,000 and is struggling for funding. It spent about $11,000 backing last year's ordinance.

In California, meanwhile, a statewide referendum being voted on in November would restrict smoking in public buildings.

Dade County voters rejected an anti-smoking measure in May 1979 by a mere 820 votes out of 192,000 cast. It would have banned smoking — with limited exceptions — in work places, schools, health facilities and most other public places.

The proposal facing voters this November is essentially the same, but the maximum fine has been reduced from $500 to $200. Restaurants would be required to set aside half their eating areas for non-smokers, a provision that has prompted restaurant owners to oppose the measure.

"All we're asking for is a situation in an enclosed space where a person who has a real problem can breathe and get by without choking and without going into a spasm of coughing," said GASP supporter Dr. Charles Tate, a lung specialist at the University of Miami.

Counters Walker Meryman, a vice president of the Tobacco Institute in Washington, D.C.: "It's a shame the people of Dade County will have to go through the exercise again. Even though it was by a small margin, the people have already said they are not interested."

After the ordinance was rejected, GASP obtained enough voters' signatures to force the issue back on the ballot this year.

Grand jury probes multi-billion dollar oil-pricing scheme

DALLAS (AP) — A special grand jury is looking into allegations of a multi-billion dollar fraudulent oil pricing scheme in the mammoth East Texas oil field, a Dallas newspaper has reported.

The Dallas Morning News, in a copyright article in its Thursday edition, reported that a special grand jury was impaneled in Longview in mid-August to investigate alleged price fixing schemes in which "old oil" was sold at "new oil" prices.

One unidentified source told the newspaper that the alleged fraud involves "a multi-billion dollar operation — not millions, but billions — over the periods of years."

However, the newspaper said another source said authorities have been unable to determine the amount of money involved.

The News said witnesses from Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma have testified before the grand jurors.

Investigators from four agencies — including the Gregg County district attorney's office, the Texas attorney general's office, the Texas Railroad Commission and a Texas Ranger — uncovered the alleged scheme, the newspaper said.

Old oil generally is defined as crude from wells drilled before the 1973 oil embargo. Under federal price restrictions, old oil must be sold at prices far below the level for oil produced much later.

The Railroad Commission estimates the East Texas oil field, once the largest in the world and the field that supplied fuel for United States troops in World War II, produces about 200,000 barrels of crude a day.

The field is located in Gregg, Upshur, Rusk, Smith and Cherokee counties.

The newspaper reported one railroad commission source said the alleged scheme apparently involved oil moved between Texas and Louisiana.

The source told the newspaper that in some incidences oil produced in Texas is trucked to a Louisiana refinery and sold as new oil for a higher price.

Mary Hardesty, press secretary for Texas Attorney General Mark White, told the newspaper that White's office is assisting in the grand jury inquiry, "but I can't say how." Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace said his office has assisted investigators and that he has discussed the case with White and with Texas Ranger Glenn Elliott, who is based in Longview.

If Strait of Hormuz closes price of oil expected to hit $100 barrel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional study has forecast that if the Iran-Iraq war leads to closing of the strategic Strait of Hormuz, oil prices could soar to more than $100 a barrel and cause a "great price trauma" debilitating for the world economy.

However, if the fighting does not spread to other nations in the Persian Gulf and remains at the current level, the United States, Europe and Japan probably will not experience oil shortages, said the Congressional Research Service analysts.

The report, released Tuesday, noted that oil prices increased fourfold after the 1973 Arab oil embargo and doubled after the Iranian revolution in 1979. Thus it is "conceivable" that oil prices "could range between $65 — double the current price — to $130 a barrel of oil or about $100 a barrel as a median estimate" if the Strait of Hormuz were closed, the study said.

Under those circumstances, it said, "panic buying" would push free market price for any available oil to such high levels that "only a few of the most economically powerful countries could afford to satisfy most of their oil needs."

It added that at the moment, it appears unlikely the fighting will spread or the strait will be closed. The waterway lies between Oman and Iran and is the passage through which 40 percent of the West's oil is shipped.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., who released the report, said it makes clear that international arrangements to meet a drastic oil shortage need to be strengthened.

The present International Energy Agency sharing system "will not adequately protect us from skyrocketing crude prices which could bankrupt our country and send the entire Western world into a depression," Percy contended.

In a shortage, the 21 industrialized nations making up the IEA have designed a plan to distribute crude oil to consuming nations according to a formula determined by past imports and consumption. However, the congressional report noted that "pressures would be so intense were the Strait of Hormuz to be closed that the ability of the oil-sharing agreement to function is highly doubtful."

Abu Dhabi ups oil price

NEW YORK (AP) — Abu Dhabi has raised crude oil prices $2 a barrel, industry sources say, making it the first Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries state to boost the price of crude since OPEC oil ministers agreed last month to freeze official prices until mid-December.

Traders and other sources in New York said they learned Wednesday the Persian Gulf country, the largest oil producer in the United Arab Emirates and the supplier of 1 percent of U.S. oil needs, was raising its oil prices retroactive to Sept. 1.

The move surprised analysts and traders, who said even the loss of 4 million barrels a day of Iranian and Iraqi petroleum exports as a result of fighting between the two Mideast oil producers has failed to significantly affect oil markets or reduce today's exceptionally high inventories.

The sources said the reported increase by Abu Dhabi would have virtually no impact on the price of oil products in the United States. But the move raised fears among some observers that Libya and other hawkish OPEC members now would attempt to boost their oil prices, leaving the cartel's recent price accord in shambles.

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Dome

Petroleum Ltd. says ice conditions have forced it to suspend its Beaufort Sea drilling program in the Canadian Arctic until next year. But it says one of its new exploratory wells is just 400 feet short of a large oil deposit discovered in 1979.

Despite the ice, Dome said Wednesday it is continuing dredging for the construction of artificial islands for drilling sites.

According to Dome, its Kopanoar 21-44 well, scheduled to be drilled to a depth of 14,000 feet, reached 10,400 feet when work was halted. It said indications are that the well is about 400 feet above an oil reservoir discovered in 1979.

The 1979 Kopanoar discovery well is 2½ miles east of 21-44 and was estimated to have a productive capacity in excess of 12,000 barrels of oil a day. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Westinghouse Electric Corp. says it has signed a preliminary agreement to buy cable-television giant Teleprompter Corp. for about $650 million in cash.

Under the merger plan announced Wednesday, Westinghouse's Westinghouse Broadcasting subsidiary would buy the approximately 17 million Teleprompter shares for $38 each, nearly $10 above their price on the New York Stock Exchange before trading was halted Monday due to pending news.

"With this acquisition, Westinghouse Broadcasting will be better equipped to continue its long history of service to the public and leadership in providing quality video services," Robert Kirby, chairman of Westinghouse Electric Corp., said in a prepared statement.

With 1979 sales of nearly $174.5 million, the New York-based Teleprompter serves some 1.3 million cable TV subscribers in 32 states. It also supplies cartoons to television stations and owns Muzak, a recorded-music service.

Westinghouse had 1979 sales of $7.3 billion. It owns radio and TV stations and makes a wide variety of equipment for power generating plants, railroads and other industries.

Police may scrap Fairmont fleet

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Fort Worth police department officials say they are considering scrapping their entire fleet of Ford Fairmonts because of possible carbon monoxide poisoning.

Since June, six officers have been briefly hospitalized after being overcome by toxic exhaust fumes from their patrol cars. The latest incident occurred Tuesday.

Officers have called the cars "death traps" and complain that the vehicles do not perform well in emergencies.

Two tanker trucks burn

OLPE, Kan. (AP) — An explosion and fire destroyed two tanker trucks, and prompted a two-hour evacuation of 300 townspeople while firefighters worked to prevent the blaze from reaching a nearby grain elevator.

The evacuees, about two-thirds of this east-central Kansas town's population, were allowed to return home about 11 p.m. Tuesday.

No injuries were reported in the 9 p.m. fire at a storage site used by the Houston-based Gregory-Cook Pipeline Co., which is doing construction work in the area. The cause of the fire was not immediately known.

"Company employee William Sims told officials he was siphoning gasoline from one of the tankers when he heard a hiss and a small explosion, then saw a fire on that tanker."

Sims said he moved his truck and called the Olpe Volunteer Fire Dept. The tankers that burned each held about 5,000 gallons of fuel, and damage was estimated at $200,000.

The pipeline company has agreed to move two other tanker trucks filled with fuel away from the site on Olpe's southwest side.

Fire officials, who sprayed down other trucks and equipment at the site, at one point were worried the fire would endanger a nearby grain elevator.

Sheriff's dispatcher Teresa Krueger said the storage site was in a mixed business and residential district.

Afghan president goes to Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Afghan President Babrak Karmal arrived in Moscow today for his first visit since Soviet troops installed him 10 months ago. Karmal was welcomed by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and other Soviet dignitaries, the official Tass news agency said.

Some diplomats and Afghan exiles in New Delhi, India, predicted a partial government shakeup was in the offing, possibly with Karmal retaining the presidency but giving up his second key post, that of prime minister.

This appeared to be reinforced by the makeup of the delegation that left Kabul Wednesday for Moscow. Kabul Radio said it included the ministers of defense, foreign affairs and economic planning and some military commanders.

Slaying of Joyce Powers under special investigation

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Three senior police officers from the crime suppression division in Bangkok have arrived in Chiang Mai to help with the investigation into the killing of Joyce Powers of Staten Island, N.Y., wife of U.S. narcotics officer Michael Powers.

large contingent in Thailand to help suppress drug trafficking. The Bangkok Post condemned the killing of the 36-year-old Mrs. Powers, as "another example of the lawlessness" in Thai society.

Moscow has probably decided that its only realistic choice is more support for the regime, a diplomat in New Delhi said. Military withdrawal could mean a chaotic bloodbath at the expense of Moscow's Afghan backers, Western diplomats said, thus leaving the Soviets no real choice except to continue backing Karmal's government or a similar regime.

In Afghan eyes, Karmal is regarded as much less ruthless than Amin.

The killer, identified as Narong Pomsiri, was shot and killed by police after Mrs. Powers was slain in the northern city Tuesday.

"The one certainty that emerges from this particular shocking murder is that a similar thing will happen again — unless there is a drastic change in our thinking towards guns and guns control," the editorial said.

Karmal, 51, was installed in the last week of 1979 in a bloody coup in which his predecessor, Hafizullah Amin, was slain. The coup coincided with the arrival of the first waves of an estimated 85,000 Soviet troops and there was speculation it was engineered in Moscow.

He has reduced mass arrests, quietly abandoned such unpopular reforms as land redistribution and compulsory education for villagers, and recognized the Afghan peoples' devotion to Islam. Karmal, never regarded as religious, now starts his speeches with Moslem prayers.

Chiang Mai police told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that they are investigating whether Narong, who has a criminal record, killed Mrs. Powers accidentally after an aborted robbery.

"In neighboring ... countries unlicensed possession of a gun can earn a death sentence — and that license is almost impossible to obtain. Yet here at home we read almost daily of grenade throwings, shootouts between police and criminals wielding fearsome amounts of firepower, domestic quarrels which rapidly escalate because a weapon is at hand, temper tantrums that end in hospital emergency wards and case after case of violence begetting more violence."

According to Western analysts, the Soviet forces, sent to support the government in its war with the rebels, have suffered heavy losses of men and equipment, but made little progress toward their announced goal of establishing a friendly government in Kabul, secure enough so that they could withdraw.

Nonetheless, he remains unacceptable to much of the populace, who see him as the puppet of a foreign military power, the diplomats and Afghan exiles say. Anybody Moscow put in his place would carry the same stigma, they add.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said there was no indication that the killing was related to either politics or narcotics trafficking.

Museum hit by thieves

NEW YORK (AP) — Metropolitan Museum of Art officials say seven coins and small objects stolen from a display case at the museum are worth about $187,000, but are made up of only about $2,000 worth of gold.

Asked if members of the museum staff were under suspicion, he replied that "unfortunately" they were. Frizelle said the plastic case had been sent to the police laboratory to be tested for fingerprints.

seum was a large Greek bust wrenched from its pedestal in February, 1979, and found a few days later in a Grand Central station locker. Frizelle said the museum has guards on duty 24 hours a day and has an elaborate security system. He declined to give details.

The stolen coins and objects, which date from the eighth century B.C. to the fourth century A.D., were taken from a plastic case in a museum corridor, Jack Frizelle, a museum spokesman, said Wednesday.

He said the theft was discovered by a guard late Tuesday.

Frizelle said apparently someone had unscrewed a panel of the display case and removed two Celtic gold coins from the second century B.C., an Irish sleeve fastener and an Irish dress fastener from the eighth century B.C., and two Roman pins and a Roman brooch dating variously from the first century to the fourth century A.D.

Frizelle said the guard just happened to notice that some mounts in one corner of the case were empty but "we have no idea when they (the coins and objects) were taken."

He said the corridor is "heavily trafficked," but added, "one assumes it didn't happen when the public was here."

Actors strike is now over, NY chapter OKs contract

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The actors' strike is officially over for members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, with approval of a new three-year contract on a vote of 572-390.

line had been extended because the ballots, mailed Oct. 6, had been slow in reaching the East Coast.

The last AFTRA chapter to vote on the contract was New York's, where the vote was 155-123 Wednesday night to accept the new national prime time television and motion pictures contract.

Once the SAG vote is out of the way, producers are expected to resume stalled talks with striking musicians, whose picket lines at seven major production centers were being crossed by actors.

A nationwide mail ballot by the Screen Actors Guild — the other actors union that went on strike — was to be tabulated Oct. 23 in Hollywood.

"We have not heard a word from them (producers) since the first of October," said Max Herman, president of Local 47 of the American Federation of Musicians.

Chicago AFTRA members voted in favor of the contract 49-31 Tuesday, but the Los Angeles local voted down the pact last week by a 228-220 margin.

Talks had been scheduled to resume at that time after a three-month delay, but producers unexpectedly announced they would not return to the bargaining table until musicians dropped their demands for reuse residuals on filmed TV shows.

The film-TV community, dropped to its knees by a crippling 10-week actors strike, got back on wobbly feet this week as actors voted on the contract.

"Nothing seems to be scheduled," said Herman, who voiced some concern that most television actors, except for "Lou Grant" star Ed Asner, were crossing musicians picket lines at seven major production centers this week.

"Our (TV) series will all be going by the end of next week," Ed Medman, vice president-legal affairs at the Burbank Studios, home of Warner Bros. and Columbia Pictures, said Wednesday. "We'll probably be at full capacity (films and TV) in December, the beginning of the year."

"Practically everybody is crossing our picket lines," he said.

At Universal Studios, the industry's largest single employer with about 7,000 workers, TV shows were "a good way into production," according to Universal TV spokesman Ben Halperin.

Asner, a vocal opponent of the new actors contract, has said he will decide next week when he is scheduled to return to the show whether he will cross picket lines.

More than 5,000 ballots flooded SAG headquarters Tuesday alone, leading SAG officials to predict the heaviest voter turnout in SAG history would ratify the new contract despite a split in actor ranks over the pact's controversial home video provisions.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

You don't have any spare parts

Our bodies have many parts, but the many parts make up only one body when they are all put together. So it is with the "body" of Christ.

Each of us is a part of the one body of Christ. Some of us are Jews, some are Gentiles, some are slaves and some are free. But the Holy Spirit has fitted us all together into one body. We have been baptized into Christ's body by the one Spirit, and have all been given that same Holy Spirit.

Yes, the body has many parts, not just one part. If the foot says, "I am not a part of the body because I am not a hand," that does not make it any less a part of the body.

And what would you think if you heard an ear say, "I am not part of the body because I am only an ear, and not an eye?" Would that make it any less a part of the body?

Suppose the whole body were an eye—then how would you hear? Or if your whole body were just one big ear, how could you smell anything?

But that isn't the way God has made us. He has made many parts for our bodies and has put each part just where He wants it.

What a strange thing a body would be if it had only one part! So He has made many parts, but still there is only one body.

The eye can never say to the hand, "I don't need you." The hand can't say to the foot, "I don't need you."

And some of the parts that seem weakest and least important are really the most necessary.

Yes, we are especially glad to have some parts that seem rather odd! And we carefully protect from the eyes of others those parts that should not be seen.

While of course the parts that may be seen do not require this special care. So God has put the body together in such a way that extra honor and care are given to those parts that might otherwise seem less important.

This makes for happiness among the parts, so that the parts have the same care for each other that they do for themselves.

If one part suffers, all parts suffer with it, and if one part is honored, all the parts are glad.

Afghan underground railroad risky

By BARRY SHLACHTER Associated Press Writer

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Escape from Afghanistan on the so-called underground railroad can be both dangerous and expensive. But many Afghans fleeing the Soviet intervention and war in their country take the risk.

Some of the escapees using the route are guided to neighboring Pakistan on foot through mountain passes sown with exploding anti-personnel devices. Others ride, 30 cramped in a van built for 12, or stuffed in metal cages and loaded on trucks along with other smuggled contraband.

There are networks operating along the lines of traditional tribal hospitality. The profit motive fuels the remainder which charge the equivalent of hundreds of dollars for the passage to freedom.

But many Afghans, particularly middle-class urban dwellers and their draft-age sons, are willing to pay the requested amounts, exorbitant by local standards. Since the Afghan regime tightened travel restrictions and made passports practically inaccessible in recent weeks, the underground route is the only way.

"Our guides exploded three booby-traps by throwing rocks at them," said Abdul Wahid Ali, 37, a Foreign Ministry official before defecting in August.

He brought a fragment of one of the small, green plastic devices to Pakistan as a souvenir of his six-day trek. Not so lucky are the dozen or so patients at Lady Reading Hospital in this northwest Pakistani city who have lost feet and hands from the explosives, some of which are said to be shaped like children's toys.

A stepped up conscription drive in Afghanistan, aimed at replenishing army ranks depleted by defections to the rebel side, has been a boon to the underground railroad in the past month.

Scores of draft evaders are arriving daily in Peshawar, located on the opposite end of the Khyber Pass from the Afghan border.

However, two teen-agers escaping military service suffocated in the metal trunks in which they were hidden. Their bodies were found after their truck safely entered Pakistan.

Aside from discovery by Afghan officials, other dangers include ambush on the road by roving bands of resistance fighters or treachery by guides who rob and sometimes kill those who had hired them, Afghan sources here say.

One of the best-organized operations was described by a New York-educated university professor who recently arrived here with his wife, two children and a friend.

"I paid 35,000 afghanis (about $815) for three adults to be brought from Kandahar to Chaman in Pakistan," he said in an interview. "Children were free."

Kandahar, the starting point, is a southeastern Afghan provincial capital which was once a thriving market center.

"I was amazed how things ran like clockwork with each of the 12 men in the operation carrying out a specific function," said the professor, a graduate of the New School for Social Research, who declined to be identified further.

He gave this account of the escape: He and his family were among 30 passengers crammed into a van designed for a dozen. In it, they were brought to a safe house four hours outside Kandahar.

After lunch, they waited until nightfall when they were driven across a trackless desert miles north of the manned border crossing. Some of those aboard had come from Kabul, the Afghan capital, and others from as far as Badkhashan Province, in the extreme northwest of the central Asian country.

"There were no seats," the professor said. "We sat tightly next to each other on carpets and luggage."

"At about 9:30 (p.m.), someone said soldiers are coming. The ladies cried and everyone was worried."

"But the people we spotted were only smugglers, carrying goods to Pakistan, and they were as afraid of us as we were of them."

The van finally rolled into a small smugglers' village near Chaman at midnight and disgorged its exhausted but relieved passengers. The middle-age organizer of the underground route said he'd been transporting people to Pakistan for more than a year. "He told us he was working for the Mujahiddin (Moslem freedom fighters), and didn't make any personal profit on us," the professor said. "But I'm sure he did." End Adv PMs Mon Oct. 13

Chinese students staging hunger strike

PEKING (AP) — More than 90 students have staged a hunger strike and sit-in at government offices in Hunan Province to protest the official rejection of a local election candidate opposed to Marxism, sources reported today. The sources said 80 students from Hunan Normal College in Changsha in southern China have been on strike since Monday. They have been joined by supporters from Hunan University, a medical college and metallurgical institute. Sources said the protest, which was continuing as of Wednesday, began after the normal college nominated three candidates, two students and one teacher, to run for seats in the local congress. The three were said to have wide student body support. One of the candidates, who was not identified, said he did not support Marxism, sources said.

Cheer leaders from Northern Valley Regional High School of Old Tappan, N.J., run through their routine on the football field at the school, for an upcoming football game. (AP Laserphoto)

Cheerleaders are very rare species

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
OLD TAPPAN, N.J. (AP) — When the living room is carpeted with freshly painted posters in the revered colors of blue and gold, in various stages of drying ...
When the den is seized and occupied by a dozen giggling female persons in short skirts feasting on doughnuts and loud music in front of an October morning fire ...
When you are asked to construct a laurel wreath (spruce boughs will do) in order that victory may be celebrated in properly classic style, at a toga party ...
It then begins to strike home: There is more to cheerleading than meets the ear.
In America's 30,000 or so high schools, there must exist about 360,000 cheerleaders. Standing still, which they rarely do, saddle shoe to saddle shoe, megaphone to megaphone, they could easily fill 20 football fields.

So the species is hardly endangered. It is, however, rare. Ask any father of one.
He will tell you that a high school cheerleader is a creature of tender years who has not quite decided to give up girlhood for young womanhood. She is leaning in that direction, but there is too much fun to be had for now.
She is also one who has learned that loyalty is precious and that disappointment can be overcome and that success is often so joyous it brings tears.
The cheerleaders at Old Tappan High School have learned those things in a special way. They have had to. They have had to because the subjects of their cheering, the Golden Knights, whom they adore ("adore" is an often-used word, especially in reference to certain specific Knights; "cute" is another), have won only two football games in four seasons.

You would think that would be discouraging enough to wilt a pom-pom. I mean, give us a break.
Wrong. These cheerleaders want their Knights to win, all right, and once this fall they did, hence the laurel wreaths and togas. "It was the very best time I ever had in my whole entire life," the resident cheerleader reported.
But cheerleading, it seems, has less to do with a won-lost record than with, simply, cheerleading.
Win or lose, to Jeanmarie, Maura, Brigid, Donna, Janet, Wendy, Kathy, Lynn, Claudia, Toni, Kay and Carolyn, each golden-autumn weekend is its own adventure, friendship its own reward.

There are cookies to be baked (for the Knights to munch while they watch a training film), posters to be painted, horns to be honked, confetti to be cut, a pre-game breakfast to be cooked and enjoyed cross-legged on the floor with girl talk and laughter and tales of Knights and ladies.
Finally, the game.
Band music. Blue and gold streamers. "Come on, Golden Knights, get up and go!" Noise. Jubilation. Heart-break. The eternal promise of youth.
Last Saturday the score was 33-6. "We did a lot of 'hold that line' and 'block that point,'" the resident cheerleader said gamely, peeling off her sweater.
"Maybe next week."

FAA is about to come under fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal safety board is about to level strong criticism at the Federal Aviation Administration and aircraft manufacturers, saying they are not doing enough to make non-commercial planes safe.
A report by the staff of the National Transportation Safety Board concludes safety features have been available for years that would increase a person's survivability from a non-commercial air crash, but have been ignored by the FAA and manufacturers alike.
According to industry figures, there are nearly 200,000 non-commercial aircraft in the country, many of them small single- or twin-engine models.

Last year these aircraft were involved in about 4,200 accidents and 658 persons were killed.
The FAA's regulation of that segment of the industry is generally much less stringent than regulation of the commercial craft.
FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said the agency would have no comment on the report until it is final and approved by the safety board. Manufacturers of such aircraft could not be reached for comment.
While the five-member NTSB postponed approval of the staff report until a number of changes are made, the four members present Wednesday clearly showed their displeasure with the FAA's handling of such safety issues.

"It's clear if you fly long enough you're going to have some type of an accident," declared board chairman James King. "While we've enhanced the airworthiness aspect (of an aircraft), there's been an unwillingness (by the FAA) to bring the crash worthiness up to the same kind of level."
King said tests nearly 30 years ago showed, for example, that a shoulder harness can significantly reduce the chances of a person being killed in many air crashes, but the FAA still requires harnesses only in the front seats of an airplane.
The staff report, which has not been publicly released, also suggests strengthening of cockpits and installation of sturdier seats to reduce injury to occupants during a crash.
"The required design for seats and occupant restraint systems in general aviation aircraft are far below that required of the family automobile," the study said.
King, citing the staff report, said many studies by FAA researchers have shown the advantages of various safety features, but no one on the regulatory- and enforcement side of the agency has implemented the studies.

And, says Charles H. Batten, author of the staff report, manufacturers have been reluctant to include safety devices not required by the FAA because it drives up the cost of the airplane. He said when some manufacturers included safety features such as harnesses and sturdier seats, they were withdrawn in later models because of competitive pressures.
Among the safety board's recommendations will be that the FAA require all new aircraft to include harness systems for pilots and passengers and that the government require such harnesses on operating planes before they can be sold.
In support of the recommendations, the NTSB staff said in a draft of its report that more than one of every two private, non-commercial aircraft will be involved in an accident over a 20-year period of operation. One study, he put that figure at up to 70 percent, the report said.

Disposal company misses deadline to remove barrels

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A hazardous waste facility did not remove radioactive wastes from a facility near here to meet a state deadline and the state health department says an investigator has been sent to the coastal dump site.
Instead of having only 2,000 drums shipped on the Pelican Island site, Todd Shipyards Corp. will have closer to 10,000 drums, said Dave Lacker, director of the Texas Department of Health's division of occupational health and radiation control.
He said the company recently discovered 5,000 barrels it had not previously reported to state officials.
After 10 employees were exposed to radiation at the site during a February accident, the company announced it would phase out nuclear storage and processing facilities by spring.

A total of 11,053 barrels of radioactive waste still were housed at the company's Research and Technological Division's facility on Pelican Island Wednesday — the deadline for removal, a state health department spokesman said.
Ed Bailey, administrator of the Texas Department of Health's radiation control branch, said an investigator will file a report this week on the matter.
Meanwhile, he said, the New-York based company will continue to move waste drums off its property.
The company collects what it calls low-level radioactive wastes, largely from hospitals and medical labs, and processes and concentrates the wastes for a permanent burial ground somewhere else.
State Sen. A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston has urged the health department to seek civil or criminal penalties against Todd for what he called a series of deceptions. And he pressed for a faster phasing-out of the nuclear waste.
"They're going to be out of business before the next hurricane season," said Schwartz, who has claimed a hurricane could blow the barrels off the low-lying Pelican Island.

"I came to the conclusion that we cannot trust what Todd tells us," Schwartz said.
Texas Gov. Bill Clements, state Health Commissioner Robert Bernstein and Galveston officials also have been critical of Todd.
Last fall, Todd officials testified the company housed six times as many waste drums than were allowed by law, some three years old.
The accidental discovery that the company stored extremely hazardous radioactive plutonium — in leaking drums — without listing the substance in its inventory lists was the "straw that broke the camel's back," Schwartz said.
Schwartz said the company claimed it didn't report the plutonium because it belonged to a California company.
"They didn't tell us because, quote unquote, they didn't have a title to it," he said. "It doesn't make any difference to me what the hell the title is when it arrives in the bottom of Galveston Bay in a hurricane."

Defense claims insanity in trial

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Marital problems drove an Air Force sergeant temporarily insane and caused him to stab his wife and mother-in-law to death during a bloody struggle at their home in this West Texas city, a defense attorney said.
Armando Buentello Perez, 27, went on trial Wednesday for the July 10 murder of his wife Kathy, 29, a senior airman at Dyess Air Force Base.
He will be tried later for the slaying of his mother-in-law, Mary A. Gregg, 50, of Rockport, Tenn. Her body was found with a six-inch butcher knife buried to the hilt between the shoulder blades.
Defense attorney Stan Brown said Wednesday that the couple's marital problems brought on Perez' temporary insanity.
Brown said Perez was attempting to drag his wife back into their house last July when Mrs. Gregg interceded and hit Perez on the head with a blackjack. The attorney said that blow caused Perez to lose control and stab both women.

Our Used Cars Are Sold With As Much Pride As Our New Cars.

Many people are not aware that on many occasions we spend good money and time on the used cars we sell. Those trade-in cars that do not meet our standards never appear in our used car department. The newer model trade-ins in fine condition, get a quick check, a lick and some polish... while the good older ones do get fixed up, if we feel they are worth the money. That's why we offer every used car with pride.
